Wheelwright fires only police officer

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

WHEELWRIGHT — The city of Wheelwright is, once again, without a police officer.

Newly acquired policeman Ricky Newsome was dismissed from duty during a 7 p.m. special-called Wheelwright City Council meeting Thursday night.

Newsome was hired as the sole Wheelwright police officer in April.

The placement came at that time when Wheelwright's then-current police officer, Charles Johnson, was dismissed in connection to training complications.

Johnson had been attempting to attend training sessions in Richmond without success when Newsome was finally hired to patrol the city.

"Nobody knows where he's at," a member of the council explained Thursday night when asked why the action was taken against Newsome.

The decision was made after an executive session which lasted approximately 10 minutes when council member Bruce Johnson made the motion of dismissal.

The motion passed with a 3-2 vote as Mayor Marlee Sammons and council member Andy Akers voted against the dismissal.

Sammons and Akers failed to comment on the reason for their outnumbered vote. However, Sammons has mentioned during past meetings the strong need for maintaining the pres-

Murder charge filed

Staff Report

HAZARD — A Perry County man faces a murder charge following a report issued by a grand jury Tuesday.

Indicted on a single charge of murder was John Paul Tucker, 24, of Combs.

The charge stems from an automobile accident which killed Everett Owens. According to the indictment, the grand jury alleged Tucker to have "wanton-ly engaged in conduct creating a grave risk of death, and acted under circumstances manifesting extreme indifference to human life."

Tucker was also charged with a count of being a persistent felony offender in the indictment.

The indictment issued against Tucker was one of 12 handed down by a Perry County grand jury Tuesday. Others charged include:

■ Kermit C. Cox, 20, Hazard, first-degree possession of a controlled substance and first-degree driving under the influence.

■ Johnny R. Gross, 29, Combs, theft by unlawful taking for allegedly stealing $4,558.99 in lawn furniture from Kmart.

■ John Gross, 29, Combs, first-degree possession of controlled substance (OxyContin) and possession of drug paraphernalia.

■ James R. Gross, Combs, first-degree possession of controlled substance (OxyContin) and possession of drug paraphernalia.

■ James R. Gross, 53, Combs, receiving stolen property for allegedly receiving $4,558.99 in lawn furniture from Kmart.

Scene of frequent car wrecks claims two more

Jeremy Ousley comforted his nephew, Luke, after a wreck on Friday afternoon. Just a few moments earlier, rescue workers were called out to the same location, where two other vehicles collided under similar circumstances.

PRESTONSBURG — Lightning never strikes twice in the same place, or so they say. Two wrecks which occurred Friday afternoon almost simultaneously on North Lake Drive, however, suggest the contrary.

At approximately 1 p.m., Roberta Slone, 80, of Prestonsburg was attempting to pull out from Branham Street in front of Papa John's Restaurant — a location which is frequently the scene of accidents — when the driver of a van in the southbound lane on 1428 "stopped traffic" and motioned for her to pass.

According to Prestonsburg Police Officer John Dale, Slone said she couldn't see traffic approaching in an oncoming lane.

Slone's vehicle, a 1992 Cadillac, hit the passenger side of an Olds Cutlass driven by Herman Ratliff, 56, of Prestonsburg.

According to Dale, there was only minor to moderate damage to both vehicles, and no one was injured.

"I've seen several wrecks on that stretch of road," said Dale. "There are a lot of businesses in that general vicinity. It's a busier corner there."

Dale said that most of the wrecks happen in the same vicinity near Papa John's Restaurant on Branham Street when people in the inside, or center, lane "flag" other drivers across.

"You just can't see across two lanes when you pull in or out like DUNRAVEN — The 159-acre coal slurry impoundment permit sought by Coastal Coal Company is still under review by two government agencies.

The Department of Surface Mining in Frankfort and the Mine Waste and Geotechnical Division of the Mine Safety and Health Administration in Pittsburgh are currently examining maps and core drilling samples from the abandoned mines and pond

The permit involves 443 acres: 159 acres for the coal slurry impoundment with a 100-foot dam and the remainder for a proposed refuse field of course byproduct from coal processing.

The permit is one of four which would give Coastal Coal the right to mine and process coal in the area. Two mining permits were approved for mining the #4, #5 and Amburgey seams in "This is not a raise," said Trent. "It's a cost-of-living adjustment."

JACKSON — Last week, the Breathitt County Board of Education held a meeting in which they discussed several topics, one whether or not to give the teachers an increase in their pay.

Lillian Trent, the Breathitt County Education Association president, suggested to the board that teachers should get a 2.2 percent

This motion, however, was not seconded. Board member Kelly Noble Jr. said he would rather try to give bigger increases to the staff.

The board later agreed that new Superintendent Larry Wood should be part of any decisions that involve a raise. Woods takes over the position of superintendent on July 1.

Maker of OxyContin sued again

by MARY MUSIC
STAFF WRITER

MANCHESTER — A class-action lawsuit filed in Clay County Circuit Court seeks restitution for people throughout Southeastern Kentucky who contend they have been adversely affected by the prescription drug OxyContin.

The lawsuit, filed by Peter Perlman of Lexington and Bill Hayes of Middlesboro against Purdue Pharma, Abbott Laboratories, Dr. Ali Sawaf and Pineville Community Hospital, alleges that addiction to OxyContin, which is manufactured, marketed, promoted, sold, and/or distributed by the defendants, continues to be one of the "primary social ills" of Southeastern Kentucky.

It is the latest in a series of lawsuits that have been filed against Purdue Pharma and Abbott Laboratories in West Virginia, Virginia and Kentucky, including a multi-million dollar suit filed by the West Virginia Attorney General's Office.

"I first became aware of problem with OxyContin while doing research for a column I write," said Hayes. "It became apparent to me after substantial research that the makers of OxyContin had very aggressively marketed the very dangerous drug and that it was being recommended by its maker for uses like moderate pain.

"People with arthritis and chronic low back pain are taking this drug. This drug is like a modified form of morphine, and these people have become hideously addicted to it."

The lawsuit alleges that addiction to OxyContin has led to "serious" social problems including addiction, drug abuse, other self-destructive and criminal acts related to OxyContin, and a "dangerous and vicious black market" of the drug.

The suit also alleges that the drug, which is supposed to be used for severe pain, has been "deceptively marketed and over-prescribed" by doctors for mild pain, stating that OxyContin is "not suitable or fit for the purposes advertised by the defendants."

The lawsuit asks for restitution for Rodney Howard, 28, and his family; James Presley Craig; the estate of Gus Dale Robbins Sr.; Micheal Lee Daniels, 32; George Allen Saylor, 30, and his family; Robin Griffin, 29; and the estate of Johnny Johnson Wynn.

All of the plaintiffs in the lawsuit were allegedly prescribed OxyContin and became addicted to the drug while taking those prescriptions. The lawsuit alleges that many have lost "everything of value" to them including their jobs and, in the case of some, their lives.

Two plaintiffs named in the lawsuit have died of an OxyContin overdose. Gus Dale Robbins Sr., died in December 1999. In October, Johnny Johnson Wynn also died.

According to Hayes, profits from the sale of OxyContin have increased from $40 million in 1996, to over $1 billion in 2000.

Hayes said the "aggressive marketing" of OxyContin is attributed, in part, to an online website called Partners Against Pain. According to Hayes, the organization allegedly advertises or implies the use of OxyContin is appropriate to treat arthritis without first trying milder drugs.

Perlman and Hayes are seeking, among other types of relief, a declaration that the defendants must "disgorge" their profits received from the sale of OxyContin for the benefit of the plaintiffs, an unspecified amount of punitive damages, the establishment of a fund for a medical monitoring program, a public awareness campaign to alert the general public of the health risks and problems associated with OxyContin, and a $3 million trust to maintain a permanent substance abuse rehabilitation facility.

"I made a promise to a fellow who was dying from it," said Hayes. I told him that we'd stop it, and we mean to try."

Federal energy secretary will attend groundbreaking for power plant

HINDMAN — U.S. Energy Secretary Spencer Abraham will join elected officials July 2 to break ground for EnviroPower's 524-megawatt power plant in Knott County.

The plant is expected to be in operation by 2004.

In announcing the ceremony, EnviroPower Inc. emphasized that the new facility will utilize the latest in clean-coal technology.

The facility is the state's first coal-fired generation plant permitted for construction in 20 years. It is also the first plant in Kentucky to use innovative technology, which will produce less than one-fourth of the total emissions of existing coal-fired plants.

Gov. Paul Patton said that the plant "will help prove to the country that coal can and should play an important role in helping address our nation's significant energy needs without jeopardizing our responsibility to be stewards of our environment and natural resources."

"The National Energy Plan is a comprehensive and balanced approach to solve America's national energy challenges while ensuring that we maintain a strong and healthy environment," Abraham said. "EnviroPower's utilization of a cornerstone of that plan — clean-coal technologies — will help us achieve that important goal."

Abraham is attending the groundbreaking to draw attention to the technology to be used. He will be joined by the three Republican Congressmen who represent the area — Sen. Mitch McConnell, Sen. Jim Bunning, and Rep. Hal Rogers.

"Clean-coal technology isn't a theory that exists only in a classroom," said Harold Sergent, president and CEO of EnviroPower, an independent power producer with offices in Lexington. "It isn't a concept. It's a reality. Power plants have made tremendous progress in reducing emissions through innovative technology."

"This facility represents a giant step forward in proving that coal-fired generation facilities can — and should — play an important role in addressing our country's pressing energy needs."

President George W. Bush's proposed energy policy highlights coal in addressing the nation's energy needs. Coal is left over from mining for fuel. Millions of tons of gob piles dot the landscape of Eastern Kentucky and represent a significant environmental hazard.

Gov. Paul Patton, left, announced tax breaks to help companies involved in the development of coal-fired power plants in Kentucky. Patton made the announcement last year at Hazard City Hall with Hazard Mayor Bill Gorman. The press conference was attended by members of EnviroPower, the Lexington-based company which will develop the plant in Knott County. Kentucky Mountain Power, a subsidiary of EnviroPower, will operate the plant. The president is John Tate of Hazard.

Sergent also said that the economic benefits of the facility in a region in need of jobs and development should not be overlooked. The plant will directly hire 50 people. Another 600 to 1,000 jobs will be created during the three-year construction phase. The plant is not a peaking unit, it will operate 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

In addition, more than 100 people will be hired by the companies which haul fuel and limestone. In all, the project will pump more than $4.8 billion into the economy for construction, equipment and costs.

EnviroPower has also donated nearly 1,000 acres to the state for a regional industrial park.

EnviroPower is also working with the state to improve access from Route 80, including a heavy haul bridge. A new $50 million water line will be built by EnviroPower for the power plant, but will also supply the industrial park and growing communities.

"We have done our best to put together a plan for this facility that is sensitive to the environment, the needs of our neighbors, and for economic growth and development in our region," Sergent said. "The result of this facility will be economic growth and the production of low-cost baseload power in an environmentally sensitive and responsible way."

"In that respect, this facility represents the latest in technological innovation to provide the best in service for our region and our country."

Pond

the Dunraven area of Perry County near the North Fork of the Kentucky River.

According to residents and miners who live near the site, the Amburgey seam runs below the riverbed and could pose a threat to public safety and the environment if tunnels were mined near the proposed slurry pond.

Additionally, miners who worked the area say the ridge next to the proposed pond is honeycombed with mine shafts dating back to the 1920s — before accurate maps were drawn or recorded for state regulators.

Jan Misner, whose family owns land near the site, has been questioning the safety of the permit since before the Martin County disaster on October 11, when the bottom fell out of a 75-acre coal mine waste pond operated by Martin County Coal near Inez.

The pond apparently collapsed into an abandoned underground mine; then spilled over 250 million gallons of sludge into tributaries of the Big Sandy River, blackening 75 miles of river, while killing fish and shutting down water systems.

A state investigation determined that documents provided by Martin County Coal misrepresented the width of the barrier between the slurry pond and an abandoned, underground mine.

The distance was less than 10 ft. in some places, although the coal company reported a 70 ft. rock barrier between the pond and the mines.

As a result of the disaster, at least 10 lawsuits are now filed at the state and federal levels, with an estimated 300 plaintiffs suing Martin County Coal.

Among the allegations, Martin County residents contend the company used incorrect maps to build the impoundment; injected unauthorized slurry into the deep mines; weakened coal pillars; removed too much coal from mines beneath the impoundment; ignored warnings from federal inspectors after a smaller failure in 1994; and exceeded the permitted elevation limits of the impoundment.

In a document dated May 25, Martin County Coal claimed that "an act of God," or unspecified "forces of nature" caused the impoundment to fail. They also reasoned that if negligence was involved, it occurred five years before the lawsuit when the statute of limitations expired.

Considering the past disasters with coal slurry impoundments, Jan Misner explained her resistance:

"All I'm saying is look at this and look closely ... They need to make sure they are putting the slurry on a good, solid basin and that the dam will be safe. Core drilling should be completed around the perimeter to make sure the base is solid."

Critics continue to cite the chief flaw with impoundment structures as the shifting of ground due to abandoned coal mines under or near the dams.

Regarding the problem of the shifting ground, Kentucky environmental lawyer Tom Fitzgerald had earlier said, "Where you have previous underground mining, you should not be constructing impoundments."

According to Perry Campbell, a coal loader for over 20 years, the ridge beside the proposed impoundment was mined extensively.

He reported the existence of hundreds of line tracks and headings in Jake's Campbell's Branch, some of which connected to earlier mining shafts that currently responsible for more than 50 percent of the country's supply of electricity.

Blackouts in California and energy needs along the East Coast have focused national attention on how electricity is produced and on plans to expand generation capacity. But in helping answer the country's energy needs, EnviroPower's president said that it is important to recognize the environment too.

"We have to be stewards of our country's energy needs, but of our environment as well," Sergent said. "At EnviroPower, we realize that we share this land with others. We have an obligation to provide jobs and economic development opportunities. But we also have an obligation to protect the environment of our neighbors and our country."

To that end, Sergent said that Kentucky Mountain Power, the subsidiary which will operate the plant, will take unprecedented steps to protect the environment. According to spokesmen for the agency, the National Park Service issued a letter concluding that emissions from the plant will not have an adverse impact on air quality at the Great Smokey Mountains National Park.

In addition, the plant is unique in an important respect. It will burn "gob piles," or waste coal, ic development opportunities. But we also have an obligation to protect the environment of our neighbors and our country."

JACKSON — On Wednesday, June 27, about 20 concerned citizens of Breathitt County met at one location of the Kentucky River located at the new Douthitt Park and worked their way up to the waterfalls, cleaning tires and other debris out of the river.

According to Roger Friley, Breathitt County fire chief, there were about 500 tires pulled out of the river last year. This year, over 100 were pulled out. Once the tires were pulled out, county workers hauled them off.

The Fish and Wildlife officer was among the 20 citizens who ence of law enforcement within the city.

Apparently, Newsome had called into work several days in recent weeks and complaints had started throughout the community as to where their city policeman was.

"He must be working undercover," one attending citizen called out from the back of the room.

This seems to be hardly a new trend for Newsome, who displayed frequent lapses of absenteeism while a member of the Floyd County Sheriff's Department, most notably during his last six months there under Sheriff John K. Blackburn from January to July 1995.

According to Blackburn, Newsome missed approximately 74 days of work during that time.

Wheelwright Mayor Marlee Sammons announced the council's intentions to begin the search for another candidate to fill Newsome's position effective immediately.

Newsome's salary during his employment, according to Wheelwright city records, was $9 an hour, a pay scale that many officers considering the position look to as a major factor in light of the city's size and population.

In addition to this salary, Wheelwright also offers a $3,100 incentive to officers taking the position who have already received required training needed for the job as well as providing personal health insurance and the typical sick leave and vacation time found with other areas of employment.

Sammons stressed during Thursday's meeting that the decision to dismiss Newsome, although inadvertently referenced as being connected to attendance, fell under the 90-day probationary period set for hiring of a police official for the city, giving the city and the chosen employee this time to fully commit to the decision.

Newsome was not present for Thursday's meeting and could not be reached for comment on the council's decision.

Director Mimi Pickering documents Appalachia

Left to right, director Mimi Pickering and singer/ songwriter Hazel Dickens. Pickering filmed a documentary of Dickens' music featuring videotapes of live concerts and interviews with the artist.

by CARA WADSWORTH
STAFF WRITER

WHITESBURG — Mimi Pickering started learning about film, video, and media at Appalshop workshops in 1972. Her interest for artistic work found expression in film making, where she enjoyed documenting the people of Appalachia and giving voice to their concerns.

Pickering soon began her film career and has since produced, directed and edited several documentaries that have been shown on PBS, at schools and at Appalshop festivals and events.

"One of my hopes in making documentaries is to provide my audience with the opportunity to see others who are making changes, or calling for changes by inspiring questions and getting involved in finding solutions to problems in their communities. I hope to help the audience become better informed about the lives of real people," explained Pickering about her films.

Pickering's newest film, "Hazel Dickens: It's hard to tell the singer from the song," premiered last month and was shown at the Seedtime on the Cumberland Festival in Whitesburg on June 8.

Pickering was inspired to create the documentary about singer and songwriter Hazel Dickens' life and music of the 1960s after listening to her sing about the "feisty working women of Appalachia."

"Since I first learned about Hazel's music, I have been moved and impressed by her ability to capture the sense of the ordinary women and the social issues of the day in her lyrics," explained Pickering.

One of the female pioneers in music, Hazel Dickens grew up in West Virginia and is known as the first lady of old-time country and bluegrass music.

For those who are unfamiliar with Hazel Dickens' music, most of the film's soundtrack comes from videotaped concerts in Virginia and North Carolina, allowing the viewer to see and hear the artist in action.

Dickens is still alive and performs at the Appalachian Festival in Cincinnati where some of the documentary was filmed.

Pickering's interest in community activism and Appalachian culture is apparent in her other films which document the history, issues and concerns of the people in their communities. "Buffalo Creek flood: An active man," deals with the Buffalo Creek, W.Va., coal waste dam disaster that killed 125 people in 1972.

Her film focuses on the responsibility of man in the disaster instead of "an act of God" which coal company officials claimed as the cause. Pickering filmed a follow-up documentary, "Buffalo Creek Revisited." Another film, "Chemical Valley," looks at the area around Charleston, W.Va., and the community concerns about safety.

Most of Pickering's latest documentary about the C.B. Caudill store in Blackey has already been filmed. The old country store has become a history center with mining artifacts and relics of the past. The Begleys operated the store from 1935 to 1966 when it was a social center and meeting place for the community. Pickering will soon edit and complete filming for the historical documentary.

In addition to film, Pickering hosts a volunteer radio show on WMMT FM. "Biscuits and Ham" features women singers and songwriters of country, folk and alternative rock. With all her creative projects in the works, Pickering stays busy in music and film while working as a staff member at Appalshop.

If interested in seeing her films or ordering a videotape, contact Appalshop at 606-633-0108.

that," said Dale.

Approximately 25 minutes later, Dale said he was called out for another wreck in Prestonsburg, which occurred in the same location with similar circumstances.

At approximately 1:25 p.m., Shawn Crider, 21, Endicott, was driving southbound on Rt. 1428, according to Prestonsburg Police Officer Roy Roberts, when he was hit on the driver's side by a vehicle driven by Donna R. Perry, 37, of River, who was turning onto Branham street, just outside of Papa John's Restaurant.

Perry said that as she was attempting to turn across the two lanes of traffic onto Branham Street, Ron Endicott, who was driving a Brown's Foodservice truck in the center lane, motioned her across.

As Perry attempted to turn across the two lanes onto Branham street, her car collided with the Crider vehicle.

Crider, and his brother, Jeremy Ousley, 19, who was a passenger, were transported to Highlands Regional Medical Center by Transtar Ambulance Service with complaints of head, neck and shoulder injuries.

Margaret Albright, and Crider's 5-year-old son, Luke, who were also passengers, were uninjured in the accident.

Perry, and her son, Gary, 11, who was a passenger in the other vehicle, were also uninjured.

"This place is dangerous," said Willa Hurd, a friend of the Crider family who stopped to help. "Something needs to be done before somebody gets killed."

Officer Roberts, who also noted that there were "several wrecks" on that particular street, said he never waves anybody to cross the street.

"In a situation like this, you're depending on the other guy," said Roberts, "and an honest mistake can turn into something extremely dangerous. Don't trust people and don't wave people across."

Mayor Jerry Fannin said in an interview on Friday that he would write a letter to the state Department of Highways in Pikeville and ask them to look into the possibility of putting a traffic light at the intersection.

"Putting lights in there might make it a safer road," said Fannin. "After today, I see the need for it."

BREATHITT COUNTY BUREAU

JACKSON — Lyndon B. Johnson School has a new principal. Mary Lou Hamilton has accepted the position of principal at LBJ.

Hamilton has been working at LBJ for the past 14 years, so she has lots of experience and is very familiar with the school. She is the mother of a Breathitt High School graduate, who is now currently in his second year of medical school at the Pikeville College School of Osteopathic Medicine.

Hamilton said she has many goals in which she hopes to improve the school. For example, to ensure safety, she will require all of staff, faculty and all visitors to wear name tags.

Hamilton also hopes to find a solution that will help improve the standardized test scores at LBJ. She also hopes to improve the attendance. Hamilton has also been considering have an in-school suspension in order to help teach kids discipline.

"I am very excited about this new being principal," Hamilton said of her new job. "I will be bringing in a teacher's perspective to any concerns that may come up."

Strengthening DUI law was right decision

When Kentucky passed its new DUI law last year, lowering the legal blood-alcohol limit to operate a vehicle from 0.10 to 0.08, naysayers said the legislation would have little effect in taking drunken drivers off the streets or saving lives.

They came armed with studies, like one from North Carolina that concluded "there was little clear effect of the lower BAC limit." And a 1999 report from the U.S. General Accounting Office that said lower limits will have little or no influence on reducing accidents or deaths.

These opponents, led by the National Restaurant Association, said that a 0.08 law would only target casual drinkers, who are not the people causing deadly accidents.

Supporters countered with their own studies. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said the 0.08 law reduced fatal crashes by an estimated 8 percent in 1999, and if all 50 states had the law, 590 lives would have been saved.

But Rep. Rob Wilkey, D-Franklin, who led the fight for a tougher DUI law, felt these arguments were missing a critical factor — the effect the law would have on reducing the "culture of tolerance" toward drinking and driving, which seemed so pervasive throughout the state.

In a series of forums last year to address the issue, Wilkey said he was confident alcohol-related fatalities in Kentucky could be reduced by 12 to 18 percent under the new law. This would be done not necessarily by more arrests but by sending the message that drinking and driving — even at a minimum level — will not be tolerated, he said.

Admittedly, eight months isn't a lot of time to get a firm handle on the impact of the new law, but early returns from local law enforcement indicate Wilkey was on target with his assessment.

"The law is getting the point across," said Mark Applin, a Kentucky State Police trooper. "We've seen a lot of designated drivers during our road checks."

Lt. J.D. Marksberry of the Daviess County Sheriff's Department says the law has made people more aware of the consequences of drinking and driving. "I think they're watching how much they drink a little closer and having more designated drivers," he said.

The fears that the law would lead to a crackdown on casual drinkers have not proven true. Of the 120 DUI arrests made by the KSP since the law went into effect, only 12 were of drivers with a BAC between 0.08 and 0.099. What it is doing is causing people to think twice before they have that extra drink at dinner or happy hour.

That's significant when you consider that even at a BAC of 0.05, a driver can have a delayed reaction time of 1.5 seconds. Driving at 60 mph, that delay is equivalent to traveling an extra 132 feet — nearly half a football field — before stopping.

It will be some time before we know what effect the new law will have on reducing fatalities. But we do know it seems to be eroding the "culture of tolerance" toward drinking and driving. Accomplishing that feat alone will make arguments against the legislation seem inconsequential.

A hot issue: Global warming

European leaders gave President Bush a cool response to his adamant stand against the Kyoto global warming pact. During the presidential campaign last fall, Bush said that carbon dioxide was a "pollutant" and that he would support legislation to reduce this pollutant from power plants. After becoming president, Bush wrote "I do not believe ... the government should impose on power plants mandatory emissions reductions for CO2, which is not a pollutant."

According to the dictionary a pollutant is "a harmful chemical or waste discharged into the water or atmosphere." This fits carbon dioxide since it causes global warming.

The United States has large coal reserves and currently generates 52 percent of its energy from burning coal. Coal is dirty, producing sulfur oxides (acid rain), mercury (neurotoxin) and other pollutants which can be removed at some cost. A more fundamental problem is that coal produces twice as much CO2 per unit of energy produced as natural gas (for oil the figure is about 1 1/2 times). Gasification processes which require more research before being commercially viable, can reduce the CO2 problem. Plentiful supplies and low prices for natural gas, which burns clean, increased its use in recent years for gas burning electric power plants. This has reduced the use of coal and caused serious economic problems for the coal mining industry.

The five electoral votes of West Virginia, a major coal producing state, were crucial to Bush becoming president. West Virginia coal tycoon (William Harless), after years of battling coal miners, mobilized them to vote for Bush with promises of more jobs and for the first time in years secured the votes to win for Bush. He also raised a lot of money for the GOP campaign. Vice President Dick Cheney is from Wyoming, a major coal mining state whose coal has lower impurities and is easier to mine. That industry, after years of decline, is now booming. Coal interests were lavish in support of the Bush campaign (with little for Gore) and they now enjoy the benefits.

How certain are we that global warming is occurring? Dozens of studies all agree, including the science academies of 16 nations that signed a statement saying that the Kyoto protocol "represents a small but essential first step toward stabilizing atmospheric concentrations of greenhouse gases." The recent U.S. Academy of Sciences study emphasized that global warming was real, getting worse and caused mostly by human activity.

Although publicly embracing this report, Bush continues to reject Kyoto and suggests that any agreement must bind China and India. China produces just over 10 percent of the carbon dioxide per capita as the U.S. and has dramatically reduced these emissions by 17 percent since 1995 while its GDP grew 36 percent. By contrast the U.S. emissions continue to increase with a much slower growing economy. India is also increasing energy efficiency. U.S. participation is important since we produce 25 percent of world emissions but have only 5 percent of world population.

A major Bush objection is that Kyoto would cause serious economic dislocation and damage the American lifestyle. Although some business leaders support Bush, many others are actively working to reduce their emissions and plan for continued reductions. The U.S. population-adjusted CO2 per unit of GDP is one of the highest in the world; other nations with a standard of living comparable to that of the U.S. have proved that their economies can thrive yet produce only one-half the CO2 per GDP of this country.

The Wall Street Journal article, "Many Utilities Call Conserving Good Business" gave several examples: Seattle City Light saved enough energy to power the entire city for 18 months; Sacramento Municipal Utility saved the equivalent of building one huge new plant. Some publicly owned utilities are also having the same experience.

Energy saved means less CO2 and less global warming. DuPont publicly recognized in 1991 that there was enough scientific evidence linking greenhouse gases to global climate changes that they took action. While expanding their business they have reduced greenhouse gases worldwide, on a CO2 basis, by 50 percent, and have committed to an additional 65 percent reduction by 2010. Other companies are doing the same.

The Bush administration is wrong on all of its assertions: 1). Science strongly supports greenhouse gas global warming; 2). We can meet Kyoto requirements without harming our economy; 3). Developing nations like China have shown that they can and are doing their part. And as an added major bonus, we can substantially cut energy consumption, thus reducing our reliance on unstable foreign supplies and eliminate the need to drill in environmentally sensitive areas such as ANWR. Let us tell the Bush administration this is the best way to go.

School year 2001-2002 to begin August 9

August 6 and 7 are slated as the first professional days for teacher development with August 8 being opening day for teachers. August 9 will be the first day of attendance for Floyd County students.

Kristina Springer, Director of Pupil Personnel for Floyd County Schools, has presented the approved 2001-2002 school calendar for the upcoming school year. The calendar consists of 175 instructional days, four professional development days, four holidays, one opening day, and one closing day for a total of 185 days.

August 6 and 7 are slated as the first professional days for teacher development with August 8 being opening day for teachers. August 9 will be the first day of attendance for Floyd County students.

Slated as holidays with no school in session for these days are: September 3 - Labor Day; November 22 - Thanksgiving Day; December 25 - Christmas Day; and, January 1 - New Year's Day.

Thanksgiving Break will be observed November 21-23; Christmas Break - December 20 - January 1 (students will return to school on January 2); and, Spring Break - April 1-5.

There will be no school in session on October 5 due to a meeting of the E.K.E.A.; as well as no school on March 22, due to a F.C.E.A. meeting date.

January 21 will be observed as a no school holiday (Martin Luther King, Jr. Day) as well as February 18 (President's Day).

May 14 is scheduled as the last day of school for students, with May 15 being scheduled as closing day for teachers.

This calendar is subject to change due to inclement weather developments. Any and all days missed due to inclement weather will be added to the end of the school year calendar. Christmas and Spring Breaks will remain unchanged regardless of inclement weather conditions.

The Forest vs. the Trees on Patients' Rights

by JACK FARIS

"Patients' rights" legislation is once again taking center stage in Washington, D.C. The new leadership in the Senate is making the curbing of the HMO industry a priority and the nature of the subject overall is making it news.

Health care affects everyone, so when our elected officials talk (or even just posture) about it, most Americans do, indeed, listen. In that way, it is unlike so many other issues that are debated in our nation's capital; it is truly important to one and all. Unfortunately, it is also one of the more complicated policy issues that legislators can grapple with. Not to mention one of the most financially significant. Whether you purchase health insurance on your own, sell health insurance to others or provide it to employees, the cost is critical. There are billions of dollars involved - the health-care industry as a whole (including not just insurance, but the care itself - doctors, nurses, hospitals, pharmaceuticals, medical supply companies, and on and on) makes up one-seventh of our overall economy. There is much money to be made, and to be lost.

And if the money alone didn't make this thing huge, the level of passion surrounding an issue as important as our health has helped turn it into one of the media's favorite issues.

So we read about it in the paper. We see it on TV. And it is still difficult to decipher the "truth" about the "patients' bill of rights."

Is it good for patients or not worth the cost? Is the insurance industry telling the truth? Or are they protecting their enormous assets? Are so-called consumer groups telling the truth? Or are they fronting for fat-cat personal injury lawyers? The forest and the trees become one.

There is one group in the lobbying fray who, I promise you, is not interested in whether they make or lose money. They are only interested in being able to afford health insurance for themselves, their families and, hopefully, for their employees. And they are interested in protecting themselves from being sued for decisions they weren't involved in. Period. Who are these people? They are America's little economic engine-that-could: small-business owners.

They, their families, their employees and their employees' families represent three-fifths of the nation's 43 million uninsured lives. To them, the so-called "rights" in this legislation are meaningless. Having health insurance is the only thing with real meaning to them, and the "bill of rights" does nothing to help them achieve that dream.

Those in the small-business community who are insured are struggling each year to afford the cost of increasing premiums. The Congressional Budget Office has determined that the "rights" bill will increase premiums an average of 4.2 percent. That number will mean the difference between "insured" and "uninsured" for thousands of these people. There is legislation in Congress that would address the problem of the uninsured. A new law allowing the creation of Association Health Plans, for example, would help the small-business community in particular. It is therefore disappointing to me that "patients' rights" takes up so many headlines when it really only addresses such a small aspect of our overall health-care troubles.

If you, like so many Americans, are passionate about improving health care in this country, please take a few moments to look at the big picture, to think about whether "patients' rights" legislation is anything more than just a band-aid that would give a temporary sense of justice and a political feather to some groups. Think about how we can get this phenomenal free market of ours the chance to lift the quality of the system up while bringing the prices down. And if you need to sort out the forest from the trees after watching the evening news... just ask your favorite small-business owner what the biggest challenges are, and what they think ought to be done. They are the real experts.

Jack Faris is president of NFIB, the nation's largest small-business advocacy group. A non-profit, non-partisan organization founded in 1943, NFIB represents the consensus views of its 600,000 members in Washington, D.C., and all 50 state capitals. Bad Tax Bill...

by SHELDON RICHMAN

We've been had. By a Bush. Again.

The tax cut is a joke. After all the blather about how the surplus belongs to us, not the government, the resulting tax-cut bill is minuscule, ultra-gradual, and now scheduled to expire in ten years! Republican and Democrat members of Congress, most of whom never saw a dollar they didn't think was theirs, took advantage of President Bush's desperation to sign a tax-cut bill-any tax-cut bill-and handed us this fiasco.

The promise to cut the 15-percent bracket to 10 percent was abandoned. Instead, there is a new 10-percent bracket for married couples' first $12,000. After that, the take is still 15 percent up to $45,000. The president pledged to cut the top 39.6-percent bracket to 33 percent-which would have failed to roll back his father's 1990 promise-breaking tax cut-but that pledge was radically modified. The top rate will be reduced to 35 percent by 2006 and to 33 or 34 percent four years later. Meanwhile, the personal exemption and itemized deduction will be phased out for people in the top bracket.

There are many other provisions involving child credits, 401(k)s, and the like. This is surely not a tax-simplification bill. And it isn't much of a tax-reduction bill either. Face it, $1.3 trillion over a decade isn't much money. The government will rake in at least $25 trillion in that time. The big spenders in Washington complain that the "price tag" is really $1.9 trillion, or more if you count unpaid interest on the national debt. Big deal.

The whole matter is a big mass of fallacy. We should know by now that cutting tax rates does not cost the treasury money; it makes money. High tax rates discourage productive activity, leaving less for the government to tax. Slashing tax rates induces an investment boom, higher profits, and higher incomes-more for the government to tax.

Not that that is a good thing. Remember, taxation is the politicians' way of stealing. If government revenues go up after a tax cut, it means taxes weren't cut enough. This is the point that not enough people get: Money in the government's hands is not something to rejoice over. Money in the government's hands is nothing more than consumption directed by politicians. If the money is left in the hands of its producers, we get consumer-directed investment. Who should be making the money decisions: short-sighted, reelection-oriented career politicians who rarely suffer personally when they squander hundreds of billions, or the people who actually take risks and produce wealth by serving consumers? It's a no-brainer.

Another point that needs to be driven home often is that tax cuts don't cost the American people anything. If the government abstains from taking money from you, how can that be construed as costly? You're being permitted to keep your own money! So when the big-taxers complain that a tax cut will "cost" some number of trillions of dollars, remember two things: the government's take may actually rise and the only cost, if any, is to the government and its clients, who aren't entitled to the money anyway.

And please, let's not hear any more grousing about how most of the cuts go to higher-income people. That's who pays most of the taxes! They also do most of the saving and investing, which raises the living standards of the rest of us. The bottom 50 percent of earners account for only 4 percent of the income-tax take.

There is one thing we know for sure. This is the end of the tax-cut discussion in Washington. A president gets one shot, if that much, at cutting taxes. Mr. Bush had his chance. He blew it.

I said it was the end of the tax-cut discussion. There is never an end to the tax-increase discussion. Don't think for a moment that because this bill has passed, taxes can't be raised during the next four years. They can and well might be. Keep an eye on Sen. John McCain.

Low-interest loan programs to help people with disabilities are renewed

Two innovative low-rate loan programs established last year that make it easier for people with disabilities to buy assistive technology equipment have been renewed for another year.

The Kentucky Assistive Technology Loan Programs, administered by the Kentucky Assistive Technology Loan Corporation (KATLC), offer its low-rate loans to qualified applicants to finance home modifications and the purchase of assistive technology devices.

Under one loan program, the KATLC, in a partnership with the Fifth Third Bank Kentucky Inc. and the Kentucky Housing Corporation, offers low-rate loans to qualified low-to-moderate income individuals who need home modifications. Examples of home modifications include wheelchair ramps, widening of doors and remote environmental controls that allow a person with limited mobility to adjust room temperature or turn on lights.

The second KATLC low-rate loan program is open to any individual at any income level. It provides loans to qualified individuals for home modifications and other assistive technology devices, such as wheelchair lifts for vans.

Nearly $500,000 has been appropriated to fund the two loan programs for the next 12 months.

To participate in these programs, applicants must be individuals with disabilities, parents or guardians of individuals with disabilities or nonprofit organizations serving people with disabilities.

The programs were developed for people who may have difficulty obtaining conventional financing because of limited income, insufficient credit or financial history or high medical expenses.

To obtain an application, contact Nancy E. Hansen, program director, in Lexington at (859) 246-2540, ext. 237, or toll-free at 877-675-0195, ext. 279. Her

Quiet heroes

There are few of us who would hesitate to save the life of another if we were given the opportunity to do so. However, heroism isn't always displayed in the midst of flashing lights and sirens; there is another act we can perform to save life...donating blood. It's a quiet, simple act of heroism that gives life and new hope to those who desperately need it. Donate blood for the Jenny Wiley State Park blood drive, Monday July 9 from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Interim president appointed to lead JCC

Michael B. McCall, president of the Kentucky Community and Technical College System (KCTCS), has appointed a 20-year employee of Jefferson Community College as the institution's interim president.

Diane M. Calhoun-French, who has served as dean of academic affairs at the JCC-Southwest Campus since 1984, will succeed Richard Green while a search is conducted to appoint the college's next permanent president. Green, president of JCC since 1995, is retiring from the college effective June 30.

Calhoun-French officially becomes interim president on July 1. She said her priorities during the coming months include:

- Working with faculty and staff to improve the institution based on recommendations made by an accreditation reaffirmation team from the Commission on Colleges of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS). Every 10 years, SACS reviews the accreditation of community colleges. As part of that review, a SACS team visited JCC earlier this year.

- Preparing the college's response to recommendations from the SACS team.

- Drafting the biennial budget request for the Jefferson Community and Technical College District. Calhoun-French will serve as interim chief executive officer of the district, which includes JCC and Jefferson Technical College (JTC).

- Ensuring that the college and district respond to the education and training needs of the community.

- Maintaining strong partnerships with other higher education institutions, including the University of Louisville.

- Opening the Shelby County campus of JCC and JTC in 2002.

- Expanding successful academic programs such as distance learning and information technology.

"I'm looking forward to the opportunity to work more closely with all members of this talented and dedicated college community," Calhoun-French said.

McCall said KCTCS will assist JCC during the leadership transition. In particular, KCTCS Chancellor Tony Newberry will provide support to Calhoun-French. Newberry worked at JCC from 1976-85.

"Dr. Calhoun-French is an experienced administrator who knows the issues of JCC well,"

McCall said. "I am confident that we will experience a smooth transition through the selection of the next president."

Calhoun-French received her bachelor's degree from Bellarmine College, her master's from Wake Forest University in North Carolina, and her doctorate from the University of Louisville. All of her degrees are in English. She taught at U of L from 1974-80 and has worked at JCC-Southwest since then, first as assistant professor and then as dean of academic affairs.

McCall said that a nationwide search will be conducted to appoint the next permanent president of JCC. The college's next president will serve in the dual role of chief executive officer of the Jefferson Community and Technical College District.

The Jefferson Community and Technical College District has the largest enrollment among the 16 districts in KCTCS - 9,500 students in credit programs in fall 2000. The district has campuses in downtown Louisville, southwest Jefferson County, Shelbyville and Carrollton.

Statewide teacher job fair scheduled July 18 in Louisville

RICHMOND, - Attention: Certified education candidates looking for a teaching position and school systems needing to fill vacancies are invited to attend the annual BlueGrassPrimeTime Teacher Job Fair, Wednesday, July 18 from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Galt House in Louisville.

The event is a cooperative effort of Eastern Kentucky University's Division of Career Services, EKU's College of Education, the Kentucky Association of School Administrators and all the colleges and universities in Kentucky and southern Indiana that have teacher education programs.

Joining EKU as co-sponsoring institutions are Alice Lloyd College, Asbury College, Bellarmine College, Berea College, Brescia University, Campbellsville University, Centre College, Cumberland College, Georgetown College, Hanover College, Indiana University-Southeast, Kentucky Christian College, Kentucky State University, Kentucky Wesleyan College, Lindsey Wilson College, Midway College, Morehead State University, Murray State University, Northern Kentucky University, Pikeville College,

Spalding University, Thomas More College, Transylvania University, Union College,

University of Evansville, University of Kentucky, University of Louisville, University of Southern Indiana and Western Kentucky University.

"This is an excellent example of where, through cooperation, a valuable service can be provided to our education candidates and our school systems," said Art Harvey, director of career services at EKU.

The job market for teachers continues to be strong, according to Harvey, particularly in some subject specialty areas and certain geographic locations.

Job candidates from all colleges and universities are welcome. Program information, along with a map, is available at A list of participating school systems and their vacancies will be posted on the web site beginning Monday, July 16.

Teacher candidates may register on site at the free event; no pre-registration is required. For more information, interested candidates and recruiters may call 859-622-1567 or e-mail questions to art.harvey@eku.edu.

Card Of Thanks

The family of Ollie Wallen would like to extend their appreciation to all those friends, neighbors and loved ones who helped comfort them during their time of sorrow. Thanks to all who sent food, flowers, prayers or spoke comforting words. A special thanks to Manford Fannin and all the members of Third Avenue Freewill Baptist Church for their kindness and comforting words.

A very special thank-you to Russ Taylor for being with my husband and our dad during his final moments. Thank you so much.

We would like to express our thanks to Nelson-Frazier Funeral Home for all their kind and professional service.

Also, thanks to John K. Blackburn and the Sheriff's Department for their help.

Thank you, is such a small thing compared to the feelings we hold within our hearts for each, and everyone, who helped the family during the sickness and death of our beloved Dad. Only God knows how much we appreciated your thoughtfulness in our loss, and Heavens gain. Whatever it may be, or may have been, we're truly thankful for each, and everyone of you. May God bless you always is our prayer, through God above, and those we love, who have gone before us. He holds us in the palm of his hand, and an all-seeing eye watching over us. By day, and by night, wherever we may be, or whoever we are, God knows us all. In loving thoughts, and prayers, may God go with each of us.

GEAR-UP, NASA, and East Ky. Science Center put extraterrestrial objects in local classrooms

Raymond Shubinski, director of the East Kentucky Science Center and Coy Samons, director of the East Kentucky Regional GEAR-UP Project, examined meteorites during the Summer Solstice Workshop held at Prestonsburg Community College on June 21. GEAR-UP funded the meteorite kits valued at $300 per kit. The teachers will be able to take their kits back to their classrooms to be used during classroom instruction of science.

They traveled through space, fell to Earth and are going to schools in Eastern Kentucky. Everything from comets to meteorites landed in the hands of teachers attending a free summer solstice workshop conducted by the East Kentucky Science Center and the NASA Jet Propulsion Laboratory's Solar System Educators Program, June 18, at Prestonsburg Community College.

Attendees received kits containing the extraterrestrial objects courtesy of the East schools could not afford the meteorite packet."

Raymond Shubinski, director of the East Kentucky Science Center, estimates the value of the kits at around $300.

The kits consisted of Allende, which contains molecules older than earth; a stony meteorite from a witnessed fall; an iron meteorite from the Russian Sikhote-Ahlie fall of 1947; and an etched piece of meteorite from the Gibeon-Africa discovery.

As part of their learning experience, teachers had to identify the meteorites and then assemble their kits.

Also during the workshop, teachers learned about NASA's Cassini and Stardust missions. Program presenter Eric Thomas had teachers create a comet from dry ice, cola and potting soil. Thomas gave the teachers computer disks containing instruction for several other classroom projects, including making comets from ice cream. The disks also contained shareware and presentations that teachers can use in their classrooms.

Thomas is one of 15 Cassini-Hugens Educator Fellows providing educational outreach for NASA's Jet Propulsion Lab's Mission to Saturn and Titan.

At the end of the workshop, each teacher received a certificate of completion and a piece of jewelry containing a meteorite chip. Door prizes of a watch and a necklace made from meteorites were awarded. Wade Crabb of Bryan Station School in Lexington won the watch. Lynn Duncan, with Wesley Christian Academy in Allen, won the necklace.

Other teachers attending included Garlene Layne Crutcher, Betsy Layne Elementary; Tammy Meade, Betsy Layne Elementary;

GEAR-UP (Gaining Early Awareness and Readiness for Undergraduate Programs) is a federally-funded program aimed at preparing students living in low-income areas for college. GEAR-UP and the East Kentucky Science Center, a non-profit science education organization serving schools in Kentucky Education Regions 7 and 8, are education partners.

GEAR-UP provides motivation for students to stay in school and to improve their grades. The agency also assists with specialized teacher training programs, especially those with an emphasis on math and science.

"The summer solstice workshop provided middle school teachers with quality professional development," said Coy Samons, local GEAR-UP director. "(The workshop) increases teacher awareness, which has a positive effect on student science achievement. Most

Around the college football horn

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

The Ball State Cardinals are the second opponent on the University of Kentucky's 2001 football schedule. The Cards are led by super sophomore quarterback Talmadge Hill. As a freshman, Hill threw for 1,455 yards and 13 touchdowns. Ball State went 4-6 last season.

■ The Black Coaches Association announced Tuesday that Tulane would play Brigham Young in the game that was canceled last year by a lightning and rain storm at Virginia Tech.

Timely announcement, huh? The announcement came just a day after an apparent Kansas State-SMU game was taken off the table.

Tulane went 6-5 last season but was not invited to a bowl game. BYU and Tulane last met in the 1998 Liberty Bowl won by Tulane 41-27.

Each team is expected to earn at least $600,000 in the nationally televised game. A pretty nice payout for a pair of teams who didn't go bowling last season.

■ Chad Scott is impressive for UK, winners of just two games last fall. Coach Guy Morriss has just one year as it stands right now. He took over for former coach Hal Mumme in the wake of the recent recruiting scandal. The NCAA has yet to levy sanctions against the UK football program. However the ruling is expected to come any time.

■ After opening with Western Carolina and Houston at home last season the LSU will host Tulane and Utah State in its first two games this season.

■ How does Jackie Sherrill replace left tackle Porkchop Womack? The MSU Bulldogs are expected to fill senior Kenric Fairchild (6-4, 318) in at the position. Senior Wayne Madkin (6-4, 227) returns at quarterback for Mississippi State. MSU opens the season by hosting Memphis in Starkville on September 1. In Oxford, Eli Manning enters his sophomore season looking to bring the Ole Miss Rebels back to the top of the Southeastern Conference. Gone from the Ole Miss campus is signal-caller Romaro Miller and running back Deuce McAllister, one of the SEC's very best runners over the past three or four years.

Boys, girls roundball teams compete in AAU tourneys

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

A host of AAU basketball has taken center stage over the past couple of weekends.

Both the Whitesburg High boys' and girls' basketball teams participated in the state AAU tournaments but failed to advance beyond the opening round pool play in the annual summer series.

Whitesburg's boys' team lost their final round game 75-70 to Bullitt East, but came back to beat Bath County 73-49 in the second game in another series of opening round pool play of the 64-team under-17 tourney held in Lexington.

Frankfort, which beat both Bullitt East and Bath County, beat the Yellowjackets in the pool championship matchup Friday to advance to the 16-team single elimination round, where they lost 89-66 to Scott

Pepsi 400 is Saturday

by GERALD HODGES
THE RACING REPORTER

Jeff Burton, the 2000 winner of the Winston Cup Pepsi 400, hopes to turn the season around this Saturday night at Daytona. Burton, who finished third in points last season is currently mired back in 15th. He has one win and only 6 top-10 finishes after 16 races.

Lee Petty won the first-ever NASCAR Winston Cup (Grand National) race at the Daytona International Speedway, the 1959 Daytona 500. Fireball Roberts won the first 400-mile race at Daytona, the 1963 Firecracker 400.

Richard Petty won his 200th NASCAR Winston Cup race at Daytona International Speedway on July 4, 1984. There have been four caution-free NASCAR Winston Cup races at Daytona: the 1959 Daytona 500, the 1960 Firecracker 250, the 1961 Daytona 500 and the 1962 Daytona 500.

Track Update: Jeff Gordon won the 1998 Pepsi 400 and the 1999 Daytona 500. Dale Jarrett won the 1999 Pepsi 400 and the 2000 Daytona 500. Those are the only back-to-back victories at Daytona since Bobby Allison won the 1987 Firecracker 400 and the 1988 Daytona 500. Manufacturer Update: Chevrolet has won eight of the last 13 NASCAR Winston Cup at Daytona. Ford won the other five races, including three of the last four. Pontiac's

Prestonsburg finalizes schedule for upcoming season

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

For months, Class AA Region IV champ Prestonsburg was without a tenth game for the upcoming season. Finishing the 2001 season just one game away from an appearance in the state championships in Louisville, Blackcat head man John DeRossett found finding a tenth opponent to be an extremely hard chore.

"We had some trouble getting a tenth game on the schedule," said DeRossett. "The deeper you go into the offseason the harder it is to find an opponent. Other teams fill their schedules quick."

DeRossett even considered filling the open date with Jim Matney's Sheldon Clark Cardinals, a team the Blackcats open the season with.

Sheldon Clark is still without a tenth game.

Demolition derby is a favorite of many motorsports fans. East Kentucky Raceway Park in Willard will host a demolition derby in August.

Race track to host August demolition derby

TIMES STAFF REPORT

East Kentucky Raceway Park in Willard (Carter County) will host a demolition derby some time in August.

"We had a demolition derby last year and it went over real well," said track owner Jim Allen, a Floyd County native. "We had eight cars and they went real hard after each other for about forty-five minutes before we had a winner."

last year's derby held at EKRP paid the winner $500 and the runner-up $300. The payout for this year's race is expected to be similar to that of last year's.

A lot of hard work goes into getting a car ready for a demolition derby.

For some motorsports a driveline is where a race is won or lost. The same holds true in demolition derby competition/racing.

An alternator also provides much benefit during a derby. A car typically has to start several times during the course of a derby.

Piarist pair Heisman nominees

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

In December of last year, twelve men and women stood before a large audience in the Heisman Trophy room at the historic Downtown Athletic Club in New York City. They heard the applause and felt the admiration of educators, Heisman Trophy winners, family and friends. These were the Wendy's High School Heisman Award National honorees, and for them the moment was a memory of a lifetime.

Two Floyd County athletes have been nominated for the 2001 award to be given away in December. Robert Hall and Kari Ross, both students at The Piarist School in Martin, were recently nominated.

For the past seven years, Wendy's Old Fashioned Restaurants have teamed up with the National Association of Secondary School Principals, and the Downtown Athletic Club, annual presenters of the Heisman Memorial Trophy, to honor both male and female high school scholar-athlete-citizens. The

FROM LAST WEEK

WINSTON CUP

SONOMA, Calif. — How's this for an improbable ending? At Sears Point Raceway, a bumping-and-grinding duel broke out at the front of the pack, and Tony Stewart, who had nothing to do with it, wound up winning the Dodge/SaveMart 350.

Stewart was in precisely the right place at precisely the right time, and when a glimmer of opportunity presented itself, he seized the advantage brilliantly.

The race was decided on the 102nd of 112 laps. Robby Gordon had a glorious triumph within his grasp. Inserted for one race only in the Ford owned by fellow Californian Jim Smith, Gordon held about a second-and-a-half advantage over Stewart, who had passed Jeff Gordon for second on lap 97.

Unfortunately for Robby Gordon, rookie Kevin Harvick, no shrinking violet, wanted back on the lead lap after steaming out of the pits with a fresh set of rubber. For whatever reason — Gordon said he wanted Harvick to serve as a buffer between him and Stewart, who was closing in — Gordon raced Harvick with ever-increasing tenacity.

Even while his own spotter was urging him to "let Harvick go," Gordon continued to block, and Harvick, for his part, continued to apply the pressure and bump Gordon's Ford from behind with his Chevrolet.

In turn seven, a reconfigured part of the course, Harvick and Gordon shoved each other harshly, which gave Stewart the opening he needed. Stewart's Pontiac passed both of them, and he was off to his second victory of the year.

CRAFTSMAN TRUCK

MILLINGTON, Tenn. — Dennis Setzer won for the first time and gave Chevrolet its second victory in a row, by holding off points leader Scott Riggs in the 200-lap, 150-mile race at Memphis Motorsports Park.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

Robby Gordon vs. Kevin Harvick

Gordon led the Sears Point race in the latter stages. Harvick had just pitted and wanted back on the lead lap. Gordon wouldn't let him pass, the two got together and the incident wound up costing Gordon the race. "If that would have been anybody with any sense, he would have known I had fresh tires on, he would have let me go, and he would have won the race," Harvick said.

NASCAR This Week's Monte Dutton gives his opinion: "Robby Gordon wanted Harvick between his car and Tony Stewart, who was narrowing the gap. But his spotter and crew chief were telling him to let Harvick go, and Gordon wouldn't listen. His stubbornness cost him the race."

PROFILE

Kurt Busch

Winston Cup Series

John Clark/NASCAR This Week

By Monte Dutton
NASCAR This Week

Although somewhat overshadowed by Kevin Harvick, Kurt Busch has turned heads in his rookie season in the Winston Cup Series.

Busch is firmly in second place in the Raybestos Rookie of the Year points standings. As recently as 1998, he was racing on the West Coast, where he became the youngest driver ever to win the Featherlite Southwest Tour championship.

In February 2000, Busch finished second in his very first Craftsman Truck Series race, at Daytona. He won for the first time at Milwaukee in July and wound up the season with four victories.

Hometown: Las Vegas
Age: 22
Firsts: Start (Sept. 24, 2000, at Dover), pole (none), win (none)
Career statistics: 23 races, 0 victories, 2 top-five finishes, 3 top-10s, 0 poles, almost $1.5 million in earnings

Car: No. 97 Sharpie/Rubbermaid Ford Taurus, owned by Jack Roush

Crew chief: Ben Leslie

Marital status: Single

How much of a challenge has your rookie year been? "The expectations that (Jack) Roush gave us was a little bit different than most, I suppose, with having Mark Martin, Jeff Burton and Matt Kenseth, who just went through his Raybestos rookie season last year. This is completely different. All the different racetracks and different types of things you have to do on these Winston Cup cars to make them handle the way

Kurt Busch is only 22 years old, but car owner Jack Roush has made him the foundation for the future of Roush Racing's four-car stable.

that you want them to. ... It's quite a bit of a task. Thus far, we've had an 'A' effort from the team. We've only had one type of failure, at Martinsville. As far as my performance, I'd have to rate myself as a 'C.'"

What was it like to have a great run at Las Vegas Motor Speedway, your hometown track? "To go back there with a big homecoming, to race there locally and to have all the family there was an unbelievable weekend. It seemed like I was in a zone. Nothing really bothered me and the car seemed to handle well. The whole weekend went smooth. We qualified ninth and finished 11th. The only thing that went wrong was everybody took two tires at the end and we took four, and that's how I finished 11th. It was an all-around great weekend. It's great to do well when you want to do well. We want to do well every weekend, but it's just a matter of getting the car to handle well and have everything go well."

Who's Hot... Who's Not

■ HOT: Tony Stewart has eight top-10 finishes in his last nine races.

■ NOT: Johnny Benson has finished outside of the top 10 five races in a row.

ANSWERS

AROUND THE GARAGE

Kevin Harvick, Jeff Green have a crew chief in

By Monte Dutton
NASCAR This Week

Most people know Kevin Harvick is leading the Busch Series points standings while, at the same time, leading the Winston Cup rookie race and competing in all the events in both series. Most also know Jeff Green is the reigning BGN champion and that he is running seven Cup races in a Chevrolet owned by Richard Childress.

What most may not have realized is that Harvick's BGN crew chief, Todd Benier, is also Green's Cup crew chief.

"Isn't it funny? A lot of people don't know that," Green said. "That we race against each other on Saturday and we're with each other on Sunday on seven occasions, but I think it's helped me a little bit, you know, just getting more time on that particular tire, that particular day of that particular weekend. So any time you can get more information and learn more about it through the weekends, you're going to make yourself better on race day, I think."

■ PAYBACK? Remember several weeks ago when Jimmy Spencer spoke about recent NASCAR rules changes? Did you wonder if perhaps the ruling body might make things difficult for the outspoken driver?

In the Pocono 500, Brett Bodine's Ford coasted to a halt on the track. The car sat stopped at the inside of the course for nearly three laps. When Spencer's Ford pitted, the yellow flag finally came out and, as a result, Spencer lost a lap.

■ SO FAR, SO GOOD: Chip Ganassi is obviously overjoyed at the performance of one of his Dodge Intrepids. Veteran driver Sterling Marlin came to Sears Point ranked fourth in the Winston Cup points standings and seemed to be the most likely driver to give Dodge its first victory since 1977.

"We're certainly pleasantly surprised," Ganassi said. "I think if you had said in June or July last year that we were going to be third in the points come this June, we all would have had a party."

"The good news is we're fourth in the points. The bad news is we're all a bunch of racers and we're not happy with that, either. In racing, if you're 10th, you want to be ninth. If you're fifth, you want to be fourth, and if you're third, you want to be second. We're all happy with that, but we're certainly not content with it."

With a 28th-place finish Sunday, Marlin slipped to fifth in the standings.

■ SHAWNA GETS JUICED: Tropicana, already the corporate sponsor for the race, announced this week that it will sponsor Shawna Robinson's attempt to compete in the Winston Cup race at the new Chicagoland Speedway on July 15.

Your Turn

Letters From Our Readers

Dear NASCAR This Week,
I am curious to know what it means when they put "Crank It Up" on the TV screen, with the red lights flashing. I see it every week, but I don't know what it means.
Herman Delsite
Danville, Pa.

We believe it means Fox is playing the sound of the racing engines at full volume to give home viewers some flavor of what it feels like to be at the race.

Dear NASCAR This Week,
I can't understand why the Busch cars were faster at Talladega, Ala. NASCAR is making the Cup cars look like the little boys.
Mr. and Mrs. Gary King
Canton, Ohio

The short answer to your question is that the Busch cars were not slowed by the same aerodynamic restrictions as the Cup cars. The intent, for the Cup cars, was to make passing easier.

Not making the same changes in Busch saved those teams some expense.

Dear NASCAR This Week,
Why are race teams only allowed three sets of tires? And what happens if all three sets are used and you are still racing?
Karen Korte
Hopwood, Pa.

The restrictions you refer to, at least in Winston Cup, are for practice and qualifying, not the race. Winston Cup teams are not restricted in the number of tires that may be used in races. Tire restrictions are commonly used as a cost-cutting measure in the Busch Series, and in those races, which are shorter, teams just have to plan their race strategy based on the availability of tires.

Fan Tips

■ NASCAR Winston Cup driver Mark Martin will host a celebrity golf tournament to benefit the New Smyrna Quarter-Midget Racing Association on July 4 at Spruce Creek Country Club near Daytona Beach, Fla.

Those confirmed to participate are Mike Skinner, Brett and Todd Bodine, Junie Donlavey, Benny Parsons, Derrike Cope and Barry Dodson. Gatorade will be the event sponsor. Registration is at noon, with a shotgun start at 1 p.m. (EDT).

Sponsorship opportunities are still available for the golf tournament. For more information on sponsorship, or participating in the tournament, please contact Joy Miller at (904) 761-9495.

CREW OF THE WEEK

■ After winning the Dodge/SaveMart 350 at Sears Point Raceway,

STEWART

Tony Stewart said it was a setup change ordered by crew chief Greg Zipadelli that paved the way for Stewart's first road-course victory. "On the last pit stop, the guys made a major change and the car responded," Stewart said.

Piarist

award is based on three criteria: academic excellence, community service and athletic achievement.

Schools can receive anywhere from $500-$4,000.

Nominees for the award must be postmarked no later than September 12.

State finalists for the award will be announced October 10. A total of ten men and ten women per state will be announced for a total of 1,020 state finalists. Athletes will be judged by computer scoring of nominations. A bronze medal of recognition will be rewarded.

State winners will be announced October 26. One male and female from each state will be announced for a total of 102. Athletes will be judged by computer scoring of nominations.

A silver medal of recognition will be awarded to the athlete. A $500 monetary award will go to the high school.

National finalists will be announced sometime in November. Six men and six women nationwide will make up the group of national finalists. National finalists will be invited to New York City with parent, guardian or school administrator for Heisman Award activities December 7-10. A gold medal of recognition will be awarded to the athlete while the high school will receive a $1,000 monetary award.

The national award winners will be announced December 7 in New York City at a private ceremony held at the Downtown Athletic Club. The event will be televised live on national television December 8. One male and one female will be declared nationwide winners.

Each winner will receive a Crystal trophy. Each national winner's school will receive a $2,500 monetary award.

For more information on the awards, go to www.wendyshighschoolheisman.com. Status of all nominees will be posted. Status of the nominees will be updated after October 10.

AAU

County.

Lexington Catholic beat Scott County 75-52 in the quarterfinals and then beat Bell County and East Jessamine to earn the automatic trip to the AAU national tournament in July.

The South Floyd Raiders, coached by Henry Webb, went undefeated in pool play with wins over Madison Central and Danville and Spencer County but lost 85-69 to Lafayette in the opening game of the 16-team single elimination tourney.

Breathitt County, Clay County and Powell County also competed in the tourney but failed to advance out of their respective pools.

The Whitesburg Lady 'jackets also failed to advance out of pool play in their recent AAU tourney in Danville. The Lady Jackets lost 54-39 to Lincoln County, before dropping decisions to Campellsville in the second round and Marshall County in the third game.

Louisville Sacred Heart Academy beat 2000 state champ West Carter 78-58 in the championship game.

South Floyd's girls were also unsuccessful in recent AAU tourney play.

GOOD AND FAST PIT CREW MEMBERS NEEDED

Brian Perry is the pit crew coach and jackman on the No. 92 Kodiak Dodge Intrepid R/T with driver Stacy Compton. The 30-year-old native of Madison Heights, MI has been with Melling Racing for a year and works as a shop mechanic during the week. He also works with the pit crew three times a week on pit stops and conditioning and has resorted to some creative methods to find potential pit crewmembers.

Some teams have changed as many crewmembers as engines this season. An experienced over-the-wall crewmember's stock has risen faster than an over-the-counter IPO. The single-car teams, a vanishing breed on the NASCAR Winston Cup circuit, have found it tough to compete with the bigger outfits for experienced crewmen. Perry talks about competing with multi-car teams and how difficult it is to find and keep quality pit crewmembers.

"Most of the good guys who have been working on pit crews for four or five years have gone with the big teams like Gibbs and Yates and Hendrick. Some of those guys are really good, and make I'd say make between $700-$1,200 on Sundays. They're guaranteed that kind of money if their car makes a lap or not. If they get off the plane and their car doesn't complete the first lap, they still get paid. Quality pit crew guys can make good money. A Busch team has paid me $500 just to be the jackman on their car. Most of the pit crew guys are Weekend Warriors, but some of them work at the shop full-time, too."

"The ones who don't work at the shop usually have good, secure full-time jobs. We put a want ad in (NASCAR) Winston Cup Scene for pit crew guys. I went around to fire departments and police departments looking for guys who were doing what they wanted to do during the week but wouldn't mind making a few extra bucks and having some fun at the same time on weekends. I'd say 90 percent of the policemen and firemen like what they're doing, and you know they're going to be in fairly good shape."

"Some of them came out and watched our pit practice, but so far no one has wanted to pursue it. Most of them say they're glad they came out and saw what it was all about, and then they say, 'thanks, but no thanks.' 'A person has to have a high desire to win to work on a pit crew. We've probably been through eight or 10 changes on our pit crew this year, but I think we've finally got it where it needs to be. Chad (crew chief Knaus) has been changing front tires the past couple of races, and that's not what he should be doing, even though he's really good at it. He used to be one of the Rainbow Warriors, and he's a great tire changer. He's got pit crew chamampionship rings, but he needs to stay on the wall and see who is and who isn't pitting. He needs to be up on the box overseeing everything that's going on. We're going to have Shane Westenburg back at Daytona to change the front tires. He's been off a couple of weeks, but he's coming back and hopefully we'll be able to leave everything intact for the rest of the season."

Prestonsburg

Blackcats will host the Corbin Redhounds (11-3) on August 3, before going away to take on Eric Shelton less-Bryan Station one week later on August 10.

After opening on the road at Sheldon Clark, Prestonsburg will travel to Hazard to play Bell County in a bowl game.

The first regular season game on the new field at Prestonsburg will take place on August 31 when the Blackcats host border rival Paintsville. The Tigers, 9-4 last season, will return a strong offensive line to compliment senior quarterback Chas Harmon.

The Blackcats will travel to Whitley County on September 7 before returning home to take on Portsmouth East the next Friday night.

Three of Prestonsburg's last five games, all district contests, are at home. The Blackcats will host Shelby Valley in the last regular season of the year on Oct. 19. October 26, the final regular season date of the season, has Prestonsburg with an open date.

Sideline

Mercedes Lewis is drawing a ton of attention from nearly every top college football program in the nation. At 6-foot-7, 235-pounds Lewis turns in a 40-yard dash time of 4.7. He will look to lead Long Beach Poly to a state championship this fall.

Antwan Randle El's senior season is almost here. The explosive talented Randle El threw for 1,788 yards and 10 touchdowns for Indiana University last season. He was also the Hoosiers' leading rusher with 218 carries for 1,270 yards and 13 touchdowns. And IU is moving him to wide receiver? Yes.

Junior Tommy Jones (6-3, 236) is expected to take over under center. Another junior, Gibran Hamdan (6-5, 225) could also take some snaps this fall. Indiana finished 3-8 last season.

Do we need more junior college football programs? It's a question one fan recently put in front of this scribe. Personally, we think it wouldn't be a bad idea.

How many wins does Joe Pa (Paterno) have left in him? Just as many as he wants.

Yet another quarterback battle at Florida. Two sophomores will battle for the title of starting quarterback when the season kicks off September 1 against Marshall. Rex Grossman (6-1, 218) and Brock Berlin (6-1, 209) are very similar in stature. Sophomore wide receiver Jabar Gaffney has everyone talking national title and Heisman Trophy in Gainesville. Oh yeah, don't forget Alex Brown. The monstrous defensive end passed up the NFL Draft to return for his senior season.

California's football stadium, which sits atop a major fault line, is getting a $100 million remodeling to make it earthquake safe.

The $100 million is 100 times greater than the cost of building the stadium in 1923. Much of the money will also pay for non-earthquake related upgrades.

The university will raise money through donations to the athletic program.

Remeber: Pikeville College will play its first NAIA varsity football game on Sept. 1 in Tuscaloosa, Ala. against Stillman College. The Bears played a junior varsity schedule last season which was highlighted by a 38-3 win over the University of Kentucky junior varsity team. Pikeville's only loss in its first and only season as a club, junior varsity team was a first game setback to the Georgetown College (Ky.) JV team. The Tigers of Georgetown went on to win the national championship.

A Georgia Southern-Montana rematch in NCAA Division I-AA this fall? Could be. Georgia Southern downed Montana in the championship game December 16 of last year by a final tally of 27-25.

often with the engine running hot and/or flooded. To run a car in that state takes a lot of power. Other benefits of leaving the alternator hooked are:

When an alternator is charging, the electrical system runs 1.5 to 2.0 volts higher than with just a battery. This extra juice is amplified by the ignition system, which in turn provides a stronger, hotter spark and it thus better able to fire your spark plugs under the less-than-ideal conditions encountered in a derby.

A voltmeter can be installed to notify a driver of whether the engine is running or not. This could be accomplished with an oil pressure gauge/light, but the voltmeter will also notify a driver of whether or not their starter is cranking.

The alternator pump often runs the water pump.

It is recommended to get the biggest battery the rules allow. Also make sure the battery will hold a charge. Veteran demolition derby drivers say there is nothing more frustrating than a battery that won't hold charge.

It is important to come prepared when going to a demolition derby.

Bring the following supplies/tools:

- 5 gallons of water
- 3-4 gallons of gas
- a case of cheap motor oil
- complete set of wrenches, ratchets and screwdrivers
- a sledge hammer (6-8 pounds)
- a long prying device (6-foot or longer)
- electrical wire and tape
- an axe or cold chisel for emergency body repairs
- fire extinguisher, if not already required by the rules
- good quality bumper jack
- cutting torches
- 2 rolls of duct tape

A comprehensive supply of spare parts is essential. Desirable parts needed for a demolition derby are at least two spare tires, spare fan belts, a spare battery, a spare radiator and a spare starter.

East Kentucky Raceway Park officials are expected to post a date for the demolition derby on their website some time soon. For more information on any EKRP events, visit their website at www.ekrp.homestead.com.

KCTCS technical colleges award scholarships

LEXINGTON — Forty incoming high school graduates or GED recipients will receive the Governor's Kentucky Technical College Scholarship.

The scholarships, which carry an estimated value of $3,000 each, are awarded based on academic achievement, character excellence and career potential. The full scholarships apply to diploma or degree programs. They cover tuition and fees; equipment such as tools; books; supplies; personal safety equipment; and uniforms.

In this program, each technical college and each branch campus may offer as many as two scholarships to high school seniors who will enter college in the 2001-02 academic year. Each main and branch campus also may offer one scholarship to a GED recipient. The scholarships run for the duration of the academic program.

"We congratulate the recipients of the Governor's Kentucky Technical College Scholarships," said Michael B. McCall, president of the Kentucky Community and Technical College System (KCTCS), which includes the state's 15 technical colleges.

"Students who are looking for a way to change their lives can get the critical-thinking and technical skills they need through the colleges of KCTCS. The programs that we offer — such as health care, computers, construction technology or business — can open up a world of opportunities."

The recipients of the scholarships include:

■ Mayo Technical College — Kelly Lewis, office technology; Tessa Joann Hall, medical office technology.

■ Hazard Technical College — Larry Charles Griffin, welding technology; Lynda Michelle Campbell, medical office technology.

■ Ashland Technical College — Brandon A. Belford, pharmacy technology; Clarinda S. Stephens, pharmacy technology.

■ Bowling Green Technical College — Bradley Hinton, architectural drafting.

■ Bowling Green Technical College - Glasgow Campus — Leslie Diane Wheeler, practical nursing.

■ Central Kentucky Technical College — Jonathan Mathew Lowry, machine tool technology; Roxanne Noland, medical laboratory technology.

■ Central Kentucky Technical College - Anderson Campus — Ben McCrory, industrial maintenance.

■ Central Kentucky Technical College - Danville Campus — Jessi Wise, practical nursing.

■ Cumberland Valley Technical College — Brandie M. Lawson, radiography; Christy Elliott, practical nursing.

■ Cumberland Valley Technical College - Harlan Campus — James A. Brackett Jr., air conditioning.

■ Elizabethtown Technical College — Daniel Mattingly, electronics technology; Nicholas Ritchie, electronics technology.

■ Jefferson Technical College — Amy New, entrepreneurship and business management; Kandice Simpson, practical nursing.

■ Laurel Technical College — Henry Jacob Wilhoit, machine tool technology; Brian R. Goss, architectural drafting.

■ Madisonville Technical College — Robert Shane Cavanaugh, electrical technology.

■ Madisonville Technical College - Health Extension — Tia Marie Abbott, medical office technology; Lindsey M. Eaves, radiography.

■ Northern Kentucky Technical College — Kristin Gough, cosmetology.

■ Northern Kentucky Technical College - Edgewood Campus — Kristen M. Goetz, medical office technology.

■ Northern Kentucky Technical College - Highland Heights Campus — Brian Cole, diesel technology; Lindsey Riley, information technology; Brian Crail, information technology.

Bobby Ann Mason joins UK teaching faculty

LEXINGTON — Award-winning author and Kentuckian Bobbie Ann Mason will join the University of Kentucky College of Arts and Sciences faculty as writer-in-residence on July 1.

Internationally recognized as one of America's most important living authors, Mason has accepted a five-year, non-tenured faculty position at UK.

In announcing the appointment, President Charles Wethington said, "Dr. Mason is one of the nation's most prominent writers and her affiliation with the University of Kentucky will be of significant benefit to the university as a whole. I am convinced that her appointment will add greatly to the UK Department of English's plan to feature its creative writing program through its upcoming celebration, 'Half-Century of Excellence.'"

Mason grew up in Mayfield, the daughter of a dairy farmer, and graduated from UK in 1962. She received her master's degree from the State University of New York-Binghamton in 1966 and holds a doctorate in English from the University of Connecticut.

Mason has published fiction and non-fiction in such magazines as The New Yorker, The Atlantic, Harper's, The Oxford American and The Paris Review.

Over the years, Mason has received numerous literary awards and honors, including a Guggenheim Fellowship and two O'Henry Awards. Her first short

Sullivan University announces GED Scholarship Program

Sullivan University, Kentucky's largest private college or university, is pleased to announce its new GED Scholarship Program. As evidence of Sullivan's commitment to the adult learner in the Commonwealth of Kentucky, each year Sullivan will offer to GED recipients two scholarships valued at up to $1,800. The recipient must meet Sullivan University entrance requirements, maintain continuous full-time status, and a minimum quarterly grade point average of a 3.0 on a 4.0 scale.

This new scholarship opportunity at Sullivan University is now available and will be offered for students beginning their college experience in the Midterm start on July 30 or Fall Quarter beginning September 24, 2001.

Sullivan University is accredited by the Commission on Colleges of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) to award associate's, bachelor's and master's level degrees. Sullivan University offers degrees in the fields of business management, computer science, accounting, office administration and travel and tourism. In addition, Sullivan also offers legal studies, medical and clinical assisting and childhood development degree programs. These programs afford graduates a concentrated, short-term curriculum that will enable to enter their employment field in less than two years.

Interested students should contact the admissions office at 859-276-4357 or 1-800-467-6281 and ask about the new GED Scholarship program.

story collection, "Shiloh and Other Stories" (1982), received the Ernest Hemingway Award. Her novel, "Feather Crowns" (1993), won the Southern Book Award and her memoir, "Clear Springs" (1999), was finalist for the Pulitzer Prize. Her first novel, "In Country" (1985), received an extravagant welcome from both readers and critics.

"I am delighted to return to UK," Mason said. "I have felt a special connection with the university ever since my undergraduate days in Lexington. I am grateful to President Wethington, Dean of Arts and Sciences Howard Grotch and everyone else who worked to make this appointment possible."

In addition to her own writing projects, Mason will devote her time to mentoring students and participating in special events focusing on creative writing as scheduled by the College of Arts and Sciences.

"Exceptional faculty is a keystone in our aspirations to be a top-20 public research university," Grotch said. "As the university's first writer-in-residence, Mason will surely enhance the reputation of the English department and the University of Kentucky, as well as inspire a new generation of creative writers at UK."

Greg Waller, chairperson of the Department of English, said he is delighted to welcome Mason for the fall term.

"Her appointment honors and continues the department's 50-year tradition of teaching creative writing," Waller said. "Her writings and her presence on campus will greatly enhance what is already one of our major strengths as a department, the study of American literature and culture."

Q I have heard about a new medical benefit program for some military retirees called TRICARE for Life (TFL). What do you know about it?

A The new program called TRICARE for Life (TFL) starts October 1, 2001. It provides expanded medical coverage for military retirees that are Medicare eligible, including retired guard members and reservists; Medicare-eligible family members and widow/widowers; and certain former spouses if they were eligible for TRICARE before age 65. You must have Medicare Part B to be eligible for TRICARE for Life. If eligible, you get all Medicare-covered benefits plus all TFL-covered benefits. If you use a Medicare provider, Medicare will be the first payer for all Medicare-covered services and TFL will be the second payer. TFL will pay all Medicare co-payments and deductibles and cover most of the costs of certain care not covered by Medicare.

Q How can I get more information about TRICARE for Life (TFL)?

A For more information on TFL you may call 1-888-363-5433 or visit the website on the internet at www.tricare.osd.mil.

Q Does Medicare cover screening mammograms?

A Yes. Medicare Part B will help to pay for one screening mammogram every 12 months for Medicare eligible women age 40 and older. The test must be performed by a facility certified by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). The Medicare Part B deductible does not apply to this test. Medicare pays 80 percent of the approved amount, which leaves a 20 percent coinsurance payment that you will have to pay. You may have some type of insurance to go with your Medicare that will pay the 20 percent.

Have questions about Medicare? Call 1-800-MEDICARE (1-800-633-4227), TTY/TDD 1-877-486-2048 (toll free for the hearing impaired) or visit www.medicare.gov on the internet.

State seeking 100-year-old businesses

FRANKFORT — In an era when dot-com companies come and go like brief summer showers and mergers absorb nameplates like black holes, business longevity is the rarity, rather than the rule.

But long-lived companies do exist, and to recognize them, the Kentucky Historical Society, in conjunction with the Cabinet for Economic Development, the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce and the Education, Arts and Humanities Cabinet, is seeking for-profit businesses that have been part of the state's economic landscape for the last 100 years.

The Kentucky Centennial Business Program looks for Kentucky businesses that have been in continuous operation since January 1, 1901. Designation as Kentucky Centennial Business is free to qualifying companies that complete a two-page application and provide evidence documenting the age of the business.

Suitable examples of evidence may include copies of old ledgers, business records, articles of incorporation or other materials documenting the operation of the company. Any type or size business can participate, and the only requirement is that the company be a for-profit enterprise that has operated continuously in Kentucky for a minimum of 100 years. Existing designees of the program include funeral homes, banks, newspapers, manufacturers and retail stores.

Once admitted into the program, businesses receive the following benefits:

- Statewide publicity.
 - Certificate of distinction.
 - Recognition at the Kentucky Industrial Development Council annual meeting.
 - Use of the Kentucky Centennial Business logo.
 - One-year membership in the Kentucky Historical Society.
 - Free consultations on preserving historic business records and artifacts.
- "We hope the program will encourage companies to save their historic records and artifacts," said James Wallace, assistant director of the Kentucky Historical Society. "The materials from these companies are absolutely essential to help tell the story of Kentucky's economic history."

The Kentucky Centennial Business Program is now in its sixth year with more than 260 businesses participating. Deadline to applications is September 1. For more information or an application, call Jim Wallace, Kentucky Historical Society, at (502) 564-1792, ext. 4449.

The Kentucky Historical Society is an agency of the Education, Arts and Humanities Cabinet. The Kentucky History Center is the headquarters for the society and is located in downtown Frankfort.

Kentucky unemployment rate holds steady at 4.1 percent in May FRANKFORT - Kentucky's unemployment rate remained at 4.1 percent from April to May, according to the Department for Employment Services, a Cabinet for Workforce Development agency.

Kentucky's May 2001 jobless rate was slightly above May 2000's rate of 4 percent. The U.S. jobless rate decreased from 4.2 percent in April to 4.1 percent in May.

"While Kentucky's unemployment rate held steady from April to May, we saw an employment increase of more than 16,000 jobs in May," said Carlos Cracraft, the department's chief labor market analyst. "In fact, we usually have a small increase in the unemployment rate at this time of the year, but not this year."

Seven of the nine major job sectors had employment increases in May, Cracraft said.

Kentucky job growth in May was led by the services sector, which added 3,200 jobs. "Many of the new services jobs were the result of seasonal hiring for summer. Three-fourths of the new jobs were in amusement and recreation services, which is a sure sign of the onset of summer vacation season," said Cracraft.

Business services added 800 jobs, hotels and other lodging places, and health services had 600 more positions each. Personal services showed a decrease in jobs of 1,300 as tax season came to an end. The services sector has recorded the greatest employment growth in the past year with 17,800 more jobs since May 2000.

Agriculture made up lost ground with 2,500 more jobs in May. Cracraft said the sector typically adds workers in May as the planting season gets underway.

The trade sector gained 2,100 more jobs in May, all of which were in retail trade establishments. Within retail trade, eating and drinking establishments, and food stores were up by 600 positions each, and automobile dealers rose by 300 jobs.

The construction sector had the next largest increase with 1,900 new jobs in May. The special trade category accounted for 900 of those new jobs, while 700 were in heavy construction and 300 in general building contractors.

The mining and quarrying sector had 100 more jobs in May than in April.

The finance, insurance and real estate sector added 100 jobs in May.

The government sector also recorded 100 more positions in May. A 2,100 drop in jobs in state education was offset by gains in local government (900), state government (800), local education (400) and federal government (100).

On the downside, jobs in manufacturing continued to decrease in May. The manufacturing sector reported a net loss of 800 positions as durable goods fell by 500 jobs and nondurable goods jobs decreased by 300 positions. "The manufacturing sector has lost jobs in each of the first five months of 2001," Cracraft said.

The transportation, communications and utilities sector recorded 400 fewer positions in May.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics monthly estimate of the number of employed Kentuckians for May 2001 was 1,918,899. This figure is up 16,577 from the 1,902,322 employed in April 2001, and up 14,354 from the 1,904,545 Kentuckians employed in May 2000.

The monthly estimate of the number of unemployed Kentuckians for May 2001 was 82,548. This figure is up 1,057 from the 81,491 unemployed in April 2001, and up 2,311 from the 80,237 Kentuckians unemployed in May 2000.

The monthly estimate of the number of Kentuckians in the civilian labor force for May 2001 was 2,001,447. This figure is up 17,634 from the 1,983,813 recorded in April 2001, and up 16,665 from the 1,984,782 recorded for May 2000.

The civilian labor force includes non-military workers and unemployed Kentuckians who are actively seeking work. It does not include unemployed Kentuckians who have not looked for employment within the past four weeks. Employment and unemployment statistics are based on estimates. They are compiled to indicate employment trends rather than actually to count numbers of people who are or are not working.

It's your money!

by STATE TREASURER
JONATHAN MILLER

I have spent much of this spring promoting the October launch of Kentucky's Affordable Prepaid Tuition Program (KAPT), which will help make it easier for families to afford a college education by guaranteeing the cost of tomorrow's tuition at today's lower prices. What I have learned as I have traveled the state has been illuminating.

Kentuckians are genuinely hungry for new ways to help them prepare for their family's financial future.

In today's consumer-driven, credit card culture, Americans tend to focus on buying the newest, the best, and the most expensive - often to the detriment of their long term savings. This not only affects the personal finances of individuals, it affects all of society on the most profound level. The result is that as the baby boom generation approaches retirement with little saved, the government - and the taxpayers - may be left holding the bag.

How do we, as public policy leaders, promote short-term sacrifice in order to ensure long-term economic stability? This question, among others, was the topic of my first "Savings Roundtable" held in Lexington this past week.

Serving as a brainstorming session to open the dialogue on these crucial issues, I was joined by civic, business, political and academic leaders from across the state. During an intensive 90-minute roundtable discussion, we discussed several major concerns as well as several possible solutions. Among them:

Women and savings: When it comes to long-term personal financial health, women are often at a significant disadvantage. Not only do women make seventy-six cents to every dollar a man earns, but only a third of these women are offered retirement plans. Further, half of all working women take time off from work to care for their families, thereby diminishing their potential retirement income. Women tend to save less than men and also tend to make more conservative - and often less lucrative - investment decisions. Education is clearly needed. In Ohio and a few other states, the State Treasurer organizes "Women & Money" seminars that are completely free both to the participants and the taxpayers. Would this be worthy and feasible in Kentucky?

Long term health care: The issue of the cost of long-term care is emerging as a national crisis. With 40% of Americans needing to enter some type of long term care facility, by 2010, older Americans - or their children and grandchildren - will spend some $52 billion to pay for nursing home assistance. The cost of long-term care is rising faster than inflation and projected to grow by 5% a year. Roundtable participants discussed the need for a thorough examination of options to promote savings for long term care. Policy possibility: Should we develop a state pre-paid long term health care program, modeled after Kentucky's Affordable Prepaid Tuition plan?

College students and credit cards: While credit cards are a way of life, and most companies act responsibly, it is clear that some bad actors in the industry are preying on vulnerable Kentuckians, who wind up building mountains of enormous credit card debt. This is particularly true on college campuses, where companies often spread from cafeterias to classroom buildings tempting these students with free t-shirts, soft drinks, and pizza. Further, some minors are receiving solicitations at very early ages, not knowing how they appeared on the vendor lists. Should we pursue legislation such as that pending in California, which would regulate credit card marketing on college campuses?

Building savings for Kentuckians with lower incomes: One third of all income comes from savings and investment, yet half of American families have total savings of $1000 or less, and 53% of American workers earn $18,000 or less. In Kentucky, this problem is especially acute among minorities and our beleaguered family farmers. What is the policy potential of such proposals as that of British Prime Minister Tony Blair who seeks to provide every newborn child with a savings account? Is there a reasonable way to promote education, starting in the elementary school classroom, to encourage all Kentuckians to save?

To follow up on the progress of this exciting meeting, I am appointing a Commission later this summer. The Treasurer's Commission on Savings will have two primary objectives: (1) to identify and develop the curricula for initiatives to promote savings education and financial literacy; and (2) to propose legislation, where necessary, to protect Kentuckians from predatory practices and create programs that encourage savings for retirement and long term health care. This is no 30-day or 60-day project. Instead, I look forward to many months - even years - of intensive policy discussions, to seek the broadest consensus possible and to ensure the viability of any solutions that are developed.

Any program we develop will reflect my personal vision of the role of government. Unlike some who feel we should remove government entirely from our lives, and others who want government to solve all of our problems, I prefer the so-called "third way": where government equips people with the tools they need to solve their own problems. With this approach, I believe we can truly help all Kentuckians thrive in the new 21st century economy.

Pike inventors
design new leash
for pets

Pet owners often use a leash when walking with their pets. However, many have complained that their pet's leash gets entangled with its chain.

Now there is a new product that provides pet owners with the effect of a leash without the possible entanglement. This device is designed as a swivel with ball bearing action that allows pets to move freely, without causing entanglements.

Clois Wright and Claude Wright of Jenkins began developing the idea for the "Ball Bearing Pet Swivel" in March. They created the product in order to provide pet owners with a swivel that would perform without entanglements.

This original idea is now being made available for licensing to manufacturers interested in new product development, especially in the pet supplies industry. Clois and Claude Wright are hoping to have the Ball Bearing Pet Swivel in full production and available to the public in the very near future.

Additional information about the Ball Bearing Pet Swivel can be obtained by contacting Invention Technologies Inc. at (800) 940-9020, ext. 285, or at products@invent-tech.com.

Invention Technologies is a Coral Gables, Fla.-based firm that is handling the publicity and public relations for the Ball Bearing Pet Swivel.

THE CLASSIFIED GUYS™

Making Lemonade

As the Quality Control Manager for a manufacturing plant it is my job to interview applicants for the inspection department. One woman who answered our employment ad had no previous experience but seemed very enthusiastic. As we discussed the job I realized she had trouble understanding the objective. Finally, I tried using an analogy. "The main purpose of the inspection department is to pick out the bad product from the good," I explained. "It's kind of like picking out the lemons." "Oh I'm good at picking out lemons," she responded. "I've been married three times." (Contributed by Randy B.)

Suggestion Box

When I was hired as an Office Manager, one of my first responsibilities was to review all the employee suggestions submitted to the cost savings program. Each month a money-saving suggestion was selected and the employee was awarded $150. Although I was new to the company, the president insisted that I select the best money-saving suggestion. For hours I read through dozens of entries, but with my limited knowledge of the company's operations, many didn't make sense. Finally, I came across one idea that was perfect and posted it to the company bulletin board. My new boss couldn't help but laugh when he read my pick, "Reduce the suggestion award to $50." (Contributed by Brad N.)

Tip of the Week

It's amazing to think that something as simple as a handshake can actually set the tone for an interview. However, considering that a handshake is usually your first point of contact with an interviewer, it can prove to be your best form of self-promotion. A firm handshake can express positive personality traits such as strength, vigor and confidence. People with a firm grip are usually considered more social, intellectual and open to ideas while those with a mild handshake are foreseen as nervous, shy and sheltered. So now when you go for your next interview, you're sure to have a firm grip on the situation.

From the Guys

Cash: Whenever you go on a job interview, you want to make sure to have at least three employment or character references. The individuals you choose should be credible and well-spoken with an ability to offer an objective opinion.

Carry: I remember one of my very first job interviews. I was surprised when the manager asked me for references. Fortunately I came up with two names right on the spot.

Cash: Yeah, but you may have actually gotten the job if you didn't write them down as "Mom and Dad".

Email us your questions, stories or funny classifieds to comments@ClassifiedGuys.com or mail to Classified Guys, P.O. Box 8246, New Fairfield, CT 06812. If we use your submission, you'll receive $50 and a free copy of our book "50% OFF! How to Find Great Deals."

wishes America a happy birthday in many ways

by JACQUELINE CUTLER
TVDATA FEATURES SYNDICATE

In the hectic pace of every day, it is easy to forget the magnificent tenets America is based on. This week, we are reminded by Fourth of July specials ranging from a documentary on immigrants pursuing their American dream to baseball games, a celebration of surf music, and, of course, fireworks. "My American Girls: A Dominican Story," which airs as an episode of PBS' POVseries Tuesday, July 3 (check local listings), chronicles 18 months in the life of a family in Brooklyn. Sandra Ortiz quit school as a child to help support her 14 younger siblings. At 17, she boarded a plane alone from the Dominican Republic to make a better life in the United States. She and her husband, Juan, clean hospitals by day and doctors' offices by night.

They speak English and have sacrificed to send their three daughters to private school. The documentary captures Sandra and Juan's pride as oldest daughter Monica, 21, becomes the family's first college graduate when she receives her degree from Columbia University. It also shows their frustrations with youngest daughter Mayra, 14, who prefers hanging out to studying.

"They were dealing with the universal issues of many Americans," filmmaker Aaron Matthews says. "The kids struggling in school, balancing work and family life. ... There is also the theme of living between two worlds - an immigrant story - but as Americans, we are all the children of immigrants in some way or another."

For old-fashioned flag waving, parades and fireworks, tune in to A Capitol Fourth on PBS Wednesday, July 4 (check local listings). This is the 20th such special, and all have been produced by Jerry Colbert. "John Adams (said) that we should celebrate the Fourth with bonfires and fireworks and parades, and that's what we are doing," Colbert says.

The program includes host Barry Bostwick (Spin City) singing "I Love a Parade"; performances by the Irish Tenors, Luther Vandross and the Pointer Sisters; and the National

Symphony, conducted by Erich Kunzel, playing the theme from 2001: A Space Odyssey. Also Wednesday, A&E Network offers Pop Goes the Fourth! Joan Lunden hosts the program, which features conductor Keith Lockhart and the Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra performing patriotic favorites, including "Stars and Stripes Forever." Featured performers include Cyndi Lauper and Debbie Reynolds. The special ends with a fireworks display on the banks of the Charles River. For those who can't get enough fireworks, there's Macy's Fourth of July Fireworks Spectacular on NBC. Some 20,000 shells will explode over New York's East River during the hourlong show. Two programs about pyrotechnics air on Discovery Channel Monday, July 2. Fireworks: An Explosive Story traces pyrotechnic history, while Fireworks teaches viewers about high-tech displays. Inevitably, thoughts will turn to the nation's birth, which The History Channel commemorates Wednesday with a day of programming that includes a History's Lost & Found marathon; The Great American History Quiz: The Presidents; "Taking Liberties," an episode of the miniseries Founding Fathers; Mt. Rushmore; and the Save Our History special White House: 200th Anniversary. "It's great fun for us to program because we have such a deep inventory of programs that we can play on July 4 and be meaningful," says Susan Werbe, History's vice president for historical programming. "We picked them because we wanted

News of the weird...

by CHUCK SHEPHERD

■ In recent New York City art auctions, according to a May report in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Tom Friedman's "Untitled" (a Styrofoam cup of evaporated-coffee stains, pinned to a piece of wood along with a ladybug) went for $30,000 at Phillips Auctioneers; Robert Gober's "Broom Sink" (a fancifully constructed wash basin) earned nearly $500,000; and Jeff Koons' life-sized ceramic "Michael Jackson and Bubbles" (the chimp) sold for $5.6 million.

■ Golfers cannot play on courses in Germany without a license, which applicants must earn by passing a written test and a skills test in putting, chipping and driving, according to a June dispatch in The Wall Street Journal. Golf association officials defend the requirement for keeping away slow-playing novices, but they estimate it might take about $800 or more for lessons and classes just to get the certificate.

■ Hard Times for Rape Victims: In St. Petersburg, Fla., in June, a 29-year-old rape victim, still shaken up and in a hospital gown after being treated, was arrested and ushered off to jail when a routine check revealed that she had three outstanding judicial warrants (failure to pay a traffic fine, failure to pay an unlicensed-dog fine, and allowing her young daughters to miss school). Also in June, in Albany, N.Y., Supreme Court Justice James Canfield performed the wedding of Robert Gorghon to his girlfriend, Cheryl, only minutes after Gorghon had been sentenced in another courtroom to 25 years in prison for the serial sexual assault of Cheryl's daughter over a 13-year period. (Canfield is notorious for marrying the just-convicted, which he said reduces the likelihood that they will engage in homosexual sex in prison.)

More Good News for Breasts

■ Following recent FDA approval and as a safer alternative to surgery, doctors have begun offering the $2,500 Brava Breast Enhancement vacuum device that its developer says can increase cup size by stimulating tissue growth, although the contraption must be worn for 10 hours every day for 10 weeks, pulling tissue gently inside its vacuum domes. And a researcher in Melbourne, Australia, told a recent meeting of surgeons that he had grown breast tissue in rats, mice and rabbits, and that, if it could be done for humans, it would allow women to grow larger breasts. And a 31-year-old woman in Frankenmuth, Mich., reported in June that a nail that flew up from her lawn mower's blade and that could have penetrated her heart was deflected by her "liquid-curved" Maidenform bra; she said that "a higher power" had told her that day to wear a bra for lawn-mowing.

Compelling Explanations

■ In March, the Yakima Indian Nation performed two rain ceremonies (ancient rituals involving fruits and berries) in the Washington mountains to bring an end to the drought plaguing the Northwest and then sent the bill for expenses ($32,000) to the region's electricity provider, Bonneville Power Administration, pointing out the (slight) increase in rainfall afterward. Nonetheless, Bonneville declined to pay.

■ Testifying at his sexual molestation trial in Leeds, England, in March, psychic healer Terence Wood, 41, admitted that he might have put his hands inside the clothing of the four complaining females but that he was unaware he was doing anything wrong: "When I'm healing, I'm in an altered state, and I just go where the spirit tells me the pain is. I close my eyes. My hand becomes very, very hot."

■ Tom Wahl and his wife, Suzi, were convicted in St. Louis in April of "prostitution," in that a jury found that they had engaged in sex for money, even though they were having sex only with each other, at paid sex-education "seminars" the couple ran. Their lawyer's unsuccessful closing argument compared the Wahls to a golf pro trying to teach duffers the proper techniques for swinging a club. That would not be "golf," said the lawyer; it would be a demonstration of techniques, and thus, a demonstration of sex techniques would not be "sex."

■ In May in Denver, Richard M. Young, 43, filed a federal lawsuit against his ex-employer, Ohio Casualty Insurance, for firing him after an incident in which he kept sheriff's deputies at bay for six hours while wielding a gun in a shopping center parking lot, threatening to kill himself. Young said he has a mental illness, which the company is required to "accommodate" under federal law, and that just because he wanted to kill himself doesn't mean he doesn't want to continue working for Ohio Casualty. Young's job at the company was regional manager of litigation.

■ In separate lawsuits filed in January, two teen-age boys claim that York, Pa., personal injury lawyer Mark David Frankel fondled them inappropriately when the boys, with their mothers, went to Frankel's office to discuss injuries they had suffered in auto accidents. According to the lawsuits, in each case Frankel quickly attempted to examine the boys' buttocks, thighs and genitals, claiming that he could detect injuries that doctors often miss. According to one mother, Frankel said he needed to examine those areas because, if a doctor had diagnosed a head injury and a foot injury, there was usually another injury in between.

The Classic Middle Name (All New)

■ Arrested for murder: Andrew Wayne Toler, 21 (Houston, May); Christopher Wayne Scarber, 25 (Independence, Ky., February); Kenneth Wayne Jackson, 32 (Balch Springs, Texas, May). Filed for a new trial: convicted murderer Jack Wayne Napier, 48 (Lexington, Ky., March). New trial granted: convicted murderer Anthony Wayne Walker, 39 (Cincinnati, September 2000). And, occasionally, this happens: acquitted of murder at his retrial (after five years on death row): Gary Wayne Drinkard, 45 (Decatur, Ala., May 2001).

People Different From Us

■ Frank T. Singer, 38, pleaded guilty in May to manslaughter in the death of a 36-year-old man in Stroudsburg, Pa., that resulted from consensual bondage play between the two men in a motel room last year. The younger man, wearing a sauna suit, was found duct-taped and handcuffed to a chair and apparently choked to death after, according to news reports, being force-fed 2 1/2 pounds of peanut butter.

Least Justifiable Homicides

■ A 34-year-old man was shot to death over a piece of sweet potato pie (Atlanta, January). A man was stabbed to death allegedly by his girlfriend when he brought her home a McDonald's ham, egg and cheese bagel instead of the two Egg McMuffins she requested (Martinez, Calif., March). A 48-year-old man was shot to death, allegedly by his wife, after a fight over their satellite-TV controls (Orlando, April). A 37-year-old man was beaten to death, allegedly by his roommate, in a fight over the thermostat setting (Dallas, May).

shows that went deep into what this country is all about, and not just skimming the surface." History had its highest ratings ever on Memorial Day, and Werbe laughs as she admits she hopes it rains on July 4. After history and fireworks, the third component to most folks' festivities on July Fourth is food. The Food Network is running a Foodnationmarathon with host Bobby Flay. Beginning, appropriately, in Boston, Flay travels the country, sampling lobster in the Hamptons, oysters in Maryland and Georgia, and sourdough bread in San Francisco.

TNT salutes an American icon on Wednesday with An All-Star Tribute to Brian Wilson, with a lineup of musicians that includes Ricky Martin, Elton John, Billy Joel and the Beach Boy himself. If, however, your taste in music for the holiday tends toward the traditional, tune in to Yankee Doodle Dandy on TCM and see why James Cagney won an Oscar for his portrayal of George M. Cohan. And, what's more American than baseball? ESPN offers three consecutive games Wednesday, beginning with the Chicago Cubs vs. the New York Mets, continuing with the New York Yankees vs. the Baltimore Orioles and ending with the Philadelphia Phillies vs. the Atlanta Braves. For those who would rather wield glue guns, Discovery has Fabulous Fourth Fix-Up, a Christopher Lowell Showmarathon that includes an episode in which the zany, inspirational host dresses up as Paul Revere. Lowell maintains that decorating, in its own way, is patriotic. This is about "declaring independence in your own home."

"... People are either drowning in their clutter or they can't afford things," he says. "Independence Day is a perfect time to declare your independence (from clutter), and it's one of the biggest home improvement days of the year," Lowell says. "Now is your chance." And last but not least, if you yearn for yet another battle between the Brits and the Yanks, watch as TLC's Junkyard Wars "U.S. vs. U.K. Faceoff" pits the American Long brothers against the British team the Megalomaniacs, with each team trying to smash a Volkswagen into the smallest possible object.

This painting of fireworks and the U.S. Capitol by Richard Niewerth captures the spirit of A Capitol Fourth, airing Wednesday on PBS (check local listings). It's one of many specials celebrating the nation's birth.

Critter Corner

Critter Corner,
by Carol Combs-Morris, DVM

This week's column may be a little strange, but it marks a special occasion—I have a new cousin who was born last week. (She is my first cousin's granddaughter, so does that makes her my first cousin, twice removed, or my third cousin? I could never get that straight.) She would have been my grandmother's first great-great-grandchild, and I regret that they will not have an opportunity to know one another.

When I was a child, my grandmother was always reading something to me, telling me stories or reciting poetry. She taught me patience and cooking, compassion and crochet. Every child should have a grandmother like her. Animals were frequent topics of conversation, whether stories of old family pets, or the litter of new kittens on the back porch. Somewhere among my treasures are the Calico

Cat and the Gingham Dog that she sewed for me from patterns that I drew. And, of course, there are the memories of a progression of stray cats that I dragged in and she took care of. So here, in honor of my new cousin Bailey Lynn, is my favorite animal poem from her great-great-grandmother:

Once there was a little kitty,
White as the snow,
In the barn he used to frolic
Long time ago

In the barn a little mouseie
Ran to and fro,
And he spied the little kitty
Long time ago

Two black eyes had Little Kitty,
Black as a crow's,
And he spied the little mouseie
Long time ago

Four soft paws had Little Kitty,
Soft as the snow,
And he caught the little mouseie

Long time ago

Nine pearl teeth had Little Kitty,
All in a row,
And he bit the little mouseie
Long time ago.

When teeth bit Little Mouseie,
Mouseie cried out "Oh!"
And he slipped away from Kitty
Long time ago!

If anyone knows the origin of this rhyme, I would love to hear it. I am fairly certain that "Mother" did not make it up; it seems that I can remember her telling me that she heard it from her own mother or grandmother. This would date it to at least the late 1800's. I have never seen it in print, nor heard it anywhere else. It seems odd that I can remember it word-for-word forty odd years after I last heard it recited. I'll have to remember to tell it to Bailey often, so she can pass it on to her own grandchildren!

PRIDE Participates in Backstreet Boys Concert

Somerset, KY - Karen Engle, Executive Director of the PRIDE Program, announced today that PRIDE participated in the Backstreet Boy concert on June 21, 2001 in Lexington, Kentucky at the invitation of Kevin Richardson. Richardson afforded PRIDE the opportunity to set up a booth to educate concert-goers on PRIDE's efforts to cleanup Kentucky's environment.

Karen said, "Kevin created the Just Within Reach Foundation which has similar environmental goals as PRIDE. A cleaner environment is literally Just Within Reach, but it starts with personal responsibility. Because Kevin founded Just Within Reach, PRIDE honored him with the first ever Kentucky PRIDE Award. Unfortunately, the Backstreet Boy's world tour kept Kevin from attending PRIDE's Environmental Award ceremony, but he thanked PRIDE for the award last Thursday."

"It was a unique opportunity for PRIDE. We answered questions about the organization and handed out bookmarks featuring Kevin and the PRIDE message to over 4,000 youth," Karen continued.

Kentucky PRIDE - Personal Responsibility In a Desirable Environment - was created in 1997 by Congressman Hal Rogers and Kentucky Secretary of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection General Jim Bickford. PRIDE is a comprehensive, region-wide effort that links local, state and federal agencies to clean up the region's rivers and streams of garbage and sewage, to end illegal trash dumps and promote environmental education and awareness, while renewing citizen pride in eastern and southern Kentucky.

PRIDE is funded by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

For more information about PRIDE, contact the PRIDE Office at 888/577-4339 or visit our website at www.kypride.org.

Kentucky Writer's is sponsoring it's First Annual Short Story Contest

Final judge for the contest will be Silas House, author of "Clay's Quilt" (Algonquin Books).

Silas lives in Lily, Kentucky (population 800), where he works as a rural carrier for the United States Postal Service. "Clay's Quilt" received a grant from the Kentucky Arts Council in 1997 and won first place in the 1998 Kentucky chapter of the National Society of Arts and Letters fiction competition. Silas was recently invited to the Millennial Gathering at Vanderbilt University as "one of the emerging talents from the South."

First prize will be $300 and publication in The Louisville Review. Each of three honorable mentions will receive $50.

Entries must be postmarked no later than July 11, 2001.

Stories should not exceed 7,500 words and must be previously unpublished. Authors are allowed to enter as many stories as they wish, but each story "regardless of length" must be accompanied by a reading fee of $5 dollars for KWC members or $10 for non-members.

The author's name, address, and phone number or e-mail address should appear on the first page of each story. Manuscripts will not be returned. Winners will be announced in early August and will be invited to read their winning stories at the Carnegie Center in Lexington on August 30, 2001.

Are your pies so good, they're gobbled up just after they come out of the oven?

If they are that good, maybe they are the best in the Bluegrass. So roll out the dough, toss in the filling, sprinkle in spices, and bring your best pie down to the Great American Pie Contest in Cheapside Park at noon, Tuesday, July 3.

Bakers who cook for a living and those who just feel like they do, are invited to enter their "best of the best" in the annual contest, which is part of the Fourth of July Festival. Expert and celebrity judges will taste each pie and present awards in the "professional" and "non-professional"—or home-baked—categories. The crowd will get to sample the goods, along with some cool ice cream at the Downtown Lexington Corporation's Ice Cream Social.

The bakers of the top three pies in the home-baked category will receive $150, $100 and $50 gift certificates from Meijer. The top professional baker will receive a plaque to display at his/her business. There also will be a special award for the prettiest pie.

Pies can be any kind, although cream pies are not recommended, because of typically warm and humid weather.

To enter the contest, pick up an entry form at the Government Center, 200 East Main St., or call Maureen Watson at 859-258-3112.

Entries must be mailed by Friday, June 22. There is no entry fee. Pies should be brought to the judging area by 11:30 a.m., so the contest can start on time. For more information, call 859-258-3100.

18 months in the life of a family in Brooklyn. Sandra Ortiz quit school as a child to help support her 14 younger siblings. At 17, she boarded a plane alone from the Dominican Republic to make a better life in the United States. She and her husband, Juan, clean hospitals by day and doctors' offices by night.

They speak English and have sacrificed to send their three daughters to private school. The documentary captures Sandra and Juan's pride as oldest daughter Monica, 21, becomes the family's first college graduate when she receives her degree from Columbia University. It also shows their frustrations with youngest daughter Mayra, 14, who prefers hanging out to studying.

"They were dealing with the universal issues of many Americans," filmmaker Aaron Matthews says. "The kids struggling in school, balancing work and family life. ... There is also the theme of living between two worlds - an immigrant story - but as Americans, we are all the children of immigrants in some way or another."

For old-fashioned flag waving, parades and fireworks, tune in to A Capitol Fourth on PBS Wednesday, July 4 (check local listings). This is the 20th such special, and all have been produced by Jerry Colbert. "John Adams (said) that we should celebrate the Fourth with bonfires and fireworks and parades, and that's what we are doing," Colbert says.

The program includes host Barry Bostwick (Spin City) singing "I Love a Parade"; performances by the Irish Tenors, Luther Vandross and the Pointer Sisters; and the National

Symphony, conducted by Erich Kunzel, playing the theme from 2001: A Space Odyssey. Also Wednesday, A&E Network offers Pop Goes the Fourth! Joan Lunden hosts the program, which features conductor Keith Lockhart and the Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra performing patriotic favorites, including "Stars and Stripes Forever." Featured performers include Cyndi Lauper and Debbie Reynolds. The special ends with a fireworks display on the banks of the Charles River. For those who can't get enough fireworks, there's Macy's Fourth of July Fireworks Spectacular on NBC. Some 20,000 shells will explode over New York's East River during the hourlong show. Two programs about pyrotechnics air on Discovery Channel Monday, July 2. Fireworks: An Explosive Story traces pyrotechnic history, while Fireworks teaches viewers about high-tech displays. Inevitably, thoughts will turn to the nation's birth, which The History Channel commemorates Wednesday with a day of programming that includes a History's Lost & Found marathon; The Great American History Quiz: The Presidents; "Taking Liberties," an episode of the miniseries Founding Fathers; Mt. Rushmore; and the Save Our History special White House: 200th Anniversary. "It's great fun for us to program because we have such a deep inventory of programs that we can play on July 4 and be meaningful," says Susan Werbe, History's vice president for historical programming. Gorilla Exhibit coming

The $15 million, four-acre Gorilla Forest Exhibit now under construction at the Louisville Zoo will open May 2002, with gorillas from Chicago. Louisville Mayor David L. Armstrong announced recently that the first troops of gorillas to inhabit the Louisville Zoo's Gorilla Forest Exhibit will be coming from Chicago's Lincoln Park Zoo.

The animals, which are rare Western lowland gorillas, are scheduled to arrive in two groups. The first troop should reach Louisville in early 2002, with the second troop following in the fall.

Louisville Zoo Director, Dr. Bill Foster indicated that a total of 11 gorillas are likely to make the journey. He did add that, "Because we are dealing with animals, this is a dynamic process. The staff at Lincoln Park Zoo will work with population management experts to determine exactly which and how many gorillas will be moving to Louisville as the time draws nearer."

The Louisville zoo is consulting with UPS, Lincoln Park Zoo staff and other experts in the field to develop a detailed plan for the move.

Mayor Armstrong expressed his appreciation for being associated with a Zoo that has a national reputation for gorilla conservation. He added, "Our Gorilla Forest Exhibit will be one of the finest gorilla facilities anywhere, and we are pleased and proud that Lincoln Park Zoo is entrusting us with the care of their animals." The Mayor continued, "The gorillas that will be in the Gorilla Forest are ambassadors for their kind. They will help us teach children and adults alike about their uncertain future in the wild. And our children will be the conservators and stewards of our future."

Lincoln Park Zoo is transferring animals to prepare for construction of a new Great Ape House. The gorillas will be on loan to the Louisville Zoo for three to five years. According to Dr. Foster, "Our ability to populate the Gorilla Forest in Louisville is due to the success of our colleagues from other zoos in breeding these animals. Gorillas from other zoos will eventually make their way to Louisville, but this will all be determined over time, and based on Species Survival Plan (SSP) recommendations."

Today's zoos cooperate to manage animals in ways that are most beneficial to the species. For example, the movement and breeding of Western lowland gorillas in North America is managed by the Gorilla Species Survival Plan (SSP) of the American Zoo and Aquarium Association (AZA). This is done to maintain as much genetic diversity in the gorilla population as possible. One of the ways that the SSP accomplishes this task is by carefully and scientifically selecting each animal's mate.

Lincoln Park Zoo: a leader in gorilla conservation

Lincoln Park Zoo began in 1868 with a pair of swans, making it the oldest zoo in the country. Today more than 1,100 mammals, reptiles and birds reside on 35 acres of Chicago's lakefront. One of the most visited zoos in the country, Lincoln Park has become world-renowned for its successful gorilla breeding program.

On August 15, 1930, a 2 1/2 year-old gorilla arrived at Lincoln Park Zoo from Cameroon. His name was Bushman and he became a Chicago legend. Since that time, an amazing 44 gorillas have been born at the zoo garnering Lincoln Park Zoo the nickname Gorilla-Town, USA.

Louisville Zoo:

Although only 32 years old, the Louisville Zoo offers an extensive animal and botanical collection. More than 1,300 animals are displayed in naturalistic habitats on the 134-acre facility, conveniently located in the middle of Louisville. It is a top attraction in Louisville (second only to the city's Waterfront Park) and 11th in Kentucky. While its primary focus is as a recreation, education and conservation resource for the region, the Zoo appeals to all ages and draws almost 700,000 visitors annually.

"PEARL HARBOR"

This summer's most over-hyped "event movie," "Pearl Harbor," is proof positive that a film can be both a blockbuster and a dud — much like "Titanic" was.

The historic atrocity isn't so much the bombing of Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, but this film's depiction of the events and total disregard for the spirit of time in which the attack occurred. None of the characters looks, acts or speaks the way Americans did during that era.

That's because "Pearl Harbor" isn't a movie about history. It's a summertime popcorn flick with pretty, one-dimensional characters who have "love issues" (for the chicks), and lots of explosions (for the dudes).

It's just set during the 1940s — in much the same way "Happy Days" was about the 1950s. Everyone wore '50s clothes, but their haircuts, values, dialogue and sensibilities were firmly rooted in the present day. "Pearl Harbor" is just like "Happy Days" — only louder, longer and more boring.

This more than three-hour loogie stars Ben Affleck (Rafe McCawley) and Josh Hartnett (Danny Walker) as two childhood buddies from Tennessee (though Josh is the only one who attempts an accent) who volunteer (they're from Tennessee, get it?) for the Army Air Corps.

While at training camp, Affleck falls in love with a nurse (Kate Beckinsdale). Their passionless love affair takes up the first hour and a half of the film.

Since America isn't involved in the war in Europe, Affleck volunteers to fly for the British RAF. During a mission, he is shot down and presumed dead. So, Ben's nurse girlfriend sleeps with his best friend.

But we all know that Ben Affleck isn't dead because his name's above the title. Lo and behold, he returns. Everyone involved in the love triangle is totally bummed. Everyone in the audience is looking at their watches wondering where the Japanese are.

Eventually the Japanese show up. Lots of explosions. Somehow, the 40-minute battle sequence seems longer than the previous 90 minutes.

America is shocked. America is stunned. America wants payback. So, Jimmy Doolittle (played by Alec Baldwin) leads his famous raid on Tokyo. Ben and Josh volunteer for the raid. One of them dies, which ties up the messy love triangle thing. America wins the war. The end.

The only redeeming thing about "Pearl Harbor" is that while watching this debacle, I kept thinking of some of my favorite World War II pictures: "Patton," "Sands of Iwo Jima," "30 Seconds Over Tokyo," "From Here To Eternity." For the price of admission to "Pearl Harbor," I — and you — could rent those great films. I suggest you do so.

PRIDE Participates in Backstreet Boys Concert

Somerset, KY - Karen Engle, Executive Director of the PRIDE Program, announced today that PRIDE participated in the Backstreet Boy concert on June 21, 2001 in Lexington, Kentucky at the invitation of Kevin Richardson. Richardson afforded PRIDE the opportunity to set up a booth to educate concert-goers on PRIDE's efforts to cleanup Kentucky's environment.

Karen said, "Kevin created the Just Within Reach Foundation which has similar environmental goals as PRIDE. A cleaner environment is literally Just Within Reach, but it starts with personal responsibility. Because Kevin founded Just Within Reach, PRIDE honored him with the first ever Kentucky PRIDE Award. Unfortunately, the Backstreet Boy's world tour kept Kevin from attending PRIDE's Environmental Award ceremony, but he thanked PRIDE for the award last Thursday."

"It was a unique opportunity for PRIDE. We answered questions about the organization and handed out bookmarks featuring Kevin and the PRIDE message to over 4,000 youth," Karen continued.

Kentucky PRIDE - Personal Responsibility In a Desirable Environment - was created in 1997 by Congressman Hal Rogers and Kentucky Secretary of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection General Jim Bickford. PRIDE is a comprehensive, region-wide effort that links local, state and federal agencies to clean up the region's rivers and streams of garbage and sewage, to end illegal trash dumps and promote environmental education and awareness, while renewing citizen pride in eastern and southern Kentucky.

PRIDE is funded by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

For more information about PRIDE, contact the PRIDE Office at 888/577-4339 or visit our website at www.kypride.org.

Kentucky Writer's is sponsoring it's First Annual Short Story Contest

Final judge for the contest will be Silas House, author of "Clay's Quilt" (Algonquin Books).

Silas lives in Lily, Kentucky (population 800), where he works as a rural carrier for the United States Postal Service. "Clay's Quilt" received a grant from the Kentucky Arts Council in 1997 and won first place in the 1998 Kentucky chapter of the National Society of Arts and Letters fiction competition. Silas was recently invited to the Millennial Gathering at Vanderbilt University as "one of the emerging talents from the South."

First prize will be $300 and publication in The Louisville Review. Each of three honorable mentions will receive $50.

Entries must be postmarked no later than July 11, 2001.

Stories should not exceed 7,500 words and must be previously unpublished. Authors are allowed to enter as many stories as they wish, but each story "regardless of length" must be accompanied by a reading fee of $5 dollars for KWC members or $10 for non-members.

The author's name, address, and phone number or e-mail address should appear on the first page of each story. Manuscripts will not be returned. Winners will be announced in early August and will be invited to read their winning stories at the Carnegie Center in Lexington on August 30, 2001.

when Ben accused Sam of taking the rap for Will. Asa and Gabrielle assured each other that their revenge plot against Max was going well. Starr overheard Roseanne asking for some love potion for her own use. Wait to See: Gabrielle and Max grapple with their shared past. Starr buys the love potion for Blair and Todd.

PASSIONS

Timmy made things worse for Tabitha when he tried to stop the vial containing Kay's soul from choking her to death. T.C. and Eve were distraught as their daughter, Simone, lay dying. Gwen told the tabloid reporter that the e-mail about Ethan came from Theresa's computer. Grace had big news for Sam. Luis saw Alistair trying to manipulate Sheridan. Wait to See: Luis reaches out to Sheridan, but it may be too late.

PORT CHARLES

As the police were about to shoot Jamal, Jack's "ghost" stepped in the way. Ian and Eve agreed to let Michael marry them, unaware that he'd been locked in the monastery's cellar by his identical twin, Caleb. A mesmerized Livvie agreed to let Caleb walk with her. Wait to See: Gaby has upsetting news for Joe.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS

Jill told Sean to keep their intimate relationship secret. Sharon assured Nick that she's OK with his accepting a project for Victor that will take him away from home. Mac was uneasy about Billy letting Brittany be part of the Jabot campaign. Isabella urged Michael to keep Paul from learning that she has no case. Victor was upset with Nikki for hiring Warton. Meanwhile, Sharon flashed back to Matt. Wait to See: The HMO lawsuit takes a new turn.

Are your pies so good, they're gobbled up just after they come out of the oven?

If they are that good, maybe they are the best in the Bluegrass. So roll out the dough, toss in the filling, sprinkle in spices, and bring your best pie down to the Great American Pie Contest in Cheapside Park at noon, Tuesday, July 3.

Bakers who cook for a living and those who just feel like they do, are invited to enter their "best of the best" in the annual contest, which is part of the Fourth of July Festival. Expert and celebrity judges will taste each pie and present awards in the "professional" and "non-professional"—or home-baked—categories. The crowd will get to sample the goods, along with some cool ice cream at the Downtown Lexington Corporation's Ice Cream Social.

The bakers of the top three pies in the home-baked category will receive $150, $100 and $50 gift certificates from Meijer. The top professional baker will receive a plaque to display at his/her business. There also will be a special award for the prettiest pie.

Pies can be any kind, although cream pies are not recommended, because of typically warm and humid weather.

To enter the contest, pick up an entry form at the Government Center, 200 East Main St., or call Maureen Watson at 859-258-3112.

Entries must be mailed by Friday, June 22. There is no entry fee. Pies should be brought to the judging area by 11:30 a.m., so the contest can start on time. For more information, call 859-258-3100.

Name this Section and WIN CASH

Here is your chance to make a lasting impact on Eastern Kentucky's regional newspaper ... and earn a little cash while you're at it.

Each week, The Floyd County Times Sunday Regional Edition will offer expanded television listings, along with local features, a guide to the best shows on the air, horoscopes and puzzles in one complete entertainment package. In fact, we were so busy making our TV book the best it could be that we forgot to give it a name!

That is where you come in. Send us your suggestions for a name. The best entry will be chosen as the name for our bigger and better TV book, and the winning entrant will receive $25. In the event more than one person submits the name we select, a random drawing will determine the winner.

Just think, you could see your suggestion in print every week and pocket a little spending cash in the process. Mail your entries to TV Contest, The Floyd County Times, PO Box 390, Prestonsburg, KY 41653, or email them to web@floydcountytimes.com.

Horoscopes...

ARIES

(March 21 to April 19)

Your efforts to keep the lines of communication open pay off. Expect to hear news that could help you achieve one of your long-held objectives. A relationship needs more attention.

Taurus

(April 20 to May 20)

That vexing situation might be causing the sensitive Bovine to see red. But bide your time and collect all the facts before confronting the suspected troublemaker head-on.

GEMINI

(May 21 to June 20)

Curiosity can be a double-edged sword. You should, indeed, learn more about a person who is now in your life. But be diplomatic; probing too deeply, too soon can backfire.

CANCER

(June 21 to July 22)

Your financial picture improves, but you still need to shop cautiously and resist going on a spending spree. Your present restraint helps you avoid potential money woes down the line.

LEO

(July 23 to August 22)

Your Leonine leadership skills are put to the test when you're asked to take command of a difficult situation that urgently needs resolving. A friend from the past offers to help.

VIRGO

(August 23 to September 22)

Your Virgan inclination to offer unsolicited counsel could create hard feelings. It's best to wait until you're asked for your advice before dispensing it so freely.

LIBRA

(September 23 to October 22)

A misunderstanding delays your chance to straighten out problems at the workplace. But an explanation soon helps settle things to everyone's satisfaction.

SCORPIO

(October 23 to November 21)

Home improvements are favored. Make a list of what needs to be done, and get started. Consider donating things you no longer use to a worthy charity.

SAGITTARIUS

(November 22 to December 21)

Use your innate horse sense to help you make the right move with a major purchase. Be wary of those who try to rush you into making a decision.

CAPRICORN

(December 22 to January 19)

Ease up on that penchant of yours to reshape the world according to your specifications. Be more tolerant of those who have different views of what life is all about.

AQUARIUS

(January 20 to February 18)

A series of fluctuating circumstances continues to dominate your current aspects. Remember to stay focused on the positive possibilities that these changes can bring.

PISCES

(February 19 to March 20)

You can get things done better than most people. So don't let those naysayers douse your enthusiasm. Get back in the swim and start making waves as only you can.

BORN THIS WEEK:

You have a natural talent for bringing people and elements together. You'd make a fine research scientist, pharmacist or even a master chef.

ALL MY CHILDREN

Ryan caught up with Ilene and found that Gillian had been shot in the head. Meanwhile, Laura accepted Leo's proposal and told Bianca that she loved her very much, but only as a friend. Despite Liza's warnings, Adam caved in to David's demands and agreed to keep him out of jail in return for David not revealing that JR stole his drugs. Mateo rushed Hayley to the doctor when she doubled over in pain. Wait to See: Erica meets a new man.

AS THE WORLD TURNS

Holden and Luke played a game that held some significance for them. Craig was arrested following an explosion. Cooley offered a deal to Katie and Henry. Lily refused to accept her losses after receiving a particularly "sweet" piece of evidence. Wait to See: Carly has a solution for Jack's financial problems. Craig is ready to tell all.

THE BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL

Tony was shaken by Chad's news that his (Chad's) sister, Ellen, had died. Meanwhile, Kristen rejected Ridge and Thorne's warning that her involvement with Tony could hurt the Forresters. Stephanie got Brooke to get Ridge to say on tape that he's only using Bridget. Amber, in the meantime, told her friend Ginger that the problem in her marriage to Rick was her lingering feelings for Deacon. Wait to See: Amber considers making a drastic change in her life.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES

Lexie refused to believe John when he said he's not J.T.'s father. Greta and Brandon bonded over their shared opinion that Sami and Austin were wrong for each other. Brady suspected Mimi and Jan were plotting to do something against Chloe at the dance. Marlena and Hope called a truce. Wait to See: Hope persuades John to tell her about the night her baby was conceived.

GENERAL HOSPITAL

As they signed their divorce papers, Luke and Laura reminisced about how they fell in love. Angel told Sonny of her meeting with Carly. Skye told no one about Emily and Zander's decision to run off together. Later, Sorel's thug threatened Zander, who rushed to Sonny's place where he found a gun. Stavros told Helena he planned to reunite with Laura and Nikolas. Wait to See: Melissa and Roy may learn Helena's secret.

GUIDING LIGHT

Edmund panicked when Beth saw through him and realized what he was really like. Marah felt she was doing the right thing by trying to make Tony jealous. Rick saw a way out of Harley's dilemma. Gus kept digging for the information he wanted. Wait to See: Noah and Reva reel from an unexpected experience. Danny's trial begins.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE

Blair agreed to resume living with Todd and Starr, but only at Dorian's home, not his. Will told Sam and Nora about finding Sam's bloody boots at his (Will's) place. Later, Nora reeled

Biography

Sandra Dee: Sophisticated Baby's the poor-little-rich-girl story of the actress whose sexy but wholesome on-screen persona charmed moviegoers — especially teen-age boys — in the 1950s and '60s. But the story lines of her real life are the stuff of tragedy: sexual abuse, loneliness, misadventure, divorce and drink. By age 26, the one-time winner of the Golden Globe for most promising newcomer was a reclusive single mother whose career was virtually over. Life has gotten brighter for her in recent years; she's beaten the booze and an eating disorder, and is a proud grandma. Interviewees include co-stars Cliff Robertson and James Darren (Gidget).

Big Brother

The first incarnation of this reality series was a yawner, so the producers are planning some improvements for the new season. The concept remains the same: a group of strangers living together in a house under the constant scrutiny of cameras and microphones, with one person voted out each week and the last one standing winning $500,000. This time, though, there are 12 contestants, not 10. And the studio audience is out; now the participants will decide whom to vote out, a la Survivor. Perhaps the biggest change — and the one with the most potential for spicing things up — is the coed sleeping arrangements; stay tuned. Julie Chen hosts.

Gorilla Exhibit coming

The $15 million, four-acre Gorilla Forest Exhibit now under construction at the Louisville Zoo will open May 2002, with gorillas from Chicago. Louisville Mayor David L. Armstrong announced recently that the first troops of gorillas to inhabit the Louisville Zoo's Gorilla Forest Exhibit will be coming from Chicago's Lincoln Park Zoo.

The animals, which are rare Western lowland gorillas, are scheduled to arrive in two groups. The first troop should reach Louisville in early 2002, with the second troop following in the fall.

Louisville Zoo Director, Dr. Bill Foster indicated that a total of 11 gorillas are likely to make the journey. He did add that, "Because we are dealing with animals, this is a dynamic process. The staff at Lincoln Park Zoo will work with population management experts to determine exactly which and how many gorillas will be moving to Louisville as the time draws nearer."

The Louisville zoo is consulting with UPS, Lincoln Park Zoo staff and other experts in the field to develop a detailed plan for the move.

Mayor Armstrong expressed his appreciation for being associated with a Zoo that has a national reputation for gorilla conservation. He added, "Our Gorilla Forest Exhibit will be one of the finest gorilla facilities anywhere, and we are pleased and proud that Lincoln Park Zoo is entrusting us with the care of their animals." The Mayor continued, "The gorillas that will be in the Gorilla Forest are ambassadors for their kind. They will help us teach children and adults alike about their uncertain future in the wild. And our children will be the conservators and stewards of our future."

Lincoln Park Zoo is transferring animals to prepare for construction of a new Great Ape House. The gorillas will be on loan to the Louisville Zoo for three to five years. According to Dr. Foster, "Our ability to populate the Gorilla Forest in Louisville is due to the success of our colleagues from other zoos in breeding these animals. Gorillas from other zoos will eventually make their way to Louisville, but this will all be determined over time, and based on Species Survival Plan (SSP) recommendations."

Today's zoos cooperate to manage animals in ways that are most beneficial to the species. For example, the movement and breeding of Western lowland gorillas in North America is managed by the Gorilla Species Survival Plan (SSP) of the American Zoo and Aquarium Association (AZA). This is done to maintain as much genetic diversity in the gorilla population as possible. One of the ways that the SSP accomplishes this task is by carefully and scientifically selecting each animal's mate.

Lincoln Park Zoo: a leader in gorilla conservation

Lincoln Park Zoo began in 1868 with a pair of swans, making it the oldest zoo in the country. Today more than 1,100 mammals, reptiles and birds reside on 35 acres of Chicago's lakefront. One of the most visited zoos in the country, Lincoln Park has become world-renowned for its successful gorilla breeding program.

On August 15, 1930, a 2 1/2 year-old gorilla arrived at Lincoln Park Zoo from Cameroon. His name was Bushman and he became a Chicago legend. Since that time, an amazing 44 gorillas have been born at the zoo garnering Lincoln Park Zoo the nickname Gorilla-Town, USA.

Louisville Zoo:

Although only 32 years old, the Louisville Zoo offers an extensive animal and botanical collection. More than 1,300 animals are displayed in naturalistic habitats on the 134-acre facility, conveniently located in the middle of Louisville. It is a top attraction in Louisville (second only to the city's Waterfront Park) and 11th in Kentucky. While its primary focus is as a recreation, education and conservation resource for the region, the Zoo appeals to all ages and draws almost 700,000 visitors annually.

"PEARL HARBOR"

This summer's most over-hyped "event movie," "Pearl Harbor," is proof positive that a film can be both a blockbuster and a dud — much like "Titanic" was.

The historic atrocity isn't so much the bombing of Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, but this film's depiction of the events and total disregard for the spirit of time in which the attack occurred. None of the characters looks, acts or speaks the way Americans did during that era.

That's because "Pearl Harbor" isn't a movie about history. It's a summertime popcorn flick with pretty, one-dimensional characters who have "love issues" (for the chicks), and lots of explosions (for the dudes).

It's just set during the 1940s — in much the same way "Happy Days" was about the 1950s. Everyone wore '50s clothes, but their haircuts, values, dialogue and sensibilities were firmly rooted in the present day. "Pearl Harbor" is just like "Happy Days" — only louder, longer and more boring.

This more than three-hour loogie stars Ben Affleck (Rafe McCawley) and Josh Hartnett (Danny Walker) as two childhood buddies from Tennessee (though Josh is the only one who attempts an accent) who volunteer (they're from Tennessee, get it?) for the Army Air Corps.

While at training camp, Affleck falls in love with a nurse (Kate Beckinsdale). Their passionless love affair takes up the first hour and a half of the film.

Since America isn't involved in the war in Europe, Affleck volunteers to fly for the British RAF. During a mission, he is shot down and presumed dead. So, Ben's nurse girlfriend sleeps with his best friend.

But we all know that Ben Affleck isn't dead because his name's above the title. Lo and behold, he returns. Everyone involved in the love triangle is totally bummed. Everyone in the audience is looking at their watches wondering where the Japanese are.

Eventually the Japanese show up. Lots of explosions. Somehow, the 40-minute battle sequence seems longer than the previous 90 minutes.

America is shocked. America is stunned. America wants payback. So, Jimmy Doolittle (played by Alec Baldwin) leads his famous raid on Tokyo. Ben and Josh volunteer for the raid. One of them dies, which ties up the messy love triangle thing. America wins the war. The end.

The only redeeming thing about "Pearl Harbor" is that while watching this debacle, I kept thinking of some of my favorite World War II pictures: "Patton," "Sands of Iwo Jima," "30 Seconds Over Tokyo," "From Here To Eternity." For the price of admission to "Pearl Harbor," I — and you — could rent those great films. I suggest you do so.

Movie: Avalon
Director-writer Barry Levinson earned an Oscar nomination for this bittersweet 1990 drama, which covers five decades in the life of an Eastern European Jewish immigrant and his family in Baltimore. Armin Mueller-Stahl and Michael Krauss share the role of patriarch Sam Krichinsky at different ages, with Aidan Quinn as Americanized son Jules and Elijah Wood as spunky grandson Michael. Joan Plowright gives a standout performance as Sam's wife, who is equally befuddled by her children's rejection of the old ways. Kevin Pollak and Lou Jacobi also star.

David Copperfield: The Great Escapes
Any half-baked Houdini wannabe can escape from a straitjacket, a safe or an underwater tank. David Copperfield demonstrates in this special from last year that he likes to season his escape stunts with a little extra danger. In his version of the straitjacket bit, he's suspended 10 stories over a pit of fire and sharp stakes. In the safe stunt, the safe is inside a building set to implode. And a 500-pound iron spike is waiting to pierce the underwater tank. You'll also see him escape a burning raft headed for Niagara Falls and brave explosions and vicious dogs to break out of Alcatraz.

Law & Order: Special Victims Unit
Benson and Stabler (Mariska Hargitay, Christopher Meloni) investigate a rape case that's full of surprises. Not only is the accused a police officer (guest star Nestor Serrano) whose wife (guest star Amy Carlson) is the one bringing the charges, but domestic violence in this family apparently goes both ways; she's taken her share of swings at him. The case turns into a major can of worms as the wife recants, the husband's cop colleagues give Stabler a hard time, and Cabot (Stephanie March) feels pressure from above to put someone away. Richard Belzer and Michelle Hurd also star in "Asunder."

There's no disputing that Alex Rodriguez is one heck of a baseball player. But when the Texas Rangers signed him to a $252 million contract last year, it raised lots of eyebrows. Is A-Rod's portly paycheck setting a bad precedent for sports in general and baseball in particular? This half-hour addresses that question as it chronicles Rodriguez's life from its difficult early years — he was raised by a single mom who worked three jobs — to his current status at the top of his game. CNN anchor Daryn Kagan hosts.

NYPD Blue

In "Writing Wrongs," Russell Jones and Medavoy (Kim Delaney, Henry Simmons, Gordon Clapp) investigate the murder of a 15-year-old girl who'd written several essays for school about being raped. She even named a name in one of them, and he's a registered sex offender, but his alibi for the night of the murder is airtight. Sipowicz and Sorenson (Dennis Franz, Rick Schroder) try to get information on another murder from the only witness: a mentally unstable homeless man. Sipowicz wrestles with his homophobia when he has a chance to go on a date, but the only person available and willing to watch Theo (Austin Majors) is John (Bill Brochtrup). Garcelle Beauvais also stars.

10 p.m. CBS

Judging Amy

Amy and Tom's (Amy Brenneman, Gregory Harrison) double date with Nick and Lolly Wetzel (Ted Marcoux, Colleen Flynn) turns into a wres-ling match when Nick makes a couple of passes at Amy. Naturally, she tells him to keep his hands to himself, but should she keep his unsavory behavior to herself or clue

Lolly in? On the job, Amy presides over the case of a teen who stops going to school because the gay pride club has been disbanded, and Maxine (Tyne Daly) tries to find the parents of an illegal Cambodian immi-grant boy. Dan Futterman and Marcus Giamatti also star in "9 1/2 Narrow."

P.O.V.

It's called "My American Girls: A Dominican Story," but Aaron Matthews' documentary will ring true with parents everywhere who are struggling for their children's sake. Sandra and Bautista Ortiz, natives of the Dominican Republic now living in Brooklyn, are the parents of three daughters: 21-year-old Monica, the college su-perachiever who wants to be an actress; 14-year-old Mayra, who just wants to have fun; and 16-year-old Aida, who just wants to have funds. The film follows the family for a year that includes weddings and baby showers, a graduation, a Christmas reunion in the Dominican Republic and the ups and downs of everyday life. That includes Sandra and Mayra's fierce battles over homework (her first year of high school is not going well) and Aida's experience with that all-American rite of passage: a job at McDonald's.

WEDNESDAY JULY 4, 2001

12 p.m. AMC

Movie: The Godfather

If you don't want to spend the Fourth of July with your own family, there's always The Family. A God father minifestival opens with the 1972 original, set in a world of its own, with heroes, villains and a moral system unlike any other. Marlon Brando delivers an Academy Award-winning performance as title character Don Vito Corleone. Al Pacino is riveting as Vito's passionate, conflicted son, Michael. Then stay tuned for 1974's The Godfather, Part II, which flashes back to Vito's early days in 1920s New York. Robert De Niro won an Oscar for his role as the young don. Pacino returns as Michael, now running the family's criminal empire from Lake Tahoe, Nev. The celebration ends with an encore of the 1991 "making of" special Godfather Family... A Look Inside.

1 p.m. ESPN

Major League Baseball

"Worst to first and vice versa" is the theme of ESPN's opening game of an Independence Day baseball tripleheader. The Chicago Cubs, looking to continue their startling turnaround from last season's last-place finish, visit the New York Mets. No one predicted the Cubs' ascension to first place, just as few thought the Mets would resemble an expansion team after reaching the 2000 World Series. The Subway Series champion New York Yankees are featured in the second game, continuing a three-game set in Baltimore. And in the finale, the Braves host the Phillies in a battle of the National League East's top two teams.

7:30 p.m. A&E

Pops Goes the Fourth! 2001

Independence Day might have been born in Philadelphia, but we'd never have gotten there if not for Boston — site of Paul Revere's ride, the Tea Party and, just outside of town, "the shot heard 'round the world." As usual, the city celebrates with a performance by the Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra and special guests Cyndi Lauper and Debbie Reynolds on the banks of the Charles River. The musical lineup, heavy on the patriotic favorites, includes "The Stars and Stripes Forever" and of course, the made-for-fireworks "1812 Overture." Keith Lockhart conducts the orchestra, and Joan Lunden hosts the three-hour telecast.

8 p.m. CBS

Tina Turner One Last Time Live!

If you missed out on seeing the world's sexiest sexagenarian in her final tour, you can experience her energy in this encore special from December, taped during her stop at London's Wembley Stadium a year ago. Turner sings "Private Dancer," "Simply the Best," "What's Love Got to Do With It" and, of course, "Proud Mary," among other hits.

8 p.m. FOX

48 Hours

The three couples under the microscope in For Better or Worse? are brave souls. They've all been married for seven years, which means they're susceptible to the fabled seven-year itch. Three experts analyze each union and offer their take on its chances of surviving without a scratch. One is Dr. Drew Pinsky of Loveline fame, now a co-host of the syndicated Men Are From Mars, Women Are From Venus. Also weighing in are Ellen Fein, co-author of the controversial snag-a-man book The Rules and a new one about making marriages work, and actress-comic Anne Meara. What are her credentials? Well, her marriage to Jerry Stiller is well into its fifth decade. Dan Rather anchors.

10 p.m. NBC

ER

George Plimpton guest stars in "Thy Will Be Done" as Dr. Carter's (Noah Wyle) granddad, who inadvertently makes a match between his grandson and Abby (Maura Tierney) by hosting a charity event, forcing Carter to scramble for a date. Back at the hospital, Kovac (Goran Visnjic) juggles two patients who are demanding risky courses of treatment: his friend the bishop (James Cromwell) and a teen-age boy (John Peck) who needs a third heart transplant.

And the whole staff continues to be taken aback by the changes in formerly mild-mannered Dr. Greene (Anthony Edwards) since his brain surgery. Paul McCrane and Eric La Salle also star.

Supersleuths: Son of Sam

Between late 1975 and the summer of 1977, New Yorkers lived in fear of a serial killer known only as Son of Sam. He had taken six young lives — five women and one man — and injured nine others, some permanently. A special police task force was assigned to the case, but it was a stroke of sheer luck that led to the killer's capture. A car parked illegally near the scene of a recent attack led police to look up the owner in hopes he'd witnessed something. The car was registered to David Berkowitz of Yonkers, who, police in that suburban city reported, was one suspicious character. A search of the car revealed that Berkowitz was, indeed, Son of Sam. In this hour long special, several police who worked on the case are interviewed, including Detective Joe Borelli, who headed the special task force.

FRIDAY JULY 6, 2001

8 p.m. AMC

Movie: The Wild Bunch Director Sam Peckinpah's 1969 Western earned Oscar nominations for its music and screenplay and attracted lots of controversy for its unflinching violence. William Holden stars as Pike Bishop, the leader of an aging band of outlaws in the waning days of the Old West. He and his gang plan one last robbery to score some retirement funds, but things go wrong, and they flee to Mexico and are recruited for another shady venture.

Bud (Patrick Labyorteaux) helps with a politically charged case involving a young Cuban refugee in JAG Tuesday on CBS.

Ernest Borgnine also stars, with Robert Ryan as a former member of the bunch who's now working for the other side of the law.

8 p.m. FOX

Movie: Black River

A Hollywood screenwriter (Jay Mohr, Jane Austen's Mafia!) finds refuge from the rat race in a charming Pacific Northwest town called Black River, where everyone is friendly and good luck seems to grow on trees. What he doesn't know — yet — is that all this charm and good fortune comes with a high price, and that he's in the municipal equivalent of the Hotel California; he can check out, but he can never leave. Stephen Tobolowsky, Ann Cusack and Lisa Edelstein also star in this chiller from scaremeister Dean Koontz.

8 p.m. SCI-FI

The Invisible Man

Amin Shimerman (Star Trek: Deep Space Nine) guest stars in "Insensate" as a one-time government guinea pig who lost the use of his five senses to the experiments. Fortunately, he has a sixth one, which he uses to warn Darien (Vincent Ventresca) that a dangerous situation awaits. Paul Ben-Victor also stars.

8 p.m. TNT

Movie: Desperate Measures A killer (Michael Keaton) agrees to donate bone marrow to a police detective's ailing son and uses his trip to the hospital as an opportunity to escape and kill again — repeatedly. learns of a woman (Gloria Reuben, ER) who survived the accident and seeks her out for answers about his loved ones' last moments. But he's not the only one looking for her; there's a conspiracy afoot to keep her mouth shut about the crash. John C. McGinley (Any Given Sunday) also stars in this two-part thriller from 2000 based on a novel by Dean Koontz. Part 2 airs Thursday.

A Capitol Fourth

Barry Bostwick (Spin City) hosts his fourth Fourth from the West Lawn of the U.S. Capitol in Washington, D.C. The musical Independence Day celebration is also celebrating its 20th birthday this year, and accordingly, the concert special includes highlights from previous years, with clips of Cab Calloway, Sha Na Na, Ray Charles and other past performers. This year's lineup includes Luther Vandross; the Pointer Sisters; and Anthony Kearns, Ronan Tynan, and Finbar Wright, aka the Irish Tenors. Erich Kunzel conducts the National Symphony Orchestra.

All-Star Tribute to Brian Wilson

Stars from all over the music galaxy salute the man behind the Beach Boys' sound in this rollicking concert special taped in March at New York's Radio City Music Hall. Highlights include Paul Simon's gentle rendition of "Surfer Girl"; a show-stopping "Good Vibrations" with Jubilant Sykes, Heart and the Harlem Boys Choir; Billy Joel performing "Don't Worry, Baby"; and the trio Wilson Phillips — featuring Wilson's daughters Wendy and Carnie — singing "You're So Good to Me." Wilson himself takes the stage to perform "Heroes & Villains" solo; "Love and Mercy" with the boys choir and "Wouldn't It Be Nice" with Elton John. He also calls the whole ensemble up onstage for "Barbara Ann," "Surfer USA" and "Fun, Fun, Fun."

Macy's Fourth of July Fireworks Spectacular

For some folks, there's nothing like a holiday in New York: the Macy's parade at Thanksgiving, Rockefeller Center at Christmas, Fifth Avenue at Easter. For those who want to celebrate this American-as-apple-pie holiday in the Big Apple without leaving home, the department store that brings us the big balloons at Thanksgiving obliges with a New York-size fireworks show. Music, celebrity guests and about 20,000 fireworks combine for a booming good time.

Independence Day 2001

Philadelphia's Fourth of July plans call for music by Garth Brooks and, of course, fireworks. But the meat of this special is a dramatic reading of the Declaration of Independence by someery familiar voices. Stars scheduled to interpret a piece of the document include Whoopi Goldberg, Kathy Bates, Graham Greene, Ming-Na, Morgan Freeman, Mel Gibson, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Michael Douglas, Edward Norton and Kevin Spacey. Anchors Diane Sawyer and Charles Gibson also plan to check in with holiday observances in the other states that made up the 13 original colonies.

Biography

Sandra Dee: Sophisticated Baby's the poor-little-rich-girl story of the actress whose sexy but wholesome on-screen persona charmed moviegoers — especially teen-age boys — in the 1950s and '60s. But the story lines of her real life are the stuff of tragedy: sexual abuse, loneliness, mis-carriage, divorce and drink. By age 26, the one-time winner of the Golden Globe for most promising newcomer was a reclusive single mother whose career was virtually over. Life has gotten brighter for her in recent years; she's beaten the booze and an eating disorder, and is a proud grandma. Interviewees include co-stars Cliff Robertson and James Darren (Gidget).

8 p.m. CBS

Big Brother

The first incarnation of this reality series was a yawner, so the producers are planning some improvements for the new season. The concept remains the same: a group of strangers living together in a house under the constant scrutiny of cameras and microphones, with one person voted out each week and the last one standing winning $500,000. This time, though, there are 12 contestants, not 10. And the studio audience is out; now the participants will decide whom to vote out, a la Survivor. Perhaps the biggest change — and the one with the most potential for spicing things up — is the coed sleeping arrangements; stay tuned. Julie Chen hosts.

Evening at Pops

In "John Williams and Harry Connick Jr.," Williams leads the Boston Pops Orchestra in a salute to music from the movies, accompanied by vintage clips, and Connick performs songs by Harry Warren in a tribute to the movie-musical composer (42nd Street) and his frequent collaborator, choreographer Busby Berkeley. Another highlight of the season premiere is a performance of "The Unfinished Journey," a short multimedia piece by Williams and Steven Spielberg that was performed during the 2000 New Year's celebration in Washington, D.C. Actor Paul Winfield and writer-activist Ms. Shabazz — a daughter of Malcolm X — provide narration. Keith Lockhart conducts the
