Highway renamed for patriotic sentiment

LOUISA — A recent house bill has led to a change of name for a Lawrence County highway. Parts of Kentucky Route 3 and all of Route 1185 will be known as the "Freedom is not Free Veterans Memorial Highway." The American Legion chapter of Louisa signed a petition which led to the bill for the name change to be passed. The official ceremony will take place at 11:30 a.m. today.

Knott Countians named to board

FRANKFORT — Two Knott County residents were recently appointed to the newly formed Kentucky State Board of Electric Generation and Transmission Siting by Governor Paul Patton. Karen J. Jones, of Sassafras, and Donnie Newsome, of Hindman, will both represent Knott County on the board.

Floyd Fourth fun will be countywide

Prestonsburg, Martin, Auxier Wheelwright planning events

by LORETTA BLACKBURN
STAFF WRITER

Floyd County will be teeming with things to do this July 4, as communities all over the county are planning to celebrate America's birthday with the usual "bang," as well as with entertainment ranging from parades and music to wrestling and food.

The city of Prestonsburg will have its usual fireworks display, which will be ignited as usual by the Floyd County Rescue Squad near dark. Prior to that, Mayor Jerry Fannin said that Shriners will host a parade starting at noon and gospel singers will be entertaining people in the Prestonsburg Municipal Parking Lot that

Among the things displayed at Edward Jones Investments are photos of veterans, the medals they merited, and memorabilia such as pocket guides to the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg, and North Africa, as well as C-rations, which were distributed to soldiers three times a day.

PRESTONSBURG — Edward Jones Investments, of Prestonsburg, has turned the front of its office into a patriotic showplace with photos and memorabilia that exhibit generations of the Eastern Kentucky veterans.

Jeanne Blankenship — whose birthday is July 4 — vocalized that her husband, Sam Blankenship, investment representative, is a veteran who did two tours in Vietnam as a Marine and received three Purple Hearts for his service. She said the display, which the company has put together the past three years, is a dedication to local veterans who have served their country throughout the years.

Many of the exposition's photographs feature people who died years ago, some in the line of duty and some at home. One display shows Jeanne Blankenship's father, Joe Burke, and his brother, Hern D. Burke, both deceased, and their brother John Burke, who lives in Prestonsburg. All three brothers served in World War II and all three came home.

A souvenir brought home by Hern Burke, a Nazi knife emblazoned with a swastika carved on its handle, is displayed along with his photos. Hern Burke worked as a photographer after he returned from the war and took pictures in the Floyd County Schools. He was also co-owner of Korner Drug for over 40 years.

Another inspirational story, told by Jean Burke, Hern D. Burke's widow, is that of five men in a black-and-white photo. The five men graduated from Prestonsburg High School in the early 1940s and

County marks beginning of water projects

by JARRID DEATON
STAFF WRITER

McDOWELL — The Southern Water and Sewer District officially broke ground on two new projects on Tuesday. The groundbreaking is a culmination of an effort between the Floyd County Fiscal Court and several federal and state agencies to expand the water distribution system and service in southern Floyd County.

The two areas that were part of the ceremony on Tuesday were Frasure's Creek and Mink Branch, located in McDowell.

When the entire project is completed, about 600 additional customers who do not currently have access to water service are expected to receive it.

According to Floyd County Judge-Executive Paul Hunt Thompson, this is a substantial move forward for the county.

"When we are finished, we hope to have at least 95 percent of Floyd County serviced with public water," Thompson said.

The total amount of money invested in the project is $8,253,000, with a portion of the funding being utilized to refinance some of the district's existing debt.

Indiana man killed in ATV wreck at Drift

Times Staff Report

DRIFT — An Indiana man was pronounced dead at the McDowell ARH Hospital after an all-terrain vehicle accident on Saturday.

According to a report from Kentucky State Police, Raymond Barrand, 27, was riding an ATV at Stumbo Hollow in Drift when he lost control of the vehicle and struck a ditch on the right shoulder of the roadway, throwing him from the ATV.

The accident is still under investigation by the Kentucky State Police.

PRESTONSBURG — A patient at Highlands Regional Medical Center got his chance to be a television star on Monday, although not in the conventional manner.

James Griffith, 60, of Prestonsburg received his regular checkup via television in the telemedicine center at the hospital.

Griffith, who is on a waiting list for a heart transplant, has to wear a special device which assists his heart to make the pumping easier. "It is a noisy six pounds of metal, but I wouldn't be here without it," Griffith said. Griffith's physician, Dr. Mohammed Jahania, conducted the checkup from Lexington using the telemedicine equipment.

Griffith, who became a certified nurse's aid at age 53, is familiar with the steps he had to take to monitor his progress with the device.

According to Gloria Shepherd,

Fourth of July benefit planned for Baby Jacob

■ Rodney Jacob

by KIM LITTLE FRASURE
CHRISTIAN MESSENGER

Born premature on August 9, 1999, to parents Rodney and Jennifer Gardner of Prestonsburg was 1 pound, 14 ounce Rodney Jacob. Jennifer gave birth only five-and-half months into her pregnancy. Immediately after Jacob was born he was transported to Cabell-Huntington Hospital in Huntington, W.Va.

Baby Jacob was placed in the Cabell-Huntington Neonatal Intensive Care Unit on a ventilator for seven weeks. He remained in the NICU for three long, heart-wrenching months. Jacob had multiple medical problems — a cyst on his brain, severe respiratory problems, a heart murmur, sepsis, eye problems, an umbilical hernia and reflux — and he underwent surgery to repair two additional hernias due to complications during his time on the ventilator.

Jennifer reflected back on one of the most painful memories during Jacob's stay at Cabell-Huntington Hospital, when he was just 1 month old and still in the neonatal intensive care unit.

"It was in September and I had just bathed him," Jennifer Gardner recalled. "His breathing was slowing and monitors were going off. The ventilator read 20 percent. Jacob quit breathing. There were doctors and nurses lining up, taking turns hand-bagging oxygen into him. He had stopped breathing for one hour and a half. They made Rodney and I go out of the room.

"We were hysterical and Rodney was watching through a little window in the door. I just couldn't stand it. He said, 'Jennifer, look!' and when I looked through that window, the nurses had made a circle — they were holding hands and praying as others were working with Jacob! It seemed it took forever, but they worked and worked and finally the ventilator read 100 percent.

"The doctor looked at us and said, 'The Lord took care of this baby. We had done all we could do; there was nothing else we could have done.'"

When Jacob was 1 year old, a neurologist at UK Clinic in Lexington diagnosed him with spastic quadriplegic cerebral palsy. He has severe muscle tightness in his legs and moderate tightness in his arms. His body has very low muscle tone or weakness. Due to the spastic quadriplegic cerebral palsy, Jacob is unable to walk or sit up; he has trouble with crawling and feeding himself as well.

Physicians at Shriners' Children's Hospital in Lexington are also seeing Jacob. There he has received short leg braces he wears daily. However, he still remains in a wheelchair.

He attends therapeutic rehab at the Cincinnati Children's Hospital in Ohio, where he receives oral medication and Botox injections to loosen the tight muscles in his legs and arms. He also receives physical, occupational and speech therapy weekly.

Now 2 years old, Jacob is getting ready for the next steps to making it possible for him to walk and sit up.

"Jacob is a very special little

WYMT's Turner dies from injuries suffered in crash

The Associated Press

HAZARD — Residents of eastern Kentucky reacted with sadness Monday as news of the death of WYMT-TV anchorman Tony Turner spread through the mountain region.

Turner, 40, of Loyall, died Sunday evening at the University of Kentucky Medical Center from injuries he suffered in a June 10 traffic accident while on assignment in Whitley County.

He had been a fixture on the evening news for the past 16 years, and had come to be considered a part of the family by viewers, said Ewell Balltrip, executive director of the Kentucky Appalachian Commission.

"People looked forward to having him come into their living rooms in the evenings," said Balltrip, a former newspaper editor and publisher who had known Turner since his earliest days in radio. "He had a great relationship with viewers. He wasn't just a talking head."

Telephones rang nonstop at the television station Monday with viewers expressing their condolences.

"Not only was he a multi-talented man, he was the genuine article, true to his television image, an extremely nice person to know and work with," said WYMT general manager and executive vice president Ernestine Cornett.

Jeff Noble, a Bowling Green broadcaster who worked at WYMT from 1986 to 1993, said

Turner was true newsman. "He loved his business and he loved eastern Kentucky."

Turner began his broadcast career while in high school at radio station WFSR in Harlan and upon graduation, concentrated on news and management. He was general manager of WFSR during part of his tenure there from 1976 through 1986.

Turner started at WYMT-TV in 1986 as a general assignment reporter and was named general manager and vice president in 2001. He continued to anchor newscasts after his promotion.

GOING TO SEED?

It might be tempting to choose sod over seed when starting a lawn. Keep in mind, though, that sods are grown in wide-open fields, an environment that favors bluegrass and other sun-loving grasses. Sod that is primarily bluegrass will not grow as vigorously under a shade tree as fescue and other shade-loving grasses. If you have a shaded yard, it may behoove you to choose a grass-seed formulation that will fare well there. Regardless of grass type, seed is a better choice in terms of cost. While seed does indeed require more soil preparation, watering, and weed attention, it generally costs one-tenth of what sod costs. Remember, also, that sod is heavy and entails quite a bit of work.

There are many steps in lawn care. Every do-it-yourself project is made easier by the folks at HINDMAN PROMART. Our main goal is to provide you with the right tools, hardware, and expert advice you may need, so that you can achieve professional looking results. You will always be treated most courteously here at #1 Pro St., Hindman (785-3151). Need windows or doors? We carry the outstanding Peachtree line. Most major credit cards accepted. Need a special tool or piece of equipment for a one-time project? Visit our extensive rental department.

Study: Higher death rate from cancer in rural Appalachia

by DAN LEWERENZ
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Death rates from cancer are higher in Appalachia - particularly in the region's rural counties - than in the rest of the country, largely because of higher smoking rates resulting in lung cancer deaths, researchers concluded.

For every 100,000 people living in Appalachia, there were 173.1 cancer deaths during the study period, from 1994-98, compared to 166.7 cancer deaths per 100,000 nationally during the same period.

In rural sections of Appalachia, that number rose to 176.3 cancer deaths, according to the research done at the University of Kentucky and Penn State University in collaboration with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

But while death rates from breast, cervical and colorectal cancers varied in Appalachian states, only lung cancer death rates were almost universally higher in Appalachia than in the rest of the country.

Nationally, there were 48.9 lung cancer deaths per 100,000 population during the study period. In Appalachia, however, the rate rises more than 10 percent to 53.9 cancer deaths per 100,000; the rate in rural Appalachia was 57.2, almost 17 percent above the national average.

"If you take lung (cancer) out of the mix, the Appalachian rates are lower, and I think that's a powerful message," said Stephen W. Wyatt, associate director for cancer control at the University of Kentucky's Markey Cancer Center and the lead investigator in the study, which was released in late June. "The numbers are so amazingly large, the number of deaths are on the lung side, they just drive all cancer rates up in Appalachia."

Appalachia is a diverse region including 406 counties in 13 states (West Virginia is the only state entirely within the region) from New York to Mississippi. The study looked both at the region generally and at 266 rural Appalachian counties.

A number of factors contribute to the high rate of cancer deaths in

CDC: Survey of teenagers find more using cocaine, still drinking and smoking

by JUSTIN BACHMAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA - Injury and violence-related behaviors among teenagers have fallen, but more teens are using cocaine and regularly smoking and drinking, according to a recent survey.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention examined the behavior of 13,600 high school students from across the country for the annual survey, which was released Thursday.

Nearly half of the teens surveyed said they'd consumed more than one alcoholic beverage more than once in the month before the survey. But an increasing number are also wearing seat belts and refusing to ride with a driver who's been drinking.

The number of teenagers who said they had tried cocaine in their lifetime rose to 9.4 percent, up from 5.9 percent in 1991. About 4.2 percent of students said they had used cocaine in the past 30 days, up from 1.7 percent in 1991.

"We still have plenty of work to do," said Laura Kann, a researcher with the CDC's National Center for Chronic Disease Prevention and Health Promotion.

New radiation treatment safer for cancer patients

by STEVE BAILEY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON - New technology at the University of Kentucky Medical Center is allowing doctors to offer safer, more powerful radiation treatment for cancer patients.

Intensity Modulated Radiation Therapy gives physicians the ability to deliver narrowly targeted doses of radiation, minimizing the exposure of normal organs and tissue while increasing the intensity to the tumor.

"The key to this is that it maximizes the beneficial aspects of radiation and reduces the potential risks associated with it," said Dr. Mohammed Mohiuddin, chair of the UK College of Medicine's Department of Radiation Medicine.

"It gives us the opportunity to cure more tumors in even more areas of the body. Therefore, cure rates also should go up."

Kentucky is a national leader in cancer rates and death. The medical center is the only institution in the state and one of fewer than a dozen nationwide offering this treatment.

"We're always looking for better and safer ways to treat our patients with cancer," said Dr. Emery Wilson, dean of the school's College of Medicine.

Traditional radiation therapy involves the delivery of several, separate but identical X-ray beams to a tumor from different angles.

IMRT replaces the typical uniform beam intensities and enables doctors to control the depth, shape and intensity of these beams to more accurately and aggressively attack a tumor.

More pinpoint control of the beams allows the radiation energy to be focused directly on the tumor and not on adjacent healthy organs and tissue, reducing damage and possible adverse effects of the radiation.

"It allows us to give higher, more concentrated doses in a much safer manner," Mohiuddin said. "The less radiation you have to give to areas that don't need to receive it, the better the long-term benefits are going to be."

Patients with lung, prostate, pancreas, head and neck, breast and other forms of cancer will benefit from this new cutting-edge approach, said Dr. William St. Clair, assistant professor in the school's Department of Radiation Medicine.

"This is one of the more important advances in the field of radiation therapy," he said. "We're now able to treat tumors while avoiding complications associated with traditional radiation therapy. In 10 years, this treatment will be the norm."

Recent technological advances and clinical studies by University of Kentucky faculty members have contributed to the development and optimization of IMRT techniques.

The hospital, which began using the new technology about

Floyd County children doing well in school.

Instead of criticizing a proud parent, she ought to encourage more parents to become as involved in their children's academic success with "their" county newspaper.

I have been in education for 29 years and I find it very gratifyng when parents show that they care about their children's progress. Unlike Ms. Prater, I do not assume that the parents are living vicariously through their children.

I say, let all parents show their pride and give children recognition when they deserve it. I don't think we can ever give too much recognition to children who work hard and want to excel.

I was not a party to the discussion between Ms. Prater and this particular parent, but it is obvious from the article that Ms. Prater has difficulty "serving the citizens of Floyd County" in an objective manner. This was illustrated with the comment that she was tempted to pull the child's photo because of a tirade of accusations from the parent.

If Ms. Prater were more receptive, perhaps more of those parents who do not currently request recognition for their children would do so.

JWT to hold talent contest

After the success of last season's Talent Contest, Jenny Wiley Theatre and Avalon Natural Spring Water are happy to present the JWT Second Annual Talent Contest.

On Tuesday July 16, contestants will be vying for first place in two categories, youth (ages 6-12) and adult (ages 13- up).

Top prize in both categories is $500. Singers, dancers, and instrumentalist are encouraged to apply. Special guest artist Kristin Everage, of the Kentucky Opry, will also be performing.

A panel of three judges, each with experience in vocal performance, dance and instrumentation will judge contestants on stage presence, professionalism, and vocal/dance/instrument skill. The judges will also score the contestants on stage after each act, so the audience can track the competition. In the event of a tie, audience applause will determine the winner.

According to Managing Director Martin Childers, the whole evening is designed with a "Star Search" format, creating a fun evening for the entire audience.

The public is invited to attend and tickets can be purchased at the box office the night of the performance. Tickets are $5 and all seating is general admission.

Only 10 contestants will be accepted per category on a first come, first served basis. All interested parties should contact the Theatre for an application, or send in the application printed in this newspaper.

For more information, contact Jenny Wiley Theatre at 606-886-9274.

The production is made possible by Avalon Natural Drinking Water.

HIGHLANDS REGIONAL

The Medical Center of Eastern Kentucky<sup>SM</sup>

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations will conduct an accreditation survey of Highlands Regional Medical Center on August 7, 8, and 9, 2002. The purpose of the survey will be to evaluate the organization's compliance with nationally established Joint Commission standards. The survey results will be used to determine whether, and the conditions under which accreditation should be awarded the organization.

Joint Commission standards deals with organizational quality of care issues and the safety of the environment in which care is provided. Anyone believing that he or she has pertinent and valid information about such matters may request a public information interview with the Joint Commission's field representatives at the time of the survey. Information presented at the interview will be carefully evaluated for relevance to the accreditation process. Requests for a public information interview must be made in writing and should be sent to the Joint Commission no later than five working days before the survey begins. The request must also indicate the nature of the information to be provided at the interview. Such requests should be addressed to:

Division of Accreditation Operations
Organizational Liaison
Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations
One Renaissance Boulevard
Oakbrook, Terrace, IL 60181

The Joint Commission will acknowledge such requests in writing or by telephone, and will inform the organization of the request for any interview. The organization will, in turn, notify the interviewee of date, time and place of the meeting.

This notice is published in accordance with Joint Commission's requirements.
