Man pleads to meth charges

by TOM DOTY
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — A Stambaugh man pleaded guilty to manufacturing methamphetamine in circuit court on Friday upon a recommendation from prosecutors that he serve 10 years in jail.

Steven Salyer, 37, was arrested on April 25, 2005, when he and Patricia Meade, of Oil Springs, were leaving the Rite Aid Pharmacy and exiting onto University Drive. Prestonsburg police officer Ralph Frasure was watching the couple leave after getting a report from the Food City, across the street, that the pair had been in there trying to purchase large amounts of Sudafed which is a key ingredient to manufacturing meth.

Frasure observed that the car they were operating failed to signal its turn and he promptly pulled them over into the B.P. Station's parking lot. He noted that Meade pushed something under the passenger seat and could observe three Mason jars in the back seat which were filled with a greenish liquid that turned out to be meth in its liquid state.

Alleged fridge raider cries in court

PRESTONSBURG — A Prestonsburg man who was arrested after allegedly breaking into his girlfriend's home and removing the contents of her freezer wept at his arraignment in circuit court Friday after admitting to Judge Danny P. Caudill that he couldn't read.

Judge Caudill went through all of the items for the arraignment of Jamie Pennington orally and frequently stopped to make sure that Pennington was following along.

Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Wayne Taylor asked for a $100,000 cash bond in the case, citing a frequent history of fleeing justice in Pennington's past.

Pennington was arrested after he was found in his girlfriend's home in April when he allegedly had no right to be there. Deputy Jeremy Shepherd proceeded to the girlfriend's home after she contacted the sheriff's department and said that Pennington had called her at work. She had noticed on the Caller I.D. feature on her phone that he was calling from her home. She pressed Pennington on the subject and he allegedly replied that he was using the pole outside her home after tapping into it. Suspicious that he probably wasn't capable of such a technical feat, she called the authorities.

At a preliminary hearing in May, Shepherd reported that he arrived at the home and knocked repeatedly until Pennington came to the door. Shepherd testified that Pennington said he had

DINNER AND A SHOW

Enjoying a buffet luncheon prior to the indoor performance, patrons of Jenny Wiley Theatre found an entertaining way to beat the heat Friday afternoon during a luncheon matinee of the musical comedy "Nunsense," held at the Wilkinson-Stumbo Convention Center. Nunsense, the tale of five nuns who find themselves caught in a money pinch, will be performed again during luncheon matinees on June 29, July 14, 21 and 28, as well as August 9. Special dinner theatre performances will take place on July 7 and 28. Regular outdoor performances are also scheduled throughout the summer season. Call 886-9274 to reserve tickets.

Teacher gets no break on sentence

by TOM DOTY
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — A former John M. Stumbo school teacher who was issued a six-month contempt of court sentence saw her request to suspend the punishment denied in court on Friday.

Stephanie Renee Tackett, 37, earned the punishment when she entered a blind plea on charges of drug trafficking in May. She was not happy when she received a seven-year sentence on two counts of drug trafficking, though she could have received up to 15 years. Tackett will now have to finish the six-month sentence before she can begin her seven years, which will be served at an out-of-county penitentiary.

Tackett's attorney, Gerald DeRossett, argued that she was under great stress at her sentencing and was in withdrawal from several prescription medications due to her confinement. He said that she was remorseful and the contempt sentence placed a financial burden on the county, whereas if she started her formal sentence she would be less of a burden on the community.

Judge John D. Caudill allowed Tackett to make a statement and she said, "I'd like to apologize to you and your courtroom."

Judge Caudill thanked her for her sentiments and expressed that he didn't take her behavior personally and that his feelings were not hurt before allowing Commonwealth's Attorney Brent Turner to speak.

Turner appeared nonplussed by Tackett's statement and observed, "I don't think that was the most compelling apology I've heard." He went on to note that it was not unexpected that Tackett would make the attempt, since she was finding out that jail was not a great place to be.

Judge Caudill thanked everyone for their comments and overruled the motion. He said that his reasons were that Tackett showed contempt for the system with her behavior and that it would be an insult to the people of the state to overlook it.

Afterwards, Tackett chose to exit gracefully, saying, "Thank you and God bless you," before being escorted from the court.

Fletcher asks lawmakers to give tax relief to power plant

by JOE BIESK
ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT — After getting a look at incentives offered by other states to lure a proposed $1 billion power plant, Gov. Ernie Fletcher moved belatedly Friday to improve Kentucky's offer by providing up to $90 million in tax exemptions.

Lawmakers, meeting in special session to consider tax relief for small businesses, were poised to quickly consider Fletcher's proposal in an effort to lure a zero-emission energy plant to Henderson County in western Kentucky.

"We need to take a strong look and say what can we do to show them just how serious we are about having them come to Kentucky," said Sen. Charlie Borders, R-Grayson, chairman of the Senate Appropriations and Revenue Committee.

Lawmakers added the measure as an amendment to the small business tax bill, and the combined proposal subsequent-

Henrys visit Floyd to rally support for flag amendment

by TOM DOTY
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — Former Lt. Gov. Steve Henry has embarked on statewide canvass to let Kentuckians know that they are in a position to make history as the U.S. Senate convenes in two weeks to vote on an amendment that would make flag burning illegal.

Henry and his wife, former Miss America Heather French Henry, have pulled out all the stops and hit the road with their two daughters and family dog, Greta, to raise awareness about the issue which the American Legion has brought up every year since 1989.

Their message already carries support, with all 50 states having adopted resolutions that call for the passage of an amendment to protect "Old Glory."

The obstacle, Henry says, is that U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell opposes the idea and wants to simply rely on a statute to make the activity illegal. The Henrys, however, see McConnell as the swing vote on the issue and are urging people across the state to call McConnell's office and let their feelings be known. The motto they'd like to see McConnell adopt is, "Support Kentucky," where an American Legion Poll has indicated that 87 percent of residents support the amendment, and not Ted Kennedy, who leads the opposition on an issue that has seen one of the Democratic Party's most liberal stalwarts, Diane Feinstein, of San Francisco, in favor of the amendment.

The pair have packed up the family and are hitting seven to eight towns a day during the next two weeks to urge people to let their voices be heard, though they say that such an effort shouldn't even be necessary considering that McConnell serves a state whose citizens are overwhelmingly for the measure.

Monday will see Heather French Henry appearing as a guest on KET's "One to One" to discuss the issue with Bill Goodman. Other guests will include an ACLU member and a constitutional law expert.

Former Lt. Gov. Steve Henry and his wife, former Miss America Heather French Henry, have hit the road this week to tour the state and get out the word that Kentuckians could have an impact on a proposed amendment to ban flag burning by contacting U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell.

State treasurer criticizes state for blocking access to websites

The Associated Press

FRANKFORT — State Treasurer Jonathan Miller has asked the Commonwealth Office of Technology to restore access to his office to several Web sites that were blocked earlier this week.

"The misguided attempt to limit access to select news sites raises serious constitutional concerns," Miller said.

Miller said he is especially interested in getting access to eBay restored so that his office can monitor online auctions of unclaimed property that his office puts up for sale.

The weblog www.bluegrassreport.org was among Internet sites to which state government recently denied employees access. State officials this week blocked various categories of Web sites, including those dealing with entertainment, online auctions, humor and blogs.

But Mark Nickolas, operator of the bluegrassreport site, said he believes his site was targeted for its political content — some of which has been critical of Gov. Ernie Fletcher's administration. Nickolas has blasted Fletcher and his administration during the ongoing personnel investigation and was quoted this week in a national newspaper criticizing the governor.

While Nickolas' blog remained blocked, a blog linked to the Web site for the Bowling Green-based Bluegrass Institute for Public Policy Solutions was not.

"Their decision to un-ban a conservative blog tells me that what they're using as a standard is what the content includes," Nicholas said in a telephone interview Friday. "That is precisely what the U.S. Constitution forbids."

The sites were blocked following a review that occurred nearly two weeks ago of those most accessed by state government, and state officials were not targeting particular sites, state Finance Cabinet spokeswoman Jill Midkiff said earlier this week.

State officials began restricting employees' Web surfing nearly two years ago, she said.

Midkiff did not return a call on Friday seeking comment.

"We face many difficult challenges in Frankfort," Miller said. "Censoring critical speech, however, will not assist us in moving the state forward."

Gwen Pinson, the Finance Cabinet's general counsel, said sites blocked to computers in Miller's agency had not been reinstated as of late Friday. Miller's office would have to submit a specific request listing the site addresses he wants unblocked and the reasons why they should be available.

"We don't categorically exempt anybody from the filtering," Pinson said. "And we haven't received any such request."

Urging others to walk, governor driven across street to work

by ROGER ALFORD
ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT — Under a blue Kentucky sky, birds sing from the boughs of the oaks and magnolias on the Capitol lawn. People walk their dogs. Joggers pass by.

Gov. Ernie Fletcher finishes a day at the office, but instead of walking through the idyllic scene across the street to the Governor's Mansion, he gets into a Lincoln Town Car to be chauffeured to his door.

In Kentucky, the lawns of the Capitol and the mansion are separated by only a narrow tree-shaded street, but Fletcher routinely rides to and from his office. Meanwhile, his administration is encouraging Kentuckians to walk more as part of a statewide fitness initiative.

The Kentucky governor makes no apologies for riding to work.

"I think that's been a tradition for a long time," he said. "That's what security likes."

A state police security detail accompanies the governor to and from the Capitol, and drives him to the mansion.

"I just think it's incredible," said Sen. Ernesto Scorsone, a Lexington Democrat, marathon runner and frequent critic of Fletcher. "The governor should practice what he's preaching. Otherwise it smacks of being hypocritical."

Across the country, several governors who live near state Capitols routinely walk to work. In Iowa, Gov. Tom Vilsack sometimes jogs the three miles from the Capitol to his home at the end of the work day. Like Fletcher, Gov. Chris Gregoire in Washington state, Gov. Rick Perry in Texas and Gov. Haley Barbour in Mississippi routinely ride to work from their homes next door.

"Security is what drives the decision," said Gregoire spokesman Lars Erickson.

In Virginia and West Virginia governors have only a short trek from home to office, and they walk it daily. In Montana, Gov. Brian Schweitzer walks, with his dog Jag, seven blocks to his Capitol office. In Florida, Gov. Jeb Bush sometimes walks the half mile from his home to the Capitol. And in Nevada, Gov. Kenny Guinn routinely walked the 10 blocks to his office before he had hip replacement surgery.

Meanwhile, the Fletcher administration has begun running radio announcements across the state, calling on residents to walk or bike more. In his state the commonwealth address earlier this year, Fletcher announced the kick-off of a fitness program to help combat obesity, diabetes and heart disease.

However, Scorsone, the state senator and marathoner, said the governor's commuting habits may speak louder than his words.

"He has an opportunity to really set a good example for good health, and he's not doing it," Scorsone said. "If anything, he's setting a bad example."

Fletcher said he "sometimes" walks to and from the Capitol, as he prepared on a recent day to get into the black Town Car for the ride home, a state police trooper serving as his chauffeur.

"One of the things I do know is that all security people want anybody who is a potential target not to have a routine," said Larry Forgy, a Fletcher supporter and former Republican gubernatorial candidate. "The routine of walking across there at 8 o'clock every morning is what they'd want to break up. It's not about laziness. It's about somebody saying 'we can't have you doing something that routine.'"

Forgy said any criticism of Fletcher was unjustified.

"As a matter of fact, considering what they've put him through, that walk might be the most pleasant part of his day," he said.

For the past year, the Kentucky attorney general's office has been investigating whether Fletcher's administration intentionally flouted state personnel laws to illegally hire political cronies for rank-and-file government jobs.

Elected in 2003 as Kentucky's first Republican governor in more than 30 years, Fletcher is seeking reelection in 2007. He was indicted in May on charges of conspiracy, official misconduct and political discrimination. He pleaded not guilty and is scheduled to stand trial in November.

State Sen. Daniel Mongiardo, D-Hazard, said his first concern is for the governor's health. A physician like Fletcher, Mongiardo said walking and other forms of exercise are crucial, improving people's physical and mental well-being.

Fletcher, who spent about three weeks in the hospital in February and March after suffering complications from gallbladder surgery and pancreatitis, said he is physically fit.

Fletcher and other people who live near their offices, Mongiardo said, should walk as often as possible. Mongiardo said state lawmakers routinely walk to the Capitol from a government office building that is about the same distance as the Governor's Mansion. And state employees, he said, walk about the same distance from the Capitol parking garage.

"It's a little bit concerning, especially when we have the leader of this state telling the public to do one thing while he does another," Mongiardo said. "If there is a security problem, we ought to be notified about it."

Lee Jackson, president of the Kentucky Association of State Employees, said driving the short distance to work sends the wrong message to state employees who have longer walks from their parking spaces to their offices.

"It shows a lack of respect for the hardworking state employees," Jackson said. "The governor's mansion is just across the street from the governor's office."

Former Gov. Julian Carroll, who served from 1974-1979, said it would take nearly as long to get into and out of a car as it does to walk from the mansion to the Capitol.

"It never occurred to me to do anything but walk," Carroll said. "I can't ever remember an occasion when I did other than walk. For goodness sakes, it's only 500 feet or less."

When it rained?
"I carried an umbrella," he said.

wealth's Attorney Wayne Taylor observed that, due to the drug's volatile nature, a special task force had to be brought in to collect the evidence, which included enough supplies to make more meth.

Salyer will be formally sentenced July 28. He was allowed to remain free over the weekend to give the news to his child, as was Meade, who received the same sentence in April. Salyer's delay in entering a plea was due to his checking into a rehabilitation program, which he completed before coming to court.

Session

ly cleared the House Appropriations and Revenue Committee without opposition.

House Speaker Jody Richards, D-Bowling Green, said the move was meant to be a gesture to the alliance that will choose a site for the power plant that Kentucky is willing to help financially, even though the deadline for making such proposals has already passed.

Although the state can't reopen a previous bid, Richards said lawmakers hope that the proposed tax breaks might have a positive influence.

"It would have great implications for Kentucky, and to the future, because, just think, if we could have power with zero emissions for our coal, it will certainly help our coal sales," Richards said.

Andrew McNeill, acting director of the Office of Energy Policy, said the incentives would be worth $60 million to $90 million.

Illinois has up to $80 million in incentives on the table, from grants to low-interest loans. Ohio is offering twice that, while Texas has passed a law making it responsible for any legal entanglements stemming from the coal-fired plant's carbon dioxide emissions.

Some states are ponying up everything from sales-tax relief to free land, pushing the enticements into the hundreds of millions of dollars in the hunt for more than 1,000 construction jobs and 150 permanent ones, along with the researchers and side businesses the plant should attract.

Kentucky's current offer provides 215 acres of free land in Henderson County and $2.4 million in incentives.

FutureGen involves technology that converts coal into highly enriched hydrogen gas that burns cleaner than coal. Plans call for the 275-megawatt plant to capture most of its emissions of carbon dioxide — a "greenhouse" gas widely blamed for global warming — and inject them permanently into underground reservoirs, a process called sequestration.

A FutureGen alliance made up of a handful of coal and electric companies, including St. Louis-based Peabody Energy Corp., has committed more than $250 million to the project. The U.S. government is putting up about $700 million.

The alliance's criteria have included a site's access to coal, water, rail lines, power transmission and underground geology that would allow permanent storage of carbon dioxide waste.

Kentucky's proposed tax exemptions would apply to any other power plants that fit the description of "clean coal" facilities.

"Providing exemptions for clean-coal facilities makes Kentucky an even more appealing place for the federal government to build the FutureGen project," Fletcher said. "FutureGen is an outgrowth of this administration's emphasis on working toward finding real solutions to Kentucky's energy challenges."

Rep. Steve Nunn, R-Glasgow, said he supported the FutureGen proposal, but thought Fletcher should have allowed lawmakers to deal with other matters — including an attempt to bring a large data and call center to his area. Nunn said the center would bring with it 550 jobs, with benefits, that would pay $8 an hour.

Kentucky would have to adjust its economic incentive requirements to allow the company to get a tax break, Nunn said. It would have cost the state about $1 million, and the company would have invested about $12 million and bring new jobs with it, Nunn said.

"It's very frustrating," Nunn said.

Lawmakers returned to Kentucky's Capitol on Thursday, where they're tasked by the governor with also dealing with legislation to give tax cuts to small businesses. The approximately $45 million proposal would also preserve a pending drop in the state's corporate income tax rate from 7 percent to 6 percent by next year.

One of the matters before the legislature is the "alternative minimum tax" calculation — part of the 2005 tax code overhaul — which has caused small businesses with healthy total receipts but low profit margins to pay more in taxes. Those companies traditionally would have paid little or no state taxes.

The plan would help at least 70,000 businesses, according to the state budget office.

Businesses with less than $3 million in annual gross profits or receipts, but make little or no net profit, would see relief under the plan. Businesses with annual gross profits or receipts between $3 million and $6 million receipts would also pay less in taxes, under the plan.

Today in History

The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, June 25, the 176th day of 2006. There are 189 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On June 25, 1906, in what was then called "The Crime of the Century," architect and socialite Stanford White was shot to death atop New York's Madison Square Garden, which he had designed, by millionaire Harry K. Thaw, the jealous husband of artist's model and chorus girl Evelyn Nesbit, who'd once had an affair with White. (Thaw, tried for murder, was acquitted by reason of insanity.)

On this date:

■ In 1788, the state of Virginia ratified the U.S. Constitution.

■ In 1876, Lt. Col. George A. Custer and his 7th Cavalry were wiped out by Sioux and Cheyenne Indians in the Battle of the Little Bighorn in Montana.

■ In 1942, some 1,000 British Royal Air Force bombers raided Bremen, Germany, during World War II.

■ In 1950, war broke out in Korea as forces from the communist North invaded the South.

■ In 1951, the first commercial color telecast took place as CBS transmitted a one-hour special from New York to four other cities.

■ In 1962, the Supreme Court ruled that the use of an unofficial, non-denominational prayer in New York State public schools was unconstitutional.

■ In 1967, the Beatles performed their new song, "All You Need Is Love," during a live international telecast.

■ In 1973, former White House Counsel John W. Dean began testifying before the Senate Watergate Committee.

■ In 1991, the western Yugoslav republics of Croatia and Slovenia declared their independence.

■ In 1995, Warren Burger, the 15th chief justice of the United States, died in Washington at age 87.

Ten years ago: A truck bomb killed 19 Americans and injured hundreds at a U.S. military housing complex in Saudi Arabia.

Five years ago: The United Nations opened its first global gathering on HIV/AIDS with emotional pleas for help from African leaders. Pope John Paul II, on a visit to Ukraine, offered a prayer for Holocaust victims at Babi Yar.

One year ago: Hardline Tehran Mayor Mahmoud Ahmadinejad was declared the winner of Iran's presidential runoff election. The NAACP selected retired Verizon executive Bruce S. Gordon to be its new president.

Today's Birthdays: Movie director Sidney Lumet is 82. Actress June Lockhart is 81. Rhythm-and-blues singer Eddie Floyd is 71. Actress Barbara Montgomery is 67. Basketball Hall of Famer Willis Reed is 64. Singer Carly Simon is 61. Rock musician Allen Lanier (Blue Oyster Cult) is 60. Rock musician Ian McDonald (Foreigner; King Crimson) is 60. Actor-comedian Jimmie Walker is 59. Actor-director Michael Lembeck is 58. TV personality Phyllis George is 57. Rock singer Tim Finn is 54. Rock musician David Paich (Toto) is 52. Rock singer George Michael is 43. Rapper-producer Richie Rich is 39. Rapper Candyman is 38. Musician Sean Kelly is 35. Rock musician Mike Kroeger (Nickelback) is 34. Rock musician Mario Calire is 32. Thought for Today: "No idea is so antiquated that it was not once modern. No idea is so modern that it will not some day be antiquated... To seize the flying thought before it escapes us is our only touch with reality." — Ellen Glasgow, American author (1874-1945).

More than weight loss surgery.

It's a new life.

Nearly two thirds of all U.S. adults are overweight and one third of all U.S. adults are obese. For many people who are 100 pounds or more overweight and have a body mass index over 40, bariatric surgery for weight loss may offer hope for success.

A refreshing change of pace

Now that the Democratic and Republican leaders of the Kentucky Senate and House of Representatives have agreed on a plan for amending the state's "alternative minimum tax" on businesses, the way has been cleared for Gov. Ernie Fletcher to call a special session of the General Assembly to enact that agreement into law. The special session ... should be a brief one, lasting no more than a day or two.

The special session was necessitated by the failure of the Democratic leadership of the House of Representatives and the Republican leadership of the Senate to reach a compromise on slightly different tax relief plans in the closing days of the 2006 General Assembly. Thus, the 60-day session ended with nothing being done.

However, the stalemate was broken two weeks ago when Senate President David Williams, R-Burkesville, offered a compromise. House Speaker Jody Richards, D-Bowling Green, agreed with Williams' proposal, clearing the way for the special session Fletcher has been promising businesses since the day the 2006 session ended in April.

The "alternative minimum tax" calculation that has drawn the ire of Kentucky businesses is a result of the 2005 tax code overhaul pushed by Fletcher. Under it, thousands of Kentucky businesses found they owed taxes even though they earned little or no net profits. That's unfair. No one should pay taxes on nonexistent profits.

The compromise reached by Democrats and Republicans will provide at least some tax relief to approximately 70,000 Kentucky businesses. It would exempt businesses that take in less than $3 million in annual gross profits or gross receipts, but make no net profit, from paying a tax beyond the $175 minimum. Other businesses that earn between $3 million and $6 million in yearly gross profits or receipts would also get varying degrees of relief under the proposal.

In reaching an agreement, both Richards and Williams said they would allow no changes in it during the special sessions. While we are not sure they can — or should — limit the input of the other 136 members of the General Assembly, rubber-stamping the compromise is the surest way of assuring a brief special session.

Whenever a major piece of legislation like Fletcher's "tax modernization" plan is enacted, there invariably seem to be oversights that lead to unintended consequences. While the plan was being debated in 2005, businesses were supportive of it and said little about the "alternative minimum tax." However, after they learned what they would be paying under the plan, their protests were loud and clear.

The governor and legislators have heard those voices and, if all goes as planned, they will have responded appropriately by the end of this week.

The compromise is an all-too-rare example of how Republicans and Democrats in the Kentucky General Assembly can put aside their differences and work together in response to the nearly unanimous protests of constituents. Just as legislators heard the cries of state employees and teachers to the health care insurance plan proposed by Gov. Fletcher in 2004, they have heard the cries of small businesses this time.

How we wish such a willingness to seek solutions, instead of play politics, was the norm instead of the exception.

Fear and loathing at commencement

What a bargain: At a cost of a mere $100,000 or so, a Northeastern college can take your child and transform him into a delicate flower incapable of handling opinions at odds with his own. It can close his mind and vacuum-seal it against opposing views. And it can, as a bonus, perhaps make him rude and incorrigible.

These were the benefits of liberal education on display this commencement season, as graduating students rose up against the affront of having to listen to the U.S. secretary of state or a distinguished war hero for a half-hour or so. Students complained that Condoleezza Rice and Sen. John McCain don't represent them. But since when has it been a requirement that speakers on campus be representative of — in the sense of totally agreeing with — student views?

Students at the liberal New School in New York City circulated a petition to have McCain disinvited as the commencement speaker. "McCain does not speak for me," they declared. Well, of course not. No one would ever mistake the (mostly) conservative senator from Arizona as a mouthpiece for the flagrantly tattooed and pierced left-wingers who attend the Greenwich Village college. But why would they only want to hear someone saying things that they already thought and believed?

The slogan was similar at Boston College, where students objecting to Condi Rice getting an honorary degree and delivering the commencement address said, "Not in my name." That phrase makes it sound as though some atrocity were being committed. The anti-Rice students maintain that her support of the Iraq War violates the Catholic teachings to which the Jesuit college is devoted. But the Vatican has never formally condemned the Iraq War. Protesters would be on firmer ground objecting to Rice's pro-choice position on abortion, but respecting unborn life is a fundamental Catholic teaching that no one bothered to mention.

All the rhetoric about "not speaking for me" and "not in my name" indicates a certain self-obsession. At the New School it was in full flower. As McCain spoke about the lessons of his life, students yelled, "It's not about you!" and "It's about my life, not yours!"

Apparently what they wanted to hear was: "I'm here to tell you that every unexamined prejudice you hold is absolutely correct. You represent the summit of human wisdom, and in all the years you have left on this Earth, you will never learn anything important that you don't already know as a snotty 21-year-old. And don't let anyone ever dare to tell you otherwise."

It's not surprising that students are sophomoric, even if, as graduates, they are supposed to be beyond that. But faculty at both schools joined in the agitation. The opposition to Rice at BC was jump-started by a faculty letter, and some New School faculty turned their backs on McCain. It is these sort of professors who set the tone at top colleges. They act like a medieval guild protecting a monopoly on thought. Dissenting points of view send them into an angry, defensive crouch.

And just think: For a substantial fee, they will mold the mind of your child.

We need to bleed a bit more in Iraq

by DONALD KAUL

I was deeply saddened by the bombing death of terrorist leader Abu Musab al-Zarqawi. I was kind of hoping we'd capture him alive, put a bullet in his skull and hang him upside down in a public square in Baghdad, like the Italians did to Mussolini in Milan after World War II. Maybe scrawl "Sic Semper Tyrannis" in lipstick on his bare stomach.

What's the sense of getting rid of an enemy if you can't celebrate?

Yes, I admit it. I'm glad he's dead. I'm as giddy as a Munchkin at the demise of the Wicked Witch in "The Wizard of Oz." Ding-dong.

Whether we will profit from his death, however, other than that momentary rush of elation, is a matter of dispute.

Not being an expert on the subject of Iraq, I consulted the experts. Here is what they say:

"The military has chopped off the head of the snake and I think we're all going to be much safer as a result," said House Majority Leader John A. Boehner (Rep., Ohio).

"Zarqawi may be gone, but the conflagration that he set alight continues to burn," said Bruce Hoffman, a terrorist expert at the RAND Corporation.

"We herald the martyrdom of our mujahid Sheik Abu Musab al-Zarqawi and we stress that this is an honor for our nation," said one of his deputies, Abu Abdul Rahman al-Iraqi.

But my favorite analysis came from a 32-year-old veteran of Hussein's army who was interviewed by "New York Times" writer, John Burns. He said:

"The ghost of death has disappeared."

I'm down with that. That's why I rejoice.

No one knows whether the death of Zarqawi will turn out to be a good thing, a bad thing, or not much of a thing at all. But if you're in a war and you're squeamish about killing people like this creep, then you'd best get out of the war.

Speaking of which, as a devout liberal I am in a very uncomfortable position on this war. I was against it from the beginning and warned against all the terrible things that could happen (and, for the most part, did), but I don't think we can get out now.

Life doesn't come with an eraser. Sometimes when you make a bad decision, you have to live with it. That goes for countries as well as individuals.

When we went into Iraq it was not, as President Bush said, a battle against international terrorism. It was closer to a personal vendetta by Bush and his henchman against a despised foreign leader who had mocked them. And control of the country's vast oil resources was nice too. The fact they thought it would be easy was merely icing on the cake.

But it hasn't been easy and now people are clamoring for us to get out—sooner rather than later. Too late for that, I say. I don't see how you can go into a war, and then define success merely as getting out of that war.

President Bush's bogus reason for the war has become reality. We are now engaged in a war against international terrorism in Iraq, like it or not.

Getting out now will not end that war; it will merely encourage our enemies and cede to them another safe haven for terrorist training camps and bases.

I am aware of how much this reasoning resembles that of the Johnson administration in the later stages of the war in Vietnam and what derision it must be inspiring among my former anti-war colleagues.

They would tell me that I am very wrong, that the war is already lost and that we're doing ourselves extraordinary damage by pursuing it. They could be right.

But I don't think we'd given it a fair chance yet. We have to bleed a while longer in hopes things will get better.

And in the meantime take comfort in small victories like the death of Zarqawi.

Two cheers.

SUNDAY, JUNE 25 3 p.m. FOX

NASCAR Racing

To be the best, you have to beat the best, which is why Tony Stewart wasn't completely happy with his victory in last year's Dodge/Save Mart 350. He wanted to beat road-course king Jeff Gordon, who has mastered the 10-turn Infineon Raceway track to the tune of four career wins, but transmission problems felled Gordon and left Stewart battling veteran Ricky Rudd down the wire. Maybe Stewart's wish will be granted during today's 350 from Sonoma, Calif.

8 p.m. AMC

Movie: Broken Trail

AMC's first original movie, this two-part Western has plenty for both action fans and romance lovers. Robert Duvall and Thomas Haden Church star as cowboys -- uncle and nephew -- who are driving a herd of horses to Wyoming when they encounter five young Chinese women who have been sold into prostitution. They rescue the girls, but their ordeal is far from over. Greta Scacchi, Scott Cooper and Gwendoline Yeo also star. Part 2 airs Monday.

8 p.m. ESPN

MLB Baseball

Obviously the Houston Astros would rather be in the position of their opponents tonight, the Chicago White Sox, who are in the thick of the AL Central race. The 'Stros, meanwhile, find themselves about where they were a year ago, when they passed five teams in the final seven weeks to make the playoffs. Lance Berkman has done his part on offense, but Houston's pitching has struggled. That's where Roger Clemens comes in for perhaps a final, final win song.

Nature

Although the surface seems barren and frozen, life teems "Under Antarctic Ice." For this 2003 episode, filmmaker Norbert Wu and his team traveled 2,400 miles, from Christchurch, New Zealand, to McMurdo Station, Antarctica, to make the first high-definition film of the creatures hidden beneath the continent's ice pack.

9 p.m. HBO

Deadwood

Theater impresario Jack Langrishe (Brian Cox), an old friend of Swearingen's (Ian McShane), arrives in Deadwood to set up shop in a former brothel. Hearst (Gerald McRaney) acquires a cook and the offer of a claim deal from Alma (Molly Parker). Bullock (Timothy Olyphant) learns the truth about the killings at the Gem. John Hawkes also stars in the new episode "True Colors."

MONDAY, JUNE 26 8 a.m. ESPN2

Tennis

Sure, it's a fortnight away, but no better time than now to look ahead to the Wimbledon finals, even as the 120th championships get cracking today in southwest London. Roger Federer seems a certain look to at least make it to the men's final, having won the singles title three years running, the last two over American Andy Roddick. On the ladies side, never count out Venus Williams, who rose from a 14th seed last year to win her third singles crown.

8 p.m. ABC FAMILY

Kyle XY

This mystery-laden new drama series is the story of a strange teenage boy with a stratospheric IQ but no experience with human interaction or behavior... and no belly-button. Newcomer Matt Dallas ("Entourage") stars as young Kyle, with Marguerite MacIntyre ("The Shield") as the psychologist who takes him into her home -- to the chagrin of her husband and teenage children (Bruce Thomas, April Matson, Jean-Luc Bilodeau).

How Art Made the World

Why are we drawn to unrealistic images of the human body and scary images of death? What do ancient Australian Aboriginal art and modern movies have in common? Those are some of the areas that art historian Dr. Nigel Spivey covers in this new five-part series. Don't worry: his language is English, not scholar-speak, and the series is as easy to follow as it is fascinating. The opener, "More Human Than Human," addresses the body-image question.

Movie: Philadelphia

Tom Hanks stars in this gripping 1993 drama as a gay attorney fired from a big Philadelphia law firm because he has AIDS. He sues with the help of the only lawyer who'll take his case: a seedy ambulance-chaser (Denzel Washington) who doesn't care much for gays. Hanks won the best actor Academy Award, and Bruce Springsteen's "Streets of Philadelphia" took home the Oscar for best song. Antonio Banderas and Joanne Woodward also star.

The new documentary "No More Tears Sister" tells the moving story of Sri Lankan human-rights activist Rajani Thiranagama. A member of the country's Tamil minority, she supported the guerrilla group Tamil Tigers as her people's best hope to improve their lot. But when she realized they practiced their own form of oppression, she broke with them — a move that cost her life. Her own daughter plays Thiranagama in the film's reenactments.

Movie: S.W.A.T.

This fast-paced 2003 adventure is based on producer Aaron Spelling's 1970s TV show. Samuel L. Jackson assumes the role of Sgt. Hondo Harrelson, leader of an elite Los Angeles police unit. The well-armed officers are challenged by a drug kingpin (Olivier Martinez, "Unfaithful") who promises a fortune to anyone who can spring him from police custody. Colin Farrell, Michelle Rodriguez, LL Cool J and Josh Charles play other S.W.A.T. members.

Blade: The Series

In this new series, Kirk "Sticky" Jones ("Over There"), also known as rapper Sticky Fingaz, steps into the character Wesley Snipes brought to the big screen. He's half human, half vampire and uses his special powers to keep the world safe from vampires with less benevolent intentions. Jill Wagner ("Dr. Vegas") plays Krista Starr, a military veteran whose search for answers about her twin brother's death draws her into the vampire world.

My First Time

You know Ted Danson as Sam Malone and Dr. John Becker, Sara Gilbert as Darlene Conner, and John Schneider as Bo Duke and Jonathan Kent. But before snagging those signature roles, they all started somewhere. This new series looks back at television stars' career milestones via clips and interviews with the actors, costars and others. The premiere features Henry Winkler ("Happy Days") and Katey Sagal ("Married... With Children").

Golf

An unbelievable birdie from a bunker beside the 18th green to win the 2005 U.S. Women's Open may have been the hard part for the appropriately named Birdie Kim. Now the task is to prove she's no one-shot wonder when she defends her title beginning today from historic Newport Country Club in Rhode Island. Kim, though, will need many more birdies than she's had so far this season, where through 10 events she's finished no better than a tie for 19th.

Master of Champions

"The Gong Show" meets "Fear Factor" — without the gross entrees — in this new competition. Each week, three pairs of contestants show their skills in such oddball endeavors as "interpretive pizza tossing" and unicycling through an obstacle course. The "master of champions" is then chosen from the three winners.

BOFFO! Tinseltown's Bombs and Blockbusters

What makes a movie hit or miss? That's not an easy question to answer, but actors, directors, producers and studio suits give it their best shots in this new film. Based on the book "Boffo: How I Learned to Love the Blockbuster and Fear the Bomb" by Variety editor in chief Peter Bart, it analyzes the success of "Jaws," "The Godfather," "Forrest Gump" and other megahits with comments from George Clooney, Peter Bogdanovich, Charlize Theron and many more.

Group says Kentucky has best school nutrition policy

by BRUCE SCHREINER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE — Forget sodas and snack cakes. In Kentucky, students looking for a pick-me-up during the school day have to pick from healthier choices, such as water and dried fruit.

Because of that, Kentucky earned the nation's best grade from a non-profit group that evaluated school nutrition policies.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest, based in Washington, D.C., awarded Kentucky an "A-" for cutting out sugary and fatty choices from vending machines or school stores during the school day.

"Kentucky is doing a lot more than other states to protect the health of their children," said Margo Wootan, nutrition policy director for CSPI, which issued its School Foods Report Card for all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

Wootan said Kentucky's restrictions, which stem from actions taken by state lawmakers and the state school board, should be comforting to parents.

"They shouldn't have to worry about whether or not their kids are using their lunch money to buy flaming Cheetos and a Coke versus a balanced meal," Wootan said in a phone interview. "And in Kentucky, parents don't have to worry about that, but in the rest of the country most parents do."

Twenty-three states received an "F" and eight others got a "D" for their school food policies. Five states got a "B+" — Nevada, Arkansas, New Mexico, Alabama and California. New Jersey, Arizona and Tennessee each got a "B," and four others earned a "B-" — Louisiana, West Virginia, Connecticut and Florida.

Lisa Gross, a spokesman for the Kentucky Education Department, said the best-in-the-nation grade was welcome news, though not everyone was happy when the changes were made.

"As you might imagine, this was a hot-button issue," Gross said.

Kentucky limits students to milk, water, juices and beverages low in sugar out of vending machines or school stores during school hours, officials said. Also off-limits, they said, are regular potato chips, candy bars and snack cakes. Instead, youngsters can choose such snacks as dried fruits, nuts, baked chips and some granola products.

Tonya Chang, director of advocacy for the American Heart Association in Kentucky, said the policy "reinforces a healthier message" that can have positive long-term implications. Childhood obesity can enhance the risk of diabetes, heart disease and high blood pressure, she said.

Chang called the Kentucky policy a "wonderful first step."

The next steps, she said, should include offering more fresh fruits and vegetables and whole grains and less processed food in school meals. Also, the improved nutrition should apply to after-school activities, and schools should increase physical activity for students.

Fayette County schools Superintendent Stu Silberman said the improved school nutrition in Kentucky "will pay huge dividends for our kids."

"I have watched us grow over the last 11 years and the strides have been tremendous," he said.

Ousley receives scholarship to MSU

MOREHEAD — Morehead State University has announced that Billy Keith Ousley of Martin is among those students receiving a Presidential Scholarship for the 2006-07 school year.

Ousley, the son of Billy and Joan Ousley, is a graduate of Prestonsburg High School. He was a member of the National Honor Society, Governor's Scholars Program and captain of the PHS academic team. Ousley also tutors his peers with portfolios and attends Prestonsburg Church of Christ.

To be eligible for the Presidential Scholarship at MSU, a student must have outstanding grades and ACT test scores. Valued at full in-state tuition and housing for most recipients, a Presidential Scholarship is renewable for up to four years if the recipient maintains the required grade point average.

Applications and information on scholarship programs at MSU are available on the Web at www.moreheadstate.edu/scholarships or by calling toll-free at 1-800-585-6781.

Williams awarded Byrd Honors Scholarship

FRANKFORT — Kim Williams of Prestonsburg has been awarded a Robert C. Byrd Honors Scholarship to help pay for her college education. This scholarship award is $1,500 a year.

Williams, a 2006 graduate of Prestonsburg High School, will attend Pikeville College in the fall to major in pre-pharmacy.

"This scholarship will help me financially to complete my degree so that I can achieve my goal of becoming a pharmacist and be able to give back to my community," Williams said.

She is one of only 91 seniors in the state this year to receive a Byrd Scholarship, a federally funded program administered by the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority. KHEAA also administers other student aid programs, including the Kentucky Educational Excellence Scholarship, where students earn money for college by making good grades in high school.

Williams is the daughter of Paul and Barbara Williams and the granddaughter of Lemuel and Loretta Williams, all of Prestonsburg.

The Byrd Scholarship is named for longtime U.S. Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, who authored the legislation establishing the program in 1985.

KHEAA and its sister agency, The Student Loan People, administer scholarship, grant, low-cost loan, savings and work-study programs to help Kentuckians pay for college. They also provide free college planning and financial aid information to students, parents and counselors.

Caudill attends conference that kicks off statewide initiative on child protection FRANKFORT — Chief Justice Joseph E. Lambert brought together circuit and district judges from across Kentucky to attend a child protection conference in Covington June 12-13. Chief Justice Lambert proposed the idea for the conference, titled "Justice for Children: the Critical Role of Judges," after participating in the National Leadership Summit on the Protection of Children in the fall of 2005.

Circuit Judge Danny P. Caudill, who serves Floyd County, attended the conference, which was sponsored by the Administrative Office of the Courts with a federal grant from the Children's Justice Act.

"Children are our most vulnerable citizens and one of the foremost duties of Kentucky judges is to see that they are protected," said Chief Justice Lambert. "While Kentucky is making progress in moving foster children toward safe and permanent homes, there is always more we all can do to improve this process with due regard for the rights of the children and their parents. This conference is designed to give judges practical ideas on how to handle these sensitive cases and achieve an outcome that best serves the children."

Jefferson County Family Court Judge Patricia Walker Fitzgerald and Christian County District Judge James G. Adams served as co-chairs for the conference.

Several presenters from the National Leadership Summit joined Kentucky judges, social services professionals and officials from the Cabinet for Health and Human Services to serve as faculty for the conference. Guest speakers included Judge William Byars Jr., director of the South Carolina Department of Juvenile Justice; Drs. Otto Kaak and James Clark, primary investigators for the Comprehensive Assessment and Training Services Project, University of Kentucky; and Commissioner Tom Emberton Jr., Department for Community Based Services, Kentucky Cabinet for Health and Family Services.

The Administrative Office of the Courts (AOC) supports the activities of more than 3,500 Kentucky Court of Justice employees, including the elected offices of justices, judges and circuit court clerks. The Education Services Department of the AOC provides continuing education to these elected officials through conferences and judicial colleges.

CNN's Dirt Track Warriors spotlights Dirt Late Model racing

TIMES STAFF REPORT

Long before NASCAR went mainstream, race car drivers raced on dirt. And contrary to the abundance of pavement racing seen almost every weekend of the year, they still do.

Dirt track racing, with an estimated 30 million fans, is "the biggest sport you've never heard of," according to the new documentary CNN Presents: Dirt Track Warriors, premiering Saturday, July 1, at 8 p.m. EDT, with a replay at 11 p.m. Dirt Track Warriors re-airs Sunday, July 2 at 2 a.m., 8 p.m. and 11 p.m.

Dirt Track Warriors features exclusive access to the personal and professional lives of drivers who pilot lightweight, high-horsepower dirt late model race cars. The documentary follows racing bad boy Scott Bloomquist, Chub "Chubzilla" Frank and teenager Josh "Kid Rocket" Richards through a season of high-speed, dirt-throwing racing, climaxing with dirt late model's biggest prize – the World 100 at Eldora Speedway in Rossburg, Ohio.

The sport boasts 800 dirt tracks in 49 states, with Eldora Speedway being recognized as one of the premier tracks in the country. As Tim

Lee, editor of Dirt Late Model magazine explains, "Saturday night dirt track racing is like the summertime equivalent of Friday night football – especially in smaller towns. It's a center of community."

Two-time and reigning NASCAR NEXTEL Cup Series champion Tony Stewart, a product of dirt track racing whose NASCAR success allowed him to purchase Eldora Speedway in November 2004, explains.

"I may make my living racing on pavement every week, but it is no secret that I possess an earnest passion for grassroots dirt racing. It's certainly a positive whenever this niche of racing can gain more exposure, especially when Eldora is highlighted. I'm definitely looking forward to the release of this documentary."

For Dirt Track Warriors, senior producer Ted Rubenstein interviewed dirt track's kings throughout the 2005 racing season. He offers viewers a look at the grueling life on the dirt track circuit through heartland America, which sometimes puts great strain on the personal lives of the drivers and their families.

With the eyes of the racing world on Eldora Speedway's World 100, viewers learn whether Richards, the 17-year-old phenom, will qualify for his first World 100 competition; whether Bloomquist, celebrating his 25th year in dirt track racing, will win his fourth championship at Eldora; or whether "Chubzilla" can repeat his 2004 first-place success.

CNN Presents: Dirt Track Warriors was narrated by Miles O'Brien with field producing by Emily Probst and Jamie Hutton. Mark Nelson is vice president and senior executive producer of CNN Productions. CNN Presents is the most honored documentary program in cable news.

Ashby named new Pikeville coach

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE – Pikeville College has settled on one of its own after a search for a new baseball coach.

Don Ashby, assistant to the vice-president of student services who served as assistant baseball coach last spring, has been named the new head coach.

Ashby, a native of Grundy, Va., replaces Johnnie LeMaster as head baseball coach. LeMaster, a Paintsville native who was the sixth overall pick in the 1973 baseball draft, is the all-time winningest baseball coach in Pikeville College history.

"Pikeville College owes Coach LeMaster a deep debt of gratitude and we thank him for his time and dedication to Bears baseball," said Ron Damron, director of athletics. "He brought integrity and instant name recognition to our program, and we appreciate all his efforts."

Ashby, 34, has taken an active role in the Bears baseball program. After finishing the 2005 season with a 22-36 record and a third-place finish in the Mid-South Conference tournament, Ashby has signed 10 players for next year's team.

"Coach LeMaster worked hard and was very dedicated to the building of this program, and I'm very happy to have been a part of it," Ashby said. "We look forward to working with these student-athletes on a daily basis to insure their success both in the classroom and on the field during their careers at Pikeville College, so they may be prepared to be successful members of society once they graduate."

A 1994 graduate of U.Va.-Wise (then called Clinch Valley College) with a Bachelor of Science in economics, Ashby played football at both Clinch Valley and Liberty University and spent one season playing baseball at Pikeville. After spending years in sales, Ashby returned to Pikeville College, where his responsibilities have PRESTONSBURG – Last weekend, a group of 13 bicyclists from Prestonsburg participated in the 48-mile tour of Red River Gorge, part of the Pedals and Blooms Festival at Stanton and Beattyville.

The Prestonsburg cyclists participating in the 48-mile tour were Darrell Patton, Jayne Patton, W.C. Porter, Nathan Wright, Lenville Martin, Jerry Hopson and Angela Stephens.

Doug Hyden, Barry Crum, Marty Thacker, Justin Bingham, and David Dillon took part in the 50-mile race and Don Fields cycled in the 85-mile race.

Temperatures were over 90 degrees and the humidity level was high for the event. The event currently ranks as the largest bicycle event held in Eastern Kentucky. The event allowed each participant the opportunity to ride a bicycle through the Nada Tunnel and Red River Gorge.

JACKSON – Jackson City has hired a Floyd County native to guide its boys' basketball program. Former Breathitt County head coach Brian Hall, a Floyd County native who played at McDowell High School, recently got the call to take over the Jackson City boys' basketball team. Hall comes to Jackson City from rival Breathitt County and replaces Kyle Lively. Departing Jackson City after a breakthrough season, Lively accepted the position of Powell County head coach earlier this year.

Shelby Valley's Varney inks with Pikeville College

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE – A member of the two-time 15th Region champions has signed a scholarship agreement to continue her education and athletics career at Pikeville College.

Lucinda Varney, the starting third baseman for Greg Napier's Shelby Valley Lady Kats, signed the agreement on Thursday afternoon in the Hall of Fame Room at the Pikeville College Gym.

"She's a winner who comes from a highly successful program," said Robert Staggs, softball coach at Pikeville College. "We look forward to adding her to our team and having her part of our program."

Varney has a career .298 batting average at Shelby Valley, posting 111 hits in her five seasons. She had an on-base percentage of .376 and scored 83 runs while driving in 66.

But Varney made her reputation in the field, and there she posted a .914 fielding percentage, committing only eight errors as a senior.

Varney will join a couple of former teammates on the Pikeville College roster. Classmate Cortney Bentley signed with the Lady Bears recently, and catcher Kristi Taylor will be a junior next season.

Shelby Valley High School graduate Lucinda Varney recently signed to play softball and continue her educational opportunities at nearby Pikeville College.

Clemens outdueled by rookie in season debut

by CHRIS DUNCAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON – Roger Clemens showed his age. Francisco Liriano showed his stuff. In The Rocket's return to the majors, the Minnesota rookie ace looked more like the Clemens of old, striking out seven in eight strong innings to lead the Twins to a 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros on Thursday night. "You take a lot of memories away from a game like this," the 22-year-old Liriano said. "You maybe will not ever be on the field with him again."

hearing the numbers and the record crowd and the people turning out. It was very gratifying that they appreciate your hard work and that they're out here to support us." On a 1-2 count, Castillo bounced a ball back to Clemens, who dropped the ball and couldn't scoop it up before Castillo reached first base safely. Clemens was charged with an error. The next batter grounded into a double play before Joe Mauer, who leads the majors in hitting, struck out. Clemens (0-1) glided through the first inning in 12 pitches, nine of them strikes. "I was really excited about how my legs felt in my warmup session," he said. "I knew I was going to be fairly crisp."

got a lot of work in front of me. It's going to be a huge challenge." Picking up a trend from last year, the Astros failed to give Clemens much run support. The Rocket was 13-8 with a career-best 1.87 ERA in 32 starts last season, but Houston was shut out in nine of his starts and scored three runs or fewer in 20 of them. This time, it was mostly due to the left-handed Liriano, who baffled the Astros with a slider that made Clemens look bad when he struck out in the third. "That machine I've been hitting off for two weeks didn't throw that slider," Clemens said. Liriano faced the minimum through the first six innings, thanks to double plays in three of them. He walked Craig Biggio leading off the seventh before retiring three straight batters. It was the longest outing of the season for Liriano, who struck out a career-high 11 batters in his last start. "It was fun to watch Roger," Minnesota manager Ron Gardenhire said, "but on our side, it was actually more fun to watch Francisco."

Liriano, 7 months old when Clemens started his big league career, improved to 7-1, allowing his only runs on Jason Lane's two-run homer in the seventh. With a Minute Maid Park-record 43,769 fans on hand to see the 43-year-old Clemens, the seven-time Cy Young winner threw 100 pitches in five innings in his first start since leaving Game 1 of the World Series eight months ago with a strained hamstring. He allowed two runs on six hits and had four strikeouts and two walks. He also made an error, struck out in his only at-bat and hustled to first to complete a double play. "It was positive," Clemens said. "My body felt better than expected and I hope and expect to get stronger each time I get out there." Clemens got a standing ovation as he walked from the dugout to the bullpen 20 minutes before the game. As he warmed up, a fan held up a fluorescent sign that read: "Clemens is Proof the 40s is the new 30s." Another fan wearing a helmet and a bright orange spacesuit had one that said, "That's a Roger, Houston, Our Rocket Has Landed." Cameras flashed in every corner of the park as Clemens fired his first pitch, a 91-mph strike, to Luis Castillo. "When I walked out, it was great," Clemens said. "After I came out of the game, I was Astros manager Phil Garner said Clemens would throw "around 100 pitches" in the game and he was more than halfway there after a withering third inning. He gave up an RBI double to Jason Kubel and a run-scoring single to Michael Cuddyer, finally ending the 38-pitch inning by striking out Torii Hunter. "I had that one long inning and I was trying to make a point to work fast and see how winded I could get and it worked out fine," Clemens said. "I really didn't feel like I was sitting on my back leg or collapsing. Overall, it was just good to get back out there." In the fifth, Clemens lumbered over to cover first base on a 3-6-1 double play. He pointed at the umpire to make sure he got the call before slowly retreating to the mound. Russ Springer relieved Clemens to open the sixth and the Twins extended their lead to 3-0 on Justin Morneau's homer. Garner said Clemens may have rushed his return, but Clemens insisted he's ready for the grind of the remaining season. "I'm excited about it, but I know the work that's involved," Clemens said. "I've Breathitt County, however, stumbled last season. The Bobcats posted a 4-23 record in Hall's third season as head coach. Jackson City (17-12) captured the 55th District championship last season and finished runner-up in the 14th Region.

EKU summer camps in full swing

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

RICHMOND – Even though collegiate athletics takes a break for the summer, the Eastern Kentucky University athletic coaching staff and student-athletes keep busy with numerous summer camps. Women's soccer concluded its camp this week, welcoming over 50 players to campus. This fall, the Colonel soccer team will be playing at its brand new facility featuring a clubhouse, a soccer-only field and press box. Women's basketball also kicked off its summer camp season with a team camp this week. Over 400 players participated in four-day event.

Next week, the football staff will be hosting Backfield in Motion, a nonprofit organization founded by Joe Davis, a place kicker for the Colonels in the 1980s. In its third year coming to EKU, this camp allows middle-school aged inner city kids a chance to experience the collegiate atmosphere, learn study habits, communication skills and also pick up some tips on the football field.

Schools vote to tighten rules on athletes who "play up"

by JEFFREY McMURRAY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON — Kentucky high schools have voted to tighten eligibility rules for middle school athletes who "play up," although the move falls far short of what some public school officials were seeking.

Under a referendum approved by member schools of the Kentucky High School Athletic Association, anyone in eighth grade or below who plays a sport at the high school level must eventually enroll in that high school. Barring certain exceptions such as a physical move, a school switch would deem the student ineligible to play at any level for one year.

The proposal was approved 124-36 this week, sending it to the KHSAA's Board of Control for consideration at its July 10 meeting. The schools also signed off on a largely undisputed measure to clarify some of the rules on financial aid for student athletes.

But absent from the ballot was a far more contentious proposal that would geographically align all middle schools and high schools as part of a "feeder system," in which middle school athletes would be required to play high school sports only within the system.

KHSAA officials didn't immediately return calls Wednesday seeking information on whether the feeder system option was still on the table.

Wilson Sears, superintendent of Somerset Independent

Schools, said the two measures approved by the schools were "tag-along" concepts that don't address the real problem of recruiting student athletes.

"They aren't bad proposals, but they don't get at the problem," Sears said. "The leadership in our schools across the state intend to continue to pursue it. We intend to pursue it aggressively."

For years, a debate has been brewing in Kentucky over whether large private schools enjoy a competitive advantage over smaller schools or public schools that get their athletes from defined geographical boundaries. The debate began anew in October when public schools, the vast majority of KHSAA's membership, voted to force private schools into their own tournaments.

But the Board of Control advised against that approach, and the Kentucky Board of Education has urged the schools several times to come to a compromise.

Brad Lyman, head of school for Kentucky Country Day, said the actions the schools took this week should appease most of the critics. He said they address the biggest concerns expressed by some public school officials.

"The dialogue is good," Lyman said. "It's promising we're not going to continue to have acrimony over this. We're going to come together and do what's right for kids. I don't know if this is going to please everybody, but we'll see what this year brings."

DeMoss honored at Season of Firsts Tribute

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

LEXINGTON — A group of remarkable women from the University of Kentucky gathered together at Dudley's Restaurant Tuesday for a special tribute to Coach Mickie DeMoss for leading the Kentucky women's basketball to a "Season of Firsts."

The event was hosted by Carol E. Jordan, Director of UK's Center for Research on Violence Against Women and Debbie Long, owner of Dudley's Restaurant. Co-hosts were Patsy B. Todd, First Lady; Mira S. Ball, Board of Trustees; Wendy Baldwin, Executive Vice President for Research; Jeannine L. Blackwell, Dean of the Graduate School; Carol P. Diedrichs, Dean of Libraries; Lori S. Gonzalez, Dean of Health Sciences; Kay S. Hoffman, Dean of Social Work; Sharon P. Turner, Dean of Dentistry; Carolyn A. Williams, Dean of Nursing; Dorothy Y. Brockopp, President's Commission on Women; Connie Barnhart, UK Athletics.

"Whether working in research, teaching administration or athletics, women at the University of Kentucky excel," said Carol E. Jordan. "We measure success, not just in individual achievement, but also by how we mentor young women and build teams to reach our fullest potential. No one exemplifies these two measures more than Coach Mickie DeMoss."

Kentucky's record-breaking season came to an end with a heartbreaking loss to No. 16/17 and fourth-seeded Michigan State, 67-63, in the NCAA second round. Coach Miekie DeMoss, who was named the

SEC Coach of the Year by the SEC coaches and The Associated Press, led the Wildcats to a remarkable season of firsts in just her third year at the helm. DeMoss piloted a team that went from winning a combined 20 games in the two years prior to her arrival in 2003, to a record-breaking regular season that included the most wins (22) since 1989-90, the most conference wins in school history (nine), the highest conference finish (fourth) in 23 years, an appearance in the SEC Tournament semifinals for the first time in seven years, and UK's first bid in the NCAA Tournament in seven years with its highest seed (fifth) since 1983. The Cats now have their sights set on next season as all but one senior, Stephanie Stumbo, returns. UK also adds four prep standouts in Arnika Brown, Lydia Watkins, Brittany Edelen, and Amani Franklin. The incoming class was ranked 23rd nationally by the Blue Star Index.

Gold Medalist visits UK Women's Basketball Camp

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

LEXINGTON — The University of Kentucky women's basketball program welcomed Ruthie Bolton a two-time Olympic gold medalist (1996, 2000) and longtime star for the Women's Basketball National Association's Sacramento Monarchs to campus. Bolton served as a guest speaker and instructor at Mickie DeMoss' Summer Camp June 19-22.

"It's exciting. When I saw Coach [Mickie] DeMoss at the SEC Tournament, I told her 'I want to come to your camp.' I was excited about it," Bolton said. "Coach DeMoss really drew me here. My calendar was filling up, but I wanted to save time for it. I am really just proud of how she has done. I just wanted to come to be a part of what she's doing."

During her eight seasons in the WNBA (1997-2004), Bolton was a two-time all-star and averaged over 19 points per game in her first season in the league. DeMoss recruited Bolton to Auburn where she played from 1986 to 1989. Auburn advanced to the NCAA tournament four times and made it to the championship games in 1989 and 1990. Bolton was named to 1988 and 1989 NCAA Midwest Region All-Tournament teams, the 1988 NCAA Final Four All-Tournament Team and the 1989 All SEC second team. She earned a degree in Exercise Physiology.

"Coach DeMoss has always been positive and really believes in building up young ladies, and that's what I'm about too," Bolton said. "I played basketball for quite a while and I want to give back. She just really cares and has a great relationship with my family. She had a chance to meet my mom and dad. She knows I'm for real - I'm who I am. We connect very well."

Bolton boasts a family of 19 brothers and sisters, including twin brother Ray, and at last count had 105 nieces and nephews. Growing up in rural southern Mississippi, she is the 16th child of the late Rev. Linwood Bolton and Leola Bolton.

"I try to tell these young ladies that your attitude really takes you a long way," Bolton said. "That's what helped me - my attitude and work-ethic. I tell the girls to be the best that they can be. I tell them to work hard, keep a positive attitude and it will take you a whole lot of places."

Bolton currently serves as the head coach at William Jessup University in Rocklin, Calif., and holds a fan relations position with the Monarchs front office. She was recently named honorable mention on the WNBA's All-Decade team, one of just 15 players honored.

Friends of Coal Bowl finalized

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — The West Virginia Coal Association announced Wednesday that it has entered a partnership with Marshall University and West Virginia University and will sponsor the upcoming football series between the two schools.

The games will be called the Friends of Coal Bowl.

"Our industry is the major industry in West Virginia, and we believe that it helps bring our state together. We also believe this football game will bring our state together because it involves West Virginia's two flagship institutions," said Bill Raney, president of the West Virginia Coal Association.

"We're happy to have an important role in this tremendous game. And we hope that our participation will put a spotlight on the proud working people of the coal industry."

A seven-year series between Marshall and West Virginia begins with this year's contest in Morgantown.

"I am so pleased that a sponsor like Friends of Coal has now stepped up to take this game to a level of national prominence similar to the great instate rivalries of such schools as Florida-Florida State, Alabama-Auburn and Clemson-South Carolina," West Virginia Governor Joe Manchin said.

Manchin joined representatives of the two universities at Wednesday's news conference, which was held at the Embassy Suites hotel.

"We are happy the Friends of Coal are joining us in making this game one of a kind. Their support is tremendous. We are looking forward to a great season opener on September 2," said West Virginia University Athletic Director Ed Pastilong.

Marshall University Athletic Director Bob Marcum said, "We greatly appreciate the Friends of Coal for their support in helping to make this a great event. This series will showcase two outstanding Universities that all West Virginians can be proud of and we look forward to opening the season with the Friends of Coal Bowl."

A game logo that features the Friends of Coal emblem and helmets representing both universities' football teams was also unveiled. The contest was named the Friends of Coal Bowl in honor of the more-than-50,000-member grassroots organization that supports state's coal industry, Raney said.

The West Virginia Coal Association will make a substantial donation that will benefit both universities and include scholarship support, Raney said.

Kentucky basketball player Moss decides to give up football

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON — Kentucky basketball player Ravi Moss' on again, off again flirtation with the school's football team is off again.

Moss has decided to give up his experiment as a football player, the school announced Thursday, after an NCAA ruling that he would have to miss half the season.

Moss, a senior who was trying out as a receiver after his basketball eligibility had ended, was ruled ineligible for half the football season for his paid appearance in a barnstorming game that included an autograph session.

"After much thought and consideration, Ravi has decided to forego the football season," coach Rich Brooks said in a news release. "He felt that missing half the games would not make it worth doing what was needed to prepare for the season. Given the NCAA ruling, we certainly understand and wish him well. We appreciate the effort he gave us."

This is the second time

Moss has quit the football team during spring practices. The previous time, offensive coordinator Joker Phillips talked him into rejoining.

Moss, who played point guard for Tubby Smith's basketball team, is considered one of the best basketball walk-ons in school history. He finished his senior season as a starter.

COLLEGE BASEBALL: Wildcats add one to recruiting class

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

LEXINGTON — The University of Kentucky baseball team added another talented player to its already stellar recruiting class this week as Neiko Johnson signed a national letter-of-intent to play for the Wildcats.

Johnson is a product of Redan High School in Stone Mountain, Ga., one of the top high school programs in the state. He led Redan to back-to-back 7-AAAAA Region 2 championships as a junior and senior while being named All-County.

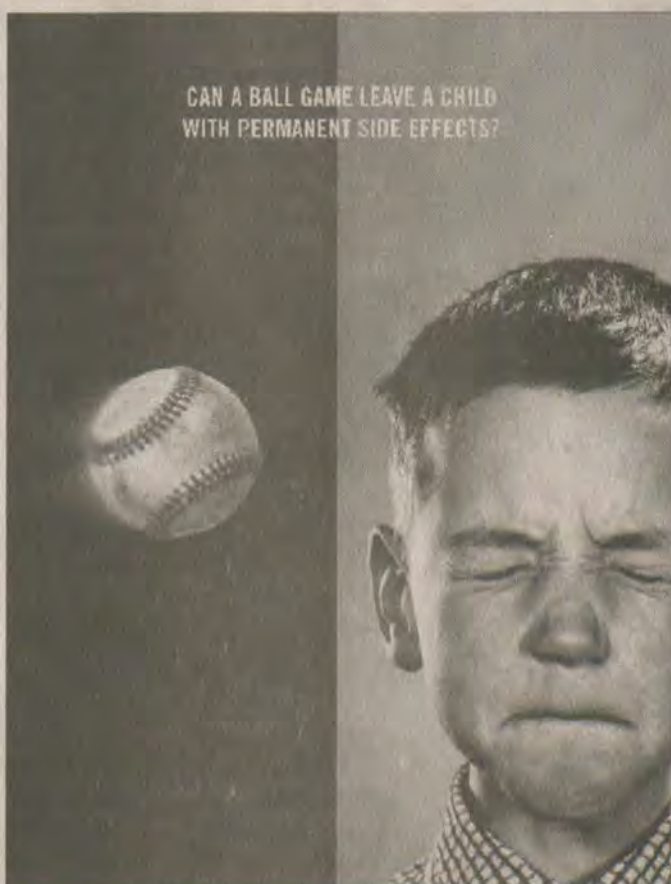

As a senior, Johnson batted .433 with six home runs and 24 RBIs. A dangerous bases en route to scoring an astounding 46 runs.

His junior season, Johnson hit .417 with five homers and eight doubles. He also stole eight bags and was named team co-MVP with PJ Phillips, a second-round draft pick of the Los Angeles Angels of Anaheim.

"We are very excited to add Neiko Johnson to an already outstanding recruiting class," Kentucky coach John Cohen said. "Neiko is a very athletic, slick-fielding infielder who should have an opportunity to compete for at-bats early in his career. Redan HS has quite a track record of producing talented middle infielders (BJ Phillips, PJ Phillips, and Chris Nelson), and we expect big things out of Neiko at Kentucky."

Johnson joins a stellar recruiting class already coming in to UK that includes the Kentucky State Player of the Year (Clint Tilford) and the Ohio State Player of the Year (Chris Walden).

Even in the heat, there are bass to bust on the surface

by STEVE VANTRESE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PADUCAH — During a recent Bassmaster Elite tournament on Kentucky Lake and Lake Barkley, some of the world's best fishermen probed the depths for heavy catches of summer pattern bass — while others did just the opposite.

Most pro anglers in the high-stakes event concentrated their efforts on offshore ledges in deep water where it was predicted the tournament would be won, and it was.

Nevertheless, some savvy pros added good weight to their catches — in some cases, entire limits of bass — fishing as shallow as possible, the surface.

Even when some bass are mired in the depths, other fish remain shallow. On many waters, even deep-oriented summer bass may be accessible on the very surface at least in early-morning, late-evening or overnight hours.

Topwater fishing long has been one of the favorite ways to catch bass because of the visual and auditory excitement of fish attacking lures on the surface. It's hair-raising to witness the lure at work, blurring or swishing along the surface, only to disappear with a slosh into the mouth of a bass the size of a coffee can.

There are surface lures of all sizes appropriate for heavy-casting tackle to lighter spinning or spincast gear. Most common but varied by design are those hardbaits long known as topwaters "plugs."

The simplest are the treble hook-equipped cigar or stickbaits that are as basic as a stogie. Typified by the Heddon Zara Spook, the stickbait has no action of its own but often is retrieved by turning the reel handle while twitching the rod tip — a tactic that causes a side-to-side alternating dance called "walking the dog."

Concave-faced poppers or chuggers like the Rebel Pop-R, Storm Rattlin' Chug Bug or Rapala Skitter Pop are almost useless with a steady retrieve. But alternately paused and twitched with a short, sharp tug of the rod tip, such plugs pop, gurgle, bubble or spit, sounds and sights that entice bass attacks.

Lures with single or double propellers like the Smithwick Devil's Horse or the Heddon Baby Torpedo thrash lightly on the water's surface with every short pull or even a steady retrieve.

A few odd walking topwaters, the Arbogast Jitterbug most prominently, have a wide concave lip that forces the lure to rock to one side, then the other with a fast-paced "blub-blub-blub" when retrieved steadily. Bass don't like to give the small fleeing creature the chance to get away.

Even floating lures that are officially "jerkbaits" — slim, minnow-shaped plugs with short, shallow-diving lips — can be deadly efficient as surface lures. Toss an original Rapala minnow, a Bomber Long A or Rebel Minnow to bass-lurking water, let it rest with occasional short, sharp pulls to make it dip slightly with a tantalizing wiggle, then float back to horizontal on the surface.

Much different are the spinnerbait-type buzzbait topwater chummers made with one or two larger propeller blades on a flexible wire frame over a large, single upturned hook. The buzzbait is not a floater, but is cast and immediately retrieved steadily, the gurgling resistance of the water-spun blade both keeping it at the surface (if you reel fast enough) and provoking what can be savage bites from bass.

Topwater fishing tends to be best early, late or at night in summer conditions when light penetration is minimal, making upward feeding more comfortable for eyelid-lacking bass. Cloudy, rainy days may not be picture perfect aesthetically, but they are more conducive for surface feeding and topwater fishing.

The best type of surface lure and the most effective retrieve for any given time and place are strictly up to the bass. The most effective fishermen try a variety of approaches and gravitate to those to which bass seem to respond best.

The worst pitfall of surface fishing may be reacting to the exciting sight and sound of strikes — setting the hook and pulling the lure away from the bass before it has been solidly taken.

Despite the disturbance of seen and heard strikes, wait until you feel the fish pull before setting the hook, advise experienced bass anglers. Flinch with the excitement of the strike and you'll snatch the lure away from the fish.

FSN to air dramatic conclusion of Kentucky Lake Wal-Mart FLW Tour event

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

MINNEAPOLIS - Tune in Sunday, July 2, to "FLW Outdoors" on FSN for the conclusion of the $900,000 Wal-Mart FLW Tour event presented by Pedigree from Kentucky Lake. Watch as co-hosts Charlie Evans and Keith Lebowitz take viewers through the nail-biting final weigh-in and award the winning pro angler $100,000. The one-hour show is the second of a two-part series covering the fifth event of the $7.6 million FLW Tour season.

The July 2 show presents several mini-features with the 10 pros that made the cutoff after two days of competition. The features include FLW Tour stalwarts Steve Kennedy and David Walker.

Kennedy, a veteran pro from Auburn, Ala., has earned more than $475,000 competing in FLW Outdoors events. His career also includes seven victories and 25 top-10 tournament finishes. Kennedy, who camps at most tournaments with his wife Julia and dog Louie, talks about life on the road. FSN also flashes back to 2003 on Kentucky Lake, when Kennedy caught 10 bass during the final round that weighed 44 pounds, 14 ounces, to claim $100,000 and his first FLW Tour victory.

One of the most consistent anglers on tour, Walker admittedly struggled out of the gate in 2006. His turnaround happened on day two of the Wal-Mart FLW Series event on Lake Cumberland. After finishing the opening day in 111th place, Walker rebounded on day two with a five-bass limit that weighed 13 pounds, 7 ounces. Combined with a strong day three, the Sevierville, Tenn., pro finished the Cumberland event in 11th place. Next up for Walker was a visit to Kentucky Lake where he caught 10 bass in the opening round that weighed 36 pounds, 7 ounces. Walker is catching his fish on a combination of baits — jigs, a Carolina rig and crankbaits — mainly fishing points in deeper water offshore.

FSN will also air a segment on the influence of Japanese anglers and their approach to tournament fishing in the United States. While there are only a handful of full-time pros from Japan, most are making a name for themselves through perseverance, a grueling on-the-water practice schedule and an analytical approach to the sport unlike any seen before. Thanks to finesse tactics honed west of the Mississippi, anglers like Toshinari Namiki, Shinichi Fukae and Takahiro Omori are proving that there is no substitute for hard work when it comes to winning at bass fishing's highest levels.

In addition, Gain co-angler Real Andrews of Milford, Conn., participates in this edition of Fishing 101. Andrews, who is also a fitness instructor, introduces anglers to a 10-minute workout designed to minimize carpal tunnel injuries and back pain.

FSN is the industry leader in providing the most up-to-date technology in TV production. FSN puts viewers in the boats with the pros, shadowing them from sunrise until the final weigh-in using innovative camera work that gives fishing fans the most intimate viewing experience available.

FSN broadcasts "FLW Outdoors" Sundays from 11 a.m. to noon ET. Check local listings for show times and channels in your area. FLWOutdoors.com also provides an online show guide listing what events are coming up on "FLW Outdoors."

During each tournament show, "FLW Outdoors" hosts Charlie Evans and Keith Lebowitz go on location to provide on-the-water coverage. "FLW Outdoors" is tape-delayed to bring audiences nationwide the best tournament footage possible throughout the season.

FSN reaches more than 81 million homes through its network of 20 regional sports channels. Established in 1996, FSN is the only cable network that supplies national, regional and local sports programming. FSN serves as the cable TV home to 62 of the 82 MLB, NHL and NBA teams based in the United States, and produces over 4,500 live events each year. FSN has an extensive catalog of original national programs, including "Best Damn Sports Show Period" and "Beyond the Glory" documentary series, along with national packages of collegiate sports. Based in Los Angeles, FSN is part of the vast FOX Sports television family. For the latest up-to-the-minute sports news and opinions, visit the FOX Sports/FSN website at www.FoxSports.com.

"FLW Outdoors" is also broadcast internationally to more than 350 million households in such countries as Germany, China, South Africa, Australia, Malaysia, Russia, Hungary and the United Kingdom, making it the most widely distributed weekly outdoor-sports television show in the world. Additionally, FLW Outdoors is proud to provide tournament coverage to more than 800,000 service men and women stationed around the world in 177 countries and aboard Navy ships through broadcasts on the American Forces Network.

Named after the legendary founder of Ranger Boats,

Forrest L. Wood, FLW Outdoors administers the Wal-Mart FLW Tour, Wal-Mart FLW Series, Stren Series, Wal-Mart Bass Fishing League, Wal-Mart Texas Tournament Trail presented by Abu Garcia, Stratos Owners' Tournament Trail, Wal-Mart FLW Walleye Tour, Wal-Mart FLW Walleye League, Wal-Mart FLW Kingfish Tour, Wal-Mart FLW Kingfish Series, Wal-Mart FLW Redfish Series and Wal-Mart FLW Striper Series. These circuits offer combined purses exceeding $37.9 million through 249 events in 2006.

Wal-Mart and many of America's largest and most respected companies support FLW Outdoors and its tournament trails. Wal-Mart signed on as an FLW Outdoors sponsor in 1997 and today is the world's leading supporter of tournament fishing. For more information about Wal-Mart, visit Wal-Mart.com.

8 races, 8 different winners in ARCA

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

TOLEDO, Ohio — Eight races deep into the 2006 ARCA RE/MAX Series tour, the series has yet to name a repeat winner.

In arguably the series' most competitive era, the 54-year-old tour travels next to Kansas Speedway for the Kansas Lottery $200 Grand on July 1. And, if history can serve as an indicator, a ninth different winner in the ninth race of 2006 is certainly not a stretch.

In fact, in the five previous RE/MAX Series events at Kansas, there have been five different winners on the 1.5-mile speedway to include Chad Blount, Ryan Hemphill, Shelby Howard, Jason Jarrett and Frank Kimmel.

Kimmel, whose seven ARCA RE/MAX Series championships have made him one of the most recognizable faces in the series, is the only past race winner entered. The likelihood of a new winner gracing victory lane at Kansas gains even more strength when you look at the entry list, which is chock-full of young developmental drivers looking to earn their career first wins.

While high profile, well-funded teams associated with NASCAR have traditionally entered ARCA RE/MAX Series events as a way to develop young talent, today's up and coming racers are not satisfied with simply logging laps. In fact, developmental drivers in the RE/MAX Series have a history of winning races.

This season alone, Yates, RWI, and Dodge have put drivers into the ARCA RE/MAX Series winner's circle, with Stephen Leicht (Nashville), Steve Wallace (Kentucky) and Chase Miller (Pocono) earning victories, respectively.

And, several teams with driver development programs have entered Kansas.

Among those development teams is Evernham Motorsports with its driver Erin Crocker in the No. 98 Hamburger Helper Dodge. Crocker shares the limelight with Shawna Robinson as the highest finishing female in series history with her second place run at Kentucky Speedway in 2005 (Robinson finished second at Daytona in 1999). Crocker heads to Kansas on the heels of a solid fourth place finish in the Hantz Group 200 ARCA RE/MAX Series race at Michigan on June 16. She will also be competing in the same-day NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series O'Reilly Auto Parts 250 at Kansas.

"I'm excited to go to Kansas and race," said Crocker. "Last year I was originally scheduled to run the Busch race there and Kasey swapped and ran the race and won. I watched the race from the pit box. I also watched the Cup race there. It looks like a really fun place to race. It's a mile and a half which is somewhat similar to Kentucky. I'm sure the ARCA car will be really good there. And I'm sure I'll gain some valuable knowledge running the ARCA race that can be transferred over to the truck race. It's just like any thing, the more seat time and the more time you have on the track the better you will be. It's definitely an advantage for me to run these double header weekends."

Crocker's competition from the development team ranks includes rookie Brad Coleman in a Federated Car Care-sponsored Brewco Motorsports Ford. In just four series starts, all in '06, Coleman finished second in his series debut at Nashville Superspeedway in April. The 18-year-old recent high school graduate backed that up with a Pork Pole qualifying run on the Salem short-track and another second place run to race winner Steve Wallace at Kentucky. Coleman most recently finished fifth at Michigan.

"I plan on running as many ARCA races as possible," said Coleman. "It's a great series and it will allow me to get enough experience to prepare for my eventual entry into the Busch Series. Brewco has helped me out a lot by allowing me to develop my skills first in the ARCA series before progressing to the next level."

Having already been so close to victory lane, both Crocker and Coleman should be odds-on favorites when the Kansas Lottery $200 Grand rolls off Saturday afternoon. Coleman's chances at a victory become even more promising when you consider his performance in a recent ARCA open test, where the driver set a blistering time of 32.190 seconds (167.754 mph), good enough to unofficially sit on top of the speed charts.

The other development team in the mix is the Dodge Motorsports Dodge fielded by Cunningham Motorsports.

Veteran driver Frank Kimmel has won an unprecedented seven ARCA championships.

The team, which has split driving duties among a handful of drivers this season, has entered second-generation racer Scott Lagasse for Kansas. Lagasse is coming off a ninth place finish at Michigan after qualifying second, and the team is responsible for Chase Miller's Pocono victory on June 10th.

But, if a new face is to visit victory lane at Kansas, they will undoubtedly need to battle some seasoned veterans first. Current point leader Bobby Gerhart is entered in the Lucas Oil Chevrolet. Gerhart, whose '06 opening act was a record fourth Daytona victory, leads Kimmel by 120 points heading into Kansas. This marks the first time since 2002 that a driver outside of Kimmel has led the points nine races deep into the season. Ironically, the driver who led the points this far into the season back in '02 was Damon Lusk, who is currently third in points behind Gerhart and Kimmel. Billy Venturini, a third-generation racer who answered the Salem short-track call with his career-first series triumph in April, is another driver that could possibly win his second race of the season at Kansas. And, no one can count out Kimmel. After all, the seventh and defending series champion is the inaugural Kansas winner and a two-time Pork Pole award winner there.

Eggleston new crew chief for MB2's No. 14 Cup car

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

MOORESVILLE, N.C. — MB2 Motorsports announced Wednesday that Scott Eggleston will take over the crew chief duties on Sterling Marlin's No. 14 Chevrolet, replacing Doug Randolph, who will be reassigned to a new position.

Eggleston's first race as Marlin's crew chief will be this weekend at the Nextel Cup road course event at

Infineon Raceway in Sonoma, Calif. Inside

The reassignment of Randolph — along with additional team changes — will be announced in a couple of weeks, according to Jay Frye, MB2 Motorsports CEO and general manager.

"We're going through a restructuring, and once completed, we strongly feel it will be beneficial for the entire MB2 Motorsports organization," Frye said. "We welcome Scott, who has worked with Sterling in the past. The working chemistry that Scott and Sterling have established will be a strong asset for the No. 14. Regarding Doug, he will continue to play an integral role in our organization."

Eggleston, of Springfield,

SABCO Racing for 22 races in 1999 and for the full season in 2000. His best finish as Marlin's crew chief was second at the 2000 road race at Infineon.

"Hopefully, we can duplicate the performance or even finish one better on Sunday," Marlin said. "I look forward to being reunited with Scott."

"Sterling and I have been close friends ever since we worked together at SABCO," said Eggleston, who joined MB2 in May as a research and development advisor. "I feel this team has potential and look forward to working with Sterling and the crew. Our goal is to be a challenger week in and week out."

Eggleston, 43, started working as a mechanic for eventually worked into a crew chief role at SABCO in 1998 with Joe Nemechek's car. Eggleston was also the crew chief for Michael Waltrip when he won the 2001 Daytona 500 for DEI Motorsports.

Along with his crew chief duties at SABCO and DEI, Eggleston also was a crew chief for Morgan-McClure Motorsports for part of 2001 and the full season in 2002. Before joining MB2, his most recent position was competition director at FitzBradshaw Racing.

This Town, That World

Editor's Note: For years, Floyd County Times founder and former publisher Norman Allen wrote a weekly column that looked at Floyd County through his eyes. His columns are being reprinted due to request.

SHANK-HIGH AND DOWN IN THE DUMPS

I have insisted, all along, that things could be a lot worse and that we all should not abandon hope. But I don't know, now, I'm plumb upset and leaning just a bit to the theory that we've gone to the bow-wows. Why the sombre outlook, the miseries of spirit and si-gogglin' view of things in general? Simply this: I've just finished reading this fashion note from London telling of these shank-length trousers they're proposing to put on men, exposing calves that the lovin'est cow in the lot would disavow.

THE AGING DOGS

Jack Hyden and I rambled around in a sidewalk conversation, the other day, till the talk ran to dogs. His dog had only recently died, and we spoke feelingly, perhaps a bit deprecatingly, of the lengths a fellow will go to for his so-called "best friend." This dog of Jack's had been dog-napped and he had hunted him down. He had had him treated for a variety of ailments, and that set me off recounting the miseries for which my elderly Dalmatian had needed the attention of a vet: A crushed hip, infection, suspected hepatitis, czema, mange, fleas, sundry injuries from a car, and a severe hewing by dogs, and so on.

We agreed dogs have about all the ailments to which man is heir, and Jack added:

"We had one dog to the vet for rostate trouble."

REVIEW

The fellow who went to the amphitheatre, the other night, wasn't a bit enthused about the respects. He's one who likes his drama or comedy, straight—none of this musical stuff. He stubbornly wore his hat where every other fella in the crowd was bareheaded. He kept his hands in his pocket, despite urgings to swing out, be carefree. Fact is, he started out, sitting on his hands. But he soon caught himself joining the applause.

Good show. Professional job. Splendid cast. You oughta see it.

WRONG DIAGNOSIS

Woodrow Burchett sometimes tells the story of the guy who got sick and remembered enough about it, next day, to review the experience with an acquaintance. "I was driving home," he called, "when my car began giving thump, thump, bump, bump, and I pulled off to the side of the road. Know what was wrong?"

PICKIN' AND GRINNIN'

Seasons past, musicians of all ages, from all walks of life, have gathered in the lobby of the Mountain Arts Center to enjoy making music together. This year, the tradition will continue, with an added element - everyone who wishes to, may perform onstage for their peers and those attending for enjoyment. Roger Coleman, center, with banjo, will lead up the Thursday evening events.

Summer Acoustic Jam & Front Porch Pickin' at the MAC

The Mountain Arts Center will host the Summer Acoustic Jam & Front Porch Pickin' at the MAC Thursday, June 29, at 7 p.m., and again on Thursday, July 6, Thursday, July 13, Thursday, July 27, and Thursday, August 3, all at 7 p.m.

Admission is free.

On most Thursday evenings this summer, folks will be getting together in the theater here at the Mountain Arts Center, and just, well pickin', grinnin' and jammin' with friends. Go on stage and pick a tune on your guitar or sing a song - it's your big chance to perform for your friends - with no big hassle. Kind of like people from around here used to do on a Saturday night - sit on their front porches together and make music. Kids would learn from Uncle Ted or cousin Sally, and there was a lot of family support. Musical heritage and its culture were passed down to the kids from Grandpa, Daddy and Momma. And the music was intertwined with daily lives so much that it became as natural as breathing to break into song when you were together. Mosey on down to the Mountain Arts Center on Thursday evenings throughout the summer - and bring a musical instrument if you play one. Everything's going to be casual. You'll have a good time, make some new friends and enjoy some kindred fellowship - and that's what life's all about now, isn't it?

Beauty of Eastern Kentucky showcased in novel

Dr. Allen R. Bohl has published his first novel entitled Back Porch Swing. His wife, the former Sherry Akers, was born on Prater Creek. The love for the area and the abundance of family and friends living in Floyd County inspired him to create Connsburg, a take-off of Prestonsburg.

"The initial response has been heart warming," said the former athletic director at Toledo, Fresno State, and Kansas.

Jim Tressel, head football coach for the Ohio State Buckeyes, had this to say about Bohl's writing. "It is awesome... my English major daughter from U of Chicago will love it, too. It is so realistic and graphic."

Nick Saban, who coaches the NFL Miami Dolphins, was also impressed, "Knowing Al's background in athletics, anyone who enjoys sports, from high school, to college, to the pros will love Back Porch Swing."

Back Porch Swing is a novel that emerges from the heart of a down-to-earth family living in eastern Kentucky. Lance Stoler, the oldest son, is riding the wave of college basketball recruitment. He and his family are touched by good, evil, and letting go. As for problems, they have plenty, but the family meets them head-on, through the power of friendship, love, family, and growing faith.

The novel is appealing to all age groups because throughout the book, Bohl addresses a variety of issues from family values to character to integrity, and most importantly, doing what's right went it counts.

Young readers will especially appreciate Lance's soul-wrenching passage from small town Kentucky B-ball glory into the high stakes, big ticket lure of college basketball fame.

Adults will gain strength and courage, as they tackle their own life situations, by drawing on the same timeless insight and godly faith that strengthened Lance, when temptation knocks.

Back Porch Swing was written so that:

High School English teachers could use it in their classrooms.

Coaches would want their entire teams to read it.

Parents would read it and then, some way, figure out how to get their children to read it.

Grandparents could jump in bed, turn on the reading light, and enjoy a story about a family they wished they had... or even better... one resembling the one they had helped create.

One reader summed it up best, "I'm so very pleasantly surprised because this is a book that can be read and enjoyed by people of all ages, of different walks of life and of varying interests. Sports is not my area of reading interest, but then this book isn't really about sports to me - it's about life and family and faith."

That's the best surprise of all - people will enjoy the book for what they glean from it on a personal level - not because of the story alone.

The book can be ordered at www.allenbohl.com, or www.amglive.com or visit www.barnesandnoble.com.

MOVIES FROM THE BLACK LAGOON

'Santa's Slay'

by TOM DOTY
STAFF WRITER

The Yuletide season gets a bloody makeover in this direct to video effort which is much more fun than it has any right to be.

The film comes off as having been designed by a ninja who went into Kmart last November and mistakenly took the Christmas decorations section to be a display of weaponry. Here you get to see just how effective a holiday wreath can be against an enraged bar bouncer and you'll learn that candy canes ought to be registered as lethal weapons when in the right (or wrong, depending on your viewpoint) hands.

This one shows its cards early in a pre-credit sequence that focuses on a family get-together on Christmas Eve. Everyone bickers at the table and they appear to be on the edge of a family feud until good old Kris Kringle slithers down the chimney and puts a stop to their sniping by laying into them like they topped his naughty list. Santa proceeds to butcher the group in toto and employs an arsenal of merry weaponry which includes turning the star of Bethlehem into a deadly accurate instrument of carnage.

Tom Doty
Staff Writer

The film then charts even more destruction over the course of the night while repeatedly cutting to a young man named Nicholas Yuleson (how's that for subtlety) who is stuck in a dead-end job and lives with an eccentric grandfather/inventor who has turned their home into a virtual stronghold. Turns out that grandpa is way in the know on Santa's rampage and he spills the beans, telling Nick that Santa is actually the devil but he lost a bet and had to be nice to children one day out of the year for 1,000 consecutive years, and the time limit is now up. Grandpa's story is acted out by animated puppets as he tells it and the action looks like deleted scenes from "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer."

Meanwhile, Santa continues dishing out the damage and appears to be targeting people who aren't feeling the Christmas spirit. A disgruntled, and decidedly foul-mouthed, woman gets run off the road "reindeer style," while a mugger winds up with a sharpened candy cane plunged into his eye socket. Santa then pays a visit to a night club, where he decides to trounce the bouncers before proclaiming the place naughty and promptly burning it down.

The next day is Christmas and Santa starts out slowly by wrecking a few yard decorations before graduating to throwing gift-wrapped bombs out of his sleigh as he hunts down Nick. The movie gets a little slow towards the end with one of those "Did we kill him?" scenes repeated a few too many times, but they eventually wrap it up and all in just under 80 minutes for a yuletide treat that

by ROXANE RUSSELL

"CHICKEN SOUP FOR THE COUNTRY SOUL"

My family have always been country music fans. My mother's favorite entertainer was Porter Wagoner, and even as a little girl of 5 swinging up in Louisiana, Momma used that "hero worship" on to me. While all of my friends were singing blues tunes, I knew all the words to

"Slew Foot."

One of my earliest memories was the day Porter was to perform near my hometown at the Ponchatoula Hayride. We stood in line for four hours just waiting for the doors to open so we could get a good seat. Unfortunately, hundreds of other people had the same idea, and by the time Momma made it through the rushing crowd, protecting her small daughter, we had to sit near the back of the building. Instead of being disappointed, Momma smiled at me, took my hand and said: "That's OK, baby. One of these days we're going to have front-row seats."

As fate would have it, 30 years later I was the feature producer for the television program "Opry Backstage" on TNN. I can't begin to tell you how proud that made Momma. She had been suffering from an extended illness and died soon after I got the position. However, she died knowing I was working with the stars of her beloved Grand Ole Opry.

Shortly after her death, my producer, Rusty Wilcoxon, asked me to participate in a live segment for the show. I was to be interviewed by the host of "Opry Backstage" - Porter Wagoner. During the commercial break as I was being miked and placed into position for the interview, I felt as if someone had taken my hand. No one was touching me, but the sensation was real.

As I looked at the crew in front of me, my thoughts suddenly raced to Momma, and for an instant I was the 5-year-old girl again. To my left, less than a foot away, sat Momma's favorite entertainer about to talk to her only child in front of millions of viewers. A single tear trickled down my cheek. As the floor manager was counting us out of the break, I spoke to Momma. Not out loud, but from the heart. We did it, Momma. We finally got those front-row seats! The tear was replaced by a smile.

Upset drivers should rely on 'car-ma'

by TOM and RAY MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:

Today I was involved in an accident. I was happily cruising along at the speed limit (35 mph), in the right lane, when someone came up behind me. He was clearly very upset that I was doing just the speed limit, and he could not stand being unable to get around me because of a line of cars in the other lane. He began to follow me very closely. Now, this situation activated some kind of psychological trigger for me, and I responded by tapping my brakes, causing him to swerve into the other lane (fortunately, there was a gap in the line of cars there). He didn't stay there, though. He swerved back into my lane, and followed me even more closely. I responded by applying my brakes gently, and he proceeded to hit my car — four times before we came to a stop! I got out of the car and started yelling at him, which he reacted to by leaving the scene — fortunately, after I was able to get his license number. There was no visible damage to my car, but I filed a police report anyway.

CLICK & CLACK

Now, legally, I know that the accident is entirely his fault. But ethically, I feel that I could have avoided the accident if I had not reacted in such a rash way. I have come to the conclusion that I react this way because I feel like I am being bullied, and I do not like being pushed around. I am normally a totally nonaggressive driver who gives everyone lots of room and who drives at the speed limit, even when I feel that I would like to be going a lot faster. My question is, can you suggest an alternate, less self-destructive but equally satisfying response other than hitting the brakes when I am being tailgated? — Cliff

RAY: You want something equally as satisfying as having him crash into your car four times and then take off? Well, you could drive into a tree to make him feel bad.

TOM: Unfortunately, the only reasonable thing to do in that situation is ignore the guy, Cliff.

RAY: That's difficult to do when somebody is being an unmitigated jerk and riding up on your butt like that. But if you're doing the speed limit and driving legally, that's the only good solution.

TOM: Anything else is escalation — and, as you realized, that makes you equally responsible for the results. He does one thing; you retaliate by doing something else. Then he retaliates, and pretty soon you two are the Hamas and Hezbollah of Route 95 — and nobody even remembers, or cares, who started it.

RAY: It's very tempting to "teach the other guy a lesson." But that's not your job. My brother tried that for years. When someone would tailgate him, he'd stop the car in the middle of the road, get out, walk around and ask if there was a problem. After being punched in the nose five or six times, and paying off the vacation homes of several local plastic surgeons, he finally gave up and now leaves the lessons to the police.

TOM: That's what you need to do, too, Cliff. You need to put your faith in karma. Or car-ma, in this case. When something like this happens, remember that people ultimately get what they deserve, even if it isn't at that exact moment. If you're a nice person, good things will happen to you. If you're a jerk, the police will eventually pull you over, you'll get a $200 ticket, your insurance rates will go up $400 a year, a guy at the gym will put itching powder in your shorts and you'll end up with a rash on your butt in the shape of New Jersey. That's the way the world works, Cliff.

RAY: And if you don't believe me, ask my brother to bend over, drop trou and show you how to get to Trenton.

There's a hole in the exhaust system, dear Tom and Ray

Dear Tom and Ray:

You mentioned recently that one could determine the integrity of one's exhaust system by plugging the tailpipe. If the engine stalls, the system is in good condition, and if it keeps running, the exhaust is leaking somewhere. I tried this on my 1991 BMW 535i, and even though I plugged both exhaust outlets and the engine kept running, there were no detectable leaks in the exhaust pipes or components. Does this test still hold true when used on a car, like mine, that has a high-compression engine? — Don

RAY: Yes, it's true for every car, Don. So either you didn't plug up the tailpipe well enough, or you do have an exhaust leak.

TOM: Cars with dual-tipped exhausts, like your car, are notoriously hard to plug up, though. There's a chrome-tipped cover that goes over the ends of those two pipes. And if you just cover that chrome piece with a rag, exhaust is going to escape around the edges of the chrome cover, even though you don't notice it.

RAY: So you need to block up the tailpipes themselves, which are behind the chrome tips. The easiest way to do that is with a wet rag. Not only does a wet rag conform more easily to the shape of the pipe to block the exhaust better, but it also delays, by at least several seconds, the amount of time it takes for the flesh on your hand to start sizzling.

TOM: If you totally seal the ends of both tailpipes and the car keeps running, then you absolutely have an exhaust leak somewhere.

RAY: And if you can't detect it under the car, it could be under the hood. Remember, the exhaust system is not just the muffler and the tailpipe — it starts at the cylinder head. If there's a pinhole in a pipe under the hood or a gasket up there that's leaking, that could be enough to allow the engine to keep running. And since the car is a 1991, I wouldn't be shocked if you've got an exhaust leak or three by now.

■ PALM SPRINGS, Fla. — Call it the bling sting.

Detectives had been watching the Blue Diamond Jewelry shop for a month after getting reports that its workers were fitting customers with gold teeth caps using filthy equipment.

Some clients had no problems with their shiny new "grills." Others were not so fortunate and suffered severe infections.

The amateur, unlicensed dentists cast the grills using filthy tools stored in a cluttered back room amid trash and debris, authorities said.

Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office detectives put an end to the dentistry Wednesday and shut down the business Wednesday in an undercover sting.

Sarah V. Encarnacion, 39, was arrested just as she was about to place caps inside the mouth of an undercover sheriff's investigator. She was charged with unlawful practice of dentistry, proprietorship of non-dentist, and working in an unlawful dental laboratory.

■ SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Bank robbers apparently don't have an advocacy group protesting such insulting law enforcement monickers as the "Overweight Bandit," "Big Nose Bandit" and "Oldtimer Bandit."

The latest is the "Enormous Ears Bandit," who is targeting banks as far away as San Diego and has apparently struck the Central Coast area for a third time.

The bandit got away with about $3,000 from a Bank of America branch in Montecito on Wednesday. After looking at surveillance video, investigators said it was the work of the crook the FBI dubbed "The Enormous Ears Bandit." He's wanted in six other robberies.

The robber on Wednesday handed a demand note to a teller and ordered the cash to be in $50s and $100s, police said. No weapon was seen.

■ ANTIGO, Wis. — Years after casting a bottled-up note into a lake for a class project and just one year after his death, a man's childhood message has been found and returned to his mother.

Eleven years ago, a then 10-year-old Joshua Baker wrote the message nestled in an empty vanilla container, his mother, Maggie Holbrook said.

He died last February following a motor vehicle accident in California. He had recently returned home after serving in the Middle East as a U.S. Marine.

"I think he was just letting us know he was OK and to keep doing what we are doing," Holbrook said.

The message surfaced in White Lake in late April, just days after the 11th anniversary of its casting. It was found by one of Baker's closest friends, Steve Lieder, she said. Lieder and two friends were chatting near the lake when they looked down and saw the bottle.

They broke it open and found the note inside: "My name is Josh Baker. I am 10. If you find this put it on the news. The date is 4/16/95."

■ POTTSTOWN, Pa. — A man

delivering newspapers at 5 a.m. heard an unusual sound as he got out of his truck to retrieve an errand newspaper. He walked between two parked cars and saw a 4-foot alligator.

"He kind of lunged at me and hissed," said Bobby Kish, 46. "His mouth was open; I was about five feet away. It was enough to get my attention."

Kish jumped back in his car, drove to the Pottstown Borough police station and told the dispatcher, who sent officers to the scene of Monday's incident.

Cpl. Jamie O'Neill grabbed the alligator from behind and secured its jaws with duct tape.

The animal was taken in a patrol wagon to the county prison, where it was logged in as "Al E. Gator."

Capt. Allan Ewing said the borough's animal handler arranged for it to go to a private animal facility near Wilkes-Barre.

■ SINGAPORE — Singapore plans to give its toilet cleaners more potty training.

Already famous for its spotless streets, Singapore is stepping up a campaign against filthy restrooms: The government has initiated a training program to boost the status and skills of the city-state's toilet cleaners, a newspaper reported Thursday.

More than 50 toilet cleaners will be promoted to "restroom specialist" upon completing the three-day pilot course taught by Japanese experts in the latest toilet technology, The Straits Times reported.

The program — sponsored by the city-state's National Trades Union Congress and the Singapore-based World Toilet College — aims to boost the image and wages of professional toilet cleaners by training them to do more on the job, The Straits Times reported.

The college has flown in three top Japanese trainers to conduct the course on improving cleaning techniques and technical expertise to the initial group of 51 cleaners.

"Cleaners have low morale and low skills," the paper quoted Jack Sim, the World Toilet College's founder, as saying. "We want to professionalize them and teach them to be proud of their jobs."

Sim said he plans to train all 5,000 toilet cleaners and raise their average monthly wage to $598, up from $472.

■ WINONA, Minn. — Roger Busdicker went out on a high note.

Busdicker, who was often seen playing his ebony-and-silver clarinet, died last week at age 88 and his daughters thought it befitting to have his cremated remains buried inside the instrument.

"One of my sisters found the clarinet in a closet," said Sue Enger, of New Richmond, Wis. "All three of us decided it would be appropriate to bury his ashes in it."

Roger Busdicker toured with the Hal Leonard Orchestra in the 1930s and '40s before becoming a music teacher in Winona schools. He later co-founded and ran a sheet-music publishing company until retiring in 1985.

He never stopped playing.

"When I was young, we were in municipal band together. Every day or every other day, we'd go to the basement and play band music — real upbeat music, the kind that made you tap your toes," Enger said.

■ PLYMOUTH, Ind. — The beer ad attracted attention — but not in the way Pabst Blue Ribbon had intended. A bartender called police because he thought a blinking red light was a bomb, resulting in the evacuation of 35 people from a resort hotel.

Guests were allowed back in their rooms less than an hour later, after a sheriff's officer determined the light was part of a Pabst Blue Ribbon ad. The ad was suction-cupped to the window of the Sam Snead restaurant in Swan Lake Resort.

The bartender called authorities about the suspicious flashing light at 12:30 a.m. Monday, and guests were evacuated about six minutes later, said Doug Leedke, general manager of the resort in Plymouth, 25 miles south of South Bend.

The false alarm is a sign of the times, Leedke said.

"Our employee saw something unusual and reported it," he said.

■ BALDWIN PLACE, N.Y. — William Collins was going nowhere fast.

Collins was drunk and had passed out at the wheel of his parked, running van in a lot, according to police in upstate New York. They said his foot was flooring the accelerator for so long, the smoking engine nearly blew up.

should go down better than that fruit cake you still haven't opened from last year.

Alright this is a one-joke movie but the producers are able to get mileage out of it due to some inspired casting. Wrestler Bill Goldberg tears into the role of Santa like a steaming chunk of holiday ham. He is obviously inspired by Arnold Schwarzenegger and engages in the left coast governor's film habit of dishing out one-liners with every death. You can't help but chuckle when he spits out lines like,

"I'm just trying to spread a little yuletide fear," which make him sound like a cross between the Terminator and the Cryptkeeper.

The film hooks you with its opening scene, in which Santa gets to dispatch a roomful of slumming stars which include James Caan, Rebecca Gayheart and Fran ("The Nanny") Drescher, who gets impaled mid-whine. Santa also gets to deep six the insufferable Chris Kattan who gets the smackdown everyone has wanted to mete out to him since he left Saturday Night Live to fidget like a monkey on amphetamines in overproduced Hollywood dreck.

In the end, this may just serve as the movie you need to watch if you hate Kattan but, who knows, maybe Santa will get to kill the cast of a Mentos commercial in the sequel.

Best line: "Are you saying Santa's offing everybody who's naughty or nice?"

2005, rated R.

We have a winner!

Chris Prater will be receiving a batch of Lagoon DVDs for winning our "Scorpion Thunderbolt" contest. Chris' description of "Thunderbolt" neatly capsulated the bizarre plot of this kung-fu/killer snake person on the loose "film that was cobbled together using footage from three movies." Mr. Prater did a finer job than the people who put out the DVD. Their blurb on the back gets everything wrong, from who is the star of the movie to the nationality of one of the leading actors. Hats off to Mr. Prater and look for more contests in the future.

Notice of Availability of Draft Environmental Impact Statement for the Floyd County, Kentucky (Levisa Fork Basin), Section 202 Flood Damage Reduction Project

Pursuant to the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, DoD, Huntington District has prepared a draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) which documents planning analyses undertaken for a proposed flood damage reduction project in the Levisa Fork basin in Floyd County, Kentucky. The study area includes the incorporated areas of Prestonsburg and unincorporated areas in Floyd County which are subject to flood damage from the potential of a recurrence of the April 1977 flood. The study area does not include the City of Martin, Kentucky, where a separate flood damage reduction project is underway. The DEIS documents agency evaluation of four alternatives, two of which include floodwall/levee alignments intended to protect Prestonsburg and non-structural flood-proofing measures, a total non-structural alternative, and the No Federal Action alternative.

A public hearing on the content of the DEIS will be held at Prestonsburg High School, 825 Blackcat Boulevard, Prestonsburg, KY 41653, date and time to be announced. Copies of the DEIS may be reviewed at the following locations: 1. U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Huntington District, 502 Eighth Street, Huntington, WV 25701-2070, Room 3100 2. Floyd County Public Library, 18 North Arnold Avenue, Prestonsburg, KY 41653-1269 3. Prestonsburg Community College Library, One Bert T. Combs Drive, Prestonsburg, KY 41653 4. <http://www.lrh.usace.army.mil/projects/revi/w/>

Written comments on the DEIS should be submitted by June 19, 2006. Please address all written comments on the DEIS to Stephen O'Leary PM-PD-S, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Huntington District, 502 Eighth Street, Huntington, WV 25701-2070. Telephone (304) 399-5841. Electronic mail: Stephen.D.Oleary@Lrh01.usace.army.mil.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING

Under the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (Public Law 88-578), citizens are afforded the opportunity to express their views concerning the proposed renovation of recreational facilities associated with Jenny Wiley Theatre.

To provide a forum for discussion, an open meeting is being held on Thursday, June 29, at 7:00 p.m., at Jenny Wiley Theatre, 121 Theatre Court, Prestonsburg, sponsored by Jenny Wiley Theatre and the Floyd County Fiscal Court.

The specific purpose of this meeting is to discuss plans for the renovation of the facilities used by the public at Jenny Wiley Theatre with funds to be solicited from the Land and Water Conservation Fund.

Anyone with a significant supporting or opposing view is invited to voice that opinion at this meeting, or in writing to: Land and Water Conservation Fund Program; Governor's Office for Local Development, 1024 Capital Center Drive, Suite 340, Frankfort, KY 40601, within two (2) weeks of the date of the meeting, or before July 15, 2006.

For more information, call Jenny Wiley Theatre at 606-886-9274.

CONSTRUCTION WORKERS

Our Company, Dome Technology, has developed a very efficient method of constructing concrete dome buildings. We have built about 500 of them throughout the US and over 20 other countries. Our domes are used for commercial and industrial buildings and the demand for them is growing fast. We need reliable, honest, self-motivated, hands-on construction workers who can travel. This could be an opportunity, if you qualify, to get into a job with a lot of room for advancement. Some of our people travel with their wives and some also take their small children. The jobs are year round with good pay and benefits. Our employees are good people to work with. We need more just like them. Supervisors and technicians. The wages and salaries that we pay depend on experience. In addition, we pay travel time, all housing when away, overtime, $30.00 per day per diem, holiday pay, vacation pay, insurance benefits, and 401K. Here is a chance for you to get some adventure in your life. Check out our website and then call us and send your resumé with 10 references.
