Board responds to criticism from McGuire, grand jury

by KATHY J. PRATER FEATURES EDITOR

PRESTONSBURG Before adjourning for the evening, Floyd County Schools Supt. Dr. Paul Fanning, read a prepared statement composed in response to an article written by board member Mickey McGuire and published in the Friday, July 21, edition of The Floyd County Times.

The education board met in regular session, on Monday, at Prestonsburg High School.

Supt. Fanning noted that he typically was not one to "write many letters to the editor," but said that he felt "compelled" to respond to McGuire's article, as well as to a statement issued on July 7 by a Floyd County grand jury in which they found "the administrators of the Floyd County School System, remiss in their duties and efforts to adequately document and maintain records ... and, subsequently, protect the safety and well-being of the children" in their charge, specifically, those children involved in a lawsuit against a former May Valley Elementary teacher's aide who has been charged, and now indicted, with nine counts of criminal abuse against May Valley Elementary students. In his statement, Fanning said that he had been in contact Commonwealth the Attorney's office and that he had issued a request to that office to provide him with "as many specifics as possible" in regard to the recent indictment.

Fanning noted that he had appeared in court in regard to the criminal abuse case and that he "told the truth as I knew it." He further noted that he felt that suspicion had been cast upon many of the board's employees by way of association, namely, that they have now, in essence, had allegations brought against them in a broad, encompassing manner simply because of their association with the school system as

The paper chase

More than 55 million poor, elderly and disabled Americans get health coverage through Medicaid. A federal rule aimed at eliminating Medicaid fraud by illegal immigrants would have forced all 55 million to show proof of their citizenship in order to qualify for benefits. But late last month, on the eve of hearings in a suit to block the new rule, the Bush administration announced it would exempt about 8 million people — mostly elderly and disabled people — from the new requirement.

It was a politically smart and pragmatic move by the Bush administration, even if it did take a lawsuit to prompt it. President George W. Bush deserves credit for taking a moderate approach. That moderation stands in sharp contrast with the U.S. House of Representatives, which has been eager to show it's getting tough with illegal immigrants.

But even with the 8 million exemptions, the new rule still will create an administrative burden on the states; in Missouri and Illinois about 3 million people will have to provide proof of citizenship.

Eliminating waste and fraud in the nation's ballooning Medicaid program is an excellent goal. But the amount of fraud that's likely to be uncovered must be weighed against the time, cost and hassle of more red tape for state and federal bureaucracies — not to mention more hoops to jump through for people legitimately entitled to Medicaid.

In the past, most states simply allowed people applying for Medicaid to sign affidavits swearing they were citizens. If doubts arose about their citizenship, they had to provide additional documents. Under the new rule, which went into effect July 1, people will have to submit passports (if they have them) or naturalization papers to prove their citizenship. The rule also lays out a hierarchy of paperwork, from "primary" to "fourth-level" documentation, that is required to prove citizenship. The burden will fall most heavily on the shoulders of poor people; fastidious record-keeping and skill in negotiating bureaucracies is not a hallmark of poverty. Foster and adoptive parents also will have to join the paper chase to prove the citizenship of their children. The homeless, people with serious mental illness and parents with young children may not easily have access to documents they need. The 47 million other people on Medicaid, most of whom are children, will have to prove their citizenship over the course of the next year.

This approach to Medicaid fraud is out of proportion to the problem. Poor people, children and immigrants aren't the heavies. The big fraud in the Medicaid program is where the big money is: health care providers who doubledip, overbill, submit dummy charges for services never given or jack up drug prices just because they can. The Congressional Budget Office expects the new rule will result in about 35,000 people losing Medicaid who should not have gotten it in the first place. And it estimates that the new rule will save about $26 billion over 10 years. That sounds like a lot until you realize that American health spending is $2 trillion a year and growing. Rather than spending time trying to weed out a few thousand illegal immigrants defrauding Medicaid, Congress should direct its efforts to finding a way to provide affordable health care to all Americans, including the 45 million who have no health insurance at all.

The Bible is unabashedly pro-immigrant

by JERRY BOWYER

Editor's Note: This article first appeared in the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette and has been reprinted with the author's permission.

President Bush has proposed an immigration reform plan. It toughens border enforcement, but also creates incentives for illegal immigrants to come forward, pay a fine and apply for legal citizenship. Hard-line conservatives call this approach amnesty and oppose it. Among them is Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum, who is attacking Senate candidate Bob Casey for taking an approach that seems pretty much spot on with the president's.

As certain elements of my party struggle to get in touch with their inner Pat Buchanan, I've spent a lot of time reflecting on what the Bible says about immigrants.

The biblical case against abortion is inferential. The Bible doesn't speak directly to the topic. It lays out some principles—sacredness of life, humanity of the unborn—that lead to the conclusion that abortion is not permitted. It's the same with stem cells, child tax credits, faith-based social service provisions, etc.

Immigration is different: The Bible is explicit. In the Torah, Moses commanded, "Do not mistreat an alien or oppress him, for you were aliens in Egypt." The Bible is unabashedly pro-immigrant.

The argument is simple: You were immigrants in Egypt, and you didn't like being mistreated, so now that you have your own country, you should treat immigrants compassionately. Compassionate treatment of immigrants is basically an early version of the Golden Rule: Treat people the way you used to want to be treated when you were in Egypt.

The Exodus was an act of protection against mistreated immigrants. The children of Israel had earlier crossed the border of Egypt to seek a more economically secure life for themselves. Eventually they were seen as a threat to Egyptian cultural purity and national security. Much later, King David surrounded himself with immigrants, as did his son, Solomon. The prophets spoke out on behalf of aliens frequently.

Jesus of Nazareth was an immigrant. When he was a child, he and Mary and Joseph crossed the border to Egypt illegally. You see, they had a well-founded fear of political persecution from a Middle Eastern dictator named Herod.

A few years ago, I debated Pat Buchanan on the issue of immigra-

Buchanan on the issue of immigration. His view was that immigrants threaten our culture to such an extent that these people spell the "Death of the West."

But he's wrong. Immigrants do not threaten our culture; generally, they enrich it.

People who choose this country at great risk are more likely to share its values than those who are simply born here. Latino immigrants sign up for military service in greater proportions than native-born Americans. I know a young man from El Salvador who signed up, even before being granted citizenship, and served with great courage in combat in Iraq. I'm not sure there's a more telling metric for love of country than the decision to put one's life on the line.

In this debate, I asked Pat this: If 200 years from now, this country is filled with people who read and love Thomas Jefferson and James Madison, but who are overwhelmingly dark-skinned, would this be a good thing? He said that it would be a tragedy and a disaster.

This isn't we-hold-these-truths-tobe-self-evident conservatism—this is blood-and-soil conservatism. In my opinion, it is also Pagan to the core.

Then there is the matter of the English language. Someone once asked me, "Do you want your grandchildren to grow up speaking Spanglish?" Sure, why not? We all grew up speaking "Franglish." Our language is a mix of French and Anglo-Saxon that started with the Norman Conquest in 1066. Living languages change. I can read the Latin of St. Augustine pretty much as well (or, in my case, as badly) as that of John Paul II, because Latin is a dead language. Jesus grew up speaking "Hebrelonian," a mix of Hebrew and the Chaldean that the Jews picked up in Babylon. Didn't he turn out pretty

I understand that on the surface, the current argument is not about immigration per se, but about illegal immigration. I also understand, from nearly a decade of hosting talk radio, that almost every time I run into someone who wants to take a tough approach on illegal immigrants, they also turn out to dislike legal ones as well.

Let's face an obvious fact: People tend to want the laws that they like to be strictly enforced, and the laws they don't like to be loosely enforced. Strictness of enforcement is usually proportional to the level of agreement with the law.

Conservatives can complain about "amnesty" being offered to illegal immigrants, but we led the charge for a kinder and gentler IRS that had the power to forgive penalties for back taxes. Typically when we see a lot of people violating a 55 mph speed limit, we wonder whether that isn't a sign that the law was too draconian to begin with.

Do hard-line conservatives want to take away the IRS's right to negotiate for lower penalties? Do they want to toughen up penalties for people who drain wetlands, or protest on abortion clinic property, or who display a two-ton monument of the Ten Commandments on government property without proper permission? There's no reason why immigration should be treated any differently.

The argument made from legality is circular, anyway. We can change any statute which we choose to, and if we choose to liberalize our immigration laws, then many illegal aliens will no longer be illegal.

The president wants to create a program in which illegals can come forward, pay a fine and apply for legitimate citizenship. What do the hard-liners want? My hard-line talk radio callers want deportation. I have two words that I'd like for them to contemplate for a moment: "concentration camp." There is no way that you move 10 to 20 million people from one nation to another, against their will, without concentrating them.

We could go the way of the hardliners, or we (a nation of immigrants) could go the way of the God of Israel, "The alien living with you must be treated as one of your native-born. Love him as yourself, for you were aliens in Egypt...."

"By pursuing the grants, these schools, teachers and community groups have shown their dedication to educating our children to be goods stewards of the world around them," said Karen Deaton, who is PRIDE's education director and executive director of Riverwoods, the PRIDE environmental education center that is being developed.

"Environmental education creates life-long lessons," Deaton continued. "These grant awards will help expose children to nature in fun ways, like testing water quality in a local stream. When students are excited about learning, they carry that knowledge into the future. If they learn now to appreciate and care for the environment, this region will be cleaner for their children."

Schools and nonprofit organizations apply for PRIDE Environmental Education Grants, which are worth up to $5,000 each. The grants are for hands-on learning projects that help young people understand the importance of a clean environment, personal responsibility and community pride. Grant recipients must match the one-year grants with a monetary or in-kind contributions worth 25 percent of the grant amount.

PRIDE awarded 112 grants this year, totaling $502,922. Since 1997, PRIDE has invested $3,350,963 in environmental education grants. They have been used to start 32 school-wide recycling projects and build 343 outdoor classrooms, 98 greenhouses, and 57 nature trails.

Fletcher using opportunity to put fingerprints on state judiciary

by ROGER ALFORD ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT - With an unusually large number of judges having retired this summer, Gov. Ernie Fletcher has had an opportunity to put his fingerprints on the state's judiciary, at least temporarily.

In all, 17 judges, including two Supreme Court justices, retired before July 1, and Fletcher has been naming replacements. The exodus was prompted by a 3.4 percent cost-of-living pension increase available only to judges who retired by June 30. The increase boosted pensions by up to $4,000 a year.

Fletcher, a conservative Republican, acknowledges that he wants to leave his mark on the state's courts.

"We want to make sure that we have those judges that believe in the fact that their role is not a legislative role, but rather an adjudicating role to interpret the law, not to write the law," he said. In his latest appointment on Monday, Fletcher named John D. Minton Jr. of Bowling Green, a former lay leader in the Kentucky Conference of the United Methodist Church, to the Supreme Court. Minton will replace former Justice William S. Cooper, who retired last month. Minton is running unopposed for the Supreme Court seat in November.

"Justice Minton brings unquestionable credentials to the Supreme Court and will be a welcome addition to our commonwealth's highest court," Fletcher said in a state-

Naming Minton to the high court creates a vacancy on the Court of Appeals that Fletcher also can fill.

State Rep. Robin Webb, D-Grayson, vice chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said being appointed won't necessarily mean the judges will be able to keep their seats after the November election.

"An appointment could, in light of our present national and state situation, be a disadvantage," she said.

A Fletcher appointment has become a key campaign issue in the state Supreme Court race in Louisville. Fletcher named former Court of Appeals Judge William E. McAnulty Jr. to the Supreme Court in June after Justice Martin E. Johnstone retired, making McAnulty the state's first black justice. He also is running for a seat on the Supreme Court.

McAnulty's opponent, Jefferson County Circuit Judge Ann O'Malley Shake, has made the appointment an issue, saying it could cause McAnulty to be disqualified from serving on cases that involve Fletcher. Fletcher is under indictment on misdemeanor charges for allegedly rewarding political supporters with state jobs after he took office in December 2003. Some legal issues from the Fletcher case have already come before the Supreme

Under Kentucky law, Fletcher has to choose from a list of three nominees forwarded to him by a judicial nominating commission to fill each vacancy. While that process prevents him from personally handpicking his appointees, he can select the one who he believes most closely meets his expectations.

Every executive has an obligation, whether that be the president or the governor, to influence the judiciary according to his views, to remake the judiciary in his image, because that is the mandate he received in his election," said Kent Ostrander, executive director of The Family Foundation, a Lexington group that supports conservative causes.

Fletcher's general counsel. Jim Deckard, said the governor takes "very seriously" his job of making judicial appoint-

"Gov. Fletcher believes strongly in the separation of powers between and among the three branches of government, and that the role of judges is to interpret the law evenly, fairly, and without regard to personal feelings ..., Deckard said. "The governor makes no apologies that he has encouraged conservative lawyers to apply for any vacant judicial positions."

board employees, "even if they had nothing to do with any of it."

Fanning said that his hopes, through communication with the commonwealth attorney's office and by conducting an in-house investigation, would be to "provide more details for the public" as well as for board employees.

Board chair Jeff Stumbo proposed a motion to his fellow board members that would set in place a policy by which, in the future, allegations made against the board would immediately require that the superintendent confer with the board attorney in order to draft an immediate public response in regard to the allegations.

In response, McGuire said that "this is exactly representative of what I would expect of the Floyd County school system. Children complained and there was no investigation. But the system is being criticized, so now they want an investigation. Five years later, we want an investigation ... It seems the school board is more interested in protecting itself than in protecting children."

McGuire, response to what he perceived as the board's attempt to "protect its good name," read, in entirety, the statement issued on July 7 by the grand jury.

Board member Sherry Robinson, who became obviously emotional near the end of her comments, said that she felt that McGuire's article was "misleading" to the general public. For one, Robinson said that McGuire's statement that "the board of education paid out over $750,000" to settle a lawsuit resulting from the May Valley case, led the general public to believe that "this is why our budget is short.'

"The board did not pay out $750,000, the insurance company did," Robinson said.

Further, Robinson said, "I make all my decisions based on what's best for children in this county."

Echoing Robinson's sentiments, board member Dr. Chandra Varia said, "I took an oath that every child would be equal in my heart, that every school would be equal ... Mickey, you should not blame the whole district.'

Varia also pointed out that the named children were still enrolled at May Valley despite the Elementary, alleged abuse. "The kids are still in the school. If the parents do not respect, or have confidence, in the teachers, then why are the kids still there?" she asked.

McGuire noted that he could not say that the superintendent, or any other administrator, had been remiss in their duties, primarily, he said, because "no investigation was ever ordered.'

"The board never took action," he said. "No action, we just said, 'Let the board attorney do it.'

"In court," McGuire continued, "the first thing a judge does when a child makes a complaint or an allegation of child abuse occurs, is to take ■ Continued from p1 immediate action (to protect the child). We didn't do that. Later, in court, we may find out that the allegations are unfounded, but we move to protect the child when the allegations are made ... We were wrong to take the road to protect ourselves.'

In his statement, Fanning responded to McGuire's comments in regard to board employees participating in an alleged "cover-up" of the details in regard to the May Valley incident by saying that the allegations "should be addressed to the Office of Educational Accountability, the Education Commissioner, Attorney General or the Professional Education Standards Board" if the allegations are "directed toward employees and/or actions/inactions."

Additionally, in response to McGuire's comments regarding allegations of "fear of retaliation" felt by board employees that could be imposed upon them by those in supervisory positions, Fanning said, "Maybe there are those who are fearful of whatever type of retribution is being referenced, but I've found several employees and parents who have plenty of fortitude to speak up on issues to councils, principals, superintendent, school board and governing agencies. There's a great deal of caring and service to children's education from these employees."

Mission Council Eight is solely dedicated to making home improvements for needy families. This year's slogan, "God's Hands in Motion," Matthew 37-39, puts their work into perspective. Mission Council Eight often builds decks, wheelchair ramps and roofs, remodels bathrooms, kitchens and bedrooms, and they have even done a few complete room additions.

"You know all of the work you do is worthwhile when an elderly lady with tears in her eyes says to you that she's been praying for this for years," said Bill Carmichael, one of the group's missionaries. "We installed a handicap-accessible bathtub for her. It's the little things that make the largest difference in a person's life."

Mission Council Eight had 13 projects in the Floyd County area this year. Before arriving, they had a representative come to the area and survey the potential projects and order the needed supplies.

After they arrived, they broke into teams of six to 10 people per project, with a supervisor on each team, and immediately begin work. Some are small projects, while others are larger ones that require more hands to get the job done.

This year, they once again did a complete room addition for a family made up of a husband, wife and their seven children. They were all sleeping in one room on the floor in a small home. Mission Council Eight finished the room addition, cleaned up the home along with participation from the family and gave the parents and each of the children a bed to sleep in.

"The most rewarding part of this was seeing the happiness in the children's eyes as we helped them put new linens on their beds", said John Halsey, a member of the

It takes a lot of work from many people to make sure these missionaries have the meals they need every day in order to give them the physical strength they use to complete these projects. The council has a team of six people who cook breakfast, lunch and dinner for all 87 members each day of their stay. When you do the math, that's somewhere around 1,800 individual meals for the seven days that Mission Council Eight stayed.

Eighty-year-old Joyce Dykhus, who has been with the cook team from the beginning, said, "It's just something you have inside of you that drives you."

When asked how she manages to continue this work, Darlene Kibort, one of the other cook team members said, "To me it's not a job. It's very healing, humbling and rewarding." Twenty-five members of the council slept at the First Presbyterian Church, while others stayed at local hotels. Each evening, after project work stopped for the day, the missionaries gathered at the church for songs of praise and worship. These services were open to the public.

The missionaries also say that they couldn't have done all the work without the help of local churches and social services. In particular, Doreen Martin, of Drift, played a big role in directing the Mission Council Eight to the needy families.

When asked, one of the youngest members said he began doing this because his parents forced him to. After the first trip, Dan Nelson, 19 said, "I came back with a new appreciation for what I have." This is his fifth year with Mission Council Eight.

Another member, Charlie Huenecke, 46 years old says, "God wants us to love our neighbors." His wife, son and daughter accompany him on each trip and encourage him to keep doing what he's doing.

Mayor Jerry Fannin took the group to the Mountain Arts Center to see the U.S. 23 Showcase during their stay in Prestonsburg. Mission Council Eight expressed their gratitude towards the town and its people for welcoming them.

The missionaries had many eye-opening things to say, but Shanaizha Scheeringa, 13, summed it all up by saying, "I used to get jealous when I saw how much more stuff other people had than me, but after coming here and seeing that I am very fortunate to have the things I do have, it changes how I see the world around

The group finished their projects on Friday, and left for yet another journey on Saturday.

PUBLIC HEARING NOTICE

DRAFT ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT ASSESSMENT Floyd County, Kentucky (Levisa Fork Basin) Flood Damage Reduction Project

A public hearing on the content of the Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) will be held at Big Sandy Community and Technical College, post secondary building, room 131, 1 Bert T. Combs Drive, Prestonsburg, Kentucky 41653, on Thursday, July 27, 2006, starting at 6:00 p.m. The public hearing will give the public an additional opportunity to provide comment on the content of the DEIS.

BACKGROUND: In accordance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Huntington District has prepared a Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) which documents planning analyses undertaken for a proposed flood damage reduction project in the Levisa Fork basin in Floyd County, Kentucky. The study area includes the incorporated areas of Prestonsburg and unincorporated areas in Floyd County which are subject to flood damage from the potential of a reoccurrence of the April 1977 flood. The study area does not include the City of Martin, Kentucky, where a separate flood damage reduction project is underway. The DEIS documents agency evaluation of four alternatives, two of which include floodwall/levee alignments intended to protect Prestonsburg and non-structural flood-proofing measures, a total non-structural alternative, and the No Federal Action alternative.

The USACE has distributed copies of the DEIS to appropriate Members of Congress, State and local government officials in Kentucky, Federal agencies, and other interested parties. All persons and organizations that have an interest in the Levisa Fork Basin flooding problems as they affect Floyd County and the environment are urged to participate in this NEPA process. The DEIS is available for public review at the following locations:

1. U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Huntington District, 502 Eighth Street,

Huntington, WV 25701-2070, Room 3100

2. Floyd County Public Library, 18 North Anrold Avenue, Prestonsburg, KY 41653-1269 3. Prestonsburg Community College Library, One Bert T. Combs Drive, Prestonsburg, KY 41653

4. http://www.lrh.usace.army.mil/projects/review/ After the public comment period ends on August 14, 2006, USACE will fully consider all comments received. The DEIS will be revised as appropriate, and Final EIS will be issued. ADDRESSES: Send all written comments and suggestions concerning this proposed project to the following address by August 14, 2006.

■ GREENWICH, Conn. — Emily Gibbons has been collecting dolls for 15 years, amassing about 200 of them in her small apartment.

They've brought her a lot of joy, at times reminding the 73year-old woman what it's like to hold a baby in her arms again. Most recently, though, they've gotten her in trouble with the Greenwich Housing Authority. Housing officials said the dell collection cluttered the public housing apartment and is a fire hazard. The Housing Authority threatened to evict her if she didn't clear the clutter. The dolls per se were not the issue — it was that the apartment was not up to standard," said Terry Mardula, the housing authority's deputy director. "It was cluttered with too much stuff. She has stuff in the closets causing the doors to come out. They could come down on her. She has heaters

■ WELLINGTON, New Zealand — A bald, mustachioed lawyer turned up at court wearing a skirt and blouse and toting a purse to protest a lack of care and sensitivity among New Zealand's male-dominated judiciary, a newspaper reported Tuesday.

Rob Moodie, 67, arrived at Wellington's High Court on Monday in a navy blue woman's suit complete with diamond brooch and lacetopped stockings over his hairy legs, The Dominion Post report-

"I will now, as a lawyer, be wearing women's clothing,' Moodie said. He said he wants the court to address him as "Ms. Alice" - and that his wife and three children support his protest.

His attire, he insisted, is to highlight the insensitive "old boys' network" Zealand's judiciary.

"My confidence in the male ethos is zilch. It's a culture of intimidation, authority, power and control," the high-profile lawyer said. Moodie said that although he is heterosexual he was born with an innate understanding of the female gender. Calls to Moodie's family home rang unanswered Tuesday.

His protest was prompted by frustration over a long-running case involving a farming couple held responsible for a bridge built by the army on their land that collapsed, killing a beekeeper.

He told The Dominion Post that the "last straw" was last month's Court of Appeal ruling that ordered the couple - who have already sold their farm to fund their legal efforts - to pay the army 10,000 New Zealand dollars ($6,200 U.S.) in costs.

WACO, Texas - Is the McLennan County Courthouse going to the dogs? Maybe. Maybe not.

Commissioner County Lester Gibson, who says he has heard complaints from people about animals in the courthouse, has placed an item on the agenda for Tuesday's commissioners meeting to discuss whether a policy is needed on animals in county facilities.

Gibson didn't mention any names, but State District Judge Ralph Strother thinks it is all about Buff, his 13-year-old cocker spaniel and a courthouse

Strother got the dog in 1997 from his mother, who died that ear and asked that he take care of her pet. He said the dog, which spends much of the day in a chair in his office, has had a calming influence.

"He is especially valuable in putting young people at ease during adoptions and child-custody fights," the judge said. "He is just a part of my family."

Gibson said people, particularly those allergic to dogs, have complained about animals being brought into the court-

"This is just a suggestion for discussion," Gibson said. "I just wanted to see what everybody's take is on it and whether we need a pet order prohibiting them from the courthouse."

The newspaper reported some people had complained because the judge asks his 82year-old bailiff to take the dog outside for bathroom breaks.

The bailiff, Clarence Cobb, said he likes the break.

FAIR HAVEN, N.Y. -Doctors had to cut away a drain pipe that a 6-year-old girl got her leg stuck in while playing in the bathroom at a state park near Lake Ontario.

Alexyss DeWind stepped into the 4-inch floor drain in a bathroom at Fair Haven Beach State Park on Sunday afternoon and got caught up to her thigh. Firefighters tried to grease the pipe, but finally had to cut the concrete around it to free her.

She was flown by helicopter to a Rochester hospital with her leg still in the cast-iron pipe and doctors, helped again by firefighters, worked overnight to cut it away before discharging

■ ELIZABETHTOWN — A candidate for Elizabethtown's city council will have to wait until he's out of jail to begin his campaign.

Louis Grider is serving a 1year sentence for possession of drug paraphernalia. He's due to be released on Sept. 9.

"Everybody's got their problems. Unfortunately, mine's here," Grider said.

He formerly operated a novelty store in Elizabethtown. Police seized items from the store and charged Grider in June 2004, according to court documents. He said the store sold pipes he said were meant for smoking tobacco and legal

A jury convicted the 38year-old Hardin County native in February 2005. He was sentenced to one year in jail and a $500 fine, the maximum penalty for the misdemeanor charge.

Grider received election paperwork through the mail and had someone drop it off at the county clerk's office. Family members collected the 17 signatures listed on his nomination petition.

The city council elections are on Nov. 7.

K finalizes non-conference schedule

TIMES STAFF- REPORT

LEXINGTON - The University of Kentucky men's basketball program announced its 2006-07 men's basketball non-conference schedule Friday. The upcoming non-conference includes a trip to Hawaii for the EA Sports Maui Invitational, eight regular-season games at Rupp Arena and matchups with traditional foes North Carolina, Indiana and Louisville.

UK returns to Maui for the first time in four seasons and the fourth time overall (previous appearances in 1993-94, 1997-98 and 2002-03). The Cats are joined by Memphis, UCLA, Purdue and host Chaminade in the 2006 event. The bracket for this year's tournament, scheduled for Nov. 20-22, will be released later.

The Wildcats open the season Nov. 15 by hosting Miami (Ohio), followed by a home game with Mississippi Valley State on Nov. 17.

Former Georgia Tech head coach Bobby Cremins brings his first College of Charleston club to Rupp Arena Nov. 28. After a road game against North Carolina on Dec. 2, UK heads to Louisville's Freedom Hall Dec. 5 to take on Chattanooga. Rival

Oklahoma, Georgia Tech, DePaul, Indiana comes to Lexington Dec. 9, ference play with four-straight home and the Cats play at Louisville Dec.

The Wildcats close out non-con-games against Santa Clara (Dec. 19), Massachusetts (Dec. 22), Eastern Kentucky (Dec. 29) and Houston (Jan. 3). The UMass game pits former Wildcat guard Travis Ford, in his second season with the Minutemen, against his alma mater. UK will return that game to Boston's TD Banknorth Garden in 2007-08, and also returns to Houston to play the Cougars in 2007-08.

"Our program always plays a chal-lenging schedule, and this year certainly fits that profile," Kentucky Coach Tubby Smith said, following the release of the non-conference opponents. "Playing in Maui is a great early-season experience for our team, and it gives us three opportunities to play top-notch competition. Of course, our fans always look forward to seeing us play North Carolina, Indiana and Louisville. It's a nonconference schedule that will prepare us well for the SEC, one of the toughest leagues in the nation.'

Prior to regular-season action, Kentucky hosts a pair of exhibition games; Nov. 2 against in-state foe Lindsey Wilson and Nov. 6 versus South Carolina Upstate.

TIMES STAFF REPORT

BULLS GAP, Tenn. - Following a week of sweltering temperatures around the East Tennessee region, with four straight days of readings in the mid-90s, the National Weather Service forecast on Friday predicted rain to arrive early in the evening at Volunteer Speedway for the running of the $3,500-to-win Ray Cook Southern Nationals Super Late Model event,

With the NWS hitting the prediction dead-on the first rain-shower moved in just before dark. Following a brief delay the track was worked back into top shape, only to see heavy rain move back in about an hour later to force postponement of the Southern Nationals until Friday, July 28.

Floyd County drivers Brandon Kinzer and Shannon Thornsberry were each able to lock themselves into the feature race. Kinzer is in Row 3 and Thornsberry will start the race in Row 7

A stellar 42-car field of Super Late Models took to the high-banked, 4/10-mile oval for Race It Fast pole qualifying with Jimmy Owens of Newport, Tenn., setting fasttime at 12.464-seconds, with Blairsville, Ga. driver Jonathan Davenport in his first-ever appearance at the track timing-in second quickest at 12.466.

Earning second row starting berths were Todd Morrow of Old Fort, Tenn., with a lap at 12.490 and Dennis "Rambo" Franklin of Gaffney, S.C., tripping the clock at 12.687. The top-16 qualifiers were locked in based on time, with the remainder of the 24-car field to be determined through two last chance consolations, with the final two provisional spots going to current high point runners in the Southern Nationals series who had failed to transfer either through qualifying or the consolation events.

The pit gate will open Friday at 5 p.m. and the grand stand gate opens at 6 p.m.

White bass fishing heats up with summer's swelter

by STEVE VANTREESE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GILBERTSVILLE - It starts with a young shad squirting skyward, vaulting frantically from the lake's lightly rippled

Then another does the same, a sign a predator is closing in from below.

And then the surface spits and sloshes as bigger fish break the roof of the lake with slashing jaws and darting fins. Shad dance and dodge, breaking free here, getting seized and swallowed there.

An area the size of your living room is frothed by pursued and pursuing fish for two minutes, then the players retreat downward and the surface goes glassy

Welcome to a "stripe jump."

Blazing summer weather dulls fishing for many species on Kentucky's major lakes and rivers. Not so for white bass.

The silvery, pinstriped predators seem to turn on with bigger appetites in the heat of summer. Sizzling temperatures and high humidity play into high activity levels as does the timing of midsummer when schools of young shad and skipjack herring minnows show up around main lake structures that serve as feeding shelves for stripes, as Kentucky Lake and Lake Barkley locals call ravenous white

White bass had been in decline throughout the Southeast for the past couple of years, but indications are that a downturn has been reversed somewhat.

"We actually started seeing better catches of white bass last fall," said Paul Rister, Western District fisheries biologist for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "And this year, we've been getting reports, a lot more fish of 10 to 12 inches that suggests we got a better spawning class or classes two to three years ago.

"There for a while we were having some poor spawning classes because of drier conditions and lower current during the spawning period," Rister said. "White bass need pretty specific conditions to get off a good spawn because their eggs float and they have to have current to carry the eggs. We apparently got some of those better conditions two or three years ago and now we've got a better class of fish that have grown into the size that people are catching."

Day to day conditions for catching white bass on Kentucky, Barkley and other water bodies haven't been great lately because of subnormal rainfall upstream earlier in the spring and summer.

"There's not a lot of water in the system and, as a result, there hasn't been much current," Rister said.

Current, it seems, positions schools of roaming white bass along edges of main lake bars and extended points where moving water carries schools of bait fish. The current apparently stirs the feeding impulse. At any rate, where there is current, there seems to be more forage fish, and the white bass more readily attack them.

A favorite fishing scenarios is when white bass herd forage fish to trailing a short leader with a small the surface, then slash into the minnows. Hundreds of white bass may charge into thousands of shad to rip the surface into a frenzy.

This feeding "jump" is often fished with small surface plugs poppers, chuggers or bass plugs with one or two propeller blades that stir the surface. Another favorite is a two-piece rig - a topwater plug white jig or fly tied behind.

Twitching the surface plug with the trailing jig dancing behind may produce hits on either lure, and sometimes both simultaneously.

Big lakes white bass anglers, however, catch more of their fish deep around the edges of open water drop-offs. The favorite lure is a white 1/4-ounce inline spinner, cast on spinning gear, "counted down" to a chosen depth, then retrieved slow-

Other productive stripe baits are heavy spoons, lead-bodied tailspinners or compact diving crankbaits. Some fishermen let their boats do more of the work, trolling crankbaits or crankbait-and-jig trailer combinations along edges of bars or creek channel ledges.

Smithsonian gives prestigious title to Lexington horse museum

LEXINGTON — A Kentucky horse museum has been recognized as an affiliate of the Smithsonian Institute, meaning some of its exhibits could travel to

The International Museum of the Horse at the Kentucky Horse Park was approved for a partnership with the Smithsonian earlier this month.

The Lexington museum is the second in the state to be affiliated with the Smithsonian, allowing it to borrow artifacts for exhibits and to have access to Smithsonian experts and resources.

Bill Cooke, director of the horse museum, said the affiliation gives it prestige.

"Anytime a museum of the stature of the Smithsonian recognizes us in this way, it is a validation that we have a fine, serious museum here and it certainly makes all of us who have worked here proud," Cooke said.

He said the Smithsonian reviewed a videotape and a 27-page application from the museum before offering the partnership. The Smithsonian also evaluated the museum's security, heating and air conditioning, fire protection, staff and collec-

That partnership has enabled the Headley-Whitney to display various artifacts that wouldn't otherwise be available, said Sarah Hendrich, the museum's exec-

Doubleheader affords Legends two losses

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

LEXINGTON - Saturday's doubleheader was double trouble for the Legends. The Hagerstown Suns rose late in both games, picking up a 2-1 win in extra innings of the first.

Lexington led 2-0 in the second game until the seventh, when the Suns scored three runs to steal the victory. The Legends are on a fivegame skid thanks to the Suns series

Because the game was postponed from Friday, game one was scheduled for nine innings with a seven-inning game to follow. The game began with the Legends at bat in the bottom of the first. Lexington took an early lead thanks to Tommy Manzella. Manzella doubled with two outs then advanced to third on a balk. Suns catcher Rafael Arroyo tried to pick Manzella off at third, but his throw went into left field, allowing Manzella to score.

The Legends maintained their 1-0 lead until the Suns tied it up in the sixth. With one out, Fernando Martinez walked then advanced to third on Will Vogl's double to right field. Jonel Pacheco followed with a single, plating Martinez.

The two teams battled into extra innings before either scored another run. It was the Suns that would come out on top, as Armand Gaerlan led off the 10th with a triple. Martinez smacked a single into right field, allowing Gaerlan to score easily for the 2-1 win.

The Legends got off to a good start in the first inning of the second game with Josh Flores' lead-off single. Flores moved to second on Nathan Warrick's ground ball, then stole third. Suns catcher Drew Butera tried to throw Flores out at third, but the ball sailed into left field, allowing Flores to run home.

Lexington added another run in the third after Hagerstown made some costly errors. Pedro Espinoza reached to lead off the inning thanks to a throwing error by Suns third baseman Leivi Ventura. After Espinzoa stole second, he later scored when Gaerlan muffed a force attempt at second.

It looked as though the short game would benefit the Legends until the seventh. Two singles and an error loaded the bases for the Suns. Then Martinez continued to cause trouble for the Legends as he knocked a bases clearing double to put Hagerstown on top 3-2.

Despite picking up the loss, Lexington pitcher Brad James had another impressive performance. He tossed all seven innings, striking out three and shutting out the Suns

Lexington will finish out July on the road, traveling to Savannah then to Charleston for a four-game series with each team. The Legends will return to Applebee's Park on Wednesday, Aug. 2 to host the Rome Braves for a four-game series.

Bengals defensive tackle charged with resisting arrest

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Officers trying to arrest Cincinnati Bengals defensive tackle Matthias Askew after a parking violation on Saturday evening used a Taser to subdue him and charged him with resisting arrest, police said.

Askew, 24, struggled with officers trying to handcuff him and broke away before he was shocked, police spokesman Lt. Tom Lanter said. He had ignored an officer's warning to move his illegally parked car and then refused to give his identification when asked for it, Lanter

Askew, also charged with obstructing official business, was released on his own recognizance and was scheduled to appear in court on Monday, a jail official said.

The 6-foot-5, 302-pound lineman was a fourth-round draft pick in 2004 from Michigan State. He played in five games as a rookie, but was active for only one game last Bengals spokesman Jack Brennan said he could not confirm Askew's arrest Sunday morning and had no other information.

The arrest comes about a week after Bengals owner Mike Brown issued a statement to reassure fans that the team has standards for its players. Three other Bengals players also have been charged with criminal offenses in recent months.

"We want our fans to know that we share their concerns regarding the recent off-field conduct of several Bengals players," Brown said in the statement. "We expect our players to be good citizens, as most are, and we hold them accountable for their conduct under team and league

Last month, second-year receiver Chris Henry pleaded not guilty in Covington, Ky., to charges that he provided alcohol to three underage females. He also faces a drunken driving charge in suburban Cincinnati, and is scheduled for trial Aug. 21 in Florida on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon.

A.J. Nicholson, a fifth-round pick in April, was charged last month with burglarizing the apartment of a former Florida State teammate. He also faces grand theft and vandalism charges in Florida.

Also last month, defensive end Frostee Rucker was charged with two counts of spousal battery and vandalism in Los Angeles. The third-round pick has denied the allegations.

Wide lanes, slick balls: U.S. hoopsters adjust to international game

by GREG BEACHAM ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS - Chris Paul already has a handle on the slick-surfaced, extra-bouncy, two-tone basketball he'll use in the world championships next month.

"It looks different and it feels a little different, but I don't really have a problem with it," the New Orleans Hornets guard says, holding the Japanese-made, orange-and-tan ball in his left hand after practice with the U.S. national team. "There's a lot of different things about this tournament."

Indeed. Elsewhere on UNLV's practice courts on Saturday, Elton Brand was getting reacquainted with the international game's trapezoidal key during a scrimmage officiated by

FIBA referees, while Carmelo Anthony waited for the chance to steal an opponent's rebound off the rim — something that's illegal at his Coach Mike Krzyzewski is immersing his roster of NBA players in the international game during this training camp. Those differences largely eluded the last two U.S. teams in world competition, and they're a big reason why the Americans came home without championships despite a wealth of individual talent.

"We know we've got to pay attention to the little things," said Brand, who led the Los Angeles Clippers to the second round of the playoffs. "Sometimes you start thinking we can do the same things we do in the NBA, but it's a totally different game. That's how the world evens it up with us. We've got so much talent, but the differences can level it off."

This plan was hatched by U.S. managing director Jerry Colangelo and the coaching staff, who restructured the U.S. national program with an eye toward the international game after a sixth-place finish in the 2002 world championships, followed by Olympic bronze two years ago in Athens.

Colangelo Krzyzewski knew the U.S. had to rethink its approach to offense - a step that seems obvious after watching any international game dominated by perimeter scorers and slashing penetrators. Previous American teams sometimes tried to play a low post-dominated game, and paid for it.

"That was the key in the selection process, too," Krzyzewski said. "We had to have versatility. The international game is played more on the 3point line than in the low post. ... It seems like a simple thing, but they didn't make the most of it in the past.

So Krzyzewski enlisted Mike D'Antoni, whose uptempo, sharpshooting offense with the Phoenix Suns has wowed the NBA for two seasons. D'Antoni, a veteran of 21 seasons in the Italian League as a player and coach, already has installed large parts of his offense during the U.S. team's first four days of practice.

And nobody is more thrilled than roster: He essentially fills the role of Steve Nash, who won two MVP awards running this offense for Phoenix. After years of using shootfirst point guards such as Stephon Marbury, Allen Iverson and Baron Davis in international competition, Paul provides a change of pace.

"He gets the ball up the court so fast," Krzyzewski said. "We have to be in shape to run with him."

During scrimmage drills, Krzyzewski's assistants encourage big men Dwight Howard and Chris Bosh to grab rebounds out of the imaginary cylinder above the rim something they've been trained not to do since childhood. The trapezoidal key also presents challenges to Howard, who must rethink his footwork and positioning under the bas-

Krzyzewski's team won't play much zone defense in Japan, but the coach knew his players would need experience against it. So Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim joined the staff, teaching ways to attack his famed zone schemes.

Portland coach Nate McMillan is Paul, the best pure point guard on the in charge of Krzyzewski's defense, which emphasizes dogged pursuit of the perimeter shooters and slashing penetrators who dominate international play.

"Over the last few competitions, they've had a few too many open looks," Krzyzewski said.

But practice time is the most important aspect of the new U.S. plan: Previous American teams got little, jumping into competition after a cursory camp. Krzyzewski's club will have 10 days of training in Las Vegas, capped by an exhibition game. Then the Americans will embark on a tour of China and Korea, featuring at least seven full practices among four exhibition games.

When the Americans open the world championships against Puerto Rico in Sapporo on Aug. 19, a zone defense or a slick basketball shouldn't be such an obstacle.

And if these planning steps work, Krzyzewski said the practice time in Las Vegas could be "a blueprint for the way other people can do this in the future. What we're doing is documenting it for the next players and coaches. Hopefully, this is something that will work again in the future."

Blind fighter teaches mixed martial arts

by BRIAN T. KEHL THE NEWS-ENTERPRISE

ELIZABETHTOWN - In an interview, nothing seems unusual about Jason Keaton. The 28-year-old mixed martial artist is 5-foot-11 and 190 pounds of mostly muscle on a wiry frame. He has short-cropped blond hair, glasses and is well-spoken, with a voice that sometimes betrays the passion he feels for his sport and way of life. He is courteous and patient with newcomers asking questions.

But his nickname is "Blind Fury" for a reason. Keaton is legally blind.

Keaton's sight is not an issue. He rarely brings it up himself and, as his opponents will note, is not totally blind, only legally.

Asked how he survives in the ring, he said his opponents have to be close enough for him to see them to strike.

"You learn to keep your hands up," he said.

Keaton has spent a lifetime studying different disciplines. He began wrestling at age 4, and has trained in various martial arts, including Brazilian Jiu Jitsu, Muay Thai, Kung Fu and judo. He's also tried boxing.

The combination of these mixed martial arts skills has earned him a 12-3 professional record in the ring.

While he is strong on the canvas, his truer passion may be for teaching. Last February, he opened his own school in Radeliff called Cyclone Martial Arts and will begin giving lessons at Energy Sports and Fitness in Elizabethtown in early August for children and adults plus a womenonly program.

"We needed something to bring more energy, to bring in people not used to it," said Dustin Edge, manager of the club. "It's something to make us better. That's our main goal.

His perspective on teaching children mixed martial arts is unique.

"Having fun is the first thing," Keaton said. "I try to keep a high energy level, where the only expectation is to have fun. It will amaze you what they can do. Nobody's going to push them into it. They'll decide for themselves if they love it."

Keaton does not use exercises as punishment and attempts to get children used to the physicality of the sport "in a way that's fun."

"I want them to love martial arts like I love martial arts," he said.

Keaton, who is from eastern Kentucky and grew up in Louisville, learned to love the sport after moving to Lexington. There, he had access to several high-profile sparring partners, as well as teachers. It was at Straight Blast Gym many of his teaching techniques were formed.

"I absorbed everything I could. I watched how people taught classes," he said. "Matt Thornton, the president of Straight Blast Gym, opened my eyes to how martial arts are taught and how to teach effectively."

Keaton thinks it is important to teach at his students' pace, in their comfort zone. Students do not need prior martial arts experience or even be in peak physical shape to take classes. A boon for the classes is that, aside from learning and getting in shape. Keaton teaches self-defense and guarantees it will work.

"We put them in scenarios and use a suit to make it as close to real as possible," he said. "The overall goal is to get away. I teach the element of surprise, to play until they see an opportunity and then strike."

Students also get an intense work-

"I think running is boring," Keaton said. "This is much more interesting."

Edge said it is a welcome addition to the classes and programs in place at Energy.

"It's pushing fitness, its the best of both worlds," he said.

It also teaches students more than how to kick and grapple.

"Doing techniques, training the way we train, the changes it causes in people it gives people real confidence," Keaton said. "A student in Lexington lost 100 pounds. It gave him the confidence to be himself."

Keaton is experienced in the ring itself, which he draws on for teaching. He estimates he fought 30 or so amateur fights, as well as 15 professional, including on pay-per-view for a King of the Cage tournament.

He is involved with several teams and will be taking one to the Ultimate Cage Challenge in Madisonville on July 29.

Reds put LHP Mercker on DL

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds put left-hander Kent Mercker back on the 15-day disabled list with a sore elbow following their 8-7 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers on Saturday night.

Mercker was on the disabled list from May 14-25 with inflammation in the elbow. He had made nine appearances since June 1.

Reds manager Jerry Narron said the pain in the elbow is worse this time. The left-hander faced the last two batters in New York's 4-2, 10inning victory Thursday, and wasn't available to pitch the last two days because of the pain.

Cincinnati called up left-hander Brian Shackelford from Triple-A Louisville to take his roster place on Sunday. It is Shackelford's third stint with the Reds this season. He is 1-0 with a 7.71 ERA in 17 appearances.

Hamlin sweeps Pocono, races into Chase contention

by JENNA FRYER ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONG POND, Pa. - Denny lamlin hardly had to use his earview mirror at Pocono Raceway, here no one was ever close enough catch him.

But if Hamlin had taken a peek, he night have gotten a glimpse of the hads unfolding behind him.

Tony Stewart tangled with Clint owyer and Carl Edwards, leading to ggressive driving penalties for tewart and Edwards and hot tempers Il-over the garage. It all overshadwed Hamlin's season sweep at

"Covering drama is more exciting ian covering the race anymore, uipped second-place finisher Kurt

That was never more true than unday, with Edwards threatening to eat up Stewart and a seething owyer actually seeking out the NASCAR champion before he was intercepted on pit road.

Stewart, meanwhile, was pining for the days when the late Dale Earnhardt policed the garage and kept order on the track.

It began very early in the race when Bowyer pinched Stewart into the wall. Stewart responded with a wave out his window, then his own bump of Bowyer's car. It sent Bowyer spinning into Carl Edwards and earned Stewart a one-lap penalty for aggressive driving.

A furious Edwards later drove alongside Stewart and raised his arms as if to ask "what was that about?" and Stewart responded with a onefingered salute that infuriated Edwards. He spun Stewart out on pit road to earn his own penalty, and vowed over his radio to fight Stewart after the race.

"I've got to choose my words carefully - if it weren't for the respect of the sport and the people watching and his team, he'd be out there bleeding right now," Edwards later fumed. "That's so frustrating. How can a person make it this far in life being such a jerk?

"If you hold that guy up, like if he thinks you held him up, he gets so upset and then he can wreck two guys and give you the finger. That's spectacularly self-centered. I can't imagine being like that."

Stewart recovered to finish seventh, and got back into Chase for championship contention at 10th place in the standings. He seemed rather pleased with the day's events as he stood outside his car on pit

But as he gave his take, a furious Bowyer had marched out to meet with him - only to be unable to get past the front of the car. Had he made it. Stewart might have been ready with a stern Earnhardt-like lecture.

'I think if the No. 3 car was here, I don't think we would have the same problems in this series as we have,' Stewart said. "He always had a way of letting drivers know where they stood and when to move and when not to move. It's just the first-year and second-year drivers that don't understand that there needs to be a little give-and-take.

There is only a handful of guys that don't get it, but the problem that they are in good race cars and they don't run up front enough to learn from the rest of us how to race up

Dale Earnhardt Jr., meanwhile, is out of the top 10 after a hit from Dave Blaney sent him into the wall and out of the race. He finished 43rd for the second straight week and needed almost 30 minutes to cool off before coming out of his transporter.

Third in points two weeks ago, Junior is now 11th in the standings with just six races to go to qualify for

"What am I supposed to do?" he wondered. "My motor blows up (last week) and now I got wrecked. I don't know what else to do."

Hamlin doesn't have such worries not after scoring his second career victory. The first came six weeks ago here when he recovered from a spin through the grass and needed to hold off NASCAR's heavyweights on a late restart.

"We'll just keep plugging away. That's all we can do," he said. "Fate is going to decide this Chase. We are in right now, we are just going to try and stay there."

Hamlin became the sixth driver to sweep the season at Pocono, and did it from the pole both times. Pretty impressive for a kid who had never seen the track before he showed up last month and used video games to learn his way around it.

"For Denny's first two times here, undefeated is pretty incredible," crew chief Mike Ford said. "Two poles, two wins, he really adapted to this track well.

Ford then packed the car up and prepared to send it to Indianapolis for the prestigious Brickyard 400 in two Busch finished second to Hamlin for the second time this season,

"We kept adjusting on the car all day to tweak it up or kick it in the rear to catch up to Denny," Busch said. "He had a great race car, and the rest of us were battling for second."

KIM'S KORNER Where is the love?

by KIM LITTLE FRASURE

Sometimes there are days and even weeks in our lives in which stress is at an all-time high. Smiles are turned upside down, and people are snappin' one another's heads off like one huge snappin' turtle just waitin' to take a bite at any given moment.

Sure, we are bound to have the occasional "bad day" now and again. And whether it's the fallout of the full moon or whatever the reason, it just seems way too often that m a n y Christians do not speak or act with love. We sometimes even point fingers at our own brothers and sisters.

there is envy of those we "think" have more spiritual knowledge or seem to walk more closely with Christ Jesus. We can become swelled like a balloon filled with helium at times when we think we're more spiritual than others. We can also stick our noses in the air and get that "holier than thou attitude.'

Thank God He sends us His word and snaps us back to reality! If we only take heed and soak what we read.

"Love suffers long and is kind; love does not envy; love does not parade itself, it is not puffed up; does not

To be perfectly honest, I was of little help when it came to both growing and harvesting, but you might say I came in handy when it came time for Mom to can what Dad - and the Good Lord - had provided. I can recall vividly how my younger brother Joe and I earned our keep, as this paragraph from my book, "Muddy Branch," explains:

"Joe and I were too young to help much otherwise, but it usually fell upon us to help Mom wash those tons of jars that had been accumulating in the corner of the smoke house for the past year, and I'll never forget how much trouble we'd have getting those rust rings from the grooves in the neck of those things. No matter how much we'd scrub and scald, if Mom would see one speck of brown, and she was a thorough inspector, back in the soak tub it'd go, and we'd have to do it all over again. At least once every wash session, one of us would say, 'We eat what we can and what we can't eat we can,' and the other would giggle. Then Mom would tell

THE SWIM

Watch out for the spray! Shaking off the water drops were a group of fun-loving swimmers, of all ages, who competed for prizes in a hula-hoop contest held poolside.

"It rocks," was the comment offered by McKinley Mitchell in regard to the day's lunch of grilled hamburgers and hot dogs. McKinley was visiting the state park with his younger sister, Brianna, pictured with him at the table. The children live in Mt. Sterling and were in the area visiting with their grandmother, Joyce Mitchell, of Auxier.

Jenny Wiley staff holds fun Hawaiian luau

by KATHY J. PRATER FEATURES EDITOR

The rain eventually fell over Dewey Lake this past Saturday afternoon, but not before the games had been played and the cook-out enjoyed by those who made it out early enough to take part in the Lake Pool's Hawaiian Luau.

"Where else can you get a package like this?" asked Trinity Shepherd, park naturalist, Jenny Wiley State Resort Park. "For the price of admission - games, prizes, swimming and an all-youcan-eat lunch. That's a pretty good deal."

A great deal, according to those who gathered up their inflatables, beach towels and sunscreen. "My grandkids come to visit during the summer and I'm always looking for things to keep them busy. No way can you beat this. They get to swim and get a free lunch, too. Sure makes my day easier," said Joyce Mitchell, of Auxier, who attended the event with grandchildren McKinley and Brianna, visiting from Mt. Sterling.

"I called and asked the park to send me a schedule of events," Mitchell continued. "Why, they've got all kinds of stuff going on over here. Kids can build birdhouses, take a boat ride, all sorts of things. People really need to check out everything that's going on over here," she said.

While adults stretched out to relax Saturday morning, children were kept busy by pool and recreation staff who directed them in such activities as a hula hoop contest, "who-can-make-thebiggest-cannonball" contest, ring toss and more. Prizes such as pool toys and games were given out to the winners.

In addition to games and events, poolgoers were treated to a free lunch of fresh-off-the-grill hamburgers and hot dogs, with all the trimmings, chips and ice cold drinks.

"This has been a lot of fun," said Carly Bingham, a lifeguard at the pool. "I'd be up for doing this every week," she said in between bites during her lunch break. "I just love these sour pickles," she grinned.

"It's been a lot of work getting it all together," said Andrea Webb, park recreation staff. "Putting up the decorations and getting the food together and organizing everything, but it's been a lot more fun than it has work. It's nice to see everyone enjoying it."

More fun family activities are being planned for park visitors throughout the remainder of the summer season. For information, or to request a schedule of upcoming events, call (606) 886-2711 and ask for the Park Naturalist's office.

Vaccination protocol

By Dr. Carol Combs-Morris, DVM

You may have been reading lately about the controversy that surrounds how often animals should be given their vaccinations. So what's all the fuss about?

This is one of the hottest topics of debate in Veterinary Medicine, and it has no clear-cut answers. Vaccines and vaccination schedules are getting complicated. The old D-H-L (Distemper, Hepatitis, Leptospirosis) vaccine for dogs has turned into a DA2PLPC (Distemper, Adenovirus2/Hepatitis, Parainfluenza, Leptospirosis, Parvovirus, Coronavirus) or something similar. Cats routinely receive vaccines Rhinotracheitis, against Calicivirus, Panleukopenia, Pneumonitis and Feline Leukemia. As we develop more vaccines to more diseases, we are reaching a point where we have to ask whether we are doing more harm than good.

A vaccine is, after all, a foreign substance, injected into the body in order to stimulate an immune response to a particular disease. They are generally safe and effective, but when you confront the body with too many foreign substances too often, it can start to have adverse effects. The ideal situation would be to only vaccinate against those diseases that the dog or cat is at reasonable risk of contracting, and only when the animal's immunity to each disease drops below protective lev-

We accomplish the first goal by taking each animal's lifestyle into consideration, and only vaccinating against those diseases to which he/she is likely to be exposed. For example, an indoor-only dog in eastern Kentucky probably doesn't need to be vaccinated against Lyme Disease. It doesn't mean he is at zero risk,

"Ben." Ben, according to Kelly Adam, is gentle and lovable. Kelly writes, "If you watched the Super Bowl a year or so back, there was a Budweiser commercial with a gray donkey that wanted to be a Clydesdale. Ben, however, is just happy being Ben." Ben's favorite treat is blueberry Pop-Tarts. He is one of the newest additions to Kelly's large pet family.

just that the odds are against him being exposed to it. The diseases that are very common (such as Parvo) or very dangerous (i.e. Rabies) form a "core" or group against which most animals are Determining each animal's level of immunity to a particular disease at any given time is possible; it just isn't very practical. Blood levels of antibodies to a particular disease can be measured in a laboratory. These levels are called "titers". A protective titer is one that is believed to be high enough to protect the animal from a particular disease. This doesn't always correlate exactly with how that animal's body will respond to the disease in the real world. They are also relatively expensive to perform, and a separate titer must be determined for each

It is my understanding that manufacturers of human vaccines have to determine just how long the immunity to their products lasts ("duration-of-immunity studies"). Veterinary product manufacturers are only required to determine the minimum duration of immunity. In other words, if a vaccine label says that Vaccine A should be boosted annually, they know for sure that immunity lasts for a year. They have not necessarily gone to the expense of conducting studies to show that it might be effective even

Although most experts feel that some, if not most, vaccines protect dogs and cats for longer than a year, we don't know which vaccines, or how long the protection lasts. In addition, if a veterinarian recommends a vaccine be used less often that the product manufacturer recommends, it becomes an "off-label use". In that case, if the animal developed the disease, the manufacturer would assume no responsibilityeven if it could be proved that something was wrong with the vaccine-because it was not used according to label directions. (Don't take that as gospel, I'm not a lawyer, but that is my take on the situation.) Have I ever used vaccine off-label? You betcha! That seven-year old Yorkie that never goes outside except to be carried to the car and back for a trip to McDonald's, but whose head swelled to the size of a tennis ball the last time he got a Leptospirosis vaccine? I'm going to talk it over with the owner, but I'm not going to be insistent on yearly revaccination, given his low level of risk.

To sum this up, discuss your dog's vaccination schedule with your vet. If you have good reason to think that the makeup or schedule might need to be altered, he or she may agree. Don't be surprised or offended if you are asked to sign something saying you have been informed of potential risks from going against standard protocol. other old-time mountain traditions, Time has put a good-size dent in the art of canning. I'm sure there's still some of it going on, but nothing like it was in the days before the supermarket bins featured heaps of fresh vegetables from who-knows-where.

But, it's a pretty good bet that if

Hopefully, as the tradition continues, his plaintive cries will be heard for yet another 60 years.

rendy, yet comfortable new shoes. Check. Stylish, yet appropriate clothing. Check. The latest super-hero branded, easy-on-the-shoulders backpack. Check. Pen, notebook, ruler, calculator, lunchbox and bottle of water. Check and check. With kids heading back to school, you do your best to provide them with tools to succeed while mixing in the right balance of fun.

Balancing what's fun with what's healthy has never been more important. According to the National Center for Health Statistics, obesity has more than doubled among children ages 2 to 5 and has more than tripled among youth ages 6 to 11 and adolescents ages 12 to 19 since 1980. By incorporating simple, healthful choices into your child's everyday routine, the entire family will benefit. Here are a few healthful, cool tools to get things rolling back to school.

It's all about simple, healthy choices ...

Makeover Lunch!

Healthy does not mean hum-drum. Pump up the cool factor and send your kids off to school with a power-packed lunch you both will feel great about. Here are five tips to a fun, nutritious lunch that students will vie for in the lunchroom.

- Gear Up! Let your kids select a lunchbox that best expresses their personality. Make time to pack lunch together the night before.
  Not only can you discuss healthy choices for the lunchbox and educate kids about portion-control, it's also an opportunity to catch up on the day's events.
- 2. That's a Wrap. Shake up that boring, everyday peanut butter and jelly or turkey sandwich by varying the bread you use. Wrap your kids' favorite deli meat in a low-fat, whole-wheat tortilla or pita pocket. And, branch out on condiments. Instead of light mayonnaise, mustard or ketchup, add a healthy kick to any sandwich by using fresh salsa, pesto or vinaigrette.
- 3. Snack Well. Avoid greasy potato chips and make fruit fun. Skewer fresh fruit on Popsicle sticks. For easy preparation, pick up presliced fruit in the produce section. Kids will delight in making and munching on these delicious kebobs.
- 4. Blast of Fun. Move over sugary beverages reshape the way your kids stay hydrated with Aquapod® Spring Water. This bubble-shaped bottle is 11 ounces of pure, refreshing spring water packed into a fun bottle that kids love. It's the perfect size and shape for lunch.
- 5. Finishing Touch! Include a special note in your child's lunchbox. A simple "good luck on your test" or "thinking of you" goes a long way. Or, cut out a comic strip to give your child a few giggles before heading back to class.

Stay Hydrated!

Did you know that kids lose proportionally more fluids through sweat than adults? Hydration affects our bodies physically and mentally. Here are some sure-fire hydration tips from Jennifer Trachtenberg, M.D., E.A.A.P, a renowned pediatrician and author.

- Encourage your children to drink water at 6 months old.
- Hold off on juices until after age 1 to help encourage the taste for water as a thirst quencher.
- Try giving your children water with or after meals, as they will be thirstier after eating. Nowadays bottled water comes in many convenient shapes and sizes for easy portability for families on the go.
- Serve as a role model for your children by drinking water in front of them. Try to change your habits when it comes to drinking sugary or caffeinated beverages.
- Depending on their age, children need approximately 18 to 32 ounces of fluid daily, including:
  - 2 to 3 cups low-fat milk
  - 4 to 6 ounces 100 percent juice
  - Water

Get Active, You Can!

As parents and caregivers, you are role models for your children. If you eat right and are physically active, there is a good chance your children will make these choices, too. Here are some tips provided by We Can! (Ways to Enhance Children's Activity and Nutrition!), a national education program of the National Institutes of Health designed to encourage families to eat healthy, get off the sofa and get active.

- Make physical activity a part of your family's daily routine. It's as easy as walking the dog with your children or parking the car further away from your destination when shopping.
- Establish a family day once a week. Play a friendly game of Frishec or basketball in the park, or walk around the zoo or your favorite museum.
- Enroll your children in community sports teams or lessons.
- Play with your kids 30 minutes a day. Put on your favorite music and dance. Children should be physically active for at least 60 minutes each day.
- Have the kids help you rake, weed or plant in the garden.
- Replace sugar-sweetened drinks in your home with water, add a twist of lemon or lime.
