PRESTONSBURG - An 87-year-old Hueysville woman who pleaded guilty to three separate drug trafficking incidents last December upon a five-year sentencing recommendation from the prosecution saw her sentence reduced to five years of strict probation at her formal sentencing in circuit court Friday.

Judge John D. Caudill showed mercy on Dottie Neeley, who is in poor health, but didn't let her go without making sure that she understood that she will have to pay the $50,000 dollar cash bond one she was a criminal. He blasted some media reports that she was a victim of inflation who turned media attention when she was to selling her medications to stay above water.

"You never had a prescription for marijuana," Caudill said to Neeley. He also labeled those media reports, "a bunch of crap in your case."

Caudill then said firmly, "The public needs to know what kind of person you are. You're a convicted felon."

Neeley was also fined $965, which she will have to pay to well as a stable financial back-Operation UNITE, and $145

Neeley received national arrested by Operation UNITE officers for three separate incidents of drug trafficking, involving hydrocodone, methadone and marijuana. Most accounts portrayed her as a helpless victim who succumbed to the lure of drug profits because she allegedly lived on a fixed income. Those reports did not include a family history rife with criminal prosecutions, as ground which saw Neeley post a day before her attorney could attend a bond reduction hearing.

Neeley was originally set to prosecuted be by Commonwealth's Attorney Brent Turner, who had to recuse himself from the case when Neeley was allegedly caught on tape threatening to have Turner and her son's girlfriend killed. The case was then taken up by David Jorjani, of the attorney general's office.

Eldery suspect pleads guilty to drug charges

by TOM DOTY STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG - A case similar to Dottie Neeley's was settled in district court Thursday when a 76year-old Wayland resident pleaded guilty to two counts of trafficking inmarijuana.

James Edward Ritchie entered the plea after County Attorney Keith Bartley indicated that he would have to serve 90 days in jail for the offense, with his one-year sentence probated for two years.

The case stemmed from an Operation UNITE investigation which recorded Ritchie selling prescription medication to a UNITE operative on Feb. 22, 2005, and marijuana to another agent on March 7, 2005.

Ritchie will begin serving his sentence April 1 and was ordered to pay $178 in court costs.

Sago Mine set to reopen next week

by VICKI SMITH ASSOCIATED PRESS

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. -The federal Mine Safety and Health Administration has finished its underground investigation at the Sago Mine where 12 men died in January and declared all but one area safe for workers to re-enter.

Only the abandoned, sealedoff area where the blast is believed to have occurred will remain off limits when Ashland, Ky.-based International Coal Group Inc. resumes production next week, said Ray McKinney, MSHA's administrator of coal mine safety and health.

McKinney said ICG plans to resume work with two shifts next week but had few other details on the company's plans. A spokesman for ICG could not immediately comment.

McKinney would not speculate on what caused the Jan. 2

call with reporters Friday but said investigators are confident from Sago said recently they "the source of the event was in by the seals" on the mined-out area known as Two Left.

MSHA and federal scientists with the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health are planning to study the 40inch-thick, dense foam blocks that were used to seal that area to gauge how they performed. The tests, to be conducted at the NIOSH Lake Lynn Experimental Mine in Pennsylvania, are still being designed, McKinney said.

Omega blocks are a lighter, less expensive alternative to concrete blocks and are now widely used throughout the U.S. coal mining industry.

Richard Gates, a district manager from Birmingham, Ala., and MSHA's lead investigator, said 46 private interviews with company officials and employees have been conducted explosion during a conference so far, with some yet to be done.

Several mine-rescue teams were not among those interviewed so far, despite complaints from the victims' families that it took state and federal officials too long to put the rescue teams underground.

Miscommunication among the rescue teams, the command center and observers also contributed to the widespread, mistaken belief that 12 of the 13 men trapped by the blast for more than 40 hours had survived.

Phone calls from people in and around the command center prompted a spontaneous celebration among relatives waiting at the Sago Baptist Church, but their jubilation was crushed three hours later when ICG announced only one man -Randal McCloy Jr. of Simpson - was still alive. He's now recovering from brain damage

Legislation proposed to exempt legislators' e-mail from public review

by ROGER ALFORD ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT - A special grand jury has spent months sifting through electronic mail from members of Gov. Ernie Fletcher's administration as part of an investigation into alleged violations of the state's hiring laws.

The bounty of e-mails helped build criminal cases against 13 current and former administration officials and associates for allegedly rewarding political supporters with state government jobs. They also raised awareness that e-mails sent from government computers can be embarrassing in the wrong hands.

In that setting, state Rep. Rob Wilkey, D-Scottsville, is sponsoring a bill that would exempt the e-mail of legislators from the state open records law. It also would exempt phone records and other forms of correspondence from or to constituents. Wilkey said the legislation was not sparked by the special grand jury investigation.

"That kind of scrutiny and that kind of investigation, this legislation will not prevent," he said. "If you're committing a crime, those records are still going to be subject to the subpoena power of a judge and a grand jury."

However, David Thompson, head of the Kentucky Press Association, said exempting legislative e-mail sent from government accounts from public open meetings laws. review is a bad idea.

"If it's legislators now, who's next? City officials, county officials, state government officials would end up wanting the same exemption," Thompson said.

The issue is only the latest in a long-running battle to keep government records open to the public, particularly in the wake of Sept. 11, 2001, which triggered a push at local, state and federal levels to make government records off limits in the name of homeland security.

Restrictions on open government are the focus of "Sunshine Week," a national initiative to raise public awareness of the importance of open government and access to public records. "Sunshine Week," spearheaded by the American Society of Newspaper Editors, runs from March 12-18.

"So many times, legislators have said this is a press issue," Thompson said. "No, it's not. It's a public's right to know issue.'

In Kentucky, the news is not all bad. Last year, the General Assembly passed a law that requires copies of the state's open meetings and open records laws be sent to public officials so that they would be aware of legal requirements to operate government openly at all levels. That law requires members of city councils and even school councils to sign a document saying they had received copies of the state's open records and

Under a homeland security initiative that passed last year, state and local governments are exempt from releasing records or opening meetings that could expose vulnerabilities to terrorists. Thompson said the law that finally passed wasn't nearly as restrictive as first proposed.

In the earliest versions, Thompson said people would have had difficulty finding out from a municipality about easements in their own front yards.

Proposals to restrict public access arise sometimes without warning.

For example, a measure proposed last week would allow judges to bar the media from naming or photographing young witnesses in criminal cases. That proposal was approved by a House panel on Wednesday.

Kentucky Press Association lawyer Ashley Pack told the Judiciary Committee that the measure amounted to an unconstitutional prior restraint on the media. The proposal says minors testifying in criminal expectation of privacy." It would allow judges to prohibit the media from publicly distributing the youngster's "identify, image or voice." Violators could be held in contempt by a judge.

The proposal to exempt legislators' e-mail is another such surprise.

Wilkey said he believes communications between legislators cases "shall have a reasonable and their staffers are exempted from open records laws. He said that same protection should be extended to constituents who contribute to the legislative process.

"The truth is, I think when a constituent contacts me, they should do that in confidence that that communication will not be disclosed to the general public," Wilkey said.

The bill hasn't fared well thus far. Sent to a House state government committee, it hasn't been brought up for consideration. Legislative leaders don't expect the measure to pass the House.

"I really wouldn't think so," said House Speaker Jody Richards. "That's not a bill we're pushing."

December, though the process did not go smoothly. Judge Caudill first made Neeley explain her comments to a reporter where she said that she never sold drugs. He noted that if she actually believed those statements, he would not be able to accept a plea from her.

Neeley denied speaking to the reporter. She said that a reporter did call her and asked if she would pose for a photo and further noted that she declined the invitation.

Caudill went on to accept Neeley's plea, though her poor hearing also made for a few missteps. At one point she misheard Judge Caudill when he asked her if she was guilty of selling drugs to an Operation UNITE agent. Neeley replied, "I didn't know he was a UNITE officer." Judge Caudill could not restrain himself from grinning at her response and replied, "If he hadn't been a UNITE agent, you probably wouldn't be here."

Ashland after the incident. Bartley noted that Jones came back to Floyd County and surrendered because KSP was "tightening the noose" in their efforts to find him.

Judge John D. Caudill concurred that the hearing was not an appropriate venue for discussing the merits of the case against Jones. He ruled that Jones' bond, which is meant to insure his future appearances in court, was entirely appropriate given the seriousness of the offense and in light of Bartley's statements about Jones fleeing to Ashland.

A second suspect was arrested shortly after Jones appeared in court in January. On Jan. 17, Adam Chaffins, 19, also surrendered to KSP.

Crum testified at Chaffins' preliminary hearing as well, and gave a detailed account, based on interviews with staff at the pharmacy on the day of the robbery. Crum recounted that three men in disguises burst into the pharmacy shortly after 9 a.m. on Jan. 5. He testified that the men brandished weapons and herded the staff into a back room. He said that they carried pistols and at least one shotgun and took boxes of hydrocodone out of the back room before stealing cash from the register on their way out.

Crum testified that the staff at the store said they were threatened as well. They told the detective that the men said they would come back and kill them and burn the building down if any of them talked to the police.

Guest view-Counties need money for jails

If county judge-executives in Kentucky were asked to name their biggest fiscal headache, the most common answer would very likely be keeping their jails financially afloat.

Tommy Turner of the Kentucky County Judge-Executive Association said some counties are spending as much as half of their budgets on their jails.

It's no wonder some counties ... have closed their jails entirely. Just a few years ago, Daviess Fiscal Court was contemplating a $1 million annual loss at the Daviess County Detention Center. That looming flood of red ink led directly to the county approving an occupational tax to provide more revenue.

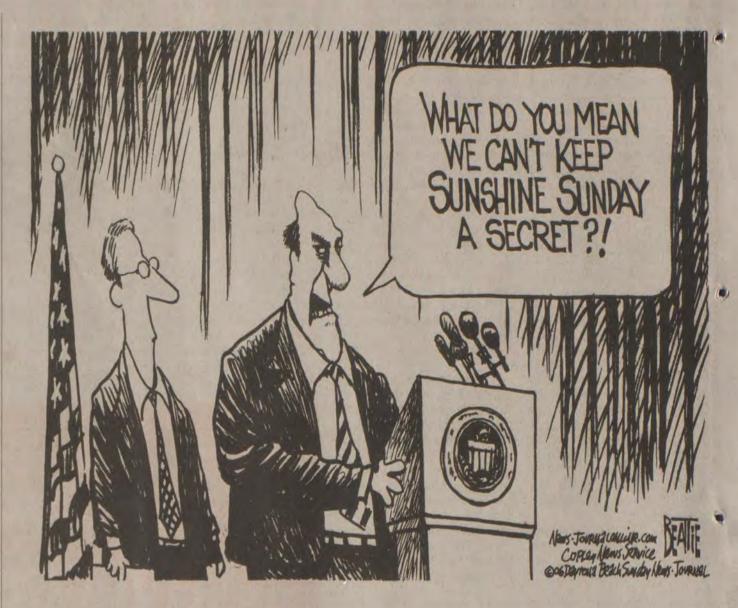

Daviess County's jail has so far managed to avoid some of those huge anticipated losses, but each year brings a challenge for Jailer David Osborne and his staff to balance revenue against soaring expenses. Housing state, federal and out-of-county inmates, for which the jail receives compensation, is the key ingredient to the jail's financial health or lack of it.

That is why we were pleased when the House Judiciary Committee approved a bill to increase the amount of money local jails receive to house state inmates. The "per diem," or the amount the jail receives for each inmate per day, will increase from $30.51 to $32.51 for the first year of the 2006-08 biennium, with another $2 per day increase for the second year.

An increase of $2 per day may not sound like much, but when it is multiplied by the hundreds of state inmates typically housed ... it quickly becomes significant.

House Bill 274 is needed because large jails such as the DCDT and small jails as well should be compensated fairly for housing state inmates. Without the willingness of county jails to take state inmates, the state would have to build more prisons, which is always an expensive proposition.

A slightly better per diem rate will help prevent jails from being overwhelming drags on county finances while freeing up money for things that better serve residents ... Having a jail that is better able to consistently stand on its own financial feet could mean a lowering of occupational or property tax rates. That is a result all would welcome.

Christians have long wondered how to get due regard for their religious sensibilities from the arbiters of our culture. Now they know the answer: mayhem.

The riots and protests around the Islamic world and in Muslim communities in the West regarding a dozen cartoons of the Prophet Muhammad published in a Danish newspaper have fostered a newfound sensitivity to religious offense in the more secular precincts of the The New West. York Times - the most important liberal organ in the country --- chastised the Danish cartoonists and refused to reproduce the cartoons, instead bizarrely illustrating the controversy with a photo of a painting of the Virgin Mary festooned with elephant dung from a longago dispute at a Brooklyn museum. The Times' disdain for the cartoons is a departure. What happened to art for art's sake? When was the last time the Times criticized any piece of art, no matter how jejune, outrageous or stupid?

And what happened to shocking the bourgeoisie? Well, they are much more enjoyable to shock than Islamists because, once duly shocked, the bourgeoisie pack the kids into a minivan and head to a soccer game, rather than issue death threats and burn down embassies.

Fear stalks the cartoon debate. Understandably. Few editors want to > potentially endanger their employees by reprinting the cartoons. The comedian Sarah Silverman has a riff in her offensively titled concert movie, "Jesus Is Magic," in which explains that she feels freest to set limits on free speech in the West, and to give an advantage to those forces of backwardness - both religious and secular - that are resisting the modernization of the Middle East. It is notable that Ayatollah Sistani, the pro-democracy cleric in Iraq, denounced the cartoons but reserved his harshest language for the Islamist provocateurs who are opportunistically fomenting violence over them.

Thuggish intimidation has often been a weapon in the battle of ideas. Christian bishops were known to use rampaging crowds of monks to buttress their doctrinal positions in what historian Paul Johnson calls "mob theology." He writes, "A fanatical religious mob could be used to blackmail a council of frightshe ened ecclesiastics or even to overturn an

by DONALD KAUL MINUTEMAN MEDIA

It's becoming increasingly apparent that this administration lives in Never Never Land, down the block from the Easter Bunny, right across the street from the Tooth Fairy.

First it pretended that Iraq had Weapons of Mass Destruction, then it imagined that Saddam was harboring Al Qaida terrorist bases, now we are asked to believe that the war over there is going well.

It depends on how you feel about chaos, I guess.

Sunni forces in Baghdad blew up one of the most sacred of all Shiite mosques last month and Iraq erupted in a series of retaliatory and counter-retaliatory strikes that claimed hundreds of lives until Iraqi troops virtually closed down the country. When they eased the curfew a little, violence broke out again.

Gen. Rick Lynch, a spokesperson for the American command initially had this to say: "We are seeing a confident Iraqi government using capable security forces to calm the storm.'

And the State Department spokesperson was even more optimistic: "Rather than see a collapse or a setback, I think in some ways, you can see an affirmation that the approach we've been taking has worked," said a department spokesperson. "You've got political leadership acting together on behalf of the common good, and you've got secuinsult groups that she's not afraid of. So she lets loose on Asian-Americans, assuming they won't threaten her. This logic is also why she would never title her film "Muhammad Is Magic," and is clearly at play in the cartoon debate.

It helps account for the bend-overbackward attitude toward Islam from people who would never adopt the same posture toward Christianity. In this, they do no favors to Islam. The cartoon riots are a power play. They are an attempt to Review.

rity forces demonstrating that capability and a responsibility as a national entity that we've been working to develop and that has now been put to the test and, I think, is proving successful."

Earth to Spaceship Bush: "Have you guys checked your oxygen flow lately? You seem to be high on something."

The truth is that Iraq is teetering on the precipice of a civil war that would be all but inevitable save for the active presence of our troops. Iraqi forces simply cannot operate effectively without American support.

Avoiding that war depends on a degree of political maturity and rationality on the part of the Iraqi people, qualities they have yet to exhibit in bulk.

Far more typical are the Iraq citizens who blame us for their troubles. "I can tell you the main reason behind all our woes," a clothing merchant in a Sunni community told "The New York Times." "Everything that is going on between Sunnis and Shiites, the troublemaker in the middle is America."

I'm not sure this is what Dick Cheney had in mind when, prior to the invasion, he predicted we would be greeted as liberators by the Iraqi people.

We are asking our troops to put down an insurgency with one hand and to act as a peacekeeping force in a civil war with the other. There is no handbook on how to do that.

I have a feeling that Osama bin Laden is in a cave somewhere right now, smiling. Things couldn't have gone better for him if he'd planned them this imperial decision which impinged one Church affairs." Of course, that was 1,500 years ago.

No one has reason to fear organized mayhem from Christians anymore, thank God. The clash between civilizations and, more importantly, within Islamic civilization exemplified by the cartoon controversy is over whether the day will come when we don't have to fear it from Muslims either.

way. And - who knows? - maybe he did.

Is it possible that the 9/11 attacks were intended to draw a response that would put us at risk on his home turf? Is it possible that this whole thing is an elaborate trap that has succeeded beyond his dreams?

> Possible perhaps, but unlikely. This is a trap of our own making, engineered by the Gang Who Couldn't Shoot Straight, or Talk Straight Either For That Matter. This is a war, remember, that was supposed to pay for itself. Paul Wolfowitz, one of its chief architects, told Congress that.

He is off, so far, by $250 billion. For this, they made him president of the World Bank?

There's a blogger out there who publishes under the name "Green Dog Democrat." The other day he found this remark by Mark Twain:

"Statesmen will invent cheap lies, putting blame upon the nation that is attacked and every man will be glad of those conscience-soothing falsities; thus he will by and by convince himself that the war is just, and will thank God for the better sleep he enjoys after this process of grotesque self-deception." Slumber on.

SUNDAY, MARCH 12 1 p.m. ABC

NBA Basketball LeBron James and the Cleveland Cavaliers are just hoping to make the playoffs, while Shaquille O'Neal says his Miami Heat will once again advance to the conference final. Yes, the expectations may differ, but the effort by both teams today in their third meeting of the season should be, well ... playoff-worthy. A national TV audience will be looking on, and for the Cavs in particular, they want to avenge a 101-73 thrashing by the Heat on Feb. 2.

4 p.m. FOX NASCAR Racing

Reality may set in for some at day's end, since eight of last year's 10 Chase drivers were in the standings' top-10 after the Sin City stop a year ago.

8 p.m. NBC Joey

Joey (Matt LeBlanc) gets into a rivalry with Carmen Electra (guest starring as herself) when he finds out her billboard on Sunset Boulevard is bigger than his. Distracting him from that little feud -- on the night of a big premiere, no less -- is the discovery that he and his father don't have as much in common as he thought. Drea de Matteo and Paulo Costanzo also star in the new episode "Joey and the Dad."

"Flying Casanovas" profiles a species of bird that knows the way to a female's heart is through interior decorating. The bower birds of Australia and New Guinea construct elaborate nests on the ground and adorn them with berries, feathers, shells and other colorful touches. Of course, every home needs a woman's touch, and that's the objective: luring a female to share the nest and fill it with baby bower birds.

8 p.m. UPN

America's Next Top Model If you missed the season premiere, you missed a lot: the return of former judge Janice Dickinson and a shocking bit of news for the contestants from Jay Manuel about their first photo shoot. Here's another chance to catch all the drama, which includes a Dickinson-led press conference for the 13 finalists with Todd Newton of "El News," fashion industry expert Trish Moreno, and actress and former talk show host Rolonda Watts, among others.

Movie: Bruce Almighty

It had been a while since Jim Carrey had a hit when this clever 2003 comedy, reuniting him with "Ace Ventura" director Tom Shadyac, proved he still had the stuff to lure big audiences. He plays a TV reporter who reacts badly to being passed over for an anchor job. Lamenting his lot in life, he gets a surprising gift from the deity (Morgan Freeman): power over virtually everything. Jennifer Aniston plays Carrey's girlfriend.

The calendar says it's spring. The thermometer (as of this present reading) indicates it's later than calendar-readers think. 000

This is a wonderful season, but its vagaries sometimes are almost tragic. There are those cold snaps to come that will freeze the peepers almost in mid-cherp, nip the early buds, and again put me out of business as a gardener. I plant early, you know.

Before the weather gets too warm

WANTED-A GARBAGE CAN DISPOSAL

This is my own problem, but there's an off-chance somebody might want to help. I have a bottomless garbage can which the garbage truck will not accept for disposition at the city dump. It Sisn't salable at any junk yard. I could dump it into the river or roll it over a hill onto some other person's land, but this is frowned on by the law as well as the other fellow. And if I attempt to bury it on my own property, I can't expect to dig far before I strike the shale. So there we are. Any suggestions that will keep me within the law.

'Eaten Alive'

by TOM DOTY STAFF WRITER

Director Tobe Hooper was hot off the success of "The Texas Chainsaw Massacre" when he filmed this horror hotel saga. Critics were none to kind to it but it is actually a good, if substandard, horror yarn that, like "Chainsaw," gets a heap of mileage out of its gothic setting.

This time out the action is set in a rundown motel nestled somewhere in the Louisiana bayou. You can feel free to pick which demerit keeps this place out of Fodor's Guide. They include:

Tom Doty 1) The manager Staff Writer is a scythe-wielding lunatic. 2) The place is falling apart.

3) The owner keeps a crocodile in the pond that sits in front of the main entrance and often feeds a guest or two to his pet when he can't make it to Petsmart.

The manager's name is Judd and it's apparent from the get-go that he is a vacancy or two shy of a full house. His main challenge appears to be satisfying customers, as he is prone to striking down guests with a nasty looking scythe and feeding the remains to his crocodile.

Judd blows it in the opening scenes when he kills a prostitute whose family then comes looking for her. He's also got a family of three staying at the inn and they are none too happy

SPEAKING OF EXPRESSIONS:

When a fellow is in finefettle, what is a "fettle?"

If you are in a battle royal, tell me what's "royal" about it.

If you say, it was done in one fell swoop, explain what is "fell."

If you scream so loudly that you make the welkin ring, what is the "welkin?"

And for the fellow who's Victorian enough to say, "I'll be there in a trice," please tell us what is a "trice."

Dear Jesse

by PAULA BACHLEDA KOSKEY "CHICKEN SOUP FOR THE UNSINKABLE SOUL"

Dear Jesse.

So, here it is - the moment we've been waiting for. Graduation has already taken on the shades of a memory, and college is just a few weeks away. You, I know, are quite anxious to be moving on. You've passed the "Get on your mark!" "Get set" stages, and you are simply ready to "GO!"

Believe it or not, I remember that feeling well. The summer before I went away to school, I simply wanted to get on with it. I couldn't wait to be independent, to prove myself. It's just so weird being on the other side of the gate. I can yell "Go" — it's just making my heart let go that seems to be the hang-up.

I know you've been looking forward to this moment for a long time. I've watched you during this past year, as the countdown has become reality. You've worked hard and planned. That's one of the things I like best about you, your ability to run a good race. To set a goal, train and then go for Funny, goal-setting. When you were little and I held your tiny body in my arms and rocked and sang and read to you, my goal was to give you two essentials - roots and wings. I think I've done that. So it seems I'm just seconds away from one of my own finish lines. The problem is, I seem to be enjoying the race a little too much. Somehow I've lost my stride and want to run the rest of this particular race in slow motion.

The other problem is I've also lost my concentration. Instead of focusing on the finish line, I keep rerunning the race. I think about the tears in your father's eyes the first time he saw you. I think about how I'd wake up to the sound of you and your sister talking, way back when you used to share a room and giggles and secrets. And I remember your gentleness six years later when you would sit next to your baby brother and read to him.

Not that the course has been particularly easy. When you were almost 10 and I watched you place your favorite "Star Trek" book in your dad's coffin, I wasn't even certain the race was worth running. It was then that I learned that sometimes things are not fair. There really are no guarantees. Sometimes you can have a great pace going and get a cramp. All you can do is give it your best shot. Guess that's where I learned that if you keep going, somehow it's possible to get past the wall.

I suppose that when I got cancer and was almost pulled out of the I realized game, exactly how precious this race was to me. I'm not certain you are aware of what an impact you had on getting me over that hurdle. I know it must have been difficult for you, but you were always there cheering me on by listening and talking me through. You filled in as my coach at that meet, and you instinctively knew a secret - great coaching involves shouting and listening. Thanks.

that the crocodile ate their dog. Throw in one small time hood using the place as a hideout and you have the makings for a fine episode of Fawlty Towers that is blended with choice elements of Alfred Hitchcock's "Psycho." The only difference here is that no one is laughing and Judd could never pull off cross-dressing, as he is embodied by noted character actor Neville Brand.

Basically this is the cinematic equivalent of a roach motel, with guests never checking out, which probably explains the lack of repairs made around the facility and totally upsets the economic apple cart by guaranteeing there will be no repeat business opportunities.

There is not a whole lot of plot to get in the way here, and Hooper spends more time tracking Judd with his camera than the supporting characters. A subplot about the first victim's family showing up to investigate her death gets short shrift and the local sheriff is about as effective as Paris Hilton would be if you hired her to do your tax returns.

The real star here is the location and Hooper makes the most of it. You can smell the mildew on the peeling wallpaper and a climactic chase scene through the building's subbasement is well rendered. The sequence is set in a three-foot crawlspace, with Judd having to slither on his belly as he

If life is a race — though I really don't like to think this experience is anything we should rush through

> - I think you're gong to do well. You're in shape, you've trained hard and you have the tenacity to make it over the obstacles. I'm proud of you.

Enjoy the view. Remember that you've got teammates who'll help when the course is rough. Take time to rest every once in a while,

'At what speeds do you get the best gas mileage?

by TOM and RAY MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:

I was trying to save gas by driving 55 mph. My friend said I'm wrong, that cars these days are designed to use gas more efficiently when driving over 60 mph. Who's right? - Karl TOM: You are. Is your friend also encouraging you to eat more pork rinds in order to lose weight?

RAY: The ideal speed for gas mileage varies from vehicle to vehicle, but it's generally somewhere in the 40-55 mph range. Mileage generally peaks around 40 mph and starts dropping again around 55 mph. That speed range is where the car is in its highest gear. while the engine is simultaneously running at a fairly slow speed.

TOM: Once you go above 55 mph, not only does the engine speed continue to increase with no higher gear to shift into, but you have to fight dramatically higher wind resistance.

RAY: Wind resistance increases as a square of the speed at which you're traveling. So, for example, at 70 mph, wind resistance is double what it is at 50 mph (70 squared is almost twice as much as 50 squared). That's murder on your mileage.

TOM: So, you're absolutely right, Karl. Slowing down to 55 mph will definitely get you better gas mileage. never risk missing a roadside pork-rind haven't forgiven him, and he'll never stand.

Brother deserves smackdown for driving new car too hard

Dear Tom and Ray: Recently, I purchased a new Honda Accord coupe with a four-cylinder engine and manual transmission. This is the first nice car I've owned, and I baby it so it will last forever. In fact, in the first 8,000 miles, it has never seen 75 mph or gone over 4,000 rpm. Recently, my brother visited during the holidays. He wanted to drive it, and I obliged. As I handed him the keys, I said, "It's never been driven hard." He then proceeded to back the car out and hit the rev limiter twice! We drove another mile to the highway, and he did it again. I don't think a thief would've driven it that hard if the cops were in pursuit. I was very upset, to say the least, but I didn't say anything. The next morning, I swear it took forever to warm up, and then made a funny clicking noise that hasn't gone away. I hope it is my imagination! I know the rev limiter is there for a reason, but what kind of damage could have been done? I'm mainly concerned because the first time he did it, the car had been sitting in 15-to-20-degree weather for hours. Should I take it to the dealer, or will drive my car again. — Tim

RAY: Let's start with the family portion of the therapy, Tim. Then we'll get to the car problem.

TOM: You need to learn to speak up, buddy. When your brother hit the rev limit once, you should have said: "Hey, hey, hey ... easy there, big fella. This is my brand-new car. Cut it out or we're parking it right now." Why you sat there in silence while he did Riverdance on your head is something you need to explore.

RAY: And your brother needs to explore why he's an unparalleled ierk. It's YOUR car, so your wishes should be respected. You asked him to drive it gently, and yet he drove it like it belonged to Joe Stalin.

TOM: Now, having said all that, you've clearly learned an important lesson here, Tim: Never, ever trust your brother when it comes to cars.

RAY: Especially an older brother. I assume he's your older brother, Tim, because I have an older brother who's also a jerk.

TOM: You do? Do we have another brother Mom didn't tell me about?

RAY: As for your car, Tim, we don't know what the clicking sound is. But we can give you some possibilities. It could be something relatively simple.

Plus, when you drive slower, you'll they give me the runaround? I still like a valve that's sticky or out of heads in disgust as you describe what adjustment.

TOM: Or it could be something

Wouldn't slap. THAT make next Thanksgiving dinner a little tense?

RAY Fortunately, I don't think your brother did anything to void your car's warranty. This car's computer physically prevents you from exceeding the rev limit. And I don't think Honda can refuse you warranty service for simply going UP TO the rev limit, not over it.

for your information (and the information of our readers), what your brother did was mind-achingly stupid. When it's freezing cold outside and you've just started the car, and the oil is cold and thick, that's the absolute worst time to rev up the engine. Absolutely the worst.

RAY: So, I would take the car to the dealer and fess up. I think you'll find it cathartic to see them shaking their your brother did to it.

TOM: Of course, if it were me, I awful, like bearing damage or piston wouldn't even give them a chance to blame me for it and try to CLICK & CLACK Talk Cars void my warranty. I'd just tell them, "It started making a clicking noise," and let them fig. ure it out. RAY: Tim. he's my older brother. Remember what you just learned about older brothers?

TOM: OK, you do what you think is best, Tim. But once it's fixed, keep your brother far away from it. And call Dr. Phil the next chance you get.

INPATIENT REHABILITATION HOSPITAL Keeping the residents of eastern Kentucky close to home

February 20, 2006

Mr. Clay Clement Inpatient Rehabilitation Pikeville Medical Center 911 Bypass Rd. Pikeville, KY 41501

Dear Mr. Clement and Staff:

I would like to express my gratification and thankfulness to you and your medical staff for the rehabilitation that my husband, Charles, received. Your facility is much needed in our area so that the people do not have to go elsewhere to receive treatment.

Let me brief you on Charles. He had a stroke on July 14, 2005. He was transferred to St. Mary's Hospital where he received treatment until he was stable enough for rehabilitation. That's when St. Mary's contacted your facility and you came down and did an assessment on Charles. You said that he was ready for rehab and that he would be a prime candidate for your rehab center. So on July 20, 2005, he was transported (by ambulance) to Pikeville and remained a patient in your rehab department until August 11, 2005, when he was discharged.

When Charles came to Pikeville, he could not talk or could not walk. He was totally dependent on someone for assistance. Your staff of occupational, physical and speech therapists were a wonderful success along with all of the nursing staff. They were all so wonderful and made me fee at home when I came to visit Charles. Also the neurologist, Dr. Ahmed, is a wonderful asset to the center. Let me say that we are well pleased with the outcome of my husband's status. When he left your center, he could talk and he could walk on his own. Dr. Ahmed is still amazed at his condition each time that Charles goes back to see him!

You and Pikeville Medical Center have so much to offer our community and I thank God for you all. I will acknowledge to people that I come in contact with who need your assistance of what a wonderful center we have here in our own hometown.

Once again, let me thank you, your facility and Dr. Ahmed. Keep up the good work and may God bless you all!

Thank you, Annette Kirk

. Valley completes comeback, ousts Lady Eagles

by STEVE LeMASTER SPORTS EDITOR

PIKEVILLE – Never give up. Just ask the Shelby Valley Lady Wildcats. Shelby Valley completed one of the biggest come-frombehind wins in 15th Region Tournament history Thursday night at the East Kentucky Expo Center in the first round of this year's regional tournament. The Lady Wildcats trailed by as many as 18 points in the second half. But Shelby Valley's Esther Fleming wouldn't settle for anything less than a win. Fleming had a triple-double of 17 points, 11 steals and 10 rebounds as the Shelby Valley girls won 58-57.

Fleming completed an old-fashioned three-point play with just 12 seconds remaining to send Shelby Valley over the top. Johnson Central led 57-55 when Fleming knotted the game on a layup, despite drawing a foul. After a Lady Eagle timeout, Fleming sank a free throw that put the Lady Wildcats ahead the final margin.

Laura Perkins added 16 points and Sally Roberts scored 13, giving Shelby Valley three players in double figures.

Down 18, Shelby Valley used a 12-0 run late in the third quarter to get within striking distance of Johnson Central.

Shelby Valley forced Johnson Central into 33 turnovers, 23 of which came in the second half.

Johnson Central did a significant amount of damage in the first half, taking a 28-12 lead into the intermission break. Shelby Valley struggled offensively in the first half, connected on just four of 22 field goal attempts.

Sasha Stanley added eight points as Shelby Valley, the champion out of the 59th District, remained alive. The Lady Wildcats made it into the regional tournament following a district championship win over East Ridge.

Celena Conley paced Johnson Central (19-11) with a team-high 15 points. Chessi Griffith joined Conley in double figures with 13 points. Brianna Ritz was Johnson Central's third-leading scorer,

Mike Brown says labor deal bad for Bengals

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI - Bengals president Mike Brown, one of only two NFL owners to vote against the new labor agreement, thinks the deal is bad for his small-market team.

The Bengals and Buffalo Bills were the only teams to oppose the deal approved Wednesday. Buffalo's Ralph Wilson said owners weren't given enough time to understand the deal.

Brown said Thursday that he voted against it for another rea-

"Economically, this is a very good deal for the players, it's a good deal for the high-revenue clubs, (but) it's a challenging deal for the low-revenue clubs,

Brown said. "We didn't feel it time no deal," Brown said, talkwas in the best interest of our team financially. That's why I voted against it.

"That is not to say that this is a bad deal for the NFL overall or for the fans.'

The agreement will add close to a billion dollars to the players' revenue pool, and guarantee labor peace for six years. If the sides hadn't come to an agreement, the 2007 season would have been played without a salary cap, and there was a possibility of a work stoppage in 2008

Other owners put aside their dislike of the deal to keep labor peace. Brown wanted to negotiate more, even if it meant shortterm uncertainty.

"I would have preferred at this

Brown said owners weren't given all the details of the agreement before they voted on it.

"I would say on principle, when you're doing an important deal, you should know what you're voting on in its entirety," he said. "We did not."

SEC TOURNAMENT: Kentucky 71, Mississippi 57

by ELIZABETH A. DAVIS ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -Kentucky owes a big thankyou to all the blue-clad fans for making the Wildcats feel at home in a very unusual situation – for them – at the Southeastern Conference tournament.

Randolph Morris scored 17 points to help Kentucky advance to the second round with a 71-57 win over Mississippi on Thursday.

The Wildcats (20-11), strengthening their case for an NCAA bid, had not played on the opening day of this tournament since 1979 but failed to earn a first-round bye for the first time since the SEC split into divisions in 1992.

Their Big Blue fans showed up in large numbers as usual, nearly filling up Gaylord Entertainment Center and leaving little room for other schools' fans.

"We knew they'd be here in full force," Kentucky coach Tubby Smith said. "They really gave us a big lift. Their faith and belief that they have in us is remarkable.'

Alabama, the West's No. 2 seed, is the Wildcats' opponent in the quarterfinals on Friday. The Crimson Tide won 68-64 in Rupp Arena on Jan. 14.

missing the NCAAs, Smith from "two weeks ago in every said.

"We feel confident getting 20 wins with the schedule we play and our power rating, we should be in," he said.

Ole Miss (14-16) tried to make coach Rod Barnes' final game memorable by leading most of the first half and keeping it close late. School officials announced last week Barnes would not return next season after eight years. When the buzzer sounded, Smith hugged his friend Barnes at midcourt.

"We're really happy to get this win under some circumstances. You're coaching against a friend in Rod Barnes, a special person. I was very impressed and proud of the way his team competed. It says a lot about what he means to those kids," Smith said.

Smith's youngest son, Brian, is a reserve guard for the Rebels.

Barnes has not said whether he resigned or was fired and refused to talk about his situation. One of his Rebels, Todd Abernethy, used the term "fired" during the post-game news conference.

"I'm not going to take those questions today," Barnes said.

He said adversity has challenged him and made him grow.

"I'm so much a better coach, And now the Wildcats a better person, grateful," he shouldn't have to worry about said, adding he's improved aspect of my life."

The Rebels were much more competitive than in their 80-40 drubbing at Kentucky on Feb. 22 with leading scorer and rebounder Dwayne Curtis. He missed the first game to be at his brother's funeral.

Bam Doyne had a jumper to tie it at 46 with 6:34 remaining, but Kentucky went on a 13-2 run to take command and go ahead by 11. Morris and Rajon Rondo each scored twice during the spurt with Rondo getting a long 3-pointer to go in as the shot clock was about to expire.

Patrick Sparks added 14 points, and Ramel Bradley and Joe Crawford each had 11 for Kentucky.

Jermey Parnell led Ole Miss with 14 points, while Curtis had 13 points and eight rebounds and Doyne added 11.

Bradley played for the first time since breaking his left hand in practice on Feb. 20. He missed the final four regularseason games and was wearing a bandage that covered the bottom half of his hand.

Morris, Rondo and Crawford returned to the starting lineup for the first time since Feb. 11, a loss at Vanderbilt that was the Wildcats' third in a row. After shuffling the lineup, Kentucky finished the regular season wing ning four of its last six.

Bristol delays track resurfacing until 2007

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRISTOL, Tenn. Resurfacing of the half-mile track at Bristol Motor Speedway will be put off until 2007 so that engineers and contractors have enough time to do it right, speedway officials said Tuesday.

Officials were considering resurfacing this summer, trying to squeeze the project between the Nextel Cup Food City 500 scheduled for March 26 and the Sharpie 500 on Aug. 26.

Bristol's owner, Speedway Motorsports, also owns Lowe's Motor Speedway in Charlotte, N.C., and Las Vegas Motor Speedway, both of which will be resurfaced in 2006.

The company decided to postpone the Bristol project so that the company's preferred contractors and engineers could focus on the other two tracks, said Wayne Estes, vice president of communications and events for Bristol.

"We wanted to be sure that they were going to have our undivided attention here," Estes said. "It reached a critical point where we had to say go or don't go.

"We all felt like we'd be a whole lot more comfortable if when they tamper with the most popular racing surface in all of NASCAR that they get it right the first time."

The current surface was poured in 1992.

"It's reaching the end of its term, and I don't think anybody really wants to do this, but it's not a matter of what we want but what we must do," Estes said.

Estes said the track would be resurfaced, but there will be as few changes to the track's contours as possible.

Other planned improvements will be redesigning the cramped infield to allow more room for haulers to maneuver and park.

The infield media center, currently facing the frontstretch grandstands, is expected to be torn down and replaced with a technologically up-to-date building at one end of the infield.

Bristol Motor Speedway won't get repaved until 2007 .

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SARASOTA Fla. The Cincinnati Reds released Luke Hudson on Thursday even though three other starting pitchers are being held out of spring games. "With Hudson, it is all about consistency," manager Jerry Narron said. "To be a bona fide major league pitcher, you have to be consistent. He would have one outing where he was very, very good and another where he was very, very bad."

Hudson was 4-2 with a 2.42 earned run average in nine starts after recovering from shoulder surgery in 2004. But last year his ERA soared to 6.38 as he went 6-9 in 16 starts and three relief appearances.

The Reds had signed , Hudson to a one-year deal last month and sent him outright to Triple-A Louisville. His release

Canine distemper suspected in raccoons found

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

FRANKFORT - Officials at the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources have received several reports of sick raccoons, which may indicate that an outbreak of canine distemper has begun in several counties in Central and Eastern Kentucky. Between Feb. 24 and March 7, the department received reports of eight sick or dead raccoons in Christian, Franklin, Jefferson and Madison counties.

Canine distemper is not a threat to humans. It occurs most often in raccoons throughout the Southeastern United States and is cyclic in nature, tending to show up about every five to seven years. Symptoms of the disease include distress, coughing, sneezing, discharge from eves and/or nostrils and diarrhea. Infected animals may have convulsions, tremors and chewing fits. These animals may lose their fear of humans. They may stumble, fall, or walk in circles. Canine distemper runs its course rapidly. Death is often attributed to a secondary infection.

Gray foxes and coyotes can contract the disease. It may appear as sporadic, isolated cases, or in widespread outbreaks. A healthy animal can contract canine distemper from direct contact with an infected animal or its body secretions and waste. However, most transmissions occur directly between animals.

Unvaccinated dogs are susceptible to contracting the disease. Pet owners should keep their animal's vaccinations current as a precaution. People who feed their pets outdoors should take special care to remove any leftover food. It can attract infected animals not completely debilitated by the disease.

Never attempt to capture or aid any sick wildlife. Canine distemper is almost always fatal to infected animals. Biologists recommend leaving the sick animal alone and reporting it to Kentucky Fish and Wildlife's toll-free helpline at 1-800-858-1549. For more information on the topic, call the department's helpline and request a copy of the pamphlet, "What can I do about diseased and nuisance wildlife?"

Boat capsizes in Cumberland River tailwater

TIMES STAFF REPORT

FRANKFORT - An unusual water release Thursday morning from Wolf Creek Dam in Russell County contributed to the capsize of a boat being operated by an experienced angler. Kentucky Department of Fish Resources and Wildlife Conservation Officer Tony Wright said a Russell County father and son plunged into the 40- to 45degree water around 7 a.m. (CST) March 9 after their boat capsized near Wolf Creek Dam. The anglers, 43-year-old Jeff Fugate and his 17-year-old son, James Fugate, both of Creelsboro, remained in the water for approximately 45 minutes before being rescued. The men were taken to a hospital in Russell County, where they were treated for hypothermia and released three hours later.

where the water is normally calm, they thought they would be all right," Wright said.

Water swamped the anglers' 14-foot johnboat and it overturned. A back eddy created by the current swept the father and son to calmer water on the other side of the dam. There, Corps employees were able to lower ring buoys on ropes to keep them in place until the water could be turned off and a rescue boat dispatched, Wright said.

> "If they hadn't worn their life preservers, they would be dead," Wright said.

tor side of the dam.

However, because of an ongoing construction project at the nearby Wolf Creek National Fish Hatchery, sluice gates underneath the dam are being opened whenever the electrical generation halts. These gates, which are rarely opened, kick a 30-foot tall column of water into the area of the tailwater that normally is not subject to heavy current. The gates must be opened to provide water for the hatchery.

Wright said the anglers' boat capsized when the sluice gates opened. The anglers were twice warned about the potential danger and told to leave the area prior to the gates being opened by a contractor working nearby and officials with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. "I think because they were on the other side of the concrete wingwall, Wolf Creek Hatchery Manager James Gray said sluice gates will be opened and closed during the next two weeks, and possibly longer.

Boaters in the tailwater should use caution and stay at least a football field length away from the face of the dam. Boaters are advised not to anchor near the dam because of heavy current and water fluctuations. Anglers should have their personal floatation devices (life preservers) on and securely fastened whenever fishing from a boat anywhere on the tailwater.

Cumberlands Football releases 2006 schedule

TIMES STAFF REPORT

WILLIAMSBURG - The University of the Cumberlands (formerly Cumberland College) Patriot football program has announced its fall 2006 schedule.

"We are excited about the strength of our schedule. The Mid-South Conference (MSC) is one of the toughest in the NAIA and this year will be no exception," said Patriot Coach Chuck King

The Patriots will face nonconference opponents in North Greenville and Austin Peay State University during the 3006 season. Although, familiar conference rivals like Campbellsville, Georgetown, Union, Bethel, UVa-Wise, and Pikeville will take up the bulk of the team's slate.

This will also be the second non-conference games. the Mid-South season Conference (MSC) has a split conference with East and West divisions. The Patriots will remain a member of the East along with Georgetown, Pikeville, Union and UVa-Wise. The West is comprised of Bethel, Belhaven, Campbellsville, Cumberland (TN), and Lambuth. Shorter will make the switch from the East to the West division to replace Kentucky Wesleyan, while MSC newcomer West Virginia Tech will join the East division.

Each MSC school will play eight conference games - five against the other teams in its own division and three against teams in the other division. All schools will have the opportunity to schedule two or three

The Patriots finished the 2005 campaign 8-3 overall, 3-2 in the Mid-South Conference Eastern Division and ranked No. 21 nationally. The Patriots tied or broke seven individual game or season records, placed 12 players on the All Mid-South Conference teams, and had two players recognized as NAIA All Americans.

Mysteries abound

Historians continue to debate where the Etruscans came from before they settled in Northern Italy. Archaeologists have theorized that the Etruscans arrived by sea and were from Asia Minor. But it is possible that their culture developed from an indigenous people of Italy called the Villanovans.

The language of the Etruscans is another mystery. The alphabet bears a resemblance to Greek, but linguists do not think the language is related to the Indo-European family of Greek or Latin. Scholars have deciphered some short Etruscan inscriptions, but most of the language remains a mystery.

The Etruscans (ih-TRUHS-kuhnz) were an ancient and mysterious people who settled in the Italian peninsula around 800 B.C. The Etruscan civilization is important for its strong influence on the culture and art of early Rome.

What is in a name?

The Etruscans called themselves the Rasena or Rasna. They were known as the Tyrsenoi or Tyrrhenoi by the Greeks and as the Tusci or Estrusci by the Romans.

Government and economic life

Etruria (the land of the Etruscans) was divided into 12 city-states. A king or magistrate ruled each city. The cities were united into a federation or league. Unfortunately, the league was not strong enough to prevent the cities from fighting each other, which eventually led to their downfall.

Maritime trade, agriculture and mining were the backbone of the thriving Etruscan economy.

The arts

The Etruscans lived in fortified citystates usually built on a hill. Their var cities had sophisticated sewer Sci systems and homes were built around an open courtyard. The Thi Etruscan military was a force to be On reckoned with. The powerful military was used to conquer and control ima

Etruscan sculpture was carved in a variety of stone, terra-cotta and metal. Sculptures were most often used for religious purposes and were painted. The Etruscans made beautiful pottery. One style strongly resembles the Greek pottery of the time, but the images are more fluid. Black pottery

Beliefs and burials

Much of what we know about the Etruscans is from the hundreds of burial tombs that have been excavated. The walls of the tombs are decorated with elaborate paintings that depict many funereal rites. Duels to the death (a form of human sacrifice) were sometimes fought as part of the burial ceremony. (Some scholars think these duels may have evolved into the Roman gladiator games.)

The Etruscans worshipped many gods and goddesses and built temples where offerings were made. The main gods were Tinia, ruler of the universe; Uni (Tinia's wife), the protector of cities and births; and Menrva, the healer.

The Etruscans foretold the future by observing signs such as lightning and the flight of birds, and by examining the organs of sacrificed animals.
