Floyd board mulls tax hike

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — The Floyd County Board of Education met for a special meeting at May Valley Elementary Thursday evening and discussed, among other things, a possible tax increase.

The tax increase, if approved, could find property owners paying an average $13 a year extra in taxes.

School board treasurer and finance director Matt Wireman advised the board Thursday night that taxes would have to be raised eventually to ward off the potential for losing state funds.

Wireman included in his presentation to the school board the update that state revenue had suffered a significant drop from last year, a development that now called for action from the Floyd County school system.

The decision to initiate a 4 percent increase that would find taxpayers paying an additional $1.75 for every $25,000 of value has to be approved before the September 30 deadline.

Board member Carol Stumbo asked Wireman to explain what the increase would mean for the average taxpayer.

"How is this going to affect taxpayers?" Stumbo asked.

The increase would find property

Board changes name of P'burg complex

PRESTONSBURG — One half of the ongoing debate for an acceptable name for the new Prestonsburg High School athletic complex was decided during a special-called Floyd County Board of Education meeting Thursday night.

From a list of potential names, which included such proposed submissions as the Stumbo-Fannin Blackcat Alumni Memorial Athletic Complex, the Blackcat Memorial Athletic Complex and the Fighting Blackcat Athletic Complex, to list a few, the board made a unanimous decision that the complex, as a whole, would be referred to now as the Prestonsburg Blackcat Athletic Complex.

In the past few weeks, there has been much said of an attempt to find a suitable name for the new facility, with the bulk of the attention directed to the field in particular.

The confusion began early in the year and extended even as far as the Blackcats' first home game against Paintsville as radio announcers prematurely labeled the field the Josh Francis Field during their color commentary.

Francis, a 16-year-old Prestonsburg football standout, was killed in a car accident at East Point on August 4.

However, the name of the field was not decided Thursday night, as board members were presented with one half of the existing ballot.

"Where is the rest of the ballot?" board member Carol Stumbo asked.

The board examined the bal-

VIPER — A teenager was killed in Viper Friday when his all-terrain vehicle pulled out in front of a pickup truck.

Jeremy Shepherd, 18, a former Perry County High student, was already wearing a back brace from breaking his back in an accident last month on Hall Mountain on the same four-wheeler, a 2001 Yamaha 350.

Shepherd pulled out of Callahan Hollow Road, onto the Left Fork of Mace's Creek in front of Billy Gamble's Ford F-150.

Callahan Hollow Road is situated between two blind curves and several accidents have occurred there, nearby residents said.

However, a school entrance is located even closer to the blind curve than that road, and a school bus was hit there.

"My bus wrecked coming out of there last year — Bus 109," said Aaron Little, a student at EASTERN KENTUCKY — What began as only a dream of providing help for area youth with drug or alcohol addictions is becoming more of a reality as support grows throughout Pike and Floyd counties.

Karen Conn, assistant principal and part-time counselor at Millard High School in Pike County, who initiated a project geared toward bringing a residential juvenile drug treatment center to the area, announced a partial list of the board of directors at the facility's third organizational meeting on Thursday.

The board represents a combination of individuals from both Floyd and Pike Counties who will help create and maintain the project, which JACKSON — Breathitt County may be a small community, but the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington, D.C., still had an enormous affect on it.

Many flags have gone up in the days following the tragedy, some lowered. The Friday following the attack, some schools and businesses closed for prayer and memorials. Some churches opened their doors for people to come pray and grieve.

Flags went up at the Breathitt County Courthouse, Citizens Bank, the Kentucky River Medical Center, above the police station and at the mayor's office. Flags were up at churches, homes and businesses all over Breathitt County in a display of support and patriotism.

Many students wore red, white and blue to school to show that even they were affected by the tragedy.

Some students even wrote poems about their feelings, such as the following:

Floyd, Knott team up for water

by MARY MUSIC

PRESTONSBURG — In an effort to extend water service to citizens living in both Floyd and Knott counties, the Floyd County Fiscal Court authorized an interlocal cooperation agreement for the development of a water service infrastructure in both counties during a regularly scheduled meeting on Friday.

The fiscal court authorized County Judge-Executive Paul Hunt Thompson to sign all documents pertaining to the agreement between the both fiscal courts in Floyd and Knott counties, the Knott County Water and Sewer District and the Southern Water and Sewer District. Those agencies will unite efforts to make water services available to individuals living in both counties.

"The purpose of this is that we're not quite combining both water districts," said

Thompson, "but it's as close as we can get ..."

During the meeting, Thompson reiterated that the cooperation between Floyd and Knott Counties will "open doors" to receive additional grant monies for the water expansion project.

One example, said Thompson, is shown clearly, considering a $1 million federal grant that would be received to upgrade the Allen Water Plant, would double, making $2 million available for the same construction.

Under the agreement, the Knott County Water and Sewer District consents that the Southern Water and Sewer District take "all steps necessary and appropriate" to provide water service to Rock Fork and Beaver Creek areas of Knott County.

According to the resolution signed by fiscal court members Friday, the agree-

Three plead guilty in elk death; two get jail time being established in Appalachia. Wildlife officials had enough proof to show that two of the men were guilty of cruelty to animals, which probably induced the men to plea bargain, said Doug Hensley, the district wildlife commissioner.

Wildlife officials could have filed animal cruelty charges, Hensley confirmed. "We could have, we certainly could have," Hensley said.

Two of the men ran the calf down with an all-terrain vehicle and dragged it to the house of a third man. The third man did help skin the animal, but was not involved in the chase, according to the investigation, Hensley said.

"They split the cow and the calf. The calf, when split up, was disoriented. There were tracks where it ran off in the woods," Hensley said.

Proof existed to show the men chased the calf, he confirmed. The all-terrain vehicle tracks showed where the men killed the calf and there was blood and hair, he said.

"They went out of the way," Hensley said. "They hit it with the four-wheeler and knocked it down and taped its legs and cut its throat. They drove it over a mile down the road with it still alive."

Roger Hensley, 36, of Hyden, who is of no relation to wildlife commissioner Doug Hensley, and Wendell K. Asher, 36, also of Hyden, were given probated six-month sentences, but were ordered to serve partial sentences. Hensley will serve two months; Asher, 20 days. Each man must also pay a $2,000 fine in restitution to replace the elk.

The court also took their all-terrain vehicle and stripped the men of their hunting privileges for three years, as well as having them pay court costs.

Ewing Daniel Bowling, 37, of Thousandsticks, also pleaded guilty, but was given probation.

Bowling was not on the all-terrain vehicle and did not participate in the chase, according to Hensley.

"If they violate probation, they will pull the whole time. They were probated a year," he said.

"It was a good precedent," continued Hensley. "It was a plea bargain. We didn't have to go to trial. It tells me something about the people of Leslie County. Leslie County people and Eastern Kentucky people are not going to tolerate killing these elk out of season. I was very pleased."

"I am really proud of the people of Leslie County," said Hensley. "I have to tell you I am. A lot of time it gets political in our court system. I think people just wanted to do the right thing. I want to emphasize that we felt really good about the conviction and about the district judge and about the county attorney, Kenneth Whitt is a very competent young man."

Hensley was present at the hearing, along with wildlife officers and members of the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation.

At least four foundation members attended to show support for the prosecution.

The foundation has raised over $1 million to restore elk in Eastern Kentucky, and is in the process of raising another $700,000.

Foundation members said that it costs about $2,500 to replace an elk.

Judge-Executive Paul Hunt Thompson received a certificate of recognition at the Floy County Fiscal Court Meeting on Friday from the Department of Veteran Affairs. Signed by Gov. Paul Patton and General Les Beavers, commissioner for the Department of Veteran Affairs, the certificate recognizes Thompson for "loyal and dedicated service."

"He's helped us out a lot for the past two years, by giving us an office for free of charge," said Roger Belcher, a veteran's field representative who presented the award. "He's really been good to the veterans not only here, but throughout the region."

Water

ment will be in effect for a period of four years from the date that water is turned on in that area, at which time the Knott District will give a six-month notice that it is "ready and capable of assuming all infrastructure assets and related obligations of system operation and maintenance."

The agreement states that the Southern Water District will exercise all the rights and obligations associated with ownership, operation, control and maintenance of the facilities in the designated areas, as well as "make all reasonable efforts to cooperate with Knott County in the implementation" of both the Rock Fork and Beaver Creek AML Water Supply Projects.

The date of completion is expected to be no later than January 1, 2006.

During the meeting, the Fiscal Court also:

- Approved a resolution to authorize Thompson to sign all documents pertaining to a county road use agreement with Sly Branch Energy Inc.

- Authorized Thompson to sign all documents pertaining to a grant agreement between Floyd, Johnson, Magoffin and Martin Counties and the Big Sandy Regional Airport Board to rehabilitate a runway and a taxiway in the amount of $147,000.

- Authorized payment through grant funding for the following:

- The Floyd County sheriff for law enforcement services at Dewey Lake in the amount of $4,086.

- The New Century Aquaponics Greenhouse Vendors.

- The Floyd Outreach Program/HOME Vendors.

- The emergency shelter vendors.

- The Ky Tech 2 vendors.

"I've been asked to meet with the parents and talk with them about the naming of the field," said Ross. "Until I have the chance to do that, we need to wait."

Ross, who had expressed concern with the list of potential names afforded on the field ballot, commented just prior to Prestonsburg's home opener that Prestonsburg students may have needed a wider variety of submissions to choose from.

The original ballot allowed students to vote from five choices: the Josh Francis Field, Francis Memorial Field, #59 Memorial Field, Josh Francis Memorial Field and J.F. Memorial Field. Along with these five, a write-in vote was made available to students participating in the vote.

Ross gave no sure indication Thursday night that a name for the field could be expected soon, but made it clear that the debate over a name for the complex overall has ended.

"Prestonsburg's new facility will now be called Prestonsburg Blackcat Athletic Complex," said Ross, "as decided by vote."

Board votes against allowing smoking areas at schools

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — The issue of smoking on school grounds has been a back-and-forth debate in Floyd County for a number of years.

Often in the course of a few years, the policy has changed, and has now left many students, faculty and administrators struggling to enforce a policy that seems to have difficulty settling.

However, Floyd County Board of Education chairman Johnnie E. Ross spent little time deliberating on the matter when the subject came up again, saying that it shouldn't be a difficult policy to decide.

Ross, who has time and again stated that smoking should be strictly prohibited on school grounds without exception, voted against a proposed policy change Thursday night during a special board meeting.

Board member Jeff Stumbo expressed concerns about a public aspect of the smoking policy that currently stands for Floyd County schools.

"I have asked that we amend this policy," said Stumbo. "It is a good idea to have a facility smoke-free, but we are going to have enforcement problems."

Stumbo followed this explanation with a motion to designate an area near a school or particular building on the respective school's grounds that could be used during school gatherings, particularly sporting events.

The idea of an enforcement problem concerning the policy should not be difficult to maintain, said board chairman Johnnie E. Ross.

"You have this sort of situation a lot," said Ross. "For instance, people know not to smoke in church and they don't smoke. They realize that people shouldn't smoke in grocery stores and they don't. They don't have someone standing there saying not to smoke. It is just understood. I don't see why it should be any different with our school grounds."

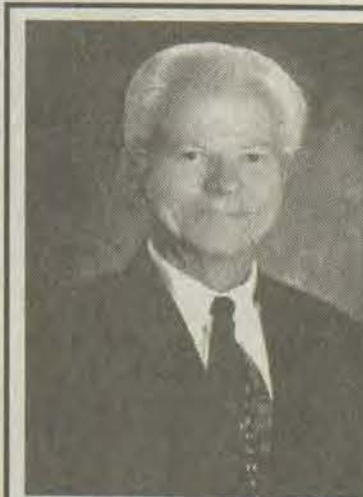

Ross went on to offer a possible means of implementing the policy in a way that would serve as a more direct ruling.

"Perhaps a good idea would be to announce it at these games," Ross said. "Just have them to announce 'Your Floyd County Board of Education has asked that you not smoke on school grounds. If you need to smoke then please smoke off school grounds.'"

Ross said this method had actually been utilized at at least one sporting event and was met with a positive response.

"This was done at at least one place I know of," continued Ross, "and smokers who were standing beside of me and about to light up actually clapped when the announcement was made. I think there will be no trouble in enforcing the policy ... this is just something we have to stick to and not give in."

members say will include a "model education program" for students who participate in the program.

Those chosen to act as the board of directors share a host of expertise in fields that will be beneficial to the center, including Floyd County Superintendent Dr. Paul Fanning and Pike County Superintendent Frank Welch, who both look forward to bringing drug treatment opportunities to the children in their school districts.

"I'm certainly very pleased and honored to be asked to serve in that capacity," said Fanning, during an interview Friday. "Drug abuse is certainly a topic we're not very fond of, but it's something we know we have a problem and we know we have to deal with."

"If it's effective," continued Fanning, "this program will not only provide students with a solution to the drug abuse problem, it acts as a two-edged sword in that they will be able to retain and keep them (the children) involved in the educational environment they need: The biggest thing is to provide refuge from substance abuse while at the same time keeping the educational component."

Welch recently announced the Greasy Elementary School in Pikeville as a possible site location for the facility.

Steven Belcher, vice president in charge of commercial lending at Community Trust Bank, with branches in both Pikeville and Prestonsburg, will oversee the financial aspect of the facility, said Conn. The center is now registered as a non-profit organization, and upon completion will make it one of only a few such facilities in the state.

According to Scott Walker, director of the Layne House in Prestonsburg, who will also serve on the board as treatment director, the group will be as "diversified as possible" in seeking funding for the program.

Through his experience with drug and alcohol treatment at the Layne House in Prestonsburg, Walker created plans for the facility which will provide classroom education during the child's stay, as well as drug treatment and rehabilitative measures, community involvement, counseling and drug abuse awareness for those students.

The program, said Walker, will be unique and specifically target the needs of children in the Eastern Kentucky area, rather than adapting plans of other drug treatment programs available throughout the United States, which he said would not be as effective.

With statewide cuts in mental health funding, it is important to "keep doors open" to insure the stability of the center, said Conn.

"With the mental health facilities cutbacks, we may have a month — couple of months — setback," said Conn. "Will I get this project going? Yes. Will we be able to help the children? Yes. I don't care if it's federal, HUD, or the National Guard. We'll get the money."

Conn said the group is "looking into going after" confiscated drug money to help fund the project, as well as grants available from the law enforcement field, ADD grants, HUD grants for remodeling, and other available organizations.

Steve Payson, associate director of student affairs at Pikeville College's School of Osteopathic Medicine, will also accompany the board of directors to spearhead the project.

Payson, who spoke in August and September in U.S. District Court in London and Lexington about the dangers of OxyContin throughout Eastern Kentucky, suggested allowing students at the college to "rotate" through the center as part of their service electives.

Payson, who has worked with the Pike County Drug Court, said he joined the board because of the lack of drug abuse treatment facilities for area youth.

"When working with the drug court, I saw most of the people given alternative sentences were taking OxyContin, which has been widely abused in the area and a real problem in Eastern Kentucky," said Payson. "When you work in prevention or in treatment, if you find someone who is ready to give up their addiction, you have to act quickly to get them the help they need. When I did this intervention, I found there were no places to send them. There are no residential treatment facilities available locally, and the ones that are available have waiting lists of at least 30 to 40 people."

"I think it's important when you make an effort to identify people with drug abuse problems, you don't leave them hanging out to dry," continued Payson. "There are a lot of people working on prevention and drug abuse awareness in our area, but we just don't have the facilities we need. After you talk to a 10th grader for two hours and he finally admits he has a drug problem, you can't wait in owners paying an increase that would be, according to comments made by Superintendent Paul Fanning, less of a financial strain as may be first assumed.

"We're talking about $13 over the course of an entire year," said Fanning. "I think that should be made clear."

Carol Stumbo was not without help in probing for questions on Wireman's recommendation for a 4-percent increase.

Fellow board member Jeff Stumbo also found the need to question the increase.

"If this board approves this tax increase, where does the money go?" Stumbo asked.

According to Wireman, the money collected from taxpayers would be partially matched by state funds and then placed into a general fund where it would then be available as needed throughout the course of the year in the form of possible grants or other instances where it could be effectively utilized.

Prior to the meeting, the board, recognizing the need to allow public comment on such an issue, affording the speaker's chair with a sign-up sheet for public comment on the proposed tax increase.

As the formal discussion came to a close on the issue, Fanning paused and asked a mostly empty May Valley Elementary library if there would be any comments from the public. After a lengthy pause, Fanning then allowed the meeting to continue determining that the sparsely populated meeting would provide no public input.

Regardless of the lack of that public insight, Stumbo moved that no decision be made on the tax increase Thursday.

"Conceivably, we could review this and vote on it during our next regular meeting," said Stumbo.

The board agreed unanimously, and decided to make a more informed decision during the next regular meeting.

The board will meet again on September 24, six days prior to the September 30 deadline.

Perry Central. "It scraped a van pulling out." Little and other students were at the scene, not in school, because classes were dismissed in observance of the Black Gold Festival in Hazard.

"He (Jeremy) told us yesterday he wasn't supposed to be on it," Little said.

"Yesterday he was pulling out and if I hadn't hollered at him, he would have been hit again," said Sherman Asher, who lives on a hill just above the accident site.

Asher said that Shepherd flipped the same four-wheeler last month on Hall Mountain and hit a tree.

Asher and others tried to comfort the driver of the truck, Billy Gamble, who is a 41-year-old resident of the same area.

"Bill, he tried to miss him, but there was no missing," said Asher.

Asher said he ran to the accident scene when he heard a "bang" and Jeremy was lying on the payment. Jeremy told bystanders, "I'm hurt," and they made him lie still, Asher said.

Rick Begley held Shepherd's mouth open with his finger to let blood run out so that Shepherd could breathe. Begley, who knew Shepherd, lives a short distance from the crash site.

"They need to do away with these things," Asher said. "Adults could ride them, but kids should not be turned loose on them."

Asher said he had two friends killed last July on four-wheelers.

Shepherd is the son of Danny and Maxine Shepherd and is Leonard Cunningham's grandson, said Bill Williams, a resident of the area who watched the scene. His brother is Mike Shepherd, a deputy.

Trooper Gerald Stone and many deputies responded to the scene. Trooper Tim Kilburn, an accident reconstruction specialist, went to the scene to investigate.

Kilburn issued a news release soon. He said that Gamble's truck had hit the four wheeler and knocked Shepherd onto the roadway.

Shepherd was taken to the Hazard ARH Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

He was not wearing a helmet. Gamble was wearing a seat belt and was not injured.

My Daddy, My Hero by Jasmine Coomer

Today the world got a real scare

I think of you as I run my fingers thru my hair

With a tear in my eye and a sigh in my heart

I think of you afraid war will start

I love you my daddy so big and so brave

Your job is to protect our country and flag that now waves

You've been in the guards for so many years

I think of you with my eyes full of tears

A time like this most men run and hide

But I know my daddy will stand side by side

The world is such a scary place

I close my eyes and see your face

Not many men are as strong as you

I love you my daddy thru and thru

If war should start I pray you don't go

But I know you will do what your heart tells you so

If you must go I will be so blue

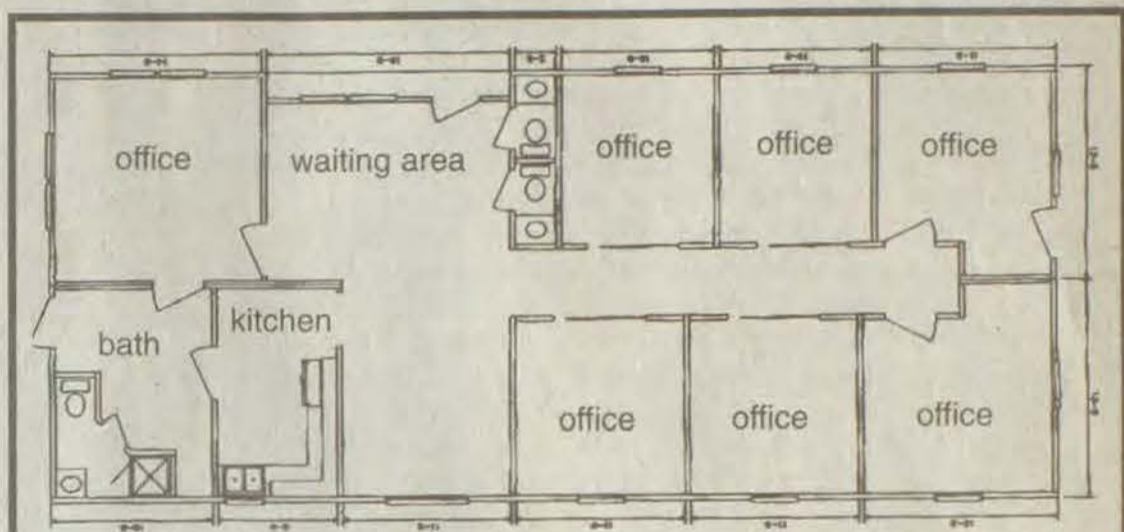

But I know in our hearts our love will be true

I love you my daddy!

Gummy Smiles and Receding Gums Can Be Corrected with Periodontal Procedures

Pikeville—A smile is often one of the first things we notice about another person. Therefore, the appearance of your smile can greatly affect your self-esteem. People who feel they have gummy smiles, often hide their smiles. What they may not know is that a simple surgical procedure would allow them to smile confidently.

"Procedures like tooth whitening and bonding have received a lot of attention as cosmetics procedures for the smile. What many people do not realize is that there are also procedures which can be performed on the gums to enhance the smiles of people who feel their teeth appear too long or too short," said Terry W. Wright, D.M.D., a local periodontist, and member of the American Academy of Periodontology.

The answer for a gummy smile may be crown lengthening, which is the second most popular cosmetic periodontal procedure for patients under age 50, according to a recent poll of periodontists. With crown lengthening, excess gum and bone tissue is recontoured to expose a natural tooth. This can be done to one tooth to even your gum line, or to several teeth to expose a natural, broad smile.

Conversely, some people feel their teeth appear too long. If your tooth root is exposed because your gums have receded, soft tissue grafts can cover exposed roots, reduce further gum recession and protect vulnerable roots from decay.

If you are interested in having the best smile you can, talk with your dental professional. He or she can evaluate your current smile and provide a range of treatments available to help achieve the look you want.

We will overcome this devastation

Never before in the 225-year history of the United States has its civilian population been subject to an enemy attack of the magnitude of September 11's terrorist strikes that reduced New York's World Trade Center to rubble and destroyed part of the Pentagon in Washington. Untold numbers of innocents were killed or injured.

An entire nation watched, in horror, as the attack was replayed on television: A commercial jet smashing into the north tower of the trade center, followed by another plane into the south tower 20 minutes later. The collapse of the first tower followed shortly by the collapse of its twin. Then we learned the Pentagon had also been hit.

This was no mere symbolic attack against the United States, akin to the terrorist bombing of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania or the terrorist bombing of the guided missile destroyer Cole. This was nothing less than an act of war, perpetrated by enemies of the United States too cowardly to make themselves known.

But Americans are a resilient people. Amid the most abominable terrorist attack imaginable, they will come together. And as a nation, we will strengthen our resolve not to give in to terrorists. To use every means possible to root them out of hiding and make them pay for the carnage they caused.

Indeed, President Bush said no less ... "We have taken all appropriate security precautions to protect the American people," he declared. "Make no mistake, the United States will hunt down and punish those responsible for these cowardly acts."

Of course, this is no easy undertaking. For the fact that this nation's enemies were able to get away with the coordinated terrorist attack — to hijack several commercial aircraft, to strike not only against the World Trade Center, but also the Pentagon, and possibly other sites — shows how adroit our enemies have become.

This just illustrates how important it is that America devote more resources to intelligence gathering, to monitor the activities of terrorist organizations throughout the world. And how important it is that the U.S. military devise new counter-terrorist strategies to respond to the threats so devastatingly on display ...

[The] terrorist attacks usher in a disquieting new era for the United States. The American people now know, unequivocally, that they are no longer exempt from the violence and mayhem that the peoples of Western Europe and the Middle East have known for years.

The terrorists responsible for [the] attacks have dealt a blow to the nation's psyche. But through its 225-year history, this great nation has been confronted by many foes. And we Americans have never shrunk from battle, have never given in. We will not now.

— The San Diego Union-Tribune

A few things you haven't been thinking about

Let's take just a minutes from the 24-hour terrorist coverage to review a few things you've neither read nor heard since 8:43 a.m., September 11:

- Stem cell research.
- Little League World Series.
- Missile defense shield.
- Andrea Yates.
- Social Security surplus.
- United Nations Conference on Racism.
- Democratic candidate for Florida governor, Janet Reno.
- Campaign finance reform.
- Abortion.
- Jonbenet Ramsey.
- Faith-based initiative.
- Tuition vouchers.
- And last but not least —

Congressman Gary Condit (thank the lord!).
No, in the days following the terrorist attacks on the Pentagon and World Trade Center, life seemingly has grown a whole lot simpler. There are no partisan debates in Frankfort or Washington. There are no burning issues but one. There is no enemy but one, and we see him at least every five minutes on the news.

Before the September 11 attacks, there seemed to be so many burning issues. Now they don't even rate a mention, and I'm not sure what to make of it.

I suppose it can be viewed two ways — either the attacks forced us to get our priorities in order and drop the petty stuff, or we've become too distracted to keep up with what else is going on around us.

Time will tell.

Poison Pen

Ralph B. Davis

... Maybe the folks who argue that exposure to images of violence desensitizes us to it have something.

Here at the paper, when the planes began falling out of the sky, we were fixed to the television. Quite literally, I had never seen anything so shocking, so chilling, so horrible, so depressing or so outrageous. And I don't think I was the only one trying to hold back tears.

Fast-forward to today, 12 days after terrorists gave us this rude awakening. Like many others, I've watched the news every spare moment for more details. What that means is that I have seen the images of the planes crashing, the buildings tumbling, the rescue workers combing the rubble at least a thousand times.

And somehow, the image is cheapened.

On September 11, I could not fathom ever viewing those videos with disinterest. But it's happened. Those images which once gave me cold chills now have no more effect than a late-night sitcom rerun.

I certainly do not mean to trivialize these events. What I am saying is that I believe the television already has. The singlemost horrific act of hatred ever displayed on American soil has been treated like an advertising campaign, a network promo.

The people who died on those planes and in those buildings deserved more respect than that.

Despots near and far

As of today the royal family of Saudi Arabia and Jordan have pledged support. The Egyptian president has made statements of caution and for the U.S. to keep its military operations directed only at the terrorists. The military dictator of Pakistan will allow to fly over their air space but can't allow troops in Pakistan. Israel, a country whose apartheid policies have fueled the anger, of course is on board.

It's sad that none of these governments have the support of the people they rule. The news coverage is getting better but still has a long way to go. 60 Minutes the other night made it clear that bin Laden is a universal hero to Muslims all over the Middle East. It also has been made clear that while the royal families and military dictators to some degree declare support, they are limited in how far they can go to support military action.

George Bush, Hillary Clinton and all the rest of the corporate controlled Congress say we are a beacon of democracy and freedom, yet our allies are despots. One news commentator stated we didn't need to worry about an uprising against Mubarak's government in Egypt due to the billions of dollars we give him to give to his generals to keep the people in line. That's a very telling statement of what we represent to the people of the Muslim world.

Did we learn any lessons from Vietnam? So far, history is repeating itself. Just as in August 1964, when Congress voted almost unanimously for the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, which gave Lyndon Johnson a blank check to wage war. Our Congress, taking advantage of emotions, has voted, save one lone dissenting vote, to give Bush the blank check to wage war.

Senator Morse back in 1964 was vilified and attacked for his dissenting vote on the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution. Peter Lisagor on Face the Nation blasted him with, "Senator, the Constitution gives to the president of the United States the sole responsibility for the conduct of foreign policy." Senator Morse replied, "Couldn't make a more unsound legal statement than the one you just made. This is an old fallacy that foreign policy belongs to the president of the United States. That's nonsense." Lisagor asked "To whom does it belong then, senator?" Morse: "It belongs to the American people and I am pleading the American people be given the facts about our foreign policy." I got these quotes on Morse from an article written by Norman Solomon in a story he published on September 15, 2001, in Media Beat.

In U.S. News and World Report, September 24 issue, in an editorial written by David Gergen stated about our allies, "Such nations as Egypt, Jordan and Saudi Arabia have been sturdy friends of America's for decades, and their rulers hate the extremists as much as we do." Later he makes a sensi-

MSU students respond to tragedy with jeans, t-shirts

MOREHEAD — To assist those left homeless by the attack on the World Trade Center, some Morehead State University students are coordinating a "Jeans and T-shirt Drive."

The items will be sent to New York City via the American Red Cross. Clothing, which must be clean and wearable, is needed in all sizes, from infants through adult.

Drop-off points have been established at various locations around town: Domino's Pizza, Fat Sam's Deli, Kroger, Firststar Bank's Main Street location and at the Adron Doran University Center on campus.

Students will be accepting donations on Saturday, Sept. 29, from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. and Sunday, Sept. 30, noon to 4 p.m.

"We hope that everyone will check the closet for those jeans and tees that haven't been worn very often, or those that don't fit anymore," said Patricia Conley, an Ashland sophomore biology major who is coordinating the drive. "We thought this would be another way for those to help who don't have extra cash at this time."

Other types of clothing also will be accepted.

The idea for the drive came about after a segment Conley had seen on NBC's "Today Show."

"Many families cannot return to their homes since the attack," Conley said. "They are living in hotel rooms without any of their personal belongings."

The drive is being sponsored by members of the MSU Residence Hall Association and workstudy students in Academic Computer Lab.

Additional information is available by calling Conley at (606) 783-5431. Clothing also may be dropped off in advance at the lab, located in the basement of Camden-Carroll ble statement that we all should heed. "Beyond our shores, a resentment has been building against the United States, increasingly seen as rich, arrogant and uncaring." He states "In the long run, however, the president must also turn to that olive branch, overseas and here at home."

Just as in the early days of Vietnam we, the American people, must take control over our foreign policy. We must recognize that the false picture representatives of corporate America are painting of a freedom loving democracy is all rhetoric with no basis in fact. We cannot blindly follow this kind of leadership and we have a duty as patriotic Americans to hold these political puppets accountable for the hatred they have instilled in peoples all over the world. If we believe in the concept of justice, we must be willing to impartially look at both sides of the picture. It's not up to our government to dictate to us but in a democracy it is up to the people to dictate to our government. It's our duty and our responsibility, not theirs.

What must we demand of our government? One honesty — we must not let them continue to use false rhetoric to instill more hate. We must not allow them to masquerade as the champions of freedom and democracy. We must demand they publicly debate candidates during our own elections that do not accept money from corporations. We must demand election reform to allow all candidates from all parties equal access to the corporate closed media. We must demand all elections are totally publicly financed and all corporate money is removed from our political process.

Finally, we must demand passage of House Bill H.R. 1830 which was submitted back on May 15, 2001. This bill, called the "Energy Independence Act of 2001," is a sound doable realistic plan to make this country energy independent by the year 2011. It's vital to the national security, it's vital to the environment. It will free us from dependence on oil and supporting military regimes in the Middle east which have instilled all this hatred. This bill will make the internal combustion engine a thing of the past. It will decentralize the production of electricity from central power plants to on location.

The enemies of this bill are the very ones who are willing to expend enormous amounts of our treasure and American lives seeking a false goal of justice. Their goals are not justice but security for the oil reserves and taking back the oil and the properties of the oil companies in Iraq. By the year 2011, if we put only a fraction of the money Bush wants to spend on war, we could remove all military presence and interference in the lives of all peoples in the Middle East. We could allow them to set up any kind of government they want. Live any kind of life they want. This bill will convert much of our energy needs to clean, safe hydrogen fuel cell and natural gas.

The solutions to the problem of terrorism require a domestic resolve for the American people to stand up to corporate America and take back control of our government. Our enemy is ignorance and the blind patriotism that allows for despots here and abroad to get their way.

Falling... for Great Desserts!

With fall in the air and misty mornings everywhere, remember to harvest some great desserts for the time spent indoors.

Dinners can be topped off with quick and easy Creamy Banana Pudding or delicious Tiramisu Cake. You'll be complimented on the fruits of your labor, when there really was no labor at all. And when the kids come a'calling, bake up some Crunchy Clusters or Peanut Magic Cookie Bars.

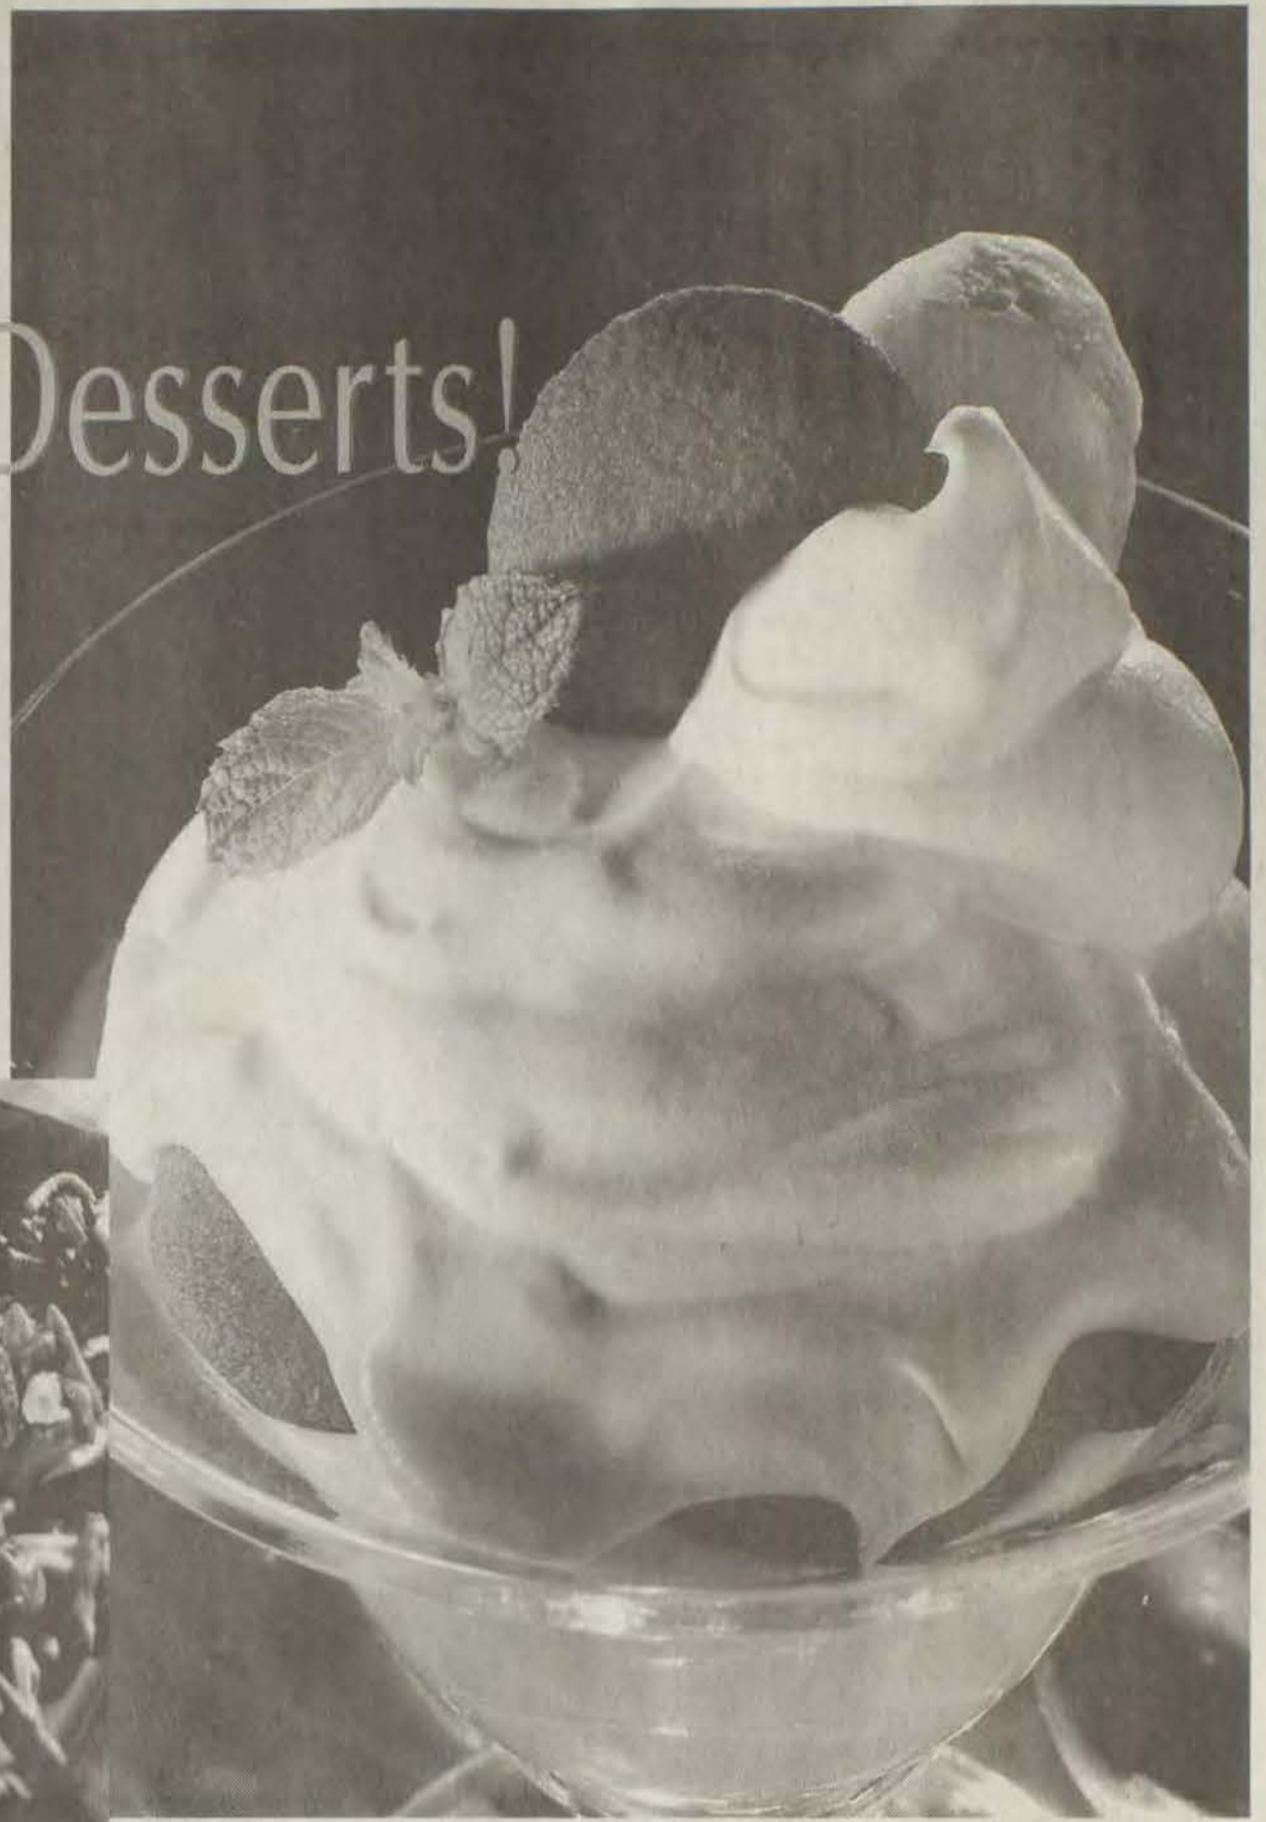

New twists on two old favorites—pretzels and the Magic Cookie Bar. But, the greatest delight of all is to treat yourself to some free time. Add a little spice to this special time and try some Creamy Spiced Tea. It's the perfect blend of cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves and orange, and the perfect way to Fall Back and Enjoy!

CRUNCHY CLUSTERS

Makes about 3 dozen

- 1 (12-ounce) package semi-sweet chocolate chips or 3 (6-ounce) packages butterscotch-flavored chips
 - 1 (14-ounce) can Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk (NOT evaporated milk)
 - 1 (3-ounce) can chow mein noodles or 2 cups pretzel sticks, broken into 1/2-inch pieces
 - 1 cup dry-roasted peanuts or whole roasted almonds
1. Line baking sheet with waxed paper. In heavy saucepan over low heat, melt chips with sweetened condensed milk. Remove from heat.
 2. In large bowl, combine noodles and peanuts; stir in chocolate mixture.
 3. Drop by tablespoonfuls onto prepared baking sheet; chill 2 hours or until firm. Store loosely covered at room temperature.

Microwave Directions: In 2-quart glass measure, combine chips and sweetened condensed milk. Cook on 100% power (HIGH) 3 minutes, stirring after 1 1/2 minutes. Stir until smooth. Proceed as directed above.

CREAMY BANANA PUDDING

Makes 8 servings

- 1 (14-ounce) can Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk (NOT evaporated milk)
 - 1 1/2 cups cold water
 - 1 (4-serving size) package instant vanilla pudding & pie filling
 - 2 cups heavy cream, whipped, divided
 - 48 Nilla Wafers, divided
 - 3 large bananas, sliced
 - Additional Nilla Wafers and banana slices
1. Combine sweetened condensed milk and water in large bowl. Add pudding mix; beat for 2 minutes with mixer at medium speed. Refrigerate for 5 minutes. Fold in 3 cups whipped cream.
 2. Place 3 wafers and a few banana slices in the bottom of each of 8 (12-ounce) dessert dishes. Spoon 1/2 cup pudding into each dish.
 3. Top with remaining wafers, banana slices and pudding. Cover; refrigerate 4 hours or overnight.
 4. Garnish with remaining whipped cream, additional wafers and bananas.

Creamy Banana Pudding can be prepared in large serving bowl. Prepare pudding mixture as directed above. Spoon 1 cup pudding mixture into bottom of 2 1/2-quart glass serving bowl. Top with one-half each wafers, banana slices and remaining pudding. Repeat layers, ending with pudding. Refrigerate and garnish as above. Refrigerate leftovers.

PEANUT MAGIC COOKIE BARS

Makes 24 servings

- 1/2 cup (1 stick) butter or margarine
- 42 Nilla Wafers, finely crushed (about 1 1/2 cups crumbs)
- 1 (14-ounce) can Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk (NOT evaporated milk)
- 1 (12-ounce) package semi-sweet chocolate chunks (2 cups)
- 1 1/3 cups flaked coconut
- 1 cup chopped peanuts

1. Preheat oven to 350°F (325°F for glass dish). Melt butter in 13 x 9 x 2-inch pan in oven.
2. Sprinkle crumbs over butter; pour sweetened condensed milk evenly over crumbs. Top with chocolate chunks, coconut and peanuts, pressing down firmly with fork.
3. Bake for 25 minutes or until lightly browned. Cool completely; refrigerate if desired. Cut into 24 bars. Store covered at room temperature.

TIRAMISU CAKE

Makes 12 servings

- 2 (8-ounce) packages cream cheese, softened
- 3/4 cup powdered sugar
- 1/2 cup strong black coffee, divided
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 (12-ounce) container frozen whipped topping, thawed, divided
- 48 Nilla Wafers, divided
- Cocoa powder, additional Nilla Wafers and chocolate-covered coffee beans, for garnish

1. Beat cream cheese, sugar, 1/4 cup coffee and vanilla in medium bowl with electric mixer at medium speed until creamy. Stir in 3 1/2 cups whipped topping.
2. Place 24 wafers in circular fashion on bottom of 9-inch springform pan. Brush or drizzle with coffee.
3. Spread 1/2 of the cream cheese mixture over wafers in pan; repeat layers, brushing wafers with remaining coffee and ending with cream cheese mixture.
4. Cover; refrigerate 4 hours or overnight. Garnish with cocoa powder, remaining whipped topping, additional wafers and coffee beans.

CREAMY SPICED TEA

Makes 2 quarts

- 3/4 cup unsweetened instant tea
- 1 teaspoon finely grated orange peel
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 1 (14-ounce) can Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk (NOT evaporated milk)
- 6 1/3 cups water

1. In large saucepan, combine tea, orange peel and spices. Add sweetened condensed milk; mix well.
2. Over medium heat, slowly stir in water. Heat thoroughly but do not boil. Refrigerate any leftovers.

Tip: May be stored in refrigerator up to 5 days. Mix well and reheat before serving.

Black Gold Festival 2001

Byron Cherry, who played "Coy Duke" on the Dukes of Hazzard, horsed around with Pearl Cornett in downtown Hazard during the Black Gold Festival on Thursday. The General Lee was prominently displayed across from the courthouse with many fans enjoying the 1969 Dodge Charger.

General Lee rolls through Hazard

by CARA WADSWORTH
STAFF WRITER

HAZARD — The General Lee revs around the country and just recently toured Canada to the delight of many fans who keep the Dukes of Hazzard close to their heart.

The 1969 Dodge Charger was proudly displayed on Main Street in Hazard for the Black Gold Festival this week.

General Lee has had many lives. The orange stunt car with "01" painted on the side was replaced an estimated 350 times during the seven-and-one-half years of filming of the television show "The Dukes of Hazzard."

The first drivers were Bo and Luke Duke — actors John Schneider and Tom Wopat, respectively, in real life — who thrilled the fans by racing the General Lee and "humping the bump" down the Georgia backroads with Deputy Roscoe P. Coltrane — actor James Best — in full pursuit. To say the least, the car was in the air quite a bit.

After Schneider and Wopat temporarily quit the show following a financial disagreement with producers in 1982, cousins Coy and Vance Duke — Byron Cherry and Christopher Mayer, respectively — hit the road with Sheriff Boss Hogg (Surrell Brooke) throwing fits because of the Duke boys' uncanny ability to escape from trouble while sister Daisy Duke (Catherine Bach) helped them get away by charming the sheriff at every turn.

The 156 clean-cut, entertaining episodes aired in over 60 countries worldwide. In Japan the characters were even dubbed. Imagine ol' Cooter the mechanic (Ben Jones) speaking Japanese.

Interestingly, after the Dukes of Hazzard ended its 1979-1985 run, Cooter went into politics and was elected for two terms as a U.S. congressman.

He's now the host at Cooter's Place in Sperryville, Va., where his place boasts great music, food and a display of Dukes memorabilia.

Because of the show's large fan club that numbers in the thousands across the world, Hazard residents are constantly being asked if they come from the Dukes of Hazzard country.

According to Cherry, the series was actually filmed in Covington, Ga., for five episodes, then Hollywood took over from there.

Cherry was on hand to greet fans and carry on the longstanding tradition of the Hazzard cast visiting Hazard at the Black Gold Festival.

Twenty years ago, the entire cast was flown in for a grand appearance with Bach enjoying the local culture. Stories still circulate about their last visit, say locals.

Meanwhile, Cherry, who lives in California, travels for appearances with Pearl Cornett who shows the General Lee and Dukes memorabilia in a travelling trailer. In fact they just attended a gathering of 30,000 fans at Cooter's Place.

"The Dukes of Hazzard show is so popular, the only thing I think that comes close to it are the Star Wars movies," Cornett said.

Apparently a big fan of the Dukes of Hazzard T.V. series, Pearl Cornett bought the reconditioned car and drives it right into the traveling museum, filled with Duke memorabilia, to take both around North America for all the fans to see.

Some of the biggest fans are located in Hazard. Cornett explained how in the creation of the show, the producers called to ask the mayor of Hazard permission to use the town's name for the show. After permission was given, someone accidentally misspelled the name and added the extra Z.

The mythical Hazzard County, however, was based in Georgia.

Coy Duke explained how the clean-cut entertainment and fun-loving, upbeat mood of the show continues to draw fans who just want to laugh and enjoy the action. The small town Southern culture and action of the show have their own charm.

Cornett said TNN aired the show's reruns twice daily and the catch phrase "YEEEE-HAAAAW!" can still be heard on certain channels.

Hazard has definitely adopted the show's characters after their past Black Gold appearances. Fans were asking when the whole cast could come back once more.

But if a reunion isn't in the cards, at least fans might see the orange legend parked across from the courthouse, giving Hazard residents a hint of that Southern rebel spirit they admire in the show.

Breathitt pair charged with murder, robbery

by RENEE M. SNOWDEN
BREATHITT COUNTY BUREAU

JACKSON — Two Breathitt County men, Steven R. Eldridge and Randall McIntosh, have been indicted on four counts, including a murder charge from June 30, for the murder of Wayne Caudill and critical wounding of Coy Salyors Jr.

The charges were returned by a Wolfe County grand jury September 6.

According to reports, the grand jury deliberated for a few hours on September 6 after Kentucky State Police detectives and Commonwealth's Attorney Darrell Herald presented evidence.

The following day, they returned indictments against Eldridge and McIntosh. Each man faces one count of murder, one count of first-degree assault and two counts of first-degree armed robbery.

Eldridge was arrested at the Big Sandy Regional Detention Center in Paintsville and police arrested McIntosh on August 10.

Circuit Judge Larry Miller ordered the two to be held under a $100,000 bond.

Eldridge and McIntosh appeared before the Wolfe County Circuit Court on September 6 and pleaded not guilty. At the present time, no trial date has been set.

How to get out of credit card debt

(NUI) - When you purchase a home, buy a car or pay college tuition, chances are you are doing it with someone else's money. Banks want to lend to people who have good credit. If, however, you have large credit card debts or other bills you can't pay on time, your chances for a loan will be slim and, what's more, you may be headed down the road to financial ruin.

Your credit record is a permanent one. So if you skip paying your bills or pay late, credit companies will enter a black mark into your credit report, which is distributed whenever you apply for credit.

Here are some tips on how to become financially stable:

- Start a savings account. Deposit a fixed amount each month into it to provide a cushion for an unforeseen emergency, such as job loss or car repairs. Experts recommend you have enough money safely tucked away to cover living expenses for up to six months.

- Create a budget so you know exactly where all of your money is going. Keep daily records of everything you spend for a month and decide where you can cut or save.

- Plan for large purchases such as appliances or a new roof. Don't forget to include birthday, wedding and holiday gifts. Put a fixed amount into a savings account each month to pay for such expenses.

- Stop spending. Credit cards drive impulse purchases so don't use them too often. Limit yourself to only one credit card. Notify lenders to close all accounts, transferring balances to one new, low interest card.

- Consult your bank about taking out a home equity loan to pay off credit card balances. The interest is usually tax deductible. Just be sure not to use your cards until the loan is paid off.

- Get help if you need it. Try the Consumer Credit Counseling Services, a national nonprofit organization that provides free or low-cost counseling, by calling 1-800-388-CCCS (2227).

Another option is filing bankruptcy, but there are many things to consider before taking that step. By filing bankruptcy you will tarnish your credit record, usually for up to 10 years. Certain debts - alimony, child support

Succession planning can protect your family's business

Many business owners have spent their lives building their businesses, but too few devote the time necessary to ensure that it survives after they're no longer at the helm. Two-thirds of US family businesses fail to survive into the second generation and less than 15 percent into the third. The Kentucky Society of CPAs says business owners can beat these odds by developing and adhering to a comprehensive business succession plan.

Developing a succession plan is a process that should begin long before an owner is ready to leave. It should also be in place to ensure smooth operations in the event the business owner suddenly becomes unable to oversee them. Exactly how and when an owner transfers or sells a business is affected by the owner's personal financial situation and the needs and roles of family members.

ASSESS YOUR FINANCIAL SITUATION

The first step for a business owner in preparing a succession plan is assessing his or her own financial situation. For example, how much income do you currently derive from the business and how much do you anticipate needing for living and other expenses once you are no longer an owner? Answering the questions can help to determine the best transfer method.

CONSIDER YOUR FAMILY

The needs and roles of family members also impact the transfer of the business. For example, when there are no children in the business, an owner may look to sell the company to a strategic or financial buyer, to management in a leveraged buyout or through an employee stock ownership plan.

On the other hand, when children are in the business, you will need to consider the tax implications of transferring the business to them, as well as address other questions, such as: How do you treat children equitably if they do not participate in the business? Will there be any family friction after the transfer? And should children not in the business have an ownership interest?

DETERMINING A SUCCESSOR

The first challenge most family business owners face when thinking about their company's future is deciding who should run it. The person who runs the company need not be the new owner. If you want to pass your business on to your heirs, you needn't feel compelled to name a child as CEO. In fact, since the CEO will be the person most responsible for ensuring the future viability and profitability of your company, the best interests of the entire family are served by choosing the most capable person for the job. In fact, some companies enjoy industrial psychologists to establish the right character profile one needs to run the company.

The person you select to manage your company should be groomed for the position before he or she actually takes over. If succession has not already been determined by

How to handle financial rewards

(NUE) - It happens every day. People come into money through inheritance or litigation. Perhaps you or someone you know are involved in a lawsuit and stand to win a cash award. Or someone you cared for remembered you in her will.

In either case, whether the amount is large or small, plan to use it wisely.

Recipients have numerous options on what to do with the money. It pays to think through each of them carefully. Here are some tips from financial experts on handling money awards.

- If you're left an inheritance, don't expect to receive it immediately after you've learned of it. Legalities abound in this area and the executor or administrator has to be sure everything is in order before funds can be dispersed.

- Once you do receive your inheritance, you may find it causes an unexpected emotional response. The money may serve as a painful reminder of the loss of a close friend or relative. If so, you might do well to hold off making any long-term investment decisions.

- For the short term, put any cash you receive into an account where it can earn a reasonable interest rate and will be readily accessible. Leave the money alone until you have time to evaluate your options. Seek advice from a good financial planner.

- Be aware that the money involved may be subject to one or more federal, state or local taxes. The estate is generally liable for such taxes which may reduce the amount of inheritance you receive.

- Keep in mind that it is a very litigious society. Recent legal-industry statistics tell us that more than 12 million people each year are awarded money as a settlement for their personal-injury claims. Millions more recover monetary damages for other types of legal claims.

- As with inheritances, careful planning on how best to handle a litigation award is a must. If you will likely be the recipient of money from such an award, consider whether you want a lump-sum payment, a structured settlement or a combination of the two. A structured settlement is a completely voluntary agreement between the plaintiff - the person initiating a lawsuit - and the defendant.

Tips for creating a home office that works

(NUE) - Nearly 60 percent of Americans maintain some form of an office in their homes, according to a recent Better Homes & Gardens poll. An attic, unfinished basement or grown child's bedroom that is no longer used can easily be converted into a home-office space.

Here are some tips to achieve maximum effect for minimum effort and expense:

- Separate "home" and "office." Leave your work at the office. Don't

Gas prices stable at pre-attack level

ORLANDO, Fla. — Decisive action on the part of the oil industry and the government caused the nationwide average price of gasoline to stabilize this week at near pre-terror attack levels, and a similar coordinated approach to America's gasoline needs will be required until the present crisis has eased, AAA said Tuesday.

"Preparations necessary for a response to last week's terrorist attack makes many Americans understandably nervous about future energy supplies and

Ashland board approves increased authorization in stock repurchase program

COVINGTON — Ashland Inc. (NYSE:ASH) announced today that its board of directors has approved an increase in the number of shares that may be repurchased under its stock repurchase program.

The board increased the number of shares available for repurchase to a total of 4 million. The timing of these purchases and the exact number of shares to be repurchased will be dependent upon market conditions. At the time of the board action, the authority to repurchase shares had been reduced through prior repurchases to approximately 1.4 million shares under the program.

Since the share repurchase program was initiated in Aug. 1998, approximately 10.1 million shares have been repurchased. There are approximately 69.1 million common shares currently outstanding.

"We continue to believe that Ashland shares are a tremendous value," said Paul W. Chellgren, Ashland Inc. chairman and chief executive officer. "We are very pleased that we can also utilize this program to provide additional liquidity in our stock during the current period of market volatility," Chellgren concluded.

Tips for successful retirement planning

(NUE) - The recent gyrations of the stock market can make any investor a little queasy.

To better navigate today's rough investment seas, the experts at Strong Capital Management, Inc., offer these tips for saving for a secure retirement:

- Save with specific goals. Set goals for when you would like to retire and how much money you will need during retirement. Online calculators, such as the one at Strong's Web site, Strong.com, can help you in setting these goals.

- Make informed decisions. There is a wealth of information available to help you understand your investment options so you can make smart choices. The Internet is home to many of these sources.

- Create a well-rounded portfolio. It's important to allocate your retirement assets among different types of investments, such as stocks and bonds. Be sure not to put all of your eggs in one basket, such as investing too much of your 401(k) in your company's stock.

- Save all you can with pre-tax dollars. Investing through your retirement plan at work offers a double tax break. No taxes are withheld from your contributions and your savings grow tax-deferred until you take the money out during retirement.

- Understand the concept of risk versus return. All investments involve some type of risk, but an appropriate level of risk can be a good thing.

Balance your high-risk investments with some lower-risk investments.

- Best to start young, but it's never too late. The sooner you start saving for retirement, the better. If you're a little behind, reduce your spending so that you can save more.

- Don't spend your retirement savings when you switch jobs. Remember to roll over your retirement savings when you change jobs. Don't cash out your 401(k) money when you change jobs because you can easily lose more than 40 percent to taxes! That can prove costly later on.

- Take advantage of the company match. Your company may match a portion of your 401(k) contributions. But if you don't contribute to your plan, you don't get the match. That's like turning down free money.

For more about investing, visit Strong's Web site for the extensive collection of educational materials at Strong.com.

OSM releases report on methane gas hazards

The Interior Department's Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement (OSM) today announced the release of a technical manual which addresses methane gas hazards associated with active and abandoned coal mines.

The Manual, Technical Measures For The Investigation And Mitigation Of Fugitive Methane Hazards In Areas Of Coal Mining, presents technical guidelines, techniques and methods used to evaluate methane hazards that may result from surface coal mining and abandoned mine lands sites. The Manual, which is the product of a two-year joint effort between Federal and State agencies, focuses on the coalfields of the United States.

The report identifies, evaluates and develops "best science" practices to assess the hazards of methane gas, to describe the best technology for methane sourcing and to identify remediation practices for sites with dangerous methane concentrations.

OSM Acting Director Glenda Owens called the manual's production "an excellent example of partnership between federal and state governments in action."

"Although methane only infrequently becomes a hazard in peoples' homes, this manual will provide guidance to professionals in the field to identify hazards at the earliest possible time," Owens said.

FYI

Copies of the manual are available from the OSM home page, www.osmre.gov, or the Appalachian Regional Coordinating Center, 3 Parkway Center, Pittsburgh, PA 15220; 412-937-2269, or by sending an email to keltschl@osmre.gov.

price," said AAA President Bob Darbelnet. "However, last week's coordinated response by OPEC, U.S. oil companies and government agencies shows coordinated action can be extremely effective in calming public worry about this vital commodity."

AAA's monthly Fuel Gauge Report shows the nationwide average price of gasoline is $1.537 per gallon, up just four-tenths of a cent since September 11, when terrorists attacked the United States.

In the last month, average gas prices are up 14.4 cents per gallon, mainly due to a major refinery outage in the Midwest on August 14.

Following last week's attack, OPEC announced it would increase oil output if necessary to protect the world economy. Major oil companies held the line, or rolled back wholesale gasoline prices, while warning distributors and retailers to do the same.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency suspended cleaner burning fuel requirements ahead of schedule to bring more gasoline into the market.

The U.S. Department of Energy issued various public statements to help calm fears of fuel shortages and state governors vigorously tracked reports of price gouging and took legal action in a few cases.

"The combination of these actions made a tremendous difference at the nation's gas pumps and all involved should be congratulated on a job well done," Darbelnet said.

The nationwide average price of self-serve regular gasoline is down 4.3 cents per gallon from one year ago, AAA's Fuel Gauge Report shows.

Regional gasoline prices are up across the country from one month ago.

Prices in the Great Lakes are up an average 33.5 cents per gallon in the last month from $1.42 to $1.755 today. In the Midwest, prices have moved up 28.2 cents per gallon from $1.41 to $1.692 per gallon today.

In the West, prices are up an average 20.3 cents per gallon from $1.48 to $1.683. Southwestern prices are 18.8 cents higher from $1.33 to $1.518 today.

Prices increased an average 15.3 cents per gallon in the Southeast for the month from $1.28 per gallon to $1.433. Mid-Atlantic prices are 5.8 cents higher than a month ago, up from $1.41 per gallon to $1.468. In New England, gas prices increased just 0.2 cent per gallon from $1.46 to $1.462.

Nationwide, the price of self-serve, mid-grade averages $1.631 per gallon, an increase of 15.3 cents from last month, and down 4.7 cents from last year.

Self-serve premium averages $1.69 per gallon, up 15.9 cents since mid-August, and 4.8 cents lower than one year ago.

The national average prices for self-serve regular unleaded gasoline for AAA's September survey for the last five years were: 2000, $1.58; 1999, $1.282; 1998, $1.1057; 1997, $1.288; and 1996, $1.255.

AAA's Fuel Gauge Report is based on data from Oil Price Information Service — the nation's most comprehensive source of petroleum pricing information.

As the nation's largest motoring and leisure travel organization, AAA provides its more than 44 million members with travel, insurance, financial and automotive-related services.

Since its founding in 1902, the not-for-profit, fully tax paying AAA has been a leader

* Address credit problems as soon as possible.

Credit bureaus are required to provide a free copy of your credit report if you are denied credit. If you don't pay off your debts, sometimes misunderstandings can lead to lawsuits. It's not unusual to be sued, but if you already are in debt, it's definitely not something else you'll want to endure.

Tips

bring your home life to the office. You can stick to these rules even when your office is at home.

Installing a DSL line is one easy way. DSL allows you to have multiple telephone lines, providing access to the Internet, incoming phone calls and urgent fax requests all at the same time. Separating voicemail capabilities for the home and office will help you resist the temptation to answer "home" calls during "work" hours.

Solid-core doors can help you keep your focus by limiting sound transmission, blocking out daily household noises that might distract you from work. One example is ProCore The Quiet Door from DoorCraft. ProCore is a solid-core, interior molded door with a Sound Transmission Control rating of 31, which is 50 percent quieter than a hollow-core door. Surprisingly, solid-core doors are inexpensive and readily available through most door shops, lumberyards or home centers.

* Keep it colorful. Color plays a major role in productivity, so consider it carefully. Dr. Max Luscher, recognized as the "Father of Color Psychology," says color affects us psycholog-

TAKE CONTROL OF TAXES

Estate taxes can hit a family business hard, because the full fair market value of a parent's company may be included in the estate when he or she dies. (In certain situations you can elect to deduct up to $675,000 of qualified family-owned business interest from the gross estate.) If an owner dies without a plan in place, heirs may face estate taxes on the business ranging from 37 to 55 percent. Keep in mind that while the new tax law has increased estate exemptions from $1 million to $3.5 million through 2009, proper tax planning is what will enable you to take advantage of the higher exemptions.

To begin to divest yourself of the company, you may make a gift of ownership interest worth up to $10,000 a year (or $20,000 split between husband and wife). Another option to consider is a family limited partnership that allows the business to be transferred to the younger generation at substantial business' success into future generations. This comprehensive plan should be drawn up well in advance of when it is needed, and should address three major issues: management succession, transfer of ownership, and estate planning.

CPAs point out that estate taxes can hit a family business hard because the full value of a parent's business can be included in the estate when he or she dies.

disabling disorder caused by repetitive motion. The most effective way to avoid this ailment is by using furniture and computer accessories designed to alleviate the wrist strain that causes it.

Select an ergonomically correct keyboard, desk chair and even a computer mouse to help ward off carpal tunnel syndrome.

Working from home can be productive and pleasant. For more information on ProCore The Quiet Door or other DoorCraft products, call 1-800-877-9482, Ext. PR-030, or visit www.doorcraftdoors.com.

David Boreanaz (Angel) became a household name playing a vampire with a soul on Buffy the Vampire Slayer, yet the press-shy young actor insists that celebrity isn't all that important to him.

Angel and BUFFY

Boreanaz views his life and career as a 'work in progress'

by JOHN CROOK

David Boreanaz may be best known to most TV viewers as the soulful vampire of Angel and Buffy the Vampire Slayer, but there's nothing remotely cutthroat about the 30-year-old actor. In fact, the publicity-shy Boreanaz, who grew up in Philadelphia, seems completely unruffled about speculation that his WB Network series — which returns for a third season on Monday, Sept. 24 — will suffer this season after being separated from Buffy, which has moved to the United Paramount Network following a high-stakes bidding war. "Angel and Buffy have been on kind of divergent paths for a long time now," he says. "Each show stands on its own and has its own identity. I'm aware some people already have written off Angel, but we have very good people on our show and I'm very proud of the work we do. Beyond that, there's no point in worrying." If that sounds like a remarkably mature attitude for a young TV star, Boreanaz has seen a lot of "flavors of the month" fall out of favor during his tenure at The WB Network. In fact, when his first appearances as the Byronic blood-sucker on Buffy sent fans into overdrive, many mistook Boreanaz for another disposable pretty boy. After all, he was "discovered" while walking his dog, right?

What those early profiles overlooked, however, was that the actor was completely serious about his craft, and had been ever since he became fired up at age 7 by seeing Yul Brynner in a touring production of The King and I as a child. He had immersed himself in theater work at Ithaca College in New York, where he earned a degree before moving to Los Angeles. While he became a star as the tortured Angel on Buffy, he made his first mark in Hollywood as a dim biker boyfriend of Kelly Bundy on Married... With Children. Boreanaz says he is delighted that the producers of Angel have found a way to weave comedy into the show's story lines — including last season's finale, in which Angel and his friends entered another dimension in which the vampire was able to see himself in a mirror (his first reaction was to scold his companions for not alerting him that he was having a bad hair day). "Oh, I love comedy, absolutely, especially since my early stage work was in these intense dramas where I always seemed to play bitter, repressed characters," he says. "I just finished a movie, a romantic comedy called I'm With Lucy where I get as far away from Angel as you can imagine. I play a cheesy orthopedic surgeon from Miami with big fluffy hair. It was just a lot of fun."

Angel

While friends have described Boreanaz as shy, colleagues say he is warm and supportive on the Angel set. "David is just one of the most amazing partners any actor could hope for," says Julie Benz, who plays Darla, the bewitching vampire who bit and transformed Angel back when the character was an 18th-century Irish lad. "When we do a scene together, I look into his eyes and feel totally safe to go wherever our characters need to go. He'd laugh at me for saying this, but he really has taught me a lot about acting just by being with him." Yet if Boreanaz is serious about his craft, career is by no means a be-all and end-all for him.

He credits his father, a veteran Philadelphia TV weatherman whom he calls his best friend, for preparing him for stardom. "My dad is just such an amazing man," he says warmly. "And for as long as I can remember, he has taught me about handling 'celebrity.' Everywhere we went, people would recognize him, and he was always kind and polite to them. That made such an impression on me, that he always took the time to talk to these people, to treat them the way we would want to be treated. He made it clear to me that he knew his being 'famous' didn't make him any better than these other people. "That's helped me a lot in dealing with fans out here. I know I hear all these nightmare stories about fans, especially on a show that's maybe a little 'odd' like ours," he says, chuckling, "but with very few exceptions, people who come up to me are just very, very nice. I honestly can't remember the last time anyone caused me a hassle of any kind."

When time permits, he keeps in touch with his fans via his official Website (celebrityblvd.com/davidboreanaz), even though he still views the Internet somewhat warily. "My involvement is pretty much making phone calls to update the news about me," he explains. "It's a good way to pass information to my fans, but sitting at a computer every day is not my favorite thing. That's a little too impersonal, a little too Atlas Shrugged for me." He says turning 30 last May was not traumatic in the least. "My grandfather was blessed to live until he was 89, so 30 seems pretty minor," Boreanaz says. "Although looking back, my life went through some huge changes between 25 and 30.

I think that probably is true for a lot of people. "I just try very hard to leave myself open, to see what unfolds. I'm very much a work in progress. I think of myself as a clay pot, and the important people in my life kind of pick me up and paint me and shape me. It makes for an interesting life, and that seems to be working for me right now."

Movie: The Mask

Human doorman Stanley Ipkiss (Jim Carrey) is about to leap from a bridge and end it all when he spots what appears to be a body floating in the river below. Stanley leaps in to rescue the poor soul and discovers all he saved is a strange mask. Just as he thinks he hit rock bottom, Stanley's new possession proves him wrong. When he dons the mask, he turns into a green-faced cartoonlike character, who is anything but ordinary. Cameron Diaz also stars.

Biography Jackie Gleason:

The Great One profiles the unforgettable actor, comic and TV pioneer who had one of the most beloved shows in TV history (The Honeymooners) as well as one of the most notorious flops (the 1961 game show You're in the Picture, for which Gleason actually made an on-air apology). Interviewees such as Joyce Randolph, Milton Berle and Neil Simon, along with TV and film footage, help chronicle his larger-than-life life.

8 P.M. FOX

Movie: Rush Hour

One of the biggest surprises at the box office in 1998, this action-comedy had a record opening for a fall release. Far East adventure icon Jackie Chan and comic Chris Tucker play police detectives with different styles partnered to rescue the abducted daughter of a Chinese diplomat. Chris Penn co-stars.

8 p.m. HBO

Sopranos

As if the struggle for underworld control hasn't given him enough to occupy his thoughts, Tony (James Gandolfini) learns his son (Robert Iler) may have attention-deficit disorder in "Down Neck." The situation causes Tony to worry about his off-spring's future and gives Dr. Melfi (Lorraine Bracco) a new issue to mull.

8 p.m. SHOWTIME

Movie: The Killing Yard

The 30th anniversary of the uprising at the upstate New York prison Attica is marked with this new drama. Morris Chestnut (Boyz n the Hood) plays a convict on trial for allegedly killing two fellow inmates during the revolt. Alan Alda portrays his defense attorney, who resisted the client's insistence on serving as co-counsel. Rose McGowan (Charmed) also appears.

8 p.m. TBS

Movie: The Hunt for Red October

This is the first — and possibly the best — of the films based on Tom Clancy's spy novels, featuring heroic CIA agent Jack Ryan. Alec Baldwin introduces Ryan in this high-stakes submarine thriller, with Sean Connery perfectly cast as his Soviet nemesis.

NFL Football

Seldom is Sun Devil Stadium filled with Cardinals' fans, but it should be tonight when Arizona opens its home schedule against the Denver Broncos. Keeping those fans happy will be the tough part, seeing as how the Cardinals are one of the league's youngest teams and are coming off a dismal 3-13 season. There is talent — notably running back Thomas Jones and a big offensive line — just not enough of it. The Broncos are at the other end of the spectrum, with rising star quarterback Brian Griese heading the NFL's deepest backfield. Defense was a problem in the past, but has been fortified with a multitude of off-season signings.

The Practice

Producer David E. Kelley's law drama begins its sixth year with a two-hour season premiere titled "The Candidate." Ron Livingston (Band of Brothers) joins the cast as a prosecutor who joins Helen (Lara Flynn Boyle) in building a case against a popular U.S. senator (Dylan Baker) accused of murder. Ellenor (Camryn Manheim) represents the defendant, whom she knows well.

Virginia Madsen plays the politician's wife.

Who Wants to Be a Princess?

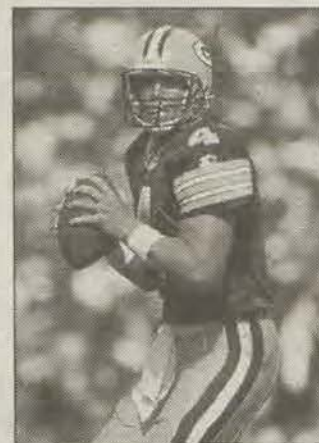

This new special is in the tradition of Who Wants to Marry a Multimillionaire? though Fox obviously hopes this variation will go a lot smoother. Thirty women compete to be selected to wed an actual European prince. It can be guaranteed the winner will live regally, since she'll also get a three-karat diamond and a $40,000 platinum necklace. Pat Bullard is the host.

8 p.m. HBO

Monie: Girl, Interrupted

Angelina Jolie won an Oscar, a Golden Globe and a Screen Actors Guild Award for her performance in this 1999 drama. She plays Lisa, a rebellious patient in a mental institution who offers new arrival Susanna (Winona Ryder) tips on surviving the place — and escaping from it. Based on Susanna Kaysen's memoir of her years as a teen-

Quarterback Brett Favre leads the Green Bay Packers against the Washington Redskins in a matchup airing on ABC's Monday Night Football.

Evolution

Most of us think of evolution as something that happened in the distant past, when the human race grew from its primate roots. But as this ambitious four-part, eight-hour miniseries points out, evolution isn't ancient history. Just ask the AIDS patient whose virus is constantly changing to resist the current drug treatment, or the farmer battling bugs that have developed animmunity to his pesticides. The opening two hours, "Darwin's Dangerous Idea" recalls how Charles Darwin developed his theory of evolution and why it remains so controversial even today. Subsequent installments air Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

9 p.m. ABC

NFL Football

The expectations are down, which could lead to more heads-up play from the Washington Redskins, who battle the Packers in Green Bay tonight. The Skins crumbled last season after importing big-name free agents, missing the playoffs all together. Enter disciplinarian Marty life as he runs a community center. Having so many things to tend to at once often causes his neuroses to fire up in "Pilot."

8 p.m. SHOWTIME

Movie: Where the Money Is

Paul Newman puts his natural charm to good use in this 2000 comedy-drama. He stars as a veteran thief pretending to suffer a stroke in order to win his release from prison. His nurse (Linda Fiorentino) figures out what he's up to, but she plays along, enlisting him for another heist intended to make her and her husband (Dermot Mulroney) very wealthy.

8:30 p.m. CINEMAX

Movie: Texas Chainsaw Massacre: The Next Generation They're big names now, but everyone starts somewhere, right? Texas natives Renee Zellweger (Briget Jones's Diary) and Matthew McConaughey (A Time to Kill) were teamed in writer-directors Kim Henkel's 1994 sequel to the original horror classic. The villainous Leather-face (Robert Jacks) goes on another rampage that sets his sights on the younger set.

8:30 p.m. WB

Maybe It's Me

Molly (Reagan Dale Neis) is thrilled to have her first date with Nick in "The Hair Episode" — until she learns where they are going. The couple goes to a local production of the musical Hair, in which Molly's parents (Fred Willard, Julia Sweeney) have roles. Molly dreads the moment when the whole cast is supposed to get naked on stage.

"Pilot" starts this new drama series off with a bang.

literally, as a mysterious intruder commits suicide in the living room of the wealthy McAllister family. Fifteen-year-old Lily (Alison Lohman) sees the whole thing and can't understand why her parents (Dana Delany, Martin Donovan) are going to great lengths to cover up the incident. As she and a friend (Alan Simpson) investigate, she finds even more mysteries involving her own picture-perfect, pillars-of-the-community family. Philip Baker Hall, Barbara Babcock, Natasha Gregson Wagner and Mark Valley also star.

10 p.m. NBC

Law & Order: Special Victims Unit

The show's third season starts with "Repression." Amy Irving (Carrie, Traffic) plays the mother of a young woman (Kelly Hutchinson) who claims to have been molested. The woman targets the girl's father (Brian Kerwin) as the perpetrator, creating family discord and an eventual matter of vigilante justice. That puts Benson (Mariska Hargitay) and Stabler (Christopher Meloni) on the case.

Biography

Denzel Washington: The Preacher's Son chronicles the actor's rise to Glory, the Civil War drama that won him an Academy Award as best supporting actor. The intensely private actor, who very rarely gives interviews and usually refuses to comment on his family life, emerges as a serious artist who views celebrity as a double-edged sword.

Smile Awhile...

WE LOVED NEW YORK

by SARA HOPSON BLAIR

This past July, my son, JR, was selected as a semi-finalist in ESPN's "Two Minute Drill." This is a sports program that airs every Tuesday night with a format that is similar to "Who Wants To Be A Millionaire" or "Jeopardy." The contestants field questions from sports figures ranging in categories such as the Olympics, baseball, soccer, etc.

When JR notified me that he had been selected as a finalist, I was extremely happy for him. After all, the selection process had been difficult, and now he was going to get the opportunity to go to New York to see if he qualified to compete in the million dollar play-off, so naturally I reveled in his excitement.

"Hey, Mom!" JR yelled when he called to tell me the good news. "I get to go to New York and compete on the Two Minute Drill!"

"Oh, JR!" I remember saying. "I'm so happy for you. When do you go?"

"Well, I need to be there on the 11th of July, but I thought we could go on the 10th and come back on the 13th," he answered.

I wasn't sure, but I thought that I detected a "we" in his sentence, so I asked, "JR, you mean you want to take ME with you?" I asked, incredulously. "I mean, I thought you might want to take one of your friends or something."

"Oh, no, Mom," he replied, earnestly. "I want you to go. I thought you'd love it."

I can't tell you how humbled I was that my son actually wanted to spend time with his mother in the most fascinating and wonderful city in the entire world. I was so charmed and elated I could barely speak. Finally, I said, "JR, I am truly honored that you want me to go and share in your good fortune."

"Does that mean that you'll go?" he questioned.

"Of course, I'll go!" I exclaimed. "We'll have a fantastic time!"

"Great!" JR stated. "Can you call and get airline and hotel reservations?"

"You mean they aren't paying for your ticket?" I queried.

"They're not paying for anything," he said.

That's when my bubble burst, and the air started seeping out of my lungs. Not only was I being invited to go to New York with JR, I was also getting the pleasure of footing the bill. How lucky-could a mother get? However, I reminded myself that this was a one-time chance and with my health conditions, I thought it was an offer I couldn't and shouldn't refuse.

The afternoon we arrived in New York, we immediately got busy seeing the sights. The first place JR wanted to see was located in Times Square, so off we went in search of a restaurant he had read about in a recent ESPN magazine. After a thirty-minute jaunt, we finally stood in front of the WWF eatery. Inside there were television screens strategically placed in such a manner so that every patron could have a clear view of opponents breaking each other's bodies while they ate. (Not my idea of appetizing fare).

"This is the neatest place," JR commented as we were seated by a guy wearing referee scrubs.

"Yeah, great," I replied, unenthusiastically. "But wouldn't you like to see some of the sights like the museum or a play?"

"Oh, I forgot to tell you. It was a surprise, but I've got us some super tickets to the Mets game on Thursday night," he said as he ordered a Turn Buckle/Slam Jam Hamburger with Crush Fries. "The seats are only four rows back."

"You were certainly lucky," I stated. "But weren't they awfully expensive? I mean, you shouldn't have spent your money on tickets."

"I didn't, I used your VISA card. That was all right, wasn't it?" he grimaced. "We might never get another opportunity to come back here, and I've never been to Shea Stadium anyway."

My head started to reel. At that moment in time, I came to the realization that my economic lectures had obviously fallen on deaf ears. JR must have taken "my money tree in the backyard story" seriously. He really DID believe I just walked outside and pulled money from a limb. However, at that time, little did I know that his words would be prophetic.

"Okay, JR," I agreed. "Let's just have a good time and enjoy ourselves while we're here. As long as I get to see a Broadway play, I'll be satisfied."

The next day JR walked to the BMW Building and took a written test and participated in a mock "Two Minute Drill" session. When he returned late that afternoon, we ate at a little French cafe and then attended a star-studded production of the revival of "42nd Street." We loved it.

The following day, my husband called and told us that we should see some of the sights like the World Trade Center and eat at the top in a restaurant called "Windows on the World." So with that thought in the back of our minds, we walked back down to Times Square and found ourselves in front of the ESPN Zone. Needless to say, it was a restaurant that had television sets strategically placed throughout the entire three-story structure with one floor that was entirely devoted to sports video games of all types. This time our waiter wore a baseball uniform and told us that the special of the day was the "Ground Ball Beef Burger with Fly Fries."

We never made it to the World Trade Center. And after a month of anticipation, JR was notified that he was picked as an alternate, which meant he would probably not appear on the show. Yet, we had the experience of a truly memorable and delightful trip. We saw New York at its best; bustling with people from all over the world who were there to savor the spirit of being in the most fabulous city in the United States.

I now cherish those memories because our world, and that city, will never be the same again.

Horoscopes...

ARIES

(March 21 to April 19)

After much traveling this year, you're due for some settled time with family and friends. Use this period to check out situations that will soon require a lot of serious decision making.

TAURUS

(April 20 to May 20)

Keep that keen Bovine mind focused on your financial situation as it begins to undergo some changes. Consider your money moves carefully. Avoid impulsive investments.

GEMINI

(May 21 to June 20)

You'll need to adjust some of your financial plans now that things are changing more quickly than you expected. All the facts you need haven't yet emerged, so move cautiously.

CANCER

(June 21 to July 22)

Personal and professional relationships dominate this period. Try to keep things uncomplicated to avoid misunderstandings that can cause problems down the line.

LEO

(July 23 to August 22)

That elusive goal you'd been hoping to claim is still just out of reach. But something else has come along that could prove just as desirable, if only you would take the time to check it out.

VIRGO

(August 23 to September 22)

This is a good time to get away for some much needed rest and relaxation. You'll return refreshed and ready to take on the workplace challenge that awaits you.

LIBRA

(September 23 to October 22)

Confidence grows as you work your way through some knotty situations. Watch out for distractions from well-meaning supporters that could slow things down.

SCORPIO

(October 23 to November 21)

Consider spending more time contemplating the possibilities of an offer before opting to accept or reject it. But once you make a decision, act on it.

SAGITTARIUS

(November 22 to December 21)

You're in a very strong position this week to tie up loose ends in as many areas as possible. Someone close to you has advice you might want to heed.

CAPRICORN

(December 22 to January 19)

Congratulations. This is the week you've been waiting for: After a period of sudden stops and fitful starts, your plans can now move ahead with no significant disruptions.

AQUARIUS

(January 20 to February 18)

You're in an exceptionally strong position this week to make decisions on many still-unresolved matters, especially those involving close personal relationships.

PISCES

(February 19 to March 20)

The new moon starts this week off with some positive movement in several areas. A special person becomes a partner in at least one of the major plans you'll be working on.

BORN THIS WEEK:

You work hard and get things done. You also inspire others to do their best. You would do well heading up a major corporation.

Jake assured Tad he hadn't caused Joe's stress-related arrhythmia attack. Leo was upset about Greenlee coming into his thoughts as he made love to Laura. Liza was cool to Adam's advances. Chris told Erica he's investigating Roger in connection with a drug case. Gillian noted Ryan's reaction to being called "Buddy." David greeted Anna with a passionate kiss. Wait to See: Greenlee plays investigator.

AS THE WORLD TURNS

Simon considered confessing his feelings if that would keep Katie from leaving. Carly wondered what strings might be attached to the job offer. Paul realized his worst fears about his mother (Barbara) might be coming true. Bonnie joined the working class. Wait to See: Adam is uncomfortable in Nick's presence. Hal opens up to Emily.

THE BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL

Sally told Massimo that Brooke makes Stephanie's life miserable and caused Macy's death. Later, Massimo devised a plan to get Brooke away from Ridge by having Stephen (Brooke's father) say he's ill and needs her to come to him. Massimo later made a wager with Stephanie that if his plan works, she'll give him anything he wants. Before leaving Los Angeles, Brooke asked Ridge to choose between her and Taylor. Wait to See: Ridge has a surprising answer for Brooke.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES

Paul told the people of Salem that Shawn, Belle and Philip had drowned in the storm. Hope tried to discourage Bo from taking a DNA sample from their son. Meanwhile, Lexie, who was increasingly wary about Bo's investigation, told Hope she was planning a special party for her. Elizabeth told Colin she can't stand to live in Salem. Wait to See: Nicole seeks revenge against her father (Paul).

GENERAL HOSPITAL

Sonny lashed out at AJ for attempting to frame Carly for Sorel's murder, and tried to force him to sign away all rights to Michael. Lucky found the biotoxins in the Cassadine lab. Meanwhile, Scott's arrival caused Stavros to shift gears in his plan to reunite with Laura. Helena ordered Nikolas to lie and implicate Stefan in Chloe's murder. Wait to See: Elizabeth approaches Lucky with an "interesting" idea.

GUIDING LIGHT

Sam felt uneasy as he played the hero for Marah and Olivia's benefit. Richard was the unknowing target of a slick manipulation. Ross began his new job and found himself with a new admirer as well. Carmen revealed her true intentions. Wait to See: Olivia evades Josh's questions.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE

Todd agreed to join Gabrielle in the plot that she and Asa concocted to get revenge on Max, and decided to persuade Blair to get in on the scam. Allison told Ben that Viki holds the key to her freedom. She then confessed she once kidnapped Critter Corner...

In light of the tragic events which occurred in the last week, I was concerned about whether I should continue the discussion of skin disease in dogs that I had started. I don't have any profound thoughts on the world situation that have not already been voiced, and I have already done the only things that I could think of to help in the crisis, which were to pray and donate blood. So I am not ignoring the broader troubles of the world, just focusing on the one little area where I am qualified to comment, which happens to be pet problems.

That said, I will continue on with the subject of Demodectic Mange.

Last week, we had covered the basics of this disorder, caused by a tiny mite that normally lives deep in the hair follicles of dog skin without any problem. Certain disorders of the immune system can allow the mites to multiply to the degree that they can cause severe skin disease with hair loss, itching and secondary bacterial infections.

The disease is diagnosed using a microscope to find mites in debris scraped off affected areas of skin. Once a diagnosis of Demodectosis (or iRedi Mange) has been made, there are several approaches to treatment.

As we discussed last week, your vet may opt to not even treat small, localized areas of the disorder in young pups, since they often outgrow it spontaneously. In other cases, these small lesions may be treated with an ointment containing the chemical Rotenone, which is an insecticide. Adults and more severely infected older pups may call for more drastic action.

There is only one product on the market specifically labeled for the treatment of generalized Demodectosis. This is marketed under the trade name of Mitaban, containing the active ingredient Amitraz. It comes in tiny individual bottles, designed to be mixed with water and used as a whole-body sponge-on or dip. As I understand it, this chemical is somewhat unstable and breaks down easily after exposure to air, so it is not available in larger sizes. This means, of course, that this is a fairly expensive medication. Mitaban is a prescription product, and there can be side effects from its use, so you certainly want to work with your vet. First off, you want to know for sure what you're treating, and you want to discuss the potential side effects thoroughly. The Mitaban label calls for its use every two weeks. For how long? That varies, but basically it needs to be continued beyond the time the problem appears to be gone. This may take several weeks to a few months. Using antibiotics to help clear up any secondary bacterial skin infection will often make treatment of the primary disease much easier.

As I said earlier, I am not certain that you can ever say this disease is cured; sometimes all you can achieve is control of the problem. My chow-mix, Whitney, had a severe case of Demodex when I first acquired her; for years I still had to dip her once or twice a year to keep the condition under control. It tends to flare back up in times of stress, such as surgery, illness, or in Whitney's case, Obedience School. She has always been shy and slightly neurotic, and although she did fairly well in class, the whole thing was too much for her, and I dropped her out halfway through the course, partially bald. She hasn't had a problem in years, but I know it is there, lurking under her shiny black coat.

In a few instances, it seems that even control is impossible, and that is when we have to go beyond what is approved for treatment. This is a grey area, and when we enter this territory, owner and veterinarian have to work together even more closely. We may use a more concentrated solution of the Mitaban, and we may use it more often than the label recommends.

Other medications may have to be considered, such as Ivermectin or Milbemycin. (Both are approved for use in dogs, at much lower dosages, as heartworm preventatives.) We tend to use these as last resorts, the big guns that are pulled out when everything else has failed. Yes, we are taking bigger chances here, but by this point, it is a war—with the dog's health, and maybe its very life, at stake.

The final point that I need to emphasize here is that Demodectic Mange is not contagious to people. (I was surprised to find out, though, while doing the research for this article, that humans have their own Demodex mite, which apparently does not cause us any trouble.) Also, Demodectosis is essentially not contagious to other dogs. It probably does pass from affected mother to newborns while their immune systems are still not up to speed. I imagine it might be spread in some rare case where an immune-deficient adult was in contact with another affected dog. There is an inherited tendency toward developing the disease, and affected dogs should not be bred, especially those with the generalized form.

I hope I have made this dif-icult skin problem a little easier to understand, and I hope that I have also made it clear that this is not something to be approached with home remedies. Even with all the medications vets have available, Demodex can be a formidable opponent.

KET examines future of cities and towns

Can small- and medium-sized towns prosper in the New Economy, and if so how?

These are the questions that will be posed to national, state and local leaders as well as experts in the fields of business, economics and public policy during a three-day conference entitled "The Morphing of Mainstreet USA." To coincide with this event, KET is producing "Growing Kentucky Towns and Cities: The Morphing of Main Street," airing Monday, September 24, at 8 p.m.

Broadcast live from the Norton Center for the Arts on the Centre College campus in Danville, the program features experts discussing the array of concerns facing city officials today, from economic development to infrastructure needs and quality of life issues. Kentucky Tonight's Bill Goodman hosts the roundtable discussion.

Guests on the program include Theresa Camoriano, an intellectual property lawyer from Louisville and editor of Jefferson Review; Peter Katz, a member of CitiStates, a Washington, D.C.-based consulting group, and an analyst of "new urbanism" in America; David Mohny, dean of the College of Architecture at the University of Kentucky; Glenn Price, a Louisville lawyer; and Holly Wiedemann, an adaptive reuse developer, and president of AU Associates in Lexington.

"Growing Kentucky Towns and Cities: The Morphing of Main Street" is a KET production, produced by Renee Shaw, in partnership with the Kentucky League of Cities. The program, is closed-captioned for the deaf and hard-of-hearing.

Viewers can find out more about programming on KET by visiting the KET web site at <http://www.ket.org>.

Jessica, and was about to reveal a secret when Rae arrived to announce that Allison had been granted a pass for the day. Allison headed for Llanfair, where she encountered Jessica. Max and Gabrielle learned Al had been hurt in an accident. Wait to See: Bo learns about Melanie's deception.

PASSIONS

In Harmony: David told Grace that Sam is still in love with Ivy. Meanwhile, Ivy, who had been struck by lightning, refused surgery until she could tell Sam one last secret. On the Island: Charity's friends revived her, but as they tried to make their escape, they were rocked by a huge earthquake. Tabitha decided to sacrifice herself to the warlocks. In Bermuda, Julian tried to escape from a furious Luis by crawling under the bed where he had hidden a drugged Theresa. Wait to See: Norma and the warlocks fight for the right to kill Tabitha.

PORT CHARLES

A gift arrived for baby Daniel from someone claiming to be the child's special friend. Ian and Chris realized Livvie was bitten by a snake that couldn't be found in a town like Port Charles. Later, Livvie followed the sound of Caleb's music to Daniel's crib. Valerie was upset to learn Jamal and Alison were a couple. Lucy and Kevin opened the door to a surprise visitor. Wait to See: Jack has a nightmare.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS

Phyllis accepted Jack's proposal. Victor thanked Paul for agreeing to supervise Tricia's surveillance at the penthouse. Later, Paul's romantic date with Isabella ended abruptly when he couldn't get his mind off Chris. Kay told Billy about Mac's upsetting visit from Amanda. Matt's ghost appeared to Tricia at the penthouse. Later, Victor told Sharon that Tricia seemed to be losing it, a fact that was confirmed by the surveillance tapes. Wait to See: Lauren starts her campaign to win back Paul.

Lake Cumberland Holds Special Camping Weekend

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Lake Cumberland State Resort Park in Jamestown will say "thanks" to its campers during the annual Camparama Weekend, scheduled for Oct. 5-6. Camp Friday night at the regular $14 per night rate and stay Saturday night for free.

Guests also will enjoy a photography workshop, golf, a children's archery contest, live music and other activities.

Camping is on a first-come, first-served basis. For more information, call Lake Cumberland at 1-270-343-3111.

The Kentucky State Park System is composed of 49 state parks plus an interstate park shared with Virginia. The Department of Parks operates 17 resort parks with lodges — more than any other state. During the administration of Gov. Paul Patton, two lodges have been built and all 15 others have been renovated. Each year, Kentucky parks draw 7.8 million visitors and contribute $284 million to the economy.

News of the Weird...

by Chuck Shepherd

■ In August, the Metropolitan Transit board of Santa Cruz, Calif., had to resort to obtaining a judicial order restricting the bus travel of one of its own members, Bruce Gabriel, because it feared he might continue to assault its transit drivers and others with his wheelchair. According to court documents, Gabriel has deliberately hit two drivers, knocked over a boy in a crosswalk, and verbally assaulted passengers. Gabriel called the collisions accidents and said he is merely an aggressive advocate for people with disabilities.

■ In Halberstadt, Germany, in September, an organist kicked off a performance of the late, radical composer John Cage's "Organ 2/ASLSP" (an acronym somehow derived from "as slow as possible"), which was written for 20 minutes, but thanks to technology and imagination, will be performed over a period lasting 639 years. The first six months will be devoted to creating an organ's first note. The purpose of the performance is to contrast the piece with the frenzied pace of modern society.

■ Georgia state Rep. Dorothy Pelote of Savannah, addressing her chamber during opening prayer ceremony on the day after Labor Day, informed colleagues that she has psychic powers and in fact managed to catch a glimpse of Chandra Levy's dead body in a ditch (but did not get a chance to speak with her). House Speaker Tom Murphy diplomatically told reporters, after being asked for a comment, that he really did not hear too well what Rep. Pelote had said (even though he was standing well within earshot).

No Longer Weird

■ Adding to the list of stories that were formerly weird but which now occur with such frequency that they must be retired from circulation: (47) A husband's enthusiastically taking his wife back into the marriage even though she just tried to murder him, as David Martin did in June after his wife, Tammie, emptied a gun into him and his father (Moulton, Ala.) (works also for wives taking husbands back). And (48) forcing young miscreants to listen to less popular kinds of music as punishment for playing their rap or rock music too loud in public, as Cambridge, Ohio, Judge John Nicholson sentenced Alan Law to do in August (i.e., listen to polka).

The Entrepreneurial Spirit

■ Latest Cutting-Edge Products: Fox News reported in July that business was good for Hidden Vestments (Santa Monica, Calif.), a lingerie shop with silk female-type undies specially tailored for cross-dressing men's bodies (e.g., lace-edged vest-and-boxer set, $136). And, according to a June Denver Post story, Buck Weimer (Pueblo, Colo.) sold his entire first run of airtight briefs called Under-Ease, which contains a charcoal filter lining that effectively, he says, prevents flatulence from escaping into the air. And the Potty Putter (mentioned in Newsweek in May) is a toy fabric golf green, complete with hole, flag, ball and putter, that men can put on the floor and play with while sitting on a toilet.

Science Breakthroughs

■ In July, Richard Davis, 53, settled his lawsuit with a London doctor and a pharmaceutical company over his claim that a prescription drug made him so sexually wild that it led to his bankruptcy and a criminal fraud conviction. He said he was a virgin until he started binging on the apparently magical bromocriptine, which caused him to act like a "cross between a deranged sex maniac and a highly overexcited teenager."

■ Among the potential 21st-century foods being developed for military use (according to research led by Purdue University professor Michael Ladisch, released in June) is a chocolate bar with special nutrients to change body temperature, which could not only make soldiers warmer in cold climates but could also thus render soldiers "invisible" to an enemy's thermal-imaging equipment.

The Weird Workplace

■ Police in Northumbria, England, agreed in April to pay Detective Brian Baker the equivalent of "several" thousand dollars (he was asking for about $25,000) to compensate him for the snoring habit he picked up, allegedly from too many years in the evidence room inhaling dust from seized marijuana plants. His maladies, including a whistling in his nose, were said to have caused Baker marital disharmony.

■ Tim Nelson, a La-Z-Boy recliner tester profiled in a May Associated Press report, said the job of sitting down, kicking his feet up, and rocking back and forth in the company's chairs all day is much harder than it looks: "It's not like they give us popcorn and a TV set to watch"; "(u)p and down all day (can) be a workout." Actually, said colleagues, the job is one of the hardest at the Dayton, Tenn., plant because testers must certify the comfort and balance of up to 130 recliners a day (with 10 to 15 pieces not making the grade).

People With Issues

■ William Lytle, 71, of North London has been a compulsive digger for years, said neighbors, according to an August report in The Guardian. To satisfy unarticulated inner needs, Lytle has dug extensively all over his multi-acre property, once going about 50 feet straight down before getting bored and cementing up the hole. However, in his latest adventure, which authorities said is probably the first time his digging has gone past his property line, his excavation caused the street in front of his home to collapse. Lytle lives in a 20-room home that would be worth about $1.5 million if it were in good repair.

Update

■ The Philippine toxic garbage pile that collapsed in July 2000, killing more than 200 professional scavengers, is still active in the Patayas neighborhood of Manila, and more dangerous than ever, according to a July 2001 Associated Press dispatch. The government offered to relocate the scavengers, but most stayed because of the pay (about $3 (U.S.) a day). As the AP writer set the scene: "Hundreds of self-described scavengers, many with skin rashes and teeth nearly as black as the toxic mud that caked their feet, followed in a swirl of flies, mangy dogs, diesel exhaust and flying cockroaches." "The children who splash and play in the fetid runoff spread skin fungi, tuberculosis, hook worms, and stomach viruses at an alarming rate." A recent, tough clean-air act, banning incineration, has increased the dump's volume.

Thinning the Herd

■ An 18-year-old man, rowdily hanging out of the passenger-side car window, fatally struck his head when the driver came too close to a trash can (Lebanon, Ore., August). A 38-year-old man fell 15 floors to his death after he accepted a dare from a buddy and attempted unsuccessfully to hang from an apartment balcony (Vancouver, British Columbia, July). A 39-year-old man was killed when his speeding car struck a parked semitrailer truck at about 9 a.m., with another motorist telling police the man appeared to be reading a newspaper moments before the crash (Pleasant Prairie, Wis., June).

Also, in the Last Month ...

■ A 31-year-old man barely survived a deadly bacterial infection of the heart valve, facilitated by his numerous body piercings that he acquired in order to look like his idol, basketball player Dennis Rodman (Chicago).

■ Responding to several noise complaints, a city's environmental officer publicly urged citizens to be quieter at night while making love (Stockport, England).

■ In its latest advertising campaign, the University of Bonn (Germany) profiled famous alumnus Joseph Goebbels ("philosophy student," "propaganda minister") but without mentioning his role as an architect of the Holocaust.

SENIOR NEWS LINE

By MATILDA CHARLES

In 1949, George Orwell wrote the chilling classic of the future "1984," in which he showed us a society where politicians spoke to the populace in "newspeak." For example, white could be black, tall could be short, poor could be rich. The meanings of the words as used in "newspeak" were intended to keep the people ignorant of the truth by giving them a distortion of reality.

Orwell's book was meant to be a cautionary tale of what could happen. Fortunately, while we have escaped the totalitarianism he warned about, we have not escaped the phenomenon of "newspeak." It remains very much alive in the mouths of our politicians, as shown in the most recent example involving the Social Security system's reserves.

Remember the campaign promise by both George W. Bush and Al Gore that the Social Security fund would NEVER be touched — except, perhaps, in the event of war. Now we hear that the government might have to take $9 billion out of the reserve this year to meet expenses. However, White House budget director Mitch Daniels, in a fine example of "newspeak," says the Social Security pledge was "symbolic." (Hmm. How would a judge react if someone committed perjury and said he regarded the oath as merely "symbolic"?)

Also, the White House — which recently changed the Social Security accounting procedure — denies that the surplus is actually $1 billion, after Social Security expenses are deducted from the $158 billion it claims is in the till.

Our senior citizens go to the polls in greater numbers than any other group. When you speak (and I mean speak in the true sense of the word), politicians listen. Call them, write them, e-mail them, and ask why they're playing these potentially disastrous games with Social Security. And don't forget to ask if, in all this controversy about the surplus, there will be any money available to fund the prescription drug bill if it ever gets passed. And don't take "newspeak" for an answer.

Let's discuss.

Pine Mountain Hosts Dulcimer Convention

FRANKFORT, Ky. — The Great American Dulcimer Convention at Pine Mountain State Resort Park in Pineville celebrates its 25th anniversary this year. The event is scheduled for Sept. 28-29.

Both the plucked Appalachian dulcimer and the hammered dulcimer are featured in evening concerts, along with workshops and informal performances throughout both days.

Concert organizer Dick Albin of Atlanta, Ga. will be among featured performers. Others will include the Gallier Brothers Band of Missouri, Jim and Sherri Miller from Tennessee, and Kentucky entertainers Anne MacFie of Powell County and Kentucky Standard of Bardstown.

For more information on the convention and room reservations, contact the park at 1-800-325-1712.
