Dream Factory asking for help

The Dream Factory of Eastern Kentucky Inc. is once again working to make another dream come true for a needy child.

This time the focus is on Corey Prater, a 9-year-old Prestonsburg boy who was diagnosed at the University of Kentucky Medical Center with encephalomalacia, a debilitating disease with an unknown origin which has confined him to a wheelchair and rendered him unable to walk or talk.

Darrel and Denna Prater, Corey's parents, submitted their son's application to the Dream Factory detailing his dream.

Corey's dream is to go to DisneyWorld.

According to the Praters, their son would "enjoy all the sights and attractions of DisneyWorld with all the characters making over children like Corey."

The Dream Factory is asking for donations to make Corey's dream become reality and has estimated the cost of the trip to DisneyWorld to be between $2,000 and $3,000.

Wohlford out, Stovall in as warden

by MARY MUSIC
STAFF WRITER

Investigations that have followed since the riot of over 600 inmates at the Otter Creek Correctional Facility have brought about the dismissal of two Otter Creek administrators.

William Wohlford, who had been warden since April 1997, was dismissed from his duties late Thursday afternoon by Corrections Corporation of America officials.

David Carroll, who held the position of deputy warden, was also dismissed, according to CCA representative Steve Owen.

"You give your 100 percent for a company and that's how you're treated," said Wohlford.

CCA officials wouldn't comment on the specific details of the dismissals. The only information given by Owen was that the dismissals involved "various policy violations."

When asked if the dismissals resulted from allegations regarding alleged orders for "unnecessary shots" to be fired during the riot, Jerry Peterson, CCA Division 1 Director of the eastern region, said that the dismissals were a result of a "pulmination" of events.

"I'm not going to sit here and say the whole reason they were dismissed is based upon a particular incident," said Peterson.

"CCA likes to have a good management team with people that are doing the right things. There were a lot of other things that were looked at, too."

"As far as the amount of shots fired," continued Peterson, "It's

Court receives proposed districts

by RALPH B. DAVIS
MANAGING EDITOR

Members of the Floyd County Fiscal Court got their first look Tuesday at a proposal to redraw the county's political boundaries.

The court is faced with redrawing districts in order to comply with voters' decision in the 2000 election to return the county to a magisterial form of government. That decision means the court's makeup will shift from three commissioners to four magistrates.

In addition, the issue of redistricting was scheduled to get at least a cursory glance this year even without the need to add a seat to the court, following the release of census numbers. Counties are required to re-examine their district boundaries every 10 years to ensure that population shifts have not left some districts with higher-than-reasonable numbers of residents.

In making the presentation to the fiscal court, James A. Duff, chairman of the fiscal court-appointed reapportionment commission, said that members of the committee attempted to follow state guidelines that magisterial districts be "compact, contiguous and the population of each district shall be as nearly equal as is reasonably possible," while not being unmindful of the historical and geographical boundaries of these districts."

Based on a census count of 42,441, the ideal magisterial district would contain roughly 10,600 residents.

By that estimate, two of the proposed districts — 3 and 4 — fall within population guidelines, totaling 10,200 and 10,700 residents, respectively.

The other two proposed districts fall further from the mark. The proposal calls for district 2 to contain 9,400 people, varying from the ideal by 11.3 percent. District 1, meanwhile, would vary by 12.7 percent with 11,950 residents.

But members of the reapportionment committee said census figures don't tell the whole story and that geography and voter reg-

Gunnells could face death penalty

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

James Austin Gunnells' arrest for the murder of Bonnie Jean Fraley Hall on July 11 may have the makings of a death penalty case if the criteria fall into place, according to the commonwealth's attorney's office.

The key question at this stage is what makes a death penalty case different than a case involving murder that results in a 25 years-to-life sentence.

According to state law, there are eight aggravating circumstances which may be supported by the evidence and could, if considered by the judge or included in his instructions to the jury, move a 25-to-life sentence into the realm of a death penalty case.

James Gunnells

These "aggravators," as well as eight mitigating circumstances, such as the defendant's mental condition at the time of the offense, would be considered by a jury at the conclusion of evidence and arguments before a recommendation would be made for sentencing. The judge would then, with the finding of the jury, apply a sentence within the limits prescribed by law.

Of the eight aggravating circumstances, Gunnells could potentially be matched to one.

The second aggravating circumstance listed in the Kentucky Revised Statutes that could merit consideration for seeking a death penalty against an offender is that if the offense of murder or kidnapping "was

PETA lobbying for maximum against trainer, but prosecutor says that will be difficult

by MARY MUSIC
STAFF WRITER

An animal rights group which has taken interest in the fate of a former Ohio horse trainer charged with second-degree cruelty after the death of a race horse in July 2000, may have less hope for the maximum penalty sentence they hoped to see with the conclusion of the trial.

Matthew Poe, of research, investigations and rescue department for People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, sent a letter to the county attorney's office last week asking that office to prosecute the case against Jason Brewer for the death of race horse Dark Skies "most vigorously."

Dark Skies, owned by Harla Renae Conn, died as a result of what many are calling "excessively abusive training" by Brewer. But that fact is harder to prove in a court of law, says County Attorney Keith Bartley.

In the letter, Poe states that members of PETA, on behalf of people who are continually concerned about the circumstances of the case, ask that Brewer receive the "maximum penalty" allowable by law and that he be "barred from owning, harboring or having contact with animals."

"We feel as though this is a unique opportunity for not only Floyd County, not only in the region, but also throughout the racing industry," said Amy Rhode, PETA cruelty case worker. "It is extremely rare for someone being charged with

Agreeable mood strikes Wayland council meeting

by MARY MUSIC
STAFF WRITER

During recent months, Wayland city council members have given the general impression of being divided over different issues. But that atmosphere was surprisingly changed at Monday's meeting, with all members voting unanimously for the replacement of former police officer Aaron Kidd.

"Now that's a first," said Commissioner Carl "Rady" Martin, smiling when all hands raised in favor of hiring Maytown resident Keith Frasure as the new city police officer. "I believe that's the first unanimous vote we've ever had."

Kidd turned in his resignation to Mayor Tommy Murphy two months ago and began working with the state, shortly after the commission debated to place him on a day-shift schedule.

The two-month wait to replace Kidd is now over for the city of Wayland, after Frasure, who was formerly employed as a bailiff at the Floyd County Courthouse, was appointed into that position on Monday.

"We need somebody awful bad," said Commissioner Curtis Tufts, eagerly raising his hand to second the motion to hire Frasure.

A two-car wreck in Prestonsburg Monday morning resulted in one of the vehicles colliding with a utility pole. The impact with the pole, left, was so hard that the pole splintered and had to be replaced. As a precautionary measure, traffic along North Lake Drive, above, was diverted to back streets.

Tufts, along with other members of the commission, voiced concerns about speeding which they noted had increased in the city limits recently, and "getting somebody on the job" as quickly as possible seemed to be the string that pulled the seemingly once divided council together.

"Somebody's going to get killed on these back streets," said Murphy.

The only concern voiced by the commission about the hiring of Frasure came about after Martin asked if Frasure could begin his position on the following day.

Considering the fact that Frasure has yet to complete some of the minimum qualifications for police certification which are required by the Justice Cabinet, Murphy hesitated to agree with Martin.

Murphy stated that he wanted to wait until Frasure had completed all 17 steps of the qualification process before officially hiring him. Included in those requirements are the completion of 16 weeks of police training, a criminal background check, drug screening test, a psychological examination and a physical agility test.

"I'm not saying that I've got anything against hiring Keith. I know him," said Murphy. "I'm just trying to cover our hind end."

According newly-appointed city attorney Stacy Marshall, however, the wait wasn't necessary. Marshall stated that he "saw no problem" if Frasure were to complete those requirements after he is already hired by the city of Wayland because he had already received some training and experience during his three-month employment as a bailiff at the Floyd County Courthouse.

"I think you should hire Keith under the condition that he has all these examinations completed before he actually begins the job," said Marshall.

It wasn't long after that suggestion was placed on the floor, that the vote was passed unanimously to hire Frasure, and details about his salary of more than $15,000 annually, and the purchase of his uniforms began. The council then voted to pay for all examinations needed by Frasure to complete the qualification process, which, said Murphy, could only take a matter of days.

"I think Keith will do a good job for us," said Martin. "I just want him working as soon as possible."

During the meeting, council members also approved:

■ Requests from the state to change the name of Route 7 to Kelly Coleman Highway. Coleman, a former Wayland resident, was named first "Mr. Basketball" in Kentucky.

■ Hired Steve Mills to paint and clean Wayland Town Hall "inside and out" for $1,600.

■ Assigned tasks to members to get permission from property owners to tear down buildings and former homes in Wayland that "need to be condemned."

■ Discussed placing a speed limit sign at the end of Front Street.

All members of the commission were present at the meeting, including recently appointed commissioner Nadine Conley, who was appointed to replace former Commissioner Betty Mulkey several months ago.

The trip would include three days at DisneyWorld, one day at Universal Studios and one day at Sea World.

In addition, there would be a visit to "Give the Kids the World" while in the local area as well.

District

figures don't tell the whole story and that geography and voter registration played a key role their decisions.

Paul Bailey, who represented commissioner district 3 on the reapportionment commission, said the commission ran into quite a few discrepancies when examining census data. For example, he said the commission found several examples of precincts containing more registered voters than their populations according to the census.

County Judge-Executive Paul Hunt Thompson seemed satisfied with the reapportionment commission's work, saying it was no easy job. "I'm sure there'll be a lot of Monday morning quarterbacks," Thompson said. "But if they actually worked on it [redrawing districts], they would see how difficult it is."

"I appreciate the court's comments on how hard we worked," Duff said in response. "I hope 42,000 Floyd Countians feel the same."

The fiscal court now has 45 days to review the commission's proposal before making any modifications and approving a final map. Thompson said the court would welcome input from the public during that time.

cruelty behind premise of the racing industry to be taken to the court system."

Rhodes says that cruelty laws in many states have "exempted" the racing industry.

"People who participate in horse racing industry view them as machines," said Rhodes. "They don't view them like domestic animals such as dogs and cats. They view them for how much money they can get from them, and using cruel 'training' methods, to make more ... this includes using drugs on the horses so that they don't feel pain, running horses with undeveloped bones, whipping or beating them during training, and when they get old, they are taken to the slaughterhouse."

Rhodes said that those are some of the many reasons that Floyd County should take the Brewer case into "serious consideration."

County Attorney Keith Bartley said that his feelings about Brewer are similar to those of PETA. Bartley said that he wants a conviction in the case and, likewise, wants a maximum penalty, but those things, said Bartley, may not be so easy to achieve given the information and proof available to the county attorney's office.

Conn, owner of Dark Skies, according to Bartley, denies any wrong-doing on behalf of Brewer. Conn has taken that belief so strongly that she is paying for Brewer's defense, hiring state Rep. Greg Stumbo.

To strengthen the wall which seems to discourage prosecution in the case, no autopsy was performed on the horse. Bartley said that there is no one who is able to "officially" indicate or present evidence that Dark Skies died as a result of the "beating" by Brewer.

"What we have is no evidence whatsoever that whipping — or beating — by Brewer caused this horse's death. All we're left with is the prosecution of a trainer who is charged with excessively whipping — or we'll call it beating — of this horse beyond reasonable doubt in the jury's mind," said Bartley. "Combine that with the fact that the owners of the horse are actually paying for the defense, and what you have is a very difficult case."

Bartley said the county attorney's office will discuss the "possibility" of an out-of-court resolution.

"We want a guilty plea," said Bartley, "but PETA has to understand that every case has to stand on its own merits. If we have no proof, maximum sentence is not as easily obtained."

Brewer's license was suspended for one year following the incident.

committed while the offender was engaged in the commission of arson in the first degree, robbery in the first degree, burglary in the first degree, rape in the first degree, or sodomy in the first degree."

Along with the charge of murder, Gunnells also faces a first-degree robbery charge in connection to his arrest for having allegedly taken money from the store's register before leaving in Hall's vehicle.

According to the commonwealth's attorney's office, although the case had not been officially referred to a grand jury as of yesterday leaving a thin line for speculation until the case is further examined by that office, there may be an effort to seek the death penalty for Gunnells if certain criteria applied.

"We haven't heard all the evidence yet," said Commonwealth's Attorney Brent Turner. "But it certainly appears that there could be one or two of those (aggravating circumstances) that could apply. And if they did, we would certainly consider the death penalty."

Turner, who has been in contact with Floyd County Coroner Roger Nelson and investigating officers in the case since first learning of Hall's murder, explained that with any case involving murder there would be a certain amount of energy given to how the death penalty weighs into the equation, also mentioning that his office has a personal preference to speak to the victim's family before going in any one direction with a case.

"We make it a point to talk to the victim's family, and I haven't had the chance to do that yet," Turner said.

Harolyn Howard of the public advocate's office, who was appointed Gunnells' attorney in the case, declined to comment on any early plans for defense but did go on to say she expects the preliminary hearing scheduled for today to reveal needed information for both sides.

"I expect the investigating officers to tell what they have found out," said Howard. "However, we won't have anything to offer as far as the case is concerned at that time."

Standing proudly with Wayland Mayor Tommy Murphy, Commissioner Curtis Tufts was all smiles after receiving a governor's pardon just before the meeting began on Monday. Tufts pleaded guilty to third-degree assault, a class D felony, in 1979, after he had allegedly been involved in a domestic altercation. Tufts was restored "all rights of citizenship" by the Gov. Paul Patton because his conduct has been of an "exemplary nature."

Worth Repeating ...

Were we Directed from Washington when to sow, and when to reap, we should soon want bread.

— Thomas Jefferson

Amendment 1

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people to peaceably assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

Our View

An outrageous example of flaws in the system

Somewhere along the way, Kentucky's criminal justice system proved to be an abysmal failure for Bonnie Jean Fraley Hall.

Early Wednesday morning, Hall was working the graveyard shift at the Cardinal Mart along Lancer-Watergap Road when an armed robber stole the contents of the store's cash register, her car and her life.

What is especially unconscionable about this brutal crime is that it very likely could have been prevented had the state fulfilled its obligation to protect the public.

James Austin Gunnells, the man who police say has confessed to shooting Hall, was released from prison June 8, having served only 20 months of a five-year sentence for an escape charge.

"What is especially unconscionable about this brutal crime is that it very likely could have been prevented had the state fulfilled its obligation to protect the public."

What is more perplexing is that Gunnells is not exactly a model for being worthy of a second chance. In 1997, he was sentenced in Fayette County to three years in prison for a theft charge. In 1998, a Morgan County court sentenced him to one year for a wanton endangerment charge and two years for receiving stolen property. Later that year, he was ordered to serve another year for another theft charge in Floyd County.

Amazingly, Gunnells was allowed extraordinary freedom for a multiple felon, being placed on a county jail work crew in Fayette County. The folly of that decision was exposed when he walked away from his job in 1999, resulting in a five-year sentence for escape.

The shock, then, is not that Gunnells now sits in the Floyd County Detention Center waiting for a grand jury to indict him for murder and other charges which could earn him a death sentence if he is convicted. The fact that he was granted freedom after serving less than half his sentence is the true outrage.

In the four years and 10 months that Gunnells has been an adult, he has racked up a record that includes five felony convictions, one of which shows the lack of respect he had for the criminal justice system which incarcerated him. For that same system to turn around and reward him with freedom is evidence of a sweeping lack of common sense.

Worse, Gunnells' early release is indirectly responsible for Hall's death.

By his own admission, Gunnells shot Hall, though it is a near certainty he will challenge whether he is to be held criminally responsible for that act. Regardless, had he still been behind bars, that could not have happened.

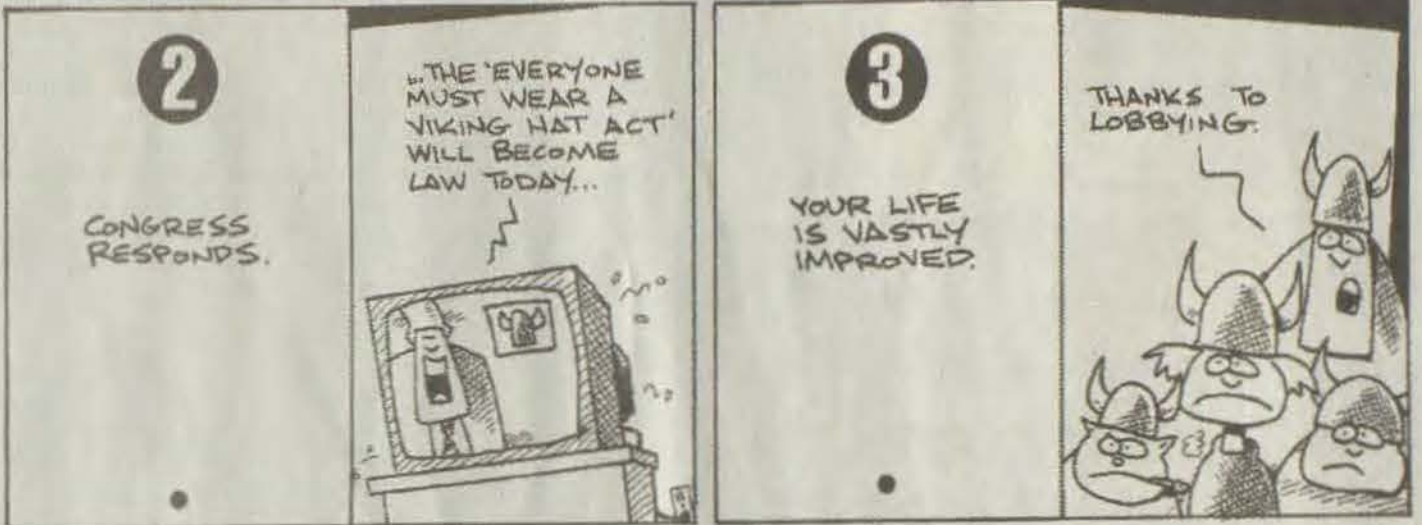

Prisons do not exist solely to punish criminals. They also serve to protect the public by separating offenders from society so they can cause no more harm.

In that respect, the system failed miserably.

Mary's Musings

Take it or leave it

I have never been a culinary magician. It isn't that I can't cook. I can cook. It's simply that I have spent the majority of my married life trying to live up to something deemed impossible — Nanny's cooking. I've been competing against "Nanny's kitchen" ever since the moment I said "I do."

As you should well know, no one in the world can even come close to the aroma that rises from a grandmother's kitchen.

The smell of bacon cooking in the morning, homemade biscuits smothered with chipped beef gravy, a Sunday delicacy of chicken and dumplings, homemade apple pies and special walnut stuffing are all part of the never-ending saga which is Nanny's kitchen.

How can anyone in the world compare to that? (Lucky me.)

I used to go to great lengths to prepare the finest meals for my husband, Sean. There have been good "inventions," as well as, speaking truthfully, ones that were not so good. (Okay, okay, ones that were terrible.) During our newlywed years, I would even decorate his plate, placing the food in perfect proportions, each time reminding him that "You can tell how much a woman loves you by how she puts your food on your plate."

That was my calling card, of sorts. Never was a meal cooked during the formative years of our marriage that those words didn't follow. I put my heart into every meal he ate.

As the newness of our marriage wore off and I began to learn more about Sean, and he, likewise about me, it became much easier for us to talk more openly with one another. Sean decided to lay all his cards on the table.

That's when it all began. It seemed as though nothing I ever fixed was satisfying to my husband.

Even in the months that followed, he was ready to tell me how that nothing I cooked seemed comparable in any shape, form or fashion to his beloved Nanny's cooking.

"It's all right," or "it's decent" were the explanations he offered as he returned half-eaten plates of food to the counter. His "uncompliments," if there is such a thing, began haunting me.

My chili isn't "hot" enough, my cornbread isn't "fluffy" enough, and numerous attempts to turn chicken into perfection has left me wanting — all the while, Sean is telling me just how Nanny uses "this brand," and she "does this," and she "does that" to make her food taste so wonderful.

He told me that I needed to take cooking lessons — lessons from his Nanny, mind you — so that I could "learn how to cook."

I tried to comply. I obtained a few recipes from Nanny in an attempt to recreate some childhood flavor Sean felt he needed so desperately.

The drug war is doomed

by SHELDON RICHMAN

The announcement that we have a new drug czar (a nice term for a government official in America, no?) reminded me of a recent appearance on CNN of the previous drug czar, Gen. Barry McCaffrey, and U.S. Rep. Bob Barr, Republican of Georgia. They were discussing the need to be tough with drug users and traffickers.

Nothing astounding about that. But there came a moment that people should have found truly astounding. Both the former czar and Mr. Barr agreed that one of first things we need if the War on Drugs is to succeed once and for all is "drug-free prisons!"

Drug-free prisons? They aren't drug-free now? Of course they're not. How many Americans know that?

That prisons are still not drug-free sheds new light on the War on Drugs. After all, if they can't keep drugs out of prisons, how do they expect to eliminate them from society at large?

Think about it. In prison the inmates are under constant surveillance. Their lives are controlled, theoretically, down to the most minute detail. Their contact with the outside world is subject to the strictest scrutiny. And yet prisoners have no trouble getting any drug you can name.

How can that be? Obviously, they get help from the very people who are watching them so closely. The corruption of prison guards is an old story. There has never been a time when prison guards and even higher-ups were not tempted by bribes to at least look the other way while prisoners did things they were not supposed to do. We know, for instance, that mobsters have continued running their criminal operations from behind bars.

That prison officials would permit, and even enable, inmates to get illegal drugs was predictable for the simple reason that drug dealing is highly lucrative. There's plenty of money available to bribe officials with. And it is precisely their illegality that makes dealing drugs so profitable. How's that for irony?

We live in a dreamland when it comes to the War on Drugs. We pretend that all government has to do to make drugs disappear from society is to declare them illegal. If they don't disappear, it's because the War on Drugs isn't being fought fiercely enough or with enough money.

That isn't analysis. It's wishful thinking.

The application of economic principles will indicate where the drug warriors and their supporters go wrong. First, there is a demand for drugs. That is nothing new. In every society from time immemorial there has been a demand for intoxicants and narcotics. Most of the people who've used those substances have done so responsibly. A small percentage have not. At this late date in human history, it is unlikely that the demand for drugs will vanish.

Second, where there is demand, there will be supply. If people are willing to pay for a product, others will be willing to provide it. If the buyers want drugs badly enough, they will be prepared to compensate the sellers for any dangers involved in providing them. The sellers will be prepared to do what is necessary to reap the big profits, including bribing officials who would otherwise stand in their way.

The logical conclusion, amply supported by long experience, is that if the government declares drugs illegal, they won't disappear, but will simply become the province of the black market. But that creates worse social problems

Home Owners CORNER
by Stan Stumbo & Vancel Thacker
A GRASS ROOTS STRATEGY

Over time, the shallow layer of soil in which most lawns reside becomes compacted, making it more difficult for air, water, and vital nutrients to penetrate all the way down to the grass roots. This problem can be remedied with the use of a power core aerator, which is commonly available for rent. A self-propelled lawn machine of this type makes use of rows of evenly spaced, hollow, 3/4-inch spoons, which penetrate the soil down to a depth of up to three inches. The spoons pull out plugs of soil, which leaves a pattern of holes in the lawn through which water, air, and nutrients can penetrate down to the grass roots. Aerating the lawn annually helps promote its health.

There are many steps in lawn care, and aerating, while important, is one many people overlook or forget about. Every do-it-yourself project is made easier by the folks at HINDMAN PROMART. Our main goal is to provide you with the right tools, hardware, and expert advice you may need, so that you can achieve professional looking results. You will always be treated most courteously here at #1 Pro St., Hindman (785-3151). Most major credit cards accepted. Need windows or doors? We carry the outstanding Peachtree line. Count on us for your total building supply needs.

HINT: In areas where there is a hard freeze, lawns should be aerated right after the first dew in August. In warmer climates, lawns should be aerated in the spring.

A collection of beautiful quilts such as the one pictured, "Wreath of Flowers," designed by Illene Hinkle, will be on display at Jenny Wiley Theatre, Sunday, July 29, from 5 - 8 p.m., just prior to a production of "The Legend of Jenny Wiley" that will begin at 8:15 p.m.

Quilt Display and Giveaway at Jenny Wiley Theatre

Always committed to bringing local artistic talent into the spotlight, Jenny Wiley Theatre will be displaying a beautiful collection of locally-made quilts on Sunday July 29 from 5:00 pm to 8:00 pm. The display, which will take place in the Wilkinson Stumbo Convention Center, will be followed by a performance of The Legend of Jenny Wiley at 8:15 p.m. in the amphitheatre. One lucky audience member chosen at random will get to take home a lovely handmade lap quilt from the display!

The quilts to be on display were made by a quilting group from Inez. Led by home economics teacher, Marcy Cornett, and homemaker and city commissioner Ann Maynard, the group meets every Monday evening in the home economics room at Inez Middle School. Many of the groups 23 members are beginners, but led by the more experienced quilters, they have gained impressive skill in the art of quilting. Working together a block at a time, the group has collectively made quilts for charitable causes including the Kiwanis Club and the Relay For Life. Maynard and Cornett made the lap quilt that will be given away.

The quilt display will showcase one of our most functional and beautiful regional crafts. A wide variety of quilts will be exhibited, including such beloved patterns as Irish Chain, Primrose, Double Wedding Ring, and Christmas quilts. The display will include old family heirloom quilts as well as newer quilts made by the group members. The performance of The Legend of Jenny Wiley will follow at 8:15 pm. A musical version of the remarkable story of one of eastern Kentucky's earliest pioneers, this show is full of action, adventure and song. Together, the quilt display and The Legend of Jenny Wiley will provide a wonderful evening full of our regional history, heritage, and artistic talent.

Don't miss this special quilt display and The Legend of Jenny Wiley on Sunday July 29 at JWT! Located in scenic Jenny Wiley State Resort Park in Prestonsburg, Jenny Wiley Theatre is offering something for everyone this season. Shows include Annie, Fiddler on the Roof, You're a Good Man Charlie Brown, The Legend of Jenny Wiley and luncheon matinees of The Taffetas. Doors open at 7:30 pm and shows begin at 8:15 pm. Play It Safe Around Water All Summer Long Summer is almost here, and the National Spa & Pool Institute (NSPI) has water safety tips for families to keep in mind throughout the season.

"Make water safety a priority this summer," says Roger Galvin, CEO of NSPI. "Swimming, water recreation, and water sports are excellent and healthy family activities and these safety tips provide layers of protection, so everyone can play it safe in and around water."

To obtain a free faxed copy of NSPI's safety tips, simply dial 1-800-853-4768 and request document 950. Other brochures on water and swimming safety can be obtained free of charge either by calling 1-800-323-3996 or by visiting www.nspi.org.

NSPI's Water Safety Tips:

1. Supervision - Constant adult supervision is the primary precaution for which there is no substitute. Never take your eyes off a child when he or she is in or near a body of water, not even for a second. All other safety precautions should be used in addition to constant adult supervision. Don't consider your child to be "drown-proof" because you enrolled them in swimming class.

2. Toys - Toys, tricycles and other playthings should be stored away from the pool or spa area. A favorite toy left near the water can be a very strong attraction for a child.

3. Substance-free - Never use a pool or spa while, or after, consuming alcohol or any drugs. Consult a physician if taking any medication on a regular basis prior to swimming or using a spa.

4. Diving - Know the depth of the water prior to diving, and never dive into shallow water. Never dive into an aboveground pool. Learn safe diving.

5. Fences and gates - Fencing should be at least four feet high. Check local regulations for specific requirements in your area.

6. Door and gate alarms - Many devices are available that attach to pool/spa access doors and gates that will sound a loud chime when opened and closed. And placing alarms on sliding doors, windows and all exit doors will alert you to children leaving the house.

7. Perimeter and motion alarms - Infrared detector beams are among the high-tech safety options now available at very affordable prices. Infrared systems sound an alarm when the beam is crossed, and can be installed around the perimeter of a pool or spa. Water motion alarms are placed in the water along the edge of the pool and sound an alarm when the water is disturbed in any way.

8. Latches and locks - Fence gates should have latches that

In Loving Memory Of Chris Miller

Oct. 1, 1954-July 17, 1996

When life seems dark,
To be in God's keeping
Is a blessing;
For life holds sweet memories,
Full of beautiful flowers
That time cannot fade.
We hold these memories close
To our hearts;
Just to ease the pain
That is always there.

Wardan

just according to who's looking at it. Apparently, they felt that was what it took to maintain the situation, so that was what they did. The warden does have ability to authorize force if need be. He (Wohlford) may have felt that was necessary, if that's what he did."

Wohlford is now planning to move from his home in Wheelwright, which was provided as part of his salary.

"We did our best," said Wohlford, "and I can tell you that we are not going out with our heads down. Given the circumstances — no one was injured, and I feel I did my job — I will be leaving with my head up."

Wohlford took a moment during a short interview yesterday to express his gratitude toward former co-workers and acquaintances he has come to know during his employment with the facility.

"I would like to take this chance to say goodbye to everyone," said Wohlford. "There are a lot of good people in Wheelwright and good staff up there. I want to say thank you to the people of Wheelwright and people of Eastern Kentucky for everything they have done for me during my stay here. I am going to miss them."

Although no replacement has been named for the deputy warden's position, Randall Stovall, 44, a Texas native, stepped into the Wheelwright facility on Tuesday to fill Wohlford's previous position as Otter Creek's warden.

"This is a warden that is very knowledgeable in the line of the field of correction," said Owen, who formerly worked with Stovall. "He is one of the best wardens I have ever worked for. Considering his eagerness with involvement in the community, I believe he will be well received in Wheelwright. He will certainly make sure that community relations becomes a priority."

Stovall worked 20 years with the Texas Department of Criminal Justice before starting work in private correctional facilities in 1995. Most recently, Stovall was employed as a warden at Mineral Wells, a CCA facility in Brownsfield, Texas. That intermediate sanctioned facility housed minimum- to medium-security inmates, preparing them for conditional parole releases.

Stovall said he looks toward his appointment to warden at the facility as a "challenge."

"I feel good about being here and I look forward to the change," said Stovall. "I think it will be a challenge."

When asked about future plans for his tenure at Otter Creek, Stovall expressed his favor toward community involvement.

"I think we need to show support of the local community where we are housed at and in the county," said Stovall. "We're not here to take. We're here to give back to the community, whether it's participating in fund raisers, job fairs, or just being there or just being active. That's what it's really about."

Peterson expressed CCA's "utmost confidence" in Stovall because of his "excellent" job performance both in Texas and while working at CCA.

"We feel like he's a really good people person," said Peterson. "He pays attention to detail and, certainly, we felt this would be a really good place for Randy to come. The people and the folks here at the facility have a great attitude. The work ethic here is unbelievable in comparison to some other similar facilities. They work their hearts out up there, and we're really proud that we can be associated with this community. We feel like Randy will be one of those persons who will fit in and be a part of it. We know him and his capabilities and we have that confidence in him."

After settling in, Stovall, who arrived only yesterday, will step back to "look at the big picture." He plans to evaluate the current situation at the facility and decide what plans or changes need to be made in order to "impact the security" of the facility.

"I think we want to make sure folks down there in community feel safe about CCA and these inmates being up here in this facility," said Peterson. "That's important. People that worked up here on that night demonstrated strength in their knowledge and skills. It was scary, and they were scared, but I think they demonstrated through their ability a job well done. Everyone here and in the community need to know they were being well taken care of by the folks up here on this hill."

Referring to the night of the riot, Peterson expressed gratitude toward local support given by local law enforcement agencies, Floyd County Sheriff John K. Blackburn and Judge-Executive Paul Hunt Thompson.

"I just want them to know that we appreciate their help," said Peterson. "When I came up here the other morning, I don't know how many deputy sheriffs from different counties were here, and I don't know how many different trooper posts were here, but it just makes you swell up inside with good feelings to know you have all this help and support from the community. When you're in this business, you're glad to know there is support out there."

Other than getting "settled in," Stovall said his biggest problem is preparing a home for his family. His wife, Vicky, and his children, Stacey, 16, and twins, Randi and Trevor, 8, will be joining him in upcoming weeks.

CCA officials have not released whether investigations into the riot at Otter Creek are complete at this time, although many CCA officials have now left the facility.

Peterson said he expects an official release of the investigation within the next couple of weeks.

Attempts to contact Carroll were unsuccessful.

than the drugs. Since disputes in the black market cannot be settled peacefully in court, those who are least reluctant to use violence will rise to the top of the drug trade. Thus outlawing drugs inevitably increases the level of violence in society.

Further, as we have seen, black-market profits will be used to corrupt law enforcement — not only prison guards, but policemen, customs officials, judges and the military. The same thing will happen in foreign countries where the U.S. government tries to prosecute its war.

The Washington Post reported recently that in Peru, one of the U.S. government's partners in the War on Drugs, more than a dozen generals have been arrested on suspicion of drug-related corruption.

The next time you hear the drug czar proclaim success, just say to yourself: "They can't keep drugs out of prisons."

Musings

I made Nanny's chicken and dumplin's successfully on one occasion, but thereafter, it never tasted quite the same to Sean, although I used the exact same ingredients.

Then he began the pleading. I needed to learn how to cook chipped beef gravy, he said, just like Nanny used to make it. (Chipped beef gravy, he said, just like Nanny used to make it, he said.)

Tired of all the unsatisfying moments of "Thanks, but no thanks" and "Nanny uses this" and "Nanny uses that," I just quit. That's right. I quit. It's heart-wrenching and demeaning. Why even bother?

My strike began at least a year and a half ago. Since that time, Sean has been forced to choose his meals from a "10-minute or less" menu. Soups, sandwiches, hot dogs, warm-up pizzas, anything that takes less than 10 minutes and/or came preparedly frozen was just grand for me.

For several months, I have basically cooked only when I wanted to cook. I have made no special attempt to make anything special for Sean and his unappreciative tummy, nor have I given it a second thought.

The other day, Sean brought up the chipped beef gravy thing again. In four years, he said, knowing how much he loves this gravy, I have never once attempted to make it.

(Chipped beef gravy, he said, just like Nanny used to make it, he said.)

I made my first mistake by buying low-fat dried beef ... it wasn't something that I did intentionally, but it was something that Sean nearly went berserk over. "Low-fat dried beef!" he said. "This isn't what Nanny uses!"

I knew I was in for it. Well, I fixed his chipped beef gravy that morning for breakfast, but, of course, it wasn't nearly anything like his Nanny's.

He played with the substance for a while in his plate, hiding it under biscuits so that it looked like he had eaten it. He barely even nibbled it. I was devastated.

I am at the point where even when I do get it right — when I successfully capture the flavor he so longs to savor — he doesn't believe me.

"There's no way in the world you made this," he'd say to me. "You bought it, or somebody else made it, but you sure didn't."

Nanny, I love you dearly and all, and yes, I do think you're a wonderful cook, but, could you please tell your grandson to stop harassing me? Else, he's gonna spend the rest of his life eating from a box.

KHEAA again gives student loan borrowers break on insurance fee

Kentuckians taking out student loans to pay for college or technical training through the Federal Family Education Loan Program (FFELP) will not have to pay an insurance fee if the loan is guaranteed by the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA). KHEAA is the state agency that administers grant, scholarship, work-study, savings, and loan programs to help students pay for college or technical training.

The KHEAA board of directors voted at its June 28 meeting to again waive the one percent (1%) loan insurance fee for the 2001-2002 academic year, subject to periodic evaluation. This means students will have these funds to help pay their higher education expenses.

"KHEAA has waived the insurance fee on guaranteed student loans since August 1996," said Londa Lewis Wolanin, KHEAA's chief operating officer. "This waiver has saved students we serve more than $15 million in the past five years."

As the FFELP guarantor for Kentucky, KHEAA guarantees Federal Stafford, PLUS, and Consolidation Loans. Stafford Loans are for students, and PLUS Loans are for parents. Consolidation Loans are for borrowers who are repaying more than one federal student loan.

For more information about KHEAA's programs and services, visit KHEAA's web site www.kheaa.com; write to the KHEAA, 1050 US Highway 127 S, Frankfort, KY 40601-4323; or call (800) 928-8926, extension 7381.

Start of high school football season one month away

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

The start of the 2001 high school football season is now just one month away. The season will begin for most on Friday, Aug. 17 or Saturday, Aug. 18.

The Prestonsburg Blackcats' new football field is looking better and better with each passing hour. Everyone involved with the construction of the new field should be commended on a job well done.

Middlesboro and Boyle County are gone from Class AA, it's no secret. It's also no secret that the Prestonsburg football team, Region IV champs last season, has its sights set on a repeat of last year's playoff heroics.

Matt Stone is back. Kevin Younce is back. Chris Spriggs is back. Joe Willis is back. The Blackcats are loaded on both the offensive and defensive sides of the football as they head into the upcoming campaign. Things should be interesting at P'burg.

Little is known about new region foe Madison Southern. Southern replaces departed Middlesboro in Region IV, District 7.

With the exception of Prestonsburg, the 2000 season wasn't a very successful playoff year for Floyd County high schools. South Floyd missed out on the playoffs by dropping a must-win, playoff deciding 20-0 game to district foe Paintsville. Allen Central was a dismal 2-9 while Betsy Layne claimed a lone victory over the Rebels for their only win of the 2000 season. Allen Central is back in district competition this season after sitting last campaign out and competing in the KHSAA State Eight-Man Tournament.

Tim McCoy wants to bring the Betsy Layne football program up in similar fashion as he did at Jenkins High School. McCoy is determined to get the Bobcats back on the right track. By many estimations the chore of getting the BLHS football program on the right track is a big chore

East Kentucky Raceway Park hosted another night of dirt track racing this past Friday night as fans made their way out to the Willard track to take in some of the exciting dirt track racing action. The track hosted a bluegrass music festival just one day later on Saturday.

David Brown guided his No. 33 machine to a late Model win, outracing a second-place Mike Sampson (7) and a third-place Ritchie Edwards (3). Charlie Edwards finished fourth in his No. 1 car and Mike Rhoten (3X) finished the race fifth.

Tim Moore drove the 69 Modified to a checkered flag outcome ahead of a contingent of Floyd County drivers.

Chris Prater (00) finished the Modified feature second while two Porters, Frank (6) and Scott (71), finished third and fourth, respectively. Scott Hall ended the Modified feature with a fifth-place showing.

Willard driver Terry Hicks got back to the winning side of things by taking this No. 64 Super Bomber to the winner's circle. Another Super Bomber familiar, Randy Fannin (77), finished the Super Bomber feature second ahead of a third-place Brian Pennington (15). Corey McKenzie (33) was fourth in the Super Bomber feature.

In Bomber action, it was a veteran driver taking the checkers as Paul Day hung on for the first-place win ahead of a hard-charging Harlan Ferguson (1F). Wayne Hughes was third in the 44 car and Ron Moore fifth in the 55 car.

Bill Harper managed a fifth-place finish in the 33 car while Joe Clevenger rounded out the feature field of Bombers with a sixth-place effort.

The Four-Cylinder feature saw

Marion Jude race to a win ahead of Paintsville, Ky. driver Jack Clevenger (-3), who finished second. Keith Anderson (94) was third in the Four-Cylinder feature race while Mike Gollihue (S99) and Dwayne Conley (660) finished fourth and fifth, respectively. Mike Ward (S15) rounded out the Four-Cylinder field with a sixth-place outing.

Arnie Fields continued his winning ways Friday night by taking home the checkered flag in the new Chevette division. Tim Prater (P11) was second in the Chevette class and Harlan

PHS, South Floyd return from Steamboat Classic

Lady Cats leave today for Coastal Carolina camp

Basketball players are made in the offseason. Summer days are most often vital to a team's overall performance in the winter.

A pair of local girls' basketball teams just returned from the prestigious Steamboat Classic. This year's Steamboat Classic was held in Murray, Teams from all over the United States took part in the annual event. Two 58th District girls teams, South Floyd and Prestonsburg, took part in the tournament.

"It was a great opportunity for our kids," said Prestonsburg Coach Harold Tackett. "We took two teams down, a younger team and an older team, and both got to play against some very good high school basketball teams from throughout the country."

Tackett noted that he was pleased with his team's overall performance in the Classic. He was particularly pleased with the play of senior-to-be Ramanda Music.

"Ramanda played real well for us down there," said Tackett. "She really stepped her play up."

Another senior-to-be, Vicki Bowling, who gave Tackett some valuable minutes in off the bench last season, also saw a considerable amount of playing time.

Last year's Floyd County Conference champs the Adams Middle School Lady Cats were also represented as point guard Molly Burchett got a wealth of varsity basketball experience right away.

"We virtually went down there, and as soon as we stepped off the bus, went in the gym, and played a game," commented Tackett. "Yeah, I'd definitely say that Molly got a quick introduction to high school basketball."

Haley spends summer Friday nights at East Kentucky Raceway Park

by STEVE LeMASTER

Brandon Haley, who will be a senior at Prestonsburg High School when school starts back in just a few short weeks, has kept busy this summer by working a summer job. Summer jobs for high schoolers or teenagers are common, but Haley's summer job is a little different. Haley is a flagman at a race track. Yeah, he's the guy who stands high stop the flag stand and virtually controls a portion of the race.

TIMES COLUMNIST

When Louisville Ballard star Brandon Bender once suggested that he might leave HIGH SCHOOL early for the NBA draft, few people laughed. Chances are, it'll probably happen someday soon.

With four prep standouts among the first eight players chosen in the recent NBA draft, you can bet that almost every high school player with a top 100 ranking on somebody's list is at least thinking about skipping college when the time comes to decide next spring.

Kobe Bryant, Kevin Garnett, Jermaine O'Neal and the like whetted the appetites but Kwame Brown being the first player taken in the draft, the floodgates are officially wide open.

Through a draft night trade, the Chicago Bulls ended up with a pair of high school big men, but there's one observer who has some serious doubts about what the likes of Brown, Tyson Chandler and Eddie Curry can accomplish at basketball's highest level.

"This is probably my least favorite high school class. With all these big guys, it's the P-word—potential. I think there are going to be some major busts," Hoop Scoop publisher Clark Francis said recently on WHAS Radio's "Sportstalk" show. Francis follows the prep recruiting scene as closely as anyone who doesn't coach.

"I think Kwame Brown is vastly overrated. Probably wins my award as the most up-and-down player in the class. I was reading somewhere the Kevin Garnett comparison, but there's one great big difference. He doesn't have Garnett's heart and work ethic and determination and that's what these people don't understand," he added.

Brown was set to play for Florida until the NBA opportunity presented itself. Francis, however, thinks the Gators will not miss a beat.

"David Lee is the franchise. And he's probably gonna stay for a few years," Francis said.

He likes Eddie Curry best in this class only because he's the biggest and strongest player.

Still, Francis says he can understand why NBA general managers and coaches are intrigued by the likes of Brown, Chandler and Curry. "The upside (of these high school guys) is a lot higher. I don't see Shane Battier being one of the best players in the game. But there's risk there. It could cost you your job (if you're wrong)," noted Francis.

Kentucky was not involved seriously with any of the early entrants to the NBA, focusing its class on players who could improve the backcourt. Rashad Carruth ranks highest among the group that also includes Mr. Basketball Josh Carrier, Adam Chiles and rugged swingman Chuck Hayes.

"You really improve the outside shooting dramatically," Francis said, adding that Carruth is a potential star while the others are projected as "role" players.

Francis ranked Kentucky's latest class "about 40th" but he says there should be no doubts about the ability of coach Tubby Smith as a recruiter.

"The people that want to talk about Tubby being a bad recruiter, I think that's the furthest thing from the truth. Getting Rashad Carruth and the other players they've gotten in the last two years, with the players they've already got in the program, is just absolutely amazing," Francis said. "He's probably one of the best recruiters in the country. I think they've done a great job identifying sleepers. I think the only missing piece is that they've never really brought in a great point guard, but that may not matter with everyone else they've got. A great point guard can mask weaknesses.

One of the biggest problems next season is finding playing time for everybody."

Sleeper

One backcourt star Kentucky elected not to pursue was Muhlenberg North's Patrick Sparks and Francis thinks Western Kentucky picked up a diamond in the rough by signing him.

"Patrick Sparks is one of the bigger sleepers in the country. I don't think people, nationally, know how good he is," said Francis.

Barbour Update

Antwain Barbour paid a visit to the UK campus last week and the timing was noteworthy. The trip came just a few days after Louisville received a recruiting commitment from a player that plays Barbour's wing position. Kentucky coach Tubby Smith made early inroads with Barbour via an intense recruitment shortly after Barbour led Elizabethtown to the 2000 Sweet 16 title. But Louisville's hiring of Rick Pitino was a headturning event, too, according to various recruiting services.

Since leaving E-town, Barbour has become arguably the top prospect in the country among junior college teams.

Barbour told one media outlet last week that he'll sign in November, but said to another that it would be spring before he made a choice and that the NBA is an option he's considering.

Contract talk

Extending contracts is a sensitive topic for the UK athletics department, giving how costly it was to pay Bill Curry and then Hal Mumme for "not coaching." However, extending the deal for Guy Morriss from one year to five was the right thing to do.

There's no doubt that recruiting efforts are hamstrung when a

Classic

One player who remains on the sidelines for Prestonsburg is Megan Hyden, a player who will also be a senior when school resumes in the fall.

"Megan will be ready," said Tackett. "She went to Murray with us and she really wanted to get in there and play, but we still have rest her for now."

A new face to the Prestonsburg squad is that of Avanelle Shafer. The 6-1 Shafer, Brandon Haley is the flag man at East Kentucky Raceway Park. Haley is also a member of the Prestonsburg High School band.

Haley

Haley is the flagman at East Kentucky Raceway Park in Willard. The track is located on Rt. 1, just 9 miles south of Grayson in Carter County.

Sure, the drivers make the race, but it is Haley who gives the stop and go signals, allowing the drivers to know when to go, when to stop, and when a caution is out, things like that, only more.

Haley, 17, has been flagging for four years. Although he like's flagging, he might eventually one day like to take his racing career a step further by actually driving a car.

"If I could do anything else in racing besides flagging, I'd like to drive a racecar," said Haley.

The race-knowledgeable Haley stays busy at Prestonsburg as he is also a member of the school's band. Other extracurricular activities include the Science Club and Science Olympiad. In addition to his band commitments and club ties, he also announces at PHS basketball games, calling the junior varsity roundball action.

In band, he plays percussion and saxophone. After high school Haley would like to go on to college, but would also like to stay involved with racing.

School, flagging, can one individual handle all those obligations and responsibilities?

It's kinda hectic," admitted Haley. "Band camp is coming up and that will conflict with a little bit with flagging at the racetrack, but, it's something I worked around last year."

The new football field at Prestonsburg High has all of the student body excited, especially the football team and the band. Being a member of the band, Haley is excited.

"I can't wait to play at the new field," the 17-year-old said. "Our football team was real good last year and will be even better this year, I'm real excited about the upcoming season." EKRP (East Kentucky Raceway Park) owner Jim Allen is pleased with Haley's performance at the track. "Brandon does a real good job for us," said Allen. "We're very fortunate to have a young, experienced talent like him."

To see Brandon Haley in action visit EKRP now or the Prestonsburg High School football field this fall. East Kentucky Raceway Park now races on both Friday and Saturday nights.

native was introduced to Kentucky high school Class A football in quick fashion. An open that week followed before the Raiders got on track with a pair of blowouts of county rival Betsy Layne (54-0) at home and Phelps (29-0) on the road, before finishing the season with an even 5-5 mark, just missing the Class A playoffs.

This year, South Floyd won't play at all in the opening week of the season. The Raiders have the opening Friday night of the season, Aug. 17 off, before traveling to Class A Raceland on August 24 to take on the Rams.

South Floyd travels to Betsy Layne on the last day of August, the 31st, to take on Tim McCoy's Bobcats. After battling Betsy Layne, South Floyd plays host to Class A counterparts Phelps, Pikeville, Fleming-Neon and Jenkins. Three of South Floyd's last four games are on the road before a home finale with Elkhorn City on October 26.

Pivotal road games in South Floyd's last three of four games, have the Raiders on the road Oct. 5 against Hazard, Oct. 12 at Allen Central and Oct. 19 at Paintsville against the Tigers.

Jones took over for Donnie Daniels and guided the Raiders to a 2-5 region record and 2-5 district mark.

Returning at quarterback for South Floyd will be senior Josh Johnson. The Raiders hope to make the upcoming season their first playoff season since the 1999 campaign.

Last year's South Floyd offense scored 304 total points. The Raider defense gave up 231 points.

Kentucky representation on National Federation Committees

Ruter joins Grigsby, Martin and others in Hall

TIMES STAFF REPORT

At the recent National Federation of High School's Summer Convention several committee appointments were approved that included members of the KHSAA staff and other representatives.

KHSAA Commissioner Louis Stout was elected to the NFHS Board of Directors, representing NFHS Section II, composed of the states of Delaware, Kentucky, Maryland, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, and Washington D.C. Executive Assistant Commissioner Brigid DeVries, after finishing a term as Chair of the NFHS Swimming and Diving Rules Committee, was appointed to serve as Section

II's representative on the NFHS Track and Field Rules Committee. Assistant Commissioner Larry Boucher was appointed to serve as Chair of the NFHS Basketball Rules Committee.

Also, Suzie Stammer, former Olympic Field Hockey official and teacher at Henry Clay High School in Lexington, was appointed to serve as Section II representative on the NFHS Hockey Rules Committee. Committee appointments are four-year terms.

"These appointments reflect the trust and reflect personnel here at the KHSAA, in addition to others in our state, have with the National Federation and other state associations," Commissioner Stout said.

"Kentuckians have long been involved in similar capacities as we continue to be identified as valuable contributors in the development of high school sports. I know we are all very excited about the opportunity to serve not only our own Kentucky athletes, but high school athletes across the nation," Stout concluded.

In the convention's closing activity, longtime high school official and supporter Charlie Ruter of Fern Creek was inducted as Kentucky's seventh individual into the National High School Sports Hall of Fame. Previous Kentucky inductees are Cliff Hagan, S.T. Roach, Geri Grigsby, Paul Hornung, Garnis Martin and William Kean.

Marshall adds women's golf, swimming and diving

TIMES STAFF REPORT

Marshall University Athletics Director Lance West made it a good Friday the 13th for many female athletes by announcing the addition of two sports. West announced Friday that women's golf and women's swimming and diving will become Marshall's 17th and 18th varsity sports beginning in the 2002-2003 academic year.

"We are really excited about the addition of women's swimming and resurrection of women's golf," said Associate Athletic Director and Senior Women's Administrator Beatrice Crane. "It's important to continue to round out our menu of programs that we offer at Marshall, in addition to continuing to provide opportunities for young women in the region to compete in athletics at the highest level."

Marshall sponsored women's golf from 1974 to 1982. During that span Marshall's women's golf program produced AIWA (Association on Intercollegiate Athletics for Women) National Tournament qualifiers in Nancy Bunton and Tammie Green. In 1982, Marshall was one of only 16 schools to qualify for the AIWA National Championship tournament as a team.

Joe Feaganes, who has served as Marshall's head men's golf coach for the past 30 years, will oversee both the men's and women's programs as Director of Golf. A search to find an assistant coach who will also work with both programs has also begun.

"I'm looking forward to the challenge of building the program," said Feaganes. "We are the only Division-I school in West Virginia that offers golf and we have been and will continue to be committed to keeping our talent here at home."

Marshall offered men's swimming in the late 1970s and early 1980s, winning five consecutive Southern Conference Championships from 1978 to 1982. A women's team was never organized during that time.

The Thundering Herd's women's swim team will utilize the Frederick A. Fitch Natatorium located in the Cam Henderson Center. The Olympic class pool with seating for 850 spectators has been used by local organizations and the university for recreational purposes since the men's swimming program was discontinued. Plans are being made to make upgrades to the facility to get it ready for the 2002-2003 swim season.

Marshall plans to hire a women's swimming and diving coach, and assistant for the swimming team, and the assistant for golf by October.

Seven Mid-American Conference schools currently sponsor women's golf and nine sponsor women's swimming.

The addition of these two programs will increase Marshall's current offering of 16 men's and women's sports to 18. Marshall's other programs are football, men's and women's basketball, baseball, men's and women's cross country, men's and women's indoor track and field, men's and women's outdoor track and field, men's golf, men's and women's soccer, softball, women's volleyball and women's tennis.

coach has only a one-year contract. Sure, players know the coach can leave at any time or get fired at any time, but at least they believe the situation is less likely to change if there's a long-term contract involved.

Yes, Morriss is unproven as a head coach, but there are many examples of successful coaches at the major college level who were promoted from assistant coach to the top spot.

Administrators are paid to make judgement calls in their hiring practices and find rising stars before someone else does.

Where Kentucky has gotten burned is in the area of "buyouts" and I'm guessing that when details of Morriss' new deal are made public, he won't have nearly as lucrative an exit package as his predecessors.

Of course, he might end up with one if the Wildcats exceed expectations and other schools come to court him. It's called leverage and coaches have it and if college A, won't play by the rules of that marketplace then college B, will.

Kentucky could make a stand against contracts that contain lucrative buyout provisions, but if the school is on an island with that position, then it will be difficult to retain or recruit the best coach available for the high-profile jobs of football and men's basketball.

to say the least. Nevertheless, it is one McCoy feels up to the challenge of taking on.

Staying in Class AA, at Belfry High School, is running back Jonah Caudill better than the graduated Curtis Childress? The Pirates also face the challenge this season of replacing quarterback Casey Lequire. At Breathitt County, head man Mike Holcomb will replace quarterback Allen Sperry. Prestonsburg, as most grid fans will remember, stopped Sperry almost cold when the Breathitt came knocking in the district championship game last November.

Football season is almost here. Will it be a region repeat for the Blackcats? Stay tuned.

Georgia native transfers to UK to play football

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

The University of Kentucky has another defensive end.

Vincent Burns Jr., a defensive end from Lake Park, Ga., has transferred to the University of Kentucky. The 6-2, 250-pound Burns saw action in nine for Northern Arizona as a freshman during the 2000 season. He managed 27 tackles for the Lumberjacks, three quarterback sacks and one pass interception. His 1 tackle for loss (-33 yards) ranked second on the team. Burns will practice with the University of Kentucky football team during the 2001 season, but will not play in the games because of the transfer rule.

He is the 25th player in the 2001 recruiting class.

"He's an outstanding athlete who played both defense and offense in high school. We need help on defense and I think he can definitely help us in the future," Coach Guy Morriss said. "After one year in the weight room with Coach Marc Hill, I think he will be really impressive next year."

Burns was a two-year letter-winner in football, track and field and basketball at Lowndes

High School in Valdosta, Ga. As a defensive wingback for the Vikings, Burns was named Most Valuable Player of the title game after scoring a touchdown, blocking a punt and recording five solo tackles. He was also named first-team all-state, all-region and all-area as a senior. His major is physical education. Burns joins Johnson Central defensive lineman Paul Webb who signed with Kentucky earlier this year.

UK Notebook: Camara back in action

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

Jules Camara is back playing basketball. But not at the University of Kentucky. Not yet anyway.

Camara, Kentucky's 6-11 power forward who sat out last season for violating the school's student-athlete alcohol policy, will see his first game action in 17 months when he suits up for the Senegalese National Team in the African Games next month in Morocco.

Camara, who hails from Dakar, Senegal, joined the squad last week as it opened training camp in New Jersey. The team will practice here in the States in order to face better competition before returning to Senegal Aug. 1. The African Games are scheduled for Aug. 4-14 with the winner earning a bid to the World Cup, a FIBA competition that will be held in Minneapolis, Minn. next summer.

Camara said it was a chance for him to compete against some good players. He went on to acknowledge that he hadn't had that chance in a while.

Joining Camara on the national team will be Mamadou N'diaye, the 7-foot center who played for Southeastern Conference foe Auburn two years ago and now plays for the NBA's Toronto Raptors.

Camara's coach has indicated the UK junior should play a starting role.

"Jules has earned this chance," UK Coach Tubby Smith said. "He's done everything we've asked him to do this past year. It was a tough year for him, but now he'll have an opportunity to represent his country in a national competition which I expect will help him tremendously heading into next season."

And it has been a while since Camara saw action for UK.

The last time Camara played in a game for Kentucky was March 18, 2000, when Syracuse eliminated the Cats in the second round of the NCAA Tournament. He finished his sophomore season starting 11 of the 31 games he played, averaging 7.2 points, 4.6 rebounds and 20.4 minutes per game.

Senegal will compete against Nigeria, Morocco and defending champ Angola, among others, in hopes of returning to the U.S. for the international competition next summer.

"That's my goal," Camara said, "to help Kentucky reach Atlanta (Final Four) next spring, and get to Minneapolis next summer with Senegal."

■ In other UK news, Brian Craig, a former Academic All-American at Florida and current head coach at Central Florida, has been named the new men's golf coach at the University of Kentucky. Craig replaces Steve Smitha, who resigned in May.

Craig spent the last two seasons at Central Florida, coaching the Golden Knights to a second-place finish in the 2001 Trans America Athletic Conference Tournament. He signed four nationally ranked golfers last season, three of which made the TAAC's All-Freshman team including one, Andy Hollis, who was named the league's Freshman of the Year.

Craig is a Gastonia, N.C. native.

Soak your feet in a pan of moonshine

by CLYDE PACK

No one knows what will become of Dubya's prescription plan. Depending upon who's talking, it'll be the best thing since peanut butter, or the ruination of mankind.

But one thing's apparent, at least to me: regardless of whichever way the pills spill, we eastern Kentuckians will have an advantage over those in other parts of the country. I base this bold prediction on the fact that for more than a dozen years, readers have been sending us old-time cures. While we've approached them as more of a curiosity than anything else, if it ever comes to a time that we'll need to rely on them, who knows? After all, something kept our ancestors going, before there were three or four drug stores within 15 minutes of every house in the county. Of course, the old folks had no cure for the more serious diseases, but when it came to those little day-to-day problems, they seemed to always have a solution.

Like, for instance, the following remedies for poison ivy:

■ Cover the afflicted area with a paste made from baking soda and boiled coffee.

■ Cover the afflicted area twice a day with a mixture of black molasses and baking soda.

■ Slice a green tomato and run the juice over the afflicted area.

■ Cover the area with lather from lye soap.

■ Cover the area with a mixture of crushed leaves from the nightshade bush, and canned cream.

■ Pour boiling water over Epsom salts. When cool, apply several times daily to the affected area.

■ Apply white shoe polish to the affected area.

Lots of folks have sent us sure-fire, can't miss cures for warts, too.

■ Tie as many knots as you have warts into a piece of yarn. Hide it, and the warts will go away.

■ Rub the wart with a dirty dish rag, then put it under the drip of the house. When the rag rots, the warts will be gone.

Here are others we've received for various ailments.

■ To get rid of gout, soak your feet in a pan of moonshine.

■ To cure an earache, roast cabbage stalks and squeeze the juice into your ear.

■ Dandelion is a good heart stimulant.

■ To avoid infection, never let the water out of a blister, before the sun goes down.

■ Rub plantain leaves on a bee or wasp sting, to ease the pain.

■ To cure corns, make a paste from crushed aspirin and home-made lard.

■ A mixture of castor oil and egg whites is an excellent cure for minor burns.

We recommend folks take all this with a grain of salt. However, if bad comes to worse...

As usual, the staff and sisters of St. Vincent's Mission have kept busy this summer making sure that the folks in their community - in particular, area children - have also kept busy. The Mission, located within the small and close-knit community of David, sponsored a "Things for Kids to Do" activity session that kept small hands and curious minds occupied throughout the months of June and July.

"We hope to continue this in summers to come," said Sister Weigand, "these kids are precious."

Among the activities that took place were some traditional Appalachian craft-making and storytelling. "We want the children to know of their heritage," said Sister Kathleen Weigand, "we think that it's very important that they know their history and develop a sense of pride for it. That's why we do this - we want to instill in the kids that this is part of their heritage and to preserve these traditions - it's good for the kids."

The children that visited St. Vincent's this summer received a "hands-on" education in regard to fashioning dolls and flowers from dried corn husks, weaving baskets, and participating in traditional Appalachian dances as well as learning some Appalachian tunes and tales. On the day that I visited, the children were engrossed in weaving colorful bits of yarn onto diamond-shaped frames to create what they informed me were "God's Eyes." Although the children were quite animated and eager to

Molly's dilemma

Our church sponsors a Vacation Bible School each year during school vacation, but I have always been busy with something else and didn't help with it. This year, however, Carol Harless, Gary Conn and I volunteered to provide refreshments which is also an important part of the program. For five evenings we could be found dispensing pizza, cookies, soft drinks and the like.

The children not only liked the foods we served, they also enjoyed the classes and activities, and I fell in love with children I'd never seen before. One of the little girls was five-year-old Molly, an absolute doll in my eyes. She had pretty blue eyes and blonde curls that bounced when she moved.

During a play time, I saw Molly seek out the pastor. "Are you the pastor of the Bible School?" she asked. And of course he answered, "Yes."

"Are you the pastor of the whole church?" she asked again, and again he said, "Yes, I am."

"Well, are you the pastor of the playground too?"

By now his curiosity was aroused, and he said, "Yes, I'm the pastor of the playground too. What can I do for you?"

"All the swings are taken," she told him, "and they say I can't have one now. Can you work out something so I can swing too?"

I believe Molly is pretty smart for a five-year-old, for she didn't go to the cooks, the teachers or even the Bible School director. She went to the main manager; and if that hadn't worked, I believe she might have said a prayer.

I had to get back to the kitchen so I didn't hear the answer he gave. But when I passed a window a little later, I could see the swings going back and forth. And I wasn't too surprised to see some pretty blonde curls bouncing with the breeze.

Get well wishes

I'd like to send special get well wishes to Hillard "Skeeter" Cecil, of Stanville, who is recuperating from major surgery at Central Baptist Hospital in Lexington. He had to have a leg amputated and, after being released from Central Baptist, he expects to spend some time at Cardinal Hill.

We hope he'll soon feel well enough to be home again.

Ask the CIS Skin self-exam

Q: How can I check my skin for cancer?

A: Everyone can check themselves for new growths and other changes in the skin. Skin cancer is the most common cancer in the United States. The cure rate for this disease could be 100 percent if all cases were found and brought to a doctor's attention before they had a chance to spread.

The best time to do a skin self-exam is after a shower or bath. Check your skin in a well-lighted room, using a full-length mirror and a hand-held mirror. Begin by learning where your birthmarks, moles and blemishes are, and what they usually look like.

Look at the front and back of your body in the mirror, then raise your arms and look at the left and right sides. Bend your elbows and check your palms and forearms, including the undersides and upper arms.

Examine the back and front of the legs. Also look between the buttocks and around the genital area. Sit and examine the feet, including the soles, and the spaces between the toes.

Check your face, neck and scalp. You may want to use a comb or a blow dryer to move hair so that you can see better.

By checking your skin regularly, you will know what is normal. See your doctor right away if you find anything unusual or different, such as a new mole, a change in the size, texture or color of an existing wart or mole, or a sore that does not heal.

In addition, you can have your doctor check your skin during routine physical exams.

Ruby Baisden Lafferty was pronounced dead on arrival at Highlands Regional Medical Center after the car she was a passenger in was struck at the intersection of KY 3 and KY 1428 at Lancer, by a Kentucky State Police cruiser driven by trooper John Blanton, who was in pursuit of a red Chevy S-10 pickup, KSP officials said....A Tuesday morning fire destroyed the home of Mrs. Shirley Fay Slone of Buckeye at Blue River. The blaze, fed by oxygen from open windows in the house, consumed the home within 35 minutes, according to Larry Adams, training officer for the David Volunteer Fire Department, which responded to the scene. Mrs. Slone's neighbor and relative, Roger Slone, who is a member of the fire department, recognized the odor of a house fire around 10 a.m. that morning. The house was empty. Slone discovered the blaze and reported the fire over his radio which speeded the response, Adams said....David School director Danny Greene was named as a member of the Prestonsburg Community College Advisory Board, Tuesday by Governor Wallace Wilkinson. Around 1 p.m., school workers heard the fire alarm sound at the school and investigated the adjoining building, which school board members voted to tear down earlier this year. The building's fire alarm system is networked with the school's, and workers had previously discovered the alarm sounded if the building's occupant, Charles Salyers, created a lot of smoke during his cooking....There died: Ruby Baisden Lafferty, 54, of Highland Avenue, Prestonsburg, was pronounced dead on arrival Sunday, at Highlands Regional Medical Center from injuries received in an automobile accident near Lancer; Ollie Music Gray, 72, of Greenup, formerly of Mays Branch, Prestonsburg, Tuesday, at Our Lady of Bellefonte in Russell; Nellie May Osborne, 92, of Myra, July 15, at the Mountain Manor Nursing Home in Pikeville; Pearl Hamilton Sr., 79, of Willard, Ohio, Thursday, in Hillside Acres Nursing Home, Willard; Raymond O'Brien, 65, of Indianapolis, Indiana, formerly of Hunter, Tuesday, in Indiana, following a long illness; Josie Ousley, 81, of Alger, Ohio, Saturday, at Hardin Memorial Hospital, Kenton; Mary Elizabeth Stephens Estep, 69, of Langley, Saturday, at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin; Sadie Hall, 93, of Kite, Saturday, at her residence; Charles Hicks, 42, of Wheelwright, Thursday, at McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital; Virda M. answer questions, few of them spoke first - so intent they were on creating these masterpieces named after the Almighty. "We're going to hang them up and they'll float in the wind," said one dedicated child as he worked diligently at his task.

This summer marked the first summer for the "things to do" arts and crafts sessions at St. Vincent's. Children from the David community as well as the surrounding communities of Blue River and Goodloe, and students from the Clark Elementary summer camp attended the fun-filled sessions. Each student was able to carry their crafted piece of art home where they undoubtedly received many words of praise from proud family members.

The children received instruction this summer from such dedicated folks as Charles Hall, a Pikeville musician and storyteller, Jennifer Woodrow, who is carrying on the art of Appalachian basket-weaving, and Marcy Cornett, a student from Hazard who is studying Appalachian dance.

Children were also provided lunch and a snack each day that they attended a class, which gave area moms a much deserved break from their own daily activities.

"We hope to continue this in summers to come," said Sister Weigand, "these kids are precious."

Cancer clusters...

Q: What is a "cancer cluster"?

A: A cancer cluster is an unusually high number of cancer cases within a group of people, a geographic area, or a period of time. A cancer cluster may be suspected when several family members, friends, neighbors or co-workers have been diagnosed with cancer.

A true cancer cluster is likely to involve one type of cancer rather than several different types, and a rare type of cancer rather than a common one. It also is likely to involve an unusually large number of cases of a certain cancer in an age group not usually affected by that type of cancer.

Scientists with special knowledge about diseases, statistics, and how diseases affect populations, investigate suspected disease clusters of any kind. The scientists use statistical methods to find out whether the reported number of cancer cases is really larger than normal.

Most cancers are caused by a combination of factors related to heredity and environment. For this reason, scientists studying a suspected cancer cluster often focus on these issues. Also, scientists studying a possible cancer cluster, consider only primary cancers, not cancers that have spread from other organs. The original cancer is called the primary cancer.

Cancer is almost always caused by a combination of lifestyle, heredity and environment factors that work together in ways that are not yet fully understood. Also, a cancer may not be found for 10 years after it begins. This makes it very difficult to pinpoint its cause. For these and other reasons, most reported cancer clusters are not proven to be true clusters.

Healthy Lawns Benefit Our Environment

By ASHTON RITCHIE
FOR NEWS USA

(NUE) - An important issue facing us today is how we treat the environment in which we live. What we do today becomes our legacy for the generations who will follow us.

Healthy, well-maintained lawns have both direct and indirect benefits for our environment. The indirect benefits are those you see and feel whenever you're surrounded by well-kept lawns and landscapes. These aesthetic effects, which contribute to an overall feeling of tranquility and relaxation, are increasingly important in a world so often ruled by stress and strain.

But the truly marvelous environmental contributions made by healthy lawns and landscaping can be seen in an examination of their direct benefits - the ways in which green, growing plants interact with the world around them.

Grass plants live by removing carbon dioxide from the air and producing oxygen in return. An average residential lawn of 5,000 square feet puts out enough oxygen for eight people every day. In comparison, it would take two 100-foot trees to produce the same amount of oxygen.

Lawns also are proven pollution fighters. The leaves of grass plants absorb harmful pollutants such as sulfur dioxide. In one year's time, an acre of healthy grass absorbs hundreds of pounds of pollutants, including those blamed for acid rain and the greenhouse effect.

In addition, grass controls erosion by knitting the soil together, trapping runoff water and eliminating many of the problems caused by dust and mud. Plus, it's one of the more efficient water savers you'll find in nature. A healthy lawn absorbs rainfall six times more effectively than a wheat field.

Clouds of wind-blown dust make for uncomfortable breathing, irritated eyes and reduced visibility. But grass is a great air cleanser. Grass slows the wind, allowing dust particles to settle on the leaves and eventually be washed back into the ground. Every year grass traps millions of tons of dust that would otherwise be blowing around.

When the heat is on, grass helps you keep your cool. Studies show that when street or sidewalk temperatures are at 100 degrees Fahrenheit or higher grass remains at a cool 75 F. That means that the front lawns on a block of eight houses perform the same cooling work as 70 tons of air conditioning - enough to cool off 23 homes.

And, a healthy lawn can be a pretty good insurance policy against unwanted pests. Properly mowed, residential lawns aren't very inviting to pests like rodents, snakes, mosquitoes, ticks and chiggers.

If you have lawn care questions, call the Scott's Helpline at 1-800-543-TURF or log on to www.askashton.com.

Mental health in the new millennium: Revolutionary changes and new frontiers

As we enter the new millennium, we can look back and see how amazingly far we have come in dealing with problems associated with mental illness—and look forward to more extraordinary breakthroughs in treating this disease that is still often associated with shame.

Nearly one of every five Americans is affected by a mental illness each year. Common symptoms include alterations in thinking, mood, and behavior that persist over time.

The American Psychiatric Association provides the following startling statistics. One in four families will have a member who will experience a mental illness; 25 million people will have some form of mental illness in any given six-month period; and 23 percent of American adults, age 18 and older, will suffer from a diagnosable mental disorder in a given year, but only half will report it to anyone.

There is much to celebrate, however, in how far we have come in treating mental disorders. Revolutionary changes in the field of psychiatry have occurred since the time of Sigmund Freud, 100 years ago. Modern treatment methods have replaced earlier primitive scientific means of dealing with mental illness in the early 20th century. "When the drug, lithium, was approved in 1970 to treat manic-depression, it was considered equivalent to the development of the wonder drug, penicillin," said Emmanuel Eze, MD, medical director of the psychiatric program at Three Rivers Medical Center in Louisiana. "And the amount of research that continues today in the behavioral health field is astounding."

The field of neuroscience and molecular genetics are taking giant leaps in understanding the biology of mental illness. Scientists are identifying genes and proteins important to understanding the development of diseases, such as schizophrenia. At one time schizophrenia was seen as hopeless. Patients were given medications that lessened their symptoms at best, but often caused serious side effects that did not allow them to live normal lives. Now schizophrenia is a treatable disorder and recovery is possible. Researchers report recovery rates approaching 68 percent, compared to the 10-20 percent rates of the past. This is a tremendous improvement, although not a complete cure.

Most mental illnesses are treatable, and today's treatment options are many. Medications are newer and better, and many more are on the way. For example, the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America recently reported that drug companies are currently working on 23 new drugs for Alzheimer's disease, and 18 for depression.

What hasn't gone away, however, is the stigma attached to mental illness. Similar to 100 years ago, there is still intense discrimination and stereotyping of the mentally ill. Individuals and their loved ones, therefore, hesitate or avoid seeking help, usually keeping the problem locked away as a big secret. Their main fear is being viewed as "not normal," and even dangerous, and being discriminated against in connection with employment, workplace promotions, or insurance.

The ultimate challenge of the future is to prevent mental illness, while at the same time reducing the stigma that surrounds it. People are beginning to recognize that mental health is part of one's overall well-being, and that many physical symptoms doctors see in their patients are caused by depression or other mental health problems.

A recent victory for Americans was the passage of "parity" legislation that now mandates that coverage for mental health services be equal with that of medical benefits. "Employers and others are finally realizing the close connection between our mental and physical health," said Jimmy Highfield, MSW, therapist at Three Rivers Medical Center. "According to the APA, four of the leading causes of disability in the U.S. are mental disorders."

New technologies are making it much easier to spread the word about the mind-body connection, and advances in treatment of the mentally ill. But more advocacy is needed to break down the barriers of shame, silence, and stigma that still exist.

Yes, times have truly changed, but in the new millennium there is much yet to be done. The best thing that anyone can do to promote awareness is to encourage a friend or loved one who has symptoms of mental illness to get help as soon as possible. If you have questions or would like more information, the Mental Health Unit at Three Rivers Medical Center offers free and confidential help. The 24-hour number to call is 1-800-249-3602.

Understand the rules to avoid embarrassment and problems

Ever had your credit or debit card purchase declined even though you're sure you haven't hit your limit? "It happens when you least expect it," said Steve Rhode, president and co-founder of Myvesta.org. "Blocking is usually the culprit."

Blocking is the financial industry's term for holding a portion of your credit line in anticipation of a large purchase. It is often used with car rentals and hotels, where people tend to charge a final bill after several days of use. The block is removed one or two days after the final charge is made.

"As long as you understand your card issuer's blocking policy, you can avoid embarrassing and annoying situations," added Rhode. "Problems typically stem from situations where the credit card is used to make a reservation, but the final bill is paid with a check or cash. In those cases, the block can stay on the person's account for as long as 15 days."

Myvesta.org offers the following tips to avoid problems associated with blocking:

- Check with your card issuer to verify your current available credit and to learn how long your particular card issuer will keep a block on your account.

- When you check in at the car rental counter or hotel desk, ask the clerk how much they will block on your card for that rental - and ask how they calculated that total.

- If you end up paying for the rental by a means other than the original credit card, ask the clerk to call your card issuer to have the block removed from your account.

- It is also a good idea to double-check with your card issuer later to be sure the block was, indeed, removed.
