Murder suspect's record shows pattern of early release

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — James Austin Gunnells, the man who was arrested Wednesday and charged with the murder of Bonnie Jean Fraley Hall of Prestonsburg, has spent most of his adult life either in prison or in front of a judge.

Gunnells is now being held in the Floyd County Detention Center under a $250,000 bond, charged with murder, robbery and theft.

The charges stem from a robbery early

Wednesday morning at a Cardinal Mart just outside of Prestonsburg. Gunnells is accused of robbing the store, then shooting Hall twice in the back and fleeing in her car.

But while the charges are by far the most serious, they are not the first Gunnells has faced. Instead, he has been in and out of prison from the time he was 18.

Gunnells would still be in prison if not for a series of early releases. Most recently, he was granted shock probation June 8, having served less than two years of a five-year sentence.

Gunnells first appeared before a Floyd

County court in connection with a 1995 traffic violation at the age of 16. That charge of having no registration for his vehicle was dismissed by a motion of prosecution, as were his next three violations, all traffic related, that same year in Floyd County courts.

It wasn't until October 1996 that Gunnells was indicted by a Fayette County grand jury on a felony count of theft by unlawful taking. He was convicted the following year.

Gunnells was found guilty on January 3, 1997, and sentenced to three years in prison, already having 91 days credited jail time to his record.

Later that year, Gunnells found himself a defendant in the Floyd County court systems again, this time as a fugitive in connection to a theft by unlawful taking charge involving a stolen automobile.

Gunnells was then charged in Morgan County, indicted on a charge of receiving stolen property charge involving a vehicle, which he was found guilty of and sentenced to one year in prison. Additionally, Gunnells

PIKEVILLE — Emery Timothy Engle, a Perry County man, was indicted in U.S. District Court in Pikeville June 28 on two counts of unlawful transport and possession of firearms and one count of receiving, possessing and storing stolen firearms.

The case became public record following Engle's arrest July 3.

The indictment against Engle alleges that on September 4 in Perry County he was found to be in possession of six firearms, including:

- A .30 caliber Winchester rifle.
- A 16 gauge J.C. Higgins shotgun.
- A .22 caliber Lakefield rifle with scope.
- A .22 caliber Stevens rifle.
- A 12 gauge J.C. Higgins shotgun.
- A 30-06 caliber Savage rifle with scope.

A second count of the indictment includes the alleged discovery of a seventh firearm, a .38 caliber Rossi revolver.

A third count claims that Engle concealed and stored the seven firearms, which had been "shipped or transported in interstate commerce," while having "reasonable cause" to believe they were stolen.

Having a prior felony conviction on his criminal history records, Engle also must answer

HINDMAN — Nearly 400 acres of previously mined and reclaimed land stood as the focal point for the Appalachian Industrial Authority meeting on Tuesday at Hindman City

The site, known as the Gateway Business Park, through encouragement and planning by the AIA, now stands as a chance for Eastern Kentucky to offer developmental industrial sites for various businesses, bringing the possibility of much-needed industrial growth and employment opportunities to the area.

Breathitt jail escapee recaptured

JACKSON — Last week, 32-year-old William Abner escaped the Breathitt County Jail by tricking an on-duty deputy jailer into bringing him a cup of coffee, then wielding a broom as a weapon to get the deputy jailer inside the cell and escape.

On Tuesday, July 10, Breathitt County Deputies Randy Gabbard and Cecil Howard and Sheriff John L. Turner received a tip that led them to Abner.

The officers arrived at a mobile home which reportedly belongs to Abner's wife. Turner knocked on the door and, when it opened, he saw Abner talking on the telephone.

When Abner saw the sheriff and deputies, he allegedly dropped the telephone and

Rape Crisis Center to campaign against assaults on children

Staff Report

HAZARD — The Rape Crisis Center in Hazard is preparing for its annual statewide campaign for awareness about sexual assault.

Joy L. Amburgey, the volunteer coordinator for the center, said that 67 percent of all rapes occur to children under the age of 18.

Amburgey said that the Rape Crisis Center will try to increase public awareness of the most vulnerable population to sexual assault as part of the annual campaign in September.

Statistics show that one out of four women and one out of eight men will be raped in their lifetime, Amburgey said.

The 2001 theme will be "Stay in Bounds."

"Sports are an area most people can relate to; therefore it provides a wonderful avenue to convey the concept of 'boundaries,'" Amburgey said. "By conveying the role of the 'coach' as someone who teaches boundaries, and the role of the 'athlete' as someone who must understand those boundaries, we believe it will appeal to adults and children alike."

The Rape Crisis program in Hazard is operated by Kentucky River Community Care.

The center is located in the Care Cottage, at 465 Cedar Street, which also houses the

Pharmacy is latest target of OxyContin suit

SALYERSVILLE — The war waged against the makers, distributors and prescribers of a controversial pain medication in courts across several states now hits closer to home after one Paintsville business has been named in a recently filed lawsuit concerning the drug.

The lawsuit, originally filed in Magoffin Circuit Court on June 5, names Broadway Clinic Pharmacy as a defendant along with Purdue Frederick Company (Purdue Pharma), the manufacturer, seller and distributor of the highly addictive drug OxyContin. The case was transferred to U.S. District Court in Pikeville July 3.

The Broadway Pharmacy changed its name to the Medicine Cabinet Pharmacy on July 1.

"I don't know what grounds they have to file a lawsuit," said Steve Williams, Medicine Cabinet Pharmacy owner. "We're just legal agents of the dispensing process. Therefore, there can be no damages assessed against the pharmacy."

The lawsuit bears a striking resemblance to several that have been filed within recent months in surrounding Eastern Kentucky

Computers a common thread in drug cases

by SHELDON COMPTON

PIKEVILLE — Computers and drug abuse may not be an immediate connection made when looking at the soaring problem with prescription medication abuse in Eastern Kentucky. However, the connection was obviously present in U.S. District Court Thursday as two separate cases, both involving computers as a tool for obtaining drugs, came to the court's attention.

Natalya Elaine Napier, a 21-year-old mother of two who, along with her husband Keith Napier, both of Breathitt County, was indicted on February 21 for allegedly counterfeiting $50 dollar bills and passing them as payment for the prescription drug Lortab, was placed on a three-year probated sentence Thursday by U.S. District Judge Joseph M. Hood in connection to those charges.

Napier, who was present in court without her husband, presented a motion to the court Thursday, which claimed she had no hand in the counterfeiting process, which was done on her husband's computer. However, she did admit to passing the bills to another Breathitt County woman who, according to Napier's attorney, William D. Stark of Barbourville, had "poor eyesight".

Apparently, Napier had taken Lortabs from the lady with the Governor and first lady lead trade mission to Mexico

Gov. Paul E. Patton and First Lady Judi Patton will lead a trade mission to Mexico from July 14-21, visiting the cities of Guadalajara and Mexico City. Joining the Pattons will be representatives from Kentucky business and industry, agriculture, tourism, education, the equine industry and local and state government.

"It is my hope that this trade mission will help us to strengthen our existing ties with Mexico, as well as foster new partnerships in the region," Gov. Patton said. "Our exploration of the opportunities available throughout this region are integral to ensuring that our Commonwealth is competitive in the global economy of the 21st century."

While in Mexico, Gov. Patton will meet with Mexican officials at the state and federal level, including the governor of the state of Jalisco, the undersecretary of tourism and the federal secretary for agriculture. He will also meet with key U.S. embassy officials involved in Mexico-U.S. issues and be briefed in both cities by members of the American Chamber of Commerce. In addition, the Pattons will host receptions celebrating Kentucky products and promoting Kentucky business both in Guadalajara and Mexico City.

From July 14-17, the Pattons and the delegation will be in Guadalajara, Jalisco, home of the Kentucky Commercial and Agricultural Trade Office, which was established by the General Assembly in 1996.

During their time in Guadalajara, the delegation will attend briefings on the business climate of the region and tour the Instituto Tecnológico de Estudios Superiores de Monterrey (ITESM). ITESM is a private university with student exchange programs all over the world.

Both Western Kentucky University and the University of Kentucky have student exchange programs and Kentucky's Virtual University has established a partnership with ITESM.

The governor and the delegation will also meet with several companies who have established business relations with Kentucky companies.

Before departing for Mexico City on July 17, plans are being made for Judi Patton to join the First Lady of the State of Jalisco on a tour of a spouse abuse center in Guadalajara.

The Pattons will then lead the delegation to Mexico City, where they will remain until their return on July 21. While in Mexico City, the governor and others members of the delegation will attend further briefings on the region, as well as meetings with high level Mexican and U.S. officials.

On Wednesday, July 18, the Pattons and the delegation will have a lunch meeting with officials from Papa John's and Lexmark, two Kentucky companies currently doing business in the region.

On Friday, July 20, the first running of the Kentucky Governor's Cup Race at the Hipodromo de las Americas will take place in Mexico City, with the Governor and Mrs. Patton presenting the trophy to the winner of that race. This is the highlight of a longer-term initiative to link the growing racing industry in Mexico to the well-established Kentucky equine industry.

his home on July 21, 2000 after ingesting OxyContin tablets and/or caplets.

Miller, who died one year after being prescribed OxyContin, became addicted to medication after being prescribed the drug for injuries that occurred after receiving a broken neck in 1992 when a truck he was working on fell on him.

According to Salyers, Miller was given prescriptions for several different pain medications as a result of the accident, but none of those drugs, said Salyers, were anything like OxyContin, the brand name of a form of oxycodone — a synthetic morphine — manufactured by Purdue Pharma.

"It got so that he didn't know nothing," said Salyers. "His only concern was how he was going to get down there to get more prescriptions."

Salyers said that Miller, "in desperation," sold everything he had of value, including a farm in Morehead, several prestigious horses, horse trailers, appliances and even the mattresses off his bed in order to pay for his addiction.

"It was so sad watching him go through it," said Salyers. "We didn't even know anything about OxyContin until a couple of months before he died. I wish they would just stop making OxyContin. It causes too much heartache. There has to be a better way to deal with pain."

Attorneys from the Graham Martin Law Office in Salyersville and from the firm of Clayton, Sizemore and Byrne out of Nashville, Tenn., allege in the complaint that Williams, Medicine Cabinet Pharmacy and the Purdue Frederick Company, are "strictly liable" for damages resulting from Miller's death.

"It's an unreasonably dangerous product that shouldn't be on market," said Graham Martin. "One person gets locked in by utilizing this drug and then with ease it can be used or broken down into different forms and it becomes an extremely more potent drug. They were in position to know that, yet they continued to make it and sell it."

According to the complaint filed, both defendants "impliedly warranted" that the drug OxyContin was "reasonably fit" for the general purpose for which it was manufactured and sold for use as a prescription and analgesic medicine.

But, as the complaint further notes, OxyContin "was not fit" for that general purpose because of its highly addictive nature and the drug's potential for abuse and addiction "far exceeded its therapeutic value."

"There's not much OxyContin being prescribed now very much at all," said Williams. "Most physicians in Paintsville don't write prescriptions for OxyContin anymore."

"This whole thing falls back to patient-physician relationship," continued Williams. "The bottom line on this is that we're totally, perfectly innocent. As long as we have a legitimate, written prescription, we're going to fill it in our pharmacy ... It is our authority and obligation to dispense drugs as a licensed entity in the state of Kentucky."

PRESTONSBURG — Two Prestonsburg police officers who were assaulted in February found justice Friday after their assailants were found guilty by a jury in Floyd Circuit Court.

Jessica Rice, 25, of Prestonsburg, and Joseph Patton, 40, of Ashland, are now serving six-month sentences in the Floyd County Detention Center and face several fines as penalties of an altercation which occurred on February 11 at the jail.

Corporation was scheduled to look at the property on Wednesday, according to Terry Spears, Department of Coal Company Development (DCCD).

"It's a good sign," said Spears. "At least we're getting lookers."

The plot, which is located in eastern Letcher County one mile southwest of Jenkins and one-half mile north of Payne Gap, is being constructed by Summit Engineering of Pikeville. Representatives from Summit Engineering, Charles Byers and Jack Sykes, presented alternative planning options to AIA members during the meeting. Serious consideration was given by AIA members as Byers presented both the negative and the positive aspects of each of the four development options.

Although the plans for alternative option 4 only have 24 available lots, compared to 26 lots available with other alternative plans, AIA members favored its character.

According to Sykes, the plan for that option, which will cost nearly $2.3 million according to Summit's probable development cost estimates, combines the "better" aspects of each of the proposed plans, making it "worth the cost."

Byers said the developmental option plan for the park will "maximize access" to buildable property at the Gateway Business Park and consists of a wide variety of lot dimensions. Two of the 24 plots, however, according to this configuration, will have minimal buildable area.

During the meeting, AIA members also accepted a proposed entrance sign location, which will be placed on a knoll slightly above highway level at the entrance of the park just off US 23.

Charles Dixon, AIA; Terry Spears, DCCD; Jim Spencer, AIA; Reginald Chaney DCCD; Charles Byers, Summit Engineering; Jack Sykes, Summit Engineering; Randy Thompson, AIA; Annette Napier, Kentucky River Area Development District; and Larry Webster, AIA, were present at the meeting.

Human error cited in Breathitt helicopter crash

by CARA WADSWORTH
STAFF WRITER

JACKSON — The National Transportation Safety Board has released its final report on the June 14, 1999, University of Kentucky helicopter crash that killed four crew members in Breathitt County.

The report cited miscommunication between the two pilots, who had just taken off from the Jackson airport in foggy conditions using instrument flight navigation due to lack of visibility.

According to the cockpit voice recorder, right after take-off, Don Greene, the second-in-command pilot who was flying, thought the gyroscope which provides directional information was not working. He then asked head pilot Ernest L. Jones Jr. to take over.

Jones proceeded to give Greene directional commands instead. He told him that the helicopter was heading down and to the left and Greene needed to turn and level off.

Although Jones told Greene to turn right twice, Greene did not verbally respond and the helicopter crashed into the side of a hill six seconds later, the report revealed.

Federal investigators found no mechanical problems with the Sikorsky A-76 and reported that pilot error combined with weather conditions was the probable cause of the accident.

Additionally, the report said that Jones failed to adequately supervise Greene.

Both veteran pilots had thousands of hours of flight time, but only limited experience in instrument flight when visibility is less than one-quarter of a mile and pilots must rely on flight instruments instead of sight for orientation.

Several months before the crash, both pilots had passed instrument flight checks, but had failed parts of the tests in earlier attempts. Due to the lack of visibility during takeoff that night, there was little margin for error, said the report.

The crash occurred at 10:08 p.m. and took the lives of nurse Sheila Zellers and paramedic Brian Harden in addition to the two pilots.

took off running down the hall.

The deputies and sheriff then entered and chased him. They found him in the bedroom hiding underneath the bed.

Abner surrendered and was then taken back to the Breathitt County Jail, where he awaited transportation to the Big Sandy Regional Detention Center in Paintsville.

A mini-Wings Weekend was held July 6, 7 and 8 at the Wendell H. Ford Airport in Hazard. Pilots attended refresher flight training courses that focused on landings, airwork, and instrument work. They also attended seminars on safety in order to work toward completion of Wings Program requirements. Bruce E. Edsten, aviation safety program manager for the Federal Aviation Administration was in attendance for the event. Pictured, left to right, are Bruce E. Pair get jail for assaulting cops

PRESTONSBURG — Two Prestonsburg police officers who were assaulted in February found justice Friday after their assailants were found guilty by a jury in Floyd Circuit Court.

Jessica Rice, 25, of Prestonsburg, and Joseph Patton, 40, of Ashland, are now serving six-month sentences in the Floyd County Detention Center and face several fines as penalties of an altercation which occurred on February 11 at the jail.

According to Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Wayne Taylor, Rice and Patton were arrested on that day for driving under the influence, charges that were later dismissed.

"They wouldn't have had any problems at all if they didn't cause such a scene," said Taylor. According to police statements, when the aggressors were taken to the jail, Rice refused to get out of the elevator. Her refusal, said Taylor, mixed with "belligerent and threatening" behavior that was enough to "enrage" Patton. Patton reacted to his anger by "raising his arm and charging" Prestonsburg Police Officer Steve Little.

According to a citation issued by Steve Little, Rice head-butted Little and kicked Deputy Sheriff Herman Morris, who was also at the scene. Prestonsburg Police Officer Brian Hall was also injured as the altercation continued.

"It took three officers and two jailers to finally get them cuffed and settled down," said Taylor.

During the altercation, Morris' hand was injured, Hall received injuries to his jaw, and Little received foot injuries. Neither Rice nor Patton were injured.

According to Deputy Ricky Thornsberry, who transported Rice and Patton to Highlands Regional Medical Center in Prestonsburg following the altercation, both individuals acted in a hostile manner at the hospital.

As a result, Thornsberry cited both for disorderly conduct for being "engaged in threatening behavior in the presence of the emergency room staff and the Respond Ambulance crew."

Rice was found guilty of fourth-degree assault, three separate counts of menacing and one count of disorderly conduct. Judge John David Caudill sentenced her to serve six months in the Floyd County Detention Center and to pay $550 in fines.

Patton was found guilty of fourth-degree assault and three counts of menacing. Patton was also ordered to serve six months in jail and faces $200 in fines.

"I'm satisfied with the verdict," said Taylor. "It sends a good message that this type of behavior exhibited won't be tolerated here. When someone assaults a police officer in Floyd County, we take it very seriously. We will take it to court, and we will seek jail time."

Oversight committee to hold hearing at Hazard ARH on Medicaid crisis

HAZARD — With a projected shortfall of $280 million over the next year, the Medicaid Managed Care Oversight Advisory Committee is holding meetings around the state to explore funding and other program issues, according to State Sen. Daniel Mongiardo, D-Hazard, and State Rep. Paul Bather, D-Louisville, co-chairs.

The next meeting will begin at noon on Friday, July 27, in the Hazard Appalachian Regional Healthcare (ARH) auditorium.

Health care providers, consumers, and other interested citizens are encouraged to attend the meeting and talk about their experiences. An update on Kentucky Medicaid data and a report on the 2001 consumer and provider satisfaction survey will also be reviewed.

The meeting will be teleconferenced at noon to several hospitals and the State Capitol Annex in Frankfort so that individuals outside of Hazard have an opportunity to speak. Eleven sites, including Hazard Regional, have been confirmed as hosts of the teleconference — Pikeville Methodist Hospital, Our Lady of Bellefonte Hospital in Ashland, St. Claire Medical Center in Morehead, Middlesboro ARH Hospital, Harlan ARH Hospital, McDowell ARH Hospital, Whitesburg ARH Hospital, Morgan County ARH Hospital, the University of Kentucky Chandler Medical Center (Kentucky Clinic, first floor, Room K 117) and the State Capitol Annex, Room 131.

Two other hospitals — South Williamson ARH Hospital and Berea Hospital may take part in the teleconference.

Medicaid pharmacy costs are skyrocketing. Pharmacy expenditures for Kentucky Medicaid recipients totaled $433 million in fiscal year 2000. By the end of March, fiscal year 2001 pharmacy expenditures had already reached $413 million.

Provider comments at the meeting will help the committee determine which services are most useful. Comments by Medicaid recipients will help the committee learn which benefits are most helpful to maintaining healthy lives.

The committee will compile research from the meetings into a list of recommended legislation that may be considered by the 2002 General Assembly.

The committee is also working with the state Cabinet for Health Services, Cabinet for Families and Children, Department of Insurance, and Gov. Paul Patton's Executive Steering Committee on Medicaid to discuss how Kentucky can improve its Medicaid service delivery.

Mongiardo said the committee's work plan will help the committee achieve its goal of collecting, analyzing and disseminating information about the costs of Medicaid managed care.

"The work plan will guide the committee as it solicits input from consumers, providers, and representatives from other Medicaid programs in order to build a consensus on how Medicaid issues should be addressed," said Mongiardo. "It will give us a reflection of the social and health care values and experience of communities across Kentucky."

was in Morgan County court answering to a county of first-degree wanton endangerment, which he was found guilty of and sentenced to one year in prison in 1998.

Back in Floyd County, he was found guilty of vehicle theft and sentenced to three years in prison, with the sentence to run concurrent with the sentences from his earlier convictions.

This was followed by several dismissed traffic violations in Wolfe County before Gunnells was indicted in July 1999 in Franklin County for an escape attempt for walking away from a Class D felon work crew. He was found guilty of that charge the following month and was ordered to serve five years in prison — a sentence that ended prematurely with shock probation in June.

to that stipulation, also included within all three counts of the indictment.

Engle's alleged actions, applicable to all counts within the indictment, are in direct violation of Title 18 of the United States Code.

On June 28, the same day as Engle's indictment, the United States made a motion for warrant to be issued for Engle's arrest. That motion was granted and an order was issued by Magistrate Judge J.B. Johnson for Engle's arrest the same day.

If convicted of the counts against him, Engle could face a prison sentence of not more than 20 years, a $250,000 fine or both.

promise of payment later. When the woman came to collect, she was given the counterfeit money which she then took and, without realizing they were not legal tender, passed throughout the community.

Hood, reading from Napier's pre-sentence report provided from the federal probation office, explained that Napier had started with marijuana abuse before reaching her teens, then moved to Lortab after entering high school, stating she had received the pills from a teacher while a student at Breathitt County High School.

"How are you going to support you and your two children, now?" Hood asked her after reading from the report.

"I have to go back to school," Napier said.

According to Stark, Napier had been enrolled in college for one semester during which time she done well in her studies.

"She has potential if she could just get straightened out," said Stark.

In a second case on Thursday, Hood once again found computers to be a key component in the acquisition of prescription drugs.

Kevin Boggs, 36, Franklin Bentley, 38, Angela Hibbits, 27, and Keith Napier, 45, four of six people indicted May 10 in connection to a multi-county drug ring spanning Pike, Perry, Breathitt, Harlan and Letcher counties, appeared before the court to enter guilty pleas and disclose the methods surrounding their former drug operation.

All four defendants explained the same operation, with Napier the only defendant who added a detail that changed the course, explaining that only Boggs and not Bentley generated the forged prescriptions used to obtain drugs illegally. However, Bentley later pleaded guilty to taking part in the forgeries.

According to the collective testimony given by each defendant, the group used a computer belonging to Boggs, which was at his home in Letcher County, to generate prescriptions for OxyContin. They would then give these false prescriptions to various "customers," including Shawn L. Hibbits, who was not in court Thursday, and his wife Angela.

Angela Hibbits' testimony revealed that she would fill the prescriptions and then give the pills to be taken to Boggs and Franklin as payment.

This payment was, according to Boggs and Franklin, 20 pills from each prescription filled using the computer-generated forgeries.

At the time of seizure by federal agents, Boggs and Franklin were found to be in possession of approximately 720 OxyContin pills.

Hood ordered the computer and all other items used in connection with the forgeries to be confiscated.

Hood set a sentencing date for October 9 in Pikeville

Too important to ignore

Increasingly DNA is a critical key for law enforcement to solve crimes and find justice. But not in Kentucky.

The commonwealth's DNA database has yet to produce a single conviction, and the few cases it has helped solve pale in comparison with other states that take DNA more seriously.

The problem in Kentucky is there is just not enough DNA data on file to do much good. Kentucky's DNA databank includes only felony sex offenders since 1992 — a start but hardly the breadth of DNA data other states have put at their disposal.

Every state has DNA information on sex offenders on file, but many have expanded their databases to include other felons. Nineteen states include DNA data on burglars because research shows that many rapists start with convictions for breaking into homes.

Having DNA data on file gives law enforcement perfect genetic fingerprints. It puts more guilty people behind bars. A story earlier this week told how Virginia's DNA database has helped solve 426 crimes — most in the past three years — including 60 homicides and 146 sex offenses.

DNA evidence also has worked to clear innocent people, even free those wrongly imprisoned for crimes they didn't commit.

Kentucky's legislators had a chance earlier this year to expand the state's DNA databank but failed.

Sen. David Karem, D-Louisville, pushed for a bill that would have targeted all felons for genetic sampling. The Senate narrowed that to just violent felons to cut down on the expense. But the House had a different approach and no agreement could be reached. So Kentucky is left with only limited DNA information on file to fight crime.

Collecting and entering DNA data on every convicted felon each year — all 12,000 of them — would cost $3.8 million the first two years and about $1 million each year thereafter, the state police estimate. Just entering data on burglars and a small number of kidnappers — about 1,400 offenders a year — would cost some $920,000 the first two years and about $173,000 annually.

But it's too important a key to solving crimes, discovering truth and bringing about justice to ignore.

Listen to common sense on ergonomics

by JACK FARIS

This month, the United States Department of Labor is holding public hearings on the issue of ergonomics — that is, ergonomic injuries and the need (or lack of a need) for federal workplace standards designed to protect workers from these alleged injuries.

It is an issue that has come up before President Clinton's Labor Department issued a sweeping ergonomics regulation in the last months of his term of office ... with the apparent hope that, in the hubbub of presidential transition, its size and implications would not be noticed.

But people did notice. Small employers, in particular, noticed. They did their homework and figured out that it would have been the most burdensome, expensive, intrusive regulation ever to be imposed on the small-business community. They knew that there was no scientific basis for the regulation and could cost up to $2,000 per employee to implement. They asked Congress and the new president to stop it — and they did.

But ergonomics, most commonly identified with phrases like "repetitive motion injuries" is still an issue that demands attention. When stopping the Clinton regulation, the new president and Congress promised that the issue would not go away, that it needed a comprehensive approach including further research.

So the general purpose of the hearings taking place this month is for the current leadership at the DOL to gain a sense of what the needs and concerns are of a number of groups ... particularly those of labor and small business.

You will likely see a few news stories about these hearings and about the debate over ergonomics. Labor unions will insist, loudly and in threatening tones, that a federal regulation is absolutely necessary to protect workers.

Their message will directly imply that employers don't care about their employees and are asking them to perform tasks that are physically debilitating and hideously uncomfortable.

And the small-business community will then be faced with the challenge of defending themselves against those accusations. Most of the employers in this country are the head of very small firms, businesses where the atmosphere is one of family, not sweatshop. And a federal ergonomics standard will likely fall the hardest on those small shops. Federal regulation too often treats all business the same and putting a big regulation on a small family shop can be crushing.

When you read about the ergonomics debate in the papers or see it on the evening news, please remember that the phrase "working Americans" is going to be abused, that the owners of small businesses will be left out of that definition even though they work more hours and earn about the same pay as wage-and-hour workers. Please remember that small employers are also friends and family to their employees and are already doing as much as possible to keep their work environment safe and comfortable. After all, in a small firm the employer works side-by-side with the employee; they know the shape of the workspace and the demands of the job as well as anyone, and their motivation for improving it is pure, simple and true.

This debate over ergonomics is going to be a classic "David vs. Goliath" with big labor unions playing the part of Goliath. The labor unions, who want an ergonomics regulation to be a federal version of state workers' compensation programs (which have been labored over by competent state lawmakers for years ... and which are functioning quite effectively on their own), will fight this battle with money and tricks. Small business will fight it with reality, with the truth.

So please remember to listen extra closely to the small-business owner who submits his or her modest requests at the DOL hearings. From their mouths will come the common sense on which this new labor standard should be based.

Jack Faris is president of NFIB, the nation's largest small-business advocacy group. A non-profit, non-partisan organization founded in 1943, NFIB represents the consensus views of its 600,000 members in Washington, D.C., and all 50 state capitals.

with Rodger Bingham

Survivor II changed 'Kentucky Joe's' life

Born on July 5, 1947, 53-year-old Rodger Bingham, Survivor II's "Kentucky Joe," makes his home in Crittenden and has been married to his wife, Patricia, for over 33 years. The couple has one daughter, Angela.

Bingham, who received a bachelor of science degree in industrial education at Eastern Kentucky University as well as a master's degree in education, has currently taken a one-year leave of absence from teaching industrial arts at Grant County High School and, true to his self-described workaholic nature, is spending that time touring the country and speaking as well as donating to charities.

Rodger was a chief executive officer of a bank for 10 years and, in addition to being a teacher, is a part-time farmer and real estate investor. He has been the owner and operator of a lumber company as well as a hardware store.

He is also an elder member of the Crittenden Christian Church.

As humble in person as he appears on television, Rodger took time to sit for an interview with The Floyd County Times, even after a demanding evening of signing autographs and spending time with his devoted fans.

Floyd County Times: So much has been made of this, and respectfully so. Did you anticipate this level of popularity to go along with your celebrity status?

Rodger Bingham: That's one thing that ... if there's anything that has amazed me of the whole thing, that is it. And I've seen those ... my daughter pulls those charts up on the internet that shows what people rate you all across the United States, and it was me and Elisabeth [Filarski] running neck and neck there all the way through the thing. That to me is just completely ... I mean I can see Elisabeth, her being younger and what have you, a nice-looking young lady. But for me to be up there, you know, in the top as far as popularity, that was completely unexpected, but very nice and very overwhelming.

FCT: It has been said time and again you are the most popular contestant in the show's history. How much of this do you attribute to your "people person" persona and background as a school teacher?

RB: You know, that's one reason why I felt like I could do pretty good in the outback, not only my survival skills, but I always had a knack for — what do you call it? — reading people, being able to tell what they're thinking. I could tell after day one that Alicia [Calaway] and Jeff [Varner] had an alliance. That was obvious to me. I didn't know if it was to anybody else, I never mentioned it, but I could tell that. I think that's a large part of why I did survive out there, that's a part of it, just being able to get along with people and at the same time be able to maybe tell a little bit about what they're thinking.

FCT: With 49,000 entries, what prompted you to enter your name as a contestant for Survivor II and as for what followed, what was that like?

RB: What prompted me to do it was always about the actual challenge of it. The money was always way down the line for me. You know, the money would have been nice, but that wasn't my main motive for going out there. It was always the adventure of it, and to see how I would do, especially now that I was over 50. Forty-nine thousand applications, then they narrowed it down to 800, I had to go to a taped interview, then from there down to 50, then all 50 of us went out to LA. We were out there for a week and a half and then they decided on the 16 people after a week and a half. So, you know, the whole thing ... sometimes when I just sit down and think about it, I just can't believe it to tell you the truth. First, that I was selected out of that many people. Second, that I've been to Australia and really done the things and saw the things that I saw.

FCT: Unlike some other contestants, your background, being from the hills and farms of Kentucky, seemed to prove pivotal in several situations during the course of your time as a contestant. Would you like to say something about that?

RB: Oh, yes, I think without a doubt if there was one thing, as far as survival, that helped me, it was my farm background. Many, many people in the state of Kentucky would have been in the same situation. They would have done things that the rest of those people didn't know how to do, and that's just from their background. Be it the cutting up of a hog, the building of a shelter — I didn't want to build it in the dry creek bed. You know, you can ask any of these people in Eastern Kentucky and they're not going to put their house down in the middle of a creek bed, but yet we did out there, because the city folk wanted to. The chicken deal, literally none of them knew how to get the feathers off that chicken, and you can find just countless numbers of people in the state of Kentucky that would know how to do that. The lighting of the old lantern. None of my tribe members knew how to do that. You know, I did that when I was a kid. So, basic skills ... I lot of them are just from my background.

FCT: I know we had talked earlier and mentioned that you made yourself indispensable in many ways with those skills.

RB: That's right and the fishing. You know, I don't do a lot of fishing, but I know how to fish. And the poles. I made every one of the poles in the Kucha tribe. And we were catching fish, I mean we were flat-out putting it on the other side with the fishing. And cleaning the fish. I think there were only four of us out there who knew how to even clean the fish.

You know, stuff like that, that you just take for granted really comes in useful.

FCT: Can you reflect briefly on some things that were not shown on television from the show, that may have been editing or not shown for one reason or another?

RB: Well, we ate the first three days ... the first three days we were there we ate raw fish.

We ate raw fish, the Kucha tribe, because we had no fire, no way of cooking the rice, no way of cooking the fish. As soon as we'd catch one we'd bring it right up on the shore, clean it, pass it around and eat it. This is while it was real good and fresh.

We had leeches on us when we came out after we did the cliff jump. I thought that was very interesting. It was the only water we were in that actually had leeches in it, but yet we were covered in them. They hadn't dug into our skin yet. That was a couple of the things ...

Colby [Donaldson] and myself almost got run down by a big kangaroo, a giant kangaroo. We were within a split second of hitting the ground, me and him, so that's how close that thing was. It darted off to the side of us at the very last second. But that happened so fast, they probably didn't get that on film.

FCT: Kangaroos are capable of hurting someone, is that right?

RB: Oh, yeah. He would have knocked us down like we wasn't even there. But luckily he darted off the side at the last second — at the last half-second [snapping his fingers].

FCT: What are your plans now?

RB: I'm taking a leave of absence from the school for a year and I've got several speaking engagements and several things going on. Matter of fact, there may even be a book coming out. We'll know more about that in a few weeks, but that's looking pretty promising. And then I'm in a situation where I can do some work for some charities. I get so many requests from charitable organizations. Physically there's just absolutely no way I can do all of them. The cancer walk for life thing, I know just on that one thing, I know I got at least, and this is a low number, all over the place in the state and even surrounding states wanting to know if I could support the cancer walk and there was just no way I could do all that. So, I picked out some charities I'm interested in, some things and I'm going to support those, you know, there's just no way I could get around to all of them and I just hope that people realize that. There's just physically no way I can do them.

FCT: How has all this altered your plans?

RB: Well, it altered my life. I'm not going back to school for a year. I've done a lot of traveling. As long as the work is there to do and things to do and as long as it's fun and I enjoy doing them, I'll keep doing it. And it's not going to last forever, you know, it'll be short.

FCT: One final question, Mr. Bingham. What were your thoughts that first night in the outback?

RB: The only thing that ever worried me out there, and I literally thought of this every night when I went to bed, was these snakes coming out at night. But I knew that snakes at nighttime would look for a warm spot, warm bodies in there sleeping. They'd be crawling in there with you. Literally every night when I went to bed that would be the first thing that would come to my mind. For that reason I always slept on the outside. I never told the rest of them that I told them it was because I tossed and turned a lot. But I always slept on the outside. I thought, well at least I'll have that side of the place covered if a snake does come in there. I felt like I would have a better chance of handling it, I'd already made my mind up that I wasn't going to jump up and start hollerin' and running if one come in there where I was afraid some of them girls might. And I thought about that taipan [a large-fanged, highly poisonous snake native to Australia and New Guinea]. I had thoughts about that thing biting three or four people before we got out of there. So, that was the only thing that ever really I thought of every night.

KSP simplifies background check process

FRANKFORT — Today, the Kentucky State Police (KSP) will implement a new accounting procedure with the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) that will make it easier for school districts to pay for state and federal background checks of certified and classified employees.

The current procedure requires districts to pay for the state and federal background separately, requiring school officials to write a separate check to be attached to each individual certified employee fingerprint card. This process created unnecessary work for the school system, KSP and the FBI. The new procedure allows the FBI to directly bill KSP for all submitted fingerprint cards, thus reducing the amount of work for each agency.

The new accounting procedure will require that each school district prepay for all background checks conducted by the KSP and the FBI. The Kentucky Finance and Administration Cabinet has established an account to maintain the prepaid funds.

Kentucky State Police will be required to debit the required charge for each state and federal background request from this account. To activate an account, each school district will need to deposit a minimum of $34.00 into the account. To initiate and maintain this account, all payments should be made payable to the Kentucky State Treasurer.

This new Name Search Accounting System will allow KSP to maintain, and provide, a very detailed account of each district's funding submissions and background requests. With every submission and/or background request received, districts will be provided an itemized list that will show the following:

- funding submissions that include current and previous account balance
- all debits for certified ($34.00) and classified ($10.00) employees
- detailed list of those individuals submitted for a background check.
- individual criminal history reports

If you have any questions, or need further assistance, contact the Name Search Section in KSP at (502) 227-8700 and request the Background Specialist that covers your school district.

Bethany Hayes and Jonathan Goble, rehearsing their roles as Jenny Wiley and Black Hawk in Jenny Wiley Theatre's production of the Legend of Jenny Wiley. A special reunion of descendants of Jenny Wiley will be held before the show's opening on Wednesday, July 18. The theater is located in Jenny Wiley State Resort Park in Prestonsburg.

Jenny Wiley's descendants celebrate a new legend at JWT

PRESTONSBURG — On July 18, a local legend will come to life at Jenny Wiley Theatre.

The Legend of Jenny Wiley will open on Wednesday July 18 at JWT, with a special reunion and recognition of Jenny Wiley's descendants to celebrate this remarkable woman and the events that surrounded her in the Big Sandy region's history.

The reunion was organized by the Jenny Wiley Family Association. Board member Bertha Daniels expects descendants will come from various places including Virginia, the Carolinas, Michigan and Wisconsin.

Festivities will begin with a group picture of the descendants, to be taken at 4 p.m. July 18 by Gary McCown on the Jenny Wiley stage. Next will be a business meeting of the Jenny Wiley Family Association at 5 p.m. in the reserved dining area at the May Lodge in Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, followed by a buffet dinner at 6 p.m. The show begins at 8:15 p.m.

The descendants will be collectively presented with a lovely framed Russell May painting of Legend being performed at JWT. Their names will be listed in a special insert in the nightly program as well.

There are still seats available for descendants who wish to attend the show for a special discount group rate. Relatives of Jenny Wiley who are interested in attending with the group should contact Jim and Bertha Daniels at (606) 886-2865 by Monday, July 16.

Jenny Wiley has left her mark on the Big Sandy region not only through her numerous descendants, but also through her amazing story, which has survived over the generations and continues to fascinate people today.

One of Eastern Kentucky's earliest pioneers,

Jenny Wiley witnessed the brutal murder of her children and was captured by Indians in a case of mistaken identity. By her own strength, courage and faith, Wiley escaped and returned home to a settlement near what is now Jenny Wiley State Resort Park.

The Legend of Jenny Wiley has been presented at Jenny Wiley Theatre since 1965 to honor Jenny Wiley's historical significance to the Big Sandy region and to bring her story to life for locals and tourists alike.

However, audiences will be pleasantly surprised that this season's production is not just the same old Legend — this new creation is actually the seventh version of the show. Musical virtuoso Scott Bradley, artistic coordinator at JWT, wrote a new score for this show three years ago with lyrics by Peyton Dixon, and adapted Daniel Steins script this year.

In addition, Bradley is directing this season's production of Legend, his directorial debut at JWT, which stars Bethany Hayes as Jenny Wiley.

"I've really put my heart and soul into every aspect of this show, and I'm very excited for the opening", Bradley said. "I hope people will come out and see it, even if they've seen Legend before, because this version is something we can truly be proud of."

Located in scenic Jenny Wiley State Resort Park in Prestonsburg, Jenny Wiley Theatre is offering something for everyone this season. Other shows offered include Annie, Fiddler on the Roof, You're a Good Man Charlie Brown, and luncheon matinees of The Taffetas.

West Virginia ordered to make improvements in bonding program

The U.S. Office of Surface Mining has notified West Virginia that it must meet specific requirements and a timetable to bring its bonding program for coal mining permits up to adequate standards or face institution of a partial federal program to administer that portion of the state's program.

that to be issued a state permit to mine coal, an operator must submit a reclamation plan and post a bond equal to the cost of reclaiming the land after mining is completed. States may adopt an alternative bonding system (ABS), but the system is required to have sufficient funds to complete the reclamation plan if the permittee defaults. The ABS must also provide a substantial economic incentive for the permittee to perform the reclamation.

In a letter to Michael O. Callaghan, secretary of the West Virginia Department of Environmental Protection, Acting OSM Director Glenda Owens initiated action that would enable the Secretary of the Interior to partially withdraw state program approval and implement a partial federal regulatory program if the state does not implement required reforms by the end of the 2002 legislative session. Owens also declined a request by Callaghan for an extension of time before initiating the process.

"Regrettably ... West Virginia has failed to maintain the adequacy of the ABS that we approved under section 509(c) of the (Surface Mining Control and Reclamation) Act," said Owens. "Because of the lengthy history of these problems and lack of success of earlier resolution efforts, we cannot grant your request for an extension."

Owens said the DEP must:

- submit to the West Virginia Legislative Rulemaking Review Committee by July 27 regulatory initiatives to address the state's bonding deficiencies;
- simultaneously submit to OSM a copy of these initiatives and any necessary statutory proposals along with a timetable for enactment; and
- provide to OSM, within 45 days after the close of the 2002 legislative session, final enacted legislation, signed by the governor, that fully resolves all outstanding problems with the state's ABS.

A joint OSM/State study published in July 2000 estimates the state would need more than 20 years to fund and complete land reclamation on the backlog of existing permits for which bonds have been forfeited. Yearly expenditures to treat water at a small number of forfeiture sites are the primary factor responsible for reducing funds available for this land reclamation. Since that study, an additional 100 bond forfeiture permits with untreated discharges have been documented.

OSM estimates the treatment costs for all discharges on forfeited permits will exceed $5 million in annual operating costs and require an additional $16 million in one-time construction costs for treatment facilities. The current bonding system is not adequate to cover these costs.

The state's bonding program also does not account for the potential costs for long-term water treatment associated with any future forfeitures. There are more than 350 current permits where operators are treating water. If all these permits were forfeited, the total cost for treatment would be approximately $25 million per year.

The state has, since last fall, initiated several preliminary measures to address these problems, including: preparation of an inventory of sites with pollutional discharges; contracting for a study of the feasibility of establishing a trust fund for treatment needs; and proposing bond adjustment measures intended to ensure that the existing ABS reclamation deficit does not become worse.

"I realize that these bonding issues predate your appointment as secretary," Owens wrote to Callaghan. "While much progress has been made in the past year, we share a duty to the people of West Virginia to ensure that sites covered by the ABS are reclaimed in accordance with regulatory program requirements and that any pollutional discharges from those sites are treated in accordance with applicable standards. I hope that we will be able to resolve these issues in a manner that maintains full state primacy for the regulation of surface coal mining and reclamation operations in West Virginia."

Department for Public Health honored for HIV efforts

FRANKFORT — The Kentucky Department for Public Health has been recognized by a national organization for its efforts to encourage people to get tested for HIV.

The National Association of People With AIDS gave a Life Award to the department at June 21 ceremonies in Washington, D.C.

Three Life Awards are given each year — one to an HIV positive individual, one to a community based organization and one to a state health department for conducting an innovative National Testing Day campaign.

Tom Collins, HIV Prevention Initiatives Coordinator, who has served as Kentucky's team captain for National HIV Testing Day for the past three years, accepted the award on behalf of the department, the local health departments, community-based organizations, and the media outlets that made the campaign a success.

"Even though our Testing Day Campaign has been recognized by NAPWA as one of the most successful in the country, our work is not yet over," Collins said. "Instead of resting on our laurels, let us use this award to encourage us to do a better job with each campaign."

During June 2000, 42 participating local health departments and six community organizations were able to conduct 1,253 HIV antibody tests. In addition to traditional testing in clinics the campaign included testing in sites as varied from African American churches to bars and night clubs, at sporting and social events, and even at traffic court.

"It is an honor for Kentucky to receive this recognition. The key word here is 'Kentucky' because honors like this come when patients, physicians, hospitals, advocates, policy makers, public health and lots of others pull together," said Dr. Rice C. Leach, commissioner of the Department for Public Health. "It is the kind of group effort that will enable us to make continued progress against HIV and AIDS."

The annual "Take the Test, Take Control" campaign began in 1995.

Watershed Watch volunteers to sample 500 sites for fecal bacteria FRANKFORT — Watershed Watch volunteers will be collecting water samples from Kentucky streams and rivers at more than 500 sites statewide in the coming week.

The study is designed to get a snapshot of the condition of Kentucky waters during the height of the swimming and boating season. Ten different labs will analyze the samples for fecal coliform, an indicator of the presence of sewage and animal waste. The results will be shared with federal, state and local resource management agencies as well as community groups working to protect water quality.

The project is being conducted by volunteer, nonprofit Watershed Watch steering committees. These committees are organized by university faculty, community groups and government agencies working on water quality monitoring. They recruit and train volunteers to conduct the sampling. Sites are selected based on community interest and recreational potential.

This is the third year the study has been conducted on a statewide basis. Previous results have shown potential problems in various streams in the state. They have also revealed high-quality water sites suitable for swimming and boating.

For results from previous years, visit the project's website at kywater.org/watch/fec/.

Speaker on "The Voice of the Appalachians" radio broadcast

Biographical sketch of Dr. Russell Anderson

Russell Anderson was born in Floyd county, Kentucky and raised in a house with "three rooms and a path." As a young boy he got his first job working in the coal fields for fifty cents a day. Later he bought himself a mule and made $2 a day plowing in the corn fields. As time went along, he continued to work at different jobs that would earn him money. He trapped muskrats and minks early in the mornings and would stretch their hides. Then in the fall he would mail them to Sears and Roebuck and Montgomery Wards for money. Later he got jobs working in timber and sawmills and in construction. Then he got a job mining coal and was the number one coal loader out of a large group of men. In 1955, due to the instability of the work in coal mines he left Southeast Kentucky and moved to Ypsilanti, Michigan. There he started in the drywall business. He was an unsaved man who had never once heard a clear presentation of the gospel of the Lord Jesus.

Mr. Anderson then met a young lady in Michigan who was from Middlesboro, Kentucky. As he tells the story, "After preparing one meal of southern friend chicken he told her to name the date" he wanted to marry her. Soon after marriage Mr. Anderson heard the gospel of the Lord Jesus and was saved September 13, 1959.

In 1960, a builder that Mr. Anderson was working for went bankrupt and did not pay Mr. Anderson, which caused him to go broke. In these difficult times even though he could not sometimes take a paycheck himself he never missed paying a bill and in fact never missed tithing one week. As he says it "I missed some paydays but God never missed one from me."

Due to an old fashioned work ethic he learned as a boy and with his new found partner the Lord Jesus Christ, he continued in business. God miraculously began to bless him. In fact, in just a little over seven years he became a millionaire. He increased his giving from 10% to 30% for what God had done for him. In only a few years he became a multi-millionaire. As time went along he continued to increase his giving to God. By 1970, he was giving the Lord 50% of what he earned.

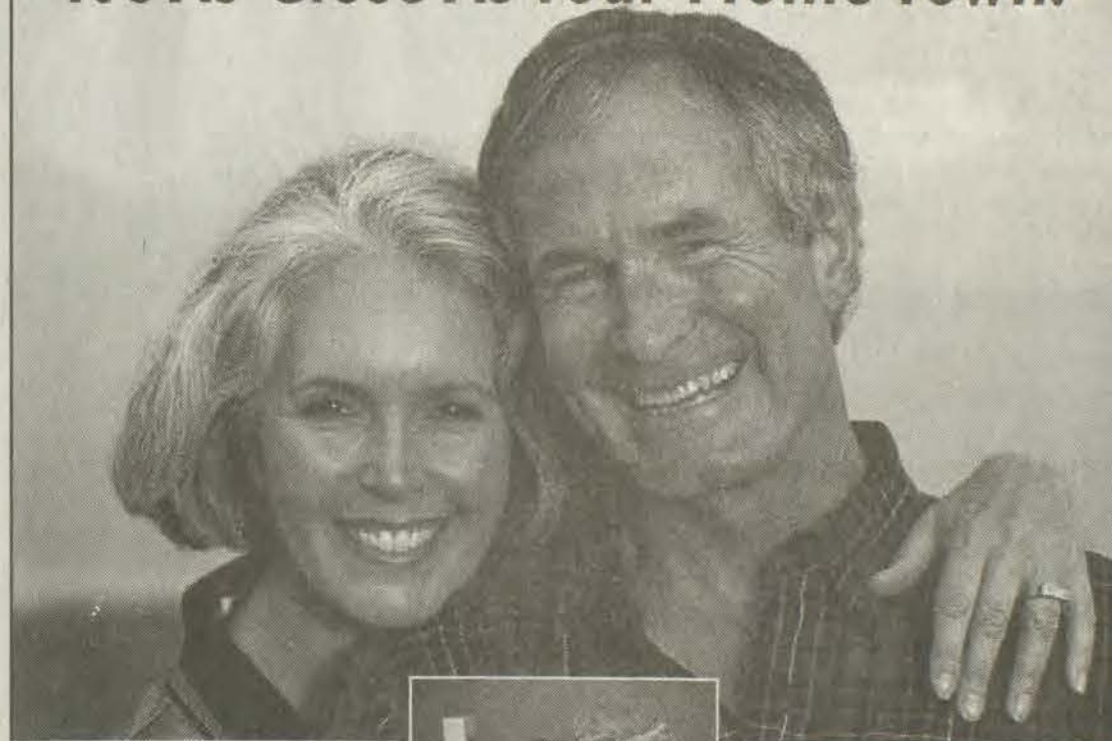

Through the years God has continued to bless him and he has continued to invest in the Lord's work. In 1972, he co-founded Hyles-Anderson College with Dr. Jack Hyles pastor of First Baptist Church of Hammond, Indiana. This is now the largest fundamental Baptist College in America. He has helped to build colleges in Mexico, Haiti, and the Philippines and recently co-founded Commonwealth Baptist College in his home state in Lexington, Kentucky. In 1998, he gave $1.50 for every $1.00 he made. In 1999 he gave more than 20 million dollars for the Lord's work. Over the years he has financed the building of more than 100 churches throughout the world.

In 1999, he made a promise with the Lord's help that he would help to see over 1,000,000 souls come to Christ in the next seven years. He has employed men around the country to win souls full-time. At the current rate, he will beat the goal of 1,000,000 should and could in fact more than double that amount. He also promised with the Lord's help to start another 200 churches besides the 100 already started around the world in the next few years.

Brother Anderson now travels around the country speaking to challenge laymen and preachers alike to not only prove God with their money but to win the lost to Christ. In the year 2001 he will speak in many tent meetings and churches in his home state of Kentucky. He has many invitations to speak around the nation for the Lord Jesus Christ.

Long-time Carter Caves naturalist retires

OLIVE HILL — It is 1963. The famous "hot line" between Washington and Moscow is installed to great fanfare. The United States has 15,000 military advisors in Viet Nam. The Beatles are taking England by storm.

And in the summer of 1963, a fresh-faced kid from Olive Hill begins work as a seasonal employee at Carter Caves State Resort Park. For the next five summers, John Tierney returns to the park to help out the park's naturalist. Then, on June 5, 1969, after graduating from college, he takes over the job himself. He's been there ever since.

On July 31, Tierney will finally say goodbye to the park that has been his home for three decades. He will retire at month's end.

Tierney, his red hair now turned white and blue eyes sparkling behind glasses, has seen a lot of changes at Carter Caves — and the entire park system — in nearly 40 years.

In the early 1960s, Kentucky's resort parks relied on summer business to keep the budget balanced. But by the end of the decade, Frankfort decision-makers sought to make the parks year-round accommodations by hiring recreation staff such as naturalists to create special events in the "off-season," Tierney said.

He is especially proud of one of his events — the Crawlathon. It's a weekend devoted to exploring and learning more about the park's famous caves.

"It was an off-the-wall idea," Tierney admits. "It was something we decided to do on the last weekend of January. I felt that people who like to explore are not going to let the weather bother them."

During that first event 20 years ago, he expected a handful of people. He was pleasantly surprised that 50 people showed up. Over time, the event grew.

"Last year, we had 700 people in the Crawlathon," he noted. "We fill up motels all over the area."

Not all interesting events at Carter Caves are planned. Tierney can cite several examples of wedding parties — dressed in formal wear — showing up at the park unannounced to exchange their wedding vows at the park's scenic natural bridge.

Some park visitors leave more than a funny memory. There's the example of an avid botanist named Mr. Richards. He would show up at the park several days every year and methodically walk the trails, looking for interesting species. When he found something interesting, he would mark it with whatever might be handy. The next day, he would share his discoveries with Tierney over breakfast.

The routine went on for years. Then, one year, Mr. Richards was nowhere to be seen. The park staff learned he had died. But his physical presence is still being felt.

"Every so often, as I'm out walking the trails, I still find a can or a bit of ribbon that Mr. Richards had used to mark the plants he'd seen," Tierney said.

Report: Farm deaths down 19 percent

FRANKFORT — The number of farming-related deaths in Kentucky fell 19 percent in 2000 compared with the previous year, according to a report from the Kentucky Injury Prevention and Research Center.

The annual report from the center's Kentucky FACE (Fatality Assessment and Control Evaluation) Project says 17 people died in farming accidents last year, down from 21 in 1999 and 65 percent lower than the recent high of 48 deaths in 1995.

"We applaud the farmers throughout Kentucky who go the extra mile to stay out of harm's way," Kentucky Agriculture Commissioner Billy Ray Smith said. "At the same time, our hearts go out to the families of those 17 people who lost their lives on the farm last year. Farm safety is a priority of this administration, and we won't rest until the number of farm fatalities in Kentucky is down to zero."

"People are changing their habits. Safety is a choice, and more farmers are making that choice," said Dale Dobson, a Larue County farmer whom Commissioner Smith named the Agriculture Department's farm and home safety field officer nearly three years ago.

Of the 17 people who died last year, 13 were 50 and over, and four were 80 and over. None was younger than 20. Once again, farm machinery was listed as the cause of more deaths (nine) than all other farming-related causes combined.

Dobson travels all over the Commonwealth giving farm safety demonstrations and staging mock rescues. To schedule an appearance, contact the Division of Public Relations and Communications at (502) 564-4696.

The department offers a farm and home safety plan at no charge. The plan contains useful safety tips and space for adding emergency contact information. To obtain a copy, call (502) 564-4696 or download the plan from the Department's website at www.kyagr.com.

When the veteran naturalist retires at the end of the month, that doesn't spell the end of the family's contribution to the park system. His son Paul is naturalist at Blue Licks Battlefield State Resort Park. (His older son, John, is a mechanical engineer at Toyota Motor Manufacturing in Georgetown.)

So what does life have in store beginning Aug. 1? Tierney, who is only 54, plans to do some writing and he and his wife, Lelana, plan to travel. And he doesn't rule out the possibility of helping out at the park he served for 30 years from time to time.

Becky Smith, the director of park system's recreation division, says John's scruffy hiking boots will be impossible to fill.

"He has been a role model and a mentor to the naturalist and recreation field staff over the years," she said.

LOCAL LONG DISTANCE INTERNET PAGING

My telephone service takes the time to understand my needs, and I like that. Far from treating me like just another customer, my telephone service recognizes that my telecommunications needs are not necessarily the same as my neighbor's. They take the time to find out which technologies will benefit me. And in most cases, they already have a package of services designed to meet my needs while saving me money. And I like that. That's why my telephone service is MTS.

What a better way to open up your college football season than playing a team many believe to be the front-runner for the national championship.

Huntington, West Virginia's Marshall Thundering Herd will open the 2001 season September 1 at Florida in "The Swamp" against the Gators. Yes, the SEC powerhouse Florida Gators.

The following week, Marshall plays host to Massachusetts. Yes, Massachusetts. Florida, then Massachusetts. Doesn't make any sense? Well, you see the Herd can play football, and everyone knows Florida can play football. One problem, Marshall plays in the MAC, Conference opponents for Marshall include Ohio, Bowling Green, Central Michigan, Akron, Kent State and a few others.

Don't get me wrong, all are capable institutions. But none are Floridas.

It will be good for the Thundering Herd to venture south. Recently I asked the question of would the game be a blowout or would it be an upset.

No question, it would take everything the Marshall football has in it, but it's possibly. I learned a long time ago, back in the Days of Division I-AA ball to never underestimate a Marshall football team. Never.

A prime example?
Last season.

Marshall opened the season with a 63-7 shellacking of Southeast Missouri State, back-to-back losses to Michigan State and North Carolina followed, with an open date between both setbacks. The Herd then beat conference foe Buffalo before losing two straight, bring their record to an uncharacteristic 2-3. Marshall turned it around October 21, 2000 when a 34-12 win over Kent triggered a four-game win streak, getting the Herd bowl eligible.

Getting the Herd bowl eligible? That usually happens earlier in the season. Doesn't it? About six, or maybe seven

The Knott County nine and ten-year-old Reds All-Star team won six games in three days at the recent Willie Mays AABC state tourney en route to the championship.

The Reds went a perfect 6-0 in the tournament as they claimed the win.

"I'm just so proud of these kids," said coach Rick Stamper. "We felt like we could compete, but the kids have to believe in themselves, and they all did a super job. After the first win, our confidence grew, and we played well throughout the tournament."

"It was a dream come true," added coach Brian Mullins.

A good crowd of fans made the trip to Boyd County to cheer the Reds on. Knott County began the tournament with a 15-1 win over Boyd County and finished strong

Jr. provides fans with the ultimate tribute

There is no denying that Dale Earnhardt's memory still dominates the sport of Winston Cup racing. Saturday night, July 7 at Daytona it was Dale Jr. doing the dominating at the track that brought his father some of the best and worst moments of his career.

The July trip back to Daytona International Speedway was a race that both fans and competitors had been dreading since the Daytona 500 in February. In between the two Daytona stops on the schedule there has been some type of tribute made to Dale Sr. at every track that kept the events of February 18 fresh in their minds.

It seemed that there wasn't an interview with a driver held that the question of Earnhardt's death didn't come up. Drivers weren't the only ones who couldn't escape the shadow that the untimely death had left on the series. Each week's television broadcast made sure that the events of the Daytona 500 stayed fresh in every race fan's mind.

In the week preceding the Pepsi 400, drivers suddenly began going public with the thought that it was time for the series to move on and put the Goodwrench driver's death behind them. It wasn't intended to sound cruel, but it was time for the grieving to become more private and let the series move on.

As soon as the competitors arrived at Daytona, everywhere they turned they were reminded of Dale Sr. It was as if the only was they could get him out of their sight was to crawl in their cars and race. Although the turn four wall had been painted where the accident took place, the skid marks were still visible on the track.

The sport needed closure and just like any other sport, closure can only be found on the field of battle. As it turned out closure came thanks to the efforts of a fallen champion's son. Dale Jr. had Applebee's Park in Lexington will provide the backdrop this year for special opening ceremonies for the Bluegrass Summer Games.

Hundreds of young athletes, their sights set on winning gold, silver and bronze medals in the 2001 Summer Games, will participate in a Parade of Athletes into the stadium at 7:30 p.m. Friday, July 27, for the official torch lighting. Applebee's Park is home to the new Lexington Legends baseball team.

To cheer athletes on, Rodger Bingham, Kentucky's contribution to Survivor-mania, will be the featured speaker for opening ceremonies. Bingham is known to many as "Kentucky Joe," one of the players in the popular reality TV show, Survivor 2.

"Every athlete who will participate in the Bluegrass State Games is invited to bring his or her own family to the opening ceremonies and get into the spirit of the Games," said Gov. Paul Patton, who will open the Games. The ceremonies are free and open to the public.

"There will be food available and fun things to do before the competition from the Oak Ridge, Tennessee. They joined the Class D Mountain States League in mid-season. They came into the league sporting a 24-11 record, and went on to finish the season with a 65-43 mark. This was good enough for second place in the league, and a trip to the playoffs. In their first year the Bombers made it all the way to the finals before falling to Morristown in five games.

The team did not fair so well in their first full year in Hazard. The Bombers struggled to get runs on the board and finished a disappointing fifth in the league with a 35-89 record.

In 1950, the Bombers joined the Brooklyn farm system, putting them in the first division. They finished in second place that year, but failed to win a single game in post-season play (dropping three straight to Middlesboro).

The following year, 1952, Hazard finished first in the standings but was unable to capture the playoffs. After a short five years in the league, the Bombers left Hazard and the league behind. In 1954, the Mountain States League folded ending minor league baseball in Eastern Kentucky.

Although short-lived, the Hazard franchise enjoyed a storied history. Sporting past and future major leaguers among its roster, a feat that few Class D locales could boast.

In 1951, Max Macon joined the Bombers as player-manager. Macon had played several years in the majors as a relief pitcher for the Cardinals and Dodgers during the 1930s. He also played first base for the 1944 Boston Braves. In 1951, Macon batted .409, third in the league, scored 139 runs, and had 148 RBIs.

Mumme's return...

by CLYDE BOLTON
THE BIRMINGHAM NEWS

"When I resigned the timing wasn't good," he said, referring to the 2001 season. "I got a substantial settlement, so I can pick and choose."

Was that Hal Mumme working with the young'uns at a football camp at the UAB practice field Wednesday?

It was, indeed. The former University of Kentucky coach is on the staff of the Lamonde Russell School of Football that has high school players learning the craft this week.

"He has basically revolutionized the passing game in America," Russellville High coach Perry Swindall said with a hint in his voice.

It's Swindall's friendship with Mumme that influence the passing man to help with the camp. "I like old Perry," Mumme said.

"I worked his camps at the University of Kentucky several times and got to know him," said Swindall, who is helping former Alabama receiver Lamonde Russell with the second annual School of Football.

In April, Mumme spoke at a clinic at the University of Oklahoma that Swindall attended. Swindall asked him to be on the Russell staff, and he accepted.

Mumme caused a stir in the Southeastern Conference when he introduced "Mummeball" in 1997. Among its components were the Air Raid Offense, gambling on fourth down and practices that rarely included full-scale scrimmaging.

His first squad beat Alabama and finished 5-6, his next one went 7-5 and played in the Outback Bowl. A club that went 6-6 and played in the Music City Bowl followed. It was the first time

Kentucky had fielded back-to-back bowl squads since Bear Bryant's 1949, 1950 and 1951 editions went bowling.

But Mumme's attempt to match Bryant's three of a kind failed miserably last year.

The Wildcats finished 2-9. Then Mumme resigned on Feb. 6 in the teeth of an NCAA investigation of the program that is still in progress. One of his assistants, Guy Morriss, was named head coach.

Don't weep for Hal:

Mumme, 49, hopes to coach again, but it won't be this year. But don't feel sorry for him as he watches from the sideline. His exit package from UK was over $1 million.

Caring for the wildlife around us

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

Virtually every Kentuckian enjoys watching wildlife on the water, in the fields, and around the woodlands of the state. Some Kentuckians have the opportunity to see wildlife in their backyards. While having wild animals so close to home is often desirable, putting out food for animals other than songbirds is not a good idea. It causes problems for the animals and people alike.

Ducks and geese, white-tailed deer, raccoons, foxes, opossums, skunks and squirrels are popular critters, and are often the targets of direct feeding to lure them within close viewing range. Common food items people set out in feeders or on the ground include corn or other grains, pet food or table scraps.

Wildlife that find such hand-outs near homes quickly learn to associate people or human dwellings with easily obtained food. "People who feed wildlife are usually well-meaning animal lovers," said Brian Clark, a wildlife biologist for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources (KDFWR). "What they may not realize, however, is that direct feeding creates a number of problems."

"For example," he continued, "many people feed bread crumbs to geese in city parks. The geese concentrate in access areas, creating a mess with their defecation and an ideal opportunity for the spread of the disease between the animals. The very bread they are fed may transmit a fungal disease to them. Geese can also become aggressive. None of us want a child to be intimidated or harmed by a wild animal, but this can happen when wildlife are feed directly."

Experience and research have shown that songbirds, such as northern cardinals and American goldfinches, are the only kind of wildlife that can be directly fed the appropriate seeds with little risk of negative repercussions. But even bird-feeders can be sources of disease, and should be periodically scrubbed clean with a brush and mild soapy water and disinfected with bleach water. Feeders came also be moved every few months so that a buildup of feces

For those who arrive early at Applebee's Park on July 27, there will be plenty of amusements in the parking lot, beginning at 3 p.m. There also will be a wide selection of food for purchase. Officials will also take registration at opening ceremonies for these sports: bowling, chess, cycling, horseshoes, shooting, track and field and the 5K race.

A VIP reception for sponsors and special guests will be held from 5-7 p.m. The torch, which runners will carry from Frankfort, is expected to arrive at Applebee's Park about 7:30 p.m.

Bingham, 54, a Grant County High School industrial arts teacher, a farmer and real estate investor, was one of 16 people tapped to play the Survivor 2 game in the Australian Outback. Although he did not win, he has become a popular speaker in the region around his hometown of Crittendon.

A sports fan, his favorite teams are the University of Kentucky basketball team and the Cincinnati Reds baseball team. He is an Eastern Kentucky University graduate, with bachelor and master's degrees in education. His wide-ranging career has also included being the chief executive officer of a bank, owner of lumber and hardware stores.

This will be the 17th year for the Games. Nearly 18,000 amateur athletes from 111 Kentucky counties participated in last year's Summer Games.

The Bluegrass State Games are designed to provide Kentuckians of all ages and abilities the opportunity to participate in statewide, family-oriented sports festivals styled after the Olympic Games. They are co-hosted by the Lexington-Fayette Urban County Government, the Commonwealth of Kentucky and the University of Kentucky.

Ashland Inc. and the Valvoline Company are founding sponsors of the Bluegrass State Games. Presenting sponsors are The Lexington Herald-

Other sponsors include Kentucky Utilities Co.; Lexington Convention and Visitors Bureau; Lexington Legends; Lexington Area Sports Authority; McDonald's of Central and Southeastern Kentucky; Central Bank; Marathon/Ashland; Frankfort Civic Center; Lexington Hotel-Motel Association; Radisson Plaza Hotel; CHA Health; Kentucky Broadcasters Association; The Kentucky Press Association; Kentucky Cable Telecommunications Association; KET-The Kentucky Network; Kentucky National Guard and Champions for a Drug-Free Kentucky.

dominated the race, but was forced to come from seventh to first in the final six laps after a crash during the final round of pit stops threatened to cost him the win.

On the restart it took him less than two laps to drive his Chevrolet around Johnny Benson and take the lead while the rest of the field was teaming up to make a run on him. His Chevrolet had been the dominant car all night, but with the restrictor plate racing it isn't always the best car that makes it across the finish line first. Jr. didn't have the all-important drafting partner to help him hold off the runs that were going to be made at him.

As Jr. was looking out his mirror to see who he was going to have to block, the sight of DEI teammate Michael Waltrip began to fill up the mirror. Waltrip thanks to a big push by Rusty Wallace was able to get up on Earnhardt's bumper and return the same favor that Dale Jr. did for him when he won the Daytona 500.

The win may have been enough for the series to climb out from under Dale Sr.'s shadow, but the post race celebration made sure that Winston Cup was able and ready to move forward. Just like his father, Dale Jr. turned donuts in the well-maintained infield grass of the track and then went one step farther, when he stopped his car and jumped on top.

It wasn't long before he was embraced by his father's long time gasman Danny "Chocolate" Myers and his own crew. The scene was made complete when Waltrip parked his car beside Earnhardt's and the two climbed on top and hugged. The celebration continued as all three of DEI's and Richard Childress Racing's crewmembers joined in the frenzy.

The sight of Waltrip and Earnhardt hugging was indeed the moment the sport has needed for the last five months. It was like a bridge from the past to the present. Michael was finally getting to celebrate his success at the track and Dale Jr. was showing ever time that it was all right to move on.

As the tears flowed at the track and at home in front of the TV, the burden that the sport had been carrying around suddenly began to get lighter. It was now time for the sport to move on. Dale Jr. not only gave the sport what it needed; he also gave his late father the one tribute that only he could provide.

Mumme

"When I resigned the timing wasn't good," he said, referring to the 2001 season. "I got a substantial settlement, so I can pick and choose."

Would he accept a job as an assistant? "Never say never," Mumme answered, "but I'm pretty set in my ways. I'd rather be a head coach."

Will he be antsy this season since he's on the outside looking in? "Probably," Mumme said. "I'm going to see some games this fall and study and see how other people do things and hopefully get a job after the season."

Mumme said he wouldn't discuss the problems with the NCAA, but he did say: "We made some mistakes. At Kentucky the bar is high when it comes to compliance and NCAA rules. I didn't do any of that stuff, but you have to take responsibility some times. Somebody had to do it"

Mumme won at Iowa Wesleyan and Valdosta State before accepting the Kentucky job. He said he isn't sorry he went to Kentucky. "It's like the words in the Garth Brooks song, 'You could have missed the pain, but you would have missed the dance. I wouldn't want to have missed the dance.'"

Mumme said his offensive system evolved over the years, noting, "We started doing it in high school in Texas."

he described it as "kind of a hybrid between BYU and some stuff Bill Walsh did with the San Francisco 49ers."

Its basis is "throwing short passes to set up everything else."

One of the memorable games of the Mumme era occurred on Oct. 4, 1997, in Lexington. Kentucky beat Mike Dubose's Alabama 40-34 in overtime.

"That was a fun night for Kentucky," Mumme said. "Tim Couch had a great game...It could have gone either way. It's remembered because Kentucky hadn't beaten Alabama in so long."

Can Kentucky win regularly? "Sure," Mumme said. "We were winning. We just had a bad year.

games into the campaign? Well, last season was different.

Replacing Chad Pennington was by no means an easy thing to do. Given the situation and the time of Pennington's departure, his void was a much bigger one to fill than that left by Randy Moss.

How about the local kids we've got down there?

Prestonsburg's Nathan Leslie is giving a great push for a starting position on the defensive line as he gets set to head into the fall number two on the depth chart at a defensive tackle slot.

Former Sheldon Clark Cardinal Joey Stepp is reportedly on scholarship now. The center position at Marshall is thin

This would have been the first year I would have had all my players."

Jared Lorenzen, the huge quarterback who led the SEC in total offense and passing yards, will be a sophomore this season.

"Lorenzen made some great plays and he made some mistakes," Mumme said. "But that's the only way to learn. He has a great future."

Just how big is Lorenzen? "Last year he weighed 275 or 280, depending on what day you were catching him," Mumme said. "If you caught him on weekends after he had a few pizzas it was 280."

on numbers at the current time therefore Stepp could also see some valuable playing time this season.

Johnson Central alum Jesse Peck is working hard and will be ready to suit up this fall after a series of nagging injuries that ranged from severe to mild.

It's an exciting time to be a football fan. The month of August is less than two weeks away and with it will come the high school football season. Some college football will get started at the end of the month. Come September, everything from the pee-wee ranks up through the pros will be going full steam ahead. You gotta love it!

Bentley's Comments...

by RICK BENTLEY
TIMES COLUMNIST

Thursday night, the second half of the 2001 baseball season began with all 30 teams in action. But of those 30, how many are still in the race for their division title?

Very few, for my money. Of the 24 teams not leading their respective division, a mere five were within five games of the leader. San Francisco is in third place in the National League West, and is 5.5 games back.

Does this mean the divisions are determined? Not quite. Several good races are promised, both for the division titles and the wild card slots.

Today, we will take a look at each race, giving some predictions and other information which we hope will prove to be insight.

NL East. Leader: Philadelphia, by 1 game over Atlanta. My Winner: Atlanta. Some analysis: Atlanta has been charging up the standings for more than a month now, and the locker room got its collective spirit lifted when the whole John Rocker situation was laid to rest a few weeks ago. Says here, the Braves aren't finished yet. Look for more action from John Schuerholz, especially if the Phillies continue to hang around.

The Phillies are a nice club, but are thrilled to be where they are. The Braves don't like being in regular-season races, and I'm sure Schuerholz, Bobby Cox and Co. would like to add one more ring to the collection. Ken Caminiti was a nice addition, but I don't think he'll be the last.

First to worst?: The Mets represented the NL in last year's World Series, but came out of the break only a half-game in front of last place Montreal.

NL Central. Leader: Chicago (!) by 3 over Houston. My Winner: Depends. If Fred McGriff accepts the deal to the Windy City, it could be a nail in the coffin of the Astros. If not, look for Houston to overcome. More Analysis: Yes, St. Louis is still over .500 and only eight games back, but just look at the last 10 games of the teams in this division. In that small window, the Cubs added at least two games on the bottom four teams, while the Cardinals put a minimum of four games between second and the rest. Yes, there's more to this than if the Cubs get help at first, but that help could go a long way. The Crime Dog can do it. He provided a big boost to Atlanta in 1993, and could do the same for Herbst's Cubbies.

Bottom's up: And then there's Cincinnati NL West. Leader: Arizona by 3 over Los Angeles. My Winner: Arizona.

Analysis: I came this close to picking San Francisco to come back from third to first down the stretch, but didn't for two reasons. One, Barry Bonds supposed chase of 70 home runs has been a distraction, and if it gets off the respirator, will continue to be. Second, if Bonds doesn't come around, the Giants have no chance. I don't like the Dodger chances much, which leaves the D-Backs, who stumbled to the break, dropping four straight. Did you know: At the break, Los Angeles had scored 411 runs, and had given up 411 runs.

AL East. Leader: New York by 1.5 over Baltimore. My Winner: Yawn. Some Analysis: First, the Yankees have the best manager in the game in Joe Torre.

Second, they've won the last 13 World Series. Third, the closest competitor is Boston.

Anybody down there?: If Tampa Bay, baseball's worst, was in the same division as Seattle, it's best, the Devil Rays would already be 36.5 games out. Ouch.

AL Central. Leader: Minnesota by 5 over Cleveland. My Winner: Cleveland. A Little Look: OK, so I'm among those who still doubt the Twinkies. Sue me. Cleveland isn't great in my book, and I truly love Minnesota manager Tom Kelly. But I still think the Tribe is the best team in this division.

Home cooking: Johnson Central grad Willie Blair calls this division home, for now. The Paintsville native is winless in four decisions since being signed on June 16 from the Cleveland organization. That's bad. But his ERA is 11.94. That's painful. AL West. Leader: Seattle by 19

(19!) over Oakland. My Winner: Are you kidding? 19 games! Analysis: Analysis? What analysis? Seattle had a quarter of the all-star team and should have probably had more. Lou Piniella's club has lost the Big Unit, A-Rod and Junior in recent years, but in 2001 it has what it always lacked: quality pitching.

But can he pitch?: A-Rod is $250 million richer for signing with the Rangers, but he's also 28 games behind his former club. Where's Marty when I need a great big ol' have mercy?

Wild Cards: I don't have room to go into why there should be no wild cards, so let's get to it. The leaders of the non-leaders are Atlanta in the NL and Boston in the AL. My Non-Winners: In the NL, if the Cubs win the Central, take the Phillies. If it's Houston, my money is on the Cubs (I have to pacify Herbst somehow). In the AL, it's Boston or Minnesota, and I'll take the Sox.

In the end: Let's gather back here in October, when I'll be knee deep in football and will both gloat over my correct efforts here and offer lame excuses for my shame. Personally, I can't wait.

About the American Amateur Baseball Congress...

TIMES STAFF REPORT

The American Amateur Baseball Congress (AABC) is the largest amateur baseball organization in the United States for players above junior league baseball age and the only amateur baseball program, which provides progressive and continuous organized competition - sub teens through adults. It is coordinated with other programs through USA Baseball and the American Baseball Coaches Association.

Founded in 1935, it is now composed of seven (7) different age divisions in the states, Puerto Rico and Canada.

The American Amateur Baseball Congress operates under a league concept as opposed to an all star concept. A league is competed of at least four teams playing a minimum of nine (9) league games. The winner of each league advances on to state tournament play. The winner from the state tournament advances on to regional play and from there to the World Series.

Oertel named new head tennis coach at Eastern

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

Rob Oertel has been named new head coach of the men's and women's tennis teams at Eastern Kentucky University.

Oertel comes to ECU after serving in head coaching positions at the University of Denver and Indiana State. At Denver, Oertel served as the head coach for the men's and women's programs and established a highly competitive Division I program.

As the men's coach at ISU, he coached the men's team to a national ranking. Oertel compiled a 127-118 overall record during his 11 seasons in the Division I coaching ranks. In 1995, he was selected as the Missouri Valley Conference Coach of the Year.

"Rob is an enthusiastic coach who will bring a great deal of energy to the tennis program," said ECU athletics director Chip Smith. "We are very pleased to have someone with his experience and demonstrated success join our staff."

A graduate of the University of Wisconsin, Oertel earned NCAA All-American status in singles and doubles and has been a member of the UW-Stout Athletic Hall of Fame since 1996.

Holtzclaw joins women's basketball staff

TIMES STAFF REPORT

Marshall University women's head basketball coach Royce Chadwick has a new assistant coach. Kidada Holtzclaw has joined the Thundering Herd staff as an assistant coach.

Holtzclaw, 25, will oversee on-campus recruiting, travel, and summer camps for the program. She spent the last two seasons as a graduate assistant under Chadwick at Stephen F. Austin University.

Prior to her stint at SFA, Holtzclaw played guard for the University of Alabama where she helped the Crimson Tide to four consecutive NCAA Tournament appearances. She holds a B.S. in Human Performances from Alabama and has a M.S. in Kinesiology from Stephen F. Austin.

"I wanted the opportunity to continue to work under coach Chadwick," said Holtzclaw. "I also wanted to help meet the challenge of taking this program to another level."

"I'm very excited to have Kidada on our staff," said Chadwick. "Her playing experience in the Southeastern Conference and work with a Top 25 program at Stephen F. Austin will truly be an asset to our staff."

Holtzclaw joins former Stephen F. Austin assistant Roxanne White and former New Mexico State head man John Sutherland as assistants at Marshall.

"This is truly the best staff I have ever been a part of," said Chadwick.

Wildlife

does not present a problem.

Those who wish to help wildlife should focus their efforts on habitat conservation and improvement, rather than feeding. "In reality, food is rarely a limiting factor for the most commonly fed wild animals," Clark explained. "Suitable cover to accommodate these animals' travel, escape, resting, and reproductive needs is far more in demand than food."

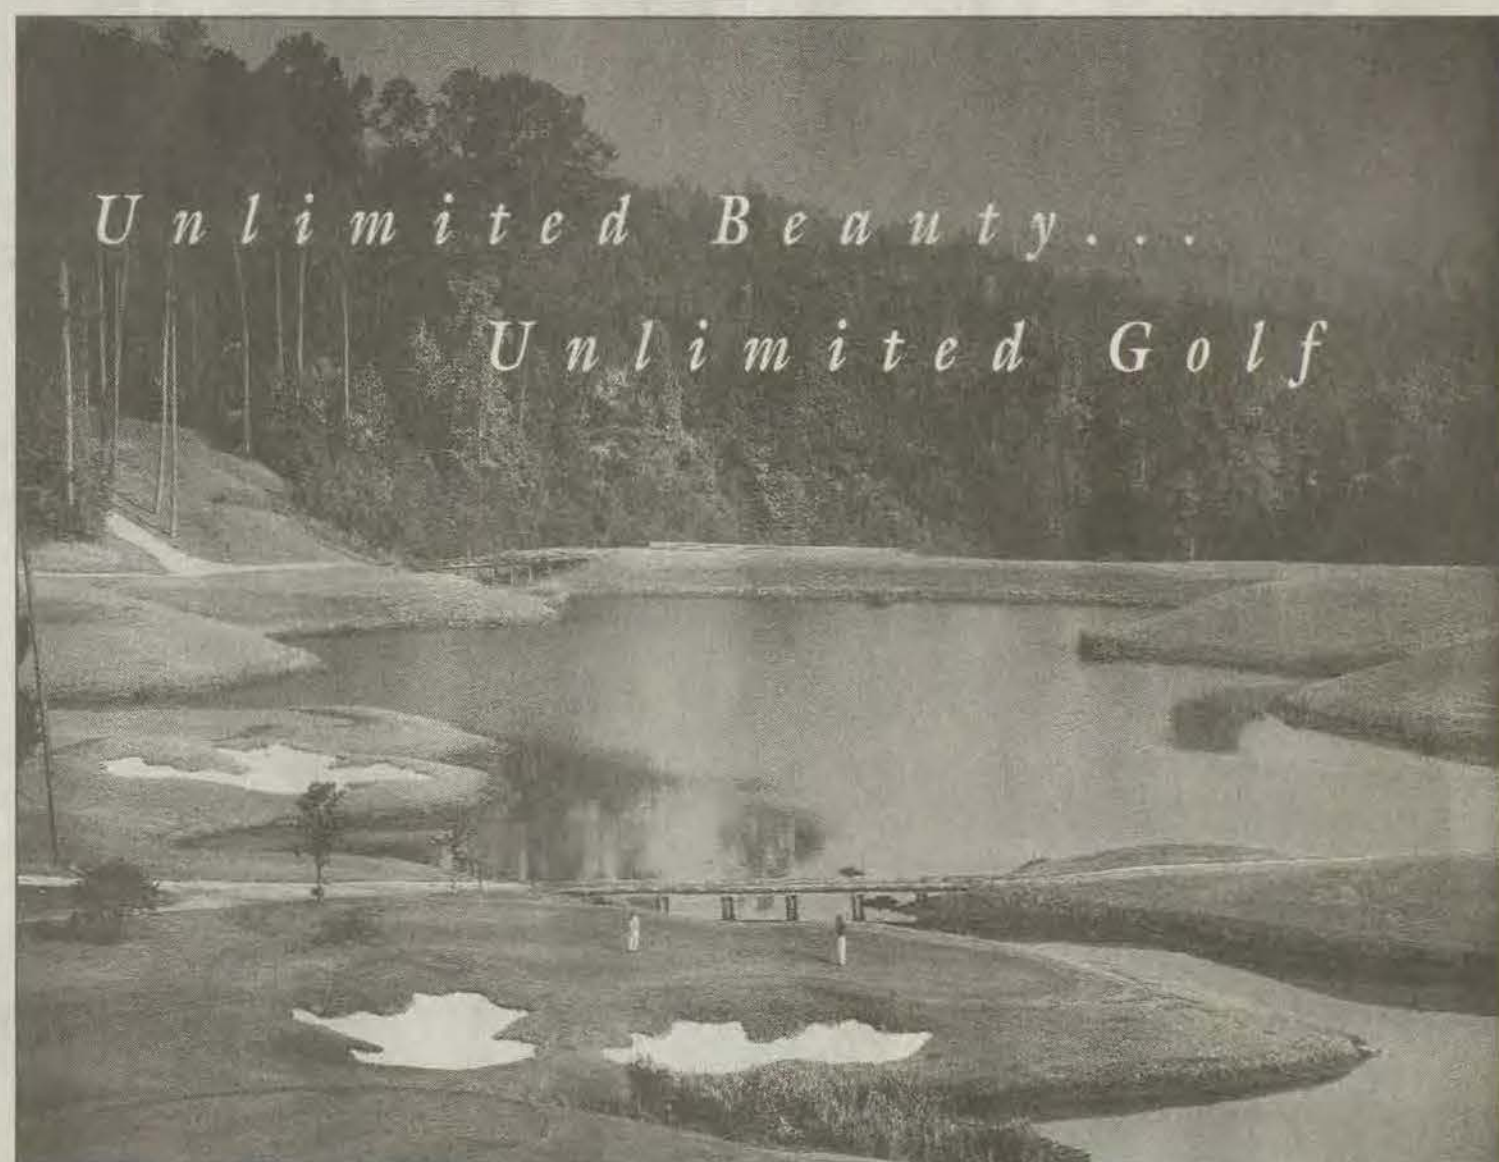

Kentuckians can be good neighbors to wildlife not only by providing the right habitat, but in other ways, too. One is by exercising care when disposing of trash. Trash should be secured in containers that keep wildlife out. This may simply mean placing a bungee cord across a trash can lid and fastening it to the containers handles. Another neighborly practice is being a responsible pet owner. Pets should be fed at regular times and inside a home or garage so that food is not left outside for wildlife to exploit.

In addition, pets should not be allowed to roam free in urban areas. Pets such as cats, small breed dogs, and their young may be easy prey to predators such as coyotes, and may encourage the predators to frequent residential areas. Domestic house cats and stray cats also kill millions of songbirds, amphibians, and other animals each year.

A final step people can take to help wildlife is not attempting to rescue young or injured animals. "Usually, young birds or mammals that people see alone are still being cared for by their parents," Clark explained, "even if they are not in sight, only in rare instances where parent animal(s) are known to be dead, such as from vehicles striking them, should people intervene. people concerned about orphaned or injured animals should first contact their local Animal Control office to determine if there is a wildlife rehabilitator in their area who is permitted and capable of caring for the animal(s). Untrained people often put themselves and the animals they want to help at risk by trying to approach them."

The best way to help wildlife is habitat improvement. For more information, call 1-800-858-1549, or visit the KDFWR website at www.kdfwr.state.ky.us.

Castle to return to St. Catherine

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

Johnson Central alumnus Heath Castle is set to return to Saint Catherine College for his sophomore season the baseball diamond.

Castle, a freshman left-handed pitcher from Nippa, was drafted by the Chicago White Sox in the 32nd round of this year's Major League Baseball draft. He helped lead the patriots to a 36-13 record this past season.

After drafting Castle the White Sox organization began looking for a place for the south-paw to play. It now appears that Castle will go unsigned and return to the collegiate level.

Saint Catherine College offers the only NJCAA baseball program in the state. SCC has made a habit of sending graduates to four-year colleges and universities. The Patriots have won 138 games over the past three seasons and have been ranked in the top ten nationally.

Moving on to a four-year college or university is also a possibility for Castle. The University of Tennessee is one school that has shown great interest dating back to his high school playing days.

Castle played his first season at St. Catherine under head coach Brad Shelton. This season he will play under the watchful eye of Luther Bramblett. Shelton took a position at another in-state institution, Cumberland College. Bramblett comes over from Campbellsville University.

Bramblett leaves Campbellsville after a three-year tenure as an assistant. In those three years, Bramblett and the Tigers won 92 games and captured a Mid-South Conference championship in 2000.

This will be Bramblett's first head coaching position. "It has been a goal of mine for years," said Bramblett. "I'm extremely excited at the opportunities at Saint Catherine. I've got some big shoes to fill."

Bramblett was also an assistant at North Florida Community College in Madison, Fla. in 1997 and an assistant at Freed-Hardeman University 1995-96.

A 1994 graduate of Campbellsville University, Bramblett was a pitcher and a middle infielder for the Tiger baseball program. He graduated with a B.S. in History and a B.S. in Communications. He completed a masters in education from Freed-Hardeman university in 1997.

Castle will return to the St. Catherine campus in August.

U of L radio voice fired by WHAS

Broadcaster Jock Sutherland, a fixture at courtside for University of Louisville basketball games for 19 years, has been fired, WLKY-TV in Louisville reported on Wednesday.

Sutherland told WKLY that the decision was made by WHAS radio and its owner, Clear Channel Communications Inc.

The former high school basketball coach said he was told last week that Clear Channel was looking for a new color commentator to go with play-by-play man Paul Rogers. No other information about the decision or Sutherland's contract has been made available.

Sutherland said he wasn't bitter about the decision but would have liked to broadcast U of L games this upcoming season, Rick Pitino's first as U of L coach.

"I'm a great Pitino fan, that's why I got so excited when Pitino came," he said. "It's going to be a very exciting time there. I just think it would have been fun to be a part of it."

Sutherland coached the Lexington Lafayette boys basketball team to a 1979 state title.

UK volleyball signs Illinois transfer

TIMES STAFF REPORT

The University of Kentucky volleyball program has announced the signing of Anne Koester, a junior transfer from Illinois. Koester, a 6-4 right-side hitter, played in 36 matches during her two-year career at Illinois. She hit .244 last season and ranked third on the team with 259 kills. Koester was also third on the team in blocking, averaging 0.6 blocks per game. The Muncie, Ind. native was granted a release from her scholarship in April by Illini officials. "I am thrilled to have Anne Koester join our program," Coach Jona Braden said. "She brings a wealth of experience and knowledge to the right side of our offensive system. She is deeply committed to becoming the best that she can be."

Koester was a four-year letterwinner at Burriss Lab School in Muncie, where she earned All-State status during her junior and senior seasons. Her team won its conference championship each year that Koester lettered and was the state champion in 1997 and 1998, while winning the High School Season National Championship in 1997.

Koester was named Academic All-Big Ten in 2000 and was named a James Bayne Scholar at Illinois in 2000 and 2001.

"Her enthusiasm for learning is inspiring," Braden said. "Not only does she provide many strengths on the court, but she is an incredible example of pursuing excellence in the classroom. I am really looking forward to working with Anne."

With the one-time transfer rule in college volleyball, Koester is eligible to play immediately.

Medicare AND YOU

Donna R. Morton
Medicare Beneficiary
Outreach Coordinator
AdminStar Federal

The agency that runs the Medicare and joint federal-state Medicaid programs has a new name! Formerly known as the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA), the federal agency is now known as the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services or CMS.

The new name was announced on June 14 by the Secretary of Health and Human Services, Tommy G. Thompson and is part of the first wave of efforts to reform and strengthen the services and information available to nearly 70 million people with Medicare and Medicaid and the health care providers who serve them.

Secretary Thompson said, "We're making quality service the number one priority in this agency." "These sweeping reforms will strengthen our programs and enable our dedicated employees to better serve Medicare and Medicaid beneficiaries, as well as health care providers."

Among other efforts, the reform will include a restructure of the agency around three centers that reflect the agency's major line of business. The three new business centers being created are the Center for Beneficiary Choices, the Center for Medicare Management, and the Center for Medicaid and State Operations.

During the fall of 2001 the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services will launch a national media campaign to highlight the health care options and information resources available. Additionally, the 1-800-MEDICARE call centers will begin to offer service 24-hours a day, seven days a week. The toll-free phone number currently works only during business hours.

In the months to come, watch for the new name, Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, on any papers you receive from your Medicare contractor and remember to call 1-800-MEDICARE anytime you have Medicare questions!

Have questions about Medicare? Call 1-800-MEDICARE (1-800-633-4227), TTY/TDD 1-877-486-2048 (toll free for the hearing impaired), or visit www.medicare.gov on the internet.

Hall named new community CEO at McDowell ARH

Trena Hall

Appalachian Regional Healthcare, Inc. has announced that Trena Hall has been named as the new Community CEO for McDowell ARH. Hall had been serving in an interim capacity prior to the announcement. She will lead the ARH functions in the Floyd County area. Hall possesses a strong clinical and administrative background, having served most recently as Associate Administrator at the Hazard ARH Regional Medical Center. Hall has been affiliated with ARH for 24 years. She began her career with ARH in 1977 as a registered nurse at the Whitesburg ARH Hospital. She subsequently held various nursing management positions before transferring to the Hazard ARH Regional Medical Center in 1990 where she the positions of Assistant Director of Nursing and Assistant Administrator before becoming Associate Administrator. Hall holds an associate degree in nursing from Morehead State University, as well as bachelor and master's degrees from the University of Kentucky College of Nursing.

A native of Knott County, Hall resides in Hindman with her husband, Jerry, and their two children. She serves on various regional advisory boards with a long history of service to area community colleges and technical schools.

As McDowell's Community CEO, Hall will be administratively responsible for all ARH healthcare services in the McDowell community, including McDowell ARH Hospital, McDowell Professional Services Clinic, McDowell ARH Home Health Services and the McDowell ARH Home Care Store.

Appalachian Regional Healthcare is a not-for-profit healthcare system with hospitals, clinics, home health agencies and home care stores in Eastern Kentucky and Southern West Virginia.

NAIC Bluegrass chapter investors fair August 4, 2001

The Four Points Hotel Sheraton, in Lexington, will be the scene of an all day Investors Fair hosted by the Bluegrass N.A.I.C. Chapter. Planned for August 4, many companies have already committed to setting up booth displays. Representatives will be on hand to answer questions as well as hand out company brochures. Attending the Fair will be a good way for people interested in investing, as well as seasoned investors, to glean specific information about the companies. Though NAIC members already know the importance of meeting company representatives, it is also a very good time for those who are interested in investing to have the same opportunity.

Scheduled keynote speakers from Cemex Corporation and from CenturyTel Inc. will occupy the podium along with Ralph Seger of Seger-Elvekorg, an independent consulting firm, and author of the "Repair Shop" articles in Better Investing Magazine. Also in the works and speaking for Value Line will be Steve Sanborn. A first for the Fair as well as for those coming to it will be a mystery guest who will talk about a new investment opportunity coming to the Bluegrass (which will have a name by the time of the Fair).

Lunch is included in the cost of $20 for N.A.I.C. members; $25 for non-members registering by August 1; and $30 for entry at the door on a space available basis. Visitors can also choose to sit at the various tables at which company representatives will be seated.

Door prizes will be given throughout the day as well as company logo items (I am still smarting from arriving too late one year to receive a neat all-in-one tool worth many times the cost of the luncheon). Among the prizes were shares in a company that was featured that year. This year free copies of Bull and Bear, a financial periodical will be given away to each visitor.

For further information, as well as purchase of tickets, you may call chapter contact Mary Cordray at (859) 272-1663, or Program Organizer, Jocelyn Dickson at (859)-293-0810.

Nominations now open for inaugural Kentucky Industry of the Year Awards

Nominations are now being accepted for the inaugural Kentucky Industry of the Year Awards, cosponsored by Ashland Inc., and Associated Industries of Kentucky (AIK).

"Kentucky industries make enormous contributions to the quality of life in our state," said Andrew Meko, AIK president/CEO. "The Kentucky Industry of the Year Awards are being instituted to showcase entrepreneurial spirit, community leadership and policy contributions made by Kentucky industry to the economic success of our Commonwealth."

The 2001 Kentucky Industry of the Year Award winners will be announced on Friday, November 2, during AIK's 90th Anniversary Celebration at the Seelbach Hotel in Louisville. The award will be presented in two categories—companies with 100 or fewer employees (small industry) and companies with more than 100 employees (large industry).

"We are delighted that AIK has chosen to begin its 90th year of service to Kentucky business by showcasing businesses that contribute to the economic success of this great state," said Ashland Inc. vice-president Martha Johnson. "Without a doubt, Kentucky is blessed with hundreds of small and large companies that are world-class in their industry. We urge all Kentuckians to nominate those outstanding companies in their communities," Johnson said.

The selection of the award winners will be accomplished by a "blue ribbon" panel of distinguished judges representing businesses, educational institutions and trade associations. The selection committee is chaired by Martha Johnson, vice-president of Ashland Inc., in Covington. Members include Dr. Keith Bird, Chancellor, Technical Colleges, Kentucky Community and Technical College System; Ken Carroll, executive director, Bluegrass State Skills Corporation; Vicki Ladit, president, Ladit Consulting Services, Paducah; Michael Mountjoy, managing director, Carpenter & Mountjoy, Louisville; Lisa Payne, economic development executive; LG&E Energy Corporation, Louisville; and James Graham, director of the information Technology Resource Center (ITRC) at the University of Louisville Shelby Campus.

Anyone may nominate an industry or business located in Kentucky. Self-nominations are encouraged. To maintain impartiality, AIK staff will handle only logistics for the selection committee.

Criteria for the award include:

- Recognized leadership in making a key contribution to the community where the company is located through increased investment and new jobs;

- Innovative and entrepreneurial leadership in products, production methods or services;

- Active involvement in legislative issues which impact Kentucky business and industry; and

- Dedication to the industrial community by participation in organizations which advance industry and manufacturing.

Nominations must be received by mail or fax on or before Friday, September 7. For more information or to obtain a nomination form, visit www.aik.org or call AIK at 800-745-3144.

AIK was established in 1911 as a trade association dedicated to advancing the employers' point of view on issues that affect their cost of doing business. In addition to lobbying expertise in Washington and Frankfort, the association offers multiple services to members including AIK Comp, the association's workers' compensation fund; employee benefit programs, seminars and educational programs, discount programs, publications and the state's oldest and most comprehensive survey of wages and related practices.

Burke named president, general manager of Kentucky West Virginia Gas

Jefferson C. Burke has been named President and General Manager of Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company, a natural gas production and distribution unit of Equitable Resources, Inc. (NYSE:EQT) headquartered in Prestonsburg, Kentucky.

Burke, a native of Perry County, joined Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company in 1981 as an engineer in the company's geology department. He has served as project engineer, manager of plans and surveys and, most recently, as manager of pipeline operations.

He received his bachelor of science degree in civil engineering from the University of Kentucky, and is a licensed professional engineer.

A resident of East Point, KY., Burke is a member of the Kentucky Oil & Gas Association, Kentucky Gas Association, National Society of Professional Engineers and the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Equitable Resources, headquartered in Pittsburgh, is an integrated energy company with emphasis on Appalachian area natural gas production, natural gas transmission and distribution and leading-edge energy management services for customers throughout the United States.

Personnel Cabinet accommodates increasing workload

FRANKFORT — Effective August 1, the Division of Staffing Services in the Kentucky Personnel Cabinet in Frankfort will no longer interview and counsel applicants on Tuesdays. Applicants may continue to visit the office four days per week — Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday — except on regularly scheduled holidays when all state offices are closed.

The workload of the Division of Staffing Services has increased by approximately 252 percent over the last three years, and employees need more time to review and process applications and other requests. Each Tuesday, the division will process agency mail and review applications received through mail, e-mail and by fax. The additional time that staff will have on Tuesdays will allow them to more adequately and regularly analyze applications and state agencies' requests for personnel actions.

Most of the division's increased workload has come from applications received from the general public through email applications, fax and U. S. mail, as well as agency requests. The number of walk-in applicants has remained relatively steady during the last three years, running between 33,000 and 36,000 per year.

"The division has experienced a shift in the demand for services due to the internet and email," said Singer Buchanan, deputy secretary of the Personnel Cabinet. "Technological advances have opened up new ways to access our services and this new electronic applicant has caused us to re-prioritize our efforts and ensure we are meeting the demands of our customers."

During the last three years, the number of applicants applying for state positions has steadily increased and has reached a high of 232,000 per year. Considering the number of individuals hired for merit positions each year, which has averaged about 7,800, the ratio of applicants to jobs filled is very high.

On average, there are approximately 30 applicants for every vacancy, but there are considerably more applicants for most merit positions that are advertised. Some advertised positions have drawn several hundred applicants and a few have drawn several thousand applicants. For some hard to fill positions, especially those at the higher professional levels, there are fewer than 30 applicants per vacancy.

Approximately 3.36 percent of all applicants who apply are hired in state merit positions.

In addition to being closed to walk-in applicants for interviews and counseling on Tuesdays, the Division of Staffing Services will no longer provide testing on Tuesdays for applicants for state merit positions.

For more information, call the Division of Staffing Services at 502-564-8030, or contact them through the Personnel Cabinet's general email site at www.state.ky.us/agencies/personnel/pershome.htm.

Technology programs win national awards

FRANKFORT — Two of Kentucky's major technology services to public schools were recognized recently as programs that greatly improve government services, the Kentucky Department of Education announced today.

Civic.com, a print and web-based magazine focused on state and local government technology, selected 50 programs across the U.S. that showed outstanding technology innovation and improvement of services. Kentucky had five award winners, with two in the school technology arena:

- ARTIMIS Traveler Advisory Telephone Service (Transportation Cabinet)
- IFTA Internet Tax Filing (Transportation Cabinet)
- Internet Caching System (Department of Education)
- KYCares.net (Cabinet for Health Services)
- Student Technology Leadership Program (Department of Education)

These programs, along with the other 45, will serve as models for programs throughout the country.

"The Internet Caching System provides every district office, school, classroom, teacher and student with the most reliable and fastest possible access to instructional Internet information and resources," said David Couch, associate commissioner of the department's Office of Education Technology. "The power of the system's design is when one person in any Kentucky school goes to an Internet site for the first time, it automatically speeds up the access to that same information for every other school in Kentucky by 30 to 70 percent."

The Internet Caching System enables any teacher to build an electronic library within a school, guaranteeing availability to a website even if the school's data line is down that day. It also allows students and teachers to download large images before class begins so that it only takes a few seconds to load during class.

"The Student Technology Leadership Program (STLP) helps students gain skills that are valuable in their classrooms and to their schools," said Elaine Harrison, STLP coordinator. "No other state has such an extensive and widespread opportunity for basic and advanced technology skills for children. "STLP also is key to Kentucky's ability to create entrepreneurs and skilled contributors to the community while students are in school and when they graduate."

Students in STLP assist with schools' e-mail systems, network management and website creation and management. They also provide a software help desk and hands-on assistance to teachers and other students and develop and implement instructional and community projects. STLP is in 165 Kentucky school districts, and one of the main goals of the Kentucky Education Technology System is to have all 176 districts involved.

Civic.com is published by the FCW Government Technology Group, a part of 101communications, a California-based media company focused exclusively on the information technology market.

Polluck to chair MSU's Department of Elementary reading

After serving in the post on an interim basis, Dr. Mary Anne Curry Pollock has been named chair of Morehead State University's Department of Elementary, Reading and Special Education, effective August 1.

With a specialty in reading, Dr. Pollock was awarded a contract with the Pike County Middle School and Secondary Reading Academy to provide intensive and on-going professional development for 28 teachers in 17 schools to promote reading across the curriculum. This program, for which she has served as director, is being used across the state as a model for other districts.

She has provided inservice professional development programs for teachers in numerous other counties throughout eastern Kentucky including Boyd, Elliott, Greenup, Johnson, Knott, Lewis, Magoffin, Mason, Morgan, Nicholas, Owsley, Rowan and Wolfe counties for more than 10 years. She was a consultant for Wolfe County Middle School in completing a reading curriculum audit, as well as with selected teachers at Ashland Independent Schools to aid in the selection of reading materials.

A student adviser for those participating in Kentucky Teacher Internship Program, Dr. Pollock has made presentations at more than 30 professional conferences. Along with her colleagues, she received the Standards-Based Teacher Education Program (STEP) grant to revise the teacher education program to conform to P-12 standards, and the KERA/TEP mini-grant to examine the observation instrument used in the Kentucky Teacher Internship Program.

On the campus, she has been involved in various University committees, as well as those in her college and department, that studied teaching, student orientation, teacher education and graduate recruitment. She was a member of the internal reorganization committee, CEBS Accreditation Audit Committee and NCATE Writing Committee, serving as chair of the governance and resources subcommittee. She also has served as chair of the Professional Development Committee.

Active in various professional organizations, Dr. Pollock is a member of the International Reading Association at the national and state levels; National Council for Teachers of English/Language Arts; National and Kentucky middle school associations; Phi Kappa Phi; and Phi Delta Kappa and Delta Kappa Gamma, for which she is past president.

Dr. Pollock, who holds the rank of associate professor, came to the University in 1977 as instructor of education in the kindergarten unit at University Breckinridge Training School. She moved to the former Department of Elementary and Early Childhood Education in fall 1978; then to the previous Department of Curriculum and Instruction, now ERSE.

A graduate of Union College where she earned a bachelor's degree in church music, Dr. Pollock received a Master of Arts degree in education with an emphasis in reading from MSU in 1977. A Winchester native, she completed the Doctor of Education degree in curriculum and instruction with an emphasis in reading from the University of Kentucky in 1988.

QUICKSAND — In 1925, farmers and university officials gathered at Quicksand in Eastern Kentucky to dedicate a new experiment station. Later on, a two-day event near Robinson Forest featured hog calling, a mule show, fruits and vegetables, and farm products.

On Thursday, people will once again gather at the University of Kentucky Robinson Station to celebrate. It's a special field day to honor the Station's 75th Anniversary, and while there won't be hog calling or a mule show, there will be a variety of farm products and fruits and vegetables being grown.

Field day celebrates UK station's 75th anniversary

"We've got tours that cover vegetable gardening, growing cantaloupes, peppers, blackberries, blueberries, beans, and flowers," said Mason Morrison, special projects coordinator for the UK Cooperative Extension Service. "Planning for the event has been going on all year. We hope to have some of our former superintendents and employees back to join us for the celebration."

In addition to horticulture tours, the day also will be filled with tours on forages, corn, round bale silage, tobacco, fertigation, bermudagrass, and weed control. The Woodcenter will feature sessions on portable sawmills, forest products, and computer integration in forest products manufacturing. Another highlight will be a demonstration of hay baling equipment specially designed for small farms.

"We'll be cutting and baling hay using an Italian-made mini hay baler," said Betty King, UK Extension specialist for Rural Economic Development. "There are only two of these small balers in the country and both of them are here in Kentucky."

As part of field day festivities, the Robinson Station will also host meetings of the Kentucky Agricultural Advancement Council and the state's Women Involved Agriculture group. Events start at 1 p.m. on July 19. The public is encouraged to be there. If you would like to attend contact your county Extension office.

"There's no advance registration or fee but we encourage people to let their Extension office know so we can plan properly for meals," said Morrison. "This event is going to be something very special and we hope to have a large turnout."

The Robinson Station is located at Quicksand in Breathitt County, three miles south of Jackson. Take Highway 15 and look for the blue bridge and sign.

Kentucky legislators visit Governors Scholars

DANVILLE — A pair of legislators from Kentucky visited Centre Tuesday, July 10, and applauded the efforts of the students of the Governors Scholars Program.

State Rep. and House Majority Floor Leader Greg Stumbo of Prestonsburg and Sen. Lindy Casebier of Bullitt County attended the inaugural "Legislators-in-Residence" program.

They joined students in class before having a question-and-answer session at Old Carnegie. A big part of the discussion centered on the Kentucky Education Reform Act of 1990.

Stumbo and Casebier said it wasn't a perfect bill, but they have seen positive results.

"KERA is about opportunity," Stumbo said. "I come from a troubled district, a poor district. There are 17 students participating (at Governors Scholars) from my district. Before KERA, many of them wouldn't have had that chance. They are seeing a difference."

Casebier, stressing one of KERA's main goals, told the students that improving their writing and communication skills is important, and that their future employers would be looking for these skills. Both legislators suggested that students learn to be effective leaders when they return home from the program.

Casebier, who has visited Governors Scholars campuses three times, was happy with the program's direction.

"People on both sides in Frankfort can rally behind this program," he said. "It's very rewarding to be around students of this caliber."

Stumbo said he wouldn't be surprised if he was someday working in Frankfort with some of the students.

"I'm convinced that someday in the not so distant future that we'll see a governor, a U.S. senator or a state senator, or a number of these people, who have come from a program such as the Governors Scholars."

The legislators were given a standing ovation after the session and were presented gifts from the school.

Fall classes begin at EKU August 20 -14,000 students expected on campus

RICHMOND - Eastern Kentucky University will welcome about 14,000 students to its main campus in Richmond and centers in Corbin, Danville and Manchester when fall classes begin Monday, Aug. 20.

The application deadline for degree-seeking students is Wednesday, Aug. 1. Students may apply online at www.eku.edu or request an application from the admissions office, toll-free, 800-465-9191. Only complete application files can be reviewed for admission, and applicants must submit a copy of high school and/or college transcripts and ACT scores, plus a $25 application fee.

Registration will continue through the first week of classes. Students may register at the University's Registration Center or via the Colonel Connection telephone system (859-622-2020).

Tuition has risen slightly, but about 80 percent of EKU students will receive some type of financial assistance, which last year totaled almost $49 million.

Dr. Eugene Hughes, who served for 20 years as president of Northern Arizona University and Wichita State University, is EKU's interim president while the search continues for a successor to Dr. Bob Kustra, who resigned the position this summer.

New students will begin arriving Sunday, Aug. 12 for the kickoff of New Student Days, a week-long program of educational and fun events and activities to help them get acclimated to campus life and academics, meet faculty and staff and make new friends. The festivity-filled week includes educational sessions, concerts, social events, a comedian, a movie at Roy Kidd Stadium, plenty of free food and much more.

James McBride, author of "The Color of Water," will address the students at a convocation on Aug. 15. All new students were given a copy of the book during Summer Orientation and will participate in small group discussions during New Student Days.

In an effort to better ensure a smooth academic transition to EKU, the University's Office of Academic Advising has added three full-time advisers primarily to assist undeclared, developmental and first-year students.

For all returning students, residence halls open Wednesday, Aug. 15. This fall marks the beginning of a new housing program for about 140 first-year students. ConneXtions is designed to provide the most positive living and learning experience by encouraging enhanced interaction between students, faculty and staff in an informal atmosphere. Participants in the program will take part in a variety of activities and programs geared to improve the students' transition to college life and academics and their overall intellectual and personal development.

Students also will notice improvements at the EKU Bookstore. Barnes & Noble Bookstores Inc. assumed operation of the campus bookstore this summer after purchasing the bookstore's assets from Wallace's Bookstores Inc.

The University of Kentucky sponsored an Academic Camp for Robinson Scholars at Lexington, during June 17-29.

The Scholars successfully completed a math, science, and technology based program at the university. The curriculum consisted of classroom instruction, scientific workshops, field trips, and laboratory experiences that helped to prepare the students for advanced coursework.

The Robinson Scholars Program provides for a full expense paid scholarship to selected students throughout the East Kentucky region. Students are recruited from the eighth grade and are provided the necessary academic support, student services, and enrichment activities to assure a successful transition from high school into college.

The E.O. Robinson Trust provides the program funding. The coal and timber revenues obtained from the natural resources within the Robinson Forest are being utilized to promote this region's most important natural resource - our young people.

Things to Know:
Financial aid tip of the month

by Mike Pennington
EASTERN/NORTHERN KENTUCKY
OUTREACH COORDINATOR
KENTUCKY HIGHER EDUCATION
ASSISTANCE AUTHORITY

Kentucky citizens looking for sources of financial aid to help pay for higher education expenses should look through a copy of "Affording Higher Education," a publication of the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA).

KHEAA updates this publication each year containing 2400 sources of student financial aid available from state and federal governments, Kentucky higher education institutions, businesses, and organizations. It contains information useful to both the traditional as well as the non-traditional student. Prospective students can use the index to look up their home counties and find information pertaining to available financial aid programs offered by institutions, businesses and organizations located within their own home counties.

Where can prospective students locate a copy of this publication? First and foremost it can be found in virtually every high school guidance office. Many college financial aid offices have the book, as well as most public libraries and some local businesses and organizations. Kentuckians can get more information by calling the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority's toll free number at 1-800-928-8926. Or they may visit www.kheaa.com, the KHEAA's web site.

Good luck and remember, education really does pay.

Technical colleges offering mining training

HAZARD — Hazard Technical College and Southeast Community College are recruiting students for a new mining program that will provide qualified workers for the industry.

Thanks to an agreement with Tecco Coal and other local companies, mine training will be offered in an effort to fulfill the need for miners in the region.

Applications from those interested will be accepted for a 12-week program leading to certification as an underground miner. Local companies have agreed to hire a quantity of those who successfully complete the training.

"We are fortunate to have Tecco and the other companies join with us as partners in this enterprising venture," said Mike Dixon, interim campus director at HTC. "We have been working with several different groups to make this possible."

Paul Pratt, dean of community and business development at Southeast Community College, explained that the program is the direct result of a series of meetings held recently by the colleges and with approximately 20 coal companies in addition to the Kentucky Coal Council, and the Kentucky Department of Employment Services in response to the mining industry's need for accomplished miners.

Classes begin Monday, July 23. A total of 20 individuals will be accepted for training. Those interested should call 606 436-5721, ext. 8316 or 800-246-7521, ext. 8316.

THE CLASSIFIED GUYS™

What a Stretch

Looking to meet new people, I tried calling a few of the personal ads in our local newspaper. One of the gentlemen I talked with seemed very nice. He told me that for our first date, he'd pick me up in a limousine and take me to a very elegant restaurant. When the doorbell rang on the day of our date, I opened the door to find a handsome man in a nice suit holding a bouquet of flowers. Behind him was a stretch limo with the door open. "Wow," I said. "You're nothing like you described yourself. You're much taller than I expected and very handsome." "Thank you," he replied. "But I'm the limo driver." (Contributed by Sarah P.)

Mr. Right

Since this was my first time meeting someone through the personals I asked my girlfriend to come along. My date was driving in from out of town so we agreed to meet at a bar near my house. As my girlfriend and I were waiting, we began to discuss how men would rather get lost than ask for directions. "The perfect man for me won't be afraid to ask for directions," I said. Suddenly my girlfriend gave me a cute smile as a gentleman tapped me on the shoulder and asked, "Excuse me, could you please tell me where the bathroom is?" (Contributed by Janice D.)

Tip of the Week

With so many new personal ads appearing every day, you need to write an ad like you're marketing a product. And like any good product on the market, your success depends upon a solid marketing plan. Rather than simply listing adjectives to describe yourself, try writing a creative ad to deliver your message. Strike an emotional response from the reader by using humor and bold wording and you're sure to elicit a high response rate. After writing it, take the time to re-read your ad making sure it portrays your true personality, character and sense of humor. Of course if you want to guarantee a lot of responses, you may try offering a free gift.

Ex-Softball Player: This DWF has been benched too long. Ready for practice. Seeking a new coach for long-term contract.

From the Guys

Carry: Personal ads were once considered taboo so most people had to meet through friends or at the neighborhood bar. But today, the personals have become a mainstream way to meet new people. It's quite popular to pick up a newspaper, make a few phone calls and find a date for Saturday night.

Cash: I once placed an ad in the personals. I received a call from a very nice woman who said how well my ad was written and how nice it was to find someone who was honest and sincere.

Carry: Yeah, Mom just wanted to make sure you got a reply.

► A washed-up bowler (Woody Harrelson) becomes a mentor to a talented but naive contender from Amish country in Kingpin, airing Saturday on ABC.

Hail to the chief (of staff): Leo McGarry, aka John Spencer

by JACQUELINE CUTLER
TVDATA FEATURES SYNDICATE

There's a moment during awards shows that can't be faked. When the camera zooms in on those favored to win who've just lost, the best expression they can muster is a forced smile. Remember how stricken Lauren Bacall looked when she lost the Oscar to Juliette Binoche a few years ago?

Last year's Emmy Awards could have featured a similar moment when Richard Schiff of The West Wing won for best supporting actor in a drama series. The camera panned to fellow nominee and castmate, John Spencer, who plays Chief of Staff Leo McGarry. Spencer roared his approval, his enthusiasm genuine. There in is the key to understanding this man who has kept the same Manhattan apartment since 1978 in what was a dicey neighborhood:

He is genuine. Spencer says many people have mentioned his reaction to Schiff winning the Emmy, and he wants to see a tape to see what they're talking about.

"Richard is extraordinary," Spencer says without prodding. "He is a gift to acting, a unique artist. I love working with him." Spencer loves everything about the megahit, which he discusses during a 90-minute conversation that includes everything from his take on politics (he's an old-fashioned liberal) to the best way to grow roses (plant before the first frost).

Of The West Wing, Spencer says, "It is the Major League Soccer

Accouple of teams looking up at the league-best Miami Fusion in the Eastern Division clash in New Jersey when the D.C. United visit the Metrostars. Ever since leading scorer Clint Mathis went down with a knee injury, the Metrostars have struggled mightily on offense, but may be able to break out today against the defensively porous United squad. D.C., meanwhile, counters its lack of coverage with a potent offense, led by midfielder Abdul Thompson Con-eh. In his second MLS season, Con-eh was the San Jose Earthquake's top scorer in 2000 with 19 points.

7 p.m. ESPN

SportsCentury: Dan Marino

It's a story recounted many times over. How, in the 1983 NFL Draft, 26 picks and four quarter-backs were gone by the time Dan Marino's name was called by the Miami Dolphins. "When he was there," former coach Don Shula said, "I wasn't about to let him get away." And so began for Marino, the subject of tonight's SportsCentury profile, a legendary 17-year career in South Florida. He owns 25 NFL records, including touchdown passes (420), yardage (61,361), completions (4,967) and attempts (8,358), and shares five others. His only resume blemish, he says, is never winning the Super Bowl.

Rugrats: All Grown Up

Americans' favorite cartoon kiddies celebrate 10 years on the air with this hour-long special, which finds Tommy, Chuckie, Angelica and the rest of the gang on the cusp of adolescence, more interested in rock 'n' roll than "Rock-a-Bye Baby." In fact, they're all getting ready to attend their first rock concert. No, this doesn't mean the Rugrats' adorable infant incarnations are going away, but we sense spinoff potential here. E.G. Daily and Cheryl Chase provide voices.

8:30 p.m. NBC

Movie: Top Gun

This 1986 drama may be the perfect date movie, with heart-stopping action sequences for the male half of the audience and a heart-fluttering leading man for the women. Tom Cruise stars as the fighter pilot who learns all the right moves at the Navy's elite Top Gun school, Kelly McGillis plays his love interest, with Val Kilmer as his steely-eyed nemesis, the aptly nicknamed Iceman. The film's love theme, "Take My Breath Away," won the Oscar and Golden Globe for best song.

9 p.m. ABC

Movie: Kingpin

The Farrelly brothers bring their trademark gross-out humor — including a gag that fores-hadows the infamous hair-gel scene in There's Something About Mary — to this tale of an alcoholic ex-bowling champ (Woody Harrelson) and his protege (Randy Quaid). The latter happens to be Amish, and bowling is his only vice, but that changes when his mentor introduces him to alcohol, tobacco and female arms. Bill Murray also stars in the 1996 comedy.

Midnite ramble brings jazz, funk and gospel for fall 2001 season

The Kentucky Center for the Arts, announces the new Midnite Ramble season, featuring some legendary performers, one of the hottest vocalists in jazz, the return of the fathers of funk, and gospel diva who's setting the world afire.

We start off with a jazz siren paying homage to the incomparable Sarah Vaughn. Dianne Reeves arrives at the Brown Theatre on Saturday, October 27, at 8 p.m. A consummate storyteller, Grammy-winner Reeves has been wowing audiences with her bravura style for years. Jazz Times says, "Dianne Reeves doesn't settle for one style fits all," and People Magazine calls her voice "an awesome instrument."

Jazz/R&B vibe master Roy Ayers performs next, Saturday, November 3, at 8 p.m., in Bomhard Theater. For more than thirty years, Ayers has remained at the forefront of music, incorporating funk, salsa, rock, soul and rap into his sound. A headliner around the world, from Europe to Japan, and a massive star in Great Britain, he now returns home to tremendous acclaim.

The season turns funky, when the funky METERS arrive on Friday, December 7, at 8 p.m., in Bomhard Theater. Considered the "founding fathers of funk" as The Meters, original members Art Neville of the Neville Brothers, and George Porter Jr., are joined by newcomers Russell Batiste and Brian Stoltz, providing a taste of funk with a touch of rock.

The season closes out by going to church with gospel diva Liz McComb, Saturday, December 15, at 8 p.m., in Bomhard Theater. McComb brings her swinging, jazzy, soulful sound back home after years in Europe, establishing herself as an international star.

Subscriptions are $83, and can be purchased by contacting Kristen Hughes at 562-0152 or visiting www.kentuckycenter.org. Hughes can also assist with special discounts for group sales. The date to purchase single tickets is August 17. Single tickets are $22 and $27 for Bomhard Theater shows, and $27, $22 and $17 for Brown Theatre shows. Program subject to change.

Midnite Ramble is presented with the support of Brown - Forman Corporation, Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation, The Lincoln Foundation, Marshall & Associates Financial Advisors and Hillerich & Bradsby Company.

Critic Corner...

by DNA Smith

LARA CROFT: TOMB RAIDER

While not the worst movie ever made, "Tomb Raider" is, in fact, so bad that the fake reviewer from Sony panned it.

Of course, the warning signs that this was not going to be a good film were all over the place: Approximately three weeks before the movie was supposed to open, the studio executives reportedly were so appalled by the director's cut that they called in a new editor to recut the film. The soundtrack was also scrapped and a new, electronica-based soundtrack was put in its place. Then, critics were forbidden to publish their reviews until after the movie premiered June 15th.

So, after all that mess, what audiences are left with is a shoddy, sloppy, slapped-together disaster, instead of one of the most highly anticipated adventure movies of the summer. Instead of "Indiana Jones in a D-Cup," we get a garbled, nonsensical, stupid film that would make even Joel Schumacher ("Batman Forever") ashamed to show his face in public.

"Tomb Raider" was shot on locations all around the globe — which is what should be done to director Simon West.

This film's plot defies all logic and insults the intelligence even of stupid people. Nothing in the plot or the actions of the characters makes any sense. "British" noblewoman/archaeologist Lara Croft (Angelina Jolie) is supposed to stop the evil Illuminati from finding a long-lost piece of an ancient machine that will give its owner the power to manipulate time.

When she follows them to a Cambodian temple, she sees that the bad guys are looking in the wrong place. All Croft has to do is wait 12 seconds and the Illuminati's plans will be foiled for another 5,000 years. Does she wait? Nope. She HELPS them — in one of the most ridiculous "action" sequences of the film, which includes a battle with a passel of poorly rendered CGI sword-wielding animated Stone Monkey Guards of Death.

I know we shouldn't have gotten our hopes up for a film based on a video game, but you'd think after the success of the Indiana Jones movies, Hollywood would at least have a good idea of what makes a great archaeological-adventurer-doing-battle-with-the-supernatural movie. Sadly, it doesn't.

While not the worst movie ever made, "Tomb Raider" does deserve to be buried — not in an ancient ruin, but in a cat box.

Smile Awhile...

by SARA HOPSON BLAIR

The Evil Eye

(Sarah and a few of the members of her clan visit Turkey.)

Upon arrival to The Golden Princess, I finally understood why they are called ships and not boats. To determine the length, my only frame of reference of measurement was in terms of downtown Paintsville.

"Dan," I said, excitedly. "I think it's as long as Main Street from the swinging bridge to City Hall."

"Oh, I think maybe it's three football fields long," he guessed.

Cinder, the analytical one of the bunch, immediately retrieved the information from her purse and starting reading us statistics saying that the ship was taller than the Statue of Liberty and 300 yards long.

"I was right then," Dan commented.

"No, it says 300 yards long," Cinder said.

Dan looked at Devon and me and shook his head.

Istanbul, Turkey (Turkiye as they say), was a beautiful city. As we stood on deck and gazed at the deep, blue Mediterranean Ocean, backdropped by the rustic decor of an ages old civilization, all I could think of was, "I need a nap."

The next day we toured the Blue Mosque and Topkapi Palace. At the palace, there was a room devoted to portraits of the former Sultans who ruled Turkey until 1922. And what a life they lived! All of them had thousands of wives and concubines but many of the Sultans never lived past the age of 25. I'm not sure to what that can be attributed, but we were told that the male sons were so anxious to become sultan that many of their fathers died mysteriously at an early age. (I attributed it to the 1,000 wives, concubines, and children.)

Throughout Turkey, we continued to see an emblem displayed that resembled a three-ring target, so we asked the guide to explain its meaning.

"It's called an Evil Eye and it wards off evil spirits," he said.

"Sara, you've got one of those," Devon laughed.

"I've got a lazy eye," I huffed.

Then it was on to the port of Kusadasi. Of all the places we toured in Turkey, this was my favorite. The ruins of Ephesus were intact enough to actually visualize the daily lives of its former inhabitants. What I found most interesting was the public restroom. Amidst the ruins of shops, houses, and municipal buildings were the remains of outdoor plumbing. Although the roof no longer existed, the 48 stone potty holes had not deteriorated. The tour guide explained that the restroom was for men only and they had to pay to use it.

"Where did the women go?" I asked.

"They had to go to their homes," he replied, matter-of-factly.

The tour guide continued, "The men would stay in the restroom for hours. Now what do you think they were doing?"

I could only envision 48 little men in togas sitting around in a semi-circle before I answered, "I don't even want to go there."

The guide glared at me and said, "They gossiped! They socialized in the toilets."

(Needless to say, Cinder has a picture of this particular site. If you want to see it, call her.)

I was also amazed by the bordello and library that were located adjacent to one another. Once again, our guide explained that the proximity of the buildings were intentional so that the men could tell their wives they were going to the library when they were actually going to the bordello.

"I can't believe the women fell for that one even then," Cinder laughed.

Our next stop was the home of the Virgin Mary. The home was picturesquely nestled high in the mountains overlooking the ruins of St. John's Basilica. The three room stone structure was built in 2 AD. On a lower terrace, a spring of miraculous water had been rerouted from Mary's house so that tourists could gather it. That's when Cinder pulled out six empty water bottles and a couple of canteens.

"What's she going to do with all those bottles?" a woman standing behind us asked.

But Cinder was relentless.

"I've come across the world for this water, and I'm going to get it," Cinder said with a vengeance.

Wildlife and scenic photo exhibit

A breath-taking wildlife and scenic photography exhibit will open at the Mountain Arts Center on Friday, July 6. Kenny Mitchell, a Floyd County native, will have his photographic works of our local area displayed in hand-made frames for the viewing pleasure of all.

Mitchell's photos are of subjects found in our ordinary daily lives - he presents them with great composition, thoughtful sensitivity, and a fresh viewpoint. Some of his works display a whimsical nature while others create a more spiritual feeling.

The Kenny Mitchell Photography Exhibit will open Friday, July 6 and run through Monday, July 30.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE

Blair came closer to telling Todd he's the father of her unborn baby. On the stand, Lindsay accused Sam of killing Colin. Rae had a weird nightmare as everyone took on the characteristics of others. After accusing Gabrielle of marrying Asa for his money, Renee found her former husband chuckling and demanded to be let in on the joke. Wait to See: Colin's autopsy provides a new clue.

PASSIONS

Grace sensed that David threatened her family. The tabloid reporter assured Gwen that Theresa will be exposed as Ethan's betrayer on Theresa and Ethan's wedding day. Tabitha realized she was doomed and could get no help from the "Face in the Pool" in Hecuba's lair. Timmy later found Julian drowning his sorrows over having to murder his sister, Sheridan, on her wedding day. Wait to See: Tabitha sees a possible way out of her fate.

PORT CHARLES

Jack and Jamal realized Caleb could be dangerous to Livvie and all of Port Charles. Gaby seemed unusually upset when she accidentally scratched Joe as they argued one last time. Later, Gaby subtly reminded Livvie about Caleb, while Caleb taunted Michael about his plans. Wait to See: Lucy meets Madame Alicia.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS

Brittany went to the homeless shelter in search of information about Mac's past. Ashley was upset with Brad for not standing up to Traci over Colleen. Olivia helped Victor's lawsuit against the Lawson HMO by pretending she too wanted to be a rich Lawson doctor. Victor noted that Nikki's growing independence had put them at odds. Victoria told Sharon that Ryan would soon be free from Tricia. But Tricia had secretly made other plans.

Name this Section and WIN CASH

Here is your chance to make a lasting impact on Eastern Kentucky's regional newspaper ... and earn a little cash while you're at it.

Each week, The Floyd County Times Sunday Regional Edition will offer expanded television listings, along with local features, a guide to the best shows on the air, horoscopes and puzzles in one complete entertainment package. In fact, we were so busy making our TV book the best it could be that we forgot to give it a name!

That is where you come in. Send us your suggestions for a name. The best entry will be chosen as the name for our bigger and better TV book, and the winning entrant will receive $25. In the event more than one person submits the name we select, a random drawing will determine the winner.

Just think, you could see your suggestion in print every week and pocket a little spending cash in the process. Mail your entries to TV Contest, The Floyd County Times, PO Box 390, Prestonsburg, KY 41653, or email them to web@floydcountytimes.com.

News of the weird...

by CHUCK SHEPHERD

■ According to the annual report on estimated accidents in the home, from Britain's Department of Trade and Industry and detailed in a June issue of New Scientist, three dozen people were sent to the hospital for injuries associated with teapot covers; about 165 for injuries from place-mats, about 330 from toilet-paper holders, and about 13,000 from vegetables. However, sponge-related accidents fell from 996 the previous year to 787, and only 329 injuries from meat cleavers were reported.

■ Ms. Vermont Elaine Beverly, 47, is likely the only imprisoned murderer in the United States who earns a full salary and benefits as an ordinary state employee, according to a June Associated Press dispatch. Because Beverly (who has served 10 years of a 15-year sentence) scored high on a state test and because the Alabama Vocational Rehabilitation Office is required to hire high-scoring, she spends days on the job and returns to her Birmingham cell at night. Much of her salary is remitted to the state, but she retains full health insurance and retirement benefits.

■ In Draguignan, France, a 62-year-old woman identified only as Jeanine gave birth to a boy in May, after in-vitro fertilization. She is not the oldest woman to give birth, but she is the oldest to give birth using sperm from her own brother. The two hid the brother's identity from doctors so they could qualify to receive their 80-year-old mother's estate, which would have gone to others if the siblings had been childless. The couple also had a backup plan, with the brother's sperm being used to produce a daughter with a California woman, and both children now live with the siblings.

That's My Story and I'm Sticking to It

■ Alejandro Toledo was elected president of Peru in June despite his campaign explanation that the reason he once failed a drug test was because he had been kidnapped by intelligence agents and force-fed cocaine. And Harvard medical school professor Dirk Greineder was convicted in June of murdering his wife, despite his unwavering explanation that the reason the couple's blood was all over him was because they both coincidentally came down with nosebleeds on the morning of the wife's death. And a 39-year-old motorist in Bismarck, N.D., stopped in May by police for having illegal tinting on her truck's windshield, told them it must have been the work of a free-lancer who broke in and tinted the windows without her

Inexplicable

■ In a December 2000 incident, a man in Dakota County, Minn., decided to bludgeon to death (beneficially, he apparently thought) an already slightly wounded German shepherd/husky mix dog. Neighbor John Christoffel intervened during the bloody sledgehammer assault, imploring the man to stop and ultimately pulling a gun on him, but it was too late to save the dog. Prosecutors later filed a felony gun-threat charge against Christoffel (and threatened two more charges) while the dog-hammerer himself received only a misdemeanor citation for animal cruelty. (After community protests, the prosecutor reduced Christoffel's charge to a misdemeanor also.)

■ Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies arrested Steven Smiley, 39, in March and charged him as the one who, just acting on his "fascination with explosives" (as one deputy described it), released plastic trash bags filled with helium into the air, with burning flares and explosive powder attached, so that when the flare burned out, the bag would explode like a small bomb. Smiley apparently had no idea where the bags would land and, according to deputies, didn't seem to care. One, however, landed on the roof of a sheriff's substation three miles from Smiley's home and exploded, but no one was hurt.

■ Federal law guarantees every child a public education, no matter how extensive his special needs (or how costly), but Massachusetts could not find any school to take Nathan Vincent, 15, at any price because of his severe physical and intellectual limitations and a self-mutilation problem, until one in New Hampshire accepted him in April after a 10-month search. During the 10 months, according to an April Boston Globe story, the state picked up the bill for him to stay, without schooling, at Children's Hospital in Boston, which came to $619,000, or the equivalent of the annual salaries of a dozen teachers.

■ In May, according to prosecutors in Vancouver, British Columbia, Mr. Sukhjinder Singh Dhillon, his mother and his sister administered a severe beating to the man's wife in January because they were angry at her for being such a failure, primarily because she had so far given birth to two girls and no boys.

Names in the News

■ Passed away in April in Long Beach, Calif.: Carolyn R.S. Posthumus. Arrested in January for possession of marijuana in DeKalb, Ill.; Mr. Marjuan Fleming. Sentenced for rape in April in Providence, R.I. (after telling the judge that he fantasizes about having sex with unconscious women); Kevin M. McWeeney. Announcing the unpopular decision in April that his Crow Tribe office in Montana would lay off 25 percent of the workforce because of rising expenses: Mr. Leroy Not Afraid. Pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of child pornography, Stewartville, Minn., May: Mr. Ronald Kummer.

Critter Corner...

So many people have called me in the last few weeks asking for information on housebreaking puppies, that I decided it would be worthwhile to reprint an old column from a couple of years ago. Dog owners have heard so many old wives tales and so much bad advice about housebreaking that it has turned a fairly straightforward process into a major project.

First off, let's establish some basic concepts:

Dogs don't understand English. They will learn the meaning of some words as they go along, but they are not born with the ability.

Dogs don't share our concept of right and wrong, nor do they have a concept of abstract value. The Oriental rug was soft and absorbent; Puppy had no idea that it was valuable or why you think he was a bad dog.

Dogs can't really move mentally backward and forward in time. Puppy can't make a connection between your being upset over a puddle in the floor now and fact that he made the puddle two hours ago.

It is much easier to teach a dog what "right is", rather than what wrong is not. In other words, doesn't it seem much simpler to teach Puppy that you do want him to relieve himself in the far corner of yard, than to teach him that you don't want him to go in the living room, kitchen, bath, bedroom, back porch, on the front steps, on the walkway, in the flower bed, etc. etc. etc.?

Puppies are babies. They are going to have accidents and make mistakes. Resign yourself to this from the beginning.

With these ideas in mind, let's look at how the original housebreaking expert, Mother Wolf, handles the job. The origins of most dog behavior can be found by studying their close relatives, the wolves, who for the most part still live as they have for thousands of years.

Mother Wolf wants to keep a clean house, or den, as much as we do. When the pups are still infants, she keeps them and the nest clean. (Motherhood has always been a dirty job.) Once the babies have reached the toddler stage, they instinctively do their business a little way away from the nest, and Mother also takes care of that. Once they can walk, she begins to "potty train" them by leading them outside the den to a designated area. When they have accidents she doesn't scold or punish them; she just cleans up the mess and continues to show them what right is. Soon the entire litter knows where the toilet area is.

Ifn a great fan of if it ain't broke, don't fix it, and this system has worked for countless generations: it has Mother Canine's good housekeeping seal of approval. So how do we put Mama Wolf's plan into action? Ifll cover general principles first, then we'll get down to the nuts and bolts next week.

First, set the puppy up to succeed. Minimize the chances for an accident to happen. Think how big your house is to something as tiny as a six-week old pup. It's as bad as trying to find the restrooms at the mall. Don't give Puppy the run of the house at first. He will be much more reluctant to make a mess in a small area, where he has to sleep, than if he can toddle into the next room where out of sight will be out of mind.

When Puppy is out of his designated area, supervise him. This doesn't mean that he is somewhere in the living room while you watch TV. This means you are actively watching and interacting with him, or he is physically attached to you by a leash and collar umbilical cord hooked on to your belt. (This also serves as excellent early lessons in following you and what restraint is all about.)

Give him lots of opportunities to go outdoors; remember how small his bladder is, and that he may not have full control of it yet.

Consider feeding the pup several meals a day, rather than leaving food out constantly. This will help put his system on a schedule, and takes advantage of reflex in young pups that signals the need to eliminate soon after a meal.

Don't punish the pup for accidents. It is extremely unfair to punish a puppy for something it doesn't understand. It will only confuse and scare the puppy, and it doesn't do anything for his concept of you as a good leader, either.

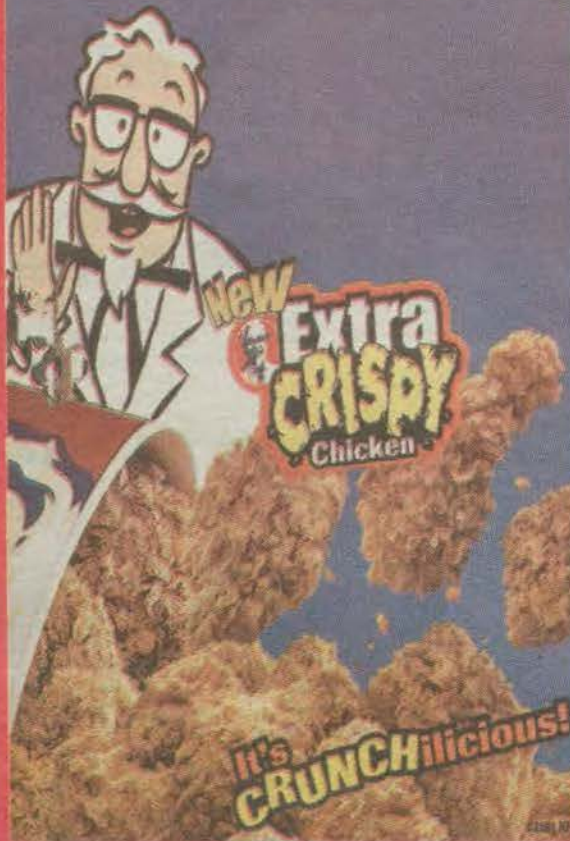

Now we've set the stage. Changing you concept of this whole process to a positive one is probably the most important key to success, which is why I've spent so much time on the whys. Next week we'll work on the hows!

was always with people younger than me," he says. "Sometimes I was with people a good 20 years younger. ... The younger person is enthusing the older person with youth. The older person is showing what 20 years brought. I can't tell you how comfortable I feel having a contemporary.

Spencer seems comfortable in his skin, in his roles and in his city, over which he rhapsodizes. His favorite spots include the SoHo galleries, the Hudson waterfront and new restaurants. Restaurants are important to him. Those years of waiting tables left their mark. Spencer used to take the subway to work and a cab home if the tips were good. Now he can take the taxi both ways. John Spencer, who stars in NBC's Wednesday hit The West Wing, says that in real life, he leans far more to the left than his character, Chief of Staff Leo McGarry.

very best writing there is on TV. I don't mean to be braggadocio, but I don't write it, so I can say that freely." As much as he adores working on the series, however, Spencer vows he will not return to the grueling schedule of episodic TV when it ends.

Spencer was in Manhattan during the show's hiatus to star in Glimmer, Glimmer and Shine, a play he has performed around the country. "This part is so enormously challenging and so different from Leo," he says. "It was irresistible - manic, but irresistible. Just doing the play is easy."

It doesn't look easy. Less than an hour after finishing bruschetta and stubbing a cigarette, Spencer is center-stage as an alcoholic, dying jazzman who comes to terms with his estranged brother. Spencer is so bedraggled as Martin Glimmer that if he were walking on the street and holding a cup, kindhearted pedestrians would toss in coins. Glimmer was no stranger to drugs and life on the edge.

The 54-year-old Spencer relates to the character. "As an actor, I tend to start internally about what qualities, colors, I find within the character," he says. "When I can find connective tissue, it makes my job easier. Leo's in recovery, too."

Spencer, who had his last drink in 1989, describes himself as an alcoholic who does not drink. Before that, booze was taking over. A cousin helped get him into detox. Shortly after, he got what was, essentially, his third big break: the role of Tommy Mullaney on L.A. Law, which he joined in its fourth season. His second had come six years earlier, when he replaced Kevin Costner in WarGames. Spencer's first big break came at 17 when he played Henry Anderson, Cathy's boyfriend, on The Patty Duke Show. "I had great lines, like 'Send in the goon squad,'" he says, laughing. That show was pivotal because it financed his acting classes.

Spencer had enrolled in the Professional Children's School in Manhattan at 16, living at a Y for $12 a week. An only child, he left behind his parents, John and Mildred Speshock, in Totowa, N.J., and changed his name.

Even though Spencer managed to work as an actor, he had to wait tables to make ends meet. When he was 33, he suffered what he describes as a breakdown. His childhood friends were all married, employed and homeowners. Spencer had nothing, and he just crashed emotionally. He spent 10 days in bed and read Tennessee Williams' memoir. Then his truck driver father, whom he previously had perceived strictly as an authority figure, gave him some loving advice.

A melancholy smile crosses Spencer's face as he reflects on the conversation. "I am 33," he recalls saying to his father then. "What if it never gets any better?" And he says his father replied, "Johnny, it's what you do. You just gotta keep doing it. You gotta be like a dog barking, and somebody finally hears it."

"And I knew at that moment it's who I was," Spencer says, "and if I was a 63-year-old man on a bus, playing a third or fourth run of a play, I knew I'd be happier than if I were a banker. You know, things picked up after that. I let go of expectations. ... For me, success is getting work. Now I guess I am the most successful man in the world."

And not just successful, but happy. Spencer has been in a committed relationship for 10 years with dancer and choreographer Patti Mariano, who is on tour with The Full Monty. "I

2:30 p.m. NBC

Auto Racing

The nation's third-largest TV market gets into the NASCAR spirit with the inaugural Tropicana 400 from Chicagoland Speedway in Joliet, Ill. Drivers, including Jeff Gordon, Rusty Wallace and Bobby Labonte, have taken advantage of off-time to test the 1.5-mile D-shaped tri-oval, and have come away impressed with the track's surface and construction. And speaking of days off, few remain the rest of this season for the NASCAR teams. The Tropicana is the second of 20 straight weeks of racing, a grueling schedule that will leave plenty of drivers asleep at the wheel.

7 p.m. ABC

Movie: Goldrush: A Real-Life Alaskan Adventure

Alyssa Milano (Charmed) stars in this drama based on the true story of a turn-of-the-century woman who left her secretarial job to become the typist for an Alaskan expedition's leader (Bruce Campbell, The Adventures of Brisco County, Jr.). She soon gets caught up in gold fever herself. W. Morgan Sheppard also stars.

8 p.m. DISCOVERY

When Dinosaurs Roamed America

You might just forget you're watching computer-generated critters, so realistic are the stars of this latest dinosaur special. It focuses on the species that lived on the North American continent, from the ever-popular Tyrannosaurus to the lesser-known but equally fearsome Rulo-don. John Goodman narrates the two-hour program.

8 p.m. TNT

Movie: The Mists of Avalon

Anjelica Huston and Julianna Margulies star in this retelling of the Camelot legend from the women's perspective. Huston plays the pagan high priestess Viviane, who fears the spread of Christianity spells trouble not just for her religion but for England's very survival. Margulies plays Morgaine LeFay, Viviane's niece, whose mission is ensuring that a king sympathetic to pagan beliefs as well as Christianity takes the throne. That, of course, would be Arthur. Joan Allen, Caroline Goodall and Samantha Mathis also star in the two-part adventure, which concludes Monday.

9 p.m. CBS

Movie: To Live Again

The recent headlines about a girl rescued from captivity in a closet give a new poignancy to this 1998 TV movie about a young woman (Annabeth Gish) kept in isolation for 16 years by her mother, who believed the girl had mental problems. A social worker (Bonnie Bedelia) with issues of her own takes her into her home and heart, and the relationship proves beneficial to both. The happy ending may be a long time coming, though, as Morn wants her daughter back. Frances Stern-hagen draws on her experience as Cliff Clavin's overbearing parental unit from Cheers for the role of Morn.

9 p.m. FOX

The X-Files

"This Is Not Happening" introduces new agent Monica Reyes (Annabeth Gish). Doggett (Robert Patrick) brings her aboard for a third opinion on the mystery of Mulder's disappearance, which is driving a major wedge between him and Scully (Gillian Anderson). And Reyes' perspective is definitely different; while she doesn't rule out the existence of aliens, she thinks there's something more down to earth happening here, perhaps involving a cult. Mitch Pileggi also stars in the two-part story, which concludes next week.

10 p.m. ABC

The Practice

Can a man living in the United States be prosecuted for a crime committed by someone else in another country? That's the issue in Bobby's (Dylan McDermott) current case: the defense of a Pakistani immigrant (Bernard White) whose unfaithful wife was killed by his brother while in Pakistan. Eugene (Steve Harris) regrets trying to help his pal Harland Bassett (Ernie Sabella) achieve a much-needed

A washed-up bowler (Woody Harrelson) becomes a mentor to a talented but naive contender from Amish country in Kingpin, airing Saturday on ABC.

Horoscopes...

ARIES

(March 21 to April 19)

It's a good time to shop for new clothes for those important upcoming events. Remember: You're the Sheik of Chic, and you're at your best when you know you look good.

TAURUS

(April 20 to May 20)

You can be sensible when you have to be and sensual when you want to be. Things are starting to happen that will make good use of both of these finely tuned Taurean traits.

GEMINI

(May 21 to June 20)

Single Twins looking to double up with someone special will find Cupid most obliging. Expect him to link you with a Capricorn who has been looking for someone just like you.

CANCER

(June 21 to July 21)

A suddenly changing situation requires some quickly made adjustments. The sooner you act, the sooner you can get back to other important projects that need your attention.

LEO

(July 23 to August 22)

Congratulations. You've done well with that pesky problem you were asked to solve. Now you can take those bows on center stage, where you can shine in all your Leonine splendor.

VIRGO

(August 23 to September 22)

Your ability to communicate clearly and easily with others (as befits a child of Mercury) brings a new opportunity that could lead to a major career change.

LIBRA

(September 23 to October 22)

You might still have some doubts about taking a bolder approach toward achieving your goals. But be assured that moving forward is the direction to go.

SCORPIO

(October 23 to November 21)

An almost-forgotten incident re-emerges, and you need to deal with it as quickly as possible. Sources of important information on the matter soon become available.

SAGITTARIUS

(November 22 to December 21)

You might feel as if you can take on the world these days, but be careful not to target more commitments than you can handle. An old agreement might need reviewing.

CAPRICORN

(December 22 to January 19)

Do something wild and wonderful this week. After all, you're part Goat — so whenever you get those capricious urges to kick up your heels, just do it.

AQUARIUS

(January 20 to February 18)

A recent workplace decision might be questioned. Be prepared to answer all queries to everyone's satisfaction. Then go out for a fun time with loved ones.

PISCES

(February 19 to March 20)

Rework that once-rejected suggestion. Then resubmit it to someone at your workplace who is likely to be more receptive to the potential it holds. Good luck.

BORN THIS WEEK:

You have a highly developed sense of perception that helps you see people as they are, and not necessarily as they would like to be seen.

ALL MY CHILDREN

David manipulated JR into taking more hits of "X" by getting him to believe he (David) and his mother, Dixie, were back together. Gabriel planted a quick kiss on Rosa. Jake stopped Greenlee from telling Leo that she knows he (Leo) is being paid to be Laura's husband. JR stuffed extra hits of "X" in the shape of candy into Jamie's pocket. Jamie offered one to Petey, who was about to eat it when Opal stopped him. Dixie popped one into her mouth, but JR made her spit it out. Bianca and Gabriel were trapped in the burning backroom. Wait to See: Chris moves in on Erica.

AS THE WORLD TURNS

Simon reluctantly accepted a "mission" and left to pursue it. Rose urged Lily to hang tight and wait for developments. Lien began to see the first glimmers of hope. Lucinda decided to challenge Craig at the New York headquarters of BRO. Wait to See: Jack and Carly agree to set the record straight. Ben has a heartfelt talk with Isaac.

THE BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL

As Bridget fought for her life, her husband, Deacon, told an unbelieving Amber that he'd begun to develop feelings for his wife. Tony learned that his former girlfriend, Ellen, took her life when she was diagnosed with AIDS. Later, Tony suffered a panic attack and sought psychiatric help. But unbeknownst to him, Taylor was filling in for the absent Dr. Nunez. Wait to See: Amber sees her future with Deacon threatened by Bridget.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES

Brady told John he felt something terrible might happen to Chloe at the dance tonight. Faye was shocked when Kate insisted she's going to the dance in her tattered dress to embarrass Philip. Later, at the dance, a guilt-wracked Mimi told Belle she'd never do anything deliberately to hurt any one. Hope continued to press John for the truth about her life as Princess Gina. Jan and Mimi unleashed their attack on Chloe. Wait to See: Philip lashes out at Chloe.

GENERAL HOSPITAL

Frustrated that he can't reveal himself in the flesh to his loved ones or his enemies, Stavros entered the dreams of: Luke and Laura (who each dreamed of each other in happier times); Scott, who appeared in Laura's dream as her first love; Nikolas, who feared becoming like his father (Stavros); Gia, who dreamed the Cassadines might take Nikolas from her; and Stefan, who dreamed of the tortured childhood he and Stavros shared. Mike warned Sonny that Angel could be more mischievous than Carly. Zander decided to ask Alan to hide Emily away from danger. Wait to See: Stavros comes close to Laura's house.

GUIDING LIGHT

Phillip was startled to find an obviously pregnant Harley. Beth made her way back to Springfield to reclaim her life. Marah set in motion her plan to make Tony jealous. Gus was an unexpected "guest" at the Bauer barbecue. Noah interrupted a private moment between Josh and Reva. Wait to See: Danny takes the stand. Reva has a secret.

Investigative Reports

"AIDS in America: The Crisis Continues" con-tradicts the current mood of optimism shared by those not living with the realities of acquired immune deficiency syndrome. While new drugs have enabled many people with HIV to remain healthy for years, they don't work for everyone. And researchers fear that the existence of such medicine is backfiring; the virus is becoming more drug-resistant, and people are becoming less careful. Bill Kurtis hosts.

TUESDAY JULY 17, 2001

7:30 p.m. TBS

Major League Baseball

As Chipper Jones goes, the Atlanta Braves follow. Jones began the season in an offensive funk, hitting just .188 with a measly 14 RBI in May, and Atlanta fell behind the Phillies in the National League East. But, true to his career numbers, Jones heated up with the weather in June, and the Braves wiped out an eight-game deficit in 25 days. Tonight, in the finale of a three-game interleague series against the Tampa Bay Devil Rays, Chipper and the Braves can pad their stats vs. a woe-lful pitching staff. Jones is now on pace to at least match last season's 36 home run, 111 RBI output.

Biography

Robert Blake profiles the veteran actor whose most recent return to the spotlight has been, to put it mildly, under less than ideal circumstances. Blake, born Michael Gubitosi, got his start as a wee tyke in the Our Gang films. Career-wise, he was one of the lucky child stars who kept working into adulthood, earning raves for his portrayal of one of the killers in In Cold Blood and becoming a TV fixture in the 1970s cop show Baretta. His personal life, however, hasn't gone as smoothly. Angry over childhood abuse and exploitation, he turned to drugs and gained a reputation for difficulty on the set. This year, Blake became a player in a real-life detective drama when his wife, BonnyLee Bakley, was murdered — and the ending of this one has yet to be written.

8 p.m. FOX

That '70s Show

Watching a porno movie brings Eric (Topher Grace) to the realization that there's more to lovemaking than the three basic maneuvers he's been using. He thinks Donna (Laura Prepon) may be tiring of the monotony and tries something a little different ... turning her right off. Speaking of monotony, a visit from her sister (guest star Valerie Harper) has Kitty (Debra Jo Rupp) lamenting her own boring life. Mila Kunis and Ashton Kutcher also star in "Eric's Naughty No-No."

8 p.m. TCM

Movie: Mrs. Miniver

Patriotism might have played a role in this 1942 drama's showing at the Academy Awards — it was nominated for 12 and won six, including best picture — but the fact remains it's a superior piece of filmmaking. It quietly conveys what it's like to be ordinary people living through extraordinary events — in this case, a British family touched by World War II. Greer Garson shines in the title role, which won her the best actress Oscar. Walter Pidgeon, Teresa Wright, Henry Travers and Dame May Whitty also star.

8 p.m. WB

Movie: The Sure Thing

Two college freshmen (John Cusack, Daphne Zuniga) who dislike each other end up sharing a ride to California at Christmastime. He's an unlucky-in-love sort whose best friend has arranged a date for him with high scoring potential. She's an uptight braniac whose equally uptight boyfriend (Boyd Gaines) awaits on the Left Coast. Three guesses who ends up with whom. Nicolette Sheridan, Tim Robbins and a surprisingly hunky-looking Anthony Edwards also star in this underrated 1985 comedy directed by Rob Reiner.

9 p.m. NBC

Frasier

Frasier (Kelsey Grammer) hires a beautiful lawyer (guest star Teri Polo, Meet the Parents) to defend him against Donny's (Saul Rubinek) lawsuit, and they soon have a personal relationship to go with their professional one. But he questions whether she's keeping the two separate when he gets a look at his legal bill. The whole issue may be moot, however, as Donny has found someone to help him get over Daphne (Jane Leeves). David Hyde Pierce also stars in "Legal Tender Love and Care."

The Geena Davis Show
 In "The Wedding," Eliza (Makenzie Vega) tells Teddie (Geena Davis) that she's dying to start calling her Mommy. That's all it takes for Teddie to scrap the elaborate wedding plans and elope with Max (Peter Horton) to City Hall with just a few friends and relations in attendance. Nice and simple, right? Not exactly. John Francis Daley, Mimi Rogers and Kim Coles also star.

10 p.m. CBS

Judging Amy

The loss of little Ned threatens to tear the Grays apart in "One for the Road." After Peter and Gillian (Marcus Giamatti, Jessica Tuck) lose custody of their adopted son to his birth mother (Samantha Shelton), Peter turns to booze and is arrested for drunken driving, and Gillian turns her grief on him. An overwrought Maxine (Tyne Daly) turns on her boss, and Amy (Amy Brenneman) can't get Peter and Gillian's situation out of her mind as she wrestles with a case involving a mother-to-be whose first child mysteriously disappeared. Dan Futterman also stars.

PQ.V

"True-Hearted Vikings" is the story of the Women's Professional Football League, a sports organization that's suffered its share of birth pangs and growing pains since its formation two years ago.

Filmmaker Mylene Moreno follows two players on the WPF's inaugural exhibition tour as they learn the hard way that true equality in sports is still a long way off. The league's male powers that be aren't above using sex appeal — and sexist appeals — to lure fans.

WEDNESDAY JULY 18, 2001

8 p.m. ABC

The Drew Carey Show

In "Drew's Inheritance," Drew (Drew Carey) discovers there's $10,000 waiting for him if he gets married in 72 hours. He and Kate (Christa Miller) plan to fake it so he can collect. But nobody tells Lewis and Oswald (Ryan Stiles, Diedrich Bader) that the ceremony isn't the real thing, so they take the liberty of inviting Drew's family. Kathy Kinney and John Carroll Lynch also star, with Marion Ross returning as Drew's mom.

The Roman Empire in the First Century

This two-part special uses the words of Romans great and small, from rulers and scholars to ordinary citizens, to provide a personal glimpse of life in an ancient superpower. The opener, Order From Chaos/Years of Trial chronicles life under Caesar Augustus, the charismatic and controversial first emperor, and the rise and fall of his successors, the overwhelmed Tiberius and the mad Caligula. Part 2 airs next week.

8 p.m. UPN

Star Trek: Voyager

In the emotional two-hour "Flesh and Blood," the Doctor (Robert Picardo) commits treason to help some of his own kind: a group of renegade Holograms programmed as hunting quarry by the Hirogen. But the group's seemingly sympathetic leader (guest star Jeff Yagher) has a dark side, as evidenced by his kidnapping of Torres (Roxann Dawson) in a quest for help setting up a new home. Kate Mulgrew also stars.

9 p.m. A&E

American Justice

"Payback for a Bully" is a story of a predator who became prey. Bobby Kent was a Florida teen who mercilessly bullied his schoolmates, even his best friend and occasional partner in sadism, Marty Puccio. Marty's girlfriend, Lisa, blamed Bobby for Marty's lukewarm reaction to her pregnancy and convinced her boyfriend, her cousin and four other teens to stop Bobby's abuse permanently. Was it justifiable revenge or cold-blooded murder? Bill Kurtis hosts.

9 p.m. CBS

Movie: Murder at 75 Birch

A woman is killed, and her husband, Rick (Gregory Harrison), is the prime suspect, despite his claim that abductor did it. The police hound his brother and sister-in-law, Dave and Gwen (Vyto Ruginis, Melissa Gilbert), for information, and when Dave finally agrees to talk to them, he's killed in an accident on his way to the police station. Gwen is caught between her loyalty to Rick and her growing suspicion that he had something to do with both deaths. Wendel Meldrum also stars in this fact-based drama.

9 p.m. VH1

Movie: Hysteria: The Del Leppard Story

Orlando Seale (Sleepy Hollow), Tat Whalley and Karl Geary star as Del Leppard's Joe Elliott, Rick Allen and Steve Clark in this dramatized biography of the British band, which makes up for an underwhelming script with solid acting and a killer soundtrack. Anthony Michael Hall plays producer Mutt Lange, who guides the group to stardom in the United States during the mid-1980s. Adam MacDonald and Esteban Powell also star.

9:30 p.m. ABC

Spin City

Charlie's (Charlie Sheen) efforts to charm Julia (guest star Joanna Going) hit another road block — actually, a railblock — in "Trainstopping." After their first date falls wayshort of perfect, heatonies by scoring some great theater tickets for her and her parents. But the goodwill gesture is derailed by a stalled subway train. Speaking of transportation troubles, the mayor (Barry Bostwick) tries to avoid one by double-parking — in a space reserved for a van pool carrying children. Paul

FRIDAY JULY 20, 2001

8 p.m. ABC

America's Funniest Home Videos

The clip show that wouldn't die is back with a new host and an expanded format. Tom Bergeron (Hollywood Squares) steps into the emcee's shoes once occupied by Bob Saget to introduce a full hour of viewer videos vying for laughs and lucrativeness. Each week, the studio audience picks the first, second and third prize-winning videos, which earn their submitters $10,000, $3,000 and $2,000, respectively. Each episode's top videos are then in the running for a $100,000 grand prize. The season premiere includes clips of a dog that gives a new meaning to "air hockey" and a woman who doesn't take kindly to being awakened.

8 p.m. BRAVO

Movie: Gods and Monsters

Ian McKellen earned an Academy Award nomination for his portrayal of British director James Whale (Frankenstein) in this 1998 drama, a fictionalized account of the last year of Whale's life. Reclusive and mildly incapacitated by a stroke, the openly gay Whale takes a liking to a young gardener (Brendan Fraser), who becomes a platonic friend and a sounding board for his reminiscences about his experiences during World War I and his career — most notably, the making of Bride of Frankenstein. Lynn Redgrave was also nominated for an Oscar for her performance as Whale's housekeeper. Lolita

Dav-idovich also stars.

8 p.m. SHOWTIME

Movie: Rules of Engagement

Marine Col. Terry Childers (Samuel L. Jackson) is facing charges for opening fire on an angry mob outside the U.S.

Embassy in Yemen. He calls on his old friend and Vietnam War buddy Hays Hodges, (Tommy Lee Jones), a recently retired military lawyer, to defend him. Because Hodges owes Childers his life, he agrees — despite the fact it's a political hot potato, the prosecution has a strong case, and losing could taint both Hodges' reputation and that of his general father, Ben Kingsley and Bruce Greenwood also star in this taut drama from 2000.

9 p.m. A&E

Movie: S.O.B.

Blake Edwards' 1981 satire on the movie industry is best remembered for one thing: Julie Andrews topless. Richard Mulligan plays a suicidal director hoping to redeem his latest flop, a sweet romance, by redoing it as an erotic thriller, complete with frontal nudity by the squeaky-clean leading lady (Andrews), who has pens to be the director's wife. Robert Preston, William Holden, Robert Vaughn and Larry Hagman also star, with a scene-stealing performance by Loretta Swit as a gossip columnist.

9 p.m. FOX

Dark Angel

Now that Lydecker (John Savage) knows who they are, Max and Zack (Jessica Alba, William Gregory Lee) need to get out of Seattle and out of sight. And that's the plan, until Max finds out that Logan (Michael Weatherly) is in mortal danger. She knows what she's risking by going back to save him, but she doesn't know that Normal (J.C. MacKenzie) has decided this is a perfect time to tell the cops what he knows about her. Richard Gunn also stars in "Blah Blah Wolf Wolf."

10 p.m. CBS

48 Hours

The newsmagazine brings a new feature to its new night: a series of reports based on the works of celebrated true-crime authors. The opening installment, Murder They Wrote: While innocents Slept, recounts a chilling story related in Adrian Havill's book of the same name. Garrett Wilson of Maryland lost his 5-month-old son and namesake to sudden infant death syndrome in 1987. That was the official finding, but Wilson's third wife, the child's mother, had her suspicions, especially since Wilson had taken out life insurance on the baby. When the case was reopened, another shocker awaited. A child from a previous marriage had also died mysteriously. Wilson was convicted of his son's murder, but his fourth wife continues to maintain his innocence.

10 p.m. TCM

Movie: King Kong

Forget Godzilla. The granddaddy of all movie monsters is the unforgettable Kong. Fay Wray, Bruce Cabot and Robert Armstrong are the human stars of the 1933 classic about giant ape brought down by human greed and his own soft spot for a certain blond beauty. But the
