FESTIVAL TREATS

Police probe death of man found by creek

by JESSICA HALE
STAFF WRITER

GALVESTON — Kentucky State Police are still investigating the circumstances that led to the death of a Floyd County man who was found beside a creek on Branham's Creek Road in Galveston on Tuesday.

The Pikeville post of KSP received a call at 12:42 p.m. Tuesday, advising that a local resident had found a deceased white male lying beside the creek off Route 3379. It was when troopers responded to the scene they discovered the body was that of Homer Hall of Branham's Creek. Hall was pronounced dead at the scene by the Floyd County Coroner Roger Nelson.

KSP was assisted at the scene by Kentucky Vehicle Enforcement officers and the Floyd County Sheriff's Department.

An autopsy is expected to be conducted by the State Medical Examiner in Frankfort. Foul play has not been ruled out for the cause of death and this incident is still under investigation by Det. Donnie Shearer with KSP.

Officials are encouraging anyone who may have any information regarding this case to contact KSP.

Marijuana case heads to grand jury

by ALEX SMITH

PRESTONSBURG — A 20-year-old Prestonsburg man who was arrested Oct. 3 on charges of drug trafficking and cultivation of marijuana had his case referred to a Floyd County grand jury on Tuesday.

Roger D. Johnson agreed to give a statement at the Floyd County Detention Center the day he was arrested and took full responsibility for the six marijuana plants that were found growing in a closet under heat lamps, along with the numerous packaged plastic bags of marijuana and drug paraphernalia, including scales, scissors and bags.

Johnson is being held on a $5,000 cash bond in the case and also is being held on another $5,000 cash bond on charges in a separate case of cruelty to animals. The charges of animal cruelty led Prestonsburg police officers to search Johnson's home in the first place.

A complaint was received the morning of Oct. 3 from David Shepherd, an animal control watcher for Floyd County Animal Control.

Coal severance veto threatens Eastern Kentucky degree program

by SAMIRA JAFARI
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PIKEVILLE — A program aimed at increasing the number of southeastern Kentuckians with college degrees is in jeopardy after its funding for the next two years was cut this year alongside other coal severance tax projects.

The University Center of the Mountains was established in 2003 to make four-year degrees accessible to residents in an eight-county area in southeastern Kentucky. Only 8.6 percent of residents in the region have bachelor's degrees, making it one of the least-educated regions of the country. Counties served by the center are Breathitt, Knott, Lee, Leslie, Letcher, Owsley Perry, and Wolfe.

"We have the lowest percentage of bachelor's degrees in the state of Kentucky; therefore, we have a greater need," said Ron Daley, director of the center, located in Hazard.

The center was jump started with a $300,000 grant from the Appalachian Regional

Hays conviction overturned

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON — A federal appeals court has thrown out the conviction and indictment of a former state senator from eastern Kentucky and his wife on mail fraud charges in a 2002 judicial race.

John Doug Hays, D-Pikeville, and his wife and campaign treasurer, Brenda, 50, were convicted of mail fraud in 2004 and sentenced to six months and three months in prison, respectively. They were acquitted on vote-fraud charges.

While they were free on appeal, however, the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Aug. 31 decided in a separate but related case that the government cannot use the federal mail-fraud statute to prosecute vote-fraud cases.

That decision wiped out a 2004 mail-fraud conviction and indictment of Loren Glenn Turner, a Pikeville resident accused of being the "bag man" in elections for Ross Harris, a prominent eastern Kentucky political fundraiser who died June 24.

Harris was convicted of mail fraud and vote fraud in 2004.

Editorial roundup

Chicago Tribune on Amish forgiveness after school shooting:

Forgiveness is an irrational act. Biblical texts and self-help books attempt to make it seem less so. They tell you that you can forgive the act without condoning the action. They tell you that you should forgive because doing so leavens a burdened heart, which sounds reasonable, until the time comes to put it to the test. Can there be any greater test than struggling to forgive the brutal murder of a child?

In the days since the killings in a schoolhouse in Nickel Mines, Pa., the tone from the grieving Amish community has been not of despair or revenge, but of forgiveness.

A relative of 13-year-old Marian Fisher, one of the children shot by Charles Carl Roberts, 32, extended an invitation to Roberts' widow to attend the girl's funeral. The Amish woman told a reporter, "It's our Christian love to show to her we have not any grudges against her."

... An Amish man told The New York Times that he had shaken hands with Roberts' father-in-law after Monday's killings. "I think it's helping him to meet people, too, and see that there's no grudge," the Amish man said. "How could you hold a grudge against the wife, the family?"

... Still, anyone who has ever set out on the winding road to forgiveness knows it is easier to talk the talk than to walk the walk. This week the Amish have offered all of us a superb lesson on how to make the talk and the walk intersect.

The Blade, Toledo, Ohio, on U.S. reaction to North Korea:

North Korea's threat to test a nuclear weapon is the latest move in its high-stakes dance with the United States and its Asian neighbors, a clumsy minuet made possible in part by American refusal to talk to the Communist state.

U.S. perplexity and sputtering in the face of Pyongyang's newest threat is the inevitable result of a nearsighted policy that makes doctrine of not communicating with countries like North Korea and Iran and movements like Hezbollah and Hamas. ...

Purely and simply, the United States needs to talk directly with North Korea at an authoritative level. The Bush Administration has painted itself into a corner. By its own doctrine, agreeing to talk with North Korea now would appear to be a concession made under pressure. It could, however, start by sending an envoy the North Koreans respect — former President Jimmy Carter, possibly even accompanied by former President George H.W. Bush, or New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson — to open the door before sending Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice to Pyongyang.

Kalamazoo (Mich.) Gazette, on AARP's "Don't Vote" campaign:

For decades, get-out-the-vote organizations have worked themselves into a lather encouraging apathetic Americans to pry themselves off their sofas and go to the polls on Election Day.

Yet, each election cycle, voter turnout seems to get worse and worse.

And now comes the AARP with this startling message: Don't vote.

But, wait, that's not the whole message. They are saying don't vote UNLESS you've made an effort to get informed about the candidates and issues.

It's the AARP's effort to cut through the barrage of campaign advertising and get-out-the-vote clutter to capture would-be voters' attention.

... Nearly everyone agrees that an informed voter is a democracy's best defense. There is still some dispute about which is more damaging to a democracy — people who refuse to vote, or those who vote without understanding the candidates and issues.

The AARP's "Don't vote — until you know where the candidates stand on the issues" campaign is clearly aimed at making potential voters more informed voters. ...

Global warming: Fact or fiction?

In some court cases, particularly high profile ones, both the prosecutor and the defense attorney hire so-called experts to help win their cases. Today, we have experts claiming that our earth is in peril because of "global warming." There also are many experts who refute this claim, but they get much less media attention.

From about 800 A.D. to 1300 A.D. we had the Medieval Warm Period, followed by the Little Ice Age from about 1550 to 1850. Dr. Philip Stott, professor emeritus of bio-geography at the University of London stated, "During the Medieval Warm Period, the world was warmer even than today, and history shows that it was a wonderful period of plenty for everyone." Go to www.thenewamerican.com/artman/publish/article_4185.shtml for details.

Dr. Richard Lindzen, a meteorologist at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, stated, "there is no consensus, unanimous or otherwise, about long-term climate trends and what causes them.... Climate change is a complex issue where simplification tends to lead to confusion, and where understanding requires thought and effort."

Drs. Craig Idso and Keith Idso of the Center for the Study of Carbon Dioxide (CO2) and Global Change at Tempe, AZ have conducted thousands of experiments. They have proven beyond any doubt that with more CO2 in the air plants grow bigger and better in almost every way.

There is no solid scientific evidence to support global warming. Many distinguished scientists do not agree with global warming predictions. It would be tragic for our nation if we had to cut CO2 emissions (like the Kyoto Accords Treaty demands) to cure a non-existing problem.

Civil war

In early August, General John Abizaid, the commander of the U.S.

Central Command and the most knowledgeable senior military official about Iraq, expressed his fears to a Senate Committee that conditions in Iraq are the very next thing to a "civil war."

New York Times columnist Thomas Friedman went further one day later when he wrote that our armed forces in Iraq "are baby-sitting a civil war." Can any good come of continued U.S. presence in such a conflict? Isn't it time to consider letting the Sunnis and Shiites settle their centuries-old animosity without our forces caught in the middle?

I also refer you to U.S. President John Quincy Adams, who stated: "America goes not abroad in search of monsters to destroy. She is the well-wisher to the freedom and independence of all. She is the champion and vindicator only of her own." And Calvin Coolidge, our nation's 30th chief executive, famously summarized: "Perhaps one of the most important accomplishments of my administration has been minding my own business."

THROUGH MY EYES

FEATURES EDITOR

Well, it's festival time in eastern Kentucky once again. Last weekend, I let my friend Bonnie wear me out walking the crafts booths at the Apple Festival in Paintsville.

Kathy Prater
Lifestyles editor

Bonnie, unlike me, has money to spend on such things and so this, I think, is a lot more fun for her than it is for me. I still have three teens at home, her youngest, Becca, took off for her first year at Morehead this past August.

Oh, well, maybe I didn't have any money to blow, but the evening was well spent once I followed Bonnie home and got treated to a dinner of tuna salad sandwiches, chip and dip, homemade salsa, pasta salad, and pies of a variety of flavors. Apple, of course, and cherry, along with some sort of fancy looking peanut butter drizzled with chocolate concoction. Cherry was my pick, though, partly because I knew

DINNER DIVA

'Do-it-yourself' dinner franchise

by Leanne Ely

There is nothing quite like the right appliance for doing the task right. Take my pasta maker for example. Yes, you can take it—I don't use it. But touch my crock pot? You and I are going to have issues. I love my crock pot.

Leanne Ely

But right now, my crock pot is my second best friend. My bff (best friend forever) is my freezer—my lovely, icy friend, the freezer.

My freezer holds dinners in it, lots of them. Not the kind that Stouffers or any of those other guys make, but dinners that I made all at one time. I guess you could say I've been sucked in by the latest trend—the dinner assembly franchise.

The only difference is, I do it myself. I've always been a 'do-it-yourself' type and that has certainly applied to cooking. And, considering that I am "The Dinner Diva," it goes without saying that 'I don't have time!'

by Marla Cilley

When you hear yourself utter the words, "I don't have time!" either in your head or out loud to your family, I want you to stop in your tracks. This is just another form of whining. Yes, you heard me right.

We all have 24 hours in a day. In our perfectionism, there will never be enough hours to do what we need to do, because the job will never be finished. Now, in our defense, we were taught by well-meaning people that were taught by another generation of well-meaning people, that "if you can't do it right then don't do it at all!" So, why shouldn't we procrastinate? After all, in our minds, we don't have enough time to do it right, so why even start? I am determined to put an end to this stinkin' thinkin' once and for all! Our perfectionism will not allow us to do just a little. We have to hyper-focus till the job is done! Well, I don't know about you, but in my home there are things that don't ever get finished: Dishes, laundry and hot spots. It is a continual battle but here is the difference: I don't look at it as a battle, but rather as a blessing. Yes, you got that right. Dirty dishes are a blessing, because when they are put away I have blessed my family. Laundry is the same way. I am no longer chained to a chore but I have been given a chance to show my sweet darlings that I care for them. After all, nothing says "I love you" like clean underwear.

So, when we have a change in our attitude from feeling martyred to finding joy in blessing our families, we will have time to do just a little. In the south, we call that "hittin' a lick at a snake." This is why we love our timer so much. We can accomplish more than we think if we will just set our timer for 15 minutes and jump in. So maybe you don't think you have 15 minutes; well, quit whining and do 5 minutes. I just realized something about myself. I am more apt to do something for Robert than I am for myself. Just this morning as he was going down to get the newspaper he asked if I wanted him to build me a cup of coffee (we have one of those one cup machines). I told him that would be lovely and as soon as my cup finished brewing, I got right up and fixed him one before he got Electronic medical records may be more secure than paper

Question: My doctor is getting an electronic medical record in her office. I am very nervous about this. Will my information be safe? How will I know someone won't hack into it? Perhaps I should change doctors.

Answer: In 1996 congress passed the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA) to make it easier for workers to take health insurance coverage along with them when they change jobs, to develop standards for the electronic exchange of health-care information, and to protect the privacy of that information. The electronic medical record (EMR) addresses two of these issues by giving patients and doctors a completely private medical record that is easily accessible online when needed.

I think that the EMR is really a better way to maintain your health-care information. It's been used in other countries — notably Australia and Great Britain — for many years. So we know they work well and have more advantages than disadvantages.

Studies have shown that with the old-fashioned paper system, up to 30 percent of the time your complete medical record is not retrieved for your physician when you go for an appointment. This problem is eliminated with an EMR.

An EMR can also help to keep the information in your medical record more accurate. Two examples that I've seen in my own practice will help me illustrate the point. You go to an eye doctor for a vision check, a ENT doctor for a sinus problem and an allergist for a skin problem, but these doctors do not share their records with your family physician. Or, you've had surgery in the past but can't remember the hospital or the doctor's name. When the EMR proposal is completely implemented, both of these problems will be solved. Any medical care provider you authorize will be able to electronically view any other physician's electronic records over a secure web connection.

This sharing of information is a little ways off, but it could save many lives and countless dollars. Not only is it useful in everyday medical practice, but the ability to access information immediately across great distances would be invaluable in emergency situations.

Another piece of information that is frequently missing in the hospital emergency department or even at a doctor's appointment is the medication list. This is particularly a problem for people on many medications and who go to several doctors. Duplication of medication can be fatal in some cases. An EMR would help eliminate that problem, too.

Finally, there is an offshoot of an EMR called the personal health record (PHR). This is a secure, password protected electronic health record that the patient can access online to check on lab results or even schedule appointments. This allows the patient to check his or her health information for accuracy.

You are right to be concerned about privacy, but those concerns should apply to paper records as well as electronic records. The security procedures being implemented for your EMR are as good as those used by your bank for online account access. This means that there are electronic "fingerprints" left when your record is accessed that do not exist for paper records. Please discuss your concerns with your physician. She can explain what is being done to protect your information.

back from the mailbox (we have a long driveway). So we blessed each other with a simple cup of coffee. We could have made them for ourselves but what fun is that?

Perfectionism is a nasty habit that we have to remove to make room for peace. I hate the word "perfect." It steals our joy and causes us to hyper-focus and procrastinate. When we eliminate this word and the action or inaction that comes from its pressure we will be a happier people!

Perfectionism has so many layers — just like our clutter! I still catch myself falling under its spell, but I am getting good at not being victimized by it for very long. Now I have learned to laugh at it and keep right on FLYing! I have three rules that I live by:

(1) Don't sweat the small stuff; what doesn't matter, just doesn't matter.

(2) To laugh every day; even if it is at myself. And, (3) to love like there is no tomorrow!

Are you ready to FLY with me? Let go of that perfectionism that has been holding you down and soar higher than you ever dreamed!

Diva

I adore great food—especially when it's easy-button easy. Lately though, I've been very busy—traveling, writing and trying to juggle everything at once. So what's a busy Dinner Diva to do?

Make it all at one time, put it in the freezer and pull out my handy-dandy, ready-to-go dinners from the freezer in the morning and voila, dinner is a snap that night. I can't tell you how fun this is! So how does this work, you ask? Here's the low down on how you can "do-it-yourself," too:

Make up a list of recipes that you like—say 10 at one time.

Make sure they will freeze well. You will want to skip stuff with hard boiled eggs in them and boiled potatoes. They don't do too well with freezing.

Don't fully cook any pasta dishes—they will be watery, overcooked and yucky by the time you thaw and eat them.

Make up your grocery list. I do mine in categories like in the grocery store aisles; dairy, meat, produce, canned goods, etc.

Assemble your meals in stations: have all your produce chopped and prepped, your other stuff measured, and lastly, your freezer quality zipper-topped bags ready to handle your assembled meal. Don't forget to mark the bag and date it (and use a Sharpie so the ink won't run).

See how easy that was? I've shown you how to do it yourself so you don't need an expensive franchise place anymore. I also have a freezable example recipe for you to try. If you need more help doing it yourself, I have the new Mega Menu Mailer on my site, so go take a peek!

Caribbean Steak

In a 1-gallon freezer bag combine:

4 tablespoons honey
1/4 cup lime juice
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 tablespoon mustard
2 cloves garlic (pressed)
1/4 teaspoon lime zest
Salt and pepper to taste
1 1/2 pounds lean top round steak

Gently and carefully squeeze the bag to force out any air then seal the bag. Insert this bag into another gallon sized plastic freezer bag and place a copy of the recipe into the 2nd bag as well and seal it. Place your label on the bag or write the name and date on the bag and place in the freezer.

DAY OF COOKING:

Once your steaks have thawed (we suggest putting the frozen steaks in the fridge the night before you want to use them or that morning—never thaw at room temperature), preheat your barbecue grill. Add the steaks to the grill and cook to desired temperature. Serve with steamed broccoli and baked potatoes for a simple meal.

that Bonnie had already made an apple one for me to take home.

Bonnie's baby sister, Amber, was in for the weekend and after she had finished her snack (it was dinner for me because I hadn't had any yet that evening), she disappeared outside for a short spell, returning with a basket chocked plum full of beanie babies.

Beanie babies! Remember when those things were all the craze? The supermarkets were full of Beanie Baby catalogs and gift shop shelves were filled to the max with the cute little stuffed fuzzies! Everywhere you looked, there was a Beanie Baby smiling back at you. And if your child got an invitation to a birthday party - there was no need to worry about what to buy because everybody, everywhere seemed to want the little critters.

As for our house, we had a few, but we didn't go nuts with trying to keep up. Besides, the things weren't exactly what you'd call cheap. Today, you can get them for practically nothing and Amber had hers priced to sell at Bonnie's upcoming yard sale for a mere $1 each.

I don't know why, because I'm supposed to be in the process of decluttering, but Amber told me I could have all the beanies I wanted from her basket and I ended up taking home about six or seven of the things! They were a cute lot, though. And each still with the tags on them. That makes them more valuable, I was always told.

I remember once, after buying a couple for my daughters, my youngest child, Elizabeth, went straight home and tore the tags off each and every one of them - not just her own, but her sister's, too. Elizabeth has always had this tendency to remove tags as soon as possible. I think it must imply final ownership in her mind or something. Makes it difficult when a clothing item needs to be returned because it's the wrong size, and, like I said before, makes such beanie babies no longer as valuable. Oh, well, it's not like we were ever going to sell the things, anyway.

Yep, gotta keep your Barbies in the box and the tags on the beanies if you want to impress future potential buyers.

I'm not out to impress anyone, though. But, still, I like that the beanies that Amber gave me still have their tags. At least until Elizabeth gets that "gotta get rid of that" urge of hers.

Until next week, hope you have a great time at this weekend's Jenny Wiley Festival. See you there!

The Carriere Family

The Carriere Family will open for Mountain Heart Saturday

Popular Kentucky Opry members, The Carriere Family, will open for one of the most highly acclaimed groups on the bluegrass circuit, Mountain Heart, this Saturday, October 14, at 7:30 p.m., at the Paramount Arts Theatre in Ashland. The Carriere Family consists of mother, Angie Carriere, and her two children, Staci and Joshua. They have amazed many audiences with their tight vocal and fiddle harmonies. In addition to the Kentucky Opry show, The Carriere Family has performed at many special events and festivals. They have also opened for Doyle Lawson & Quicksilver and Mike Snider concerts.

Headliners, Mountain Heart, who were looking to maintain its edge as one of the most adventurous and exciting young acts in acoustic country music, turned to producer Mark Bright, the studio mentor to such multiplatinum acts as Rascal Flatts, Blackhawk, Carrie Underwood, Sara Evans and Jo Dee Messina. It was a perfect match. "I idolize these guys and their musicianship," Bright declared. Mountain Heart is currently promoting their new CD, Wide Open, which is currently #4 on the Bluegrass Unlimited chart with the title cut at #9.

Peggy McKenzie, left, executive director, Community Connections, presents Mary Meade, Employee of the Year 2006, with a plaque and a check for $500.

Community Connections holds annual awards picnic

Community Connections held its annual agency picnic and awards presentation on October 2, at Archer Park. Community Connections is a Supports for Community Living (SCL) Medicaid Waiver Program that supports people who have been diagnosed with mental retardation/developmental disabilities. The agency provides residential care, day programming, therapies, supported employment, respite and in-home support services. Community Connections has been in business for five years. It is owned by Joyce Bates. The agency is governed by a board of directors made up of community members. Peggy McKenzie, of Louisa, has served as executive director for the past two years. Each year, all Supports for Community Living (SCL) Medicaid Waiver agencies are reviewed/audited by the Department of Mental Retardation and Medicaid. Depending on the findings of the review, each agency is certified anywhere from one to 12 months. Community Connections had its most recent review on July 25-26. The agency received another excellent review and was certified for the maximum year. Agency staff worked very hard throughout the year to earn the excellent rating.

At the picnic, all individuals supported and agency staff had a wonderful time and all were presented with a Community Connections t-shirt. Everyone was presented with a framed certificate and trophy highlighting the amount of time they have been associated with Community Connections as a token of appreciation from the agency. One year employees were presented with a one-year service pin. Five-year employees were presented with five-year appreciation plaques. Five-year employees included: Brandy Sexton, Brian Clevenger, Taulbee Goodman, and Linda Goodman. The agency has continued with its Employee of the Month awards throughout the past year. The person chosen to be named as employee of the month is the staff member that has gone over and beyond the call of duty for that month. The August, 2006 award went to Josh Vick. The September, 2006 award went to Cathy Crum. Both employees were presented with a plaque and a $25 gift certificate from Reno's. Additionally, their names will be added to a plaque that is displayed in the agency's administrative offices. Both individuals are now in the running for the Employee of the Year Award, which will be presented to a deserving individual in September, 2007.

The award for Employee of the Year 2006 was presented to Mary Meade, house manager, Scott Lane. Mary was presented with a plaque and a $500 bonus. In addition, her name will be on a plaque that will be located in the administrative office. The board of directors of Community Connections would like to take this opportunity to offer their thanks to Executive Director Peggy McKenzie for her excellent leadership and dedication. Ruling: Judicial candidates can't say how they would rule

by ROGER ALFORD
ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT — Judicial candidates in Kentucky can tell voters which political party they belong to and can even personally solicit contributions from attorneys who might later argue cases before them, a federal judge ruled Tuesday.

However, U.S. District Judge Karen Caldwell said judicial candidates in the state can't promise how they will rule on particular issues, including hot button topics like abortion or public postings of the Ten Commandments.

The ruling, filed in federal court in Frankfort, was in response to a lawsuit filed by Marcus Carey, a northern Kentucky lawyer running for the 6th District seat on the Kentucky Supreme Court in the November election against Court of Appeals Judge Wil Schroder.

"Our goal in filing this lawsuit was to provide a level playing field for all candidates," Carey said Tuesday. "This is a great day for free speech in Kentucky. It's a great day for those of us who believe in the Constitution."

Carey, a resident of Erlanger, had challenged a rule that says judicial candidates can't "intentionally or recklessly" make statements that could be seen as a commitment to decide a certain way on any issue. Many legal officials have said the new rule gives judicial candidates more leeway in what they can say, but Carey claims the rule is too vague.

In her ruling, Caldwell also granted a preliminary injunction to prevent the Judicial Conduct Commission and the Kentucky Bar Association from enforcing rules that forbid candidates from announcing their political affiliation or personally seeking campaign contributions from attorneys.

Caldwell concluded that judicial candidates wouldn't create an appearance of judicial impartiality by disclosing their political affiliations.

"The political party affiliations of many candidates ... are well known prior to the election," she said. "Even during and after the election, the political party affiliation of all candidates is readily discoverable through public records."

In addition, the judge said the current rule doesn't effectively stop a judge from favoring attorneys who contribute to their campaigns or targeting attorneys who don't contribute.

"Even with the prohibition against direct solicitation, ... judges are able to find out who contributed to their campaigns and the amount they contributed," Caldwell said in the ruling.

Caldwell said Carey established a "strong likelihood" that he will win on those two issues as the lawsuit progresses.

George Rabe, a Lexington attorney who represents the Judicial Conduct Commission, couldn't be reached for comment Tuesday evening.

Carey argued that the rules on judicial conduct put a chilling effect on judicial candidates' free-speech rights.

Had he won the right to discuss specific issues, Carey could have added spark to the traditionally low-key judicial campaigns by allowing candidates to more fully discuss their views on a variety of issues.

In the lawsuit, Carey contends judicial candidates are required to "withhold essential information" from the voters.

Carey said he was pleased with Caldwell's ruling.

"I believe she has made it very clear that in areas of great concern to judicial candidates across Kentucky that their First Amendment rights to political speech will not be suppressed," he said.

Lady Raiders roll past Stumbo

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

GRETHEL – South Floyd Middle and John M. Stumbo Elementary hooked up Monday evening in an A-team girls' basketball game. Host Stumbo found itself playing from behind throughout the game and never could catch up to the Lady Raiders. The South Floyd girls played their way to a 36-16 win.

Balanced scoring was evident for the South Floyd A-team. Gabby Bailey and Kelsey Dye each had eight points for the Lady Raiders. Chelsie Tuttle and Kelsey Dye chipped in six points points while Heather Little netted three. Meshana Ray and Chelsea Slone scored two points apiece and Ashley Castle rounded out the Lady Raider A-team scoring with a free throw.

In the A-team game, South Floyd (7-1) entered halftime leading 13-8.

Four different players broke into the scoring column for the Stumbo A-team.

In the B-team game, South Floyd posted a 57-11 win.

girls, scoring a game-high 12 points. She was one of three South Floyd B-team players to reach double figures in the scoring department. Hall and Castle each had 11 points for the Lady Raiders.

South Floyd's B-team did most of its damage in the second half, scoring 40 of its 57 points in the last two quarters.

Lyons well-deserving of Hall honor

by RICK BENTLEY
TIMES COLUMNIST

A whole generation knows Eugene Lyons as the athletics director at Pike County Central High School. A generation before that remembers him as the basketball coach at Johns Creek High School.

But for those who go back to the late 1960s and early 1970s, Eugene Lyons is remembered in a different light. And it is for that reason that this weekend, he is being celebrated at his alma mater.

For those unaware, Eugene Lyons graduated from Johns Creek High School in 1970 and was signed to a college basketball scholarship by Bill Harrell at Morehead State. After the mandatory one-year sabbatical – freshmen weren't allowed to play college basketball then – Lyons, quite simply, became a star.

Over the next three years, Lyons scored 1,226 points and was named to the first-team on the All-Ohio Valley Conference squad twice.

For that, tomorrow morning he'll be inducted into the Eagle Athletics Hall of Fame.

But it isn't the accolades that make his days at Morehead State memorable. "It's the people I met," he said. "My teammates, the opposing players. It was a good experience for me."

Among those players was former Johnson Central and Pikeville High School Coach Howard Wallen. "He was the starting point guard," Lyons said.

Another teammate was Leonard Coulter, who was named to the 1972 All-American team, a feat no Eagle has accomplished in the 34 years since

CHAMPIONSHIP EFFORT

Allen Central won its second straight 55th District title Wednesday night, beating rival South Floyd 2-1. Both Allen Central and South Floyd will play in the 15th Region Tournament next week. Below: District MVP Christina Blevins went up and over two South Floyd defenders.

Lady Rebs beat South Floyd for second straight district title

SPORTS EDITOR

HI HAT – For a second straight season, Allen Central defeated rival South Floyd for a 55th District volleyball championship. In 2005, Allen Central blanked South Floyd 2-0 at the Prestonsburg High School Fieldhouse. Wednesday night, Allen Central faced much more resistance from a homestanding South Floyd team. In the end, though, Allen Central prevailed, winning 2-1 (25-22, 21-25, 25-18) on the Raider Arena hardwood.

"This was definitely closer than I wanted it to be," Allen Central Coach Larry Maynard commented following his team's championship win. "It's always a battle when Allen Central plays South Floyd. I'm proud of the way our girls played. They worked well together. Anyone can step in for us and play well."

Allen Central, after winning the first game 25-22, jumped out and led 7-0 in the second game before South Floyd answered. The Raiders responded in a big way in Game Two, eventually winning 25-21.

Allen Central gradually pulled away and won 25-18 in the third and final game.

"Our outsides were held to .172 hitting," Maynard noted. "However, our defense was pretty solid and we played a tight net game. Serving was a key – we caused them to commit more unforced errors than we committed. Brittany Clark really stepped up in the middle, hitting .714 on the night without error. Some great individual efforts gave us the championship and these girls deserve it - they have worked really hard since June. It's like I've told people before, Allen Central doesn't rebuild, it reloads."

Allen Central standout Christina Blevins was named the 55th District Tournament Most Valuable Player

Piarist School girls out for 2006-07 season

SPORTS EDITOR

MARTIN – Piarist School officials have confirmed the school won't field a girls' basketball team for the 2006-07 season. Not enough Piarist School female students showed interest in playing basketball during the 2006-07 campaign. The Lady Knights posted a 2-23 record during the 2005-06 season with Gloria Mullins at the helm for a first season.

Girls' basketball could return to Piarist School in future years.

A-TEAM GIRLS: ACMS 47, Adams 37

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

EASTERN – Three different Allen Central Middle players reached double figures scoring Tuesday night as the homestanding Lady Rebels defeated Adams Middle 47-37 in an A-team girls' basketball game. Allen Central, which trailed at the end of each of the first two quarters, benefitted from a game-high 17 points and 12 rebounds from Shea Spurlock. Latasha Braggs ranked as Allen Central's second-leading scorer, tossing in 13 points. Amber Shepherd was also in double figures for the Lady Rebels (8-6), finishing with 11 points. Logan Cline and Caitlin Kidd rounded out the Allen Central scoring with four and two points, respectively. Allen Central was able to post the win, despite shooting a sub-par six-of-22 from the free-throw line.

Adams led Allen Central 17-14 at the end of the first quarter. The visiting Lady Blackcats took a 23-22 lead into halftime and clung to a one-point advantage at the end of the third quarter. Allen Central, however, saved its best for last, outscoring Adams 17-6 in the final quarter.

Five different players provided scoring for Adams. Tiffany Wertz and Clara Osborne paced Adams with nine points apiece. Julie Compton flipped in eight points for the Lady Blackcats while Alexis DeRossett dumped in seven. Taylor Braggs rounded out the Adams scoring with four points.

The Adams A-team also struggled from the free-throw line, hitting on just four-of-16 attempts.

In the B-team game, Allen Central got 10 points from Megan Jones and nine from Cline en route to a 25-15 win. Elliott, Shepherd and then. Lyons' total of 1,226 points is an impressive feat in and of itself. Currently he's tied for 16th on the university's all-time scoring list with Guy Minnifield, but when he graduated, he was 7th on the list. "A lot of people forget that we could only play for three years then," Lyons said, referring to the freshman ineligibility rule. "And, there was no three-point shot back then." The trey could have increased Lyons' scoring totals substantially. He was the starting small forward as a sophomore before moving to shooting guard for his final two seasons.

Talking to Lyons gives you the impression he doesn't regret playing in an era of freshman ineligibility, despite having been passed on the scoring list by 10 players who played four years compared to his three. "There's always some adjustment as a freshman," he said. "But where we couldn't play, it helped." Tomorrow, Lyons will join baseball player Homer Cablish, two-sport standout Glenn Napier and women's basketball player Bev Smith as the newest inductees as MSU celebrates its homecoming. Napier, of course, is from Hazard and is now a fairly well known basketball official.

No doubt, tomorrow morning's celebration will be a cause for reflection for the candidates, all of whom have gone on to tremendous success after receiving their education at Morehead State. But it's doubtful any of the four will have had a more positive impact on as many people as Lyons. As a teacher, coach and administrator, Eugene Lyons has had a daily opportunity to influence young people and has made the most of it. Coaching is more than teaching the proper layup technique, or how to shoot a free throw, or execute the pick and roll. Coaching is about helping young men and women develop into well-rounded citizens, about helping them learn to work with others, about helping them realize the importance of being mature, responsible adults. I've watched a good part of the career of Eugene Lyons. He taught them properly, held them to high expectations and, in my estimation, helped make them the successes they are today. Eugene Lyons will go into the Eagle Hall of Fame tomorrow for his accomplishments on the playing court. He deserves it just as much for his deeds since his graduation.

The rest of the All-District tournament team included the following players: Amber Tackett (South Floyd); Billie Stumbo (South Floyd); Steph Slone (South Floyd); Samantha Isaac (South Floyd); Brittany Little (South Floyd); Amber Whitaker (Prestonsburg); Pam Slone (Prestonsburg); Tara Case (Betsy Layne) and Jordan Jarrell (Betsy Layne). Both Allen Central and South Floyd advance to next week's 15th Region Tournament.

Martin dished out a team-high 10 assists and Howard set up nine. "Obviously, this was a great tournament win for this team and our program," Maynard added. "I cannot say enough about the individual contributions we had from our players." The Rebel hitting performance was the worst of the tournament at .283, but Allen Central managed eight team blocks and stopped 152 Raider volleys, earning 46 digs. Howard stopped one and assisted with five blocks; Courtney Martin blocked one and assisted with four; Owens blocked one; and Clark also had one partial block. Defense became the key for the AC girls with Christina Blevins leading the defensive effort with 15 digs.

"South Floyd is a talented team and they certainly did not give us anything - we earned the victory," Maynard added. "We overcame deficiencies and never backed down at all and came back to win a great third game. I am excited for this team and they deserve all the credit for hanging in there and winning tonight."

Hall, Allen Central's libero, played on an injured knee, which limited her mobility. Despite the injury, Hall managed 14 digs. Serving was another key factor as the Rebels served for 93-percent, Koko Martin led the Rebel team with five service aces, while Courtney Martin and Kimbo Blevins landed three apiece. Hodge and Howard skidded in two service aces each. Allen Central and South Floyd will return to action next week during the 15th Region Tournament at East Ridge High School. The region tournament draw is set for Sunday at 2 p.m. at ERHS.

Courtney Martin led Allen Central (24-6) with eight kills on .444 hitting. Brittany Clark came off the Lady Rebel bench and played extremely well, getting five kills on .714 hitting. Hodge slammed in five kills, Christina Blevins and Kimbo Blevins pounded in four each and setters Koko Martin and Howard dropped in two apiece. Setter Koko

Kentucky needs three wins in final six to become bowl eligible

By JEFFREY McMURRAY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON — Kentucky's recipe for bowl eligibility sounds simple enough. Just repeat in the last six games what it did in the first six.

The Wildcats are 3-3, still in strong contention for postseason play, but players acknowledged Monday they were still licking their wounds from the latest one that got away.

On Saturday, Andr Woodson's Hail Mary pass fell incomplete into the end zone, preserving a 24-17 win for South Carolina and coach Steve Spurrier, who has won 14 straight against the Wildcats.

"Your heart can steam for a while but your head's got to move on," tight end Jacob Tamme said.

A victory over the Gamecocks could have been a defining moment for coach Rich Brooks in his Kentucky tenure. But, Brooks said, there's no point in sulking now.

"You've got two choices in life when you get knocked down," he said. "You either stay down or you get up. Staying down, in my eyes, is not an option."

The good news is that Kentucky will likely be favored in three of its last six games — against Mississippi State, Vanderbilt and Louisiana-Monroe. Wins in all three would make the Wildcats bowl eligible — albeit not shoo-ins without at least one more win — to play in the postseason.

The bad news is the next two games come against Southeastern Conference powerhouses Louisiana State and Georgia, starting with a trip Saturday to Baton Rouge — one of the toughest places in the country to play.

Kentucky will have to play that game, and possibly the following three, without star running back Rafael Little, who was diagnosed Monday with a lateral cartilage tear in his knee. Tony Dixon, who missed last season with a broken leg, will start in Little's place. Dixon has struggled in limited time this year.

Despite the injuries, the players insist there is no room for excuses.

"If you don't believe that you can win this game, don't even get on the plane," linebacker Joe Schuler said. "That's the kind of mentality you have to have. You better bring your big boy pads and better be ready to hit somebody."

Although Brooks has stressed the adage of taking one game at a time, Kentucky's players are well aware of exactly what it will take to become bowl eligible.

An upset against an upper-echelon team like LSU, Georgia or Tennessee would be gravy. A let-down against one of the others could be fatal.

"It's not the end of the world," offensive guard Michael Aitcheson said of the South Carolina loss. "It's not canceled out. We have to up the ante and approach this thing with a greater sense of urgency if we want to accomplish our postseason goals."

So do the Wildcats have a chance at LSU? In the loaded SEC, Brooks insists they do. He cites Arkansas' upset of then-No. 2 Auburn.

"Anything can happen," Brooks said. "Upsets do happen. Arkansas proved that last weekend in emphatic fashion."

Fans get first look at Bears, Lady Bears

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — The student body and public got their first look at the first team men's basketball coach Kelly Wells has put together on Tuesday night when Pikeville College hosted its annual kickoff to basketball season, Basketball Blastoff.

Wells, who was hired in May to take over the program that has been to three national tournaments this decade, has worked tirelessly in an effort to move the program away from last year's eight-win season and back to the tremendous success of the Randy McCoy era.

"We're very excited to be here in Pikeville and I know our guys are ready to play in front of somebody," Wells said prior to his team taking the floor. "This team has been working very hard since they reported to school in August and we're very proud of that. I think our fans will be excited about what they see and I'm looking forward to it."

Wells said his excitement isn't limited to his team. "I've been watching the women's team as well, and they've been going at it pretty hard," said the son of former Morehead State women's basketball coach Mickey Wells, a two-time winner of coach of the year honors in the Ohio Valley Conference. "I think our fans will be very pleased when they see Coach Watson's team and how hard they work."

Bill Watson's Lady Bears took the floor after the PC men's team. "There's a lot of excitement around the gym this fall, thanks to Coach Wells and the notoriety he brings to our program," Watson said. "We're very happy to work with him on a daily basis and think the fans will be pleasantly surprised with the team he has assembled."

"On our side of the floor, we hope experience will pay off. We're returning most of our players from last year's team and think our deep class of freshmen got a lot of experience last year. It's going to be a good year for Pikeville College basketball and we're looking forward to kicking it off with the Blastoff."

The Pikeville College band performed and fans were able to meet the PC cheerleaders.

The event, held in conjunction with the school's annual Homecoming celebration, included a mixed shooting contest with the Bears and Lady Bears.

Cincinnati Christian dominates PC men's, women's soccer squads

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — The Eagles of Cincinnati Christian University made their way to Pikeville on Saturday to take on the Bears in a men's/women's soccer doubleheader. Like most doubleheaders during the season, this one ended in a sweep, as the Lady Bears fell hard 19-0 in the first game, then the men dropped the nightcap by an 8-0 score.

The Lady Bears could not gain any momentum against the Lady Eagles in the first game. By the end of the first half, Cincinnati Christian held a firm 10-0 lead, which was never in any danger of being eradicated during the second half. Once again, the Lady Bears were unable to pick up a shot-on-goal, but goalkeeper Tiffany Yates did pick up nine saves in the loss.

In the day's second match, the Pikeville men took on a Cincinnati Christian squad that entered the day unbeaten at 14-0. That trend did not change, as the Eagles stormed past the Bears by an 8-0 count. The Eagles were led in scoring by Andy Greer, who picked up his first hat trick of the season. The Eagles also outshot the Bears 30-5. Senior goalkeeper Kyle Sineath had six saves in the loss for the Bears.

With their loss the Lady Bears fell to 1-10 on the season, while the Pikeville men dropped to 1-11.

Volleyball: Pikeville takes down Bluefield

TIMES STAFF REPORT

BLUEFIELD, Va. — After falling to conference rival Georgetown last week, the Pikeville College volleyball team had some much-needed time off. The rest appeared to do the Lady Bears some good, as they needed only three games to take care of the Bluefield College Lady Rams at the Dome Gymnasium on Monday. The Lady Bears did have to work to pick up the victory, winning by scores of 30-22, 31-29 and 30-25.

The Lady Bears held their ground against Bluefield in the first game, holding the lead for nearly the entire contest. Still, the Lady Rams rebounded, taking the lead for much of game two. The Lady Bears, however, dug deep and rallied and pushed the Lady Rams until the score was notched at 29-29. Riding that momentum, the Lady Bears picked up the next two points, earning the victory. Game three saw Pikeville continue to ride that momentum, taking advantage of some soft points in the Rams defense, en route to the 30-25 win.

Junior outside hitter Vicki Hall (Belfry) had a strong performance against the Lady Rams, picking up a team-high 17 kills, along with four solo blocks. Sophomore defensive specialist Kristin Hamric (Barberton, Ohio) and junior outside hitter Anna Bevins (Belfry) each had a game-high 23 digs for the Lady Bears, while freshman middle blocker Chelsea Jarrell (Paintsville) collected three aces.

Bluefield, which fell to 7-15, was led by Lisa Reale, who collected a team-high 11 kills in the loss.

The win, Pikeville's third in its last four matches, improved the Lady Bears to 10-14 on the season.

Rebels blanks Bobcats 2-0 in district opener

TIMES STAFF REPORT

HI HAT — Allen Central outside hitters Brittany 'Hoagie' Hodge (nine kills, .500 hitting) and Christina Blevins (seven kills, .538 hitting) combined for 16 kills Tuesday, 10 October, as the Rebels used powerful offense, stingy defense, and a powerful blocking attack to defeat Betsy Layne 2-0 (25-15, 25-15) during first round action of the 55th District Tournament at South Floyd High School.

The Rebels improved to 23-6 on the year with their third consecutive win over the Bobcats this year. Allen Central had 28 kills on .500 hitting for the night. Every Allen Central player registered at least one kill on the evening. Senior middle Courtney Martin registered a team high four blocks and landed four kills on .444 hitting. However, sophomore setter Hannah 'Storm' Howard played big, dropping in three kills on .600 hitting, dishing up 18 assists, floating in five aces, and earning four digs. Koko Martin also charted a kill, eight assists, two aces and four digs.

Senior defensive specialist Alesia Hall had a team-high 13 digs and pounded a back row kill, while senior Christina Blevins had 12 digs to complement her seven kills. Kimbo Blevins scooped up four digs that added to her two kills and one block. Tiffany Owens also slammed in a kill. In addition to the team best nine kills, Hodge added four digs and one block assist.

"I felt we played really well defensively, blocking six and stopping 71 point attempts while earning 42 digs," said Allen Central Coach Larry Maynard. "Both Alesia Hall and Christina Blevins stepped up tonight defensively but everyone played a key role — our unrelenting defensive effort was key to our offensive success. We were consistent in the terms of focus, effort, and a commitment to our game plan. Hannah Howard played a great match; she was a key ingredient to this victory! However, this was a total team effort."

Kinzer claims second win

TIMES STAFF REPORT

ALLEN – Brandon Kinzer and his No. 18 Late Model team invaded the Talladega Short Track in Eastaboga, Ala. for a pair of Dirt Late Model events last weekend. The Floyd County native unloaded his new GRT chassis for the two shows and the pristine machine was ultra-fast right out of the box. Kinzer posted the quickest time of the 42 entrants in qualifying on Friday night, Oct. 6 and earned the coveted pole position for the $2,000-to-win A-Main. The Floyd County product dominated the entire race from flag-to-flag to earn his second win in as many weekends.

The O'Reilly Southern Allstars Series (OSAS) rolled into the Talladega Short Track on Saturday as a $5,000 payday was up for grabs. In Saturday's qualifying, Kinzer timed in fourth fastest and rolled off from the outside of the second row for the 50-lap feature event. He was up to second after passing Chris Madden, but lapped traffic gave the runner-up spot back to Madden. Kinzer eventually crossed the finish line in the third position behind winner Ronnie Johnson and Madden, the race's second-place finisher.

Floyd County native Brandon Kinzer (18) prevailed over a talented group of fellow racers last Friday night at Talladega (Ala.) Short Track.

Garrett man takes record elk

TIMES STAFF REPORT

It's all but official. Both state records – typical and non-typical – apparently fell during the opening weekend of the 2006 Kentucky bull elk season.

Franklin D. Scott, 60, of Garrett, took a massive 7 x 7 Knott County bull Sunday morning whose gross green score in the upper 370s is almost five feet larger than the current typical Kentucky state record held by Paul Cummins of Rockcastle County at 319 6/8 taken last season.

Andrew Kidd, 37, of Stearns in McCreary County, took an 7 x 8 Perry County bull Saturday morning. Its lower 340s green score gross tops the current non-typical state record held by Mathew Hall at 320 2/8 by about two feet, also taken last season.

Green scores (measurements taken in the first few hours of harvest) are preliminary only. Official measurements can be done and scores are officially recorded after 60 days.

Both elk were taken on at-large tags and were part of the 200 opportunities to hunt Kentucky elk awarded in the nationwide lottery earlier this year. The two new potential state records spotlighted opening weekend of only the sixth bull elk hunting season since Kentucky's elk restoration project began in December 1997. The first state record typical, taken in 2001 by Jimmy Garrett of Louisville, netted out at just under 300 inches and stood for two years. But it has fallen each year since.

Scott's bull drew a huge crowd at the weigh-in station at the Hazard Walmart that gathered to watch the scale settle on 725 pounds for the 6-year-old bull. He said hunted and called to the bull Saturday evening on the Knott-Floyd mining job where he worked for years prior to retirement, but it refused to show itself. He returned Sunday morning to the mountain's top. This time when he called, it followed a number of cows into the open. He took it with a 100-yard shot.

Kidd's bull fell, the result of a 276-yard shot from his Remington .30-06 on the reclaimed Lost Mountain mine in Perry County.

"This is great," said Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Big Game Coordinator Dr. Tina Brunjes of Scott's bull. "The fact that his animal is on the young side of a Boone and Crockett Club listing is evidence of the abundance and quality of Kentucky's elk habitat."

"And I am particularly encouraged by Andy Kidd's non-typical bull because it's a Kentucky-born elk," she said.

The bull elk season continues through today.

Elk hunting featured on Kentucky Afield this week

TIMES STAFF REPORT

FRANKFORT – How generosity from partners around the state helped fulfill the wish of a cancer-stricken man who wanted to take his son elk hunting will be featured on Kentucky Afield television this weekend, Oct. 14-15.

Elk hunting in Kentucky is still the luck of the draw. This year, there were 26,000 applications for a Kentucky elk hunt, but only 200 hunters were drawn. Spencer County resident Brian Cook and his son, Austin, were not among those drawn. But Brian Cook, a 36-year-old dad and recently diagnosed cancer patient, is used to adversity. Word of Cook's wish to take his son elk hunting did not go unheard. Ataya Hardwoods, Inc., a coal company whose property lies across portions of Bell, Knox and Leslie counties, graciously donated an elk tag reserved for major landowners to put the duo in the woods.

"This was my first elk," Austin Cook said. "We were all jumping up and down. I couldn't have been happier!"

It's not many 13-year-olds who can say they took a bull elk during their fall break from school. Careful aim and patience landed the teenager a 5x5 bull (meaning the antlers contained five points on either side) for his wall and elk meat for dinner throughout the holidays. Cook, a life-long sportsman who has hunted elk before said, "It truly was the hunt of a lifetime because I got to do it with my boy!"

Kentuckians Taylor Orr of London and Joe Martin of Stanford, working through the Kentucky Chapter of the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation, were instrumental in making the hunt possible. Orr initially brought the request to Ataya Hardwoods and, once in the field, Martin guided the hunt and called in the bull. "What we did most was help a good man hand down a tradition," said Martin.

Bull elk season welcomed many sportsmen and women to eastern Kentucky's elk zone this past week. Kentucky Afield cameras were also along with Tony Sparks of Vanceburg. Elk hunting is more than a single hunter in the lone woods. A story on the camaraderie behind the scenes is also featured on this weekend's Kentucky Afield show.

Kentucky Afield is a production of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. It is the longest continuously-running outdoor television show in the nation. Kentucky Afield airs each Saturday at 8:30 p.m. Eastern /7:30 p.m. Central and is repeated on Sunday at 4 p.m. Eastern/3 p.m. Central on KET.

Reds fire hitting coach Chris Chambliss

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI – Hitting coach Chris Chambliss was fired Wednesday by the Cincinnati Reds, whose offensive slump over the last five weeks of the season knocked them out of play-off contention.

The Reds announced that Chambliss, their hitting coach for the past three seasons, wasn't offered another contract. The club also decided that bullpen coach Lee Tunnell won't return on the major league staff next season, but could have a position in the farm system.

Cincinnati finished 80-82, its sixth straight losing season, after collapsing during the last five weeks. The Reds were within a percentage point of first place in the NL Central on Aug. 24, then went into a tailspin.

The offense was the main culprit down the stretch. Ken Griffey Jr. missed most of the last month with an injured toe. Adam Dunn, Edwin Encarnacion, Brandon Phillips, David Ross and Scott Hatteberg were among the hitters who finished with prolonged slumps.

The Reds were second in the NL with 217 homers, but finished second-to-last in the NL with a .257 average and were only middle-of-the-pack in scoring runs.

Bench coach Bucky Dent, first base coach Billy Hatcher, third base coach Mark Berry and bullpen coach Tom Hume agreed to contracts for next season, along with bullpen catcher Mike Stefanski. The Reds are looking for a pitching coach to take over for Vern Rühle, who was sidelined much of last season with cancer. Rühle will be reassigned within the team.

When officers asked Henaire if they could search his home, he consented and told them that they would find a pipe used for smoking marijuana in a shoe box, which they did.

Henaire was charged with second-degree trafficking in a controlled substance for giving hydrocodone pills to Farmer, possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia. He remains in Floyd County Detention Center while his case is sent to a grand jury. His bond has been reduced to $7,500.

Shepherd reported he had been to the residence that morning and saw nine German shepherds outside the premises that appeared extremely emaciated. He told Johnson not to let any of the dogs off the property while he left to obtain a search warrant to search the home for other animals. When Shepherd returned 10 minutes later, three of the dogs were missing and Shepherd notified Prestonsburg Police.

Prestonsburg Assistant Police Chief Gerald Clark

arrived and asked Nancy Johnson, Johnson's mother, if he could search the residence and she agreed to allow him in. While conducting the search Clark saw marijuana plants growing through a window in the home and soon discovered there were six tall marijuana plants inside. Johnson was arrested and taken to Floyd County Detention Center.

Johnson will be back in court Dec. 11 for a pretrial conference on a charge of second-degree cruelty to animals.

but his convictions also were dismissed, by law, upon his death.

The government's motion to dismiss charges against the Hayses was granted Oct. 5, court records show.

"Believe me, it's been a long ordeal," said Covington lawyer John A. West, Hays' attorney.

Hays, 62, whose law license has been suspended, is attending a seminary at Liberty University in Lynchburg, Va.

Hays said he hopes to retrieve his law license and become a full-time minister, but he has no plans to run for political office again.

Harris and Turner were indicted along with the Hayses in 2003 on charges they were involved in an illegal scheme to finance and buy votes in Hays' race in a 2002 campaign against Pike District Judge Darrel Mullins.

Hays lost by 3,000 votes, despite allegations that nearly two dozen $1,000 donations by so-called "straw" contributors for vote haulers had been provided by Harris.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ken Taylor said the appeals court decision in the Turner case addressed only a jurisdictional issue. "It in no way exonerates the underlying conduct," he said.

Turner, 52, still faces additional vote-fraud charges in another case involving state Sen. Johnny Ray Turner, D-Drift, in a 2000 election. Glenn Turner, a cousin, was Johnny Turner's treasurer.

Johnny Ray Turner is scheduled for trial Dec. 11. No trial date has been set for Glenn Turner.

Commission, and received $48,000 from each of its initial university partners — Eastern Kentucky University, Morehead State University, the Kentucky Community and Technical College System and Hazard Community and Technical College. Lindsey Wilson College in Columbia joined in July 2004.

Its largest source of funding was $1 million in coal severance tax revenues from the 2004 legislative session. But the center's $900,000 budget request, which would have covered 2007-08, was denied this year.

The funding was slashed when Gov. Ernie Fletcher, using his line-item veto power, struck multiple coal-severance projects earmarked by state legislators from the state budget. Fletcher had said changes were needed in the way projects were selected to receive coal tax funds, and that fiscal courts should decide how the money is spent on their counties.

"There's no doubt to the value of this project, but he could not pick and choose," said Colleen Chaney, deputy commissioner for the Governor's Office for Local Development. "It had to be an all or none decision."

The decision has left the center to stretch two years of funding over four.

"It was a worthwhile project that just did not get the advocacy at the right places," Daley said. "We're going to have to look for dollars."

Daley said student services, including distance learning programs and onsite faculty, will be the top priority for funding. But how long the program, with about 300 students enrolled in 15 degree programs, can continue on the limited budget remains uncertain.

The center needs to look for other means of funding, such as federal grants, Chaney said. "There are other options to investigate outside of coal severance tax revenues," she said. "We encourage this program to investigate those options both on the state and federal level."

Sen. Daniel Mongiardo, D-Hazard, said the center is crucial in a region where potential students are an older population, often with family and work obligations.

"It's critical that we have access to a four-year college degree locally," he said. "Most of these people are going back to school after spending years in the work force. Many have families and children, and can't afford to travel."

He agreed that the coal severance tax revenues weren't intended as a long-term budget source for the center, but he didn't expect the funding to be cut so quickly.

"I want to see the money come out of the general budget," he said. "Eastern Kentucky, if you take that out of the state, the rest of state is pretty wealthy."

In the meantime, Fletcher should devote some of Kentucky's $136.5 million budget surplus to the project, Mongiardo said.

"Education is the surest road out of poverty," he added. "It's critical for the entire state to relieve Eastern Kentucky."

At the Movies: 'Man of the Year' a political satire in need of a sharper wit

by DAVID GERMAIN
AP MOVIE WRITER

We've seen plenty of "Jon Stewart for president" bumper stickers, and it would be fun to see a straight-talking, scathingly satiric guy like him on the campaign trail against the usual suspects.

Barry Levinson's "Man of the Year" aims for that scenario, though, funny as he is at times, Robin Williams in the commentator-turned-candidate role is a lightweight, almost as empty a suit as the career politicians he's up against.

With a premise too absurd for belief even alongside 2000's photo-finish presidential election, "Man of the Year" becomes a campaign of character, relying mainly on its cast to see it through.

Luckily for writer-director Levinson, Williams and especially co-stars Laura Linney, Christopher Walken and Lewis Black deliver well enough to keep the movie in the race, making viewers care about these people more than the story merits.

The actor and filmmaker behind "Good Morning, Vietnam" reunites for the story of Tom Dobbs, a political commentator who seems less about substance and more about the manic standup jabber on which Williams built his early career.

Williams' Tom is the comic host of a political talk show "Man of the Year," a Universal release, is rated PG-13 for language including some crude sexual references, drug related material and brief violence. Running time: 115 minutes.

Two and a half stars out of four.

that supposedly tells it like a sick-and-tired electorate wants to hear it. We're led to understand that Tom's an insightful wit whose assaults on Washington's power brokers have made him so beloved his TV audience wildly cheers at his innocent comment about running for president himself.

The trouble with Levinson's screenplay is that Tom talks a lot but doesn't say much. We essentially see Williams doing his schtick, prattling in such a bluster that the mildly amusing material sounds funnier than it is, with some generic politically rabble-rousing tidbits thrown in to establish him as a voice of dissent, a title the character doesn't deserve.

Even so, Tom shakes up the establishment by jumping in as an independent alternative to the bland Republican incumbent and the blander Democratic challenger. Though Tom polls like a respectable third-party candidate, it's all meant as a lark and a reminder to the real politicos that their job is to serve the American people.

Then the impossible happens. Under a new computerized voting system, Tom wins the election. As his sickly manager (Walken), head writer (Black) and other minions prepare for the transition to ultimate power, an employee of the company that developed the voting system, Eleanor Green (Linney), turns up claiming a software glitch mistakenly handed the election to Tom.

It's left to Tom to reveal the possible mistake or keep his mouth shut and take the job.

With the exit-polling that private parties do in every election, Levinson's plot just crumbles. His far-better political satire "Wag the Dog," with its outrageously manufactured TV war to distract the electorate, was credible stuff by comparison.

It's outlandish that a guy on the ballot in just 13 states — and polling a distant third in those — would be declared the winner without an uproar. Yet the media, the political parties and the public simply shrug and accept the fact that Tom won.

What keeps "Man of the Year" alive is the homey interplay of its principals, Tom's talk-show staff coming off like a fun family of kooks. Walken's a grand old man as the entertainment manager who becomes an unlikely kingmaker, despite an odd subplot about his character's health problems from smoking.

Black, toned down from the bellow of his standup act, is surprisingly even-keeled as Tom's wise and wisecracking writer. Jeff Goldblum is thrown in to little effect as the dastardly corporate attorney hiding the truth about whether or not the computerized voting system was flawed.

Linney's the real victor, creating a rich, noble, conflicted character who's much worthier a successor than Tom to the everyman heroes of such films as "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," which Levinson seems to be emulating.

There was a much better movie tucked inside the story of Linney's Eleanor, the meek corporate serf fighting back against corrupt bosses. If the title wasn't already taken by a Katharine Hepburn-Spencer Tracy classic, Eleanor would have made a fine heroine for a movie called "Woman of the Year."

Rental Central

by TOM DOTY
TIMES COLUMNIST

A slow week in the rental market may help steer viewers towards the latest Robert Altman opus, though it could also have a negative effect by getting some to check out a direct-to-video dud based on an Ashton Kutcher movie.

"A Prairie Home Companion" — Altman's latest harkens back to his classic "Nashville" and once again weaves several stories and multiple characters who gather for the last broadcast of a radio program. Writer Garrison Keillor stars alongside a typically diverse Altman ensemble which includes stalwarts like Lily Tomlin and newcomers to the Altman team such as Woody Harrelson and John C. Reilly. The best bits involve Tomlin and Streep as competitive sister singers and Kevin Kline as the narrator.

"The Butterfly Effect 2" — A direct-to-video sequel of the surprisingly clever thriller that mixed "Back to the Future" tricks with a dark story and excessive Ashton Kutcher. This one doesn't even have Kutcher though the plot remains the same and once again examines what would happen if someone could go back to pivotal times in their life and change the outcome. Now if only some executive could go back in time and make a decision that would have resulted in a better movie.

"Click" — Adam Sandler is back in another comedy that is well suited to his comic talents. Here he is cast as a family man who makes a fateful trip to Bed, Bath and Beyond and acquires a true universal remote from a mad inventor essayed by Christopher Walken. Sandler's remote can pause life (handy for scoping out women) and fast forward (really good for skipping arguments), but Sandler must get it all back when he accidentally skips through a huge hunk of his life. Funny and occasionally poignant.

"Texas Chainsaw Massacre 2" — Tobe Hooper's sequel to his own terror classic features great make up by Tom Savini ("Dawn of the Dead") and an effective performance by Dennis Hopper who had just come off of making "Blue Velvet." DVD finally gets a deluxe version of this underappreciated effort which includes a host of deleted scenes and documentary features.

Next week look for Jennifer Aniston in "The Break Up" and a remake of the 1976 film "The Omen."

Your City Hall
Has Been Mortgaged
to Finance City Debt

- In 2005, the City took in $3.9 million, spent $4.7 Million and caused an $800,000 loss.
- The City borrowed $1.2 Million to cover the loss.
- City Hall has been mortgaged to secure the $1.2 Million loan as well as other city owned property.
- The City owed $100,000 to the Prestonsburg Tourism Commission.
- The 2005 audited financial report was just approved in September 2006—15 months after the close of the '05 fiscal year.
- The 2006 financial report may not be approved until September 2007, which allows too much time to pass to be an effective management tool.
