THE BEST SCHOOL IN EASTERN KENTUCKY

PAINTSVILLE — Ask Central Elementary principal Billy Johnson what the key is to raising test scores along with enthusiasm and work ethic at his school and he will most likely say one word — "collaboration."

Central Elementary ranked fourth state in core content test scores in the recent statewide assessment among all state schools, and fifth overall in accountability testing. Of the remaining four schools tallying higher accountability scores — which include core content test scores, Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills scores and non-academic data such as dropout and attendance rates — three were in Oldham County and the other was in Daviess County, making Central arguably the best school in Eastern Kentucky, according to statewide test results.

That apex was not reached, however, without several ingredients coming together along with a dedicated set of faculty members and a set of expectations that kept both students and faculty with an eye on success and education, said Johnson.

"We have high expectations for students and ourselves," said school assessment coordinator Peggy Belhasen.

This simple explanation for success within a school is substantiated by the fact that students are viewed in this way from the moment they enter the primary level, consisting of a mix of kindergarten, first and second graders learning in what may be one of the more unique structures available at the grade school level today — an open

It was time for a much deserved lunch break at Johnson County's Central Elementary Monday afternoon as principal Billy Johnson helped monitor a group of hungry students. Central students placed fourth overall during statewide core content testing this year, making them statistically the best school in Eastern Kentucky.

Drug sweep charges sent to grand jury

PRESTONSBURG — Repercussions continued to fall on a group Floyd Countians arrested earlier in the week as part of a drug sweep by the sheriff's department. Seven of the nine originally arrested Monday morning came before District Judge James R. Allen for preliminary hearings.

Rodney Mullins, 31, of Melvin; Randy "Donkey Kong" Tackett, 32, of Price; Clifton "Cleo" Trammel, 43, of Wheelwright; Teresa Hagans, 29, of Langley; Kevin Hambey, 32, of Bevinsville; Christie Stroebel, 27, of Langley; and Craig Stone, 39, of Wheelwright appeared in court Friday morning to hear testimony given by Lt. Ricky Thornsberry of the Floyd County Sheriff's Department.

All seven were arrested in a countywide drug sweep Monday morning and have been charged with drug trafficking charges as well as other drug-related charges.

Thornsberry detailed, at the questioning of assistant county attorney Jimmy "Blue" Marcum, the facts of the cases against the seven suspects, explaining various points of interest concerning the methodology of the two-month investigation.

Cross-examination from various attorneys for the seven alleged dealers, including Jerry Patton, Gerald Derossett and Jimmy Webb in addition to attorneys from the Department of Public Advocacy, centered around details concerning the two-month investigation and the details surrounding, in par-

Jury tampering results in mistrial

 BREATHITT COUNTY BUREAU

JACKSON — On September 25, a defendant from an assault trial in Breathitt County allegedly tried to influence a juror, resulting in a mistrial.

The defendant, Timothy McIntosh, 20, of Junk Street, was originally charged with first-degree assault for allegedly beating and burning Anthony Stewart on October 10.

McIntosh is also alleged to have been aided by a partner, Scott Brewer.

William Gene Campbell was also a third party, but he pleaded guilty to an amended charge fourth-degree assault that was offered in a plea agreement in May. Campbell was sentenced to 12 months in jail, suspended for 12 months and ordered to complete a GED program.

$8.8 million Pikeville 'streetscape' aims to beautify downtown

Contractors will be finished this fall with the first phase of installing utilities underground. The project is part of a total $8.8 million effort to revitalize Pikeville's downtown through the Renaissance Gold program.

by GRETA FIELDS

PIKEVILLE — An $8.8 million "streetscape" is underway as part of a goal to make Pikeville one of the most beautiful small towns in America.

A downtown revitalization program is taking place under the Kentucky Main Street Program, which is an alliance of state agencies to help community commercial centers.

Pikeville is one of only seven communities in the state which is a "Renaissance Gold" community. Bronze communities are communities just starting to plan a revitalization project. Silver communities are communities which have a board and a "Main Street manager" in place.

The Main Street manager in Pikeville is a super-bright, 26-year-old native, Glendia Sawyers, who is totally committed making the project work for her home community.

"I didn't take this job to fail,"

Sawyers said.

Sawyers had an accounting degree from Morehead when she was hired, then flew off to Los Angeles for an intensive course in grant-writing. The 800-page grant proposal she wrote for Pikeville's downtown project took four months and involved an inventory of 76 buildings, many of them historical structures.

"When I was in college, I never thought that I would be administering an $8.8 million project in three years," she noted.

The project will occur in three phases, she said.

All of the utilities are going underground. The first phase takes in Main Street and Huffman Avenue. The second phase includes Pike Street, Second Street, Division Street, Grace Avenue and Caroline Avenue.

"Phase three is when we actually take the overhead system and turn the new system on,"

Sawyers said. "The third phase is when you see an actual result ... new asphalt. We'll be doing brick crosswalks at every intersection. We'll be doing landscaping and street-scaping."

"We found the original street lights when Pikeville had gas lights in the 1800s. The first time the downtown was ever lit, it was lit by gas, and they had these streetlights, and they will be installed again."

"We're doing trash receptacles ... that's the fun part of the project. You get to do the nice planters and the street lights. It's just a whole streetscape project."

All of the utilities will go underground, including electric, phone, cable, water, sewer, gas and storm drainage. The infrastructure will be upgraded in the process.

Welcome signs were recently installed after Sawyers saw some signs in Abingdon, Va., where Historic elk hunt excites Kentucky hunters

On Saturday, six hunters headed into the southeastern Kentucky woods in search of a species many people don't even know lives in the state. They were not tracking deer, looking for gobbling turkeys, or setting up decoys to draw in ducks. Instead, they were listening for bugles and pursuing tracks three times the size of those left by white-tailed deer. The hunters' quarry was bull elk.

As a result of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resource's elk restoration efforts, more than 1,200 wild elk once again roam in and around the Addington Enterprises Wildlife Management Area near Hazard. For the first time in more than 150 years, a few select hunters will get an opportunity to harvest one of these large-antlered, white-rumped members of the deer family.

The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation, a nationwide wildlife conservation group, is thrilled that Kentucky's elk herd is healthy enough to support a fair-chase hunt in the wild. "The return of wild, free ranging elk and the first modern elk hunt is a real benchmark in Kentucky's conservation history," said Elk Foundation volunteer board co-chair, Tom Baker. "The success of this project has led to other eastern states conducting their own restoration efforts and will ultimately allow many people who enjoy the great outdoors an opportunity to view these magnificent animals."

The hunt, the first of two seasons this year, took place from Saturday until next Friday. Four of the six hunters were selected at Hazard's Elk Festival in a random drawing of more than 9,000 applicants. They are Tracy Cerise of Lexington, Gene Lebrun of Ashland, Jimmy Garrett of Jeffersonton, and Buddy Hoagland of Island. Two other hunters obtained their permits in auctions that generate funds for Kentucky elk management and habitat conservation. Bill Kiefer of Fargo, North Dakota, was the high bidder in an Elk Foundation-sponsored auction, and Steve Stans of Ft. Meyers, Florida, the high bidder in a Shikar Safari Club auction. Six more sportsmen will get a chance to hunt elk during the December second season, which will involve only cow elk.

"Even though the quota this year is just 12 hunts, it's gotten the public excited about the future," said Nat Love, Kentucky state chair for the Elk Foundation. "It's no longer just talk—it's happening."

Elk in Kentucky have made a dramatic comeback. Originally abundant in the state, they disappeared by the mid-1800s due to habitat loss and uncontrolled market and subsistence hunting. However, since 1997, the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, with considerable funding assistance from the Elk Foundation, has released 1,000 elk on lands consistently mainly of reclaimed coal mining sites. They plan to release 800 more in the next three years, and state wildlife officials predict the herd eventually will increase to 7,500 animals, spread over two million acres of statewide elk habitat in a 14-county area of southeastern Kentucky.

The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation is an international, non-profit conservation organization whose mission is to ensure the future of elk, other wildlife, and their habitat.

Founded in 1984, the Elk Foundation now has 131,000 members and 115,000 supporters who have helped generate the funds to conserve and enhance more than three million acres of wildlife habitat across North America. With its recently initiated "Pass It On" Campaign, the Foundation has committed to conserving an additional two million acres of key habitat within the next five years, benefitting thousands of elk and numerous other species.

Homeland exposed

A decade ago, when the Soviet Union disintegrated and the United States stood as the globe's preeminent military and economic power, the siren of isolationism once again seduced many Americans. With no country posing a significant threat to our national security, America's historical urge to turn inward reasserted itself.

For many, this country appeared safe again behind two broad oceans, just as it did when Abraham Lincoln declared that "all the armies of Europe, Asia and Africa combined ... could not by force take a drink from the Ohio, or make a track on the Blue Ridge, in the course of a thousand years."

That isolationist illusion, which has surged and ebbed throughout American history, was demolished on Sept. 11, 2001. Suddenly, the terrorist assaults on New York and Washington made it horrifyingly clear that this country cannot retreat from the rest of the world without putting its own interests — indeed, its very survival — in jeopardy.

What happens in the mountain hideouts of Afghanistan, it turns out, can have deadly consequences for American citizens. That reality had been lost on generations born after Dec. 7, 1941, when the U.S. homeland last came under foreign attack.

The lesson of Sept. 11, like that of six decades earlier, is unmistakable:

American engagement around the world serves our own security interests. Robust U.S. involvement — economically, diplomatically, militarily — is a stabilizing influence from the South China Sea to the Adriatic Sea and beyond. Conversely, a U.S. pullback from its position of global leadership breeds fresh dangers that can threaten the foundations of civilization, as Osama bin Laden's terrorist network surely does today.

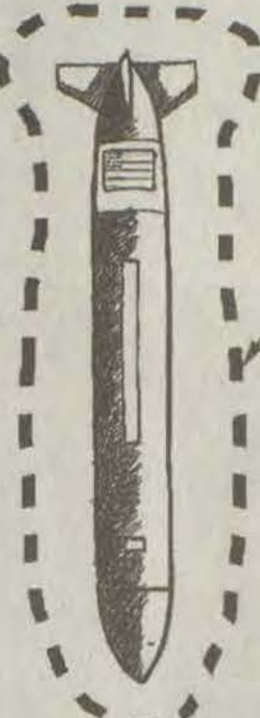

Yet this is a lesson Americans must relearn every half century or so. The fact is, this is such a sprawling, self-sufficient continent that we easily fall prey to the misguided notion that we can go it alone in the world. The isolationist impulse, which had its start when the colonists sought refuge from European powers, is an enduring element of the American character.

The news media have a critical role to play in educating Americans about the rest of the world and informing them about the interdependent forces shaping our shrinking planet. That's why the decline in international coverage by both newspapers and broadcasting is so dismaying. Schools also have a role in teaching young Americans about the geography and histories of other nations, not to mention the learning of foreign languages to promote better communications.

As the tragedy of Sept. 11 made plain yet again, the seductive appeal of isolationism is itself a recurring threat to America's interests.

We are all equally American

by HUGH B. PRICE

While American society wrestles, still, with the question of who is an American — that is, who is entitled to equal opportunity in this society — we have discovered again that the practitioners of terror know who is an American. They know that we are all equally American.

Timothy McVeigh, born and raised in America, understood that. And so, Americans of African, Hispanic, Asian, Arabic, Native American and European descent who worked in the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City died on that awful day in April 1995.

Those murderers who struck at the American embassies in Kenya and Tanzania in August 1998 understood that: Americans (and Africans and Europeans) of all backgrounds died that day also.

The practitioners of terror who have now brought so much agony, death and destruction to America's shores understood that.

Like Timothy McVeigh, they deliberately struck not just at the "symbols" of the American nation. They attacked the World Trade Center and the Pentagon at the beginning of the workday, when both places would be filled with the people of America: people of African, Hispanic, Asian, Arabic, Native American and European descent. Those who died and were injured were our families, our friends and our neighbors.

Thus, the practitioners of terror have shown once again that while they often condemn America for its history of discrimination against Americans of color, they do not hesitate to target Americans of color for murder, too.

They understand that we are all equally American, whether our ancestors arrived on the Mayflower or the slave ships; whether they fled pogroms in Europe or tyranny and poverty in South America, Africa or the Middle East; whether the governments of our ancestors' countries of origin were democratic or authoritarian; whether our families came three centuries ago or yesterday.

(Of course, we know that these murderers don't value the lives of any human beings. Citizens of 40 countries worked at the World Trade Center, a crossroads of the world. They, too, are among the missing and the dead.)

One piercing question this tragedy and its aftermath illuminates is: Do we Americans understand that we are all equally American?

This has been the great question of the American Experience. Despite the soaring, visionary rhetoric of the Declaration of Independence about the "self-evident truths" of human existence, and the rules and safeguards of liberty laid out in the Constitution, the struggle of various groups of Americans for equality of opportunity has in fact been the defining characteristic of this nation.

For most of this nation's history, the majority's pledge of allegiance to the principle of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness was defined in such a way as to deny opportunity to entire groups of Americans. That denial was commonplace in too many sectors of American life right up to September 11.

But now, tragically, we see how American we all are — in the equality of the loss of life, and in the equality of the grieving that has been so poignantly on display in such mass ceremonies as the prayer gathering in New York's Yankee Stadium and in New Jersey's Liberty State Park, in smaller ceremonies throughout the nation, and, of course, in private homes.

That is why this great question should be asked now as our government prepares to wage war against those who have declared war against us. Will the great surge of compassion and patriotic feeling be a mechanism for truly pulling all of America together?

In the first days after the attack, some commentators pushed the morally repugnant notion that the need for increased

Corporate control led to attacks

When I look at events I try to step back and analyze the big picture. I tried to come up with the cause and the effect. In the case of the events of September 11, I believe the root cause is control of our government by corporations.

I have researched the history of the Middle East, our trade policies around the world, the monies and military aid to repressive regimes in order to secure corporate assets. I have concluded that there is a universal hatred around the globe of the United States government but there is also a love of the American people.

The other night on the BBC they spent 20 minutes covering Indonesia and the protest there. A man on the street put it crystal clear when he said, "We like the American people but we hate the U.S. government." I understand completely where this man is coming from.

The problem exists because our government, in its economic and foreign policy, does not reflect the ideas in which we Americans believe. The American people are soon going to find themselves in a long, bloody, global conflict fighting to protect corporate assets.

We, the people, in order to form a more perfect union, must remove corporate influence and control of our electoral system. We the people must demand a government for and by the people. We must have an electoral system that allows candidates to be elected to office based solely on ideas, not on how many bribes they can accumulate. The root of the problem is we, the people, must not allow politicians who have shamed our flag over the years to hide behind it.

Yesterday I made it official. I registered as a member of the Green Party. It's the duty of every citizen to demand a removal of corporate control from our political system and the time to do it is now.

Declare war on factory farms

The horrible events of September 11 have heightened people's awareness of chemical warfare and water contamination. Hopefully, the threat of chemical warfare will not become a reality, but we should all still be mindful of what goes into our water supply. Dangerous pollutants contaminate our water with frightening frequency — they come not from terrorists, but from factory farms.

According to the Environmental Protection Agency, factory farms pollute our waterways more than all other industrial sources combined. Animals raised for food produce 130 times as much excrement as the entire human population, without the benefit of waste treatment systems. The waste goes into the water that people bathe in, wash their clothes with and drink. Waste runoff is poisoning rivers, killing fish and sickening people. E coli outbreaks, for example, are often traced to the water supply and have infected countless individuals.

Our president has declared a war on terrorism. It's our turn to declare a war on factory farms and their toxic waste. For information on reducing your consumption of factory farmed meat, please visit GoVeg.com.

Lawmakers may consider tighter seat belt laws

FRANKFORT — Improving highway safety by strengthening seat belt laws will be among the state Transportation Cabinet's top legislative priorities for 2002, lawmakers learned Tuesday.

Jim Roberts, the cabinet's deputy commissioner of motor vehicle regulation, told members of the General Assembly's Interim Joint Committee on Transportation that the cabinet's wish list for the 2002 legislative session was short because budget constraints were expected to leave little money for new programs.

Among its top priorities will be a revival of the cabinet's efforts to increase the use of seat belts by making seat belt violations a primary offense, thereby enabling law enforcement officers to stop a motorist for violating the state's seat belt law even if the officer has no other reason for stopping the vehicle.

"Seat belt use is the least expensive and most effective way to save lives on Kentucky highways," said Roberts. He cited the effectiveness of primary seat belt laws in 14 other states and pledged a push to educate both legislators and the public about the importance of using seat belts.

"It's not about money," said Rep. Jodie Haydon, D-Bardstown, who sponsored a similar seat belt bill that failed to pass the General Assembly in 2001. "It's about saving lives."

In addition to new seat belt legislation, Roberts said transportation officials would ask for lawmakers to improve the process of acquiring property for highway projects, perhaps modeling a program after policies now in effect in West Virginia.

"Timely acquisition of property is a big factor in completing projects successfully," he said.

Knott road to be named after bluegrass musician

HINDMAN — A portion of Route 550 in Knott County will be named in honor of bluegrass musician and Knott County "ambassador" Vince Combs during a ceremony Wednesday at 2 p.m.

Linda Wagner-Justice, chief district engineer for District 12, Department of Highways, said that the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet issued an official order in late August, following a request from the Knott Fiscal Court. The original nomination was made by Simeon Fields of Emmalena.

Fields said that Combs has been an ambassador for Knott County and Hindman "nationwide" for more than half a century, traveling coast-to-coast and from Canada to the Florida Keys with his band, the Shadetree Bluegrass Boys. In addition, Combs has sponsored an annual bluegrass festival for the past 13 years in his adopted hometown of Xenia, Ohio.

Born April 29, 1934, at the Wiley Fork of Ball "out of country" near Hindman, Combs is one of six children born to Jay and Alpha Combs. In 1950, Jay Combs built his brood house on Route 550 at Larkslane, and the elder Combs lived there until his death last year at the age of 92.

Vince attended a one-room school on Wiley Fork and graduated from Hindman Settlement School in 1953.

"Then I went to school at Caney," he recalled, speaking of what is now Alice Lloyd College but was then called Caney Junior College. "When I left school, I came to Ohio to seek my fortune, so to speak. I didn't want to work in the coal mines and there wasn't hardly anything else to do in Knott County. My daddy was a coal miner, but I just didn't want to go into the mines."

Vince got his first mandolin at age 16. He and his brother Elwood "Woody" Combs, who played the fiddle, played at square dances, box suppers and other local events while they were in high school.

Combs has played with the legendary Hylo Brown and is said to bear a striking musical resemblance to Bill Monroe. He said he can't help it, "I've never been able to sing any other way."

Vince and his wife of 45 years, the former Jacqueline Hambrick of Garrett, will travel to Hindman to the road-naming ceremonies on Tuesday. The public is invited to attend and share the honor with Combs.

"I padded up and down that road many a time," Combs said, "and I'm really thrilled, I tell you, I'm really excited about this. And the people there (in Knott County), I just appreciate them and can't say enough about them."

security justifies racial profiling, whether based on suspicion of terrorism or a suspicion of some other criminal intent.

Yes, the need for increased security justifies a heightened state of watchfulness of everyone in the public sphere.

But there is no excuse for singling out some Americans for no reason other than the color of their skin, or their ethnic background, or the way they dress. Such a policy and practice would make a mockery of "national unity." Fortunately, President Bush and New York City Mayor Rudolph W. Guiliani have led many other political, religious and civic leaders in forcefully spurning such ideas. They rightfully understand that the way out of grief for the nation — the best way to pay tribute to all the innocents who lost their lives in this tragedy — is to build out of its many diverse elements a better, stronger, more unified American people.

They and others who are leading the call for national unity understand that, now more than ever, this worthy sentiment has to be more than skin deep.

Help your family achieve optimal oral health
 Pikeville — Research suggests periodontal disease can pass through saliva. This means that the common contact of saliva in families may put children and couples at risk for contracting the periodontal disease of another family member.
 "If one family member has periodontal disease, all family members should see a dental professional for a periodontal screening," said Terry W. Wright, D.M.D., a local periodontist and member of the American Academy of Periodontology. "Periodontal disease is not just an adult health problem."
 In fact, studies indicate that gingivitis is nearly a universal finding in children and adolescents. Gingivitis is the first stage of periodontal disease. Periodontal disease is a bacterial gum infection that progresses over time. Evidence shows that periodontal disease may increase during adolescence due to hormonal changes related to puberty. Some experts say this is because teenagers lack the initiative to practice good oral health.
 "Encourage young children to maintain good at-home oral health habits, such as brushing and flossing, and these habits will carry into adolescence and adulthood," said Wright. "For example, parents may want to reward children with visits from the tooth fairy, not just when a tooth is lost, but also when a child receives a clean bill of health from the dentist."
 Parents should not only remind children to brush and floss, but also each other. Periodontal disease is a leading cause of tooth loss in adults, and has been linked to serious health threats such as diabetes, cardiovascular, respiratory disease, and preterm low birth weight babies.
 "Family members should drink plenty of fluoridated water, and milk for calcium," said Wright. Bottled water may be missing the fluoridation that is added to public water systems. Children who drink adequately fluoridated water have up to 50 percent fewer cavities than those who do not. And, low levels of calcium intake can also be linked to periodontal disease.
 Women who are thinking of becoming pregnant should consider a visit to a periodontist. About a quarter of childbearing age women have periodontitis, and this can put their unborn babies at risk of being born premature and underweight.
 "It is important that family members don't forget the basics. Replace toothbrushes every few months, or when the bristles begin to look frayed," said Wright. "Floss daily to break up the bacterial colonies between teeth that can cause periodontal disease. And, seek dental care for professional cleanings, as well as screening for periodontal disease."
 For more information about periodontal disease, contact Terry W. Wright, D.M.D., 1-800-354-4973, or visit the American Academy of Periodontology's web site at www.perio.org.

Ky Fire Commission assists families of fallen firefighters

LEXINGTON — The Kentucky Fire Commission is assisting the families of three firefighters as they travel to Maryland to visit a national memorial for fallen firefighters. The families of these fallen firefighters are attending ceremonies this weekend in Emmitsburg, Md.

■ Kyle Hendrick, of the Goff Fire Department in Bowling Green, who died Nov. 16, 2000.

■ John C. Slade, of the Cynthia Fire Department, who died Sept. 12, 2000.

■ Logan Fields, of the Hazard Fire Department, who died Aug. 11, 2000.

President and Mrs. George W. Bush will lead the nation in a tribute to fallen firefighters on Sunday. The names of the deceased firefighters will be placed on the wall of a national memorial.

On Wednesday, approximately 500 firefighters, government officials and friends and family gathered in Frankfort to honor firefighters who died during the past year.

The annual service was held at Juniper Hills Park, site of a memorial listing the names of Kentucky's deceased firefighters. Six names were added to the memorial this year.

"It is appropriate that we gather here - in light of the Sept. 11 events. The only difference between our deceased Kentucky firefighters and those who fell in New York is the magnitude and scope of the losses," said Kentucky Governor Paul Patton.

"The loss is the same for all families. Know that we will not forget."

The families of Slade, of Cynthia, and Fields, of Hazard, left for Maryland via bus on Thursday. The Fire Commission, which is part of the Kentucky Community and Technical College System, is sponsoring the trip.

Karen Fields, wife of Logan Fields, called the trip "one of the greatest honors you can give a firefighter. I wouldn't miss it."

Her husband died from a heart attack while on duty. He was deputy chief of the Hazard department and chief of the volunteer department in Avawam.

Mrs. Fields said it would have been difficult to make the trip to Maryland without the support of the Fire Commission.

"I appreciate the Kentucky Fire Commission for all they've done to help me in the last year," Mrs. Fields said. Traveling with the families were Ron Day and Wayne Mullannix, program administrators for the Fire Commission; William Carver, Kentucky Fire Association president; and Jon Jarrell, a member of the Fire Commission.

"The Fire Commission several years ago felt that it would be nice if families of firefighters who die in the line of duty have the opportunity to participate in the annual activities at the National Fire Academy," said Larry J. Collier, executive director of the Fire Commission.

"All firefighters who die in the line of duty, nationwide, are recognized at this ceremony. We feel fortunate that we are able to do this for the families."

Since 1972, the mission of the Kentucky Fire Commission and State Fire Rescue Training has been to train and certify Kentucky volunteer and career firefighters.

In 1997 the Postsecondary Education Improvement Act led to the KCTCS Associate in Applied Science degree in Fire/Rescue Science Technology. The Fire Commission is now part of KCTCS.

'Make a Difference Day'

FRANKFORT — Kentucky's Family Resource and Youth Services Centers are trying to collect enough beef stew to supply elderly, homebound and other needy citizens with a meal.

The drive, organized by the FRYSC's and the Kentucky Commission on Community Volunteerism and Service, will culminate on Oct. 27, national "Make a Difference Day." Kentucky is one of eight states conducting organized statewide volunteer activities as part of the annual observance, which is sponsored by USA Weekend and the Points of Light Foundation.

A related effort to create scholarships for the families of victims of the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington, D.C., has won an endorsement from Gov. Paul Patton.

The Citizens Scholarship Foundation of America has joined with the "Make A Difference Day" sponsors to collect money for post-secondary education expenses of children and spouses of those who were killed or permanently disabled in the attacks.

Donors may drop off cans of beef stew at any local Family Resource or Youth Services Center during school hours Monday through Friday. The canned stew will be delivered to senior service centers, which will distribute it to homebound and elderly families and to congregate meal sites, which serve

Early baseball predictions

by RICK BENTLEY
TIMES COLUMNIST

Is it too early for me to have a sleeper pick for the 2002 baseball season?

Good, because I'm ready to offer one.

Assuming they can stay healthy, I think it could be a fun final season in good ol', Cinergy Field.

I realize that's quite a task. This year, Ken Griffey Jr. missed most of the first half with a leg problem. It seemed third baseman Aaron Boone played only a game or two more than his dad, Reds manager Bob Boone. And shortstop Barry Larkin is, well, Barry Larkin. He's just getting old, and misses a lot of time these days.

In the end, both Junior and Boone have played just more than 100 games through Wednesday. Larkin was at 45.

Still, you've got to admit there's hope there.

The outfield, offensively at least, is as potentially good as any in the sport. Adam Dunn is an offensive machine. Without even having enough at bats to qualify for Rookie of the Year, he had 19 home runs heading into yesterday's game at Chicago. Yes, he had more strikeouts (69) than hits (64), but

No. 18 Georgetown ends Pikeville's 12-match streak

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — Pikeville College's school record 12-match win streak ended at the hands of the nation's 18th-ranked team, Georgetown College, 3-0 Thursday night.

Georgetown (12-3, 1-0 in the Mid-South Conference) won by scores of 30-19, 30-14, 30-16.

"We played really well tonight, but they are a tremendous team," said Pikeville College Coach Missy Gragg. "Tonight we found out how well you have to play to be among the elite. We're making strides in that direction, but we're not quite there yet."

Pikeville stormed out in front in the first game and to take an 8-2 lead, riding the momentum created by a boisterous crowd of more than 800. Georgetown maintained its composure and battles through, overtaking the Lady Bears for the win.

One person chosen to carry the flame is Prestonsburg resident Marshall Edwards. Edwards, a pharmacist by trade, was nominated and subsequently chosen.

"This is the ultimate honor," said Edwards. "This is even better than winning the lottery. I know the who nominated me and I would like to thank them."

Edwards, a hand cyclist, was chosen to carry the torch through the Ohio region.

All torchbearers have even more added incentive after recent terrorist attacks that stopped much of the country dead in its tracks.

Prestonsburg won the toss and opted to take the football. The Blackcats took the pigskin and went right to work. After marching down the field, junior Mikeal Fannin took a handoff from senior quarterback Joey Willis and darted into the endzone from four yards out. Aaron Neeley failed on the extra-point kick but the host Blackcats would prosper for most of the night, although trailing 7-6 early on in the contest. Subcommittee is 50/50 on 'five/eight' debate

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

Discussion about the merits of the so-called "five/eight rule" for granting scholarships in men's basketball apparently is as divided inside the governance structure as it is outside.

Charged with reviewing the issue during a September 17 telephone conference, the men's subcommittee of the Division I Basketball Issues Committee reached an impasse on the current legislation that limits the number of initial grants in men's basketball to eight over two years and no more than five in any one year.

The Division I Board of Directors passed the legislation in April 2000 to help address issues surrounding low graduation rates in men's basketball and attrition rates among male basketball student-athletes. Some basketball coaches and others have criticized the bylaw, saying that it unfairly penalizes some institutions that lose players as a result of attrition, graduation or other circumstances beyond the school's control.

And reflective of the difference of opinion in the membership, subcommittee members also found themselves deadlocked after a lengthy discussion on whether to rescind the rule or modify it.

The subcommittee did agree, though, that if the rule is modified, it should not apply to those student-athletes who leave a school in good academic standing. Good academic standing,

Tennessee Titans kick off NAIA Champions of Character Program at Martin Methodist College

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

PULASKI, Tenn. — Members of the Tennessee Titans joined with Martin Methodist College on campus to initiate a Champions of Character partnership between the team and the school. To kick off MMC's Champions of Character program, Titans executive Floyd Reese and rookie running back Dan Alexander addressed about 170 student-athletes regarding issues of character in sports.

"In a business where everything is easily measured, the one thing that is hard to quantify is character. But when all is said and done, it may truly be the most important thing," said Reese, executive vice president, general manager and director of football operations. "Anything we can do to teach character to young athletes ultimately will benefit us all."

Believed to be the first Champions of Character partnership between a college and a major league sports team, MMC's program is part of a nationwide campaign developed by the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) to foster an emphasis on character issues in college athletic programs. Stressing five guiding principles — respect, integrity, responsibility, servant leadership and sportsmanship — the program strives not only to educate college athletes about the importance of character in sports, but also to enable them to spread the word to younger athletes in their communities.

"It's an honor to have Floyd Reese and Dan Alexander on our campus to kick off our Champions of Character program, and we are very grateful to the Titans for participating in this event," said Dr. Ted Brown, president of Martin Methodist and, as a member of the NAIA's Council of Presidents, one of the authors of the Champions of Character program. "Since Martin Methodist has both a strong athletic program and a new sports management program, it is especially fitting for our students to learn about the importance of character from the perspectives of both the Titans general manager and a player. I know that our student-athletes learned some valuable lessons today."

As part of today's ceremony, athletes from MMC signed a pledge indicating that they will adhere to the five guiding principles of the NAIA Champions of Character program. They also agreed to spread the message of the importance of character in sports to young athletes in Pulaski, across Giles County and throughout the Tennessee Valley region.

"We are grateful to the Tennessee Titans for assisting Martin Methodist College as the NAIA initiates this program," said Steve Baker, president and CEO of the NAIA. "Through the leadership of people like Floyd Reese, who made the Titans' partnership possible, and Dr. Ted Brown of MMC, who helped initiate and author the national Champions of Character program, the NAIA is empowered to reach out to thousands of student-athletes across the nation."

Located in Pulaski, Tenn., Martin Methodist College is a four-year, church-affiliated liberal arts college. More than a quarter of MMC's 630-student enrollment participates in college sports, and the school has one of the few sports management degree programs in the state of Tennessee. Rose Magers-Powell, head coach of the Martin Methodist volleyball program and a member of the 1984 U.S. Olympic Volleyball Team, will lead MMC's Champions of Character program.

"When you talk about character in sports, the Titans serve as a shining example for student-athletes across the country," said Jeff Bain, MMC's director of athletics. "They are a team that was founded on character, and they continue to uphold solid principles and strong values. It would be our institutional goal for the Martin Methodist College student-athletes to emulate the values upheld by the Titans organization. We are thankful that they came here today to pass the torch on to our students."

Prior to coming to the KDFWR, Gassett was a graduate teaching assistant at the University of Georgia and co-owned a wildlife management consulting business.

Since coming to the KDFWR, Gassett has been instrumental in coordinating the agency's highly acclaimed elk restoration project in southeastern Kentucky, as well as helping mold Kentucky's deer herd into one of the highest quality herds in the United States.

"Gassett brings excellent educational credentials, has strong leadership skills and has a good track record of accomplishments in several of the agency's wildlife programs," said Roy Grimes, KDFWR

Deputy Commissioner and immediate past Wildlife Division Director.

"He is attentive to the needs of wildlife resource users, and works hard to provide as much public recreation opportunity as possible without jeopardizing the well-being of Kentucky's wildlife future," Grimes added.

"I welcome the challenge this position holds, and look forward to working with the professionals here, other state and federal wildlife managers, and the wildlife community throughout Kentucky to maintain and improve the resources and opportunities we have in the Bluegrass State," said Gassett.

Edwards

events of September 11," said Mitt Romney, SLOC president and CEO. "Now more than ever, the Relay will be a celebration of humanity and civilization and all 11,500 torchbearers will represent the best of our nation."

"We will link the Torch Relay to the tragedy by naming 100 Torchbearers to represent the heroes of September 11. In addition, when the Relay goes through New York City, Washington, D.C. and Pennsylvania, we will hold commemorative events."

Torchbearers were nominated by family members, friends or co-workers by writing a 50-100-word essay describing how the nominee embodied the Olympic spirit and inspired an individual or a community. The essays were gathered through SLOC, Coca-Cola and Chevrolet nomination programs during March and April of 2001.

Some of the stories describing how torchbearers overcame enormous challenges were so riveting that the person who submitted the nomination was also selected to run a leg of the relay and will hand-off to their nominee. This is the first time in Olympic Torch Relay history that torchbearers will run in pairs.

"As the flame weaves its way across the nation, it will ignite the Olympic spirit within each of us and inspire us to make the world a better place," said Romney.

The Olympic Flame will be lit during a ceremony in Olympia, Greece before traveling to Atlanta - where the flame last rested on American soil - and starting its cross-country journey through 46 states on December 4, 2001. An average of 180 torchbearers per day will each carry the flame approximately two-tenths of a mile.

"We are thankful to everyone who took the time to tell us their inspirational stories, and we look forward to sharing their stories with the rest of the country," said Sandy Douglas, executive vice president and chief operating officer, Coca-Cola North America. "The opportunity to carry the Olympic Flame and experience the magic of the Games firsthand is our way of honoring the inspirational people who have been selected as 2002 Olympic Torchbearers."

"Chevrolet is honored to share in the inspirational stories of thousands of Americans who were nominated and selected to carry the Olympic Flame," said Kurt Ritter, general manager of Chevrolet. "The Olympic Torch Relay is a unique opportunity to recognize our neighbors, co-workers, family members and everyday Americans who have inspired others and best represent the Olympic Spirit. We look forward to celebrating their achievements on the road to Salt Lake City."

Torchbearers will receive an Olympic Torchbearer uniform consisting of a windbreaker jacket, long sleeve t-shirt, wind pants, fleece hat and gloves. Torchbearers also will be able to purchase the Olympic Torch they carry as a reminder of their involvement in the 2002 Olympic Winter Games. The purchase price for the torch is $335.

In addition to the 7,200 torchbearers selected, 4,300 torchbearers were selected through programs involving the Olympic family, which includes sponsors, providers, Olympians and other athletes from several U.S. Olympic national governing bodies.

U.S. Cyclist Lance Armstrong, cancer survivor, three-time Tour de France Champion and three time Olympian will serve as Coca-Cola's Olympic Torch Relay team leader. Armstrong will carry the Torch for the first time in his hometown of Austin, Texas and will make several other appearances to support other 2002 Olympic Torchbearers along the route. Armstrong played a key role in Coca-Cola's efforts to encourage nominations. Along with acting as the Coca-Cola spokesperson for the Olympic Torch Relay, he was featured in cinema pre-feature entertainment and in national television, print, radio and online advertising.

Cammi Granato, captain of the Women's USA Hockey Team and Chevrolet torchbearer ambassador, encouraged Americans to capture the spirit of the Olympic dream by nominating someone inspirational through the Chevrolet program. Like Armstrong, Granato will run with the flame during the Relay. Her perseverance in the sport of hockey helped Granato's team win the gold medal for the United States at the 1998 Nagano Winter Games, making her a role model for thousands of people. Once the flame reaches Salt Lake City, great Olympians like Granato will be ready to greet the start of the 2002 Winter Olympic Games.

For more than 70 years, Coca-Cola has been associated with the Olympic Games - longer than any other corporate sponsor. Olympic programs such as the Salt Lake 2002 Olympic Torch Relay give Coca-Cola the opportunity to share the Olympic Spirit with people around the world. Coca-Cola, POWERade and other products of the Coca-Cola Company help refresh athletes, volunteers, officials, and spectators during the Olympic Games. The Coca-Cola Company also works closely with National Olympic Committees around the world to assist athletes in training for the Olympic Games.

Chevrolet is the largest division of General Motors, which is the official domestic automotive sponsor of the U.S. Olympic Team through 2004. Chevrolet will help carry the Olympic Flame across the United States with a convoy of 50 Chevrolet vehicles. By utilizing its network of 4,300 dealers who fulfill the transportation needs of more than 36 million Americans daily through the broadest lineup of cars, trucks and vans in the industry, Chevrolet is putting the Relay on the road and sharing this event with millions of American hometowns. Chevrolet has a long history of supporting the spirit of the Olympic Games and the dreams of aspiring athletes through partnerships with many sport national governing bodies, including the U.S. Ski and Snowboarding Association, U.S. Figure Skating Association, U.S. Soccer Federation, USA Hockey and USA Triathlon.

In addition to the presenting sponsors, providers for the Olympic Torch Relay donate goods and services to assist in the production of the Relay. Providers include AT&T, Bank of America, Delta Air Lines, Jet Set Sports, John Hancock Financial Services, Pfizer, the Utah Department of Community and Economic Development and Union Pacific.

Medicare AND YOU

Donna R. Morton
Medicare Beneficiary
Outreach Coordinator
AdminaStar Federal

I want to remind each of you to watch the mail for your Medicare and You 2002 Handbook. The handbook will be mailed in the months of September and October. It's a good idea to put the book in a safe place for help with your future Medicare questions.

Q My benefits with the new TRICARE for LIFE (TFL) program became effective October 1. How can I get more information about my plan?

A For more information on TFL you may call 1-888-363-5433 or visit the website on the internet at www.tricare.osd.mil.

Q Does Medicare help to pay for self-management training for people with diabetes?

A Yes. Medicare Part B will help to pay for a program that educates you in the successful self-management of diabetes. The training must be given by a provider that meets certification and quality standards as required by Medicare. If you are a diabetic and meet the Medicare medical necessity guidelines, talk with your health care provider about getting the education you need to help you manage your diabetes.

Q I was a hospital inpatient recently. Why did Medicare not pay the hospital the full amount that was billed?

A Hospitals are reimbursed by Medicare under what is known as the "prospective payment system." This means Medicare pays a fixed amount to the hospitals based on the average costs for similar cases. Based on hospital costs in your area, the government sets a standard rate, or average cost, for each category of treatment. These categories are called "diagnosis related groups" or "DRGs." The hospital receives the same payment for each patient placed in a specific DRG regardless of the number of days the patient is in the hospital. The Medicare Summary Notice you receive from the contractor will explain in detail the amount you owe after Medicare pays.

Toyota Motor Manufacturing of Kentucky Donates $300,000 to Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Foundation

Frankfort - Toyota Motor Manufacturing of Kentucky has pledged $300,000 to bring a living stream exhibit in Frankfort to life. "This is the largest corporate donation we have ever received," said Andy Hils, president of the nonprofit Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Foundation.

Toyota's donation to the foundation will help fund construction of an artificial stream through the grounds of the Salato Wildlife Education Center in Frankfort. The exhibit will allow visitors an up close view of otters, turtles, fish and stream ecology.

The foundation's mission is to bolster wildlife conservation, educational programs and exhibits of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources (KDFWR).

Pete Gritton, vice president of Toyota Motor Manufacturing, Kentucky, said the company is interested in educational programs. The living stream project fit the company's goal perfectly.

"What attracted Toyota to this project was the educational aspect of the living stream," Gritton said.

"Protection of our natural resources begins with education. Toyota feels the living stream exhibit at the Salato Center is one way to begin the educational process for children and adults alike."

Hils said the exhibit will highlight the importance of clean water to the environment and the aquatic and terrestrial wildlife that depend on stream habitat.

Businesses hurt by reservist call-ups may apply for SBA economic injury disaster loans

Small businesses that employ military reservists who were called to active duty by President Bush in response to the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, may qualify for Military Reservist Economic Injury Disaster Loans (MREIDL). These disaster loans are available from the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) to small businesses during a period of military conflict.

The MREIDL program will provide loan funds to eligible small businesses to cover operating expenses that would have been met, but cannot, because an essential employee was called to active duty in his or her role as a military reservist.

"Communities across the nation are going to feel the loss of the thousands of men and women who have courageously answered the call to support the nation's military effort," said SBA Administrator Hector V. Barreto.

"The loss of a key employee, even for a short period of time, can financially devastate a small company or even cause it to fail. This low-interest loan program can provide the money necessary to support these small businesses until the reservist is able to return to the business," Barreto said.

Small businesses may apply for MREIDLs of up to $1.5 million if they have been financially impacted due to the loss of a key employee. These working capital loans may be used to pay fixed debts, payroll, accounts payable, and other bills that cannot be paid. The interest rate on these loans is four percent, with a maximum term of 30 years. The SBA determines the amount of economic injury, the term of each loan and the payment amount, based on the financial circumstances of each borrower.

The filing period begins the date the essential employee is ordered to active duty, and ends 90 days after the date the employee is discharged from active duty.

Businesses interested in applying for an economic injury disaster loan can contact one of the four SBA disaster area offices to obtain

Mine safety director promotes safety

Assistant Secretary of Labor for Mine Safety and Health, Dave D. Lauriski has asked mines managers to have employees take a brief time out, or "stand down for safety," in the wake of a recent upturn in mine accidents.

"We're asking mine managers and foreman to take a brief time out at the beginning of each work shift to discuss the recent accidents," Lauriski said. "We want to reach every miner on every shift in our nation's mines. We've come too far in mine safety to let this turn into a trend."

Lauriski said he was concerned about the recent upsurge in fatal accidents, with four coal mine fatalities during one 10-day period in August, followed by a major fatal explosion in September. In the past week, two fatalities and a very serious injury occurred in metal and nonmetal mining.

"Our hearts grieve for the families of the miners who have lost their lives," Lauriski said. "We will provide all the technical help we can, and we conduct an investigation of each accident to find out what went wrong. At the same time we're asking each person in the whole mining community to stop, focus on safety and ask what can they can do every day to prevent a tragedy."

MSHA will be mailing out packets of safety information for discussion at mines as well as posting information on the "stand down for safety" page on MSHA's website at www.msha.gov. Information on each mining fatality is available on the MSHA web site under "Fatality Information."

Until the Brookwood, Ala. explosion, 19 coal miners died on the job so far this year, compared with 29 at the same time last year.

In metal and nonmetal mining, 22 miners lost their lives so far this year, compared with 38 at this time last year.

Buddy Morrow now leads the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra.

Tommy Dorsey legend coming to East Ky.

PIKEVILLE — In Big Band history, the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra is recognized as one of the best all-around dance bands. It could swing with the best of them, and no other band could come close to Dorsey's when it came to playing ballads.

Tommy Dorsey, the "sentimental gentleman of swing," was a master at creating warm, romantic, and always musical moods at superb dancing and listening tempos.

The Pikeville Concert Association is bringing Dorsey's big band sound to the stage Monday, Oct. 15, at 7:30 p.m. in Pikeville College's Booth Auditorium.

Conductor Buddy Morrow, one of music's all-time great trombone players, and renowned big band vocalist Walt Andrus will lead a performance featuring the authentic sound and style of the legendary Tommy Dorsey. The band's repertoire embraces not only the classics of the original Dorsey Orchestra, but also the spectrum of popular music from Dixieland, rhythm and blues and intricate ballads, to progressive jazz and contemporary tunes.

Dorsey, who left his mark on the musical world, worked with musical greats like Frank Sinatra, Jack Leonard and Jo Stafford. Sinatra's career blossomed with Dorsey and, with Sinatra's vocals, the band became more successful than ever.

In the summer of 1941, the band, at its best in this decade, outranked every other band to finish first in one of the most indicative of all popularity polls at the time — Martin Block's Make Believe Ballroom contest.

By late 1946, it was becoming apparent that the band business was having problems when eight top bandleaders announced they were calling it quits — Woody Herman, Benny Goodman, Harry James, Les Brown, Jack Teagarden, Benny Carter, Ina Ray Hutton and Tommy Dorsey. Essentially, this was the official end of the Big Band Era.

However, it was Tommy Dorsey who, in the two years immediately following, fought the case of the big bands with words and action. Less than two years later, he was fronting a formidable new group.

"It's about time somebody got things going again," Dorsey said at the time. "You can't expect to have any real interest in dance bands if the bands don't go around the country and play for the kids."

And so it continues. The Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, now led by Buddy Morrow, is traveling throughout the country playing "for the kids" of all ages.

The Oct. 15 performance is a presentation of the Pikeville Concert Association's 2001-2002 concert season. Individual and season tickets may be purchased at the door.

UK hosts national exhibit of deaf history

LEXINGTON — The University of Kentucky and the Kentucky School for the Deaf in Danville will host in October a national exhibit that chronicles nearly 200 years of U.S. deaf history.

"History Through Deaf Eyes" features photographs, objects, replicas, text and an interactive DVD that highlight the little known history of deaf Americans. A section specific to Kentucky's deaf heritage is part of the exhibit, which allows its host to specialize an area of the exhibit.

The exhibit was organized by Gallaudet University, a college for the deaf and hard-of-hearing in Washington, D.C.

This is the second showing of the exhibit, which has been seen only in Hartford, Conn., at the American School for the Deaf. The American School, a privately funded institution created in 1820, is the first U.S. school for the deaf.

The UK showing is co-hosted by the Kentucky School for the Actor Scott New portrays pioneer Daniel Boone during a performance at Pikeville College October 17.

Kentucky Chautauqua presents: Daniel Boone, Pathfinder

PIKEVILLE — By the time of his death, Daniel Boone had become a legend, and so he remains. But much of what Americans think they know of this great frontiersman is off the mark.

Neither a backwoods bumpkin nor an epic slayer of Indians (and he never wore a coonskin cap), Boone was an intrepid explorer and natural leader whose actual exploits easily justify his larger-than-life reputation.

Take a trip back in time with actor Scott New as he portrays the legendary frontiersman in a performance Oct. 17 in Pikeville College's Booth Auditorium.

The performance, which is scheduled for 10 a.m., is part of the College's Founders' Week celebration Oct. 15-20 and is free and open to the public.

New is the owner and operator of Transylvania Company Mercantile, a recreated 18th century trading post at Fort Boonesborough State Park, located near Winchester. He's had a lifelong interest in early American history.

Montgomery, Morgan, Nelson, Ohio, Oldham, Shelby, Webster and Whitley counties, with one satellite program in Henry County. These centers are administered by the Department for Technical Education (DTE), a department of the Cabinet for Workforce Development.

The academies teach students to design, maintain and troubleshoot computer networks. Students can earn the first level of computer repair certification and can earn college credit hours through the program.

Some of the academies are also involved in a partnership with the Kentucky Community and Technical College System (KCTCS) in a series of efforts that will help ensure Kentucky Tech schools are offering the training that a high-tech economy demands.

Cabinet for Workforce Development Secretary Allen Rose said these academies will allow high school students to begin training for jobs in the rapidly expanding information technology industry, where computer network administrators can earn $30,000 to $40,000 a year or even more.

In addition to the creation of these academies, the DTE, in a partnership with KCTCS and the Kentucky Department of Education, has become a member of the Computing Technology Industry Association (CompTIA).

CompTIA is an internationally recognized leader in information technology certifications and focuses on computer networking skills, Internet networking skills and A+ certification in computer repair, all of which are based on industry standards.

"We intend to use this membership as a tool to increase the number of secondary information technology teachers that have passed industry certification exams," said Rose.

"We also see this as a way to increase the number of information technology courses offered by the Kentucky Tech schools with academies and raise the number of Kentucky Tech graduates with the skills necessary to compete for high-tech jobs. This, in turn, should help Kentucky attract and retain high-tech industries."

More information about the Department for Technical Education, along with other Cabinet for Workforce Development agencies, is available at www.kycwd.org.

Mayo Technical College adult education program launches new program

Mayo Technical College has joined a new effort to promote GEDs has direct benefits for Kentucky employers and the commonwealth's workforce. In cooperation with KCTCS and Mayo Technical College, in a program administered by the Department for Adult Education and Literacy, an agency of the Cabinet for Workforce Development, Kentucky employers can earn a tax credit of up to $1,250 by allowing employees release time to study for the GED.

At the same time, employees can earn a tuition discount at Kentucky colleges and universities.

Here's how it works:

- The employer, employee and the local adult education provider sign a contract to participate in the program.

■ The employee agrees to spend at least five hours per week studying for the GED test. The employer agrees to allow the employee a minimum of five hours per week paid release time to study for the test.

■ When the employee completes the contract and earns a GED, he or she is eligible for a tuition discount at Kentucky public postsecondary institutions. The $250 discount is available for a maximum of four semesters.

■ The employer files for the tax credit in the year the employee completes the program. The maximum credit is $1250 per employee.

"The tax credit is not the only benefit an employer derives from participating in this effort," said Cabinet for Workforce Development Secretary Allen D. Rose. "Employers will also realize a gain because their workforce will be better educated, more productive and more adaptable. Obviously, individuals who pursue their GED are creating better job and educational opportunities for themselves."

he said. "At the same time, all of us benefit from a better educated citizenry and workforce."

Seminar is scheduled for Oct. 8-11 in Lexington.

Participants in the seminar include people who work in a variety of positions, such as faculty, facilities management, campus directors and human resources.

The President's Leadership Seminar is a professional development experience designed to cause the participants to explore in a collegial environment such wide-ranging issues as leadership traits, national trends, ethics, professionalism and media relations.

"This annual training experience is designed to recognize and strengthen the leadership of Kentucky's community and technical colleges," said Michael B. McCall, president of KCTCS. "The list of seminar presenters includes recognized educational leaders from across the nation and Kentucky."

McCall will host the seminar, which features experts such as Gordon Davies, president of the Kentucky Council on Postsecondary Education; Jeff Hockaday, former interim president of KCTCS and former chancellor of community college systems in Pima County, Ariz., and Richmond, Va.; John Roueche, director of the Community College Leadership Program at the University of Texas at Austin; and several presidents of two-year colleges across the United States.

The seminar is a key element of the KCTCS New Horizons initiative, which focuses on developing leadership, service and support among system employees.

Boone

especially the Kentucky frontier.

Daniel Boone played a crucial role in the exploration and settlement of Kentucky and the American west. He first began to seriously explore Kentucky in 1769, and in 1775 led the expedition that founded Boonesborough in present-day Madison County.

Some of his most famous exploits soon followed — his rescue of his daughter from Indian kidnappers, his own escape from captivity to warn Boonesborough of an impending attack, and leading the defense of the fort against a nine-day Shawnee siege.

In the 1780s, Boone ran a tavern in Limestone (now Maysville), and later served as a delegate in the Virginia assembly. Having lost all his land, he left Kentucky in 1799 for Missouri, where he died in 1820. Twenty-five years later what are believed to be the bodies of Boone and his wife Rebecca were brought to Kentucky and reinterred in Frankfort Cemetery.

"Daniel Boone, Pathfinder" is a presentation of the Kentucky Humanities Council, the Pikeville Rotary Club, and Pikeville College.

Exhibit

Deaf, the first publicly funded school for the deaf in the United States, which opened in 1823, and served as a model for public schools for the deaf. Harvey Corson, superintendent of the Kentucky School for the Deaf, served as a consultant to Gallaudet in creating the exhibition.

"History Through Deaf Eyes" will open Oct. 1 with a special event from 3 to 5 p.m. in the UK Student Center Great Hall. The exhibit will be open 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday to Saturday through Nov. 3 in the Rasdall Gallery, adjacent to the Great Hall. The gallery may be opened by appointment for groups by calling (859) 257-5781.

A lecture series is planned for Thursday evenings during the exhibit, and the gallery will be open extended hours during a lecture event.

Following the UK showing, the exhibit will travel to William Woods University in Fulton, Mo. In 2002, the exhibit will be seen in Philadelphia; Rochester, N.Y.; and the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

"History Through Deaf Eyes" was made possible by a major grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities and support from The Motorola Foundation, The John S. and James L. Knight Foundation, The Rockefeller Foundation, SBC Foundation and the BFGoodrich Foundation.

Poignant tale of FREEDOM

by JACQUELINE CUTLER
TVDATA FEATURES SYNDICATE

In the Time of the Butterflies such a sweet sounding title, viewers will expect the movie to live up to it. And despite depicting torture, murder and rebellion, it does. After all, what could be more worth fighting for than the sweet taste of freedom?

In the Time of the Butterflies, premiering on Showtime on Sunday, Oct. 7, is about the horrors of dictatorship and the ultimate sacrifice three sisters make in pursuit of freedom. Based on Julia Alvarez' book of the same title, it is a true story. Salma Hayek (Wild, Wild West) stars as Minerva Mirabal, an ambitious young woman who wants to study law. But in the Dominican Republic, where she lives quite comfortably with her three sisters and parents on a farm, girls do not study law.

Indeed, the people do precisely what General Rafael Leonidas Trujillo tells them to do. His way of dealing with people who dare oppose him is to kill them.

Edward James Olmos (Stand and Deliver) is scarcely convincing as Trujillo. He is the unctuous predator, doling out presents to those who obey, and torturing those who don't. "It was shocking to understand the realities that were in place during that period of time," Olmos says. "You had Mussolini, you had Hirohito, you had Hitler, you had Trujillo and you had Pinochet. You had quite a variety of dictators. And they all had to outdo themselves. He was the most flamboyant."

Freedom

Though people try to lead normal lives, it is impossible under Trujillo. Minerva and two of her sisters attend a Catholic boarding school. There, as a teen, she begins to learn what is happening in her country. One of her classmates explains that her own father, uncle and brothers have all disappeared.

Soon, Trujillo attends a pageant at the school. Minerva is among those onstage when the girl whose family has disappeared pulls out a bow and arrow to take aim at the dictator. Minerva knocks the girl off-balance, saving Trujillo. He acknowledges her bravery, and promises to remember her and keep track of her progress.

The Mirabal sisters return home. Soon, Minerva is introduced to law professor Virgilio "Lio" Morales (Marc Anthony, Bringing Out the Dead), who ignites her passion to fight for freedom. He calls her mariposa, Spanish for butterfly, a name by which her two sisters who join the revolution - Mate and Patria (Mia Maestro, Lumi Cavazos) - also come to be known.

Anthony, a brilliant singer, is overshadowed by the other actors, who are among the top Latino talents in the world. The movie's other weaknesses include flashbacks that are not as smooth as they should be and less than cogent character motives. For instance, the reason one of the Mirabal sisters does not join the rebellion is not revealed.

On the whole, however, Butterflies is worth watching. Hayek, who also is executive producer, says she had wanted to play

Minerva for years. "This is an amazing piece for women," she says. "It is a political drama but it is a political drama where the women are the protagonists. And, of course, the man is the antagonist."

Angry and determined, Minerva grows from a privileged, over-protected young woman to a rebel leader. After Lio awakens her fiery spirit, he must go underground. Like everyone who fights Trujillo in this dark drama, he is murdered.

Trujillo has kept his promise to monitor Minerva, and he invites her family to a formal affair. While the general and Minerva are dancing, he grabs her bottom, and she slaps him.

The next day, the police come to collect her father. She is told to appeal to Trujillo, who will free her father if she becomes his lover. Minerva and the general agree to let a simple roll of the dice determine her family's fate: Should she win, her father is free and she may attend law school. If he wins, she stays with him.

Minerva wins and becomes the only female at her law school. There she meets Manolo (Demian Bichir, The Penitent), one of Lio's friends. He is dashing and committed to the cause. They marry.

For no apparent reason, the sisters are released. They gussy up and visit their husbands in a different prison. Returning home, their car is stopped. They are pulled from it and clubbed to death on Nov. 25, 1960. But the children of the mariposas live to reap the rewards of their family's sacrifice: a free Dominican Republic.

Salma Hayek, Mia Maestro, Pilar Padilla and Ana Martin star in the Showtime movie In the Time of the Butterflies, about the struggle for freedom in the Dominican Republic, Sunday on Showtime.

THE MUSKETEER

This movie is so horrible, you'd think it starred Freddie Prinze Jr. Yes, "The Musketeer" is that bad.

The film stars Justin Chambers as the young musketeer D'Artagnan. He may look dashing, but his dumb-as-a-dead-lemur line delivery makes Keanu Reeves sound like James Earl Jones.

Also out of place is Mena Suvari, who plays D'Artagnan's love interest, Francesca, the queen's dresser.

But the most out of place feature in "The Musketeer" would have to be the Hong Kong-style fight sequences — another reason to hate Keanu Reeves. For if it weren't for the popularity of "The Matrix," we would not be swamped with dozens and dozens of action pictures featuring fight choreography from ex-pat Chinese filmmakers.

Almost every action film in the past two years has had Hong Kong-inspired wire work, fight choreography and/or martial arts sequences slapped onto them — whether they work or not, or whether they are done well or not.

"The Musketeer" is the latest offender. Good grief, who's the brainiac that green-lighted a film where 16th-century French swordsmen are all masters of kung-fu? And can we have him thrown into a pit of starving wild boars? Please?

I won't go into the story. There isn't much of one. The performances are pretty lackluster, except for Tim Roth's. He plays the villain and, as usual, chews the scenery with great relish. He is the only bright light in the entertainment black hole that is "The Musketeer."

Instead of coming away from "The Musketeer" with the familiar battle cry of "All for One and One for All" ringing in your heart, this movie will leave you feeling "None for Me and All for Naught."

If you want to see great swashbuckling action, terrific acting, magnificent costumes and top-shelf direction, go to your video store and rent "The Three Musketeers" and "The Four Musketeers" that came out in the 1970s, starring Oliver Reed, Michael York, Richard Chamberlain, Charlton Heston, Faye Dunaway and Raquel Welch.

Exercise

ease. Of course, you should always consult your physician before starting any exercise program.

Regular aerobic physical activity plays an important role in preventing cardiovascular disease. Continuous activities that use large muscle groups, such as brisk walking, bicycling, jogging, cross-country skiing and dancing are examples of aerobic exercises that increase your endurance capacity. These activities benefit the heart because they make the heart beat faster and eventually make the heart work more efficiently.

For inactive people, even low-intensity activities, when performed on a regular basis, can have long-term benefits. These may include housework, gardening or dancing. The American Heart Association recommends that the activity need not be strenuous to bring health benefits; what's important is that you include activity as part of the regular routine.

Regular exercise also decreases your risk of cardiovascular disease in these ways:

- It is associated with lower blood pressure.
- Smokers who start exercising are much more likely to stop or cut back.
- Recent studies show that regular physical activity increases "good" cholesterol (HDL) levels, which decreases your risk.
- Regular exercise decreases diabetic insulin requirements.
- Exercise helps people maintain a reasonable body weight, or lose excess body fat.

Not only does physical activity decrease your risk of cardiovascular disease, it will also improve your mood and promote a feeling of well-being.

LEAD STORIES

Two former faculty members at the University of South Florida medical school settled religious discrimination lawsuits with the school in August, lawsuits based on acts by their department's former chairman, Dr. James Rowsey, an eye surgeon of some note. Rowsey had practiced such faith-based governance as denying researchers equipment based on religious admonitions from his wife, whom he considered a prophet, and then pressuring complaining faculty members to actually pray that the university administration will increase the department's budget.

In September, King Mswati III of Swaziland, faced with a dramatic AIDS epidemic, ordered all teenage girls to abstain from sex for five years and to wear tassels of green and yellow to make it easier for men to avoid them (under threat of a fine, for man and woman both, of either one cow or about $250). Married teens are exempt but must wear tassels of red and black.

Clowns Gone Bad

The recently retired Quacky the Clown (Jacob L. Turner, 53) was arrested in August and charged with molesting a 10-year-old girl last year in his vehicle, which was just over the Michigan side of the Indiana state line; in Indiana, the maximum sentence is 45 years, but in Michigan, he faces life. However, a judge in Moline, Ill., acquitted Chuckles the Clown (Kimble McLain, 42) in September; he had performed at a Wal-Mart with his genitals clearly visible but convinced the judge that he had no idea that his zipper was down until someone told him. And Smiley the Clown (Christopher Bayer, 29) dutifully reported back to jail in Riverhead, N.Y., in August when his bail was revoked on child-molesting charges because a judge had misread state law by releasing him.

The Litigious Society

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported in July that a woman had commenced lawsuits against the Atlanta Braves and outfielder Andruw Jones for an injury to her head from a ball Jones had flipped into the stands. Jones said he was doing what many players do as a reward to spectators by tossing a ball, caught for the

BEST BETS

SUNDAY OCTOBER 7, 2001

12:30 p.m. NBC

Auto Racing

Although the championship is virtually decided, there is still plenty of business to attend to as the NASCAR season winds down. Following today's running of the UAW-GM Quality 500 from Lowe's Motor Speedway in Concord, N.C., seven races remain, including the season-ending makeup race in New Hampshire the day after Thanksgiving. That's certainly time enough for Jeff Gordon to maintain his top spot in the points standings, but it also gives drivers looking for a 2002 sponsor time to make an impression. Will they resort to a more aggressive form of driving? The answer becomes clearer in Tar Heel country today.

2 p.m. ABC

Soccer

Their destiny is in their hands, starting in a place they have never lost. The U.S. Men's National Soccer Team hosts Jamaica today in Foxboro Stadium, a venue in which they have been unbeaten in nine international matches. That's a comforting thought for the Americans, who must win today and in Trinidad on Nov. 11 to qualify for its fifth World Cup tournament. Two straight losses have tarnished the United States' early success in Final Round games, but lately they've had to make do without the likes of injured starters Claudio Reyna, Brian McBride, Clint Mathis and Josh Wolff.

7 p.m. ABC

Movie: Doctor Dolittle

Eddie Murphy plays the doctor with the interspecies communication skills in this 1998 remake, which bears almost no resemblance to the 1967

Rex Harrison version or Hugh Lofting's book. Kids won't mind; it's heavy on the bodily function jokes and other gross-out gags, and the talking animals are a riot. The guinea pig almost steals the show with his wisecracking comments voiced by actor-comic Chris Rock.

8 p.m. CBS

Primetime Emmy Awards

After a delay of three weeks due to recent events, the television industry's biggest ceremony of the year is staged. Programs and personalities of the previous season are honored at Los Angeles' Shrine Auditorium, with Ellen DeGeneres remaining as host. Producers anticipate keeping the approach relatively low-key.

8:30 p.m. ESPN

featured nationally for the second consecutive week, this time at home against division rival Carolina Panthers. The Niners' offense gets all the headlines (fourth overall last season), but their defense will determine any success they enjoy this year. So far, the reunited tackle tandem of Dana Stubblefield and Bryant Young has lifted the play of the entire unit. They'll face a Panthers team led offensively by new quarter-back Chris Weinke, the 29-year-old rookie who takes over for the departed Steve Beuerlein.

9 p.m. HBO

Band of Brothers

In "Bastogne," the freezing and hungry members of Easy Company struggle to withstand the enemy outside the Belgian town in this new episode. Respite presents itself in the nick of time to the exhausted Roe (Shane Taylor) in the form of a nurse, while the other men mark Christmas by bracing themselves for increasingly difficult times when their superiors refuse to surrender.

9 p.m. NBC

Law and Order: Criminal Intent

Two people connected to a museum are slain in the drama's second episode, "Art." As detective partners Goren and Eames (Vincent D'Onofrio, Kathryn Erbe) look into the killings, they determine that a dealer who is marketing copies of masterpieces is the prime suspect. They hope to beat him at his own game by staging a sting involving another forgery expert.

American Masters

The series that profiles past and present major players in the arts begins its new season with a profile of Samuel Goldwyn, the late movie mogul whose productions included the Academy Award-winner for Best Picture of 1946, "The Best Years of Our Lives." Dustin Hoffman narrates Goldwyn, featuring interview clips of Bette Davis and Laurence Olivier.

10 p.m. CINEMAX

Movie: Bedazzled

Brendan Fraser turns back to comedy in this 2000 remake of the tale about a man whose circumstances prompt him to sell his soul to a very alluring representation of the devil (Elizabeth Hurley). He initially enjoys the big changes she makes to his life, but eventually learns there's a price to pay for entering into a pact with Satan. Special effects are plentiful here.

10 p.m. NBC

UC: Undercover

In "Kiss Tomorrow Goodbye," police Detective Jake (Jon Seda) is in the crosshairs of drug lord Sonny (William Forsythe). However, Jake survives to continue the case as he and Alex (Vera Farmiga) pose as dealers, targeting the criminals who took a large stash of confiscated heroin from a police station. Meanwhile, Sonny's girl-friend (Angie Everhart) takes over his operation.

MONDAY OCTOBER 8, 2001

8 p.m. FOX

Malcolm in the Middle

In the style of Gwyneth Paltrow's movie Sliding Doors, one event becomes the springboard for two different stories in "Bowling." Malcolm and Reese (Frankie Muniz, Justin Berfield) are invited to a bowling party, and Hal (Bryan Cranston) escorts them to it in one scenario, while the other plot makes Lois (Jane Kaczmarek) their 100 Centre Street. The law drama from veteran filmmaker Sidney Lumet begins its second season with "Kids." Romantically involved Cynthia and Bobby (Paula Devicq, Joseph Lyle Taylor) have left the public defender's office to set up a defense firm, while Judge Rifkind (Alan Arkin) deals with an eager new prosecutor (Bobby Cannavale, Third Watch).

9 p.m. ABC

NFL Football

It might not matter who quarterbacks the Lions tonight when they host the St. Louis Rams. New coach Marty Mornhinweg needed only one game to figure out Charlie Batch wasn't the answer, instead opting for veteran Ty Detmer to run his West Coast offense. Either way, Detroit's bigger concern tonight may be its defense, but that's how most teams feel when facing the score-happy Rams. Start with reigning MVP Marshall Faulk, equally skilled at rushing and pass catching, add quarter-back Kurt Warner and three dangerous wideouts and the main ingredients for the NFL's best offense are firmly in place.

9 p.m. LIFETIME

Movie: No Ordinary Baby

Cloning is the issue in this new fictional drama, starring Bridget Fonda as a TV reporter who learns the secret of an expectant couple (Valerie Mahaffey, Adam LeFevre). Their forthcoming child

The following "Soap Scraps" is by guest columnist Sally Stone. It replaces the Soap Summaries that would ordinarily appear on this page. However, those summaries are not available this week because of storyline adjustments made by the networks to bring the episodes up to date following airtime preemption for the World Trade Center bombing coverage. Look for a complete and accurate summary rundown on this page next week.

Sorry to tell longtime admirers of Clint Ritchie that the rugged, handsome cowboy won't be saddling up for a return trip to "One Life to Live" anytime soon. Ritchie notes that reports that he's set to reprise his role as Clint Buchanan are flattering, but untrue.

Meanwhile, a slew of stars from "As the World Turns" and "Guiding Light" will be making personal appearances around the country.

Paul Leyden (Simon, "ATWT") will appear at Sears, Roebuck & Co., Polaris Fashion Place, 1400 Polaris Parkway, Columbus, Ohio on Saturday, Oct. 20 from 1 p.m.-3 p.m. For more information, call (614) 797-2054.

Jordi Vilasuso (Tony, "Guiding Light") will also appear at Sears, Roebuck & Co., Polaris Fashion Place on Oct. 27. And Michael Park (Jack, "ATWT") follows up a week later on Nov. 2.

Jordi Vilasuso (Tony, "GL") will appear at Sears, Roebuck & Co., The Mall at Robinson, 1000 Robinson Town Center Drive in Pittsburgh on Saturday, Nov. 10, from noon-2 p.m.

In Other News: Barbara Garrick, who returned to "OLTL" as Allison Perkins some 20 years after she first played the character, says coming back to the studio was "one big déjà vu experience."

"It was almost as if I'd been away for a weekend," she says. "Although there were many new people, there were also a lot of familiar faces, especially Erika Slezak (Viki). Our characters had quite a history together. After all, I was the one who kidnapped her baby daughter." (Note: Garrick co-stars with Tom Selleck in "A Thousand Clowns" at the Longacre Theater in New York City.)

Juliet Mills, who plays Tabitha the Witch on "Passions," says she's amused when people ask her if she would like to be a good witch in real life.

"I answer — of course I would. Think of all the nice things I could do for people."

Critter Corner...

by DR. CAROL COMBS-MORRIS, DVM

Did you ever think about how important eyes are to communication?

We're certainly aware of other people's eyes. We say of someone we are sure is lying, "He couldn't look me in the eye." If we think someone is dishonest, we may say he has "shifty" eyes. How quickly could your mother remind you to mind your manners if she caught your eye across a crowded room?

Eyes are even more important to communication for animals that don't have a spoken language. Many non-human species depend primarily on visual and chemical (smell) means to communicate with each other.

Obviously, body language depends on vision for interpretation, but often the eyes themselves are used to transmit information. If you have a blind pet, it may not get along well with other animals because it can't send and receive information normally. Animals who live with the blind individual usually adapt to the disability over time, and sometimes even seem to understand the problem.

Dogs are an excellent example of a species that has developed a very sophisticated visual language. We are told as children not to stare at dogs; this is good advice. In most predatory species, including dogs, cats, and humans, direct eye contact with another individual is used to mean confidence, dominance, or sometimes an overt threat. A dog could interpret a person's stare as any of these things; the interpretation can vary depending on the temperament of the dog, the situation, or other signals the person is sending unconsciously with his body.

In prey species (horses, deer, goats, etc.), a stare is often associated with a predator. Watch a herding dog work a flock of sheep sometime. While he uses his body, a great deal of control is done with his eyes. Border Collies, in particular, are famous for their "eye". Herding breeds are actually dogs selected for their predatory drive: over time this has been modified so they don't go any further than chasing and sometimes nipping or holding the leg of a sheep or cow.

The predatory stare is a useful concept to keep in mind if you have a horse that is difficult to catch in the pasture. Try approaching the horse with your head turned slightly and your eyes focused down and away from him. Move toward the horse in sort of a gentle, arcing, zigzag pattern rather than in a straight line. If he turns away, you stop, turn away slightly, and continue only when he stops moving. It's one of those cases where slower can actually be faster. This is not going to work, of course, for the horse that just does not want to be caught, but if he is just nervous and flighty, it may be enough to reassure him and allow you to approach. (For a really in-depth discussion of this concept, read "The Man Who Listens to Horses" by Monty Roberts).

Dogs use an averted gaze and narrowed, sometimes rapidly blinking eyes to indicate they intend no harm. Different degrees of looking away, combined with other postures and expressions, can be used to indicate friendliness, submission or fear.

Some scientists even feel that the markings on the faces of wolves help to make facial expressions more easily seen. The little tan marks above the eyes of Rottweilers and Dobermans may be remnants of these communication devices. This poses an interesting question: Have we unconsciously made it harder for our domestic dogs to communicate with one another by artificially changing their markings? We almost certainly interfere with communications when we dock tails and crop ears.

I'm not saying that solid-colored dogs are handicapped by this, but just that color may be significant sometimes. If your Siberian Husky (with his wolf-like facial markings) has never seen other breeds of dogs, the first time he meets a black Labrador Retriever, he may need some time to get the hang of the other's "speech". It's usually not a problem, probably for the same reason that we understand English even when spoken with an unfamiliar accent.

One of the most valuable things you can do when starting to train a dog is to teach him to make eye contact with you. Some dogs will do this more readily than others; obviously, bold, outgoing dogs will be more comfortable with this than more timid and submissive animals. I wonder if this is part of the reason that herding breeds do so well in obedience competition.

Ask the dog to "Look" or "Watch me" frequently during the day, whether or not you are actually doing a training session. Young puppies and inexperienced dogs may be helped by a treat or toy held near your eye. (This is probably an unnecessary warning, but don't do this with a big rambunctious dog who can jump flat-footed and poke you in the eye with his nose. Don't even ask how I know this.)

A dog who refuses to make eye contact is much more difficult to train than one who watches his handler for the next cue. The dog who watches you wants to communicate.

The eyes don't tell the whole story, however. Next week, we'll check out what the other end of the dog is saying.

Art at Lunch Fall 2001

Expand your knowledge of quilts, Cuban photography, and Kentucky's Poet Laureate in the University of Kentucky Art Museum's Art at Lunch series for the fall semester, 2001. Join us for short gallery talks by faculty, artists, and visiting scholars designed to introduce key works currently on view at the museum.

The first installment took place on Wednesday, October 3, in conjunction with the current exhibition Contemporary Art Quilts: The John M. Walsh III Collection. Helen Thompson spoke on quilts and quilting. Thompson is a respected quilt expert and a member of the Board of Directors at the Museum of the American Quilters Society in Paducah.

On Wednesday, November 7, Meira Marrero, Cuban art historian and curator of photography, will speak on her exhibition Curator's Choice. This exhibition, to be held in the museum's Richard B. Freeman Gallery, will feature works by Cuban photographers juxtaposed with photographs from the Art Museum's extensive photography collection. Marrero is at the University of Kentucky this semester as an artist in residence.

The final Art at Lunch for Fall 2001 will take place on Wednesday, December 5. Kentucky Poet Laureate and photographer, James Baker Hall, will discuss his work exhibited in A Spring-fed Pond: My Friendships with Five Kentucky Writers. Hall's friendships with Bobbie Ann Mason, Ed McClanahan, Wendell Berry, Gurney Norman, and Mary Ann Taylor-Hall are documented in a series of photographs taken over the course of many years.

All of the talks will take place at 12:30 p.m. in the museum galleries. There is no charge, and the public is welcome.

The University of Kentucky Art Museum is open noon to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Sunday, and noon to 8 p.m. Friday; closed Monday and University holidays. For general museum information, contact Jane Boswell at (859) 257-5716. Visit the web site at www.uky.edu/ArtMuseum.

Samuel Blue (guest star Steven Weber) caused quite a stir the last time he was around, nearly sweeping Judy (Marin Hinkle) off her feet — despite the fact that he was married. Now, he returns to the scene of his love crimes, and with him come opportunities and decisions that could forever change Judy's and Rick's (Billy Campbell) lives. Sela Ward, Julia Whelan, Shane West and Evan Rachel Wood star in "Kind of Blue."

SATURDAY OCTOBER 13, 2001

7 p.m. TBS

Movie: Dumb & Dumber

Jim Carrey and Jeff Daniels star in this 1994 comedy as two doofuses — one a dog groomer and the other a limo driver — who commit every bathroom joke in the book during their cross-country quest to return a suitcase full of ransom money to a pretty socialite. Lauren Holly, Teri Garr, Charles Rocket and hockey great Cam Neely also star.

7 p.m. USA

Movie: Can't Hardly Wait

Some familiar faces are featured in this 1998 comedy about a high-school graduation party that takes interesting turns. Ethan Embry (That Thing You Do!) plays a fellow who's eager to act on the crush he has on a popular classmate (Jennifer Love Hewitt), just as she's having boyfriend trouble. Seth Green (Buffy the Vampire Slayer) and Melissa Joan Hart also appear. 8 p.m.

A&E Biography

John Wayne: American Legend remembers the actor whose name is synonymous with "tough guy."

His professional name, that is; as most fans know, he was born Marion Morrison and briefly went by his childhood nickname, Duke, on the screen before striking gold as John Wayne. Like many college football stars in Southern California in the 1920s, Wayne worked for a movie studio during the summer, first as a prop man and then as an extra. After years in B colleagues scramble for a solution while the world holds its breath. Gary Sinise and Ed Harris also star. Jim Lovell appears in a cameo role as captain of the USS Iwo Jima.

9 p.m. HBO

Movie: Shot in the Heart

The true story of a young man's efforts to keep his brother — Executioner's Song subject Gary Gilmore — from dying in prison is recounted in this new drama. Giovanni Ribisi (Saving Private Ryan) plays the young man who is trying to understand why his notorious sibling (Elias Koteas), a convicted-killer, wants to be sentenced to death. The film was made by the producers of Oz.

9 p.m. NBC

Movie: Happy Gilmore

The pro golf circuit will never be the same when a failed hockey player with a long drive and a short fuse moves from the rinks to the links. Adam Sandler (The Waterboy) has the title role in this 1996 comedy, with Julie Bowen (NBC's Ed) as a pretty public relations executive whose heart the abrasive Happy somehow manages to win. Carl Weathers also stars.

10 p.m. CINEMAX

Movie: Lake Placid

Most critics panned this 1999 horror tale from David E. Kelley (Ally McBeal, Chicago Hope), but those who like their movie monsters served up with acampy seasoning will appreciate it. Bridget Fonda stars in the fish-out-of-water role of a big-city paleontologist investigating a mysterious death in a remote Maine lake — the work of a 30-foot man-eating crocodile. Bill Pullman plays a laconic game warden with whom she clashes and later bonds, and Brendan Gleeson and Oliver Platt play a portly pair of policemen. But the film's real stars are the giant croc himself and Betty White as his best human friend, an eccentric widow who keeps him well-supplied with steak tartare.

10 p.m. SHOWTIME

Boxing

Mike Tyson takes another step toward his goal of becoming champion again when he faces Super Brian Nielsen. The bout, scheduled for 10 rounds, emanates from Nielsen's home country of Denmark on a same-day-tape basis. This is the 35-year-old Tyson's first foray into the ring in almost a year, since Andrew Golota quit in the second round against him last October. Just what is super about his opponent is a bit of a mystery. Nielsen is 62-1 with 43 knockouts. His two biggest wins have come against Larry Holmes and Tim Witherspoon, both in their 40s and washed up when Nielsen faced them.
