Hall attends clerks' conference

FRANKFORT - The 2006 Circuit Clerks Fall Conference focused on court procedures that involve mental health issues such as involuntary hospitalization and treatment for alcohol and drug abuse. Douglas Ray Hall, circuit court clerk for Floyd County, participated in the conference, which was hosted by the Administrative Office of the Courts in Louisville Nov. 15-17

The circuit clerks also attended sessions on office management techniques, statewide case manage-Ment standards and quality assurance in court record keeping. Representatives from Trust for Life gave a presentation on the ongoing charitable campaign sponsored by the KACCC to promote organ donation throughout Kentucky.

Guest speaker Charlotte Wethington spoke about her efforts to pass Kentucky House Bill 192, which is known as the Casey Wethington Act for Substance Abuse Intervention. Wethington, who lost her son to a heroin gerdose, was the driving force behind the law that enables parents to place adult children into treatment against their will.

"The Office of Circuit ourt Clerk is often called pon to handle cases surrounding mental health issues," said Clark County Circuit Clerk David N. Hunt, who is also president of the Kentucky Association of Circuit Court Clerks. "We wanted to ensure that circuit clerks know how to handle

Victims face long road in eBay case

by ALEX SMITH STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG - Now that the eBay theft case has ended with Deborah Wallen and Gora Wicker receiving prison sentences Nov. 22, the attention now turns to the victims and the compensation they will receive.

As part of their plea agreements,

Wallen and Wicker are each required to make restitution of $10,000 within 90 days of their sentencing date. Both will also be required to make monthly payments upon their release from prison, at a rate of $200 for a period of five years.

Altogether, the women will be responsible for paying out $44,000 to the victims, far less than the estimated $300,000 worth of items stolen from the 17 victims in the case.

Victims in the case were brought in by the Prestonsburg Police Department to describe their items and then to look through a catalogue that was made of all the stolen items. If something belonged to a victim, it was released back to them.

Prestonsburg Police policy says the department must wait 30 days after the case ends before they can dispose of unclaimed possessions, but the PPD plans to keep everything until they cannot find anymore victims.

Big Sandy ADD wanting to bring major airline to area

by JESSICA HALE STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG -Hopes of bringing a regional airport to the area are still weighing on the minds of Big Sandy Area Development District members, as discussed at their monthly board meeting on Thursday.

Randall Wiedemann, with R.A. Wiedemann and Associates Inc., was present to update the board concerning his company's progress in finding out if a regional airport would be feasible for the area. Members of the board have been talking for some time about trying to get an airport in the area to potentially bring in regional airport. The study will address things such as travel destinations, socioeconomic trends, tourism and airport costs and benefits. Wiedemann also discussed the need to be able to provide any potential airline with an incentive package, a marketing plan of sorts which would provide them a reason to choose the area.

The airport would either be located in Pike County or at Big Sandy. A video documentary will be made in order to acclimate airlines to the area and its people. Wiedemann says he thinks once the airlines see what the area has to offer, they will want to get in on all the opportunities. The study is expected to be completed in approximately one year and is expected to provide a better look into what needs to take.

Kentucky Power says it's ready for winter weather

by ALEX SMITH STAFF WRITER

As the calendar rolls into December with temperatures remaining mild, the last thing on many people's minds is their winter heating bills. Kentucky Power, a unit of American Electric Power, provides electricity to approximately 175,000 customers in 22 counties in Eastern Kentucky.

The predominant source of electricity in the area comes from coal, something the state has an abundance of. Ron Robinson, the corporate communications manager for Kentucky Power, said Kentucky in general enjoys the lowest rates in the country. paying two to three cents less per kilowatt hour of electricity.

"Because we have an abundance of it, we don't have the volatility in coal as in gas,"

Robinson said.

A kilowatt is a measure of available power, usually measured in kilowatt-hours. A kilowatt-hour is a measure of continuous electric current flow used to measure energy. A kilowatt-hour of energy on average costs between 2 and 20 cents depending on where, when and whom it is purchased from.

High winds throughout the area on Friday made for great flag weather. According to the National Weather Service, some areas in Eastern Kentucky experienced wind gusts up to 60 mph as a strong cold front moved across the coalfields. Numerous cities had downed trees and high winds also caused some structural damage in West Liberty.

Report: Methane leak, safety violations sparked deadly blast

by SAMIRA JAFARI ASSOCIATED PRESS

PIKEVILLE - Safety violations including use of an openflame torch near a leaky methane seal sparked a deadly underground explosion at an Eastern Kentucky mine in May, authorities said Friday.

The protective seal was "poorly constructed" and failed to meet federal guidelines, according to a report from the state Office of Mine Safety and Licensing. Five miners died in the May 20 explosion at the Kentucky Darby No. 1 Mine in Harlan County.

The torch ignited the leaking methane as two of the victims mine foreman Amon Brock and maintenance worker Jimmy Lee - were repairing metal straps that intersected the top of the seal, the report said. The straps were used as underground roof supports.

"In this case, what was done was clearly against regulations," said Susan Bush, commissioner of the state Department for Natural Resources.

The report said Brock and Lee also shouldn't have been allowed to use a torch at that site because ventilation current passed through the area on its way to the surface.

Roof straps must be removed before a seal is built, and they are frequently cut away using hand tools that don't create sparks, officials said.

Bush said state mine safety officials would use the informa-

Mine where 5 died is abandoned

The Associated Press

HARLAN - The coal mine where five miners were killed in an explosion last spring in Eastern Kentucky has been sealed and the mine abandoned, federal regulators said

Kentucky Darby Mine No. 1 in Harlan County never resumed operations after the fatal blast May 20. State and federal officials are still investigating.

The company owes $5,110 for 41 violations not related the explosion, according to federal Mine Safety and Mealth Administration records. Neither the state nor MSHA has issued violations directly lated to the explosion.

The mine was sealed about Nov. 10. according to Amy Louviere, an MSHA spokeswoman.

The company's phone number was disconnected, and coowner Ralph Napier did not the Kentucky Environmental and Public Protection Cabinet, said Kentucky assesses fines against those holding a mine's license, not against the mine company.

Louviere said in a statement that MSHA "pursues uncollected fines from operators of abandoned mines no differently than from operators of active ones."

"When a mine shuts down, the controlling company is still responsible for the abandoned mine's outstanding debt," she said. "In the case of Darby, as with any operation, all uncontested fines that have not been paid within 180 days of issuance will be referred to the Treasury Department for collection.

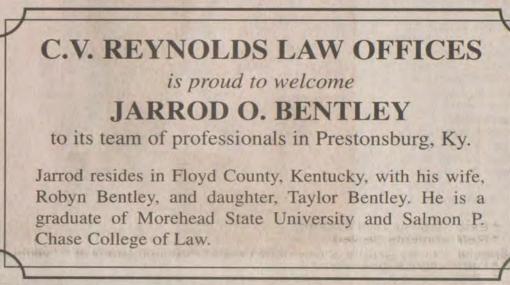

Tony Oppegard, a former state and federal mine safety official, said an abandoned Darby "could be a roadblock" to collecting federal fines quickly. Regulators may have to take additional legal steps to make an individual, rather than a company, liable for penalties.

Oppegard is one of the lawyers representing four of the families of the Darby victims

President Bush signed sweeping mine-safety legislation in June that, among other things, gives the secretary of labor new powers to shut down operators who fail to pay fines.

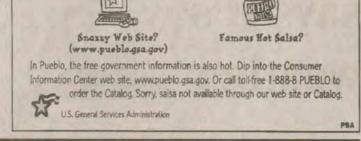

After Kentucky's Office of Mine Safety and Licensing issues its findings on the May 20 blast, penalties will be decided by the Mine Safety Review Commission.

State and federal regulators denied that the abandonment could hamper efforts to collect lines, as some mine safety advocates suggested.

The general misconception about heating bills is that you will pay ahead of time for electricity you have yet to use, when in fact you pay only for what you use. You can expect to pay more per month when you leave your lights on all day, have poor insulation in your home or set the thermostat at 80 degrees for two months straight. Typically, people use more energy depending on what kind of winter it is; the colder it is, the higher the bills. Robinson said AEP does not look at prices but at how much energy will customers could potentially use. When it comes to customer energy usage, AEP is traditionally a winter peaking company, meaning they have to make sure that at any one time there is plenty of electricity available for all of their customers, something Robinson forecasts should not be a problem this winter.

Eastern Kentucky winter, with use," Robinson said. "If you variances that can change here and there," Robinson said.

The Kentucky Public Service Commission determines what prices AEP will charge each year, with this year's rates going up from $0.0592 to $0.0686 per kilo-watt-hour. The boost was finalized in March 2006 after a yearlong case study to decide if the hike was necessary.

"People ask will my bills "We're expecting a typical go up? It depends on what you use less total hours this year than last year, you won't notice change."

Forty-four percent of Kentuckians heat their homes with natural gas, with prices expected to be one-third lower than they were during last years winter heating season. The Kentucky Public Service Commission reports natural gas prices will be lower for the first time in four years.

"Natural gas production from the Gulf Coast, which supplies most of Kentucky's gas, is back to normal following last year's hurricane's, and the market has stabilized," said PSC Chairman Mark David Goss.

Electrical companies generally offer basic heat saving tips which will help lower heating bills, including keeping the thermostat set to 68 degrees, making sure your home in well insulated, and making sure air vents are unblocked. Robinson tion in the report "to prevent similar occurrences at this mine and other mines."

The Darby mine was sealed off and abandoned Nov. 10, federal authorities have said.

State officials released their report to the public Friday, a day after giving it to the families.

Tony Oppegard, an attorney representing four of the victims' families, said the miners' widows still had unanswered questions about who ordered Brock and Lee to repair the straps.

"It didn't bring any peace at all. I think it was very difficult for all of them," Oppegard said Friday. "There was anger and sadness.

According to witness testimony, Brock said repairs had to be made to the area before a federal inspector from the U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration, who was inspecting the mine the week of the explosion, returned to the site two days later.

MSHA, which is conducting its own investigation into the blast, declined the state's formal request to interview the inspector, Stanley Sturgill, and obtain copies of his notes pertaining to the mine, state officials said. The federal agency also required Kentucky investigators to submit questions in writing to Sturgill.

State officials on Friday said they received Sturgill's responses late Thursday and haven't had time to review them.

Guest view Learn from hiring mistakes

Kentuckians now know the truth. After 17 months of testimony taken from at least 150 witnesses, the report of the special grand jury investigating the Fletcher administration's Merit System hiring practices recently was released. We've read the report, and it does not paint a pretty picture of what took place.

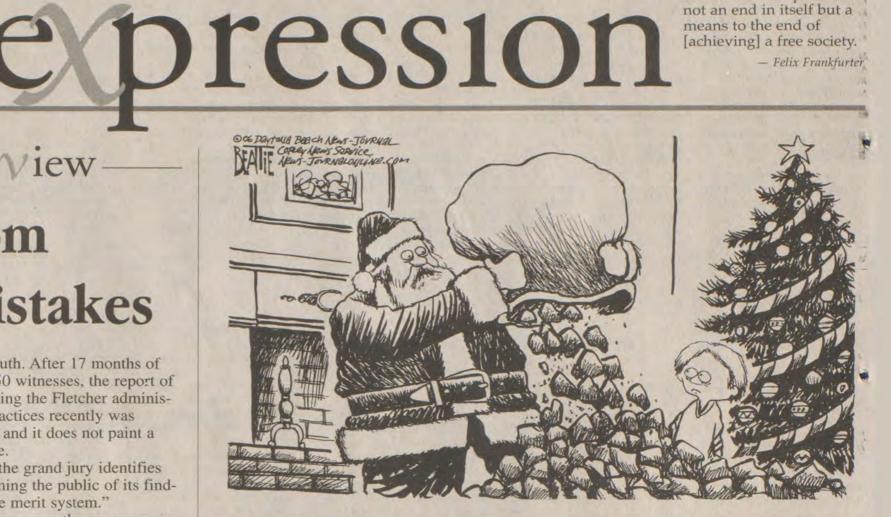

In the report's first sentence, the grand jury identifies its important goal: one of informing the public of its findings of "widespread abuse of the merit system." Responsible, law-abiding citizens across the commonwealth should congratulate grand jurors for doing so.

Light now clearly shines on the truth of what took place and the laws that were broken through Gov. Ernie Fletcher's "Personnel Initiative." And this light shines regardless of all the pardons Fletcher extended to those indicted during the course of this investigation, the blanket amnesty he further extended everyone else in his administration who might have been indicted in the future, and his routine verbal crusade against the investigation, Attorney General Greg Stumbo and the grand jury itself.

To quote the document, "This report details a widespread and coordinated plan to violate merit hiring laws. This investigation was not about a few people here and there who made some mistakes as Gov. Ernie Fletcher has claimed. The Governor's Personnel Initiative was formulated at the highest level of state government and approved by Gov. Fletcher. Entire Cabinets and departments were tasked with carrying out various parts of this illegal plan. Senior administration officials were charged with the duty to give periodic reports regarding its status. Those who got in the way of the plan were fired or moved. The long-range goal was to implement this plan in all of the Executive Cabinets, and the groundwork had been laid for that to happen."

Gov. Fletcher publicly responded to the release of the report by saying it was full of the "same old stuff."

It appears more accurate to us that his administration - at least as far as this investigation has revealed - has been full of the same old stuff. The report reveals that the "Personnel Initiative" was crafted and implemented with the governor's involvement and approval to accomplish the same "good old boy" cronyism that he vowed he would eradicate from state government if elected when campaigning for office in 2003.

"I counted who is naughty or nice with a new electronic tabulation system. There's no paper trail, so I'm afraid you're out of luck."

The welfare reform miracle

This year marks the 10th anniversary of the most extraordinary cultural and policy shift in recent American life - the revolution wrought by President Clinton's signing of a welfare-reform bill in August 1996. Prowork reforms of welfare had been bubbling up from the states since the early 1990s, but the federal legislation completed a change in philosophy that rippled into the lives of single mothers, changing them dramatically for the better.

If the kind of social progress brought by welfare reform had been caused by a liberal policy, its architects would be enjoying Kennedy School sinecures. But the rebels who changed the welfare status quo were conservative intellectuals and officeholders. The only tribute to them is the facts, recounted in congressional testimony by the Heritage Foundation's Robert Rector, the intellectual godfather of reform, and in a new book, "Work Over Welfare, by Ron Haskins, a former staffer on a key congressional committee. Welfare caseloads have dropped 60 percent since the passage of welfare reform. Was that just the result of a strong economy? No. Caseloads didn't decline significantly in any of the eight periods of economic expansion from the 1950s to the mid-1990s. From 1953 to 1994, the number of families on welfare dropped in only five years, and two years in a row only once. By 2005, welfare caseloads had been declining for a stunning 11 straight years.

W ork requirements, and the message sent by reform that dependence is unacceptable, got former recipients into the work force. "From 1993 to 2000 the portion of single mothers who were employed grew from 58 percent to nearly 75 percent," Haskins writes. Among never-married mothers, the most disadvantaged group, employment grew by 50 percent. "Employment changes of this magnitude over such a short period for an entire demographic group are unprecedented in Census Bureau records," he adds.

If a mother is on welfare, it basically guarantees that she will be poor.

plummeting to 30 percent by 2001, when "the poverty rate for black children was at the lowest point in national histo-

Rector ry, writes. Welfare reform, then, has affected the lives of millions of people. If the 1999 poverty rate had still been at 1990 levels. there would have been another 4.2 million poor mothers and children. If the illegitimacy rate had continued at its pre-reform pace, another 1.4 million children would have been born out of wedlock. Welfare reform has created a fundamentally different and better dynamic in the nation's anti-poverty policy.

More worrisome is that the success of the 1996 law has relieved pressure on policymakers to keep states from backsliding on enforcing work requirements. And the ultimate reform in poverty policy won't come until government encourages marriage among the women who now become single mothers. If that seems a hopelessly ambitious cause, a little more than a decade ago people said the same about reforming welfare.

The settlement deal struck between Fletcher's lawyers and the attorney general's office months ago effectively shielded the governor from any legal consequences of his actions outlined in the report. That's the way the justice system often works for those at this level of power.

For those whose livelihoods were damaged by his and his administration's actions, we hope the public release of this report somehow provides a degree of redress.

Even more importantly, we hope the sunlight that has been cast on the political discrimination that took place in violation of Kentucky's merit hiring laws casts a long and enduring shadow. A shadow that will hold Fletcher, those remaining in his administration and others to follow him in the future never to let this happen again.

- beyond the beltway You're not hungry, just insecure

by DONALD KAUL MINUTEMAN MEDIA

Franklin Delano Roosevelt, on the eve of his nomination for president in 1932, said: "I see one-third of a nation ill-fed, ill-housed and illclad." Ever since, American presidents have promised to end hunger. None of them has.

Not John Kennedy with his plans cut short, not Lyndon Johnson who used them to build his own Great Society, not Ronald Reagan with his "a rising tide raises all boats" philosophy, not Bill Clinton, who felt everybody's pain. Until now. George W. Bush, who didn't even promise to end hunger, has done it anyway. And in time for the holidays.

In fact, mere days before Mr. Bush's Thanksgiving, Department of Agriculture issued its annual report on food availability and, lo and behold, no one was listed as "hungry." Take that, FDR!

It seems that the USDA had done away with the "hungry" category in its 2006 report because the word is an imprecise, non-scientific term. Instead, those who can't afford to put food on the table are now said to have "very low food security." This year, that group was even bigger than last year - 35 million, or 12 percent of the population. But no hunger.

Good for our side. Now if President Bush would only get to work on the ill-housed and ill-clad issues we could get on about the business of carving a place for him on Mt. Rushmore.

But if you're surprised that 35 million Americans have very low If she has a job, she will probably have more income, and her children will be better off. So, child poverty dropped every year between 1994 and 2000. In 1995, the black child poverty rate was a little higher (41.5 percent) than it had been in 1971 (40.4 percent). Welfare reform sent it

I know that we're the greatest country in the world just ask us - but there are certain minor areas in which we lag behind much of the industrialized world. I'm talking matters almost too trivial to mention: life expectancy, nutrition, housing, health services. education, employment.

The United Nations each year publishes a "human development" index, ranking countries according to the ability to provide their citizens a chance at a long and prosperous life.

It turns out that Norway, land of the steeply progressive income tax, is the place most likely to help you live long and well. Capitalistic America is no better than eighth, coming in behind Iceland, Australia, Ireland, Sweden, Canada and Japan. To which I can only say in rebuttal: "Our rich people are richer than your rich people and we don't make them pay taxes either. Ha, ha.'

If that doesn't make the Norwegians and the rest of those socialists emerald green with envy, nothing will.

Meanwhile, back in Washington, President Bush and the Democrats have already started making good on the promise to be bi-partisan.

Mr. Bush's fired off the first gesture by nominating a man who does not believe in the United Nations (John Bolton) to be our U.N. ambassador and a man who doesn't believe in contraception (Eric Keroack) to oversee federally funded planned parenthood programs. The appointments are in keeping with Bush's philosophy of putting incompetents (former FEMA head Michael Brown) and outright saboteurs (former Secretary of Energy and auto indus try shill Spencer Abraham) at the controls of government to demonstrate that government doesn't work

The Democrats who like government and think we should have more of it haven't contrived bi-partisan their answer yet; they've been too busy fight-

Nand ing among themselves. Pelosi's first move on becoming the presumptive Speaker of the House was to try to strong-arm Abscam scandal-tainted John Murtha of Pennsylvania, into the No. 2 House position.

Rep. Stenny Hoyer of Maryland, however, had his own ambitions for the job. In addition, he had the votes so he won, thus making Ms. Pelosi not merely the first woman ever to lead the House, but the first to enter office carrying her head underneath her arm. But never fear. She's hoping to salvage her reputation for leadership by naming Rep. Alcee Hastings of Florida chairman of the House Intelligence Committee.

Hastings, you might remember, was the federal judge impeached on a bribery charge. Tell me again why we voted the Democrats into office. I keep forgetting.

This Town, That World

Editor's Note: For years, Floyd County Times founder and former publisher Norman Allen wrote a weekly column that looked at Floyd County through his eyes. His columns are being reprinted due to request.

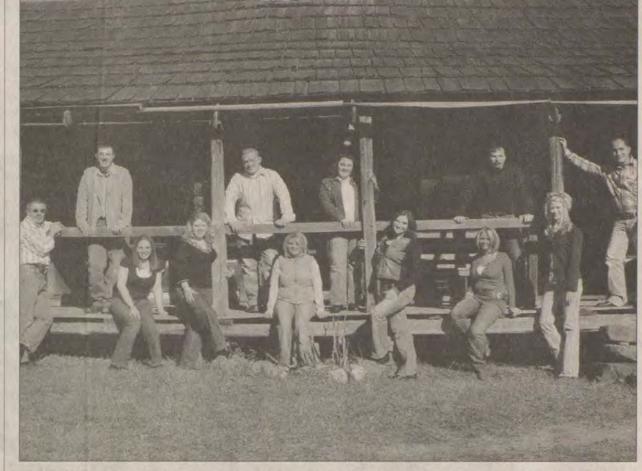

THE NIGHT SANTA WAS DRUNK

(From "This Town-That World," Dec. 22, 1955) The little boy, filled with the excitement that Christmas brings to early childhood, was Faith personified. He knew there was a Santa Claus. He knew that Santa and his reindeer covered the whole earth, the night before Christmas, and that he came down chimneys in the darkness of the night, after the fire had died down, and while everybody slept, silently filled stockings and left toys under the Christmas tree for good, little boys and girls. He knew he did, because his Dad and Mom had told him so.

This Christmas Eve, the little boy lay awake for a long while. He would so like to see Santa. He knew Santa Claus was a fat, smiling old fellow, dressed in red and white, and that he wore big boots. But he would like to see him. Would he have a story then to tell his friend, Johnny!

Finally, as his eyes grew weary and just before he drifted off to sleep, the little boy decided on something else. He would not try to see Santa, this time - he would just wait till morning and go out there in the snow and find Santa's tracks.

Next morning, the child was up with the break of day, and his father winced as the door banged. The father had stayed out late, the night before Christmas, with

by TOM DOTY TIMES COLUMNIST

The Yuletide season is sorley lacking in monsters, so this month the Lagoon aims to correct that problem by spotlighting movies which feature bonafide creatures. We kick off the theme by highlighting the latest creature feature and will highlight lesser known beast flicks in the weeks to come.

Screenwriter James Gunn ("Scooby Doo" and the "Dawn of the Dead" remake) marked his directorial debut with this fast-paced sci-fi thriller that pays tribute to several classic films while maintaining its own style and incorporates plenty of laughs in between the gory chills. Like many 1950s films, this one opens with a meteorite crashing to earth. The difference here is that it lands in the town of "Wheelsly," where nothing ever happens and the inhabitants don't notice the event that is about to dramatically change this year's deer season. The event is also missed by town sheriff Bill Pardy, who is trying to nap in his squad car while his deputy uses the radar gun to clock the flight speeds of domestic birds.

The meteorite turns out to be a space egg that discharges a slug-like critter that quickly hops on board the this space parasite, Grant begins to exhibit some changes, which include flatulence, skin sores and a passion to impregnate a local woman with space spores that he delivers to her through tube-like projections which sprout from his chest.

Wheelsly is a small town and this behavior does not go unnoticed. Pardy vivial companions. Now he was paying the penalty.

"Wish people would learn to be quiet!" he muttered crossly.

The woman who was his wife-the woman who should have been named Patience-said nothing. She was watching her little son, out there in the snow. She tried to think the things that were in the child's mind. The boy was walking in zigzag fashion, following Santa's tracks.

There was a place in the snow where it looked as if a sleigh had come to earth. Or could it be where Somebody had slipped and fallen! The child wasn't sure. But these footprints-how zigzaggy they were! One print over here, the next far to the right, then left, then right, and on, in wandering fashion toward the house. Could Santa have carried a pack so heavy that he staggered, under the burden?

Then the child found the empty bottle, there where Santa had walked. He picked it up, turned it in his hands, finally tossed it aside. He burst into the room where his father still lay in bed. The disalusioned child went straight to his mother.

"Mama," he sobbed, "I saw, Santa's tracks, and he staggered, and I found a bottle-Mama, Santa was drunk last night."

There was no solace for the lit-will be releasing their second album "Going Home" at an Album Release Party in conjunction with their Christmas Concert on Saturday, Dec. 16 at 7:00 PM, in the Gearheart Auditorium, Pike Building, Prestonsburg Campus; an event sponsored by the Big Sandy College Educational Foundation, Inc.

The Big Sandy Singers are directed by BSCTC Instructor and veteran Kentucky Opry member Laura Ford Hall, with Timothy Cooley - album producer and technical director, and Clayton Case, assistant director, and member of the Kentucky Opry

Auditions are held for the group yearly and are open to BSCTC students and MSU at BSCTC students. The singers who are chosen receive a $1,200 scholarship to attend the school as well as in-studio recording experience. "Going Home" is the second album the group has recorded.

BSCTC President, Dr. George Edwards, along with producer Cooley, oversaw the installation of the Big Sandy Productions Studio on the BSCTC campus last year. This is the second group album recorded in the on-campus studio, and the group plans to record a group album yearly as well as individual student solo albums. The public can receive any album of their choice for a $10 or more donation to the BSCTC Music and Programs at the college which include programs for ages 7 through senior citizens. The college offers a variety of programs including the BSCTC Music and Drama Summer Camp for Children, InHarmony Women's Community Chorus, Serenade - a singing group comprised of female community members, the BSCTC Theatre Troupe, the Big Sandy Idol Music Scholarship Program for high school students, and the Big Sandy Singers. Those who donate can know that their money is going for a very good cause - to bring cultural arts experiences to our eastern Kentucky communities, while receiving a wonderful product in return, created by our own eastern Kentucky young men and women.

We are so very excited about releasing this album," Hall said. "This truly is a dream come true for the students and for Tim, Clayton and myself. We have been so blessed by God to have received such wonderful support from the college president and so many others. However, without his vision and support this would have not been possible."

The recording process started in August when each student began going into the studio to lay down their solo track. The group tracks followed. The album features these 14 pop, country, and gospel songs each sung by the Big Sandy Singers: "Father Who Can," by the

Tickets to the concert and release are $3 each and are available at the door. Make plans to attend this wonderful celebration of Christmas and the achievement of these students in the completion of their album.

arrives at Grant's home to interrogate him and surprises him in the act of trying to lay a hand, actually a tentacle, on his wife Starla. Grant flees the scene, but nothing is finished.

Soon there are reports of livestock going missing coupled with accounts of a giant squid prowling the woods. Pardy puts together a posse to stake out a cow farm and their efforts are rewarded, somewhat, when Grant makes an appearance.

Unfortunately, he has become a deadly hybrid of man and space creature and can now split a man in two with one of his tentacles at about 10 paces. They track him to his lair, a dilapidated barn, where they find the missing woman who now resembles a Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade float. She's just a head perched on what appears to be a giant bubble of flesh that Grant has been raiding farms to feed.

The surprised sheriff tries to remain calm and question her, which leads to one of the film's best lines as the head requests that Pardy hand her some of that decaying possum on the barn floor. He doesn't get much information however as she explodes and the barn is soon awash in a thousand space slugs that immediately insert themselves into most everyone's mouth, prompting the town's mayor to observe, "What kinda thing wants you to eat it ?"

Pretty soon the slugs get into just about everybody and that's not the worst of it. Turns out they all become the Grant/space creature hybrid, which gives Grant an army that he can see through and act with. They truss up Starla and bring her back home, where Grant awaits and the sheriff must beard Grant in his lair with the town's only other survivor, a teen girl who proves more than capable of handling herself. It's an exciting finale that also demonstrates that Grant can infect other creatures, including a deer that seems more than happy for the opportunity to hunt humans.

The final duel with Grant is set in his living room, where he has merged with several of his victims to become a giant fleshy orgy of one which ratchets up the yuck factor and leads to a classic moment wherein Starla tries to seduce Grant by appealing to his human side while sidling up to him with an ivory letter opener stashed in her Victoria's Secret undergarment. To give away more would be too disgusting. so let's just say that this will end messy and leave it at that.

This one works due to the inspired script by Gunn. He is that rare talent who can draw inspiration from other films and still come up with some-but manages to act through a ton of make-up and make the character compelling as well as keeping a human element of him alive despite being sealed under a ton of make-up at the film's finale.

Henry Gregg (Mel Gibson's backstabbing partner in "Payback") steals all of his scenes as the town's blowhard mayor who attributes Grant's condition to Lyme disease and sprinkles his vocabulary with liberal, though well chosen, uses of the F-bomb.

The real revelation here though is Nathan Fillion as Sheriff Pardy. He's a reluctant hero who soldiers on despite the fact that he has no idea what to do at any given time. Fillion resists the urge to go over the top and his understated performance allows everyone else to reach for the stars.

The film also delivers a classic take on Psycho's shower sequence by depositing a young lady in a bathtub that is soon rife with space slugs. It's thing unique. Here he blends a signature moment that was used in the film's advertising campaign and is worth the price of a rental alone. Audiences didn't turn out for this one when it played theaters but it is ripe for rediscovery on DVD. Best line: "The worms are in their brains." 2006, rated R.

for exactly the reason you say: It keeps you moving at a very steady speed. Continuing to move at a steady speed uses less fuel than accelerating. TOM: When you drive without cruise control, you tend to slow down, speed up, slow down, speed up, etc. And each time you have to haul that 3,500-pound hunk of steel back up to speed, you use more gasoline than you would have used if you had just kept it cruising steadily.

RAY: Plus, cruise control keeps you from accidentally going too fast - from looking down and suddenly noticing that you're doing 80 - which is the biggest waster of gasoline. Because wind resistance increases by the square of your speed, wind resistance increases by about 50 percent between 65 mph and 80 mph. That takes a HUGE toll on your mileage, because your engine has to push your heap through that much more wind.

TOM: To address your friend's other point, Christine, the cruise-control system is run off of engine vacuum and electricity. There's no cruisecontrol system that runs off of gasoline. So have him buy you a bottle of Ravenswood Sonoma County Old Vine Zinfandel to go with your filet mignon for that boneheaded suggestion.

RAY: We should add that in the old days, you could make the argument that cruise control could occasionally waste fuel. For instance, let's say you had it set to 65, and you cancelled it by stepping on the brake and then slowed down to 45. When you turned it back on, by hitting "Resume," older cruise-control systems would simply floor it until you were back up to 65. That hard acceleration certainly wasted some gas. Newer cruise-control systems, in contrast, are smarter and accelerate much more smoothly.

TOM: But even with an old system, unless you were turning it on and off frequently, you'd still come out ahead because of the steady speed you'd maintain on the vast majority of your trip.

RAY: But if you want to throw your gentleman friend a bone (after you've finished eating the rest of the steak), you can tell him that under certain circumstances, older cruise-control systems could waste some gas. But, generally speaking, you are completely correct, Christine. Buen provecho!

Two Perry County men arrested, charged with poaching 2 bull elk

TIMES STAFF REPORT

FRANKFORT - Conservation officers with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources arrested two Perry County men Wednesday and charged them with poaching two bull elk near Hazard.

Alan R. Combs, 33, of Hazard, was charged with two counts of spotlighting and two counts of illegally killing and possessing elk. As of Friday morning, he remained lodged in the Kentucky River Regional Jail in Perry County in lieu of a $2,000 cash bond. The second person, Anthony Fugate, 32, of Viper, was released after posting $2,000 bond. He faces two counts of illegally killing and possessing elk, and one count of spotlighting.

Conservation officers Lt. Frank

Campbell, Greg Watts and Billy Collett conducted the investigations and made the arrests after learning about the Nov. 19 evening incidents on the old Lost Mountain strip mine. Campbell said Combs, with two young children in the vehicle with him, killed a small bull with a 20gauge shotgun and slug sometime after dark. While trying to hide the vehicle, he became stuck and called Fugate for help. The two then removed the head of the small bull and later killed a bigger 6x6 bull and removed its head as well. They left the carcasses of the two animals in the field.

The officers recovered one of the antlers from the larger bull from Combs' vehicle. Later, officers recovered the other three antlers from Fugate.

Combs is scheduled for arraignment in Perry District Court Monday. Fugate has a trial date set for Dec. 11 in Perry District Court. Convictions could bring up to one year in jail, a $5,000 fine and $2,500 replacement cost for each poached elk. A conviction also could result in the forfeiture of any equipment used as well, including firearms and vehicles. The spotlighting charges carry $300 fines each.

More than 88,000 deer have been taken with modern firearms this year, topping the 2005 modern gun harvest by almost 4,000 deer and bringing the total statewide deer harvest to just under 110,000 so far. A record deer harvest this year is still a possibility as late muzzleloader season, free youth deer hunting weekend and the remainder of archery and crossbow seasons are still to come.

"The harvest seems to have rebounded," said Tina Brunjes, big game program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "We'll surpass last year's total harvest, but whether or not we'll surpass the record 2004 season is going to hinge on muzzleloader season.'

Brunjes is hoping for clear, cold weather during late muzzleloader season to get the deer moving and increase harvest. Hunter success is closely tied to deer movement, as seen in the record 2004 harvest, when hunters took more than 124,000 deer, about 90,000 of those with modern firearms. A statewide mast (nut) failure that fall forced deer to move more in search of food, helping hunters' success in the woods. Last fall, an above-average mast crop meant deer didn't have to move as much to find food, but this year's nut crop was closer to average.

With a statewide deer herd estimated at more than 900,000 animals, hunter success is on the increase. One concern for wildlife managers this season is the ratio of buck to doe harvest. Nearly 54 percent of deer taken this year have been male, and biologists would like to see that percentage go down.

UK player named to Roger Clemens Award Watch List

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON - Kentucky junior pitcher Greg Dombrowski has been named to the Roger Clemens Award watch list, annually given to the most outstanding pitcher in college baseball.

The right-hander was dominant in 2006, leading Southeastern Conference Champion Kentucky in ERA (2.83) and wins (10). Dombrowski hurled 101.2 innings and forced opponents into a .280 batting average a year ago, only walking 11 batters.

Dombrowski, who relies on a deadly breaking ball to force hitters in to ground-ball outs, was named to a National Collegiate Baseball Writers Association third-team preseason All-American earlier in November.

The finalists for the 2007 Roger Clemens Award will be selected by a national panel that includes all Division 1 head baseball coaches, a selection of national media who cover collegiate baseball, and the 16 winners of the R. E. "Bob" Smith Award, which was presented to the top player in the country in Houston in 1988-2003. In addition, the 10 previous finalists for the Clemens Award are also issued ballots.

The Roger Clemens Award was named after future Hall of Famer Roger Clemens, who began his march to stardom while leading the University of Texas to the College World Series title in 1983. As a major leaguer, Clemens has won 348 games (eighth best in history), fanned more than 4,600 hitters and won seven Cy Young Awards, emblematic as the top pitcher in his league. The Roger Clemens Award is the only award of its kind, honoring the finest pitchers in college baseball.

The 62 pitchers named to the list included such names as David Price (Vanderbilt), Cole St. Clair (Rice), Joshua Fields (Georgia), and Nick Chigges (College of Charleston). Last year's winner was first-round MLB Draft selection Andrew Miller of North Carolina.

Bengals 13, Ravens 7

by JOE KAY ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI - Best two out of three, anyone?

The defending AFC North champion Cincinnati Bengals and the upstart Baltimore Ravens have played twice this season. Both times, the visiting team won. Both times, the game was decided by six points.

See a pattern?

The Bengals' 13-7 victory on Thursday night prevented the Ravens from clinching the division title and left the rivals thinking they might not have seen the last of each other. If the Bengals keep playing this way, they might both make the playoffs.

"I'd play them every day of the week," Ravens linebacker Bart Scott said. "We missed an opportunity, but our destiny is still in our hands. We might see them again."

Despite one of their worst offensive showings of the season, the Ravens (9-3) are still in control of the division. They have a two-game lead over the Bengals (7-5) with only four to go, a huge margin for so late in the season.

"The reality of it is, we're 9-3 and we just have to take care of things and get better,' quarterback said Steve McNair, who led the offense across midfield only once in the first three quarters. The Bengals are getting better by the week.

Since they gave up 42 second-half points in a loss to San Diego, the Bengals have gone back to playing like defending champions. Remarkably, one of the league's lowest-ranked defenses is leading the way.

A 30-0 victory in Cleveland last Sunday was their first shutout in 17 years. Four days later, they blanked THE FLOYD COUNTY TIMES the Ravens until the final 1:01, when Steve McNair threw a 36-yard touchdown pass to Derrick Mason.

The seven consecutive quarters without giving up a point is a franchise record. The seven points allowed in consecutive games also is a franchise first.

> "If we keep going like that, we'll be fine," safety Dexter Jackson said. "Everything is possible. Look at the history of the NFL. It's not how you start, it's how you finish."

The victory left them a half-game behind Kansas City (7-4) and Denver (7-4) for the two AFC wild card berths, with a game left in Denver on Dec. 24. There's a chance to catch Baltimore, but that's a long shot.

Maybe that was the biggest difference on Thursday night. Cincinnati had to win to stay in contention. Baltimore is still in good shape to make the playoffs.

"Any time you have an opportunity to capture the division and don't, it is disappointing," coach Brian Billick said. "When you put yourself in that position and don't follow through, that is unsatisfactory.

"Fortunately, we are in a position where we can control our own destiny and we move forward. We don't have to rely on anyone else. Nothing else has to happen except for us to play good football, and we are capable of that."

Their rematch turned on one sandlot play.

On their first drive of the second half, Carson Palmer handed off to Rudi Johnson, who turned and flipped the ball back to the quarterback. Downfield, T.J. Houshmandzadeh was sprinting past defenders taken in by the trickery.

"I was a little nervous," said Palmer, who was 21-of-32 for 234 yards. "I didn't have a good view of the secondary. I knew he was open because of the crowd reaction. He did a great job of selling the play.'

No one was near Houshmandzadeh when he caught the flea-flicker pass at the 12-yard line and went into the end zone for a 40-yard touchdown that helped him make his point.

After a 26-20 loss in Baltimore on Nov. 5, Houshmandzadeh rankled some of the Ravens by insisting that everyone knew the Bengals were the better team. He repeated his bold assertion again in the days leading up to the rematch.

'I'm not going to boast and brag about today," said Houshmandzadeh, who had 10 catches for a season-high 106 yards. "I felt we were the better team, and I think we proved it."

Did they? "In a sense," said Bengals receiver Chad Johnson, who had eight catches for 91 yards. "We're 1-1. We'll see who's the better team if we have to face them again in the playoffs.' Notes: Baltimore's B.J. Sams broke the fibula in his lower right leg while returning a first-half kickoff. Bengals C Ben Wilkerson made his NFL debut in the second half, after second-string C Eric Ghiaciuc sprained his right knee. ... Previously, the fewest points the Bengals had allowed in a two-game span was 10. They lost to New England 7-2 and beat the Rams 15-3 in 1993.

Falcons could be headed for big changes

by PAUL NEWBERRY ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA - After watching the Atlanta Falcons lose their fourth straight game, owner Arthur Blank grabbed a front-row seat in the interview room to listen in on what Jim Mora and Michael Vick had to say.

Blank also pored over a stat sheet, whispering some thoughts to his top lieutenant while trying to figure out how another season that began with such promise has totally unraveled heading into the final month.

This owner demands immediate results. If things don't turn around over the next five weeks, the Falcons are certainly headed for big changes starting with several members of Mora's staff and maybe extending all the way to the head coach himself.

"Ever since I've been here, we've had high expectations," Blank said. "We did not build this team to be .500. We thought this team was capable of making a playoff run. Anytime you fall short of that, it's disappointing.

Technically, Atlanta (5-6) still has time to turns things around in the mediocre NFC, where 6-5 would be good enough for the wild card if the season ended today.

But after going 0-for-November, the Falcons are below ,500 for the first time in Mora's three-year tenure and giving off few signs of being a team that can pull out of its slide before it's too late.

Three of the losses during past month were by double-figure margins - the only exception being an inexcusable 17-13 home loss to woeful Cleveland (3-8). The Falcons were blown out 30-14 at Detroit, one of only two games the Lions have won this season. Last Sunday, Atlanta was all but eliminated from the NFC West race by a 31-13 loss to the Saints, who essentially have a three-game lead on the Falcons when the tiebreaker is factored in.

What makes this all the more troubling is just how familiar it seems.

A year ago, coming off a giddy run to the NFC championship game in Mora's rookie season as a head coach, the Falcons started 6-2 and were thinking Super Bowl. They wound up losing six of their last eight, extending the 40-year-old franchise's inglorious streak of never having back-to-back winning seasons.

Now, it's happening all over again. In one short month, the Falcons have gone from being 5-2 and angling for home-field advantage in the playoffs to showing all the telltale signs of a team in disarray.

Early last week, Mora's father - the longtime NFL coach of the same name - criticized Vick's passing skills and agreed that he's a "coach killer." As the quarterback headed toward the locker room after the loss to the Saints, he was heckled by some fans and responded with an obscene gesture.

As the face of the franchise, everything starts with Vick. But the blame for this downfall extends beyond No.

The offense is a mess, an incompatible juxtaposition of coordinator Greg Knapp's West Coast-style passing schemes and the zone-blocking tactics used by the guys up front, who answer to de facto line coach Alex Gibbs.

Vick has never taken to Knapp's philosophy, which relies on short drops and quick reads that seem illsuited for a 6-foot quarterback who has trouble seeing over his linemen and is more effective when he ad-libs. Vick is the 25th-rated quarterback in the NFL and, most stunning, has never put up better numbers playing in Knapp's offense than he did in his one full season working with former coach Dan Reeves.

Meanwhile, the shadowy Gibbs who's technically a "consultant" prefers smaller, quicker linemen who'll carry out his controversial blocking tactics in the running game but are leakier than a colander when it comes to pass blocking. Vick may be the best running quarterback in NFL history, but he's still managed to get sacked 29 times playing behind a noname group that has zero Pro Bowls on its collective resume.

When Vick does get off a pass, tight end Alge Crumpler is about the only reliable receiver on the team. Former first-round picks Michael Jenkins and Roddy White have been major disappointments. Ashley Lelie hasn't had the impact everyone expected when he came to the Falcons in a trade for T.J. Duckett.

Last week, Vick's receivers dropped five passes, the most damaging of those coming early in the fourth quarter when a wide-open White let the ball slip from his hands at the New Orleans 10 after the defender fell down. That snuffed the life out of the Falcons, who were down 21-13 at the time but totally fell apart the rest of the way

Mora insists he's not planning any changes on his staff, but what else do you expect him to say about guys several of them close friends - who are still on the payroll? Clearly, Knapp and receivers coach George Stewart are on shaky ground. And the Falcons wouldn't be able to hire a competent replacement for Knapp as long as Gibbs is hanging around.

If the Falcons do look for someone else to run the offense, the first priority is getting a coach who can take advantage of Vick's wondrous talents. This team has too much invested in No. 7 to give up on him (sorry, all you Atlanta fans who want to give backup Matt Schaub a chance).

A new coordinator would certainly want to upgrade the protectors up front and the guys who are paid to catch passes, not drop them. Also, there might be some philosophical changes, such as more deep passing routes to capitalize on Vick's enormous arm strength (perhaps the strongest in the league, though his accuracy is clearly lacking).

Mora got a contract extension before the season, but that means little in the what-have-you-done-for-melately NFL. The Falcons touted their 45-year-old coach as one of the profession's rising stars after his first season, but Blank - who prowls the sidelines during games a la Jerry Jones and takes an active role in personnel decisions - shows all the signs of being an impatient boss.

"I believe we have the right folks in the building," Blank said in a tepid show of support for his coach. "They have the talent and enthusiasm to get it done, but obviously we've got to execute better and be a little more consistent.'

In all fairness to Mora and his assistants, the Falcons have been plagued by injuries. Two starters are out for the year, and another might be finished. Plus, defensive stalwarts John Abraham and Ed Hartwell have played only three games apiece.

Then again, Atlanta must have known it was taking a chance when it gave up a first-round pick to sign the injury prone Abraham to a huge contract

The three-time Pro Bowl end dominated Carolina in Week 1 before going down in the closing minutes with a groin injury that he's still trying to overcome. After abdominal surgery, he returned to face the Saints last week, but didn't even show up on the stat sheet.

If someone doesn't show up soon for the Falcons, this team is headed for a major shakeup.

Redskins QB Campbell doesn't mind the Doug Williams comparisons

Today's Games

by JOSEPH WHITE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ASHBURN, Va. - From the moment Jason Campbell decided he wanted to wear No. 17 as a quarterback for the Washington Redskins, he knew he would be forever linked to Doug Williams.

They already had much in common. Both are from small towns in the deep South. Both have laid-back personalities. Both have played for coach Joe Gibbs. Both are tall - 6-foot-4 - and skinny with rifle arms.

And, of course, both are black.

"I have the utmost respect for Doug Williams," Campbell said Wednesday. "I feel we're still carrying the torch that Warren Moon carried, and Randall Cunningham and Doug Williams, and all the guys who played before us. They really gave us an opportunity to play a position and to do the things that we're doing. And when we get in the position, we have to make sure we're doing the right things to keep it and to maintain it, and continue to pass the torch on."

Williams played for the Redskins when black quarterbacks were still an NFL novelty. He was the first black quarterback to win a Super Bowl, earning MVP honors in the title game in January 1988. Legend has it that he was asked "How long have you been a black quarterback?" the week before the game.

Much has changed since. It's hard to imagine an NFL without Donovan McNabb, Steve McNair, Michael Vick, Aaron Brooks, Daunte Culpepper, Vince Young or any of the other blacks who have played the position over the last two decades. Vick, whom the Redskins will face on Sunday when the Atlanta Falcons visit Washington, thinks the topic of black quarterbacks now belongs in a bygone

"I really don't get into all that. I do know this: I'm a quarterback and I know how to play this position. That's where I'll leave it," Vick said. "I don't get involved in the other side of it. I can play in this league. There's a lot of quarterbacks in this league - black and white - who can play. As long as you can play the position, who cares about skin color? I don't think it matters anymore.'

For Williams, though, it still matters. He went through too much to feel otherwise.

"I've kept up with Donovan McNabb, Vince Young, Jason and McNair and Michael Vick, for obvious reasons," Williams said. "Because I know the road people like myself and James Harris traveled to get to the point to play in the league. So I pull for Jason Campbell to play well. I pull for the McNabbs and the Vicks. Some people might say that's being racist. That's not being racist. It just reflects some of the hurdles that we had to overcome to get to this point."

Williams, who works in the Tampa Bay Buccaneers' front office, met Campbell at the 2005 Senior Bowl and was immediately impressed. Then, when Campbell was drafted by the Redskins, he called Williams to make a request.

Campbell wanted to wear the same number he wore in college at Auburn the same No. 17 Williams wore in the 1980s. He didn't have to have Williams' blessing - other Washington quarterbacks have worn the number since Williams left - but he sought it anyway.

"I told Jason I had no problem with him wearing it," Williams said. "Just when we get a chance to get together, the dinner is on him."

Campbell sat on the bench his entire rookie year, but he has played well in two starts since taking over from Mark Brunell. He has four touchdown passes and one interception with one win and one loss, and he's only the fourth player in NFL history to have two TD passes in each of his first two games.

And, like Williams before him, he seems to take it all in stride. He patiently waited for Antwaan Randle El to get open before zipping in his first scoring pass last week against Carolina, and he had the composure to call his own play when the helmet transmitter malfunctioned late in the fourth quarter. The call resulted in a game-winning touchdown pass to Chris Cooley.

"From Day One, Jason's reminded me a lot of Doug," Gibbs said. "He reminds me of him because of his mannerisms. Doug was a country guy. From a football standpoint, he was really, really bright, which Jason is, and had a great arm."

Campbell and Williams take it as a compliment when they are compared to each other, but Campbell knows he owes a debt to Williams that can't be repaid, no matter how big the dinner. Campbell, for instance, said he never had a coach switch him to another position, as has often happened with other black quarterbacks.

Still, Campbell had a strategy to foil such a move, just in case.

"If they put me at receiver, I'd run a route like I couldn't run it," Campbell said. "There's ways around it."

Odds & Ends

■ ERIE, Pa. — One might call it the play that dare not speak its name.

A Roman Catholic high school must try to sell tickets to its upcoming school play without referring to its title — "Urinetown: The Musical" because the local bishop objects to it.

Erie Catholic Bishop Donald W. Trautman does not object to the play itself — an absurd send-up of Broadway musicals — and received no complaints about it. Still, the bishop is concerned about the play's title being linked with Cathedral Prep, said Monsignor Tom McSweeney, diocese spokesman.

"His only objection was to the title, not to the show itself," McSweeney said.

But altering the name of the show would violate its copyright. So the play's producer and director, the Rev. Michael DeMartinis, said he must try to sell tickets to the show — which runs Dec. 7-10 — without using the play's title on tickets, posters and programs.

DeMartinis said the title of the show will become immediately clear to the audience.

"They'll know what the play is without a doubt within the first 10 seconds," DeMartinis said. That's because the lyrics, "This is Urinetown," "You're at Urinetown," and "Here we are in Urinetown" are featured in the show's opening number.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Making holiday wreaths on the cheap has landed a couple in jail.

Kurt James Cox, 40, and Rebecca Sue Cox, 30, were arrested Tuesday after authorities said they caused $230,000 in damage to roadside trees by chopping off limbs to make the decorations.

The pair had pruning sheers and were carrying tree limbs to a vehicle already stuffed with branches when they were arrested. The stateowled trees are worth $1,500 each, he said.

"We're afraid that the growth has been stunted," Florida Department of Transportation spokesman Mike Goldman said. "I'm not certain the trees are going to die, but they might not have the magnificent look that was intended." The pair of DeLeon Springs residents were arrested on charges of criminal mischief in excess of $1,000 and could face up to five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

The Cox family could not be reached for comment by The Times-Union, and a phone number they listed for their residence was out of order.

ROCKINGHAM, Vt. — Young people behind the wheel are often derided, but four youths here were honored for their quick, "selfless" response on the road.

"I'm pretty confident you saved somebody's life," Trooper Earl Dessert told them Tuesday, in a ceremony at the Vermont State Police barracks.

On Nov. 18, Jennifer Aldrich, 18, of Ludlow, was northbound on the Interstate when she and passengers Sarah Barrett, 18, Christopher Sanborn, 18, and Barrett's brother, Army National Guard PFC David Barrett, 20, of Delco, N.C., noticed a northbound car that was driving in the southbound lanes.

Aldrich kept pace with the wrong-way vehicle for at least six miles as she honked her horn and flashed her headlights, trying to get the attention of driver Charles Molloy, 50, of Guilford, Conn.

Finally, after at least one driver swerved to avoid Molloy's car, he stopped. Sanborn and David Barrett then crossed the highway median to keep Molloy from driving away.

Molloy — who'd thought he was headed home — was charged with DUI and grossly negligent operation of a motor vehicle.

MOUNT AIRY, N.C. — The pastor of a Mount Airy church accused of brandishing a gun as part of his sermon is in transfer and has a recording device that monitors in trouble — with the police. Jerry Wayne "Dusty" Whitaker, 58, was arrested during church services Sunday and is free on bond after being charged with possession of a firearm by a felon.

Members of Whitaker's Victory Baptist Church say they had no knowledge that he had been convicted in Virginia in 1990 of conspiracy to distribute cocaine and possession of a firearm during drug trafficking.

Whitaker told them he was a retired Virginia state police officer and a retired U.S. marshal who was injured in the line of duty, said Garry Scearce, trustee chairman at Victory Baptist.

Whitaker denies ever telling anyone he was a marshal, but said he worked as a police officer for six years in Montgomery County, Va.

In September, Whitaker reportedly brought a handgun and a shoulder holster to a service.

"He was driving home his point," Scearce said. "He said he was no longer a pistol-toting U.S. marshal.' He was a pastor."

Whitaker said the gun was a toy prop.

"I use parables," he said. "Once I pretended to be a blind man with a cane, glasses and can with coins. Why didn't they arrest me for impersonating a blind man?"

PLEASANTON, Calif. — The perils of parenting apparently can be discovered through a classroom project.

A startled 17-year-old girl swerved her car into a freeway guardrail and slammed into a pickup truck after the realistic-sounding baby doll in her care suddenly began to cry.

The teenager had just picked up the doll as part of a school project on responsible parenting minutes before the accident occurred Tuesday on I-580, said Steve Creel, a spokesman for the California Highway Patrol.

The educational doll cries and wets itself and has a recording device that monitors how long it takes the doll's "parent" to respond to its crying.

The girl, whose named was not released because of her age, was driving around 65 miles per hour in a Mini Cooper when the fake baby sprang to tears, causing her to crash into the guardrail and swerve back onto the freeway where she hit a Ford F-350 pickup truck.

"When officers arrived, she was still caring for the baby," Creel said.

No one was seriously injured in the crash, but the CHP will pursue charges because the girl was driving without a license, he said.

■ HELENA, Mont. — The local Salvation Army is falling behind in its holiday collections because it can't find enough bell-ringers.

On Wednesday, only seven of 14 locations around the city were staffed, and that was a good showing, said Stan Jones, an officer with The Salvation Army.

"The problem is, the few bell-ringers we have are real off-and-on — they don't always show up," Jones said. Daily collections are lagging between $400 and $1,000 behind last ware for inter a behind last year. In just a week, Jones said the local Salvation Army has already fallen $2,700 off last year's pace.

"By the end of the season, at this pace, we'd be about $10,000 short," Jones said.

Even at $6.50 an hour, good bell-ringers are hard to find.

The job is posted at the Helena Job Service and Jones hasn't received any interest among residents at God's Love, a homeless shelter.

Bob Ruth, who has worked at God's Love for a dozen years, said the shelter's residents don't appear interested in the job, even though they are given two weeks to find work and some of the money raised by The Salvation Army might eventually help God's Love.

"I've tried to get them to ring the bells, but they say it's not enough money," Ruth said. "I guess they don't have any interest. It bothers me when they won't do anything."

■ CHARLESTON, S.C. — If College of Charleston students are getting headaches these days, it's not from studying the Treaty of Utrecht or Planck's constant for finals.

The constant they have to deal with is the metallic clang of a pile driver sinking columns for a new campus building.

The Student Government Association has petitioned the college to stop construction during finals, which start next week. But officials said at $6,000 a day, it would be too expensive to halt the work.

Instead, no finals will be held in the building closest to the construction and students will be offered earplugs.

Seaton Brown, a student senator, called the noise "the loudest hammer you have ever heard in your life."

Student leaders hope to collect 3,000 signatures to ask that construction be stopped during finals week Dec. 6-13.

 "We're an institution dedicated to the progress of minds, not the progress of hunds, Brown said. Undergraduate enrollment at the college is roughly 9,800 astudents.

■ UNIONTOWN, Pa. — A police officer used a Taser to subdue a python that had wrapped itself around a man's arm and would not let go.

Steve Crilly, 47, was feeding a rat to the eight-foot-long albino Burmese python, which belongs to his daughter, when it when it bit his left hand and wrapped tightly around his left arm Wednesday night, Uniontown patrolman Ray Miller said.

"The snake was on his arm and was eating his hand," Miller told the Herald-Standard of Uniontown for Friday's editions. Crilly "was very calm, considering there was a good bit of blood," he said.

In an effort to free the man without permanently harming the snake, Miller said he shot the animal with his Taser, a gun that sends an electric shock through wired darts. The snake immediately went limp and released its grip.

Crilly was treated by paramedics at the scene for what Miller called "a nasty cut" on his hand. The snake was uninjured and remained at the home, Miller said. Crilly did not immediately return a message left at his home Thursday by The Associated Press.

Miller said the incident was unique, but not especially scary. "Snakes don't bother me," he said.
