Four charged in check kiting scheme

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON — Four people were charged Friday kiting checks in a scheme that federal prosecutors said cost a bank more than $1 mil-

A federal grand jury indicted Fred Runyon Jr., 48, of Forest Hill; his sister, Judy Holbrook, 47, of Pinson Fork; William Randy Wheeler, 56, of Hatfield and James Daniel Stollings, 54, of Chapmanville, W.Va.

The four are charged with bank fraud.

Federal prosecutors said Wheeler, Stollings and Runyon were business associates with Quest Mining Co., when they convinced Holbrook, a branch manager for Community Trust Bank in Pikeville, to issue unfunded cashier's checks. The cashier's checks covered bad checks written by Quest subsidiaries.

No court date has been scheduled for any of the four.

Judge reinstates utility commissioner

by TOM DOTY STAFF WRITER and CHRIS RITCHIE HAZARD HERALD

HAZARD — Perry Circuit Judge Bill Engle ruled that the city of Wheelwright must reinstate a member of the city's utility commission after a hearing on Friday.

Utility commission member Blanche Finney's reinstatement was declared effective immediately by Engle at the hearing, which was held in Perry Circuit representing several Wheelwright resi-Court.

Wheelwright City Attorney Tim Parker said that the city will abide by any ruling of the court, but offered, "It has always been our position that the act of terminating a commission member did not violate the court order."

Judge Engle also scheduled an evidentiary hearing for May 17 in Floyd Circuit Court, where he will decide on other issues raised by attorney Ned Pillersdorf, who is dire financial straits by allowing the debt dents in the matter that began when the city raised gas rates by two-thirds last fall. The residents asserted that the city commissioners mismanaged a mounting gas bill from the city's supplier, Equitable Gas.

In November, Engle ruled that there was mismanagement on the part of the city. He appointed a special receiver to negotiate with the Equitable, after determining that the city had placed itself in to grow to over $100,000 by July 2005. At the hearing scheduled for May 17,

Engle will hear evidence as to whether the city commission should have to pay legal fees in the case and he will also weigh evidence on the matter of whether the city violated court orders by dismissing Finney.

Finney claims that her termination may have been linked to criticism she made during utility commission meetings about the city commission's expenditures

Dr. Garland Godsey, left, retired Prestonsburg dentist, and Seldon Horne, right, retired director of Prestonsburg City Utilities, apparently have no intention of becoming couch potatoes during their retirement, as evidenced by the effort being put out in recent days on the corner of Arnold Avenue, near the front of the newly-remodeled Floyd County Library. The pair, who both say they enjoy gardening, received permission from librarian Homer D. Hall to landscape a rose garden on the empty corner. "We plan to plant roses of all colors," Godsey said. "We just thought we'd give the people something beautiful to look at." Godsey and Horne are contributing their labor to the project, and funds from the library's general account are also being used, but such funds are limited and the industrious pair are asking city residents and local businesses to help offset the cost. "Any sort of donation would be appreciated," Godsey said. "Money, supplies, topsoil, mulch or even a couple of good, strong backs would all be welcome," he said. To donate, contact Homer Hall at 886-2981.

Knott man convicted of murdering Floyd woman

by TOM DOTY STAFF WRITER

HINDMAN — A Knott County jury convicted a Mousie man of the Dec. 17, 2004, murder of his girlfriend Thursday and gave him a life sentence.

Keith Conley, 22, had pleaded that he was not guilty by reason of insanity when he fatally shot Jessica Newsome, 21, Galveston. The jury did not buy his account and were moved by the evidence, which suggested a rational plan to hide Newsome's body when Conley realized that Newsome's mother was on her way to the scene of the shooting.

According to the evidence presented at trial Newsome, who was deaf since birth, called her mother using a TTY system and pleaded for help on the day she was murdered. The evidence suggested that Conley shot Newsome in her front yard and hid the body behind an embankment before Newsome's mother arrived at the scene and didn't move the body back into the home until well after she left the scene, suspecting no one was Conley pleaded insanity and, according to a Kentucky State Police Trooper who testified, claimed God told him to kill Newsome. The trooper also testified that Conley told him he threw the .357 Magnum that he used to kill Newsome into a creek behind her home.

Martin finds dream job after 50 years

by D.L. DAVIS

For 76-year-old Floyd County resident Mary Martin, finding her dream job took a few years - 50 to be exact. But now that she has found it, she has no intentions of letting go.

"I now have something to look forward to each day rather than just sitting there looking at the four walls," said Martin. "This job was the best thing that could have happened to me. I love working for the Red Cross and helping people."

While in her 20s, Martin and her husband moved in 1955 to Columbus, Ohio, where she held at 11 a.m. on Tuesday, May accepted a position with Ohio 9, at Walnut Street Baptist Bell as a long distance operator, Church, 1101 South Third a job Martin says she was well suited for. "I love to talk," she said laughingly. "I've been known to bluff my way through a lot of things by talking so

Martin worked for the phone company for nearly four years before attending Columbus Beauty School. She graduated in 1959 and subsequently operated her own shop off and on for the next 28 years. In between, she also worked as a health care aide, deli manager, personal care assistant, gave birth to a daughter, divorced, and moved back to Floyd County in 1996 to care for her former husband Virgil (Cup Cake) Tackett Jr., John, when he developed brain cancer. Following his death in 1997, Martin helped care for an elderly invalid lady before she too died in July 2005.

"In the summer of 2005, I found myself with no job and nothing to do," recalled Martin. "My retirement income was not much, and I had plenty of bills. Also, I had gotten into the habit of eating regularly! One day I was talking with my daughter Barbara, and she suggested I go to the employment office to see what they had available.'

While at the Prestonsburg Office of Employment and Training, one of the workers suggested that Martin contact the Big Sandy Area Community Action Program to see if she was eligible for the Senior Community Service Employment Program.

"I decided I had nothing to lose, so I went," noted Martin. 'The lady who helped me with the application process was Janet Howard. She was just

"I was thrilled to be working again," said Martin. "I had been going through a difficult time. My pet Chihuahua, Sandi Lou, died in November. I had her for nine years and loved her like a child. I still miss her very much. Working for the Red Cross brought purpose to my life at a time when I desperately needed

"I didn't know anything about the Red Cross except their name," said Martin. "I soon learned that there was so much to know about the organization and the tremendous amount of work they do for people.'

In her position, Martin assists fire and disaster victims as a caseworker, coordinates other relief efforts and acts as the office secretary and receptionist for the third largest Red Cross chapter in Kentucky.

"I love people, and as a Christian, it is my duty to help everyone that I can. The Red Cross helps me do that," said Martin, who was baptized in the River Jordan on a trip to the Holy Land in 1986.

Bobby Carpenter, executive director of the Floyd County Red Cross, says it was a pleasure to be able to hire Martin.

"Mary is a unique individual who came at a very important time in our chapter. We were involved with Hurricane Katrina relief efforts, and the timing couldn't have been better when she joined us through the Senior program. # ACLU goes back to court over Ten Commandmen ts monument at Capitol

FRANKFORT — A simmering legal dispute over whether a Ten Commandments monument should be placed on the Capitol grounds is heading back to

The American Civil Liberties Union says state officials should be held in contempt of court if they go ahead with plans to return the 6-foot-tall granite monument to the statehouse

U.S. District Judge Joseph Hood ruled in 2000 that displaying the monument on government property was an unconstitutional government religious endorsement. In a filing Thursday, the ACLU asked the judge to require state officials to show why returning the monument to the Capitol wouldn't violate the court order.

Legislators passed a law earlier this year directing that the monument, now on display in Hopkinsville, be returned to Frankfort and displayed publicly. Gov. Ernie Fletcher signed the measure into law in March.

The Ten Commandments monument was donated to the state in 1971 by the Fraternal Order of Eagles. It was removed from the Capitol grounds and placed in storage in the mid-1980s during a construction project. When political leaders tried to display it again in 2000, the ACLU went to court, claiming the monument was an unconstitutional endorsement of religion. The ACLU won the case,

Kentucky has been at the center of legal fights in recent years on the posting of the commandments. In one case, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled displays inside courthouses in McCreary and Pulaski counties were unconstitutional. In another, the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals said a similar display in the Mercer County Courthouse is constitutional because it included other historic docu-

Estate of man who died in nursing home wins $20 million verdict

FRANKFORT — The estate of a man whose daughter said his pleas for help were ignored at a nursing home won a $20 million jury award Thursday.

The estate of Loren Richards, 84, had sought $159 million in compensatory and punitive damages after he died March 2, 2002, at Beverly Health and

Wanda Delaplane, Richards' daughter, alleged that nurses ignored her father's repeated calls for help with abdominal pain. The lawsuit also alleged that the home was understaffed because of companywide cost-

A Franklin County Circuit Court jury returned the verdict after a seven-week trial, the Lexington Herald-Leader reported on its Web site.

Lexington soldier laid to rest at national cemetery

LEXINGTON — An Army sergeant from Lexington who was killed in Iraq was remembered Thursday as a servant to his family, friends and country.

An hourlong procession of hundreds of mourners accompanied the body of Sgt. Robert William Ehney, 26, to Camp Nelson National Cemetery near Nicholasville, where he was buried.

At the funeral, Pastor David Calhoun of Hope Springs Community Church said Ehney was a servant not only to his family and friends but also "To his men. To God and country," the Lexington Herald-Leader reported Thursday on its Web

Brig. Gen. Alan Grice, the deputy commanding general of the Army's 84th Division, told mourners at the cemetery that Ehney had fulfilled the core responsibilities of every soldier, "that he embodied the warrior ethos: He put the mission first."

Ehney's 4-year-old son, Will, sat between his paternal grandparents and accepted from Grice the Purple Heart and Bronze Star that President Bush awarded posthumously to his father.

Ehney was among three from the Army's 4th Infantry Division killed in a roadside bombing on April 23 near Taji, Iraq. They were assigned to the 7th Squadron, 10th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Brigade Combat Team based at Fort Hood, Texas.

Mine questions deserve answers

It's a scandal if coal miners died because a federal minesafety official knowingly put coal production above safety, as The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette reports.

An employee of the U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration told the newspaper that a federal mine inspector told him he tried to close part of a Massey Energy mine in West Virginia because it was unsafe.

The inspector reportedly said he was overruled by a superior who told him to back off. A fire broke out in that part of the Alma No. 1 mine a few days later on Jan. 19, killing two men.

If the Republicans who control Congress really want to know the truth about enforcement of mine-safety laws, they would convene a real investigation, complete with subpoenas and sworn witnesses - the kind that Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., is demanding in the wake of the latest revelation.

A real investigation might embarrass the Bush administration and Labor Secretary Elaine Chao, who oversees mine safety and is married to the Senate's second-in-command, Mitch McConnell of Kentucky.

But it could also slow the loss of life in the coal mines -26 dead underground so far in 2006, including five in Kentucky. Two of the Kentucky dead - Rick McKnight, 45, of Cumberland and David Chad Bolen, 28, of Harold were killed in a two-day period last week.

"There is no way that the Bush administration can be trusted to investigate itself in this very, very serious matter," said Miller, the senior Democrat on the House committee that oversees worker safety.

"If this article is accurate, and MSHA knew about the risks at that mine, then the agency's actions are totally inexcusable. We need to determine if this is, in fact, what happened."

According to the Post-Gazette, Danny Woods, a former mine inspector who now works in an MSHA educational field office, said that inspector Minness Justice told him that he tried to issue a closure order because of the large buildup of flammable coal waste along the mine's conveyor belt and because of concerns about the fire suppression sys-

"He was told to back off and let them run coal," Woods said, "that there was too much demand for coal."

Woods said that the inspector told him this during a wake for one of the dead miners: "He came up and told me he was told to do certain things and the inspectors before him hadn't done a proper job.'

Justice did not respond to the newspaper's requests for comment. But he gave a lengthy statement to federal inves-

In addition to the MSHA investigation, the U.S. Justice Department has opened a criminal investigation into the mine fire, amid evidence that someone repeatedly reset a monitor after the fire first broke out, thereby shutting off the alarm that should have warned those underground to

There also is evidence that the fire suppression system sent out only a useless trickle of water, according to the Pittsburgh paper, and that rescuers were given an inaccurate

Massey Energy has long been known for putting production ahead of safety. CEO Don Blankenship even sent out a memo to that effect last fall, warning mine superintendents that their No. 1 priority was to "run coal."

Congress should make sure that running coal isn't MSHA's No. 1 priority as well.

economy desperately needs is more high-school dropouts - so desperately that we should import them hand over fist.

Such is the logic of the contention by advocates of lax immigration that the flow of illegal labor from south of the border is a boon to our economy. But it doesn't make intuitive sense that importing the poor of Latin America would benefit us. If lowskill workers were key to economic growth, Mexico would be an economic powerhouse, and impoverished Americans would be slipping south over the Rio Grande.

The National Research Council reports that an immigrant to the U.S. without a high-school diploma whether legal or illegal - consumes $89,000 more in governmental services than he pays in taxes during his lifetime.

An immigrant with only a high-school diploma is a net cost of $31,000. Eighty percent of illegal immigrants have no more than a high-school degree, and 60 percent have less than a high-school cost the federal government $10 billion a year. State and local governments lose more. Illegals pay some taxes, but not enough to cover governmental expenses like Medicaid and treatment for the uninsured.

Whatever benefit illegals provide to the economy in the immigrants themselves. Advocates general must be minuscule. All workers without a high-school education - illegal and otherwise - account for only 3 percent of economic output. The U.S. has an ample supply of native-born workers with a high-school education or less, but Camarota suggests they are being pushed out of the labor force by the influx of illegals.

From 2000 to 2005, the percentage of high-school dropouts holding a job dropped from 53 to 48, and this trend was particularly pronounced in states with the highest levels of immigration. Illegals compete with the very workers least equipped to thrive in our economy.

Pro-immigration conservatives sometimes argue that, through immigration, we are importing social renewal. But the illegitimacy rate among Hispanic immigrants in the U.S. is 40 percent. They aren't coming from countries that are paradisiacal models of social conservatism. The illegitimacy rate in Mexico is roughly one-third, and in El Salvador it is 73 percent.

With the U.S. population aging, don't we need highly fertile immigrants to replenish our working-age population? Actually, there aren't enough immigrants to change our age structure significantly. With immigrants, the U.S. fertility rate is 2.1; without them, it would be

Immigration from Latin America, in short, does not chiefly benefit our economy, government or society, but rather of a lax immigration policy should admit that their policy has a humanitarian, not an economic, rationale, and its beneficiaries aren't Americans but mainly people from rural Mexico.

If we really need more poorly educated workers here, we can always rely, unfortunately, on the public schools to produce them indigenously.

Pretending to attack high gas prices

by DONALD KAUL

When I saw the headline: "Bush Takes Steps to Stem Increase in Energy Prices," my heart skipped a beat. I had just come home from a cross-country driving trip that had taken a second mortgage to finance.

Finally, I thought, after years of relentlessly pursuing policies that raised energy prices, the president is seeing the Actually, as I learned when I read the story, he's not. What he did was to float several trivial proposals designed to make people think he was interested in lower energy prices without actually lowering them.

What the headline should have read was "Bush Takes Steps to Fool the American Public — Again." He calls himself "the Decider." "The Fooler" is a

The centerpiece of his plan is a suspension of government purchases for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve. This would increase domestic supply by a fraction of 1 percent. Whoopee. As Chairman Mao used to say: "The road to energy independence begins with a single teaspoon of oil.'

The president also suggested an expansion of the tax break given to purchasers of hybrid cars. This is another giggle because most bigger hybrids use the technology to get better receleration can drag-race?

In any case, the proposal would most benefit Toyota and Honda, two Japanese firms who lead the hybrid field and are killing our car companies as it is.

Mr. Bush also talked about opening up the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska to drilling (he has never seen a wilderness he couldn't despoil) and rolling back some small tax breaks for oil companies (breaks so minor that even oil companies don't object to getting rid of them).

Basically, it was a pathetic attempt to get out from under the political fallout of $3-a-gallon gasoline (with $4 gas on the horizon).

The word that did not escape his lips, of course, is "conservation." I'm not sure he could find the word in a dictionary. (Hint to George: It's not listed under "k.")

No mention, either, of an "excess profit tax" that would relieve oil companies of some of their windfall gains. (In January, ExxonMobil Corp. reported the highest corporate profit in U.S. history - $10.7 billion for the quarter, $36 billion for the year.)

Oil companies need those excess profits, Republicans argue, so that they can afford to drill for new oil and build refineries. Swell, but if $70-a-barrel oil doesn't make you want to look for it, there's not much more that the government can do to help.

More to the point, the companies need obscene profits in order to pay their rather than super mileage. Why should executives obscene salaries. When Lee

we use tax dollars so that SUV-buyers Raymond, Exxon's CEO, retired last January after 43 years with the company he not only got $48.5 million for last year's work, he took home an $8-million a year pension with a lump sum value of $98 million. This in addition to the $183 million in Exxon stock he'd accumulated over the years and options to buy more worth $69 million--for a total package of $400 million.

And if that's not obscene enough for you, the company paid his club memberships too. (Really, isn't that piling on? You give a guy four hundred mill, he should be able to afford to play golf on his own nickel.)

You know, it just might be that $4-agallon gas is not such a bad idea. It might cause people to - and this is a radical idea — use less oil. That's the only real solution, you know. We are not going to drill our way out of this or bomb our way out or invent a technology that will solve the problem. Not any time soon. You want to spend less money on gasoline? Use less of it. Buy smaller, more efficient cars. Car-pool. Take a bus. Bike. Walk.

Or you could vote. Throw these rascals out and give a fresh bunch of rascals a chance. It's called democracy.

Last year's drought will improve future fishing in Kentucky

TIMES STAFF REPORT

FRANKFORT - On the surface, droughts might appear to be bad for fish. Droughts lower lake levels. Weedy shorelines become wide brown strips of dried mud. Small streams run dry in spots. Trees wither.

But droughts, such as the one that occurred in 2005, can actually help fish. "Last year's drought helped rivers and streams tremendously," said Gerry Buynak, assistant director of fisheries for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "We had a good spawn for shad in the Kentucky River and the Ohio River last year. We had a good largemouth bass spawn and an excellent white bass spawn in those rivers. The hybrid striped bass and striped bass are in great shape in the Ohio River."

The low water of last summer and fall also helped the fish in the creeks and streams reproduce successfully and survive winter. "The smallmouth bass in FRANKFORT - The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources has nominated a scenic eastern Kentucky surface mine reclamation site for the 2007 National Watchable Wildlife Calendar.

The site, owned by Big Elk Mining Company LLC, is located in an isolated spot in Knott County. Free-ranging elk frequently visit the area because of its high-quality wildlife habitat. Set to graduate from BLHS this week, Kidd isn't ready to hang up his basketball shoes. Instead,he is headed to the next level. On Monday afternoon at 1 in a signing ceremony in the BLHS library, Kidd will sign to play basketball and continue studies at nearby Pikeville College. One to Adams 18-7 in a lackluster performance that featured many unforced errors. The match, however, turned out to be one of the most thrilling in the tournament.

In Game Two, Allen Central fell behind 3-1, but with some strong defense by Courtney Hodge and Cassandra Stewart, managed to take the serve. An unforced error by the Rebels, however, gave the ball back to Adams. The Blackcats zipped to a 7-1 lead before the Rebels took a timeout to regroup and try to get back into the game. The strategy worked as Allen Central's Hannah Farmer dug up the ball to Stewart, who set up Brianna Halbert for a kill. Stewart aced the Adams crew and a competitive volley ensued after the second serve as the Rebels bounced back to get within three. With the score 9-5, Halbert sliced in two good serves, cutting the lead to just two. An Adams unforced error gave Farmer the serve. The Rebels dropped Game and got the offense going for another Rebel point. The game bounced back and forth and the Blackcats had a 13-11 lead when Morgan Wright stepped in to serve, landing an ace and keeping the offense going. Defense once again played a major role in the Rebels' play. All AC players took a big part in the Rebels taking a 14-13 lead before Adams called a timeout. The Adams team won the volley and tied the score, but had a service error, giving the Rebels a 15-14 lead. Stewart served it in for two aces and covered the backcourt, stopping every Blackcat attempt coming her way, passing to Hodge, who set up Halbert for a kill. Farmer smacked in a down-ball for a Rebel victory.

In the third and deciding game, Adams won the serve but the Rebel defense was fired up and stopped the Blackcat effort. The score stood at 16-12 when the Allen Central squad lost the serve. The Rebels proceeded well, though, stopping the Blackcat second serve to put the game at 17-13. # Fishing streams are doing really well," Buynak said. "There was a really good spawn in (Central Kentucky's) Elkhorn Creek last year. Stream fishing should be excellent in the coming years."

Droughts lower lake levels and expose normally submerged banks to sunlight. This promotes drying and oxidation that firms up the lake bottom. Firmer lake bottoms make better spawning areas when lake levels rise again. This especially benefits fish that spawn in shallow water, such as bluegill, redear sunfish and crappie.

Also, the drying and oxidation of the exposed lake bottom during droughts releases stored nutrients in the soil once water levels return to normal.

Droughts increase vegetation in shallow water that can improve fishing. Grass, saplings and brush grow on the exposed bottom during droughts; this provides future cover for largemouth bass and crappie, and nursery areas for young fish.

Low water levels in lakes and streams crowd predator and prey together.

Black bass, walleye, crappie, white bass, hybrid striped bass, muskellunge and catfish all benefit from the crowded conditions. Shad and other baitfish do not have as many areas to hide and the predator fish get fat from the easy meals. This puts them in much better shape to survive winter and reproduce successfully in spring.

Anglers can carefully study features on the lake bottom normally covered by water during droughts. Isolated stumps, rocks and logs that evade detection by an angler's electronic sonar unit can be recorded on a GPS unit or recorded in a notebook for future reference.

Low lake levels also reveal old roadbeds, ditches, depressions, drop-offs and other fishholding structures that should be studied for subtle features that may hold an 8-pound largemouth bass the following spring. A small gray and black representation of the lake bottom on a screen does not give the angler the visual reference and recollection that seeing the bottom with the naked eyes does.

Fisheries managers draw lakes down to simulate a drought when fish populations grow out of balance. Nature did the same thing last year. Kentucky anglers will reap the rewards in the future as a result.

Chad says Bengals will dominate division

by JOE KAY ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI - Quarterback Carson Palmer is muddling through his rehab. Running back Chris Perry is just starting his. The offensive line is in flux.

No matter. Pro Bowl receiver Chad Johnson insists that the Cincinnati Bengals will not only win their division this season, they'll dominate it.

"We're going to be good," Johnson said Wednesday, following a workout at Paul Brown Stadium. "Anyone else that feels we're not going to dominate the AFC North this year, something's wrong.

"Look at the numbers. Look at the players. Look at me. What else could I say?"

His tone was mirthful, his point serious. The Bengals have a much tougher challenge ahead this time around, but they're convinced that they're up to it.

As long as Palmer is back,

Palmer tore ligaments and other tissue in his left knee during a first-round playoff loss to Pittsburgh, which finished second in the AFC North but went on to win the Super Bowl. Palmer is hoping to be back for the start of the season, but the odds favor a later return.

"Carson says he'll be back week one, we'll be good," Johnson said.

If not, newcomer Anthony Wright will have to lead the team through one of its toughest schedules in years - much tougher than last season's when the Bengals went 11-5.

The Bengals won't know until training camp whether there's a realistic chance that Palmer can play early in the season. He didn't have much to say about his recovery from reconstructive surgery on Wednesday.

"Everything's going great," he said. "It's a long, slow process, and I'm moving along. As the rehab moves along and the leg gets stronger and better, I can do more things."

While Palmer talked about his comeback, Perry was on the other side of the locker room getting started on his own. Perry, the team's first-round draft pick out of Michigan in 2004, had his right knee cleaned out on Friday. He expects to be ready for training camp.

The knee bothered Perry last season, but tests couldn't detect the debris that doctors eventually found inside the knee.

"It's always a relief to know what's bothering you," he said, still unable to put full weight on

The Bengals' defense we their downfall last season, giving up an average of 30 points over the last eight games. They drafted defensive players with four of their first five picks over the weekend - cornerback Johnathan Joseph, defensive linemen Frostee Rucker and Domata Peko, and linebacker

A.J. Nicholson. Could the line be in a state of transition?

"Maybe their thinking is that if Willie or Levi isn't around after next year, they're covering their tracks for the future," said guard Eric Steinbach, whose contract al is up after the season. "If I were them, I'd want to keep this line together. I think that's their goal."

Anderson, entering his 11th season, is one of the leaders in the locker room. Teammates hope the club signs him to a contract extension.

"I'm expecting him back and, hopefully, back for a long time," Palmer said. "The way this game works and the way this league works, you never know. But he definitely would be a big loss for this team."

Reds Hall of Fame opens 1919 World Series exhibit

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

CINCINNATI - The scandalridden World Series of 1919 between the Cincinnati Reds and Chicago White Sox is the topic of a new exhibit, Edd Roush and the 1919 World Series, to open May 13 through October 1, 2006 at the Reds Hall of Fame and Museum.

The exhibit will examine the most controversial World Series in all of baseball, from the perspective of the Cincinnati Reds and their star center fielder, Hall of Famer, Edd Roush.

The centerpiece of the exhibit collection is the final out baseball, hit by "Shoeless" Joe Jackson of the Chicago White Sox, who later was banned from baseball for his role in the betting scandal. The ball is valued at more than $100,000.

"This the first time that the final out ball has been on display anywhere," said Greg Rhodes, executive director of the Reds Hall of Fame and Museum. "Having it here at the Hall of Fame gives fans a oncein-a-lifetime opportunity to see a piece of baseball history."

Also included in the exhibit will be excerpts of a taped interview with Roush, in which he discusses the 1919 World Series and the scandal.

The exhibit also hopes to dispel another myth, that the White Sox were an invincible team that lost only because they threw the Series. In fact, the Reds were the stronger team on paper. They had a better season record, a deeper pitching staff, and an offense that was comparable to the White Sox. But when news of the fix emerged the next season, the Reds victory was forever tainted. Eventually, it was found that eight members of the White Sox conspired to throw the games. All eight eventually were thrown out of organized baseball.

Also included in the exhibit 1919-era seats from

Chicago's Comiskey Park, rare film footage of the World Series, a jeweled commemorative stickpin given to Edd Roush for wire ning the World Series, and replica 1919 Reds uniforms from the movie, "Eight Men Out."

CHARLOTTE, N.C. Typical of how he plays, John Daly holds nothing back in his new book.

There are stories of how he lost 60 pounds in college by drinking a fifth of whiskey and smoking three packs of cigarettes a day. One of the longest chapters is devoted to sexual exploits with his four wives and a woman he calls "Almost Ex No. 4." In a harrowing account, he writes about the time his father put a gun to Daly's head in a drunken rage. But all anyone really needs to know about Daly is this _ he named his second daughter after a rehab center.

That would be "Sierra," as in Sierra Tucson, the Arizona clinic where Daly spent three weeks in January 1993 after trashing his Colorado house so badly the police were called.

Clearly, this isn't the stock variety of PGA Tour player autobiographies.

"John Daly: My Life In and Out of the Rough" will be in bookstores Monday, and no one will mistake it for Ben Hogan's book on the fundamentals of modern golf.

"It's the truth. I'm not going to sidestep anything," Daly said Tuesday. "It brings back memories of stupid stuff I've done in my life, and good stuff. It was honest."

And it is sure to enhance his grip-and-rip-it reputation. Some highlights:

officials found a bottle of whiskey in his bag. - Forced to lose 60 pounds at junior event in Atlanta when

Arkansas if he wanted to play on his college team, he once went three days without hardly any food, drinking four bottles of whiskey until he passed out in his room and had to be taken to the emergency room. "But you know what? My cigarettes-popcorn-whiskey diet worked," Daly wrote. "The pounds just peeled right off. By Christmas, I'd lost 65 pounds. I probably ought to have written a diet book or something."

- He said he has lost between $50 million and $60 million during 12 years of heavy gambling, and owed $4 million to casinos until he won the 1995 British Open, which enabled him to pay off the debt. Daly says Callaway Golf took care of a $1.7 million gambling debt when he signed an endorsement deal in 1997, after his second stint in alcohol rehab.

The second trip to rehab was the Betty Ford Center. For those wondering, Daly's next child was a boy.

No doubt, the book is causing great consternation at PGA Tour headquarters, where commissioner Tim Finchem rarely misses the chance to talk to players about upholding their clean image. Finchem called Daly on Monday to discuss the book. Daly called their conversation "positive," whatever that

'It's tough to match what the

- He got disqualified from a tour wants with what the publisher wants," Daly said.

Finchem said Monday that nothing in the book violates PGA Tour regulations. The only violation in question falls under "conduct unbecoming a professional," although such conduct isn't spelled out in the players' handbook.

Even if it were, Daly has an answer for that, too.

"My life is unbecoming of a professional," he said. "It's hard to state it in anybody else's words."

Daly's lifestyle borders on depravity. His actions lie somewhere between irrational and irresponsible.

He has trashed hotel rooms in South Africa and Florida, and stood in the kitchen of his Colorado home breaking everything he could touch. Given handsome appearance fees to play around the world, he has rewarded tournaments by tanking rounds or getting disqualified. It is rare to see him without his gut hanging over his belt and a cigarette dangling from his

Yet he remains one of the more popular figures in golf. Perhaps people relate so well to Daly because everyone has flaws, and everyone knows about his. In an era when celebrities deny anything that might be remotely disparaging, Daly hides nothing.

Will the book cost him any fans?

"I hope not," Daly said. "I

"One out of the three is a good season, but three out of three solidifies our program as top 25 type of program. Most schools with singles, doubles and team ranked high. This is the first time in school history that we've achieved all three. We're ecstatic that the national committee has recognized our fast track as one of the better college programs in the country."

Radman, a junior from Split, Croatia, becomes only the second Louisville player selected to compete in the singles championship and the first since Michael Mather, who represented U of L in 1998. He went 2-0 in singles play during the tournament and clinched the win in the title match by beating Notre Dame's 18th ranked Stephen Bass 2-6, 6-4, 6-4. He also teamed with sophomore Tony Teufel to go 2-0 in doubles in the tournament. Radman is currently ranked No. 39 the nation with a 17-11 overall record and is 13-8 as the Cards' top seeded player. # Fletcher, university president reach accord on Louisville projects

by JOE BIESK ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT - After some uncertainty, University of Louisville will host its basketball games at a planned arena along the city's riverfront, President James Ramsey said Wednesday.

Some other U of L projects such as a practice facility and a residence hall - that Gov. Ernie Fletcher vetoed from the state budget would also continue, Ramsey said. Fletcher and Ramsey met behind closed doors in the governor's office for about ing with the announcement.

"We're always ready and willing to find creative ways of doing these projects - whether they're projects that I vetoed or not," Fletcher said.

The projects in question were approved by the 2006 Kentucky General Assembly as part of its twoyear, $18.1 billion budget. However, Fletcher vetoed them last month.

Last week, a visibly frustrated Ramsey criticized Fletcher's budgetary cuts to U of L and said the school would have preferred funding for its other projects rather than the downtown arena. Ramsey said at the time would become an arena tenant.

Fletcher said before his meeting with Ramsey that the proposed downtown arena hinged on the university's support.

"If it doesn't, the financing plan that we have doesn't work,' Fletcher said. "We either have to scrap the whole project or come up with a new financing plan."

But after meeting with the governor, Ramsey said the school "reaffirmed" its commitment to play in the proposed arena, which will also be used for other events.

School officials would also an hour and a half, before emerg- that it was uncertain whether the carry on with plans to build a

> Lawmakers in a previous legislative session had authorized U of L to spend $9 million on the practice building. The project was approved again during the last session, for $16 million. Now, the school would use the previous authorization combined with $7 million in private donations to finance the building, Ramsey said.

School officials would use other funding to pay for a new parking garage. Ramsey said U of L would look for a pri> vate contractor to build a proposed residence hall, and the school would next year ask the legislature to authorize spending on a medical and dental research facility.

Lawmakers have touted the new arena as an economic engine for both the city and

Ramsey said he had spent the past week looking for ways to finance the projects that Fletcher had axed. Officials in the Fletcher administration helped during Wednesday's meeting, Ramsey said.

"We're convinced that there is a way for us - a financial way, a legal way - to move forward on that project," Ramsey said about the practice facility.

The building would also house the U of L women's volleyball and lacrosse teams, Louisville Athletics Director Tom Jurich said.

"From our standpoint, and from a very biased one, it really helps our athletic program,"

The book is sure to put him in demand, and perhaps he can use the money to support his gambling habit. Daly says he lost $1.65 million in five hours _ mostly on a $5,000 slot machine _ after losing in a playoff against Tiger Woods at a World Golf Championship last year in San Francisco.

He said Tuesday it was an innocent mistake. He had never seen a $5,000 slot machine.

"Twenty pulls is $100,000," he explained.

Clearly, there's more to Daly than a few drinks, a few smokes, a few wives and more than a few tugs on the slot machine.

He gave $30,000 to the family of a man killed by lightning at Crooked Stick in 1991 after he won the PGA Championship as a rookie, when $30,000 meant something to him. Daly met the victim's daughters last year. Both had graduated from college because of his gift.

He raises $60,000 a year for the Boys & Girls Clubs in Arkansas, and the John Daly Make-A-Wish Foundation Tournament has raised $5 million over the last 12 years.

And there are times when Daly knows his priorities.

University of Cincinnati freshman Steve Blevins has been named the BIG EAST Conference Co-Pitcher of the Week for his performance over the weekend at Louisville. Blevins shares the award with Georgetown freshman Darren Sizemore.

Against the Cardinals, Blevins spun a five-hit complete game shutout, the first of his career. The Louisa native and Lawrence County High School graduate struck out four and walked three in the start, improving to 8-3 this season with the victory. The complete game was his second straight and Blevins has now pitched 12.2 consecutive scoreless innings.

Blevins' victory was also historic as he became Cincinnati's winningest freshman pitcher ever. His eight wins are one better than Bruce Raible's mark established in 1968.

Blevins is the second Bearcat hurler to earn BIG EAST Pitcher of the Week honors, joining Glen Simon who was tabbed on Feb. 20. Teammates Logan Parker (March 20) and Jon DeLuca (April 3) have also been honored this season by the BIG EAST as Conference Players of the Week.

Plate racing has veterans steaming

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CONCORD, N.C. - Mark Martin doesn't like racing at Talladega Superspeedway, and he's pretty sure most of his rivals feel the same way.

"If you take a poll, and the guys weren't being politically correct and were telling you the truth, then only about five or six of them would say they had a good time racing at Talladega." Martin said Tuesday, a day after he was caught in a 15-car pileup at Talladega.

Restrictor-plate racing is volatile, to say the least. Getting to the finish requires as much luck as it does skill, and drivers are constantly on alert trying to avoid the eventual "Big One."

In Monday's rain-postponed race, it came ridiculously early. Only nine laps in, to be exact.

vers decided to line up door to problem I've got is the last three door across the track and jostle for position. Five-wide racing is never a good idea, no matter what the track.

But at Talladega, where the cars use horsepower-sapping restrictor plates to keep speeds under 200 mph, it's particularly dangerous. Drivers can't separate from one another, so everyone is in a tight pack and one slight bobble can wipe out half

So when Brian Vickers, Carl Edwards, Kyle Busch, Ryan Newman and Martin Truex Jr. met in one solid line, it took just seconds for disaster to strike. One of them bobbled - replays looked like it was Busch - and the demolition derby began.

Martin was collected, leading to his third-straight finish of 33rd or worse at Talladega.

"It's just so stupid. Beyond It happened when five dri- stupid," he fumed. "The biggest races, I didn't even make it to the first pit stop before I was wrecked - and none of which I had anything to do with other than trying to stay out of trouble."

Sterling Marlin certainly knows how to get around Talladega, with two of his five plate wins coming on the Alabama superspeedway. But he, too, was caught in the early accident and placed the blame squarely on NASCAR's younger drivers.

"These guys get out there and act like its a 10-lap shootout every time the green flag waves," Marlin said. "It's the stupidest thing I've ever seen. You should never be five-wide, probably should never even be four-wide. But these idiots just don't care.

"I guess they are just young and dumb and don't want to

years of Cup experience, and the other four drivers in that crashcausing line combine for just four full seasons of track time.

Even Tony Stewart, who has finished second in six of the last 11 Talladega races, was frustrated with the foolish on-track actions of NASCAR's newest stars. To make it to the finish. Stewart made a mental checklist of which drivers to avoid. If he closed in on that driver, he faded far back in the field for his own

"There were two or three guys in particular that were up there that are fairly young, that were guys I did not want to be anywhere near on the race track," he said. "None of these guys have figured it out. It's amazing."

"They raced their guts out all day, and I always end up going Marlin might just have a to the back and riding around all straight and at the end of the day, we always end up in the top five where we need to be," he added. "But there are a bunch of those guys who just beat themselves to death up there all day and end up putting themselves in bad positions."

That's the strategy Jimmie Johnson finally learned after several Talladega bobbles nearly ruined his reputation. Blamed for three accidents last year, Johnson watched tape of Dale Jarrett's victory last October and noted how the veteran laid back the entire race.

Only in the closing laps did Jarrett make a run at the front. Because he had stayed away from trouble the entire race, his Ford had nary a nick on it as he barreled past the battered cars of his rivals.

Johnson then realized he didn't have to lead every lap, so point. Toss out Newman's four day and keeping my fenders long as he led the final lap. His new strategy helped him win Monday at Talladega, giving him a second plate-race trophy to go along with his Daytona 500 victory.

But Martin isn't convinced any one strategy is correct. After all, he's been wrecked running at the back of the pack and at the front. Although he acknowledges youth plays a huge role in the accidents - "it's not the veterans out there causing the wrecks," he said - his biggest complaint is the plate environment.

And that, he lamented, can never be changed.

"There's no solution because the fans love it," he shrugged. "If you are throwing dirt, you're just losing ground and you look like a fool complaining about it. The fans love it. And you know what? When I'm not in that race anymore, you better believe am going to watch it on TV."

Busch celebrates 21st birthday amid intense scrutiny

by JENNA FRYER ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. - If the

NASCAR community had one universal wish for Kyle Busch on his 21st birthday, it probably would be for him to start behaving like an adult.

Busch, one of the youngest drivers in the Nextel Cup series, has been under constant criticism this season for reckless or immature behavior. He's twice tangled with series champion Tony Stewart, wrecked race leader Michel Jourdain Jr. in Mexico City, took the brunt of the blame for aggressive driving in Daytona and was ticketed for reckless driving in Richmond,

Most recently, he gave Casey Mears a retaliatory bump under the red flag at Phoenix that earned him a five-lap penalty and a severe tongue-lashing from NASCAR president Mike

"The guy is really fast and he's got a lot of talent, but he really does a lot of stupid stuff -

feeling throughout the garage," Mears said. "When he grows up, he's going to be a real good race car driver.'

> Busch's rivals eagerly await that day. He celebrated his 21st birthday on Tuesday and is rapidly closing in on a time when he won't be able to shrug off his errors as youthful mis-

For now, much of what he's done can be attributed to immaturity.

Kyle Busch

"You've got to remember how old he is," said four-time series champion Jeff Gordon, Busch's teammate at Hendrick Motorsports. "He's got pressure on him. He's got a tremendous amount of talent. He has a great

"I think a lot of times when you're young you're so under the microscope, everybody is coming down on you and the whole world is watching and it's hard for you to take all that in at times. It only makes it tougher for yourself."

It doesn't help that he's the kid brother of Kurt Busch, who lately is that any little thing that and that's across the board, that had more than his share of missteps in his first four Nextel Cup seasons. During that time, Kurt Busch became one of the most disliked drivers in NASCAR both in the garage and the grandstands.

It's possible that Kyle is paying the price for some of his brother's sins. He's been cut very little slack since graduating to the Cup series last season, and the criticism directed at him has seemed harsher than what's leveled at the rest of the young

"He's definitely guilty by association," Kurt Busch said. "But he's also young and an aggressive racer who likes to race hard. Mix it all up and it sometimes breeds the question: Is he over the line or not?"

Kyle Busch himself has wondered if he's not judged in a harsher light, if he'd maybe have a bit of a smoother ride if he wasn't one of the "Busch Brothers.

"I have that feeling sometimes, that it's difficult to show your differences between each other," Kyle Busch said. "It's very difficult to be in the news, and yet to try to be in the good news. What I've noticed here is out of the ordinary, I get volatile situations.

"It's very difficult to get the amount of respect that you wish you could get in the right way."

Those closest to Kyle Busch acknowledge he's not been perfect, and has brought a lot of the scrutiny onto himself. He has made foolish on-track mistakes, and Stewart twice had conversations with him that left the veteran frustrated and feeling as if he couldn't get through to him.

And Kyle Busch did himself no favors following his win in Phoenix last November when he angrily stormed out of his postrace news conference because he was being questioned about his brother's reckless driving arrest two nights earlier.

Yes, that was immature of him," Kurt Busch said. "But if you look at it from his point of view, it was his moment to shine and he's sitting there being forced to talk about me. That's not fair to him, and it upset

Kyle Busch readily acknowledges he handled things incorrectly in Phoenix, and now knows that retaliating against Mears was wrong. But he insists it's going to take time for him to learn how to handle himself in

Based on his brother's success, he was snapped up very young and put on a lightningfast career track. He was entered in his first NASCAR Truck Series race when he was 16, and was in the Busch Series by 18. It left little time for learning from life experiences or social situations with people his own age.

"The hardest part for me is probably my age," Kyle Busch said. "I'm so used to being able to win races and things like that at the local short track ranks. Now you've got so many tough competitors out there, that it's so difficult to win and get the respect you want to gain.'

His supporters insist he is trying. And there may be hope for him _ just six months after he was the most vilified driver in the sport, Kurt Busch has taken steps toward improving his image and his efforts have been recognized.

Steve Wallace preps for ARCA RE/MAX Series Kentucky Speedway debut

by MIKE SCHMALTZ

SPARTA - Racing legacy Steve Wallace was one of 15 ARCA RE/MAX Series drivers visiting Kentucky Speedway this past week to prepare for the May 13 "Harley-Davidson of Cincinnati 150.

The fifth race on the ARCA RE/MAX Series docket will mark the sixth time the series will officially open a Kentucky Speedway season.

Wallace took time out of his busy practice schedule to meet local media and preview his second of seven scheduled ARCA RE/MAX Series starts this season.

The 18-year-old driver said he will use today's valuable track time and next Saturday's superspeedway race experience to prepare for his planned ascension to NASCAR Busch Series competition later this year and next season.

Wallace is scheduled to compete in 14 NASCAR Busch Series events this season including the June 17 "Meijer 300 Presented by Oreo" at Kentucky Speedway.

"There are a bunch of short track starter series, but there's no superspeedway starter series," he said. "The ARCA RE/MAX cars are the same as NASCAR, the motors are the same and the tires are about 90 percent there. This is an awesome, incredible starter series for young drivers to cut their teeth on larger tracks.'

He added the top NASCAR teams also recognize the value of grooming up-and-coming talent in the series and the presence of those big-team entries will make for an exciting "Harley-Davidson Cincinnati 150.

"The ARCA competition level is not as high as it would be in the Busch Series where 43 teams have a chance to win the race every week, but it has gone way up. You have Yates, Penske, Roush, Evernham and Rusty Wallace, Inc., in the series now, so there are some big teams.'

Representatives of those teams will take the "Harley-Davidson of Cincinnati 150" green flag along with ARCA RE/MAX Series regulars such four-time Kentucky Speedway race winner Frank Kimmel at 3:00 p.m., next Speedway gates will open at 9:00 a.m., with ARCA Lincoln Welders Truck Series practice. ARCA RE/MAX Series qualifying will follow 9:45 a.m., and the truck series will return to the paved quarter-mile track for the "Kentucky 100" race at 1:30 p.m.

Opening day also includes a noon concert with female country music quintet Cowboy CBS Television Crush. "Amazing Race" winner the Linz Family of Cincinnati will serve as the race grand marshal.

All event tickets are $35. Tickets can be reserved online at www.kentuckyspeedway.com and Tickets.com or by phone at 888-652-RACE. Fans also can purchase tickets in person at Meijer stores, the Kentucky Speedway Ft. Mitchell, Ky., ticket office at 2216 Dixie Hwy., Ste. 200, or in the speedway Fan Center located off of Interstate 71 Exit 57 in Sparta, Ky.

This Town, That World

Editor's Note: For years, Floyd County Times founder and former publisher Norman Allen wrote a weekly column that looked at Floyd County through his eyes. His columns are being reprinted due to request.

OOPS!

Somebody reminded me, the other day, that a raisin is nothing more than a worried grape, full of wrinkles. How about a prune? It's plum wrinkled.

O. TEMPORA!

The Journal of the Kentucky Medical Association, September, had an article by Dr. William K. Keller. It was titled, "Sex." And it dealt strictly with highway safety, safety features needed in cars, etcetera. The last paragraph goes back to the title when Dr. Keller writes:

"Oh, yes, if you have wondered why this editorial was entitled, "Sex," be honest, now-would you have read it at all if it had been called "Automotive Safety?"

GONE TO GLORY!

There used to be several places hereabouts, each of which was rightly called "Loafer's Glory." Prestonsburg had its share of them-places where the hours slid by for many, the bored, tired, lonely, convivial, even for the plain, ordinary brand of loafer.

'Satan's Little Helper'

by TOM DOTY STAFF WRITER

Veteran horror maestro Jeff Lieberman ("Squirm") returns from a 15-year hiatus with this dark effort which explores how violent video games place a speed bump in front of children's perceptions of real vio-

The film has a lot to say about placing the kids in front of the Playstation, Xbox or PC, which then baby-sits the little ones by allowing them to engage in violent role-plays.

The movie opens Halloween Day (which admittedly already obscures reality by giving everyone an excuse to hide their face) with a mother and her 6year-old going to pick up the daughter/sister who is coming home for fall break.

SUNDAY, MAY 7 1 p.m. TBS MLB Baseball

By the time the New York Mets play the Atlanta Braves today — already their ninth of 18 meetings this season — they'll know whether their NL East nemesis will haunt them once again. New York hasn't won a season series against the Braves since 1997, but a franchise-best start and confidence instilled by newcomers Carlos Delgado and Paul Lo Duca — combined with Atlanta's early struggles — have given the Mets reason to cheer their streak-busting chances.

7:30 p.m. FOX King of the Hill

Actress and former talk show host Ricki Lake lends her voice to Hank and Peggy's new neighbor Lila. She and her husband, Jim, are extremely permissive parents, and their out-of-control son, Caleb, quickly becomes the terror of the neighborhood. Hank and Bobby join forces to stop the young hellion in the new episode "Hank's Bully."

8 p.m. CBS Cold Case

Lilly (Kathryn Morris) reopens the 1984 shooting death of a respected emergency-room doctor when a new witness surfaces. A homeless mental patient was convicted of the killing and died in prison, but the new witness knows a secret about the victim: He had a serious gambling addiction. Did he owe money to the wrong people? Lilly immerses herself in gambling culture to find out in the new episode "The River"

8 p.m. ESPN MLB Baseball

Assuming he's healthy enough to play in what began as a laborious — in more ways than just physically — season for Barry Bonds, the Giants' slugger will assuredly hear a cascade of jeers from the always-vocal fans in Philadelphia tonight. They'll save their cheers for their big bopper,Ryan Howard, who has become a favorite at Citizens Bank Park for his own prodigious power stroke. He replaced Jim Thome last season and won the NL Rookie of the Year.

8 p.m. check local listings PBS Nature

Fans of "Bones" or the "CSI" shows can tell you that Mother Nature is often a key player in solving crimes. The presence of bugs, for example, can give clues to when someone died ... and even, in the case of gunshot victims, where the bullet came from. The new episode "Crime Scene Creatures" explores the roles of not just bugs, but larger animals, plants and other wildlife in the forensic process.

Movie: Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid Steve Martin stars as private eye Rigby Reardon in this 1982 parody of 1940s gumshoe movies. When a beautiful woman (Rachel Ward) comes to him for help proving her father was murdered, Reardon can't say no. En route to solving the case, he meets numerous film noir characters. Carl Reiner both directs and costars in the movie.

8:15 p.m. SHOWTIME

Movie: Team America: World Police "South Park" creators Trey Parker and Matt Stone are the brains behind this irreverent 2004 comedy acted out by marionettes instead of cartoons. Like "South Park: Bigger, Longer & Uncut," the series' big-screen incamation, this one has musical numbers, lots of profanity and spot-on sattre. U.S. politics and the "war on terror" -- North Korean leader Kim Jong II is the villain -- are two of the chief targets.

MONDAY, MAY 8 7 p.m. ESPN MLB Baseball

The Minnesota Twins visit their alter ego in the American League, the Texas Rangers, to open a three-game series. Once again this season, the Twins are relying on a stud pitching staff -- especially in middle relief -- to prop up an offense led by Justin Morneau, who hit just 22 homers in 2005. That would have been seventhbest on the Rangers, which would gladly trade a few Mark Teixeira long balls for a star starter a la Minnesota's Johan Santana.

Don't' waste money on a 'good' oil change

by TOM and RAY MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:

I just had an oil change, and the dealer recommended that I pay an extra $10 to have a 'good oil change." This involved flushing out the old oil rather than just draining it and replacing it with new stuff. The dealer claims it will increase the life and operating quality of the engine. I have never done this with my cars in the past, and have never lost an engine in action yet. Was I taken, or is there some merit to the claim?

TOM: Yes, and maybe. You were probably taken, John, although only for 10 bucks. This guy is obviously an amateur! And yet there might be some merit to his claim.

RAY: This is sort of the automotive equivalent of an enema, TOM: In fact, we understand that the product they use is manufactured by the Ex-Lax Corporation.

bucks (three bucks retail), he was probably using a bottle of product. You dump this stuff in, where bad is good enough. run the engine for five minutes and then drain it out, along with the old oil. It's a solvent of some kind, and, presumably, it helps remove any sludge or deposits that are inside your engine.

TOM: Whether it works or not, we don't know. In theory, it could do what it claims to do. But there are two things that make us wary of using this stuff. RAY: One is, if you change your oil on a regular basis, you shouldn't HAVE any meaningful sludge or deposits built up in your engine. And two, while it's working, this stuff dilutes your oil and interferes with the lubrication process, so you might even be harming your engine while you're supposedly clean-

TOM: In fact, on the bottle of Motor Flush, you are warned not to drive the car while this is in your engine. That suggests to me that they're at least aware that damage can occur.

RAY: So, unless you know that you have a problem with RAY: Not really. For 10 sludge or deposits, or your engine's on its last legs and you've got nothing to lose, I'd Motor Flush, made by Radiator stick with the good old "bad" oil Gunk Company, or some similar change, John. This is a case

Dear Tom and Ray:

12 volts, two engineers and one ignorant teacher

I am a junior in high school. In my physics class, the teacher claimed that you could be electrocuted by touching a car's battery terminals. I started laughing and said I know from experience that there is no way you could die from a car battery. She said I must have been very lucky. It makes me mad, because everyone believes her just because she's the teacher. I even asked my dad, and he said maybe it would make your heart flutter if you touched both terminals to your chest while pouring water over yourself. Who is right? — Duell

TOM: You and your dad are right, Duell. While a car battery has enough amperage (electrical power) to kill you, it doesn't have enough voltage (electrical force — to push the electrons through your body) to do the job. Your body is just not conductive enough to be fried by 12

RAY: If you were made of metal, like C-3PO, 12 volts would crisp your circuits. But the human body's resistance is much higher than that of metal.

TOM: The danger from car batteries is not so much electrocution as it is explosion. If you touch both terminals with a metal wrench, for instance, you can create a spark that can ignite hydrogen gas in the battery. That can send pieces of battery and battery acid flying every-

RAY: Which is why my brother's face looks like it does.

TOM: Now, what you've just seen in action in the classroom, Duell, is the difference between theoretical physics and applied physics. Your teacher knows all about electrical theory — that's theoretical knowledge.

RAY: Your father, on the other hand, has stripped off his shirt, laid his bare chest on a pair of battery terminals, and turned the hose on himself. That's applied physics - and probably as good a reason as any to avoid alcoholic beverages and college fraternities.

TOM: My brother and I had a similar demonstration years ago. He had just rented his first apartment, and I was over there helping him slap some paint on the walls. As the day wore on, it started to get dark. But the only light in the room was a bulb on the ceiling that had one of its wires detached.

RAY: Now, my brother and I both have degrees from MIT, one of the finest engineering schools in the world. And we'd both taken electrical engineering courses. But we sat there for an hour as it got darker and darker, unable to decide if we should attach the dangling wire, or if doing so would electrocute us and burn down the house.

TOM: As we sat there in the dark, debating the possible outcomes, some knucklehead who lived downstairs came bounding into the room and asked, "What are you guys doing sitting in the dark?" Before we could explain, he slid a chair over to the middle of the room, slapped the wire back on with his fingers, and the light bulb came on.

RAY: Now, our point is not that education is overrated. Our point is that, if you're going to be an engineer, it's good to have both theoretical AND practical experience.

TOM: You've got some practical knowledge already, Duell. Now you need to learn the theoretical, so you can explain to your teacher exactly WHY she doesn't know diddly squat. And then you can go back to using your practical knowledge with the principal to try to get yourself out of detention for that one.

gaming device. The game allows the player to assist the Dark One, Satan, as he wreaks havoc in an urban environment. Lieberman lets us know that this mom is not plugged into her son's life early by having her to admit to her phone friend that she smoked a doobie before leaving the house. Mom then engages in a ribald conversation during which she laughingly refers to her son's crush on his sister as broaching on incest. It's pretty clear that this parent won't need to dust the mantle for a "mom of the year" trophy anytime soon. The pair arrive at the Ferry and receive sister Jenna, but she isn't alone, having brought her boyfriend Alex along. This doesn't sit well with Dougie, who thought he'd have his sister to himself for trick-or-treating that night.

When they get back to the house, Dougie runs off in a huff and spies a man in a satanic be a dummy (it's actually a porch. Dougie assumes it's the Satan character from his game and asks if he can tag along and offer assistance. The Satan guy is only too happy to have some help and agrees with a nod, but never utters a spoken word throughout the film.

The pair are an urban nightmare together and turn an outing for Halloween supplies into a deleted scene from "Death Race 2000," as they use a shopping cart to mow down customers in the parking lot. It's a smart scene that deftly illustrates Dougie's impending divorce from reality as he excitedly yells out the point totals they are receiving through this activity.

Dougie enjoys himself immensely and is obviously lacking in quality time with his folks, but he eventually bridges the gap back to reality when he witnesses his new buddy gut his dad like a 110-pound codfish.

The film culminates with a Halloween party where the fellow in the Satan mask poisons the punch and generally misbehaves as the family hunts him down. Things appear to go their way when a helpful guy in a Jesus costume lends a hand.

They allow him into their home just as the final credits roll, but why doesn't this guy speak?

Lieberman paints a grim picture of where society is headed with this effort, but it's worth a watch if you have a strong stomach. Some of the imagery is super disturbing even if the message is well-intentioned.

Lieberman gets good support from his actors, which include a deft turn by Amanda Plummer as the clueless mom. I hate to pick on kids but one must allow that Alexander Brickell, cast as Dougie, is not in the same league as say, Lawrence Olivier, but he does manage a few believable moments.

What's most important here is the message that technology is fun but we should note that it ought to be used sparingly and should never become more powerful to your children than we are as living examples of how one should behave. Truth be told my 5-year-old son is mask propping what appears to often 10 minutes into his latest game before my my wife bonks corpse) up on a neighbor's me on the head with the side of the box which proclaims that it is only suitable for teens. Luckily I started getting better at scanning the box before I saw this film. Lieberman does go a little overboard with his theme. Setting the film on a remote island is overkill and boarders on sledge hammering the theme of isolation ad nauseum.

Lieberman has always included messages in his films and this one comes close to rivaling his first feature, "Blue Sunshine." That one, from 1976, just got a DVD release and is also worth your time. It targets the use of recreational drugs and follows the fates of six friends who dropped some homemade acid in college. Turns out the stuff never leaves your system and 10 years later you lose all of your hair and quickly proceed to the next symptom of becoming a full-fledged homicidal maniac.

Best lines: "When you were trick-or-treating, did Satan kill Alex's father?"

"My master poisoned all of the candy and hung an old lady out a window."

"I said 'incest,' and don't be so stupid. Play your game."
