Pike woman dies in wreck

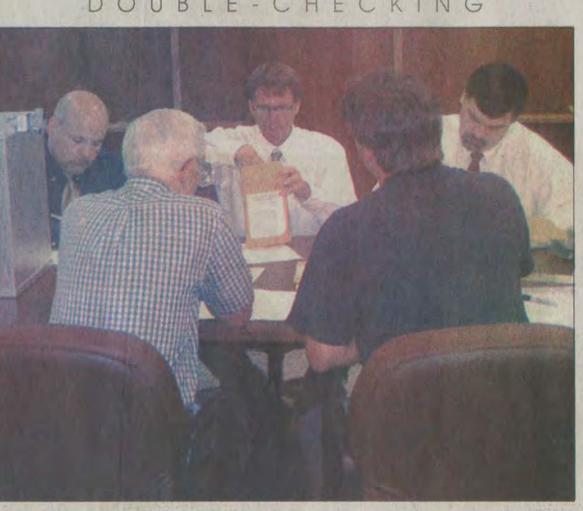

by TOM DOTY STAFF WRITER

REGINA — A single vehicle accident claimed the life of an Elkhorn City woman on Monday. Jennifer Wright, 40, was traveling east on Route 460 in Regina and lost control of her 1993 Cadillac at approximately 10:30 p.m. The vehicle crossed the center line and struck an earth embankment before overturning.

Wright was pronounced dead at the scene by Pike County Deputy Coroner Denver Bailey. Trooper Melissa Hampton is investigating the accident and was assisted at the scene by Kentucky Vehicle Enforcement, the Marrowbone Fire Department and Elkhorn City Ambulance.

Dedication tomorrow

A dedication ceremony will be held at noon Saturday at Stumbo Park in Allen to mark the renovation of the county's Vietnam Veteran Memorial. Veterans and the public are invited.

County Clerk Chris Waugh, above center, was flanked Thursday morning by election officers and attorneys for Gerald DeRossett and "Big" John Goble, the subjects of a recanvass of votes in the race for District 1 magistrate. When the counting was done election night, the two candidates were separated by a razor-thin 53 votes, with Goble getting the upset over longtime incumbent DeRossett. Once the vote totals were re-examined Thursday, the outcome remained the same, as the recanvass produced the exact same totals. At left, DeRossett, left, and Goble watched the recanvass.

Murder trial continues with testimony on technical details

by TOM DOTY STAFF WRITER

The trial of James Hunt continued Wednesday, with seven more witnesses called by the prosecution, in the case that finds Hunt accused of murdering his wife, Bettina, in her Buck's Branch home on Tuesday, Nov. 30, 2004.

Testimony included an appearance by Det. Dwayne Price, who assisted primary Det. Terry Thompson in the investigation. Price testified that he examined the car that James Hunt was driving the night of Bettina Hunt's death after it wrecked in a creek down the rode from her home. Price said that he looked at the car briefly on the night of the murder and bagged a shell casing he observed in the passenger side window of Hunt's car. Price noted that the casing could be seen from outside the car and he was giving it a cursory look before a more detailed search in the morning after a search warrant could be obtained.

The more thorough search of the vehicle the next morning yielded little, however, Commonwealth's and Attorney Brent Turner questioned Price about observations that were significant creek at Buck's Branch. He allegedly told another witness that he wrecked while returning from a trip to Food City.

Det. Terry Thompson took the stand for all of the morning period and recounted his investigation, which began the night of the shooting. He began with a trip to Our Lady of the Way Hospital, where James Hunt was being treated for injuries sustained in the wreck, which included a small cut over his left eye and an abrasion on his left hand.

Thompson knew that James Hunt was a suspect and said he told Hunt that his wife had been murdered. He reported that Hunt told him he couldn't remember anything that happened before the accident, though he had told others several stories about what happened prior to the wreck, including the alleged trip to Food City and that he was transporting important papers.

Thompson performed a gunshot residue test on James Hunt and noted that he didn't have high hopes for it, saying, "It was apparent he had been in water. He was soaking wet." He did note that he found five .38 caliber super rounds in Hunt's pocket.

Lawmaker asks court to force production of lawyer bills

by JOE BIESK ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT - A Kentucky lawmaker asked a judge Thursday to force Gov. Ernie Fletcher's administration to turn over billing records from outside lawyers it hired in defending the ongoing state personnel investigation.

State government has so far spent more than $2 million on private attorneys involved in defending the case, said Jim Deckard, Fletcher's general counsel.

Editorial roundup

The News-Enterprise, Elizabethtown, on cancer:

Cancer never sleeps. Cancer looms in the darkness, undetected unless its presence is revealed through tests and screenings. Early detection is one of the most powerful ways to fight the disease and save lives. For this reason Kentucky and other states guarantee some cancer-screening tests such as mammograms that can detect breast cancer in its early stages. ...

Why then would 43 members of the United States Senate entertain passing a bill that, while attempting to make health insurance available to more small businesses and their employees, would pre-empt state mandates requiring insurance companies to provide coverage for some cancer screenings such as mammograms and other preventive procedures?

Senate Bill 1955, pushed by Sen. Michael Enzi, R-Wyoming, stalled in the Senate last week when it fell five votes short of the 60 needed to limit debate and amendments. The Health Insurance Market Modernization and Affordability Act would allow small-business health plans to organize across state lines. Enzi said the businesses could lower health insurance premiums by 12 percent and reach nearly a million more workers, many who now can't afford insurance.

The downside is that Enzi's bill also would allow the new small-business health plans to ignore 130 health-coverage mandates required by the states to prevent, detect and treat cancer. In addition to mammograms, ... patients in other states could lose cancer screening tests for colon cancer, prostate cancer and more.

Enzi's proposal is not dead, just wounded. He says he is willing to accept changes in the legislation to revive it. That's encouraging.

Do small businesses and their employees need and deserve the opportunity for affordable health insurance? No question about it, they do. But not at the cost of sacrificing coverage of vital, lifesaving screenings such as mammograms. State mandates raise the cost of health insurance, and some that require questionable alternative practices should be reconsidered. ...

erance tax revenue is still in place. But the Governor set up new obstacles to getting hold of it. Now, instead of working with local legislators, county judgeexecutives will have to apply to some Frankfort bureaucrat for coal severance dollars. I don't know what kind of yardstick these bureaucrats will use to measure the importance of projects, but I have no reason to expect them to know, or for that matter to care, much about what local people feel is important. I am already concerned about the yardstick our Governor is employing to measure the importance of coal severance projects. In newspaper accounts the Governor complained that years of Democratic dominance had resulted in Republican-leaning counties never getting a fair share. "It is time that we brought some geographic equity," Fletcher said. Apparently it was geographic equity that prompted Fletcher to leave in the budget $3.4 million in projects funded with coal severance dollars for Butler County, a county that produced no coal last year, but one that is represented by Fletcher's fellow Republicans in both the House and the Senate. I don't know what "geographic equity" will mean to our county officials, who now must jump through the Governor's new hoop and convince Frankfort bureaucrats of the worthiness of their coal severance projects. I do know that coal severance tax revenues are literally earned on the backs of our local miners — the tax is five percent levied on every ton of coal mined in Kentucky. These dollars should certainly not be distributed based on politics to areas of the state where coal is not mined. These dollars are designed to help coal counties.

It is greatly disturbing to me that the Governor who now claims to be protect-rounding his latest book.

"The Da Vinci Code" is fiction. Fiction by definition is non-truth. But it's one component of Brown's book that has stirred much of the controversy: a claim that Jesus Christ married Mary Magdalene.

Roman Catholics and Christians call such a claim an affront to their faith and everything it stands for. Some are concerned that this claim — again, made in a work of fiction — will cost some fence-straddling Christians their faith.

No one wants to see faith lost. Faith is a valuable component in a country founded in religious freedom.

Perspective is the key. Conversation is paramount.

Let's use this claim, this book, this movie, as a forum for open, honest discussion — among Christians, non-Christians and others of assorted faiths and beliefs.

This isn't the first film to stir controversy in the religious community. It certainly won't be the last. It is another opportunity to meet, talk, share and discuss issues central to personal faith. It's an opportunity that shouldn't be missed.

ADVERTISING MANAGER Kim Frasure advertising@floydcountytimes.com During my many years of coaching, I always stressed the value of teamwork. I found that the more we improved our teamwork, the more our team won.

In many ways, I've found that the same is true for government.

The better the teamwork — the more people you involve in a decision — the more the people of Kentucky win.

Governor Ernie Fletcher recently chose to veto teamwork when he vetoed coal severance projects. Not only that, he took the ball and went home ... to Frankfort.

Like other legislators, I worked as a team with city and county officials and citizens on deciding which projects should be included in the budget to be funded with local coal severance dollars. These decisions were not made behind a closed door in Frankfort. These decisions were made with the avid involvement of local officials and citizens who know best what the needs are in our communities.

It is true that the Governor vetoed the projects, not the funding. The coal sev-ing local coal tax revenues for local projects is, in fact, the same Governor who, more than any other Governor in the history of the Commonwealth, has tried to raid coal severance coffers for the state's General Fund.

As part of the General Fund, coal severance revenue would be used in counties where mining does not exist. In 2005, Governor Fletcher's spending plan proposed siphoning off $60-$70 million in coal severance dollars — millions more than in past years. The Governor proposed suspending the state law that requires that 50 percent of the coal severance dollars be returned to coal-producing counties.

In this year's budget plan he proposed taking even more coal severance dollars for the General Fund.

Those same local legislators Fletcher dismissed with a stroke of his veto pen have repeatedly had to step in to protect coal severance revenues from him.

With his veto, Fletcher vetoed more than our projects. He vetoed our local team. Come to think of it, Governor Fletcher has never been on Eastern Kentucky's team.

On May 8, the first annual Perfect Attendance Awards Ceremony was held at the Mountain Arts Center in Prestonsburg. One hundred eighty-five students earned Perfect Attendance Awards during the recognition.

The purpose of this event was to recognize and honor students who had not missed any days this school year and had three or fewer tardies in Floyd County Public Schools. Families and community members attended to support the recognition of the students' accomplishment.

Floyd County Board members Jeff Stumbo, Carol Stumbo, Mickey McGuire and Sherry Robinson presented each child with a perfect attendance award trophy, a certificate of recognition from the Board of Education, and a Perfect Attendance Citation from the House of Representatives.

The district level attendance awards ceremony was made possible through contributions of local sponsors. We extend our thanks to the following sponsors who helped make this event and/or other attendance opportunities available this school year:

At the Movies: 'X-Men: The Last Stand'

by CHRISTY LEMIRE AP MOVIE CRITIC

The nuance and complexity of character that made the first two "X-Men" movies more compelling than the typically mindless summer blockbuster are gone in "X-Men: The Last Stand," the third and allegedly final installment in the comicinspired franchise.

In their place this time, you get flying, flaming cars and a totally naked Rebecca Romijn. Like, really naked — not just covered in blue body paint.

You could call this The Brett Ratner Effect. Everyone's fears were true about what would happen when the director of the buddy-comedy "Rush Hour" movies took over the "X-Men" series from Bryan Singer, who has moved on to this summer's hotly awaited "Superman Returns."

Ratner seems more concerned with spectacle than substance, offering a film that's shorter than its predecessors (2000's "X-Men" and 2003's X2: X-Men United") yet crammed with more characters and more subplots, all of which come and go as quickly as Wolverine flashes and retracts his metal claws.

What made those movies interesting was the humanity, for lack of a better word, of its mutant characters. They were tormented by their unwanted superpowers; they were conflicted about how best to use them. They sought refuge in the guidance of even-tempered mutant leader Charles Xavier (Patrick Stewart) and in each other. They experienced the same sorts of anxieties and insecurities as the rest of us, but eventually carved out a place for themselves in the world where they felt safe, accepted.

Yes, it was (and still is) a little ridiculous to watch grown men and women running around in weird hair and head-to-toe leather, and in "The Last Stand" the most distracting bit of casting comes from Kelsey Grammer, who plays Dr. Henry McCoy, or Beast. The presence is there, the voice is there, the gravitas should be there. But then there's Grammer with blue face paint and wild fur sprouting. all over his head, stuffed into a business suit and trading quips with Hugh Jackman like:

"Wolverine, I hear you're quite an animal."

"Look who's talking."

Grammer is more believable providing the voice of Sideshow Bob on "The Simpsons." Then again, the basis is a Marvel Comic. Either you're going to go with the conceit or you'renot.

But everyone involved with this film purports it to be the anyone gets in terms of digging

"X-Men: The Last Stand," a 20th Century Fox release, is rated PG-13 for intense sequences of action violence, some sexual content and language. Running time: 104 minutes.

Two stars out of four.

meatiest and most relevant of the trilogy, with its premise that scientists have developed a cure for mutancy, and all the social and political implications that follow. Do the X-Men give up their powers and conform to be like everyone else? Or do they keep them and maintain the qualities that made them unique - and, frequently, ostracized?

It's all very high concept, and would seem applicable to anyone living on the fringe, but Rather and screenwriters Zak Penn (who co-wrote part two) and Simon Kinberg ("Mr. & Mrs: Smith") merely skim the surface. Protestors stand outside government buildings where these new shots are being administered, holding signs and chanting, "We don't need a cure!" Halle Berry's Storm, who can manipulate weather, says she doesn't want a cure. (And why should she? Her powers are among the coolest of all.) Meanwhile, young Rogue (Anna Paquin), who's stuck with the fact that everyone she touches dies, thinks it's not such a bad idea.

And that's about as far as into the film's inherent philosophical issues; "The Last Stand" is the rare movie that actually could have run a bit longer, if only to give us a chance to think.

Instead we get giant battles between the good X-Men and the bad mutants, led by Ian McKellen's metal-moving Magneto (still wearing that idiotic helmet, it's so beneath him). Besides Romijn's shapeshifting Mystique and the flame-shooting Pyro (Aaron Stanford), he's added to his arsenal a mutant with spikes sticking out of his face, another who can sense other mutants, and a third appropriately named Juggernaut (soccer star Vinnie Jones, dressed in S&M gear) who simply plows through everything in his path. Is your mind boggled yet?

We haven't even mentioned the new mutants on the side of all that's pure and right, including Angel (Ben Foster), who has wings growing out of his back (hence the name) and whose father is responsible for the dreaded cure.

They're all superficial concepts, pawns populating the enormous computer-generated set pieces, the biggest of which features Magneto ripping the packed Golden Gate Bridge from its moorings and manipulating the span to make it extend to Alcatraz Island. (Somehow it's just not as much fun to watch people running for their lives anymore, even under the guise of summer entertainment.) The most intriguing charac-about coal mining. Kopple's cameras capture all of the drama and social outrage that accompanied a Harlan County mining operation when the laborers joined the UMWA. The opening images of tall, proud men having to get down on their knees to enter the mine for a shift remains one of the best images ever captured and amply demonstrates how the mine is more important to the company then the men they feed to it. This edition includes scenes that didn't make the final cut, but the best bit remains a scene where a striking miner tries to explain to a New York policeman why they have come to the Big Apple to protest the corporation which owns their mine. It's a remarkable scene which demonstrates the wide gap between two cultures that share the same nationality.

Next week look for Alyson Hannigan in the ribald "Date Movie" and Samuel Jackson teams with Julianne Moore in racially the charged "Freedomland."

by TOM DOTY STAFF WRITER

Variety was rampant among this week's releases, with dramas, comedies, sci-fi action fests and regional documentaries competing for your video dollar.

"Transamerica" - Desperate housewife Felicity Huffman Oscar nominated for her work here) stars here as a male-tofemale transsexual who is weeks away from her final surgery when she/he learns that they have a teenage son and he s currently locked up in a juve nile detention center. The film follows this odd couple and morphs into a road movie as the pair come to grips with each other. A standout performance from Huffman keeps this on going. There is also a welcome appearance from screen veteral Burt Young ("Rocky"), who hasn't been on screen much these days.

"Cheaper by the Dozen 2" -Hokey fun for the whole family here as Steve Martin and Bonnie Hunt return as parents of 1 Rids. Here they go camping and engage in some light hearted rivalry with another clan led by Eugene Levy ("SCTV"). Ligh entertainment that delivers few laughs.

"Bloodrayne" - Yet anothe film adaptation of a video game by director Uwe Boll, who demonstrates that he hasn' quite figured out yet how to translate the joystick lader thrills of gaming into cinematic magic. He has previously made excruciatingly awful films from two video games ("Alone in the Park" and "House of the Dead" though, this time, he at leas delivers some good action sequences as he adapts the story of a vampire/human hybrid who teams with two vampire hunter to take down the king of vam pires (played here by Ber Kingsley in a bad wig). Despite the fact that Boll gets a big bud get here and some talented thes pians (Kingsley, Meatloaf and Michael Madsen) he still man ages to take all the fun out o going to the movies.

 "Hollow Man 2" — Direct to-video sequel to the Kevin Bacon film. This time ou Christian Slater stars as an invisible assassin who is created when the military gets its hand on a formula for invisibility. No as good as the original, which wasa't all that great if memory serves, though not bad for direc to video.

"Harlan County USA" -Barbara Kopple's 1973 docu mentary gets the deluxe DVI treatment here and remains one of the best films ever made

High school dropout rate increases for second year

rate increased for a second straight year, while the number of students who graduated increased, according to data released by the state Department of Education.

Both male and female students showed an increase in the dropout rate from 2004 to 2005, the latest available figures. Black and Hispanic students also each had increases in their respective dropout rates, while the largest drop, according to the data. "While the increase in Kentucky's high school dropout dropouts is slight, I'm very concerned about it," Education Commissioner Gene Wilhoit said in a statement.

The "nonacademic data" year is one part of Kentucky's school accountability system. Scores from two other parts the Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills and the Kentucky Core Content Tests - are due out later in the year.

From 2004 to 2005,

American Indian students had Kentucky's overall high school dropout rate increased from 3.35 to 3.49. During those years, there was an increase of 359 students between the ninth and 12th grades who dropped out, the figures show.

When broken down, the numbers indicated boys continreport for the 2004-2005 school ue to drop out at a higher rate than their female counterparts, finishing with a rate of 4.09 from 3.91 the previous year. However, girls experienced a dropout rate increase, from 2.77 in 2004 to 2.87 last year.

Still, the number of graduates last year increased from 2004's 37,787 to 38,221 in 2005. That's an increase from 81.29 percent in 2004 to 82.84 percent last year.

While the increase in graduates is "what we want to see," the numbers show Kentucky is still "well behind where it needs to be," said Richard Innes, an education analyst at the Bluegrass Institute. What's troubling is Kentucky's dropout rate increased two years in a row, Innes said.

"You don't want it going that way," Innes said. "That's a bad trend. That's a real bad trend."

High school dropouts tend to be less productive compared to students who earn their diplomas, he said. Prison populations include a large percentage of people who dropped out of high school, Innes said

Lisa Gross, a spokeswoman for the Education Department, said there was not a definite cause for the increased dropout rate.

"It mirrors the problems that we've seen in high schools," Gross said. "The main one of these being that we're not meeting those kids' needs, and they sometimes don't see any other option."

Dropout rates differ among ethnicity.

The rate among whites dropped slightly from 3.22 in 2004 to 3.21 last year. For blacks, the rate rose from 4.56 to 5.92; Hispanics increased from 4.77 to 5.24 in 2005 Meanwhile Asians went from 1.73 to 1.39 and American Indians' dropout rate fell from 5.32 to 2.81.

Wilhoit said it was up to educators to better challenge au dents and keep them interested in school. There are also dropout prevention and early intervention programs Kentucky could adopt, Wilhoit said in the statement.

"That's a key to improving the high school experience ensuring that students are engaged in meaningful learning experiences so that dropping out is not their first choice," Wilhoit said.

Mine official describes Darby mine rescue attempt by ROGER ALFORD ASSOCIATED PRESS

HARLAN — Minutes after a massive explosion rocked an eastern Kentucky coal mine, a ringing phone awakened Ronnie Hampton, supervisor of the Harlan division of the Office of Mine Safety and Licensing.

Jolted awake by the news of missing miners around 1 a.m. EDT on Saturday, Hampton immediately called other members of his rescue team, all of whom hurriedly dressed and took off for the tiny community of Holmes Mill in remote Harlan County, not far from the Virginia border.

They had no way to know what would unfold in the next few hours, that they would rescue one miner and recover the bodies of five others in the worst coal mine disaster in Kentucky since 1989.

"We were trying to go as fast as we could, because we were still optimistic," Hampton said.

When it comes to rescuing miners, every minute counts, and his men sped to the Kentucky Darby Mine No. 1, an underground operation cut into the base of a mountain some 500 yards off the twisting country road that leads in from the county seat. His team, with Harlan and Bell counties, had Paul Ledford, who turned out to Hampton said Ledford and assembled outside the mine within an hour. One stopped by headquarters to pick up a truck loaded with air tanks and safety gear needed for a search and rescue in a deadly atmosphere. "It was a lot of chaos,"

Hampton said Wednesday, "There was a lot of bad odor. ... All the gas alarms were going off.'

Instruments showed carbon monoxide and methane levels within acceptable levels at the mine's entrance, so the rescue team started in, carefully monitoring gas levels as they advanced open-faced, meaning they hadn't yet donned their oxygen masks.

Had methane levels been in an explosive range, Hampton said they would have had to wait to go in.

enter the intake because there was not an explosive mixture of methane, and that the atmosphere was breathable," he said.

Radio signals faded as they advanced deeper into the mountain, so sentinels were posted to intercept and pass along communications from the depths of the mine, which had been jarred so violently that rocks had fallen from the ceiling, partially obstructing one passage.

In the distance, the team saw members scattered across a head lamp flickering. It was Jr. He was dead, be the lone survivor.

"He turned his light on and off to let them know he was there," Hampton said. "He was extremely dirty. You could tell he had about crawled out of his clothes. They were trying to talk to him. The first aid people got to him. He said there were three behind him, and that just gave us all kinds of hope."

Rescuers helped Ledford onto a battery-powered cart, which miners know as a mantrip, and hauled him out of the mine.

"He answered questions, but he was disoriented," Hampton said. "He was trying to recognize people and so forth.'

Hampton said Ledford may not have survived if the rescue team hadn't gone in quickly.

"He probably had made it as "We found out that we could far as he could," Hampton said. "I don't know."

> With carbon monoxide readings rising to dangerous levels deeper inside the mine, Hampton said the first team reached the No. 3 belt head, then had to retreat to the surface. A second team, equipped with oxygen tanks, took over. Hampton was on that team.

Not far from the place where the first team found Ledford, Hampton and another member of the team found Paris Thomas

Thomas were trying to exit the mine together. "They got disoriented and split up.'

The rescue team moved rapidly along the portals. "We were trying to go as fast as we could, because we were still optimistic," Hampton said.

Despite their haste, they would find no other survivors.

Three of those killed -Thomas, 35; Roy Middleton, 35: and George Petra, 49 - survived the initial blast but died of carbon monoxide poisoning, according to preliminary tests. Amon Brock, 51, and Jimmy D. Lee, 33, died of blunt force and heat injuries.

Investigators haven't said what triggered the blast. They're focusing their investigation on a type of building blocks that were used to build barriers, or seals, across unused portals.

Similar blocks were used at the Sago mine in West Virginia, where a Jan. 2 explosion killed 12.

The Darby mine had been cited 41 times in the past five years for not cleaning up coal dust and other combustible materials, including three times this month, according to MSHA statistics. Since Kentucky Darby LLC took over as operator of the mine in May 2001,

Thompson also discussed a bottle of Juicy-Juice found at "the scene which had been converted into a silencer by having its end cut off and a t-shirt stuffed inside. He said that he also found a bandage stuck to the bottle that had apparently "been on a wound and bore a spot

- of blood. Testimony from a 911 operator was followed by a presentation of the call which recorded the incident. The phone had apparently dropped to the floor but the jury could hear Bettina Hunt begging for her life and a loud and angry male voice, with all noise cut off after the report of a gunshot.

involved in collecting evidence, with each describing taking blood and hair samples from Hunt and bagging them for testing at the crime lab. Each testified briefly to following procedures and were not challenged by defense attorneys.

Thursday got underway with a small army of forensic technicians testifying to the chain of custody of evidence collected at the scene, and from James Hunt at the hospital. It was a painstaking process during which Turner questioned everyone who handled a piece of evidence in the case and resulted in several witnesses having to travel to court from out of state to make a five-minute appearance. It is a practice that has become commonplace since the ny from medical technicians O.J. Simpson trial, which saw relentless cross-examination of evidence technicians in a successful bid to paint suspect key evidence that was collected at the scene of his estranged wife's death. The technicians called testified to which evidence samples they handled, with several witnesses only securing the samples in lockers and never coming in close contact with any of the items that were tested.

Turner called technicians who examined hairs from the Hunts that were compared to hairs found on several pieces of evidence. One technician testified that hair samples were not the best method of establishing evidence because they are not conclusive.

The strongest testimony of the day came from the deputy coroner out of Frankfort who performed the autopsy on Bettina Hunt within 24 hours of the incident. She noted that there were seven bullet wounds. inflicted on the victim that were caused by a minimum of three shots fired at her. SHe noted that wounds to both wrists of Bettina Hunt were "defensive" and indicated that she instinctively raised her arms to ward off the projectiles.

The medical examiner also described the paths of each bullet and observed that one bullet which had entered her skull was fatal and instantly produced unconsciousness.

The day's testimony ended with a technician saying she positively identified several items of evidence as containing blood. She noted that James Hunt's jacket, jeans, and the Juicy-Juice bottle were all tagged for DNA analysis after blood was detected on each.

The trial now stands in recess Friday.

for failing to endorse the bill that passed the Senate without objection. They say any delay in enactment of the legislation endangers miners.

'This legislation has widespread, bipartisan support and is our best chance for getting much needed protections quickly in place," said Rep. Hal Rogers, R-Ky. He represents the southeastern Kentucky area around the Darby mine, where an explosion killed five miners last weekend.

Miller said adding his amendments to the Senatepassed legislation should not result in a major delay in overall passage of the bill and would, in the long run, make miners safer.

"I think it's very clear that these improvements that I'm asking for are all easily done if people have the will to do them," Miller responded.

He released a statement of support for his changes from an attorney representing the relatives of three of the 12 miners killed in the January accident at the Sago mine in West Virginia.

"Given what occurred at Sago and in other coal mines since that time, where numerous men have lost their lives due to unsafe mining conditions, we do not understand why any lawmaker who cares about the health and safety of miners would not want these necessary safety measures included in our law," said the attorney, Paul Cranston, who represents relatives of Terry Helms, Fred Ware and Jim Bennett.

Both the National Mining Association, an industry group, and the United Mine Workers of America, which represents miners, issued statements reiterating their support for the Senate bill Thursday.

The United Mine Workers of America expressed support for the Senate bill Thursday and announced plans to file a lawsuit next week seeking to require the federal Mine Safety and Health Administration randomly check 3 percent of oxygen devices in underground mines

The sole survivor of the Sago accident reported that some of the air packs didn't work, forcing miners to share the devices. The same type of air packs were used in the Darby mine.

The federal mine agency did not have an immediate response to the threatened lawsuit.

The men in the Kentucky mine were using the same air pack model as the Sago Mine disaster victims, even though the lone survivor had questioned the reliability of the devices about a month ago.

In the Sago disaster, rescue eams were held at bay for several hours because of high levels of methane. Hampton said his crew moved much quicker because they didn't encounter he same explosive levels of the hatural gas.

Kidd named conference player of the year

by STEVE LeMASTER SPORTS EDITOR

PRESTONSBURG - One year after narrowly missing out on being named the Floyd County Conference Player of the Year, Allen Central High senior Brock Kidd claimed the honor Thursday night at the conclusion of the 58th District Baseball Tournament's title game. Conference coaches voted Kidd, a Governor's Scholar, player of the year.

"Brock is a really great kid," said Allen Central Coach Ken Johnson. "He is very conservative and has a great work ethic. He is one of those guys on the team that you never worry about. If he has to miss practice or to be late for practice, then I know that something has interfered with him. Brock is reliable. He's one of those guys who are there — he always shows up. What may speak much about him is his character. He is kind and loving with his family. A humble kid who is not proud, but who has a confidence that gives him greatness in no matter he sets his mind to."

The Floyd County Conference Player of the Year has made strides - both on the diamond and in the classroom. Kidd signed to play baseball at Alice Lloyd College, but later opted to attend the University of Kentucky on an academic scholarship.

"Brock signed with ALC to play baseball and was looking forward to it so much, but when he was offered this scholarship to UK, he was faced with a great decision," said Johnson. "I think he made the right choice. Brock is wise beyond his years, and I think he has chosen the path that will offer him the greatest success."

Throughout the season, Kidd has been a mainstay in behind the plate at catcher for the Rebels. He's also pitched (.3-0) and been one of the team's offensive leaders (.453 batting average).

Teammates Nick Music, Justin Jacobs, Tyler Turner, and Scott Little joined Kidd on the All-Conference team. Other playersnamed to the squad were T.J. Hall (South Floyd), Justin Slone (South Floyd), Jamie Staggs (South Floyd), Josh Rodebaugh (Prestonsburg), Bobby Hughes (Prestonsburg), Allen Craynon (Prestonsburg), Pat Stapleton (Betsy Layne), Cody Click (Betsy Layne), Brandon Thacker (Betsy Layne)

Baseball and all its intricacies

by RICK BENTLEY TIMES COLUMNIST

When it comes to baseball, I can be a little cranky.

I love the sport; it is my passion. I always said baseball was my first love, and it's pretty well true. My friend Roy Cutright, when he coached PRESTONSBURG - Senior Alanna Cline played a significant role in Allen Central's road to the 58th District championship. Cline kept up her end of the deal for the Lady Rebels, pitching and hitting Allen Central to the district crown. Coaches voted the Allen Central senior the Floyd County Conference player of the year.

Cline, one of the top 58th District girls' basketball players during the 2005-06 season, struck out 24 batters in two district tournament games. She also had the attention of opposing pitchers when she stepped into the batter's box. Allen Central Coach Don Burke acknowledged that Cline was well-deserving of the district's top individual honor. 'Alanna played great," Burke said, following Thursday's postgame awards ceremony. people say they can't watch baseball on TV, much less in person, going on and on about how slow the game is, how you can watch for an hour without anything happen-

When I hear that, I alternate between anger and laughter. These are usually the same people who talk about all the excitement in football, when in reality action lasts for bursts of four or five seconds followed by 30 or 45 seconds of standing around.

No sport has more intricacies, more nuances than baseball. Please, don't kid yourself into thinking that of basketball. In many ways, it's the most simple of the major sports our country observes.

I thought about this as I watched Monday night's opening game of the 59th District baseball tournament, which East Ridge won 9-2. While that sounds like a rout, the Warriors came to bat in the top of the sixth leading 3-2.

Turner tames Cats, AC wins district again

PRESTONSBURG - Allen Central remains the top 58th District baseball team. The Rebels won their second straight district title Thursday night at Archer Park, beating Prestonsburg 6-1. Senior Tyler Turner took the mound for Allen Central and despite giving up a hit to Blackcat leadoff hitter Bobby Hughes during the game's first atbat, settled down and controlled the opposing team. Prestonsburg could only get one run across in the third inning against the Rebels.

Allen Central Coach Ken Johnson has now guided the Rebels to back-to-back district championships.

'Prestonsburg played us tough, we knew they would," said Johnson. "We left runners on and didn't make the most of our opportunities. But we came through with some big plays."

Turner went the distance and got

Lady Rebels top P'burg for title, continue turnaround

by STEVE LeMASTER SPORTS EDITOR

PRESTONSBURG - Simply put, Allen Central caught fire in the second half of the regularseason. The Lady Rebel softball team returned to the top of the 58th District Thursday night at Archer Park, beating longtime rival Prestonsburg 12-5 in the district title game. Senior Alanna Cline pitched well and she and her teammates hit and run the bases extremely well on their way to the convincing win.

Cline struck out two dozen bat- during the final two weeks of ters during the district tournament.

After the title game, Allen Central Coach Don Burke had a brief meeting with his team. In that meeting, Burke asked his team to savor the moment.

"This is something that you will remember the rest of your lives," Burke said. "This is something that nobody can take away from you. You are champions."

Allen Central, despite being one of the region's hottest teams the regular season, entered the district tournament as an underdog.

But Burke believed in his team.

"These girls have worked hard to get to where they are at," Burke added. "You could see these girls improve and get better the more we played."

clinic performed by East Ridge manager Kevin Justice. Allow me to wade through my notes and my foggy, faded memory to explain what happened as the Warriors posted three runs to put some distance between them and Shelby Valley.

What follows may be convoluted and difficult to understand, and if it is, it is simply my lack of skill explaining it. What Justice did from the third base coaching box was sheer poetry:

Andrew Robinson tripled to right-center to begin the frame. Justice pulled his first string when he employed Cory Ray as a pinch-runner.

Timmy Bingham walked to put runners on first and third before Peyton Elswick hit what appeared to be a sacrifice fly. The ball was dropped, allowing Ray to score and putting runners at first and second.

Pitcher Zack Thacker laid down a bunt, with Justice intending to give him up to move both runners into scoring position with only one out. However, Wildcat hurler Justin Tackett made a good play and threw Bingham out at third.

He then brought senior Kyle Fletcher off the bench as a courtesy runner for Thacker, putting his pitcher back on the bench where he could rest and using the athleticism of Fletcher on the bases.

With the nine hitter coming to the plate, Justice again went to his bench - for the third time already in the inning - and it paid off when pinch-hitter Robert Coleman singled to right to deliver Elswick with the second run of the frame, putting runners at first and third.

Justice immediately brought Keith Miller, for whom Coleman had batted, back in to run at first, and quickly put him in motion to steal second and put runners at second and third with still only one out.

Jeran Robinson then grounded out, scoring Thacker with the third run of the inning and moving Miller to third.

The inning finally ended when Tackett got Joel Meade to pop out, but in the stanza, East Ridge turned only two hits into three runs thanks to an error, a walk, a pinch hitter and, by re-entering Miller, two pinch run-

It was a masterful perform mance by Justice, who pulled all the right strings, survived the botched sacrifice-bunt attempt and quietly walked across the diamond after the inning having turned a tight 3-2 lead into a comfortable 6-2 edge and effectively coaching his team into the regional tournament.

I'm pretty sure Kevin Justice would simply shuffle his feet and shake off any praise that came his way after such an effort, likely saying a lot of people could have done it.

I'm not sure how right he is, but I do know one thing, it was a tremendous performance by someone most people didn't even notice was on the diamond.

And, it was also a thing of beauty for those of us who realize that what many people consider a slow, dull, boring game is, in reality, a complicated, intricate, diverse chess match that is as complex as it is enjoyable to watch.

Especially when done properly, as it was in the top of Monday's sixth inning.

Kentucky Christian University announces varsity football program

TIMES STAFF REPORT

GRAYSON - For the first time in the school's history, Kentucky Christian University plans to field a varsity football program in 2008. The Knights will compete as an independent while also continuing its long-standing association with the National Christian College Athletic Association (NCCAA). University President Dr. Keith P. Keeran made the announcement Friday, May 19th in a press conference held in the McKenzie Student Life Center.

"We are excited to see intercollegiate football come to our campus. All across America there is a serious decline in the number of male students who are enrolling and graduating from college. Football may help to correct that problem at KCU where the student population is 40 percent male," stated Dr. Keeran.

Dr. Keeran continued, "Kentucky Christian University is unique when it comes to the focus of its athletic programs. Our first concern is with character development and scholastic achievement. We believe that if we place the emphasis on the development of life skills that the discipline learned through athletics will reinforce and enrich spiri- new football program with Dane Damtual formation and academic instruction. We have seen this in our other intercollegiate sports programs and believe the same will be true of football.

Along with the program announcement came the introduction of the first head football coach to be hired at Kentucky Christian. Dane Damron, an East Carter High School and Georgetown College football standout will assume the reins of the fledgling program.

The success of a football program depends on the head coach and we know that Coach Dane Damron will first focus on developing the character and scholastic abilities of his athletes," said Dr. Keeran.

Damron led Georgetown College to the NAIA National Championship in 1994 as their starting quarterback. After an extremely successful college career, Coach Damron began to experience similar success in coaching. Before returning to Kentucky to re-establish Boyd County as a consistent playoff contender, Damron successfully transformed two varsity football programs in Florida.

"I am extremely excited to begin our is through the roof."

ron at the helm. He brings a wealth of coaching experience and a tremendous desire to accomplish greatness at a place that has meant so much to the Damron family," added KCU Interim Athletic Director Bruce W. Dixon. "Dane's father, former KCU basketball coach, always reminded his players to 'remember who you are and WHO you stand for.' I know Dane believes this as well and will lead his team with this same element of faith."

Since KCU is an NCCAA II member (non-scholarship), the Knights will seek competition against similar nonscholarship programs. The University plans to construct playing and practice facilities to accommodate its newly established football program as well as the school's soccer teams.

"As you can imagine, this has been a very exciting time on our campus. There is something very special about the feeling you get at a college football game on Saturday afternoon," said Dixon. "It is my opinion the impact that will be felt on-campus, as well as within the community, simply cannot be overestimated. Our level of excitement

Jones signs with Pikeville College

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE - Ryan Jones graduated from Haysi (Va.) High School on Saturday and signed a baseball scholarship on Tuesday morning. Now he can focus on his postseason baseball tournaments, which were to commence Tuesday night.

Jones signed a scholarship agreement with Pikeville College Tuesday morning in the library at Haysi High only hours before representing the Tigers in the district tournament.

As a senior, Jones has certainly posted some impressive numbers. He enters the postseason hitting .569 on the season with an on-base percentage of .704. Thanks to nearly half of his 29 hits being of the extra-base variety. Jones' slugging percentage is 1.020.

His stats on the mound are equally impressive. He's 5-2 on the season but his ERA is a miniscule 0.62. In 45 innings, he's fanned 90 batters and walked only 20. In nine outings, he allowed only 12 hits and nine runs, only four of which were earned. Opponents have a batting average of .069 this season.

"His numbers are tremendous, and just as importantly he's a quality young man," said Don Ashby, assistant coach at Pikeville College. "We look forward to bringing someone like Ryan to our campus and adding him to our baseball roster. He brings a lot to the table and will be a valuable asset to our campus community."

Jones has won his last five starts and has recorded at least 11 strikeouts in each of them. In addition, he's thrown four straight one-hitters after beginning the stretch with a two-hitter against Twin Valley.

"Ryan is a good kid," said Coach Dewayne Stanley of Haysi. "Pikeville College is getting a good player."

U14 Tide forward Jerralyn Kelsey (trailed by Irish defender Caleb Wheat) moved the ball toward the goal where she scored three times in the second half. The Tide rolled over the Pike County Irish, winning 8-0.

Outside midfielder Bradley Hicks showed why he is one of the best ball-handlers on his team as he moved the ball away from the Irish defender and into open space where he then collected it and moved to the goal.

of the Tide players were present, while the Irish was missing one of its best players. The result was a mismatch, with the Tide rolling away with an 8-(victory.

Clara Osborne started the scoring early wher she pushed in a ball off a missed shot by center striker Kaitlyn Minix. Shortly thereafter, Kathleer Smith banged one in off the far post. Midfielder: Bradley Hicks and Caleb Petry were especially aggressive in the first half, moving the ball into scoring position on several occasions, but simply failed to convert. Alexis DeRossett and Joseph Kidd, playing at opposite sides of the front line also had several opportunities which didn't beau fruit. Late in the half, Jerralyn Kelsey zipped one past the keeper to set the halftime score at 3-0.

The Irish came out strong in the second half really pressing the attack. But second half keepe DeRossett and her defensive line held strong and repelled every offensive assault. When Nichola: Conn scored to make the score 4-0, it seemed to deflate the Pike County team. Then, the large field to which the Tide was accustomed but the Irish was not, seemed to take its toll. Clearing kicks by the defense and midfielders were placed over the head: of the Irish defensive line and Kelsey simply outrar the defense to score three goals in approximately ten minutes. Hicks scored on a nicely placed penalty kick about thirty minutes into the half to set the final score at 8-0.

The defense of the Tide was the shining star o the game. Another soccer coach, who was a disin terested spectator at the game, sought out the Tide coach to tell her that he had never seen defense played that well. Conn started at keeper, and his punts were a real offensive weapon for the Tide consistently putting the ball into the Irish end of the field. Fullbacks Warren Vierheller, Elizabeth Davis and Tori Hunt, with Kelsey, Osborne, Smith and Meghan Banks alternating at the right outside defender position, were impenetrable. Left outside midfielder Michael Walz drew the task of defend ing the Irish's best forward, who is also his bes friend, and met the challenge in impressive fashion

The Tide remains undefeated at 5-0-1, with two games left to be played. The Floyd County U12 team travels to Perry County on Saturday to take or one of the two Perry County teams.

KHSAA overhauls football playoff pairings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON - District high school football rivals would meet in earlier rounds of the playoffs rather than the finals, under a plan approved by a Kentucky High School Athletic Association panel.

Touted as a cost-saving maneuver, high school football teams would meet within their respective districts for the first two rounds of the playoffs. The KHSAA's Board of Control approved the plan Tuesday. Previously, schools played other teams outside their districts in the early rounds. "It definitely is going to save travel money on the first two rounds, because you're going to be playing closer to home," said Julian Tackett, KHSAA assistant commissioner.

The move prevents a repeat finals matchup of Louisville schools Trinity and St. Xavier, a pairing of football powerhouses that has occurred two out of the last three years. Those teams, if they are both still in contention, would meet in the third round under the new system.

Jim Sexton, a board member and principal at Louisville's Eastern High School, said he opposed the new format because it would prevent an "all-Louisville final." "It seemed like Louisville again got the short end of the stick," Sexton said.

NASCAR IN THE PITS Stewart-Kenseth rivalry fun, while it lasts

by JENNA FRYER ASSOCIATED PRESS

CONCORD, N.C. - Tony Stewart vs. Matt Kenseth.

Two series champions bumping and banging on the race track, then trading barbs off of it.

Add in Stewart going noseto-nose with Kenseth's crew chief - while Kenseth's cronies lurked nearby - and the showdown turned out to be far more exciting than the race going on around them.

Not since Kevin Harvick feuded with Greg Biffle and/or Kurt Busch (depending on what day it was), Busch tangled with Jimmy Spencer, or the pit-road row between Biffle and Busch's lady friends has NASCAR had a rivalry with this much potential.

Round 2 of Stewart-Kenseth - the first was during the season opener at Daytona - started in the final segment of Saturday night's All-Star race, when both were racing for the $1 million prize.

Stewart was having a rocky night, and his Chevrolet had been damaged in an earlier sixcar accident. But a quick trip down pit road for repairs had him all fixed up and back in contention.

Kenseth was having a much cleaner race, lurking back in the pack until it was time to make his move.

But the drivers eliminated themselves 18 laps from the finish when they crashed while fighting for the same piece of real estate.

Madness, NASCAR-style, ensued.

"At the finish line, I could see that Tony was getting a run and I was going to try to stay on the bottom," Kenseth said. "Maybe he was a way in there and I squeezed him off. I didn't think he could have got in there that good to have that good of a run, but he must have.'

Stewart, who can be somewhat of a loose cannon in the heated moments of competition, was stewing inside his hauler when he saw Kenseth give his version of the accident on TV.

"I had a pretty definitive view from what I saw. I got a run on him, at least he got that part right," Stewart sniffed. "That's a pretty demented view in my opinion. I think he screwed up on this one.

"If he thinks I did that and that was my fault, he's screwed up in the head."

Then things got really interesting. As Kenseth's team was milling in the garage, Stewart confronted crew chief Robbie exchange that quickly drew a crowd. "That's racing, boys," Reiser shrugged after Stewart had been pulled away. But Kenseth took exception to Stewart confronting his crew chief. "Robbie don't drive the car, he should come confront me if he's mad," Kenseth said. "Tony is always mad at somebody. I'm not going to go out there and do the name calling like he does every week."

NASCAR officials didn't assign blame, and didn't appear to be very concerned with the dustup on Monday.

"It was two objects trying to occupy the same place at the same time, and it doesn't work," said competition director Robin Pemberton. "One was coming up and one was in the hole, it was just hard racing. But it was an All-Star race. I don't think they would have been driving that hard if it was a points race.'

Stewart and Kenseth had an earlier run-in this season at Daytona, when Stewart shoved Reiser in a heated verbal Kenseth's car out of his way and into a spin through the grass that sent him into the wall. Kenseth retaliated by running Stewart off pit road, and both drivers were penalized.

So Stewart and Kenseth are starting to resemble a legitimate rivalry, and if given time to fester, it could be a very good one. It could slowly build through a weekly dose of on-track nudging and off-track needling, until it finally erupts into a full-blown helmet-throwing brouhaha.

Alas, NASCAR will never let it happen. The fines would come fast and furious for every minor infraction, and as their wallets got thinner, the drivers would be forced to kiss and make up. Or at least stay 100 yards away from each other.

That's why Kenseth and Stewart's spat is much ado about nothing. It's brief entertainment, but doesn't have the legs to grow into a weekly drama.

As drivers of championshipcontending race teams, neither Stewart or Kenseth can afford to carry this on. There are too many points, too much money and too many chances to land on NASCAR's bad side.

That's exactly how NASCAR wants it.

Although the fans loved it when Robby Gordon tossed his helmet at Michael Waltrip, when Harvick snatched Biffle up by his firesuit, and when Spencer punched Busch in the nose, NASCAR didn't even crack a smile.

NASCAR has worked hard to change its image as a roughand-tumble redneck sport, and fisticuffs or other garish behavior don't fit the new mold. The sanctioning body has proven / how serious it is by issuing stiff monetary fines for everything from cursing to shoving another competitor on pit road.

So Stewart and Kenseth will have likely moved on by the time they meet back on the track later this week, and any retaliation will be so minor that the casual fan would never even see it.

Those seeking a more ostentatious outcome can only dream.

CINCINNATI - Carlos Lee can relate to Barry Bonds. Chasing a milestone homer can be tough.

Lee hit his 200th career home run, his first in 14 games, and the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Cincinnati Reds 6-2 to salvage the finale of a threegame series Wednesday night.

Lee snapped a 3-for-30 slump by going 2-for-3 with two-run shot off Brandon Claussen (3-5), who fell to 1-6 in his career against Milwaukee.

"It felt like Barry Bonds getting 714," Lee said as the ball he hit for the milestone homer was being authenticated. "It was the reason I slid a little bit. It feels good to get it - plus we got the win."

Lee's homer was his 16th of the season and first since May 9.

"When you make pitches up in the zone to Carlos Lee, there's a good chance you're not going to get it back," Reds manager Jerry Narron said.

Damian Miller had two doubles and Brady Clark had three hits for Milwaukee to help Doug Davis (3-3) earn his first win in four starts.

"We don't seem like we hit Davis too well," Narron said. "I think it's a rhythm thing. He works slow and has a slow delivery, and I think our guys get settled in against him."

The left-hander, who had two no-decisions and a loss in that stretch, gave up five hits and two runs with three walks and four strikeouts in seven innings.

"I thought I was making my pitches for most of the night," Davis said. "My changeup was big all night. If you stay out of the big inning, you have a chance to go deep in the game. Tonight was a big help. It got the bullpen some rest."

Matt Wise pitched the eighth and Derrick Turnbow closed out the game in the ninth.

The Brewers took a 1-0 lead before making an out in the first inning. Claussen walked Rickie Weeks to lead off the game, and Weeks came around to score on Jeff Cirillo's double. After Geoff Jenkins lined out to second. Cirillo moved to third on Lee's single to right and scored on Prince Fielder's sacrifice fly. "It was brutal," Claussen said. "I started the game off bad. I never got in a rhythm out there. I threw pitches that should have gotten hit."

Narron said, "I think he came out and wasn't aggressive in the first inning. We'd like to see him throw more strikes. He even admitted that he was picking. We've told him that we'd like to see him get guys out early in the count.

Milwaukee, which had lost four of its last five games. extended the lead to 3-0 in the second when Davis put down a squeeze bunt to score Miller.

The Reds cut the lead to 3-1 in the third when Claussen scored on Ken Griffey Jr.'s bases-loaded chopper to first, but Lee gave the Brewers a fourrun lead with a 424-foot homer to left in the fifth after Jenkins was hit by a pitch with two outs.

"Two outs and I hit a guy," Claussen said. "I feel like, sometimes, I'm my own worst enemy. I go out and try to be too fine. The first two innings, I was pitching scared."

Austin Keams made it 5-2 in the sixth with his 10th homer and second in three games, an opposite-field shot into the visitors' bullpen down the rightfield line. The Brewers regained their four-run lead in the seventh when Weeks scored on Fielder's bases-loaded groundout.

Claussen lasted six innings while falling to 1-3 over his last five starts. He allowed seven hits and five runs with two walks and four strikeouts.

"He's a guy who can be tough on us, too," Milwaukee manager Ned Yost said. "There've been a couple of times where he's been tough and didn't get the win."

PUBLIC HEARING NOTICE DRAFT ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT ASSESSMENT Floyd County, Kentucky (Levisa Fork Basin) Flood Damage Reduction Project

A public hearing on the content of the Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) will be held at Prestonsburg High School, 825 Blackcat Boulevard, Prestonsburg, KY 41649, on Thursday, June 15, 2006, starting at 6:00 p.m. The public hearing will give the public an additional opportunity to provide comment on the content of the DEIS.

BACKGROUND: In accordance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Huntington District has prepared a Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) which documents planning analyses undertaken for a proposed flood damage reduction project in the Levisa Fork basin in Floyd County, Kentucky. The study area includes the incorporated areas of Prestonsburg and unincorporated areas in Floyd County which are subject to flood damage from the potential of a reoccurrence of the April 1977 flood. The study area does not include the City of Martin, Kentucky where a separate flood damage reduction project is underway. The DEIS documents agency evaluation of four alternatives, two of which include floodwall/levee alignments intended to protect Prestonsburg and non-structural flood-proofing measures, a total non-structural alternative, and the No Federal Action alternative.

The USACE has distributed copies of the DEIS to appropriate Members of Congress, State and local government officials in Kentucky, Federal agencies, and other interested parties. All persons and organizations that have an interest in the Levisa Fork Basin flooding problems as they affect Floyd County and the environment are urged to participate in this NEPA process. The DEIS is available for public review at the following locations:

- 1. U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Huntington District, 502 Eighth Street, Huntington, WV 25701-2070, Room 3100

- 4. http://www.lrh.usace.army.mil/projects/review/

After the public comment period ends on June 19, 2006, USACE will fully consider all comments received. The DEIS will be revised as appropriate, and Final EIS will be issued.

ADDRESSES: Send all written comments and suggestions concerning this proposed project to the following address by June 19, 2006.

THROUGH MY EYES Keeping it real

About mid-morning Monday, Mr. Goble stopped me as I was heading past his desk to ask, "You in a better mood this week than last?" Initially, I hadn't a clue as to why he would ask such a thing noting my per-responded, "the griping...hmm, well, yes, I guess I'm in a better mood." You know, the days fly by so quickly, with so many things happening and three deadlines per week staring you dead in the face ALL the time that I can hardly keep up with my many moods. I'm sure those who know me well think I'm probably related to Sybil, as in "multiple-personalities-my-gosh-you-need-helpwoman" Sybil.

ACHS PTO hosts 'Fun Friday' for students

/Following the completion of CATS testing this spring, the Allen Central PTO presented ACHS students with a "Fun Friday" activity for their wll placed efforts on the testing process.

The students enjoyed a beautiful, sunny day filled with food, games, music, and lots of fun. They had the choice of sliding down a three-story high inflatable slide, taking a turn in the dunking booth, playing numerous games, entering the horse shoe pitching tournament, talking to their friends, or eating from a sumptious buffet of roasted pig with all the trimmings. Each student present was also given an Allen Central ACHS students enjoyed an outdoor buffet as part of the school's end of year testing celebration.

Big-dog Ben, who is not only a handsome beast, but also a gentle soul, came through the brush the other day with a furry critter hanging limp in his mouth. He was obviously proud of himself, his bushy tale curled regally over his back. My first fear was that the furry critter was a neighbor's cat. (Ahem, Ben's half-area some years ago.)

I yelled at Ben, as any conscientious master would. His proud tail drooped and he took off around the house. I did not pursue him because if I found him I would have to deal with the critter, and I was not ready to do that. When he reappeared some minutes later, his mouth was empty. He had apparently deposited the catch, to be paraded out at a later time

Later, as I was leaving the house, I saw that it was, indeed, a Testing's over, another school year's down, the weather's great and the food's good - life doesn't get much better than this for these Allen Central students.

Edwards honored by Kentucky National Guard

Dr. George D. Edwards, President of Big Sandy Community and Technical College (BSCTC), was presented with a Patriotic Employer citation by First Lieutenant Shawn Roop on behalf of the Kentucky National Guard and the National Committee for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve on May 5, 2006, at the Prestonsburg Campus of BSCTC.

First Lieutenant Roop said, "It takes the support of the community, family, friends and employers to make it possible for members of the military like me to go when called and help make it possible for all Americans to enjoy the freedoms we have every day. Words cannot express how much I appreciate the support of Dr. George Edwards, Big Sandy Community and Technical College and KCTCS during the time I served in Iraq."

First Lieutenant Roop, an Assistant Professor of Criminal Justice at BSCTC, recently returned to teaching duties at the college following a tour of active duty in Iraq.

list of hints from a woman who admits she's over 40, had two children back to back (okay, so they're teenagers now) and LOVES to eat (I write cookbooks for a living for heaven's sake!).

Here you go-the Top Ten Ways This Middle Aged Woman Got Her Groove Thing Back, starting with number 10-

10) Reality Check #1. Oprah always says, "This I know for sure," and then goes on to say something profound but simple that clicked within her. Here is my "this I know for sure": Eating in the car, eating over the sink and eating standing in front of the fridge, really does count. You can't fool your digestive system and consequently your thighs. Everything that goes in your mouth counts!

9) Reality Check #2. Write it down. Yeah, yeah...I know what you're thinking! "I already know what I'm eating." You THINK you do, but when you write it down, there comes a moment (for most) when you find out some of the food you've been eating has been the result of an unconscious decision. You actually ate and you didn't know it! Writing it down makes every bite accountable because it's in black and white on paper and looking back at you! That'll make you think twice before scarfing down a Little Debbie in the car.

8) The Potion of Portion. When you apply portion control to healthy eating, that's when the magic begins. Regardless of how healthy something is, if you're eating too much of it, you're not going to lose the weight! You must be absolutely aware of how much you're eating. For example, a deck of cards is the right size for a portion of protein. An ounce of cheese looks like a pair of dice, and so on. Keeping portion size in mind will keep it OFF your behind!

7) Waist Not, Want Not. When I go out to dinner, they almost always bring me way more food than I need. I ask for a doggie bag immediately when it's served and make sure I get the food halved into the con-

Have you noticed that many of these new supposed "helpful" diet foods constantly being introduced to the unsuspecting public end up causing you "issues" (like the embarrassing problem of Olestra and "anal leakage," for example)? It seems to me that the old adage of eating a little more naturally (and a little less) while increasing calorie expenditure is never wrong. There are however, some tricks to getting there!

I've had a few emails asking me what I did to lose my own Body Clutter from people who saw me 50+ pounds ago and who have seen me now-from a tight size 18 to a nicely fitting size 10. And because I love the number 10 so much (especially because that's what size my jeans are these days), I'm going to give you a top 10 uestion: Recently I took my mother to the doctor because she seems to be declining. She is only 66 but is having trouble walking, thinking and is losing her urine frequently. She was fine until she fell about a year ago. She has gone downhill steadily since then, even though the fall just caused a minor bump on the head. What do you think may be going on? A friend suggested she might have something called NPH that she had heard about on TV.

Martha A. Simpson, D.O., M.B.A. Associate Professor of Family Medicine

> nswer: It's possible you're friend might be on to some-Lithing. The symptoms that you describe - unsteady walking, dementia, and incontinence - are all common with NPH. The full name for this brain disorder is normal pressure hydrocephalus, and it's a relatively new malady, only having been described for the first time in 1965.

> NPH occurs when the natural flow of cerebrospinal fluid in the brain is blocked. This causes an abnormal increase in the amount of this fluid in hollow spaces (cavities) called ventricles. As the fluid fills up the ventricles, they enlarge and put pressure on brain brain functions that are controlled by the region of the brain that is being compressed.

This condition can develop after a head injury but may occur for no apparent reason. While it's most common in the elderly, it can occur at any age. Fortunately, it is sometimes reversible with proper treatment.

NPH is easily confused with Alzheimer's disease, Parkinson's disease and Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. This is because these diseases can all have one or more of the symptoms you mentioned. According to the National Institutes of Health (NIH), normal pressure hydrocephalus is thought to account for about 5 percent of all dementias.

Generally in NPH, the change in gait is the first noticeable symptom. Patients usually develop a slow, widebased gait. They may describe their feet as being "stuck to the floor." The tissue. The person may lose any or all next step, typically, involves urinary problems, as they may develop frequent urination and have difficulty completely emptying the bladder. Finally, patients may develop some level of dementia.

> An MRI and a spinal tap (lumbar puncture) will lead to the correct diagnosis in most cases. After a diagnosis has been confirmed, the excess cerebrospinal fluid will be drained either periodically or with a permanent shunt. The treatment of choice, according to the NIH, is the surgical creation of a shunt that routes the cerebral spinal fluid around the obstruction and back into circulation.

Your mother needs to get to a physician. He or she will probably recommend consultation with a neurologist. Unless the physical examination and history reveal another more likely culprit, it's likely your mother will be given the tests I mentioned to confirm or rule out NPH. If it is NPH, a surgical treatment will be recommended. While these are effective in about half the cases, I must add that the best prognosis is for those who are diagnosed early when their symptoms are minimal. In these cases, a properly installed shunt may be able to reverse many, if not all of the NPH symptoms.

Okay, so maybe I'm not that bad. But I can sure get awfully stressed out at times.

So, anyway, back to last week's column regarding the Russell County high school student who didn't want to be subjected to sitting through prayer during his class' graduation exercises last Friday night. Well, turns out that U.S. District Judge Joseph McKinley granted a temporary restraining order blocking the inclusion of prayer during the school's commencement exercises. American Civil Liberties Union of Kentucky attorney Lili Lutgens said, however, that "student-initiated prayer before or after the ceremony would be okay.'

Well, that "student-initiated prayer" took place. Watching the Lexington late news report Friday evening, I was thrilled to see the entire (well, excluding one) Russell County graduating class of 2006 rise to their feet and recite, in unison, The Lord's Prayer.

Some may say that the one student who didn't want to "sit dispute that tobacco not only through government-sponsored prayer just to receive his diploma," according to Lutgens, might be considered courageous. I think, though, that the entire Russell County High School class who stood up for their beliefs in this time of "political correctness" are the ones who really showed courage that night.

And, one last thing before I kick my soapbox back underneath my desk: Tobacco. Don't like it, never will. But, as I sat through a rather compelling discussion Monday evening at the Floyd County Board of Education's monthly meeting in regard as to how to make our local schools into tobacco-free zones, I couldn't help but feel pulled in opposing directions.

UNITE representative Mike Vance, along with a host of community health advocates, offered many "not to be disputed" arguments for why our local board should vote to ban the use of tobacco products on our school campuses. After all, who can maims and kills - eventually those who choose to partake, but also, in many cases, those who are nothing more than innocent bystanders?

I learned, recently, from Jean Rosenberg and Floyd County Health Department nurse Helen Crider, that 147 people - of all ages - die EACH WEEK in Kentucky from exposure to tobacco. That is, unquestionably, an alarming number.

But, on the other hand, board member Mickey McGuire posed the question of what to do about board employees who smoke either because they choose to, or because they have developed, over time, a habit that they can't break? Can't just kick 'em to the curb, now, can we?

Vance and Crider both pointed out that help was available through the health department's smoking cessation classes, for one. But, as Mickey pointed out, you can lead a horse to water, as they say, but you can't make him drink.

It would be wonderful if our children could attend schools in which no one, not one single employee even, would ever be seen smoking a cigarette or related cough that I am sure is using any tobacco product of any kind.

It would be wonderful if our children all came from smokefree homes and were members of extended family units in which no one used tobacco products.

In essence, it would be wonderful if we lived in a smoke-free world. But, we don't.

So, how do we teach our children to stay away from tobacco? Well, I don't have "the" answer to that question, but I have "an" answer. And that answer relates to an experience from my own personal life.

You see, I grew up in a home where tobacco smoke was a given. My dad, an educator, was a chain smoker. One of those types that crushed out one to turn around and light up another. I watched television at night in the same room with my dad and vividly remember the swirls of white smoke circling around and around in the glow of the family television set.

Today, it is little wonder that I suffer from a chronic asthmathe result of second-hand smoke exposure. My dad, I know, knew that his smoking habit was detrimental to his own health. but, I am also sure, he had no idea that his habit was also affecting the health of his family. Today, we have so much more information.

Though in my parent's home it was a common sight to see packs of cigarettes lying around and to see my mother emptying and cleaning ashtrays daily, my dad, nonetheless, reared four children who are each nonsmokers.

How did he do this? Well, most certainly, not by example. But, rather, through nothing more than honest communication. I will never forget the day that my father sat me down at the kitchen table to talk to me about cigarettes. He told me how much a pack of cigarettes cost and how many packs a day he smoked and then he helped me do the math as we together figured out how much those cigarettes cost our family per year. He told me that smoking was a nuisance - to himself and to othContinued from pl

ers. He told me that it caused lung cancer and emphysema. He told me that it was a nasty habit. And then, with complete honesty, and a sincerity that even a young child could fathom, my dad looked straight into my eyes and said, "I wish I could quit. But I can't. It's a habit and I can't break it. Promise me that you won't ever start."

I made that promise, and I kept it, as did my siblings. So, if teachers and school employees that use tobacco products wonder what they can do to convince kids to stay away from tobacco, try my dad's example. Be honest. I don't know any smokers who can honestly say that they are happy with their decision to begin using tobacco products. Tell the kids - tell them that you made a bad choice and that you regret it. They'll hear you, they'll pay attention. And, maybe even, they may, in some way, be able to help you break your habit. In a culture engulfed in the use of tobacco, we have to start somewhere and honesty, in any situation, is always a good start.

Five Prestonsburg High School graduates enrolled at Transylvania University have been named to the Dean's List for the winter term.

To be named to the Dean's List, a student must achieve at least a 3.5 grade point average during the term.

The students are: Sophomore Katherine Adams, the daughter of Harry and Jamie Adams, of Prestonsburg; senior Betty Megan Barber, a business administration and psychology double major, the daughter of David Barber and Mary May-Barber, of Prestonsburg; junior Andrew Burchett, a biology major, the son of Blake and Rebecca Burchett, of Prestonsburg; freshman Molly Burchett, he daughter of Blake and Rebecca Burchett; and, sophomore Mandy May, the daughter of Kyle and Denise May, also of Prestonsburg.

Miss Melissa Turner's class walked into town to visit the memorials and the fire station.

Highland Avenue youth visit elderly

The Highland Avenue Freewill Baptist Church youth group visited Riverview Health Care Center on March 12, 2006. The children delivered gift bags filled with items donated from the church's congregation. The bags contained personal items, candy, and stuffed animals. The children also visited with many of the residents and sang some of their favorite songs for them.

The children ranged in age from two years to teenage.

The youth group, "Youth Advantage," is comprised of approxi-mately 50 children. The group is actively involved in activities at the church, as well as in the community. Director Mike Derossett and a staff of 20 adult volunteers began the Youth Advantage endeavor this year. Many exciting events are planned for the spring and summer seasons and anyone interested in becoming involved with the program is cordially invited to join them on Sunday nights at 6:00 p.m., at the church.

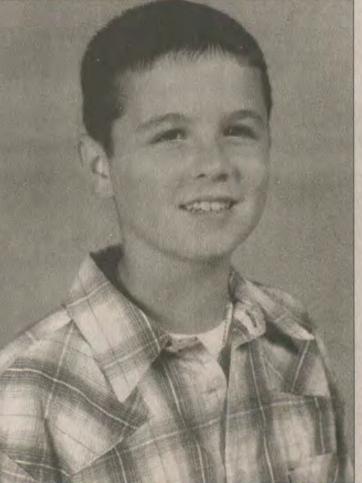

What is a hero?

This child, and thousands like her, have the hope of a better future and the power to make it happen. By taking part in afterschool programs, kids explore, learn, grow, and most importantly, find the hero inside themselves. Let us know you want afterschool programs in your area. ACMS student named USAA winner

The United States Achievement Academy (USAA) has named Sean Jackson, of Allen Central Middle School, as a United States National Award winner in the academic area of English. Selection of such is a prestigious honor very few students can ever hope to attain. The Academy recognizes fewer than ten percent of all American high school and middle school students.

Sean was nominated for this honor by his teacher, Sandra Stapleton. He will appear in the United States Achievement Academy's Official Yearbook, a national publication.

The USAA selects winners based upon the exclusive recommendation of teachers, coaches, counselors and other qualified sponsors, as well as upon the standards of selection set forth by the academy. Criteria include academic performance, interest and aptitude, leadership qualities, responsibility, motivation, attitude and cooperative spirit, dependability, and sponsor recommendation.

Sean is the son of Chris and Misty Walker, of Garrett. He is the grandson of Ann Jackson, also of Garrett, and Milard Jackson, of West Liberty.

Hobson recognized as outstanding UK senior

Monica L. Hobson, of Hi Hat, graduated May 7, 2006, from the University of Kentucky with a Bachelor of Arts degree in political science. While at U.K., Monica maintained a 4.0 GPA. She was awarded the Singletary Outstanding Senior Female Award, the Sullivan Award, and the Vandenbosch Outstanding Political Science Senior Award. She will be attending the University of Kentucky College of Law this coming fall, where she has received the Bert T. Combs Scholarship, a full tuition award, and a Wethington Fellowship.

Monica is the daughter of Michael and Cora Hobson. Her maternal grandmother is Mary Jones, of Ligon, and the late Robert L. Jones. She is the paternal granddaughter of the late Leonard and Ruby Hobson, formerly of McDowell.
