Times makes changes to TV listings

Times Staff Report

The television listings in The Floyd County Times are undergoing changes.

The Times is ceasing production of its separate TV listings booklet, The Total Package, and instead placing the listings in the regular paper.

The listings will now appear on Sundays in the center of the A section. The placement is made so that readers can easily pull the listings away from the rest of the paper in order to save them for the rest of the week.

One benefit the new design will offer is that the listings will now appear larger than they did in the separate booklet. The new listings also include descriptions of "Best Bets" for viewing throughout the week, to help readers make viewing choices.

To help readers who receive their papers by mail keep up-to-date with weekend program offerings, a weekend TV preview will appear in the Friday edition of The Times on page A5.

Correction

A story in Friday's edition of The Floyd County Times incorrectly noted that James Bailey, who is charged with rape and assault charges, was still being held at the Floyd County Detention Center. Bailey is currently free on bond.

Judge-Executive Paul Hunt Thompson unveiled his "Pride on the River" plan at Friday's fiscal court meeting. The project aims to clean up the Big Sandy River by extending sewer lines into communities whose waste systems empty directly into the Big Sandy.

Thompson unveils plan to extend sewer lines

by TOM DOTY
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — The Floyd County Fiscal Court met Friday for their regularly scheduled meeting and devoted two hours to completing a lengthy agenda.

The meeting started off with an announcement by Judge-Executive Paul Hunt Thompson, who said that he is embarking on a project that will take longer than his current term to complete. The effort has been dubbed "Pride on the River" and aims to provide sewer lines to communities along the Big Sandy River.

Thompson said that the scope of the project would prove very costly and said that it has been broken down into three phases which will eventually terminate the dumping of solid waste into the Big Sandy from sewer systems which have no place else to discharge waste products. He said that 1,300 pounds of waste goes into the water daily in areas like Mud Creek and remarked that the project would prove useful to the community by solving three related problems from the practice, which include public health issues, water quality and the chance for economic development.

Thompson also noted that the project is off to a good start with pledges of support from Pike County, which will help by accepting waste from the Betsy Layne and Harold areas while treatment stations are developed in the Mud Creek area. The project will prove costly, with an estimated $26 million price tag for all three phases of the concept.

The court also welcomed local Red Cross Director Bob Carpenter, who thanked the county for the support offered in a recent drive to aid Gulf Coast victims of Hurricane Katrina. Thompson chimed in that the Big Sandy Region is the fourth biggest contributor in the commonwealth and noted that many donations were made in small increments of $1 to $5. He said that those who gave could barely afford to, but that the numbers of givers was so great that it quickly added up to an impressive figure of over $200,000.

The court also discussed a late bond payment from Mountain Racing. Many griped about the lateness, saying it had happened before. A small dispute broke out when Magistrate Jackie Owens opined that the track makes millions and is consistently late in making payments for which the fiscal court is ultimately responsible.

But Thompson said that the track probably doesn't make much money and added that he would oppose any plans to add slot machines to the facility at Thunder Ridge if the government made such amusements legal.

Owens countered that the county could raise money by penning off the parking lot at the facility to house pigs, but the court eventually stopped needing the track and opted to give them a week to come up with the payment.

The court also opened bids from area companies to purchase land near the dump at Garth and awarded the parcel to Blackburn Natural Resources, which offered the highest bid at $212,000.

Citizens comments closed the session with the fiscal court bowing out of the ongoing disagreement between Mayor Jerry Fannin and former mayoral can-

Clerk's office taking donations to help veterans

by TOM DOTY
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — Signs began popping up in area stores this week to announce a simple way in which area citizens can honor veterans. The program is part of an initiative by county clerks across the state and aims to raise money for the Veterans Program Trust Fund.

County Clerk Chris Waugh explained that the poster campaign was key to raising awareness of the program in which citizens can donate $1 to the fund when they license their motor vehicles. The clerks will be asking customers if they care to donate and Waugh wanted to make it clear for patrons that their donations go right to the veterans fund and that no portion of the proceeds is kept for the office.

Waugh explained that the fund helps vets by building hospitals, care centers and homeless shelters for veterans who live in Kentucky and that it falls under the banner of the clerks' HAVE (Help a Vet Today) program.

The way Waugh sees it, that there is a duty for clerks, whose offices oversee elections, to honor vets.

"The freedom that we all enjoy is due to their service to the country ..." Waugh said. "The way I see it as that we have been given an opportunity to show our thanks to those who have fought for the freedoms we enjoy."

Waugh and his staff were free to conduct the campaign anyway they chose and have chosen the dollar solicitation because it won't bust a budget, though customers are free to give more.

A lot of thought went into the campaign, which resulted in a poster of a vet that does not distinguish the branch of the service he served in.

The recent outpour of support for Hurricane victims, which was addressed at this week's fiscal court meeting, bodes well for the program and an optimistic Waugh said. "I have high hopes that this will be successful."

The Floyd County Clerk's Office is using this poster to publicize the Veterans Program Trust Fund. Money for the fund comes from donations made when people license their cars.

Garnett Fitchpatrick conducted a life skills workshop attended by local residents at the Auxier Lifetime Learning Center this past week. Fitchpatrick, along with Kelli Marcum, have been facilitating the "Survival Skills for Women" workshops for the past several weeks at the Auxier Center. Among the topics explored are assertiveness, personal health, nutrition, money management, child management, self advocacy, legal rights, coping with crisis, community resources and re-entry/employment. The classes are conducted on Tuesdays, from 10 a.m. thru 2 p.m., and will continue through Nov. 22. Lunch is provided. Call 886-0709 to learn more.

McDOWELL — A McDowell man saw a charge of second-degree escape added to an existing charge of burglary when he allegedly chose to run into a field rather than go into custody on Monday.

Sgt. Steve Little was investigating a series of thefts in McDowell when he called upon Famer Halbert, who turned 18 in July. Little was hoping to get some information from Halbert, who was cooperating until Little called in his location and was promptly told that an

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, MOM

Your birthday is October 23, 2005.

You'd be 82, if you were still by our side.

But God saw you could not take any more, And called you home in December of 2004.

Here on Earth you've walked your last mile; But in Heaven we'll meet again in a little while.

God saw the pain you were going through, And in my heart, I know He knew. It was your children you didn't want to leave; It was your children you didn't want to grieve. He whispered softly, "Come on home, my child. You'll see them again in a little while."

Mom, I miss so many of the simple things, Like every time the phone rings. I pick it up expecting you to say, "Hey, I cooked soup beans for you today." Thinking of that makes me smile, And I know I'll see you again in a little while.

Now it's your birthday, Mom, and I really miss you. And until my days on Earth are through; Thinking of you will give me hope. Thinking of you will help me cope. I know I can handle all of life's trials, Knowing I'll see you again in a little while.

In Loving Memory of Our Mom,
Ruth Snodgrass

Expert: Kentucky's math, science standards need narrower focus

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — A national education expert is advising simplicity for Kentucky's math and science curriculum, saying the current standards don't give students time to grasp basic concepts.

William Schmidt, a Michigan State University education professor, said Wednesday that students should be taught fewer concepts, but be taught them more in-depth.

"You have to think seriously about cutting out some stuff," Schmidt told Jefferson County school officials. "You're doing too much."

Schmidt was brought in by the school district to give his expertise on how other, high-achieving nations teach their students in math and science. The school district is trying to improve the standards as part of a $25 million education initiative sponsored by General Electric.

Schmidt drew comparisons between Kentucky's math and science standards and those in high-achieving nations, like Singapore and The Netherlands.

For example: While first-graders in those countries learn only three math concepts, including meaning, measurement and number operations such as addition and subtraction, Kentucky students learn 22, from 3-D geometry to probability.

Brent McKim, a physics teacher and president of the Jefferson County Teachers Association, said many teachers would agree.

"That's what I've been preaching," he said.

In Jefferson County, only 38 percent of students demonstrate proficiency in science and math.

But narrowing the number of concepts taught in certain years could have implications for textbooks and materials, school officials said. Paula Wolf, president of the district parent-teacher association, said the wisdom of narrowing standards "would depend on what they (might decide) to cut out."

The district hopes to use the four-year GE grant to raise the percentage of proficient students to 70 percent by 2010.

Teens need more driving practice before getting licenses, lawmakers told

FRENKPORT — Teenagers make up only 6 percent of Kentucky's drivers, but they account for more than 13 percent of drivers involved in fatal crashes.

The number of crashes could be reduced and lives would be saved if Kentucky required teens to get more driving experience before getting full driver's license privileges, a federal transportation safety official told members of the General Assembly's Health and Welfare Committee on Wednesday.

"Unfortunately, Kentucky has a rather weak law in graduated licensing statues," said Steve Blackstone, state and local liaison for the National Transportation Safety Board. "It's one of the weakest in the nation."

Blackstone said Kentucky is one of four states that doesn't require drivers with learner permits to go through an intermediate phase before getting full-fledged driver's licenses.

"The Safety Board has recommended to all states and recommends to Kentucky that you implement a three-phase process by adding an intermediate license during which the driver would be able to drive with restrictions on their licenses to ensure they're driving only in the safest of conditions," Blackstone said.

Intermediate licensing phases often place restrictions on nighttime driving, the number of passengers allowed in a vehicle, and cell phone use, Blackstone said. "Learning to drive and being comfortable in traffic requires all the concentration that a novice driver can muster."

Rep. Tom Burch, D-Louisville, noted that he has prefiled legislation that would create a six-month intermediate phase that a new driver would have to go through after holding a learner's permit for six months. Identical legislation has also been prefiled by Sen. Denise Harper Angel, D-Louisville.

In each measure, intermediate drivers wouldn't be allowed on the road between midnight and 6 a.m. and would be prohibited from having three or more passengers under the age of 18 who aren't family members. New drivers would also be required to finish a driver training program and maintain a clean driving record throughout the intermediate phase before applying for a full license.

Other states that strengthened their graduated license laws have reduced traffic accidents, according to Blackstone. "There have been a variety of studies in other states that have shown a reduction in crashes involving the effected groups ranging from 25 to about 60 percent," he said.

arrest warrant had been issued for Halbert in September and he would have to be brought in.

Halbert heard the information over Little's radio and asked if he could get some cigarettes and a shirt for the trip. Little assured him that would be fine and was speaking with Halbert's mother-in-law when he heard the young man opening his bedroom window. Little rushed in and allegedly found that Halbert running across a field behind his home.

After informing Halbert's wife that the escape would make things worse, Little let her know that he would not press an escape charge if Halbert came back voluntarily. But Little heard Halbert take off after hearing the offer and resigned himself to pursuing Halbert.

Little and Deputy Ralph Bates opted to drive to Halbert's parents' home and wait for him there. They were soon rewarded when a black van, driven by Halbert's cousin, came up the driveway.

After recovering Halbert from the van, he was lodged in the Floyd County Detention Center and charged with escape and the original charge of burglary.

Halbert appeared in district court Tuesday and was issued two separate bonds for the charges — $20,000 cash for the burglary and an additional $5,000 for the escape. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Oct. 24.

Strictly political

Strict construction of the law is a conservative mantra. So is tough enforcement.

But court documents in the JOBTROT merit hiring case show that a top official in the administration of self-styled conservative Gov. Ernie Fletcher wanted to rig the Personnel Board operation, by replacing legal mandates with political convenience.

Keith Hall, who at the time was the state's $121,958 homeland security director, said in an e-mail that the board's top administrator should be fired, and that hearing officers should be made to "look at life correctly," meaning the administration's way.

This is the same Mr. Hall who said, in another e-mail, that the Fletcher administration's network of eight regional offices, comprising the Local Initiatives for a New Kentucky (the officially disbanded LINK system, which has yet to be shut down), was an undervalued asset for its two main clients, the governor and his "political field operation."

Somebody should ask Gov. Fletcher whether he was part of this effort to subvert handling of state personnel cases before the board.

On second thought, the administration hasn't exactly been forthcoming on the subject of Mr. Hall. It initially billed his resignation as voluntary. The governor finally admitted firing him.

In an attempt to discredit Attorney General Greg Stumbo's investigation of merit hiring violations, Gov. Fletcher regularly has insisted that the proper place to have taken any complaints was the Personnel Board. Apparently, he expected them to get a proper welcome there, at least from his political point of view.

The governor had installed his own man, John Chowning, as board chairman, and Mr. Hall was pushing for Mr. Chowning in turn to get rid of executive director Mark Sipek ASAP. "The whole point of having the chairmanship is so Chowning can ensure those hearing officers look at life correctly," Mr. Hall explained in an e-mail to Commerce Cabinet official Teresa Hill.

During Mr. Chowning's tenure, the board did put Mr. Sipek on a formal evaluation schedule that will include a review in January. Of course, given what's now known about the administration's scheming against the Merit System, any finding that the executive director performs poorly would be, to put it gently, highly suspect.

The Fletcher approach to the Merit System was strict all right. Strictly political.

— The Courier-Journal, Louisville

Bush's pain, McCain's gain

Katrina has indeed altered our political landscape: For the first time in years, conservatives have listened to Arizona Sen. John McCain talk about a high-profile domestic issue and have nodded their heads vigorously. The maverick Republican made his reputation by bucking his own party, especially its conservative base, and, after his failed 2000 nomination bid, seemed to want to make a career out of it.

After Katrina and the countless billions of dollars that began pouring toward the Gulf Coast, conservatives clamored for spending offsets elsewhere in the budget, and there was McCain right there with them, excoriating pork-barrel spending (as he always has) and calling for repeal of the massive new Medicare prescription-drug entitlement. In a major battle between conservatives in Congress who want to cut spending, and the party's leadership, which is — to put it mildly — unenthusiastic about the prospect, McCain is with the conservative rebels.

This is so important because, if he runs, McCain is probably the front-runner for the Republican presidential nomination in 2008. But he's an odd front-runner, a front-runner whose campaign is almost certainly doomed unless he handles conservatives better than he did in 2000.

McCain will come out of the gate with formidable assets, among them near-universal name recognition, media adulation and credibility as a serious candidate. But if he again lets another major candidate get to his right on nearly everything — as he let President Bush in 2000 — his campaign will again attract independents, but not the Republicans who are by definition necessary to win the Republican nomination.

So McCain is in a different game from other potential candidates. They need money, media attention and insider buzz. McCain needs the right to stop loathing him, and he seems to realize it. Indeed, McCain's campaign will strain his capacities for insincerity. If a second marriage is the triumph of hope over experience, a second McCain presidential campaign, to be successful, will have to be the triumph of experience over the candidate's own predilections.

McCain has never demonstrated great affection for social conservatives, whom he blasted in 2000. But he can work around these things. He recently endorsed teaching Intelligent Design in schools, although he probably has as much sympathy for this critique of evolution as The New York Times editorial board does.

McCain will be the strongest performing Republican against Hillary Clinton in early opinion polls; if anything, he is more aggressive on the War on Terror than Bush is; he will have a strong theme of returning to a cleaner Republicanism after the ethical lapses of the current congressional majority. And all of this will be wrapped in his appealing thematic mix of patriotism, sacrifice and duty.

The problem for McCain is that he has such a richly layered history of apostasy, including on conservative gospel like the Bush tax cuts. A strong conservative candidate who unites the right can take him down. But for that candidate, the less conservatives nod their heads at anything McCain has to say, the better.

Baseball and intelligent design

by DONALD KAUL
MINUTEMAN MEDIA

There are those who still believe that baseball evolved from other, more ancient, games. An absurd notion. It is quite obvious that baseball sprang forth directly from the brow of God. The game is far too complex to have "evolved" through a series of fortunate accidents. Think about it: The distance from the pitching rubber to home plate is sixty-feet, six inches. Not an even sixty-foot nor sixty-one, but sixty-feet, six inches. Yet the distance between bases is an even 90 feet. Ask a knowledgeable baseball person where those distances come from and silence will be your reward.

The rules of batting are no less arbitrary. A batsman is given three strikes to hit a ball thrown over home plate at a height above the knees and below wherever the umpire decides that day. A ball thrown into that area but not swung at is a strike. A strike is also recorded when a pitch is hit into foul territory that is, outside the lines drawn from home plate to first and third bases and stretching into infinity. (Part of the charm of baseball is that it is played on the edge of infinity.) A ball hit on the ground past first or third base in fair territory is in play, even if it subsequently rolls foul. A fly ball, however, that passes a base in fair territory but curves into foul before hitting the ground beyond the bases is a strike. Unless, of course, the batter has two strikes on him already, in which case the pitch is neither a ball nor a strike. It is merely a pitch. The lone exception to this rule occurs when the ball is bunted into foul territory on a third strike. That is an automatic out.

If the pitcher, on the other hand, throws four balls (pitches outside the strike zone at which the batter does not offer) the batter goes directly to first base. Three strikes. Four balls. Now I ask you, does that sound like something that could have happened by accident? I don't think so, and I haven't even mentioned the infield fly rule. I imagine what happened was something like this. God had a meeting with his crack Intelligent Design team and said:

"HOW IS OUR EXPERIMENT ON THAT LITTLE PLANET GOING? WHAT'S IT CALLED AGAIN, DIRT?"

"Earth. Not too well, Chief. After You Created Life it got past the amoeba stage and made it through its dinosaur and monkey phases-although it took longer than it should have, frankly-but it seems to be stuck at the human level."

"WHAT'S THE PROBLEM?"

"They keep hitting each other over the head with clubs and poking each other with sharp sticks instead of working together. The latest reports are that they've discovered a powder that explodes and who knows where that will lead. It's discouraging."

"I SEE. PERHAPS THEY NEED A GAME: SOMETHING TO KEEP THEM OCCUPIED."

"Great idea, Chief. What sort of game did you have in mind?"

"OH, I DON'T KNOW, SOMETHING WITH A BALL IS ALWAYS

GOOD. PERHAPS SOMETHING THAT ALSO USES A CLUB SO THAT THEY STOP HITTING EACH OTHER WITH THEM."

"Sir, if you don't mind my saying so, that's brilliant."

"I SEE A PLAYER TRYING TO THROW THE BALL PAST ANOTHER ONE WHO'S TRYING TO HIT IT WITH HIS CLUB."

"Better and better, sir. How far do you envision him throwing it?"

"I'M NOT SURE. WAIT! HAND ME THAT ORANGE OVER THERE."

He is given the orange and He throws it.

"MEASURE HOW FAR I THREW IT."

"Sixty-feet, six inches."

"THAT'S HOW FAR THE THROWER SHOULD HAVE TO THROW THE BALL."

"Wonderful. How many players do we want on a side? Ten's a good round number."

"NO, NINE."

"Why nine?"

"THE LAST TIME I TRIED PUTTING 10 ON A TEAM IT DIDN'T WORK OUT."

And so it went until, lo, baseball was born. And it was good. (Next week: Intelligent Design and the U.S. Tax Code)

SUNDAY OCTOBER 23, 2005
1 p.m.
NBC
NASCAR Racing
 Just past the halfway point in the season ending 10-race Chase for the Nextel Cup brings the contenders to Martinsville Speedway in Virginia for the Subway 500. Two wrecks recently at Talladega damaged Jimmie Johnson's championship hopes, so he'd like nothing more than a repeat of his Subway ride last year when he bested a pack of challengers after a restart with seven laps to go. One of them was Rusty Wallace, who has won seven times here.

6:05 p.m.
SHOWTIME
Movie: Dick Tracy
 Warren Beatty was the perfect choice as do-gooder and comic-strip legend Dick Tracy in this visually arresting 1990 film. The intrepid detective finds his life complicated by his one true love, Tess (Glenn Headly), a sexy lounge singer (Madonna) and an orphan known only as The Kid (Charlie Korsmo). The film features an all-star cast of bad guys, including Al Pacino, Dustin Hoffman, Paul Sorvino, Charles Durning and William Forsythe.

8 p.m.
ABC
Extreme Makeover: Home Edition
 Randy Travis' "Four Walls" is the unofficial theme song of the "Elcano Family" episode, in which the team fixes up a 100-year-old farmhouse that's fallen into disrepair since the father of the family was killed in an accident. Travis sings at a scholarship fundraiser for the two children, who enjoy a week at a Disney park with their mom while the house is being worked on.

8 p.m.
NBC
The West Wing
 With the questions from Babish (Oliver Platt) about the shuttle leak coming fast and furiously, it occurs to Toby (Richard Schiff) that he should get himself an attorney. Josh (Brad Whitford) realizes the Santos campaign could use some more seasoned personnel, which means hard decisions ahead. Jimmy Smits, Allison Janney and John Spencer also star in the new episode "Here Today."

8 p.m.
WB
Charmed
 Billie (Kaley Cuoco) blows the "Halliwell" sisters' cover by using her powers to help an innocent, which attracts the attention of Agent Murphy (guest star Brandon Quinn) of Homeland Security. A spell leads to an unexpected ending for Phoebe and Dex's (Alyssa Milano, Jason Lewis) overnight trip. Later, Leo (Brian Krause) and the Charmed Ones reassume their old identities and team up with Murphy in the new episode "Rewitched."

9 p.m.
ABC
Desperate Housewives
 Susan (Teri Hatcher) gets a visit from her agent (guest star Wallace Shawn, "My Dinner With Andre") in the new episode "They Asked Me Why I Believe in You." Lynette (Felicity Huffman) is forced into bar-hopping with her boss (Joely Fisher). The police remain suspicious about Rex's death. Gaby (Eva Longoria) officially hires lawyer David Bradley (guest star Adrian Pasdar) to represent Carlos (Ricardo Antonio Chavira).

Movie: The Negotiator
 For "Law & Order" fans who have been missing assistant prosecutor Serena Southerlyn, here she is -- well, here's the actress who played her, Elisabeth Rohm -- on the other side of the "law and order" equation. She plays an FBI agent who's the go-to gal for hostage situations -- in this case, the hijacking of a bus and the takeover of a hospital. Chandra West and Taylor Anne Reid also star in this new thriller.

9 p.m.
NBC
Law & Order: Criminal Intent
 A nun who worked with child prostitutes is killed in her church, and Goren and Eames (Vincent D'Onofrio, Kathryn Erbe) suspect a young man (guest star Cuban Link) looking to avenge his brother, disabled as the result of a racially motivated attack. Another nun (guest star Susan Misner) could hold the key to cracking the case, however -- if the detectives can get her to talk. Courtney B. Movie: Watermarks

At the turn of the last century, Austria's athletic clubs were closed to Jews. The Jews of Vienna responded by starting their own in 1909. By the 1930s, teams from this club, Hakoah Vienna, were making their mark in a variety of sports. The one featured in this moving documentary is swimming -- specifically, the women's swim team, whose members reunite at their old pool, share their memories and take to the water together once more.

Roush Racing: Driver X

NASCAR team owner Jack Roush was doing a reality show before reality TV was cool. Now he's ready for prime time. For 20 years, Roush has held what he calls a "gong show" -- after the infamous TV amateur hour -- to find new drivers. This new series follows the latest incarnation of that process, in which 23 men and two women vie for a spot on Roush's Craftsman Truck Series team.

NFL Football

What looked at the season's start to be a battle featuring two of the NFL's top young quarterbacks tonight in Atlanta has turned into a one-man show. And that man, Falcons field general Michael Vick, is capable of putting on some show, what with his ability to run and fire bullets downfield. The Jets' defense will have to deal with him, while their offense tries to keep pace without its QB, Chad Pennington, who's done for the year with a bum shoulder.

Out of Practice

Ben (Christopher Gorcham) is having a hard problem getting some kind of a social life in "The Heartbreak Kid." The problem? Mom. Hiding from the dating world, Lydia (Stockard Channing) is taking up all of her son's free time. So in order to force her to socialize with anyone other than him, Ben "breaks up" with his mother.

Baton Rouge Bus Boycott

The 1955-56 bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala., is considered a seminal event in the civil rights movement. It wasn't the first such boycott, however. Two years earlier, the black residents of Baton Rouge, La., had boycotted their city's bus system for eight days. This new half-hour special tells the story of that boycott and the lessons it provided for the organizers of the Montgomery action.

Movie: The Last Weekend

Director Billy Wilder and producer Charles Brackett pulled no punches in their 1945 screenplay about an alcoholic writer (Ray Milland) on a massive weekend bender. Milland responded with a fearless performance that won him an Academy Award as best actor and lifted him into the ranks of the heavyweight thespians. Wilder and Brackett also won Oscars for the screenplay and direction, while the film itself was named best picture.

NHL Hockey

The Pittsburgh Penguins won their most important contest in years, and the season hadn't even begun yet. Their Ping-Pong ball popped up last in the summer draft lottery, awarding them the right to pick Sidney Crosby, who is projected as the NHL's next great superstar. Along with the still-great Mario Lemieux, the 18-year-old Crosby leads a dynamic Pens offense, which tonight faces a stiff test in stalwart Florida Panthers goaltender Roberto Luongo.

It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown

Linus stakes out a spot in the pumpkin patch hoping to catch a glimpse of the Great Pumpkin. While he continues his annual vigil, Charlie Brown discovers stones in his trick-or-treat bag, Lucy becomes maternal, and Snoopy gets moonstruck. Created by Charles M. Schulz, the special features the music of Vince Guaraldi.

DISNEY

Movie: Tower of Terror

Steve Guttenberg stars in this 1997 mystery, inspired by a Walt Disney World attraction, as a present-day journalist intrigued by an event that occurred decades before at a deluxe Hollywood hotel. With the aid of his niece (Kristen Dunst), he learns what happened on Halloween night when the building was struck by lightning and the occupants of an elevator disappeared without a trace. Nia Peeples costars.

Movie: The Curse of Inca Gold

Rory (Alexis Bledel) is about to turn 21, and both she and Lorelai (Lauren Graham) are unhappy because they're on the outs and can't celebrate as they'd always thought they would. That doesn't mean there won't be a celebration, though; Emily (Kelly Bishop) is going all-out planning a party. Richard (Edward Herrmann) urges Lorelai to help him get Rory to return to college in the new episode "Twenty-One Is the Loneliest Number."

Frontline/World

The new episode "The Curse of Inca Gold" goes inside the battle for control of a gold mine in Peru that's considered the world's richest. Reporter Lowell Bergman uncovers a secret battle for control of the mine, which was won by an American company. He also investigates claims from the locals that the company, Newmont Mining, is not living up to its vow to operate by the environmental and ethical standards of its home country.

Movie: Mississippi Burning

Based on true events, director Alan Parker's powerful 1988 drama of 1960s racial unrest in the South boasts superb performances by Gene Hackman and Willem Dafoe. They're cast as FBI agents reluctantly teamed to probe the mysterious disappearances of three civil rights workers. The mind-sets and methods of the two investigators prove vastly different. Frances McDormand, Brad Dourif and R. Lee Ermye costar.

Still Standing

Ben Savage ("Boy Meets World") guest stars as Bill's (Mark Ady) new boss, Seth, a young go-getter with all kinds of new ideas that mean more work. Things ease up for Bill, however, after Seth visits the Millers and bonds with Brian (Taylor Ball) over video games. He offers to lighten Bill's load if he can hang with Brian. It's a great arrangement -- until Brian misbehaves and is forbidden to see Seth. Jami Gertz also stars in "Still the Boss."

One Tree Hill

The punk-pop band Fall Out Boy performs at a costume ball at the TJC in the new episode "An Attempt to Tip the Scales." Haley (Bethany Joy Lenz) hopes for a chance to win Nathan (James Lafferty) back, while Brooke (Sophia Bush) sees an opportunity to get closer to Lucas (Chad Michael Murray). Peyton (Hilarie Burton) tries to adjust to having a new mom. Dan (Paul Johansson) gives Deb (Barbara Alyn Woods) an ultimatum, with surprising results.

8:30 p.m.

CBS

Yes, Dear

Jimmy and Christine (Mike O'Malley, Liza Snyder) are out of Greg and Kim's (Anthony Clark, Jean Louisa Kelly) guest house and in their own place, but it seems as if nothing has changed, as they're still at Greg and Kim's all the time. Christine overhears their complaints and decides she and Jimmy need to make some new friends. Once her sister and brother-in-law are no longer around so much, Kim realizes she misses them in "A Little Breathing Room."

9 p.m.

DISCOVERY

MythBusters

In the new episode "Confederate Rocket," the Mythbusters tackle the rumor that the South had a secret weapon -- specifically, a long-range missile -- during the Civil War. Long-range might be a long shot, but hosts Jamie Hyneman and Adam Savage demonstrate that short-range missile technology was definitely around in the 1860s -- by building such a rocket.

9 p.m.

FOOD

Behind the Bash

Giada De Laurentiis ("Everyday Italian") takes viewers on an insider's tour of how large-scale parties are put together -- with emphasis on the food, of course -- in this new series. Featured are such events as big weddings, high-roller gatherings in Las Vegas and movie premiere parties. In the series premiere, she goes behind the scenes of a post-Grammy Awards celebration.

This Town, That World

Editor's Note: For years, Floyd County Times founder and former publisher Norman Allen wrote a weekly column that looked at Floyd County through his eyes. His columns are being reprinted due to request.

Tragedy has struck at the Jenny Wiley State Park boat dock on Dewey Lake. All the ducks are dead, save one lonely drake.

The ducks came to the lake, flying north with their wild kind, one spring, several years ago. A few were captured and their wings were clipped. They were fed at the dock, a year or so passed, and the wild ones were no longer wild. Autumn and spring, their brothers flew over, stopped briefly, but the ducks at the lake, had found quiet haven, and they resisted the impulse to take again to the skyways. The flock multiplied, and the ducks became one of the fascinations of the dock area.

Norman Allen

This spring, the usual hatch came off, and the little ones waddled into the water and followed the mother ducks. But they survived only a few days. Dock attendants were mystified as the ducklings died. Then the older ducks began dying, till only one was left at the dock. Two drakes were taken to Terry Boat Dock, several miles down the lake, and they are yet living; but not a female remains.

Now, the fellows at the dock think they know what happened. Greens of the nearby golf course were sprayed to kill a troublesome pest. A variety of bugs got a dose of the poison and fell into the dock area, where the ducks gobbled them up.

So, it is believed, silent death came to the ducks. They had been spared the lethal blast of the hunter, but death has a way of coming to all that's living, in many ways and guises.

LOCAL BOY MAKES GOOD BAITS

If the artificial fishing lures Burns Jarrell is making at Cridersville, Ohio, catch on elsewhere as well as they have back home, in Floyd county, he may wind up in the bait manufacturing business in a big way.

Sporting goods stores hereabouts have been buying the former Floyd man's product rather freely, this season, and Burns' Baits have caught on with the fisherman, as well as with the fish.

The former resident of the Allen vicinity, a disabled World War II veteran, moved to Ohio soon after the end of the war. Designing and manufacturing fishing lures, friends say, came as he

Heritage and Traditions

by REBECCA RATLIFF

Freshmen in Ms. Slocum's English Class recently were able to experience a unique way of integrating a writing assignment. While completing an assignment involving researching family trees, conducting an interview with a family member and writing poetry students were asked to find out about heritage and traditions from their relatives. During an interview with my grandmother I learned more about a tradition I was already somewhat familiar with - Quilting. Ms. Slocum had asked students to invite speakers to the classroom so on September 19, 2005, Clara Ratliff (my grandmother) and Sue Reynolds (my great aunt) visited Ms. Slocum's 4th period English class to demonstrate the art of quilting by hand.

The presenters brought samples of quilting projects they had done in the past to show to the students. They also brought the items needed to show how to quilt. Mrs. Ratliff showed how to layer the material and then place it in the quilting hoop. Once this was done she began to demonstrate how to quilt using a between (quilting needle) and thimble. After a few minutes of demonstration, Mrs. Ratliff asked if anyone would like to try their hand at quilting. After an initial moment of silence, two students eagerly volunteered - Billy Adkins and Billy Akers. According to Sue Reynolds, Billy Adkins did quite well for his first try, making small, neat stitches, Billy Akers had a little trouble at first but ended up doing well with a little help and with making larger stitches.

Also trying their own hand at quilting were Casey Tackett and Lakeisha Lantz. Mrs. Ratliff passed around two quilts showing the difference in stitches, from neat and small to larger, looser stitches. Mrs. Reynolds also showed the difference between hand stitching and machine stitching on an appliqué used as a part of a top. "You can make it prettier by doing it by hand and you can make it more detailed," Sue Reynolds said.

They also passed around a quilting book that showed different patterns ranging from complex to simple.

Everyone enjoyed themselves and seemed to learn a little from the presentation. Some of the students who didn't try the stitching, asked questions about the materials and seemed interested in trying it on their own.

Also as part of this same project Ms. Slocum invited to the English classes Thomas Hardwick, of Betsy Layne, and Meredith Slone, of Hi Hat.

Mr. Hardwick discussed with the classes the importance of studying one's genealogy and the settling of the Appalachian region, as well as the history of the community of Betsy Layne.

Mr. Slone, a dulcimer maker and player, brought with him his dulcimers and demonstrated to the students how to play a dulcimer. Students were invited to join him in playing the double dulcimer, known as a "courting dulcimer," as it was used to bring dating couples close together. He entertained the classes with traditional ballads like, "Barbara Allen" and humorous songs like, "Devil and the Farmer's Wife."

During the course of the visits and the research, students were given the assignment to write a poem using the information they had learned from their research.

MOVIES FROM THE BLACK LAGOON

'Bruce Lee: A Warrior's Journey'

by TOM DOTY
 STAFF WRITER

In the summer of 1973, my friends and I came home with black eyes and a tall tale about taking out a street gang. Truth was our wounds were self-inflicted, though entirely by accident.

We had spent that summer watching "Enter the Dragon" every chance we could get and had decided to fashion a pair of "nunchucks" to use like Lee did in that film, where he and those two pieces of wood, joined by a chain, took out 50 extras in about 1.3 minutes. Our nunchucks were not as flashy as Lee's and consisted of a swatch of clothes-line nailed to two lopsided pieces of wood. We each turns twirling our homemade weapon around and glorifying in the swoosh it made as it cut through the air, which always ended with a hollow thud as one hunk of wood would come undone and sail into the nearest bystander.

Tom Doty
 Staff Writer

We decided to save up for a real pair we could share and spent the rest of the season rewatching the film, not knowing that our hero would die that same summer and would never complete his next film, "Game of Death."

Five years later, some footage would be assembled from that flick with new stuff and foisted on us like it was the real deal. In 1978, Robert Clouse ("Enter the Dragon") was handed 10 minutes of fight footage for Lee's final film and asked to build a movie around it. The result was awful, with a double used for Lee (actually Yuen Biao, who has made some good films since) and the entire story changed.

Lee was not involved in cobbling together that disaster and our dream of seeing Lee's last work, as it was meant to be shown, was abandoned — until now.

Fans of kung-fu film legend Bruce Lee can rejoice with this documentary, which also showcases all of the footage Lee shot for "Game of Death." This film offers fans a chance to see what Lee actually shot and it adds up to three excellently choreographed fight sequences.

The plot is classic stuff, with Lee and four other fighters blackmailed by mobsters into entering a pagoda which hides a treasure. Their job is to get to the fifth floor but there is one hiccup — each floor is guarded by a fighting expert who uses a different style.

The film that was shot and completed follows Lee and two compatriots as they get to the third floor. The guys on the first two floors were never shot but they apparently took out two of the adventurers. Lee lets the other two guys go first in these bouts but must join in to take out each opponent in the end.

Love and compassion in maximum security

by BOB KENNINGTON

"CHICKEN SOUP FOR THE PRISONER'S SOUL"

My 18-year career in substance-abuse treatment had been one of my many rewards. This work has provided me with the opportunity to see lives transformed as people overcome their addictions, convert apathy into empathy and develop a sense of love and compassion for others.

In the summer of 1992, James, one of the residents participating in a prison-based, substance-abuse treatment program, was diagnosed with cancer of the lymph nodes. As his condition worsened, he was transferred from the treatment unit to the prison infirmary to live his final days in seclusion. There he received the necessary medical services for his terminal condition. I went to the infirmary regularly to visit James, provide support and determine his needs. He was reluctant to ask for anything specific, but he was always appreciative of anything I gave him. On many visits, I would deliver various soft drinks, coffee, chips or cookies donated by residents from our program.

At his request, James came escorted from the infirmary to the treatment unit and stayed an hour or so visiting with his friends in the program. The residents rallied around him and made every attempt to cheer him up — some told jokes, others gave him a poem or drawing, a cup of coffee or just a genuine smile. As he departed, they all lined up to give him a hug and offer words of encouragement. He always left the unit smiling and waving goodbye. As his condition worsened, James couldn't walk because of the swelling in his feet and legs, but he still visited his friends. I wondered which visit would be his final farewell.

In July, Darrell, who was a new graduate of our program, approached the staff and made an unusual request. He asked for permission to sit with James in the infirmary to provide support and ease the fear of dying alone in prison. Our warden granted this special permission so Darrell could be with James for several hours each day. Although James became weaker, and death was knocking on his door, Darrell was there for him every day, giving hope and inspiration to live.

Darrell spent his evenings and nights doing everything possible to make James more comfortable. James couldn't read or write any longer, so Darrell read to him, wrote letters and made phone calls on his behalf. He bathed and shaved him, fed him, wrapped his swollen feet with bandages and lifted him up when the nurse brought his medicine. Near the end, James lost control of his bladder and bowel functions. Darrell was always there to patiently clean him up and change his bedclothes and sheets, to make it less humiliating for him. Darrell took special care of his

'I'm going to sue you!'

There is an old saying I hear quite often that goes, "Time flies when you are having fun." This is certainly true for me. When I got to thinking about something I wanted to share with you today, I suddenly realized that it had happened over 25 years ago. Back then, I had a unique experience as a public speaker that I have never had before or since. I had been invited to be the motivational kick-off speaker for the annual convention of the Southwest Bowling Proprietors, and the convention was being held in Little Rock, Ark. These were the folks who own bowling alleys in Arkansas and several surrounding states. Most I would say, were from Texas. My talk went great and I had a lot of fun, and I was invited to attend the banquet later that evening. The speaker was going to be Dr. Gerald Fisher, educator by profession but also a great after-dinner humor speaker. Since I had heard Gerald speak on several occasions and knew a little about him, the program chairman asked if I would be willing to introduce him, since he had never met him. I gladly accepted. That evening when it came time for the featured speaker, the program chairman got up and said, "To be honest, I don't know anything about our speaker for our banquet, but there is a fellow out in the audience who does, and I'm going to ask him to introduce Dr. Fisher." That was neat. Never happened before or since. That was a long time ago, but I still remember one of the stories Gerald told that evening. He said there was a family with several small children shopping in a grocery store. One of the children, a boy about 7 years of age, wandered off and was checking things out about two aisles away. About this same time an elderly gentleman was also shopping and did not see this young boy who had walked up behind him. When he turned around to move on, he accidentally knocked this lad down. Realizing what he had done, he quickly leaned down and said, "I'm so sorry." To this, the kid replied, "Sorry H_ _ _ I'm going to sue you." We all laughed, but unfortunately this was the sign of the times and would become more so in the years to come. A good and humorous example of this happened some time back out in the state of California. The staff of the Pacific Palisades High School voted unanimously to record the following message on the school's answering machine because they wanted to implement a policy requiring students and parents to be responsible for their children's absences and missing homework. This came about because the school and teachers were being sued by parents who wanted their children's failing grades changed to passing grades though those children were absent 15 to 30 times during the semester and did not complete enough school work to pass their classes. Again, this is the actual answering message for the school: "Hello! You have reached the automatic answering service of your school. In order to assist you in connecting the right staff person, please listen to all your options before making a selection. To lie about why your child is absent, press 1. To make excuses for why your child did not do his work, press 2. To complain about what we do, press 3. To swear at staff members, press 4. To ask why you didn't get information that was already enclosed in your newsletter and several flyers mailed to you, press 5. If you want us to raise your child, press 6. If you want to reach out and touch, slap or hit someone, press 7. To request another teacher for the third time this year, press 8. To complain about bus transportation, press 9. To complain about school lunches, press 0." And here is the way the message ends: "If you realize this is the real world and your child must be accountable and responsible for his/her own behavior, classwork, homework and that it's not the teacher's fault for your child's lack of effort, hang up and have a nice day!"

When I read this thing, I chuckled a couple of times, but I also realize that the education of our children is serious business. In most cases, most people who will read this can see right through the motives of the parents who had filed the lawsuit. When we fail at something, what is the first thing we usually want to do? Transfer or fix the blame somewhere else, right? I am a parent and a grandparent and I care about the quality of education we have in our nation's schools, especially our public schools because I am helping to pay the bill. The truth is, schools and teachers need our help. We will only have better schools when parents take responsibility for their children's discipline and behavior and prepare them to learn in their formative years. It must be a team effort. Lagoon

Finally they make it to the fifth floor to confront a 7-foot-5 giant, played by basketball legend Kareem Abdul Jabbar, who makes short work of Lee's companions. The fight that ensues is clearly one of Lee's best and the sight of a 5-foot, 7-inch man destroying a seven-and-a-half-foot giant looks better than any CGI fight scene committed to celluloid. It's the David-and-Goliath standoff of the century, with Lee actually appearing to be in trouble until he finds his opponent's weakness. Great stuff here and a clear indication that Lee was about to reinvent the kung-fu cycle while it was still in its infancy. What makes this film work is the 45-minute documentary that precedes it. Here you learn that Lee was as much a student of philosophy as the martial arts. Great attention is given to his style of fighting, which Lee called "no style." His jeet kune do, or "the way of the intercepting fist," eschewed studied moves and instead focused on turning the opponent's attack against itself. This material complements the "Game of Death" footage, which shows Lee using his opponents' moves against them, all the while stressing that flexibility gives him an advantage over studied moves and routine styles of self-defense. Nowhere is this more clear than when he takes on an opponent who uses wooden sticks. Lee points out that the switch he is carrying is flexible and thus a better weapon, which he promptly displays by opening a cut over the guy's forehead. The opponent doesn't like that and whips out some nunchucks, only to find that Lee has also brought a custom made set of chucks which he then employs with his customary style, which included making odd noises as Lee believed that this practice unnerved his opponents. The footage from the film also shows Lee had developed a strong sense of comic timing and that his character in the film would be very loose and even a little goofy. Had Lee not died it may well been him that merged kung-fu with comedy instead of Jackie Chan. Lee continues to remain a cultural icon. On Sept. 13, it was announced that the city of Mostar, in Sarajevo, which consists of three oppositional groups (Muslims, Croats and Serbs), had agreed to erect a statue of Lee in their city square because all three groups respected him equally. sought something to do to while away the time. Jarrell makes a fly-rod popper which, these who have used it say, is the equal of the late, lamented "Old Skipper." He makes all kinds of plugs, casting and spinning size, too; and for a friend will do a king-size job for souvenir purposes, such as the foot-long Lazy Ike which Olin Elliott, of Martin, has hanging in the jaw of a big bass which he caught and had mounted. But perhaps the best-known of his casting-rod lures hereabouts, is what is—properly or not—known as a Wiggle Jig. This creation is reminiscent of a doll-fly with a spinner at the front. Does it catch fish? Steve Stout of Martin, reportedly caught 90 smallmouth, trolling a Tennessee lake with it. The Wiggle Jig business must be good. One Floyd County angler bought several dozen of these at one time—and yours truly hasn't been to the store yet. WE'LL NEVER KNOW Bob Francis writes from Florida to say the fishing is good in Sarasota Bay, suggests I come on down—then on second thought, recalling my luck, suggests maybe the fish would strike better if I just stayed home. GEE—THANKS, SHACK! It's news, we've always been told, when man bites dog. That makes the lone birthday card we received, belonging to the news category. The card is from the excellent newspaperman, Nevyle Shackleford, who saw the item in this column, last week, about our advancing years, and wrote: "What was seen before, the mirror may not have been very satisfactory to the editor; but readers are of a different opinion. Excellent news coverage and reporting; interesting, entertaining and informative columns; good make-up; provocative, advertising and other features, all add up to a very satisfying newspaper. Happy Birthday, Floyd County Times. May your tribe increase."

Tom and Ray answer a 'flood' of questions

by TOM and RAY MAGLIOZZI

CLICK & CLACK
Talk Cars

TOM: Since the two big hurricanes, we've had a flood (ha ha) of questions about flooded cars. So we thought we'd try to answer all of the most common questions at once:

Q: How do you know if a car you're buying has flood damage?
RAY: Well, there's the obvious stuff: Fish in the back seat. A lobster trap hanging off the headrest. A bathtub ring at the level of the inside door handles. You sit in the driver's seat and your butt gets wet.

TOM: Assuming none of those obvious signs is present, you might see mineral deposits or discoloration on the seats, seat belts or door panels. There might be droplets of moisture on the inside of the instrument cluster, warped or misshapen door panels (if they're made of fiberboard), or an owner's manual that looks like it fell into a bathtub.

RAY: In the trunk or engine compartment, you might find mud, sticks or other debris. And inside, a heavy aroma of Hai Karate aftershave or Lysol is a telltale sign that someone's trying to cover up a festering mold or odor problem.

TOM: But most likely, if a "professional" is trying to pass off a flooded car on the used-car market, he will have cleaned up all those things, and perhaps even replaced the seats and carpet. It will be very difficult for the average buyer — or even the average mechanic — to be able to tell that the car was flooded.

RAY: So, our best advice is to simply avoid used cars that have come from flooded areas. "Sure," you say. "How do I do that?" Well, the current title of the car provides no guarantee that the car is clean. Unfortunately, flooded and salvaged cars can be re-registered in other states with clean titles, and then sold without disclosing the damage. That's called title washing.

TOM: So, your best bet is to use a service called Car Fax. We've put up a link to it on our Web site, www.cartalk.com. It's now offering a free service that will check the ZIP code in which a car was last registered, and will let you know if it was registered in one of the flooded areas. You need the Vehicle Identification Number, or VIN, to get a report.

RAY: While it's not absolutely perfect (it's possible that someone with a car registered elsewhere could have driven to New Orleans and been there for a flood), that's about the best advice you have to spot a potentially flooded car before you buy.

Q: Is a flooded car necessarily junk?

TOM: Pretty much, yes. There are some obvious problems, as you can imagine. If water gains access to one of the cylinders, either through the air intake or the exhaust system, that cylinder can fill with water. Then, when the engine is started, that cylinder will hydro-lock (water can't be compressed like air can), and everything connected to the cylinder will break or bend.

RAY: But even if the water is pushed out safely before the car is started, that cylinder has already had water sitting in it for a week. Those cylinder walls and rings are probably already rusted. So that engine's going to burn oil like crazy and run unevenly.

TOM: Water can get into the transmission through the transmission-fluid dipstick hole. If that happens, you'll be lubricating the transmission with one part transmission fluid and two parts water, or something like that. So kiss the transmission goodbye, too.

RAY: Inside the car, lots of manufacturers now put electronic components — like computers — under the seats, or under the dashboard. So even if only a modest amount of water was sloshing around the floor of the car, you might need a new computer — or several new computers, depending on your car — which can cost $1,000 each.

TOM: If the water gets a little higher up, it can wreak havoc on electronic seat controls, electric windows, ignition switches and air bags. More and more cars have seat-belt pre-tensioners now, which use pyrotechnic devices housed where the seat belt attaches to the bottom of the door pillar. Pucker up and kiss those goodbye, too.

RAY: And then there's the whole issue of mold. When a car is filled with water, and then closed up and baked in the sun for a week, you've got mold-spore heaven. That's not only a health hazard, it's nearly impossible to fix.

TOM: So, we'd say if water got any farther than the floor of the car, it's junk.

Q: What if I already own a car that's been flooded?

RAY: Time to look at the '06 Camrys. You have our sincere condolences. Your best bet is to have your insurance company declare it totaled and pay you for it. If you're not insured, and not in a position to replace it, you can try to keep driving it. But not before you perform some crucial tasks.

TOM: First, you have to get the water out of it. You have to remove and either clean or replace the seats, the carpet, the interior panels and possibly even the headliner. Bleach has to be used to attempt to kill the mold spores — the sooner, the better.

RAY: You have to remove all the spark plugs and then turn the engine over to purge any water that might have gotten into the cylinders. If water comes out, that cylinder is a candidate for corrosion and failure. You also have to drain the motor oil and transmission fluid, in case water has gotten in and diluted those crucial lubricants.

TOM: Then you can start the car and start looking for electronic gremlins. And hope the mold and the smell don't get too bad.

RAY: So basically, if a car is flooded and it's your only transportation, you might be able to use it. But it's bound to cause you problems. Think about it. Insurance companies HATE to spend money. If they could fix a car and put it back on the road, they do it in a New York minute. And even THEY won't bother fixing flooded cars.

TOM: So, if you absolutely have to keep a car that's been flooded, consider it a short-term solution. And if you're shopping for a car, buyer beware.

The staff of BSCTC's new adult education program includes Ron Johnson, Kim Hatfield Neeley, Stephanie Blair Conn, Kay Hale Ross, Lynn Hall and Lisa Pelfrey.

BSCTC launches adult education program

PRESTONSBURG — Kay Hale Ross, manager of adult education for Big Sandy Community and Technical College, announced this week that the Adult Education program at the Prestonsburg Campus of BSCTC is now fully staffed and ready for business. A full staff of instructors and an assistant have been hired to bring this new program to residents of Floyd County.

Floyd County citizens who need developmental work in reading, math, GED prep or other individual academic areas can contact the program by calling (606) 886-3863, ext. 67219 or 67937. Callers who live in an area served by local Pike County phone numbers can also call (606) 218-2060 and dial the same extensions. Callers will be assisted in a friendly, discrete and timely manner.

Kay Hale Ross is the manager for the Adult Education Program at the Prestonsburg Campus of BSCTC. She earned a BS degree from Morehead State University in education. She and her husband Johnnie Ross have lived in Floyd County all of her life. She has more than five years experience in adult education and is eager to launch this new program.

Instructor Lynn Hall is a native of Dorton. She is a graduate of BSCTC and also earned a bachelor's degree from Pikeville College. She has four years of experience in adult education.

Instructor Kim Hatfield Neeley holds a bachelor's degree from Pikeville College, graduating Magna Cum Laude in 1983 with a degree in mathematics. She has taught various math classes in Pike County and in Mingo, West Virginia. She is currently working on her Master of Arts degree in secondary guidance counseling through Morehead State University.

Instructor Ron Johnson is a 1979 graduate of Wheelwright High School. He earned a bachelor's degree from Alice Lloyd College. He has three years of experience in adult education and nine years of experience as a high school teacher. His pre-college years were spent working as a coal miner.

Instructor Stephanie Blair Conn is a native of Floyd County. She and her husband

Joey live, with their two children, at Auxier. She has an associate and bachelor's degree from Eastern Kentucky University. Her previous experience has been with the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service as a family and consumer sciences agent. She looks forward to working with students in the new Adult Education Program.

Lisa Pelfrey lives in Paintsville. She is the division assistant for the Adult Education Program. Lisa is a graduate of BSCTC and is currently working on her bachelor's degree in elementary education through Morehead State University.

The staff of the Adult Education Program will be working both on campus and off. They will have a work schedule that will be tailored to meet the needs of the students they serve. Classes will be scheduled in various places around the county where there is a need and resources to make it possible to teach. Anyone who has a need to upgrade basic skills prior to attending college, needs help with GED preparation or just wants to improve academic skills like reading and math, can call the Adult Education Center at the Prestonsburg Campus of BSCTC. Kay Ross and her staff are there to serve the public.

In Johnson County, adult education services may also be scheduled at the Mayo Campus in Paintsville by calling Jennifer Leedy at (606) 789-5321.

This is an introductory meeting led by Dr. Roger Jurich, medical director for the clinic. Refreshments will be served and door prizes given out. Space is limited - call 886-9888 today to register.

BSCTC holds fifth scholarship reception

PRESTONSBURG — Tears, hugs and thank-yous were the order of the day when scholarship recipients came together with scholarship donors for an evening of speeches, music and food at Big Sandy Community and Technical College.

The fifth annual Scholarship Reception was held Oct. 20 at the college. Scholarship recipients from all four BSCTC campuses and their families sat down to dinner with representatives from business and industry, the Big Sandy College Educational Foundation, Inc. Board of Directors, BSCTC Board of Directors and private citizens who have made it possible, through scholarships, for them to attend college.

The first speaker for the evening was Charles "Rusty" Justice, from J&H Enterprises, who had a story to tell about a faculty member who changed his life forever. Justice and Randall Taylor, both former students of John D. Sammons, had joined together earlier to establish a new endowed scholarship in the name of Professor Sammons and his wife, Connie.

Justice told the story of how Sammons recruited him, mentored him, encouraged him and motivated him to be more than he ever thought he could be. Justice and Taylor, in their efforts to give someone else the opportunities that had been given them, have raised money to endow this new scholarship.

The newest contributor to the John D. and Connie W. Sammons Scholarship is Central Appalachia Mining, Representing Terry Coleman, Central Appalachia Mining CEO, were BSCTC alumni Glen Ousley, Joe Tussey, Dennis Halbert and Chad Hunt, who made the presentation of a $50,000 pledge to the endowment. Accepting for the college was Professor Sammons.

Dennis Dorton spoke to the assembled audience about corporate responsibility to the community for supporting education. Dorton, representing Citizens National Bank, spoke about the importance of education to the economy and to the citizens served by businesses and corporations. He related his story of the years of service and sweat equity that Citizens National Bank had expended in Floyd, Johnson and Pike counties and his sense of duty to return to the community part of the financial rewards his corporation had been blessed with.

Dr. Chandra Varia came to the podium to talk about her perspective as a physician and citizen of Floyd County for more than 30 years. She told of her parents and the mission instilled in her at an early age to respect education and strive to alleviate poverty. She told of parents who taught her that books were precious and that the information found in them was the key to unlocking the mystery of success. She charged those assembled to make a commitment to help someone else as they went along their own path.

"If everyone in Floyd County helped just one person complete their education through a scholarship, poverty could be eliminated through education," Varia said.

Firm believers in education, Dr. Varia and her husband have provided scholarships to students for many years.

Charlie Sizemore, local bluegrass music legend and practicing attorney from Goodlettsville, Tenn., was the last donor to tell his story. Sizemore told of himself as a young man, scared of returning to school after 10 years on the road with Ralph Stanley and other bluegrass musicians and hesitant to meet the challenge posed by students younger than himself and teachers whom he was sure could see through his defenses. He told about professors who lifted him up, helped him to see who he was and let him know that he was a person of worth.

"I have attended a lot of school," Sizemore said. "I graduated from BSCTC, went on to the University of Kentucky then graduated from law school. I know a thing or two about college. But the best two years of my life were spent here in Prestonsburg, on this campus. This is where I learned that I could be whatever I wanted to be. This was where I first experienced success. I can never do enough to return what was given to me at Big Sandy Community and Technical College."

Scholarship recipients spoke about the life-changing impact a scholarship has on them and their families, Barbara Wagner, recipient of the N. O. Kimbler

■ OKLAHOMA CITY — A man got a prison term longer than prosecutors and defense attorneys had agreed to — all because of Larry Bird.

The lawyers reached a plea agreement for a 30-year term for a man accused of shooting with an intent to kill and robbery. But Eric James Torpy wanted his prison term to match Bird's basketball jersey number, 33.

"He said if he was going to go down, he was going to go down in Larry Bird's jersey," Oklahoma County District Judge Ray Elliott said Wednesday. "We accommodated his request and he was just as happy as he could be."

"I've never seen anything like this in 26 years in the courthouse. But, I know the DA is happy about it."

■ BLUFFTON, S.C. — A coffee-to-go is turning out to be a weapon of self defense.

Deputies in Jasper County say a would-be bandit got a cup of steaming java in the face when he tried to pull a carjacking.

The suspect tapped the window of the car Wednesday morning with a gun and motioned the driver to get out, Chief Deputy Roy Hughes said.

Instead, the driver slammed the car door on the man's legs, threw the hot coffee at him and wrestled him to the ground.

The driver and suspect struggled for the gun, but deputies say the bad guy got away. The investigation was ongoing.

■ ORMOND BEACH, Fla. — Was the pig a victim of a drive-by shooting?

That's one theory to explain how a bullet wound up in Diane Johnson's pork loin casserole. She said there was no mistaking the projectile's distinct shape in the pork loin she bought at a Publix grocery store.

All meat is scanned with a metal detector before reaching Publix shelves, said Dwaine Stevens, spokesman for the company in Florida.

It's not clear how the scanners missed the bullet — or how the bullet got in the pork loin in the first place.

Stevens said someone may have fired into a herd of grazing livestock.

According to the Wisconsin Pork Association, professional slaughterhouses don't shoot animals, for employee safety and meat quality concerns.

Johnson, 74, said she was satisfied with a $10 dollar refund and another fresh pork loin from Publix.

She said she didn't plan to sue because no one got hurt.

■ SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — A rare floating island in a pond here broke free during last weekend's storm and was beached in nearby backyard.

The 10,000 square-foot land mass had been floating in Island Pond, but last week's heavy rains shifted the island "over my fence, crushing it, and onto my property," said Andrew Renna.

"It remains impaled on the fence, roots out of the water," he said.

The island last tore free in 2001. It became lodged in a narrow cove and remained there for almost two years before it was towed back to its normal position.

The pond and the island are owned by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Springfield, which operates a neighboring high school. Diocese spokesman Mark Dupont said church officials are exploring their options, which include towing the island again.

"It worked the first time," he said.

Experts say there are only a few floating islands in North America.

■ MUNCIE, Ind. — Hospital officials say a January ice storm that kept thousands in the dark and without heat for days might have led to a baby boom in eastern Indiana.

"With no electricity and no heat, you have to stay warm somehow," said Jay County Hospital's nurse manager Lisa Craiger.

St. Vincent Randolph Hospital in Randolph County was up 40 births for early October over 2004, said Kathy Brookbank, director of patient care services.

Stephanie and Kevin Klinger's first child, J. Wesley, was born at Ball Memorial Hospital on Sept. 27 — a day when 10 babies were delivered at the hospital, compared to a daily average of less than five.

During the ice storm about nine months ago, the Klingers were without power for four days. They said they cooked in a cast-iron skillet over their fireplace and spent time under piles of blankets in a closed-off room filled with candles.

"(The ice storm) was like a free day, a bonus," Kevin Klinger said. "You always long for those days when you don't have anything to do."

■ ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The author of a new state law that allows felony charges against owners of dangerous dogs was hospitalized over the weekend — after his own dog attacked him.

Bob Schwartz, who also is Gov. Bill Richardson's crime adviser, was hospitalized at University of New Mexico Hospital on Sunday night with bites on both his arms, said Pahl Shipley, a spokesman for the governor.

The hospital declined to release Schwartz's condition, but Shipley said Schwartz is "going to be fine."

Schwartz has three dogs registered with the city: a boxer and two English bulldogs, said Denise Wilcox, who oversees Albuquerque's animal care centers.

Schwartz was instrumental in getting a law passed this year that would allow felony charges against owners of dogs deemed dangerous or potentially dangerous and that seriously injure or kill another animal or person.

The law was designed to make dog owners accountable, said Sen. Sue Wilson Beffort, who worked with Schwartz to pass the bill.

"But I guess when it happens in your own family, that's another story," she said. "That's tragic."

■ SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — The University of California campus here has worked hard to shed its party image.

Chancellor Henry T. Yang has cracked down on notorious Halloween bashes and publicized the five Nobel prizes the faculty have won during the last seven years.

Playboy magazine isn't exactly helping his efforts.

First, it designated UC Santa Barbara as one of the country's Top 10 Party Schools in its September issue. Now, the men's magazine is auditioning and photographing coeds for a feature called "Girls of the Top 10 Party Schools," which will run in its May 2006 issue.

"This is Playboy trading on an old reputation," Dean of Students Yonie Harris said Monday. "And I think it's an exploitative thing to do."

Playboy spokeswoman Theresa Hennessey defended the magazine's actions.

"We're not saying that just because a school is a party school doesn't mean it's not also a great place to get an education," she said.

About 30 bikini-clad girls auditioned Monday, and Hennessey said she expects 70 to 100 more were to be seen by Wednesday.

■ POCA, W.Va. — Bridesmaids get no respect.

At two weddings in Putnam County, bridesmaids returned to their dressing rooms after the ceremonies to find their purses had been stripped of money and credit cards.

In each case, a person came into the church just as the ceremony was set to begin Saturday, and asked where the bridesmaids were dressing, said State Police Trooper S.E. Wolfe.

Descriptions indicate two different people entered the churches in Poca and Hurricane.

Still, Wolfe believes the thefts are connected. Police have identified at least one possible suspect, he said.

Memorial Scholarship; Cheryl Legena May, recipient of the Ginger Burns Memorial scholarship and the Verne P. Horne Scholarship; John Slone, recipient of the Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company Scholarship; and Zelma Watson, recipient of the Big Sandy College Educational Foundation Scholarship, each told their stories. They spoke of financial hardship, family pride and their plans for a future including jobs with good pay, benefits and opportunities for growth and advancement.

"When you gave me the scholarship that allowed me to complete my education you not only helped me stay in school and finish a degree I want so much but you also affected the pharmacist that I will be someday, the community I will serve in and the family that I will raise," said John Slone. "You made it possible for me to help someone else in the future. For that I thank you."

Entertainment for the evening was provided by The Big Sandy Singers, directed by Laura Ford Hall. The group opened the reception with two musical presentations. At the end of the reception Susan Scott, one of The Big Sandy Singers and recipient of the Robert V. May Endowed Scholarship, rendered a version of "Wind Beneath My Wings."

Robert Bayes, chairman of the Big Sandy College Educational Board, closed the reception by offering thanks to the donors and congratulations to the recipients. He charged the group to continue to give the gift of scholarship and to dig deeper into their pockets so that another student will have the opportunity to say, "Thanks, you changed my life."

KHSAA board declines to recommend separating public, private sports

by MURRAY EVANS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON — A controversial measure that would separate the state's public and private high schools for postseason sports competition received a negative recommendation Friday.

The Kentucky High School Athletic Association's Board of Control voted 9-7, with one member abstaining, to send the proposal to the state Board of Education without a positive endorsement.

The state board meets again in December.

The full board's vote closely tracked a vote earlier Friday by the KHSAA's executive committee, which rejected the plan 9-8, with one member absent from the meeting.

KHSAA member schools voted Thursday 195-78, with two abstentions, to enact the measure, which needed a two-thirds' majority, or 184 votes, to pass.

If the Board of Education approves the proposal, it will go to the General Assembly for consideration.

Proponents said the measure will address competitive inequities caused by the fact that private schools can bring in students without consideration of geographic boundaries. Opponents argued that private schools are being unfairly targeted because of misinformation and unproven rumors of recruiting.

If enacted, the proposal would dramatically affect high school athletics in Kentucky, particularly the Sweet 16 basketball tournaments, which would no longer be for all comers. Kentucky is one of only three states to still offer a one-class state basketball tournament. Hawaii and Delaware are the others.

Of the 31 state championships offered last season by the KHSAA, 17 were won by private schools.

During the 2005 MSU Homecoming activities, three alumni were inducted into the Athletic Hall of Fame. MSU President Wayne D. Andrews, left, and Director of Athletics Brian Hutchinson, far right, posed for an official photo with the three that were members of three sports teams while on campus: Ed Wells (55) of Clearwater, Fla., track and field; Howard Wallen (74) of Versailles, Eagle basketball; and Mike Brumfield (93) of Louisville, golf. Wallen is a Johnson County native who coached basketball at three high schools, including Allen Central.

Three elected to MSU Athletic Hall of Fame

TIMES STAFF REPORT

MOREHEAD — Three individuals who made outstanding contributions to Morehead State University athletic programs were inducted into the MSU Athletic Hall of Fame during induction ceremonies held Friday, Oct. 14.

The newest members of the Hall of Fame are Mike Brumfield (golf), Howard Wallen (men's basketball) and Ed Wells (track).

Brumfield was the 1993 Ohio Valley Conference Golf Player of the Year and was the individual medalist at the 1993 OVC Golf Championships played at Spring House Golf Club in Nashville.

He had the top stroke average on the MSU squad as a senior and earned All-OVC honors in 1993.

Wallen was a three-year starter on the Eagle basketball team in a period when there was no freshmen eligibility. He earned All-OVC honors in 1971-72.

He still ranks 25th on MSU's all-time scoring list with 1,014 points and third on MSU's all-time assist list with 411 assists. He held the MSU career assists record from 1974 to 2003 and led the team in assists in all three of his varsity seasons.

Wallen, who came to MSU from Meade Memorial in Johnson County, coached at both Allen Central and Pikeville before becoming Superintendent of Pikeville Independent Schools. Wallen also coached in Garrard County.

Wells was captain of the 1955 MSU track and field team that won the OVC Championship. He was a top sprinter who competed in the 100-yard dash, 200-yard dash, 220-yard low hurdles and in relays. At MSU, he also lettered four years in football.

After leaving MSU, he became a national track and field official and has been named to the Track Hall of Fame in Florida.

The MSU championship track and field teams of 1955 and 1956 will also be recognized and honored at the ceremonies.

Layne calling in World Series

TIMES STAFF REPORT

Eastern Kentucky native Jerry Layne is one of six umpires working this year's Major League Baseball World Series. Layne, who was born in Pikeville, is calling in his first Fall Classic.

This year's World Series pits the Chicago White Sox against the Houston Astros. The Series opened last night in Chicago.

Twenty-eight-year veteran umpire Joe West was set to call the balls and strikes Saturday night in Game One of the World Series. West, working his third World Series and 13th post season series, will be joined by Derryl Cousins (Third WS) in his 11th post season assignment; Layne in his eighth post season assignment; Angel Hernandez (Second WS) in his 10th post season assignment. Gary Cederstrom in his sixth post season assignment, and Jeff Nelson also in his sixth post season assignment. Cederstrom and Nelson are

Belfry beats
Johnson Central
for region title

TIMES STAFF REPORT

BETSY LAYNE — Johnson Central made its first-ever appearance in the 15th Region Volleyball Tournament championship match Thursday night. Belfry, a regular in the 15th Region Tournament for several years now, made yet another appearance and captured another title. Belfry, which beat Allen Central Wednesday night in the tournament semifinals, handed Johnson Central in convincing fashion, winning 2-0 (25-12, 25-15).

Belfry trailed early on during each of the two games. Johnson Central earned the right to face Belfry in the title match after beating South Floyd in the regional semifinals.

'The human element in sport has always been a big part of the game'

by JIM LITKE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

The way things are going, umpires are in danger of becoming figureheads, stuck behind the plate to lend an air of authority more imagined than real, like the Queen of England at events of state, minus the tiara and jewelry.

Hemmed in by cameras on every side, they're being second-guessed more than ever before and losing the courage to make judgments stick without consultation or further review. Once a novelty, instant replay in sports is an increasingly annoying fact of life, like automated phone systems and car alarms, and after a rough week of playoffs and a World Series still to come, holding the line in baseball is going to be tougher than ever.

Tennis became the latest game to knuckle under, with officials from several tours announcing this week that an electronic line-calling system dubbed Hawk-Eye Officiating could be in place for a number of tournaments next year.

Every major sport except baseball and soccer now employs some form of replay. College football, in the second year of a so-called "experiment," has convinced nine of 11 conferences to go along. In reality, the only thing experimental is which machines and how many will be used, not whether replay will become a fixture.

Mike Pereira, director of officiating for the NFL and a former supervisor of college refs who consulted on the program said, "The best measure of its success is the amount of time it takes to confirm a correct call or overturn a wrong one and right now, they're averaging close to where we're at, about two minutes."

"That's pretty good," he added, "when you balance that against the five days of criticism that follow a blown call in any big game."

It's easy to say that from where Pereira sits. The latest version of replay in his league is in its seventh season, and after considerable time, expense and aggravation, many of the bugs have been ironed out. Effectively, though, with humans still making the final decision, all replay in the NFL has done is extend the controversy from the official on the field to the one in the replay booth. Through 74 games in the first five weeks, play was interrupted 86 times to review calls and 28 of those were overturned — roughly one in every three.

"There's no going back, at least not in our game, so technology is something officials can't be scared of," Pereira said. "It's up to them to train and work harder to meet that challenge. In that sense, I believe it's a positive and not a negative."

Baseball came to the opposite conclusion after a tough week. Maybe commissioner Bud Selig decided that an off-season of eye exercises wasn't going to make umpires as unblinking as the cameras that show the replays on the JumboTrons in the stadiums or TV sets across the country.

"I don't know how we could use it to improve the job that umpires do," Selig said. "The human element in sport has always been a big part of the game. I'm a football fan, too, and I hate instant replay in the NFL. Football games are taking four hours."

Playoff baseball games are already pushing the same envelope, but that's not the only reason Selig is insisting that judgments made by the officials on the field stand. That took some guts after the call by plate umpire Doug Eddings on a third strike in Game 2 of the ALCS between the White Sox and Angels, and a handful of less egregious misses by the crew working the NLCS between St. Louis and Houston.

Then again, the commissioner also knows that replay has come up for discussion several times during the general managers' meetings and was overwhelmingly rejected. People in his inner circle trot out the line about it "never being good news when umpires are the focus of the attention," but they know better.

Arguing about blown calls, like bonehead plays by hitters or fielders, is what makes the games interesting long after they're over.

Jeffery Maier leaning over the wall in Yankee Stadium is as much a part of baseball lore as the grounder that skittered between Bill Buckner's legs, no matter how much cleaner the outcomes would have been if both were granted a do-over. Troublesome as Eddings' mistake seems, plenty of the blame should be shared by Angels catcher Josh Paul for failing to tag Chicago's A.J. Pierzynski at home plate, something most kids learn in Little League.

Maybe that explains why there's still very little sentiment inside the game for instant replay even now, despite a growing drumbeat from fans and the media. Even St. Louis manager Tony La Russa, already tossed from one game in the NLCS for protesting too loudly, doesn't want to see the umpires lose any more of their authority.

"A lot of the emotion they fire back at players is because of the scrutiny they get, and they're just human, too," he said. "There's replays all over the place. But they are held accountable for everything."

Layne

also calling in their first World Series.

Several of Layne's family members still live in Floyd County. Layne currently resides in Winter Haven, Fla.

Layne became a member of the Major League staff in 1989. He has worked the All-Star Game (1994, 2001), Division Series (1995, 98, 2001, 02) and League Championship Series (1997, 99). The Eastern Kentucky native umpired the Opening Day 1999 game in Monterrey, Mexico between the San Diego Padres and Colorado Rockies. In addition, he was behind the plate for Fernando Valenzuela's no-hitter and worked the plate when Barry Bonds hit his 71st home run of the season in 2001.

Throughout the course of the 2005 World Series, all umpires are wearing a special patch with the initials "C.W." inscribed. This tribute will honor former Major League umpire Charlie Williams who passed away on Sept. 12. Williams, who served on the Major League staff from 1982 to 2001, became the first African-American umpire to work behind home plate in a World Series game during Game 4 of the 1993 Fall Classic. Diana Williams, Mr. Williams' wife of 26 years, will be in attendance at U.S. Cellular Field for Game 1 of the World Series as a special guest of Major League Baseball.

No. 3 Virginia Tech 28, Maryland 9

by DAVID GINSBURG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — He's got the quickness of a wide receiver, the moves of a running back and an arm that can fling the ball with pinpoint accuracy.

Marcus Vick put all those attributes to good use Thursday night in helping third-ranked Virginia Tech to a 28-9 victory over Maryland.

Vick accounted for 344 yards in offense, including a career-high 133 rushing, and the unbeaten Hokies pulled away in the second half to a 28-9 victory Thursday night.

Virginia Tech's unyielding defense was a factor, but Vick was the main reason the Hokies were able to repel an upset-minded Maryland team that trailed by only four at halftime.

"He certainly made a difference. There's no doubt about that," Tech coach Frank Beamer said.

The Hokies (7-0, 4-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) committed four turnovers, but scored 21 straight points after halftime to keep alive their hope of playing for the national championship in January.

"They have speed, and when they put the ball in Vick's hands, he can run," Maryland coach Ralph Friedgen said. "I thought the major difference in the two teams was they had a lot more speed. Vick has great acceleration, and does not need a lot of room to run."

The Terrapins (4-3, 2-2) came in with a three-game winning streak and designs on avenging a 55-6 defeat to the Hokies last November. It seemed possible until Maryland finally got tired of chasing the elusive Vick.

"Our defense was on the field too long, and they began to wear down as the game went on," Friedgen said.

Although Vick threw a career-high three interceptions — all in the third quarter — the little brother of Atlanta Falcons star Michael Vick averaged 8.3 yards per carry and completed 14 of 23 passes for 211 yards.

"I think what you have is a dynamic quarterback that has the ability to beat you running or beat you throwing," Beamer said. "Pretty good guy. Pretty good quarterback."

After Vick's third interception, Beamer didn't scold him. Instead, he said, "You're going to win this for us."

Vick followed the pickoffs by directing drives of 99 and 37 yards, giving the Hokies an insurmountable 28-3 lead.

That was more than enough support for a defense that forced two turnovers and kept the Terrapins out of the end zone until Sam Hollenbach threw a 10-yard touchdown pass to Derrick Fenner with 2:16 to go.

Hollenbach was 14-of-30 for 158 yards and two interceptions, and Lance Ball had 75 yards rushing on 15 attempts.

The Terrapins wore their alternate black jerseys for the second time this season, hoping for the same result as the last time: a 45-33 victory over Virginia on Oct. 1.

The ploy didn't work, yet Maryland could take solace in putting forth a decent performance in front of a national television audience and a crowd of 54,838, the second-largest in school history.

"I think we played hard and had the opportunities, but we didn't take advantage of them," Friedgen said.

The Hokies scored on their first possession of the third quarter to take a 14-3 lead. A 38-yard run by Vick got Tech to the Maryland 31, and five plays later Mike Imoh scored from the 2.

"I was really big. It set the tempo for the second half," Vick said. "It quieted the crowd down and just got our guys going."

After the Terrapins failed to capitalize on Vick's third interception, a punt left Virginia Tech on its own 1. Ten plays later, Imoh ran in from the 10 to make it 21-3 with 10:45 left.

Branden Ore added a 4-yard TD run with 6:47 to go.

The Terrapins trailed 7-3 at halftime, but charged off the field with their helmets held high, an emotional charge off the field probably had a lot to do with the fact they were down 41-3 at intermission in last year's game.

In the second half, however, the Hokies outgained Maryland 275-96.

GAME OF THE WEEK: Lewis using blueprint against Steelers

by JOE KAY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Marvin Lewis can put the final touch on his grand rebuilding by beating the team that gave him the blueprint.

For the first time in 15 years, the Cincinnati Bengals have a chance to take control of their division and join the ranks of NFL teams with legitimate playoff aspirations. And they know it.

Their game Sunday against the defending AFC North champion Pittsburgh Steelers represents their grandest moment in perhaps the last 15 years — certainly the biggest during Lewis' three seasons of resurrecting the Bengals.

"Oh, man, it's like Hollywood out here," said receiver Chad Johnson, who promises a Pittsburgh-flavored touchdown celebration. "We have to keep it going. The buzz and the electricity around here is crazy. It's been a long time since people have felt this way about our team."

Fifteen years, to be precise. The Bengals (5-1) haven't had a winning record or made the playoffs since 1990, one of the longest streaks of futility in NFL history.

Lewis, who got more clout than his predecessors, has the Bengals contending in his third season. He's done it by modeling them after Pittsburgh and Baltimore, where he coached defense.

"Everything we've done has been put together that way," Lewis said. "The way we practice physically, and the tempo, the spirit. It's that way because that's how you have to play the game. You can't go out and pitty-pat and play the game on Sunday. You've got to hit people."

"And that's what it's all about. That's been our mind-set all the way through, to bring players here who can handle that challenge and are up to that challenge."

Few teams are better at meeting such challenges than the Steelers (3-2), who have built their reputation on winning tough games in tough places. They've won their last nine road games since a 30-13 loss in Baltimore on Sept. 19 last season, the game in which then-rookie Ben Roethlisberger took over at quarterback after Tommy Maddox got hurt.

Roethlisberger sat out a 23-17 overtime loss to Jacksonville last Sunday because of an injured left knee, but is expected to play in Cincinnati. Roethlisberger has won all of his eight starts on the road. "It's a must-win game for us," said Roethlisberger, who won both of his games against the Bengals last season. "It's our biggest game of the year, and we have to go out and play like it is."

The Bengals hope to make it one of those changing-of-the-guard moments. A victory would give them a 2 1/2-game lead over the Steelers, who don't want to fall so far behind so deep into the season.

The Steelers haven't lost consecutive games since the middle of the 2003 season. They can't afford to do it now.

"We're definitely going to see where we're at right now," Steelers linebacker James Farrior said. "They're the division leaders, so we've got to come in and be prepared to play a hard, tough game."

They'll have to do it without their customary home-away-from-home advantage in Cincinnati. During the Bengals' many lean years, tens of thousands of Steelers fans would make the five-hour drive, wave their yellow Terrible Towels and turn Cinergy Field and Paul Brown Stadium into close approximations of Three Rivers Stadium and Heinz Field.

The Bengals had to practice a silent snap count during the week leading up to the game because they knew the Pittsburgh fans would be so loud in their stadium — the ultimate indignity.

This time, it will be different. Back-on-the-bandwagon Bengals fans bought most of the tickets for this game, giving them a rare majority over the black-and-yellow.

"It's going to be a lot of fun to have them in our place," quarterback Carson Palmer said.

Which side does more cheering will likely come down to whether the Bengals can stop Pittsburgh's famed running attack — Cincinnati gives up 4.9 yards per rush — and which of the two young quarterbacks has the better day.

For the last four weeks, Roethlisberger and Palmer have been Nos. 1 and 2 atop the NFL passer ratings. It'll be only the second time since 1990 that two quarterbacks had 100-plus passer ratings in a game so late in the season.

Palmer has tied Peyton Manning's NFL record of nine consecutive games with a rating of 100 or more. The Steelers were the last team to hold him under triple digits, making him look average in their 19-14 win at Paul Brown Stadium last Nov. 21.

"I have a lot more experience, so I feel like I'm a different quarterback since that game," Palmer said.

So are the Bengals, who went to two Super Bowls in the 1980s, then went down in the dumps. A win would prove they're back.

"They're not the Cincinnati Bengals of old," Steelers guard Alan Faneca said.

County to allow security pat-downs at Bengals stadium

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Hamilton County officials and the Cincinnati Bengals have reached an agreement allowing the team to pat down fans entering Paul Brown Stadium on Sunday.

Earlier this month, county commissioners objected when the Bengals announced a plan to hire a private security firm to conduct the upper-body pat downs and bill the county $60,000 for the cost.

County Prosecutor Joe Detert has said using taxpayer money to finance the pat-downs presents questions about their legality. The Bengals lease the stadium from the county.

But on Tuesday, Hamilton County Common Pleas Court Judge Beth Myers approved a joint agreement between the county and the team that allows the security measure to proceed.

However, the deal leaves open the possibility that the Bengals may seek taxpayer reimbursement. The team agreed to pay for Sunday's added security pending further rulings by the court.

Pat-down stations at the perimeter of the stadium are expected to open at 9 a.m., with the gates opening at 11 a.m., earlier than normal because of potentially longer lines. The Bengals host the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The NFL began requiring its teams to conduct the pat-downs earlier this month, not because of a specific threat but to provide extra security.

Thirty of the league's 32 teams conduct such searches, according to Hamilton County Chief Assistant Prosecutor Jim Harper. Public officials in Tampa, Fla., have raised objections similar to those in Cincinnati.

But the Bengals said among the other 31 NFL teams, only Chicago does not have pat-downs.

Edwards named Assistant Director of Athletics/SWA at MSU

TIMES STAFF REPORT

MOREHEAD — LaTanya Edwards, who has an extensive background in project management, marketing and sales, and collegiate athletics, and who has worked for two Fortune 500 Companies, has been named Assistant Director of Athletics and Senior Woman Administrator at Morehead State University. She started her new position Friday.

Edwards will have extensive administrative duties, including helping with the coordination of MSU's marketing and promotions efforts. She'll also be involved with the Morehead State Student-Athlete Advisory Committee and be responsible for the oversight of the athletic academic program. She'll also handle much of the institutional and conference reporting for MSU.

Edwards is a 1999 graduate of the University of Kentucky with a bachelor's degree in integrated strategic communication. Most recently, Edwards was a Project Manager on the 2005 Ford Mustang for General Fasteners Corporation, a Fortune 500 Company in Livonia, Mich. A four-year letterwinner on the University of Kentucky volleyball team, Edwards also has experience with highly-respected companies IBM (a Fortune 500 Company) and Lexmark International and has taught at the prestigious Detroit Business Institute.

"We are extremely excited to hire someone with the qualifications, credentials, skills and experience LaTanya has," said Morehead State Director of Athletics Brian Hutchinson. "Her experience in leadership and management roles set her apart, and we are excited about her joining our athletic department staff."

"I am thrilled to be starting this position at Morehead State. I kind of feel like I am coming home because I have always wanted to get back into college athletics ever since I was a part of that experience in college," said Edwards.

"I am looking forward to working with the staff in the athletic department, and I think Brian has done a wonderful job in moving MSU athletics in the right direction. I feel like my experience in the marketing, sales and project management fields will benefit MSU as we continue to increase the support and recognition of the athletic department. I also feel like my experience will be beneficial to the Student-Athlete Advisory Committee."

Edwards comes to Morehead after spending the 2004-2005 year as a Project Manager for the 2005 Ford Mustang for General Fasteners Corporation. As project manager, Edwards coordinated a staff of four in completing a project plan for the Mustang convertible top. She oversaw an administrative assistant, purchasing agent, a quality specialist and an automotive engineer. Edwards coordinated weekly meetings and ensured that General Fasteners completed its project in a timely manner.

Prior to that, Edwards was a Project Coordinator for IBM's General Motors Webhosting Account. She was instrumental in helping the IBM contract negotiations staff sign a three-year contract with GM Webhosting Division. Edwards also maintained and planned the office work schedules and projects and helped to ensure progress was being made on the overall project based on monthly meetings.

Smith: Morris to be back 'at some point' for Kentucky

Tubby Smith
by MURRAY EVANS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON — The question has hung over Kentucky basketball since Randolph Morris decided to return to the Wildcats after an ill-fated attempt at entering the NBA draft: Will the erstwhile sophomore center be eligible, and if so, when?

During media day Thursday, Kentucky coach Tubby Smith — who has remained mostly mum about Morris' situation while the NCAA considers his eligibility status — said he expected the 6-foot-10 Morris will play for the Wildcats during the upcoming season.

"We fully expect him to be back at some point when the NCAA finishes their job," Smith said. "Everything has been documented and processed on our side, and we'll wait for the NCAA to finalize their decision."

Morris did not attend media day. Athletics Department spokesman Scott Stricklin said Morris would answer questions about his situation after the NCAA announces its decision about his eligibility.

Morris started 33 of 34 games last season, averaging 8.8 points and 4.2 rebounds per game but also leading the team in fouls. Kentucky finished 28-6, and Morris played his two best games of the season in the NCAA tournament, in a win over Cincinnati and a double-overtime loss to Michigan State in a regional final.

Afterward, Morris returned to his hometown of Atlanta and from there informed Smith via fax that he planned to enter his name in the NBA draft. When the June 21 deadline for Morris to withdraw from the draft passed, it was assumed Morris had played his final game for the Wildcats.

Morris, however, was not one of the 60 players taken in the June 28 draft. A little-used NCAA rule would allow Morris to return to Kentucky, if he reimbursed all the expenses of any NBA workouts in which he participated, he asked Kentucky Athletics Director Mitch Barnhart for reinstatement within 30 days of the draft and Barnhart agreed to take him back.

But that rule wouldn't apply if Morris had an agreement with an agent. Sports agency SFX issued a statement from Morris on June 21, but Morris' father, Ralph, has said his son had not hired an agent.

The NCAA has granted Kentucky a waiver allowing Morris to practice with the team, but as of now, he won't be able to play when the Wildcats open their season Nov. 13 at home against South Dakota State in the Guardians Classic.

If Morris is ruled ineligible — or if he has to serve a suspension of undetermined length — then one of two juniors, 7-3 Shagari Alleyne or 7-0 Lukasz Obrzut, probably would start at center for the Wildcats.

Both Obrzut and Alleyne said they'd be up to the challenge — "We can handle the pressure," Obrzut said — but added they hope Morris is able to play for the Wildcats soon.

"When Randolph comes back, we're going to be a better team with him," Alleyne said. "When he's not here, we'll just hold up the slack until he comes back."

The future of 7-2 freshman center Jared Carter also depends on Morris' situation, Smith said. If Morris can play, Kentucky likely would redshirt Carter, a Scott County High School product. But the Wildcats would need the depth Carter could provide if Morris can't play. Smith praised Carter on Thursday, saying "it's going to be hard to sit him."

Morris' teammates said they welcomed him back, taking the same attitude they did last season when then-freshman guard Joe Crawford temporarily left the team, then returned, after a dispute with Smith about playing time.

"We didn't all agree on how he did it," Crawford said of Morris. "But he's young. Even though he's almost 7 feet tall, he's a young person. He made mistakes. We all make mistakes."

Added Alleyne: "When he came back, it was like he never left."

Smith praised Morris' attitude and demeanor since his return to Kentucky and acknowledged Morris' importance as the Wildcats attempt to reach the Final Four for the first time since 1998, when they won the last of their seven NCAA titles. But he also said Morris wasn't indispensable.

"We never depend on one guy, but Randolph is a very important part of reaching our goals of an SEC championship and a national championship," Smith said. "We've found ways to play without him, and we'll do it again. It is really a great opportunity for a lot of other guys to flourish and grow."

UK Coach Tubby Smith expects to have Randolph Morris back for the Wildcats at some point during the upcoming 2005-06 season.

Cardinals hope potential pays off

Rick Pitino
by MALCOLM C. KNOX
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE — Almost a week after Louisville's first practice, coach Rick Pitino had one word he kept repeating at media day Thursday.

"It's a little better in some areas than expected," he said. "In other areas, it's not quite as good, but this team definitely has potential to be a good basketball team."

He talked about 7-foot freshman center Jonathan Huffman.

"Jonathan Huffman is probably the slowest in development of his body of all the freshmen, but he probably has the most potential," Pitino said.

There it was again.

The Cardinals lost four players to the professional ranks from last year's Final Four team. Senior guard Taquan Dean, who averaged 14 points per game last season, is the only returning player whose starts numbered in double digits last season. Center David Padgett and forward Juan Palacios, both expected to contribute this season, are nursing injuries. Including Padgett, a transfer from Kansas, the Cardinals have seven new players. And this season will be Louisville's first in the Big East, maybe the toughest basketball conference in the country.

"Who's better?" Pitino asked. "Louisville or Notre Dame? Louisville, West Virginia? Villanova or Syracuse? Providence or Marquette? No one knows."

Pitino also has two assistant coaches in their first year under him.

"The staff has great potential as well as the young players," he said.

Though he's surrounded by inexperience, Pitino loves his team's talent. He called this freshman class his second-best behind his 1991 Kentucky class that included Rodrick Rhodes, Jared Prickett, Tony Delk and Walter McCarty.

Freshman point guard Andre McGee is the farthest along of the freshmen and would start if the season began today, Pitino said.

McGee and the other new players are getting an accelerated education in Cardinal basketball because of the players who are injured.

"I pretty much look at those guys being hurt as a blessing," Dean said. "We get the young guys some repetitions and con-

So how good does Dean believe the Cardinals can be when everyone's healthy?

"Dangerous," he said. "I just call (Padgett) the best kept secret. Nobody knows what he can do, but when you see him on that basketball court, he's gonna raise a lot of eyebrows."

Pitino expected Padgett to be in practice next week and to play in Louisville's first exhibition game Nov. 2 against Bellarmine. He doesn't expect Palacios to be back in the rotation until January.

Even then, Dean will still be the lone proven upperclassman.

"If the talent is in the junior, senior class, you're going to have an outstanding ball club," Pitino said. "If the talent is spread out, then you have what I keep saying: potential. And that's what you don't know until the end of the year."

Pitino not sure he will get to see a new Louisville arena

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE — Louisville basketball coach Rick Pitino criticized the Kentucky legislature Thursday when he was asked about a new proposed arena, a project that has not drawn overwhelming approval.

"I'm hoping to live a long time, but I don't think it will be during my tenure," Pitino said. "I'm not dying, not going anywhere, but I just know how this state works. I know the way the legislature works, and I think they haggle too much, they're not visionary, they don't understand the fruits of what it can do for a city and a state."

The cost of a new arena is estimated at $299 million. Business donations are at $44 million, officials said. Louisville government leaders have pledged one-third of the arena costs. Gov. Ernie Fletcher wants to commit $75 million in state support that would come from bonds.

Some legislators have not expressed support for the project because they don't believe their home regions would see any economic benefit from a downtown Louisville arena. Some say there are more pressing needs, like education, health care, Medicaid and highways.

Pitino thinks Kentucky legislators could take a lesson from neighboring states.

"Unfortunately, sometimes we're a little parochial in our thinking, and we don't understand how much Nashville does for the state of Tennessee and how much Indianapolis does for the state of Indiana," he said at the Cardinals' media day Thursday. "We don't think along those lines. We think more along the lines of blue and red, so we're limited in our scope."

He was asked at the University of Kentucky from 1989 to 1997.

SHOE DOESN'T FIT?

— THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JONESBORO, Ark. — Adidas said it will not require Arkansas State basketball player Jerry Nichols to wear its shoes, but hopes that he will accept an offer to look through its footwear collection in an attempt to find a suitable product.

Nichols said he suffered an injury in Adidas shoes and wants to wear Nike shoes while playing. Arkansas State has a contract with Adidas, and athletic director Dean Lee told Nichols he had to wear the footwear. Nichols has skipped practices since Monday.

Lee confirmed that Adidas had granted a waiver of its contract as it applied to Nichols, and Nichols only.

Louisville women's basketball earns preseason ranking

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

LOUISVILLE — The University of Louisville women's basketball team was ranked 18th in the Women's Basketball News Service preseason poll. The Cardinals are one of five teams from the BIG EAST Conference ranked in the WBNS preseason poll. Rutgers is ranked second, DePaul was ranked 11th and Notre Dame was ranked 15th.

"It is great to receive preseason recognition," said head coach Tom Colley. "One of our goals is to be the first Louisville team to break into the Top 25. The ranking falls in line with our goal to move into the poll and prove that we are an up and coming Top 25 team. I am sure this is exciting for the players and puts our goal in sight for them but it is my job to let them know they were picked for their potential and it is up to them to deem themselves worthy of being in the Top 25."

Along with the 18th ranking the Cardinals were picked 32nd in the CBSSportsLine.com Top 64 teams. Nine BIG EAST teams were ranked in the nation's top 64 teams by the publication. Along with the BIG EAST teams Cardinal opponents are also listed among the 64 teams, Texas Tech is ranked eighth, UC Santa Barbara was ranked 50th and Western Kentucky was ranked 51st.

Junior forward Jazz Covington was named a third team preseason All-American by Lindy's Basketball. Covington was named a WBCA/Kodak Honorable Mention All-American at the end of last season. She finished her sophomore year averaging 17.8 points and 8.1 rebounds. Rutgers' Cappie Pondexter and DePaul's Khara Smith were named to the second team while Notre Dame's Megan Duffy joined Covington on the third team.
