LOUISA — A Lawrence County social worker resigned from her position this week after being charged with four counts of unlawful transactions with a minor in late January for allegedly buying and serving alcohol to teenagers.

Ruth J. Horn, 32, was arrested Feb. 11 at her Louisa residence after being charged for providing alcohol to four teenage girls at a party which took at her home on Jan. 27.

Horn, who had worked for five years at the Division of Protection and Permanency, resigned this week following her arrest. Her position at the agency included work in cases of child and adult abuse and neglect, foster care and adoptions.

Board bans principals from coaching

by KATHY J. PRATER FEATURES EDITOR

MARTIN — Floyd County principals will no longer be allowed to serve as coaches in Floyd County schools, the Floyd County Board of Education determined at a meeting Wednesday night.

"I feel that academics should come before sports," board member Sherry Robinson had to say in regard to the issue, as she and fellow board member Linda Gearheart discussed the reasoning behind their respective stances.

Gearheart, a former principal herself, was in favor of continuing to allow Floyd County principals to serve as coaches for athletic teams. Gearheart said that in her experience as a school administrator, "It was sometimes very hard to get someone to Robinson had to say in regard to the come on board to serve as just a issue, as she and fellow board member coach."

Though both Gearheart and Carol Stumbo were in favor of allowing principals to serve as coaches, Robinson was joined by fellow board members Jeff Stumbo and Dr. Chandra Varia against continuing the practice and, as evidenced by a roll call vote, put the matter to rest by voting to no longer allow principals, vice principals or department heads of Floyd County schools to serve as coaches on any Floyd County team. Additionally, those serving in these positions will also not be allowed to volunteer in these capacities.

"I feel that we are taking the decision out of the hands of the site-based councils," Gearheart said in regard to

Jury sends message with tough sentence

by ALEX SMITH STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — A Floyd County woman and her Knott County boyfriend were convicted Tuesday on drug possession charges, with the jury recommending that each receive the maximum sentences allowed under law.

A jury returned the guilty verdicts after 7 p.m. Tuesday, convicting Kimberly C. Burns, 39, of Hueysville, of three counts of possession of controlled substance and one count of possession of drug paraphernalia. The jury recommended a five-year sentence for possessing methadone and 12 months each for two counts of possessing hydrocodone and the drug paraphernalia charge, which was brought for three scales found in her bedroom along with the methadone. Although the jury recommended these sentences run consecutively, by law the 12-month convictions, which were misdemeanor charges, must run concurrent with her five-year sentence.

Her boyfriend, James B. Combs, 45, of Leburn, was found guilty of cocaine possession and tampering with physical evidence, for which he was given matching five-year sentences. The jury recommended that the charges run consecutively.

agreement with Johnson

by KATHY J. PRATER FEATURES EDITOR

MARTIN — Several parents of Floyd County students who travel outside the county to attend school showed up at the special-called meeting of the Floyd County Board of Education, held Wednesday evening at May Valley Elementary School, to voice their concerns over rumors that the Floyd board may not sign an agreement with neighboring counties, specifically Johnson, to allow Floyd County students to attend school outside their home county.

Keith Baker, of Allen, addressed the board to explain his choice to have his child attend school in Johnson County. Baker said that after reviewing test scores and progress of both Floyd and Johnson County schools, that he and his wife came to the determination that what they were looking for in the way of providing an education for their child was available not in Floyd County, but in Johnson.

, "It was what was right for s our family," Baker said. "And r we feel we have the right to choose where our child attends school," he continued, citing the Kentucky Education Reform Act and No Child Left Behind Act both as models for granting them that right.

Larry Brown, a Prestonsburg attorney, also spoke, saying that although he was a "proud PHS (Prestonsburg High School) graduate," that he is now "black and gold to the bone" after having one child successfully complete his education in the Johnson County school sys-

Mine safety legislation passes first hurdle

by ROGER ALFORD Associated Press

FRANKFORT — After weeks of intense lobbying by eastern Kentucky widows who lost their husbands in mining accidents, state lawmakers are again considering legislation to bolster safety laws for those working underground.

A measure that would, among other things, require more government inspections of coal mines, had stalled in a House committee until the widows and other mine safety advocates kick started it with personal pleas and with protests at the Capitol.

The committee approved revised legislation on Thursday and sent it to the full House for consideration. Mine safety advocates, however, complained that the new version was gutted of several key features.

The new proposal requires inspectors to visit each mine at least six times per year, up from the current standard of three. A provision that Granny, It was hard to see you go, But I know that it was your time. You had such a will to live, and fought so many battles, You fought as long as you could. It helps to know that you have no more pain and suffering, And can walk hand in hand with our Lord.

I will never forget you, Gran. I will never forget the feel of your soft wrinkled hands, Your wonderful crooked smile that brightened my day. The sound of you laughing, The generosity and love you showed me, And your love for Jesus, as that was some of your last words.

You hold a special place in my heart, And I know that you will always be there looking down on me. Nothing will ever take our memories away, They will stay in my heart forever. I am so lucky to have known and had a great grandmother like you, You'll always be my Hot Rod Granny, and I your Baby Doll.

Life-Controlling Problems:

A life-controlling problem is anything that masters our lives. "Everything is permissible for me'-but not everything is beneficial. 'Everything is permissible for me'-but I will not be mastered by anything." 1 Corinthians 6:12

Life-controlling problems fall into three categories:

- 1.) Substance-drugs, alcohol, food, prescription medications
- 2.) Behavior-gambling, pornography, outbursts of anger, etc.
- 3.) Relationships—co-dependent, unhealthy, or enmeshed relationships

Lifeline can accomplish the following:

- Begin ministry to those who are unable to function reasonably in their addiction, referring and assisting them to go on to a long-term residential program, if they make the choice and have exhausted all other options. Residential programs/ministry is possibly an option for those with pending charges looking for alternative sentencing.
- 2. Provide relevant ministry to those who are reasonably functional in their addiction. This also allows families to work through issues as a family, encouraging the participants to be responsible for daily necessities. The participant needs to make a commitment to receive help and hope through the support groups and caring relationships with Lifeline staff.

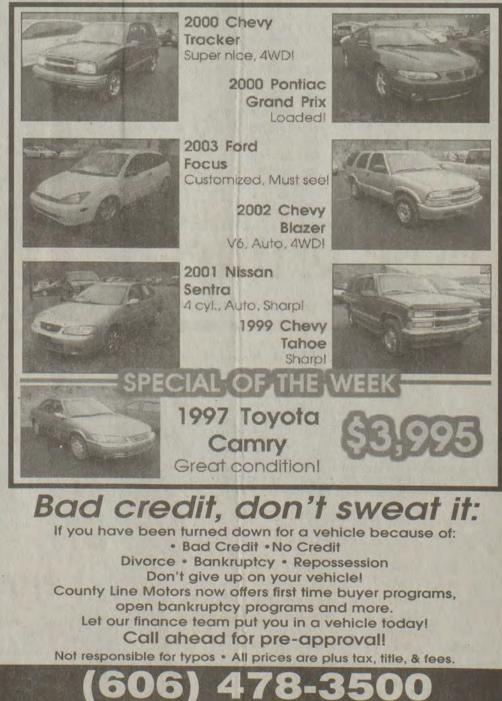

Provide effective follow-up to those participants who have completed long-term recovery programs, providing continued positive peer choice, accountability, boundaries, and consistency.

The (Spartanburg, S.C.) Herald-Journal, on credit cards for illegal immigrants:

A corporation should show some sense of obligation to the society that supports it and a willingness to uphold that society's laws. Bank of America shows no such responsibility with its plan to issue credit cards to illegal immigrants.

The bank announced plans to begin offering credit cards to those without Social Security numbers or credit histories. People who don't have Social Security numbers are usually illegal immigrants.

It does not seem to matter to this huge financial services corporation that the country for which it is named faces a serious problem with illegal immigration. ...

The bank will be making America's illegal immigration problem worse. It will be exploiting mostly poor people by sucking them into high-interest credit card debt. But the bank will be expanding its business, which is all that really matters. ...

This is about quality of life, all right. But the quality of life of illegal immigrants isn't likely to be enhanced by credit card debt. And the general quality of life in this country isn't likely to be improved by more criminal behavior in the form of illegal immigration.

The Buffalo (N.Y.) News, on the HPV vaccine:

A vaccine that prevents any form of cancer has long been the holy grail of medical research. So, when one is found, of course many people will want to rush it into widespread use. But in the case of the new vaccine for human papilloma virus, some people are getting ahead of themselves, and want the law to drag everyone else with them. .

Spending $360 for the three-injection treatment before a woman becomes sexually active can save lives and money. But making the vaccinations mandatory for minor children would be, well, an overdose. It would transform what should be a compassionate effort to educate and empower into an unnecessarily in-your-face political battle.

Mandating this vaccination for minors will be seen as an unwarranted interference with parental responsibilities, and as rewarding the unseemly advertising and lobbying campaign by vaccine maker Merck & Co.

A better approach is seen in places from California to Italy where, officials have decided, the vaccine won't be mandatory, but it will be free

When the moral issues are this intense and the medicine involved is this new, families should be guided by information and judgment, not the force of law.

Let's begin with this fact; the 2005 Kauffman Index of Entrepreneurial Activity by State ranks Kentucky among the nation's "bottom five ates with the lowest cumulative rate of entrepreneurship activity." Now, let's follow that fact with another; the future economic success of our Commonwealth is directly linked to the cultivation, development and growth of entrepreneurial business. It does not take much study of Kentucky's economy to come to that conclusion - the evidence is abundant. So, the pressing question before us is, "How do we process these two accurate, but conflicting statements into a positive and proactive response that will point to future actions and objectives for Kentucky?" Finding the answer will not be easy, but the good news is it can be done. The Long-Term Policy Kentucky Research Center report, entitled Visioning Kentucky's Future: Measures and Milestones 2006, provides encouraging news that progress is being made and that Kentucky appears to be headed in the right direction. According to the report, an earlier study from 1996 stated that "an estimated 21 percent of Kentucky's adult population reported that they had started a business at home at some point in their career." Now, a full decade later, this percentage has climbed by 10 points to 31 percent. The Visioning report used this fact and others as evidence that Kentucky. is experiencing "an encouraging trend that suggests rising levels of entrepreneurial skill, technological prowess, and education. The report continues by saying these results point toward "a growing capacity for entrepreneurship" in Kentucky; a trend that should excite anyone who understands the critical relationship between nurturing the entrepreneurial spirit and the future economic success of our state. The 2006 Report on Small Business in Kentucky also gives reason to be optimistic about the future of small business, and entrepreneurship, by noting that 93% of the 71,250 business establishments in Kentucky have fewer than 50 employees. The report, sponsored by the Kentucky Cabinet for Economic Development, its Small Business Services Division and the Commission on Small Business Advocacy, also points out that "a majority of businesses in Kentucky more than 50,000 - employ 10 or fewer."

Reports and studies from all seccontinue to underscore the fact that the small business owner is the backbone of Kentucky's economy. And with the increasingly global nature of business and the changes in our business environment, especially in large-scale, high-payroll manufacturing, the strength and viability of that "backbone" is more crucial than ever Kentucky does have more than its share of challenges when compared to the rest of the nation including pockets of low educational attainment, poverty, wealth inequality and catching up to states that have done a better job of encouraging entrepreneurial growth. However, there is considerable evidence of what the Kentucky Long-Term Policy Research Center calls "latent entrepreneurial energy" in the people of our Commonwealth - an untapped energy that could help fuel Kentucky's economic engine. The responsibility of achieving this reality lies with each of us as Kentuckians, including our government leaders who need to ensure a business-friendly environment for the entrepreneurs of today - and tomorrow. It lies with business leaders in our communities who need to recognize and encourage entrepreneurial efforts at every opportunity. And it lies with all hourly and salaried employees who find pride and self-worth in doing the best job they can, no matter the task, day-in and day-out. In an effort to lift up and applaud the many entrepreneurial success stories in our region, Eastern Kentucky University's College of Business and Technology, Kentucky Highlands Investment Corporation and The Center for Rural Development have partnered to sponsor the annual Excellence In Entrepreneurship Awards (EIEA) program. Each year nominations are accepted in four categories: business, small business, non-profit and start-up. Nominated businesses are scored on the economic success of the business, contribution to the community, and operational achievement. The top scoring businesses in each category will be invited to the 2007 luncheon on Monday, September 10 as finalists where video profiles of each will be presented and award recipients named.

At the 2006 awards luncheon an emphasis on the importance of early exposure to entrepreneurship was added to the program. Based success, the 2007 luncheon will again feature the announcement of the Collegiate Business Concept Challenge award recipient, as well as recognition of the first place business concept team from The Center's Entrepreneurial Leadership Institute summer youth program. In recognition of the importance and relevance of the entrepreneur to our national economy, Feb. 24 through Mar. 3 has been designated "EntrepreneurshipWeek USA." And in the spirit of this occasion, the EIEA nomination committee is tak ing the opportunity to announce its official "call for entries" for the 2007 program and request your help in identifying successful entrepreneurial businesses in a 55-county region of eastern and southern Kentucky. For more information on the EIEA program and to download a copy of the 2007 nomination form, please visit us on the Web at www.eiea.eku.edu. Nominations may be submitted by any individual or business and must be received by the EIEA nomination committee on or before the June 5 deadline. Interested parties can also e-mail the committee at cbt.eiea@eku.edu, or call the EKU College of Business and Technology at (859) 622-1412. More detailed information on the EIEA, Collegiate Business Concept Challenge, and the youth-focused Entrepreneurial Leadership Institute programs, can be found on the Web site as well. The economic success of Kentucky is a true entrepreneurial effort in and of itself, with each of us earning a share of the reward that will come with a successful venture. So, with that philosophy in mind, and as we celebrate "EntrepreneurshipWeek USA," we urge you to reflect on the tremendous impact Kentucky's entrepreneurs have had on our past, and will continue to have in the years ahead.

Bush's gigantic war budget next month.

In any war, at least some money is wasted. But the massive amounts that have disappeared in Iraq are far beyond the pale.

According to the audit, more than one in six dollars charged by U.S. contractors in Iraq were questionablé or unsupportable. The amount of waste is nearly triple the estimate made last fall by the Government Accountability Office.

The auditors faulted Defense and State department officials for condoning or allowing overcharges, repeated work delays, and payments for shoddy work or jobs that were never done.

There is, in fact, "no accountability" for the contractors in Iraq, said U.S. Comptroller General David M. Walker, who heads the auditing arm of Congress.

The auditors discovered overpricing and waste in Iraq contracts totaling $4.9 billion since the Defense Contract Audit Agency began work in 2003. While some of that money has been recovered, an additional $5.1 billion in expenses were charged without proper documentation.

Congress is considering stiffened penalties for war profiteers. It also wants to find ways to cut cronyism in contracting.

At the same time, it needs to be careful about giving its stamp of approval next month when considering Bush's request for nearly $100 billion to finance wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

The direction of the war is dubious enough without the massive rip-off of public money that has accompanied it.

P'burg Foodland has

by JESSICA HALE STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG With competition rising all around it, one new owner of a local grocery store is confident that loyalty and quality will allow his store to flourish by showing that it greatly values its customers and the surrounding community.

Arvin Thompson purchased the Prestonsburg Foodland store and began his ownership position Feb. 12. When asked why he decided to purchase Foodland, Thompson said he had always had an interest in owning his own store, but the people in the area were what pushed him to want to be a part of this community.

"As soon as I met the people and became familiar with the city, I was sold." said Thompson.

A graduate of Vinson High School in Huntington, W.Va., Thompson has owned several businesses throughout his career, Today, he holds a real estate license in West Virginia and also operates an recreational vehicle and carpet cleaning business. He is also in the process of turning one of his farms into a retreat that will be available to surrounding church groups and other organizations.

According to Thompson, he is trying hard to keep the good things going that Foodland already had before his arrival. For quite some time, Foodland has been delivering groceries to local elderly residents in Prestonsburg who were unable to get out and do their own shopping.

"This was already in place when I arrived and I think it is really good thing," Thompson said.

Foodland's customer base mostly consists of people over the age of 55, but Thompson said he wants to try to target the 20-to-30-year-old crowd. Resetting the store shelves, new lighting and additional merchandise are already putting Foodland on the right track towards bringing in more business.

Programs aimed to benefit local school organizations are one of Thompson's new ideas which he feels will add to the involvement his store has in the community. "Bagging for Tips" is a program designed to help school organizations raise money by allowing kids to come into the store to bag and carry out groceries for customers in exchange for tips. Thompson says customers are not required to tip, but they should know that the money will go to a good cause, often times providing funds for uniforms and other needed supplies. Bake sales and other fundraisers will also be a part of Foodland's contributions to the community.

"We want to to make this store as nice as any other," said Thompson. "We're here to stay.'

Poll: 52 percent favor casino gambling at racetracks

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE - A majority of Kentuckians favor allowing casino gambling at the state's racetracks, according to a Bluegrass Poll released Wednesday.

The poll conducted by The Courier-Journal of Louisville found that 52 percent of Kentuckians favor casinos at the tracks, while 38 percent oppose them and another 10 percent were undecided.

The poll was encouraging for members of the thoroughbred racing industry who support putting the gambling questions to a statewide vote as a constitutional amendment. The phone survey has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

"To me it just reaffirms the people's support that they'd like to vote on gaming," said Steve Sexton, a Churchill Downs Inc. executive vice president.

The poll was conducted between Feb. 8 and 14, and surveyed 801 adults in Kentucky.

In the General Assembly this year, bills to allow casinos at racetracks and other sites are pending, but they aren't expected to advance during the 30-day session.

On Tuesday, House Speaker Pro Tem Larry Clark filed bills to allow up to nine

A batch of Oscar courting films hit the racks this week which gave viewers an opportunity to see some of these films which didn't play in area theaters.

■ "Babel" — Brad Pitt and Cate Blanchett star in this drama which echoes last year's CRASH as it focuses on the ripple effect of one incident on several diverse groups. This one begins in Morocco where a stray bullet strikes a tourist in the shoulder while riding on a bus through a remote region. The story then stretches out to effect characters in Japan, Mexico, and California. Worth your time.

"For Your Consideration" — The latest

(Wolverine and Batman) star as rival magicians in this story of illusionists practicing their craft in turn-of-the-century London. The pair begin as friends but their relationship crumbles after an onstage mishap. Good supporting turns by an eclectic cast (Michal Caine, David Bowie) and a smart script by Christopher Nolan ("Memento").

Flushed Away" Hugh Jackman is back in this animated effort and provides the voice of an uptown rat who gets banished to the sewers after a rat bully tosses him in the commode and pulls the chain. Plenty of opportunities for class commentary are wasted as he hooks up with a female rat to get back home while trying to outwit a pair of rat mobsters who work for a mobbed up toad. Truly awful, two-party system, this one Christopher Guest ("Best in though the cast is interesting with turns by Ian McKellan and Jean Reno. "Open Water 2" - A bigger budgeted sequel to the art house hit proves that more isn't necessarily better as a group of friends find themselves stuck in the ocean after jumping overboard for a swim. Nobody thinks to put down the convenient rope ladder before diving in and it is soon time for a study in group dynamics as everyone's priorities switch from assigning blame to surviving the night. Said to also have been based on a true story

"Man of the Year" — Director Barry Levinson ("Diner") reteams with comedian Robin Williams for this comedy which takes aim at presidential politics. Williams is a John Stewart-type talking head who jokingly throws his hat in the ring during a presidential race. The joke turns out to be on him when he wins and must get down to the business of running the government. Despite some good jabs at the ensemble comedy from Show") rounds up his favorite actors in a story that examines the power of Oscar buzz. When word gets out that an actress, whose star has faded, is doing her best work in a new movie, the publicity sends the production into a tizzy as the producers of the film try to make it more mainstream and insure Oscar consideration. This is character-based comedy and it's well handled by such veterans as Eugene Levy, Catherine O'Hara and Fred Willard (all of whom got their start with the Second City theater group).

The Prestige" — Hugh Jackman and Christian Bale

State considers lifting Election Day liquor ban

by ROGER ALFORD ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT — A generations-old Kentucky law that bans the sale of liquor on Election Day would be lifted under proposed legislation.

That law, which dates back to the days of prohibition when temperance leagues vilified alcohol in all forms, is antiquated and needs to be changed, said state Rep. Arnold Simpson, D-Covington.

"I mean, we're in the 21st Century," Simpson said. "Liquor sales are a very important component of our business community and having a prohibition on any day for any period without a legitimate state interest I think is reprehensible."

The House Licensing and Occupations Committee unanimously approved Simpson's bill on Wednesday and sent it to the full House for consideration. Simpson said the measure, which would allow bars and liquor stores to open at noon on Election Day, is likely to spark debate as it moves the legislative through process.

"Now I'm very much aware of the propensity and the alleged practice in some counties of individuals offering liquor to influence votes, but, by golly, this is the 21st Century," Simpson said. "If someone wants to commit a fraud, they don't need liquor to do that. They can do it with currency. It's still against the law."

State Sen. Vernie McGaha, R-Russell Springs, a stalwart opponent of liquor sales, said he opposes the measure working its way through the legislative process.

"That would be a bad thing to do," McGaha said. "People need to be quite sober when they cast an important vote for people to represent them in government."

Kentucky is among six states that still ban alcohol sales during elections, according to the Distilled Spirits Council in Washington. Under the Kentucky law, bars, restaurants and liquor stores can't sell alcohol while polls are open.

"This is part of a growing trend of states that are modernizing their liquor laws to bring consumers greater convenience," said Lisa Hawkins, spokeswoman for the Distilled Spirits Council. "And we fully support this measure.'

Oklahoma became the latest state to drop its ban on sales, having done so last November, Hawkins said.

Gene McLean, a lobbyist for the Kentucky Beer Wholesalers Association, said the existing law puts legitimate Kentucky businesses at an economic disadvantage to bootleggers.

"You start taking business days away from people who operate on small margins, it becomes a competitive disadvantage," McLean said.

McGaha said he isn't swayed by that argument. 'You don't make a wrong right by allowing those who are operating under the law to become like those who operate outside the law," he said.

Donald Cole, head of the Kentucky League on Alcohol and Gambling Problems, said lifting the ban could resurrect old problems, like drunken voters showing up at the polls. "I don't know that it would happen very often, but I guarantee it would happen," he said.

Kendra Stewart, a political scientist at Eastern Kentucky University, said the current law doesn't serve any real purpose. If someone wanted to trade liquor for votes, Stewart said, they could simply stock up before Election Day.

"Legislation like that was passed to deter corruption in elections," she said. "It certainly hasn't curtailed corruption. It really hasn't had any major impact on cleaning up elections in Kentucky.'

"We need this bill passed," said Melissa Lee, whose husband Jimmy Lee was killed in the Kentucky Darby Mine explosion last year. "This has to be something that protects the other men who are providing for their families.'

With the 2007 General Assembly session half over, the legislation has not yet come up for a committee vote. It would, among other things, require more frequent mine inspections and require coal companies to supply miners with methane detectors.

The proposal would also allow people to attend investithe coal industry. "He is the coal industry," Londrigan said of Gooch. But Gooch called the proposal a "work in progress" and

"I resent any kind of implication that because of some business ties that I may have that I will vote a certain way - that's not the way I'm going to do it," Gooch said. "I'm going to do my job."

Gooch's committee was scheduled to meet on Thursday, and the bill was listed as one the panel might consider.

The legislation follows one of the deadliest years in recent history for coal miners in Kentucky. In all, 16 miners were killed on the job in 2006. Five of the deaths were from a single Harlan County underground mine explosion in May.

State law now requires more oxygen supplies to be stored along underground escape routes in case of emergency, better communications between the surface and underground work areas and a directional cord or lifeline to uncertain whether the miners who died last year would have survived had the current proposal been on the books. But Bill Londrigan, head of the Kentucky AFL-CIO, said he doubted whether the proposal would get a fair hearing before the House Natural Resources and Environment Committee, which is chaired by Rep. Jim Gooch. Londrigan Gooch, claimed D-Providence, has so far not allowed the panel to vote on the bill because of his ties to

She said she believes the opposition would grow if a

Rep. Brent Yonts, D-Greenville, said he wanted lawmakers to vote on the bill.

"By not giving them a hearing on the issue, I do not think they are being treated fairly," Yonts said. "This is too important an issue when we have 16 people killed in this state over the last year."

National School Counseling Week 2007

National School Counseling Week 2007, "School Counselors: Helping Students Reach New Heights," was celebrated from Feb. 5-9, 2007, to focus public attention on the unique contribution of professional school counselors within U.S. school systems. National School Counseling Week, sponsored by ASCA, highlights the tremendous impact counselors can have in helping students achieve school success and plan for a career.

The professional school counselor is a certified/licensed educator trained in school counseling with unique qualifications and skills to address all students' academic, personal/social and career development needs. Professional school counselors implement a comprehensive school counseling program that promotes and enhances student achievement. Professional school counselors are employed in elementary, middle/junior high and high schools and in district supervisory_{in} counselor education and post-secondary settings. Their work is differentiated by attention to developmental stages of student growth, including the needs, tasks and student interests related to those stages.

Professional school counselors serve a vital role in maximizing student achievement. Incorporating leadership, advocacy and collaboration, professional school counselors promote equity and access to opportunities and rigorous educational experiences for all students. Professional school counselors support a safe learning environment and work to safeguard the human rights of all members of the school community. Collaborating with other stakeholders to promote student achievement, professional school counselors address the needs of all students through prevention and intervention programs that are a part of a comprehensive school counseling program. Professional school counselors have a master's degree or higher in school counseling or the substantial equivalent, meet the state certification/licensure standards and abide by the laws of the states in which they are employed. They uphold the ethical and professional standards of professional counseling associations and promote the development of the school counseling program based on the following areas of the ASCA National Model: foundation, delivery, management and accountability

This year's ceremony promises to be the drabbest one in years, maybe decades. Two of the most underachieving players in recent memory will play their final game in Bobby Perry and Sheray Thomas, and will do so alongside Lukasz Obrzut, a project who even the most ardent supporter of Kentucky basketball has to admit never panned out.

Perry and Thomas are simply flops. From the outside looking in, it appeared they could develop along the lines of Tayshaun Prince and Antione Walker, or at least poor-men's versions of the former Kentucky stars.

The only thing they've come to be is poor-mouthed. By Kentucky standards, they have been less than stellar. Let's just leave it at that.

SALYERSVILLE - Magoffin County honored four final-year basketballplayers on Senior Night Wednesday night, but couldn't put together a win over the Prestonsburg Blackcats. Prestonsburg fought back from more than one hefty deficit and defeated the homestanding Hornets 63-60.

Each team had its share of adversity. Prestonsburg lost junior guard Bobby Hughes after he fouled out early in the third quarter. Magoffin County lost senior Devin Rice when he injured his ankle later in the same quarter.

Jordan Hall had a game-high 17 points for the Blackcats. Trevor Patton scored 15 points and Chayse Martin added 10, giving Prestonsburg three players in double figures. Mason Vance was Prestonsburg's next leading scorer with eight points.

Prestonsburg won, despite struggling mightily from the free throw line. The Blackcats were 20-for-40 from the charity stripe.

"There were some good things from us," commented Prestonsburg Coach Jackie Day Crisp. "Mason and Taylor stepped up and played well in off of the bench. Trevor posted up better and played stronger and Jordan penetrated better than he did the last time out."

Prestonsburg jumped out to a 10-2 lead and led throughout the first half. Not wanting to lose on Senior Night, Magoffin County managed to tie the game at 37-37 on an Eric Arnett threepointer at the buzzer signaling the end of the first half.

After fouling out, Hughes finished with six points. Nathaniel Stephens, one night after scoring 24 points against Paintsville, also had six points for Prestonsburg. Taylor Clark rounded out the Prestonsburg scoring with four points.

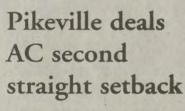

Magoffin County carried a 52-49 lead out of the third quarter. Down the stretch, both teams struggled from the free throw line. Prestonsburg outscoring Magoffin County 17-11 in the final quarter gave the Blackcats the win. With the win, Prestonsburg improved to 11-14.

Arnett and Phillip Francis each had 14 points for Magoffin County. Zach Sparks followed with 11 points for the Hornets. Rice exited the game with nine points. After suffering the setback, Magoffin County fell to 13-14.

PIKEVILLE - For the second time in as many games Tuesday night, a Pike County squad defeated the Allen Central boys' basketball team. After falling to Belfry on Friday night, Allen Central failed to get back in the win column on Tuesday. Host Pikeville outscored Allen Central 20-12 in the third quarter and held on to a lead late in the fourth on its way to a 69-64 win over the Rebels.

Matt Clevenger led Pikeville with 16 points. Bart Williams, now in his second season as Pikeville head coach, enjoyed balanced scoring from his team. Daniel Harmon pushed in 15 points and Tim Honaker had 12 for the Panthers. Sophomore PRESTONSBURG - Prestonsburg High School senior Seth Moore isn't done playing football. Moore, the top kicker in PHS history, signed to play football at nearby Pikeville College on Wednesday morning during a ceremony witnessed by family, friends, teammates and coaches.

Last week, Tyler Layne, another Prestonsburg senior, signed with Pikeville College. Nicholas Jamerson has also returned to the Bear football program. Jamerson had 15 catches for 259 yards (17.3 yards per catch) and five touchdowns for the Bears, helping the team to a 7-3 record and the school's first playoff berth in 2005.

Moore made eight-of-nine field goal attempts during his senior season at Prestonsburg.

Moore helped the Blackcats to a 7-5 record in 2006. Prestonsburg finished runner-up to Belfry in Class 2A, District 8.

MSU baseball team drops opener to Georgetown

TIMES STAFF REPORT

MOREHEAD – Shortstop Bryan Bonner knocked in three runs and three Georgetown pitchers limited Morehead State to five hits as the Tigers spoiled MSU's season opener by posting a 10-2 win Wednesday afternoon at Allen Field.

Georgetown jumped on Eagle starter Henry Mabee for two runs in the first inningon Bonner's two-run double. The Tigers extended the lead to 7-0 with three runs in the third and two runs in the fourth before the Eagles finally plated their only two runs on a Nick Bobrowski double in the bottom of the fourth inning.

The Tigers tacked on two insurance runs in the fifth inning and one in the eighth. Georgetown starter Brandon Slusher picked up his second win in as many games in 2007, allowing four hits and two runs in four innings pitched. Nick Roberts pitched four hitless innings, and Anthony Williams pitched a scoreless ninth.

For the love of God, I've endured four years of this. No way I can do three more.

That brings us to Obrzut, who came in the same season as the recently-departed Shagari Alleyne, forming more than 14 feet of center who couldn't get the job done at any of the Mid-South Conference schools.

Obrzut is quite a story. Coming here from Poland for a year of schooling before coming to Kentucky, he went home for the Christmas of 2005 for the first time in about five years. He's stuck it out, got his education paid for and that counts for something.

Unfortunately, nobody in the Commonwealth tunes in religiously to watch him do homework. On the floor, he's just never developed. It's too bad, because he could have really helped this program, particularly the last couple of years.

So with that said and nobody much interested (I'd doubting many are still reading, to tell the truth), I have an idea of my own for Wednesday night.

With nobody much interested in senior night, I say it's time for the University of Kentucky to hold the very first Junior Night.

That's right, Junior Night. Same idea, same concept, same cheesy paper hoops.

But instead of saying goodbye to the seniors, let's bid a long-overdue farewell to one of the great flops in Kentucky history, the vaunted freshman class of 2004-05.

I think this could work. Think about this:

Nobody wants to celebrate Ramel Bradley more than, well, Ramel Bradley. The self-professed best shooter in the Southeastern Conference has decided he's the only player worthy of touching the basketball in anything resembling a clutch situation, a brain cramp that coincided with the Cats' recent three-game losing streak in SEC play.

I knew Bradley loved the ball, but even I was stunned to read that in the Florida loss two weeks ago, he was the only

Kentucky player to touch the ball on the offensive end of the floor in the final 1:47 of the game

Nobody, not even the great Michael Jeffrey Jordan, should be able to make that claim.

■ It's just flat high-time to put Joe Crawford out of his misery. I've been a Kentucky fan for longer than I want to admit being alive, and in that long period of time, I've never ever seen a player wearing blue and white who looked so miserable. I mean seriously, this guy hasn't smiled since he went back home in the middle of his freshman season.

The sad thing is I think he's pretty popular amongst the ever-negative fan base. He seems to be a likeable guy who can play a little bit. Clearly he doesn't get enough shots, and it's up to you to decide if he's to blame or if it's the game plan (or, just as likely, Bradley's ever-increasing aversion to passing the basketball).

I've thought since early last season he'd wind up the go-to guy on this team, but with precious few exceptions, it just hasn't happened.

■ If we have Junior Night, maybe Randolph Morris could be cleared for the long-overdue nap. Seriously, have you ever seen a person who looked less interested in, oh, I don't know, breathing than him? This guy looks like it's always a chore just to keep his eyes open.

And before you say he's playing well, know this: His 20-point, 10-board effort against LSU without Big Baby was his first 20-point game since the Cats played Houston on Jan. 3.

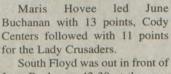

That makes it the first one during league play.

And he's ready for the NBA? Probably not nearly as ready as most Kentuckians are for him to be in the league.

So there you go. Wednesday night, Kentucky needs to show it's still on the cutting edge of the basketball world and host the first ever Junior Night. It's never been done, but long overdue. And for the first time in a while, it could generate some honest-to-God enthusiasm in Rupp Arena. So whadaya say ... who's with me?

Everybody? That's what I thought.

Eventful Speedweeks shows NASCAR needs new rule book

by JENNA FRYER ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. – It was a split-second decision that NASCAR could get neither right nor wrong.

As the cars tumbled across the track in the Daytona 500's closing moments, series officials had to make a tough choice.

They could throw a caution flag immediately, giving Mark Martin a sentimental victory while denying Kevin Harvick a chance to race to the finish. Or they could let them race on – even as a seven-car demolition derby exploded behind them – in a frenzied final stretch that will be remembered as one of the best in NASCAR history.

NASCAR went for the drama.

When the cars crossed the finish line, the cheating scandal that ensnared five teams and tainted preparations for the Great American Race was forgotten – at least for a while.

By allowing Harvick and Martin to race to the checkered flag, giving Harvick his first Daytona 500 victory and dropping Martin to 0-for-23, NASCAR created a whole new controversy.

"We get criticized for everything we do, and this is no exception," competition director Robin Pemberton said Monday. "If we throw the flag too early, people are mad that we kept Harvick from winning. If we throw it too late, people are mad that Mark Martin didn't win.

"It's hard. It's always hard. All we can do is make the best decisions that we can in that moment."

But in that moment NASCAR slightly changed its own rules.

In the old days, drivers raced to the flag when the caution came out. That practice was stopped in 2003, when NASCAR determined it was too dangerous to allow speeding cars to zip past an accident scene.

Now, the field is frozen and all cars must slow down when a caution comes out. Multi-car mayhem generally warrants a caution. But as Kyle Busch, Matt Kenseth and Jeff Gordon bumped and banged across the track just a few hundred yards from the finish, NASCAR let the racing go on.

It wasn't until Clint Bowyer flipped, crossing the finish line on his roof as flames ripped through his car, that NASCAR finally waved the yellow flag. By then, it was too late for

By then, it was too late for Martin. Harvick already had nosed ahead, beating him across the finish line by the length of his car hood. The .020 margin of victory was the closest in the history of electronic scoring at Daytona.

Martin initially was irate over his radio, criticizing NASCAR for not throwing the caution.

"I can't believe they waited!" he wailed.

Still, he refused to blast NASCAR for its decision – which might have cost Martin is last shot at a Daytona 500 victory. He's easing into retirement and is racing a partial schedule this season, with no firm plans for his future.

"No one wants to hear a grown man cry," the 48-yearold Martin said. "I'm not going to cry about it. This is the end. They made the decision. That's what we're going to live with."

That's just how it goes in NASCAR, where the rules can be a moving target and enforcement is almost always arbitrary.

On any other lap at any other race, it's likely the caution would have come out the tion came out. That practice moment Busch and Kenseth was stopped in 2003, when made contact.

Arguing that it was OK because it was the last lap isn't right, either. In 2005, NASCAR froze the field on the final lap at Talladega Superspeedway because of a f spinning car way behind the ! leaders. Tony Stewart crossed the finish line first, but Dale Jarrett got the win because he o was ahead when the field was o frozen.

Different circumstances related to different interpretations.

It's why Johnny Benson wasn't flagged for driving below the yellow line in Friday night's Truck Series race, even though NASCAR has made that part of the track a strict no-no. But NASCAR deemed Benson's move legal.

It's why in a week that saw six people thrown out of the garage for cheating, Jeff Gordon received only a slap on the wrist when his car failed an inspection.

It's why Elliott Sadler and Scott Riggs were penalized for infractions that car owner Ray Evernham insisted are not even addressed in the rule book.

And it's why Michael Waltrip wasn't kicked out of the Daytona 500 after NASCAR found a fuel additive in his new Toyota Camry. The transgression was so blatant Pemberton said he was personally insulted. NASCAR cracked down on Waltrip with stiff penalties, but his presence in the race infuriated rival drivers.

The one constant of Speedweeks? Every incident proved it's past time for NASCAR to have a very clear rule book. Otherwise, everything will always be arbitrary – even fantastic finishes like Sundays.

BACK IN THE WIN JMN: Kentucky 70, LSU 63

by JEFFREY McMURRAY ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON - Kentucky's fans may have been concerned by their team's flirtation with some dubious history Tuesday night. Kentucky's coach insists he was not.

Even when the Wildcats were down 16 to Louisiana State, the lastplace team in the Southeastern Conference's Western Division, Tubby Smith says he was confident his team would pull through. His reasoning: While the shots were ugly, the looks were relatively good.

"I thought we played hard," Smith said. "When you're not making the shots, it looks like you're playing lethargic."

Kentucky certainly woke up when it counted - the final five minutes - to snap a three-game losing streak with a 70-63 victory.

The Wildcats (19-8, 8-5 SEC) hadn't lost four straight since the 1990 season when they dropped five in a row. The players had no interest in making that kind of history, even though some said they didn't know about it.

"I probably couldn't take that either - four losses," guard Ramel Bradley said.

Terry Martin's jumper tied the game at 58 with five minutes left, but Bradley followed with an underhanded layup to put Kentucky in front for good and start a 10-0 Kentucky run.

Randolph Morris had 20 points and 10 rebounds for his ninth double-double of the season. He also became the 53rd Wildcat to surpass 1,000 points in his career. Jodie Meeks matched a career high with 18 points, and Bradley added 16.

LSU (14-13, 3-10) dropped its 11th straight at Rupp Arena and almost certainly must win the SEC tournament to advance to the NCAA tourney a year after making the Final Four.

However, LSU certainly gave the Wildcats a scare, even without its leading scorer. Glen Davis didn't make the trip to Lexington because of a muscle strain in his right leg that he suffered last week against Arkansas.

admirably in Davis' absence, leading the Tigers with 19 points. Martin added 16, but LSU couldn't generate much additional offense.

The Wildcats scored from the field only once in the opening eight minutes, missing 11 of their first 12 shots before Morris banked in a second-chance layup.

LSU wasn't much better but used a 10-0 run to build an early 13-4 lead. The Tigers stretched the lead to 16 points with just over seven minutes left, but the Wildcats chipped away - and got a big boost from a technical foul on LSU coach John Brady.

Brady's technical, assessed for arguing a five-second call, resulted

Tasmin Mitchell filled in in five quick points for Meeks, who made both free throws and hit a 3pointer on Kentucky's extra possession

"I'm 52 years old," Brady said. "I started coaching when I'm 21. It's the first time in the history of my coaching career I've gotten a technical foul sitting on the bench.'

Morris hit one of two free throws with 10 seconds to go in the half to cut LSU's lead to 31-30 at the break. Bobby Perry opened the second half with a 3 to give Kentucky its first lead.

"I didn't really notice we were down 16," Morris said. "That's pretty much how we think. No matter how much we're down, we don't let it affect how we think.'

'Academic incentives vary at Kentucky's two largest universities

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON - Academic incentives are a big part of athletic contracts and they vary from school to school. Most of the head coaches at the University of Kentucky, however, don't have them.

For coaches at UK, academic incentives are the exception, not the rule. They are included in contracts of the basketball and football coaches, yet 73 percent of UK's head coaches don't have them, the Lexington Herald-Leader reported.

UK Athletic Director Mitch Barnhart's academic incentives are not laid out specifically, but are graded through a general performance bonus given directly by President Lee T. Todd Jr.

At the University of Louisville,

Jurich's contract lists seven different incentives for GPA and graduation rate improvements.

UK football coach Rich Brooks' original contract had no specific incentives about keeping athletes' grades up. His new one does provide incentives for academic progress and graduation rate, including $25,000 if the football team gets a GPA of 2.75 or better.

Barnhart said he added those incentives because of new requirements from the NCAA over academic progress. Schools that do not make sufficient academic progress under the NCAA rules could lose athletic scholarships.

"There was no penalty before," Barnhart said.

That's true across the country, says Tennessee's Debby Jennings, associhowever, Athletic Director Tom ate athletic director for media relations

"Losing scholarships can really do some damage, so they've got to put a little of the onus on the coach," she said. "It's very public, and the coach is more under fire than they used to be.'

Jurich's contract reflects the priorities of UofL, said President Jim Ramsey.

"We as an athletic program must be committed to the overall success of student athletes, most of whom will not play professionally," Ramsey said. "We could do better with our commitment to the academic performance of our students.'

Ramsey said he bases his oversight of athletics from what he learned working at the University of North Carolina. He looks at academics, fiscal management, integrity, gender equity and competitiveness.

"None of these is more important than the academic success of our athletes.

That's why Jurich's contract is so detailed about improving graduation rates for athletes. He gets a sliding scale of incentives for improving graduation rates, then also can be rewarded for improvement in overall GPAs of student athletes

At UK, volleyball Coach Craig Skinner would get an extra month's salary if his team has a 3.0 or better GPA and 90 percent of the team meets annual NCAA satisfactory progress requirements toward getting a degree.

For meeting both of those academic standards, Tubby Smith, who will make close to $2 million in base pay this year, could earn another $50,000. Women's basketball coach Mickie DeMoss would get $10,000 for the same thing.

On the other hand, UK baseball coach John Cohen's contract doesn't have any academic or performance bonuses. Instead, he will be awarded 10 percent of the increase in ticket revenue for growth beyond the 2005 level.

"John's teams have always performed well academically, and his area that he wants to grow the most is the resources to help the program succeed," Barnhart said.

Men's soccer coach Ian Collins, hired by Barnhart in 2005, gets incentives for championships and ticket sales, but has no academic incentives, according to his contract. That's in line with most other sports, which feature a performance bonus for championships, but no incentive for better academics.

Pikeville, Rio Grande split diamond doubleheader

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE - The Pikeville College baseball team handed Don Ashby his first win as its coach on Monday, winning the first game of a doubleheader over Rio Grande 8-5. But the Bears could not pull off the sweep, dropping the nightcap at Davis Park by a 5-1 margin.

Lefty Matt DeBlauw (Broadview Heights, Ohio) looked sharp early on, but got into some trouble in the top of the third. With the game scoreless, Rio shortstop Kenta Sato sent an inside fastball soaring over the fence an left field for a two-run homer, giving his club a 2-0 lead.

Back-to-back doubles to start the fourth tied the score at 2. With senior Donald Tardy (Ellenwood, Ga.) on third following a steal, freshman Kevin Fleming (Logan, W.Va.) executed a perfect squeeze play, scoring Tardy with the tying run.

With two men down, the Bears proceeded to pound out four straight singles, capped off by a two-run single from sophomore Ryan Bartolon (Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio), which made. it a 5-1 Bears advantage.

The Bears would add three more in the bottom of fifth on two-run triple from sophomore Obed Quiles (Narajito, Puerto Rico), who trotted home when an errant throw from Sato went into the Bears' dugout. The 8-1 lead was more than enough for DeBlauw (1-0), who managed to hold the Redmen to two runs over five innings, giving up four hits and striking out five. Sophomore right-hander Pete Kefalos (Barberton, Ohio) finished the final two innings, striking out two and surrendering three runs on three hits.

"I'm especially proud of our guys after that effort," Ashby said. "This was pretty special."

Quiles led the way for the Bears, going 3-3 with three runs scored, while Bartolon led the club with two RBI. Adam Collins (Paintsville) and catcher Josh Adams (Pikeville) also had a pair of hits in the win.

But the Bears could not ride that off senior southpaw Tony Preston (Louisville) in the bottom of the first, giving Rio an early 1-0 lead.

The Bears would answer, however, when senior Collins led off the second inning with a triple, then scored on a single by Kevin Fleming, tying the score at 1-1.

But Preston would run into trouble in the top of the third. Leadoff hitter Brad Konrad struck out, but the ball skipped past Adams. Two batters later, Konrad was home with the goahead run, courtesy of an RBI-single by Kyle Moore. The Redmen would add another run to make it 3-1, but the damage was severe.

The lead proved plenty for Rio of offspeed pitches, inducing seven groundball outs and picking off three runners. The Bears would not manage to get a runner in scoring position after the second inning.

Preston (0-1) was solid in the loss for Pikeville, going the distance, giving up only two earned runs on six hits, while striking out 10 and walking seven, while tossing an impressive 146 pitches.

Quiles again led the Bears' offense, picking up a pair of hits.

"We made typical mistakes for a young team," said Ashby. "We simply got too anxious and stopped taking pitches and working counts, which is what we did in the other two

Allender, Campbellsville too much for Bears

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE - Junior forward Zach Allender scored 20 of his gamehigh 32 points in the first half as No. 10 Campbellsville knocked off Pikeville 76-59 Saturday afternoon.

The win, combined with Cumberlands falling to Georgetown this afternoon, 69-60 put Campbellsville – under the direction of of head coach Keith Adkins, a Paintsville native - in second-place in the Mid-South Conference standings alone with two games remaining Allender also had seven rebounds and a pair of assists in the win, and got 18 points and eight rebounds from teammate Jason Moore.

Pikeville (12-16, 3-5) got three made free throws with 9:32 left in the first half from freshman Brandon May to take a 19-18 lead. But from there, the Tigers outscored the Bears 21-7, with Moore and Allender scoring seven apiece, to take a comfortable 39-26 lead at the break.

A 9-0 run that ended with a layup by senior Will Holloman got the Bears within 10 at 59-49 with 6:56 left as senior Jarrod Adkins came off the bench to hit back-to-back threes, but it would get no closer, as the Tigers hit 8-of-11 from the line the rest of the way to secure the win.

Sophomore Bo Harris tossed in 14 and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead the Bears. Senior Will Holloman had 11 to go with a team-high four assists, while senior Donald Thomas had 10 points.

Scott County's Hatton signs with Pikeville

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE - The Pikeville College volleyball team will be get-ting stronger next season as Scott County High School standout Kayla Hatton will join Coach Robert Staggs' crew.

Hatton officially signed with Pikeville on Thursday.

The 5-8 defensive specialist was a valuable asset for the Cardinals her senior year and brings an impressive resume to Pikeville. She was a cocaptain, team MVP, MVP of her district championship, and a member of the All-Region team.

During her final prep season she had 22 kills, 17 aces and 15 assists.

"We're very excited to welcome Kayla to the Bear volleyball family," said an enthusiastic Staggs. "She comes from a winning tradition at Scott County and I'm hopeful that she'll be able to carry that experience over into the college game and be a huge boost to our program."Still, there is something else about Hatton that has Staggs impressed.

"She's the first player from her high school to sign a volleyball scholarship," Staggs noted. "So, that tells you what kind of talent she has."

The Lady Bears, which struggled as a young team this past season, will return all of its starters. The addition of Hatton, according to Staggs, seems like it can only make the team stronger.

"We didn't lose any seniors or any our starters," Staggs added. "With Kayla coming in, and with our young players gaining some valuable experience last season, I think our future is pretty bright.'

Kinzer race team competes in Raceweeks 2007

TIMES STAFF REPORT

- The Kinzer ALLEN Motorsports team and Allen driver Brandon Kinzer recently returned home from a weeklong stay in Florida as they competed in Raceweeks' 2007 at the Volusia Speedway Park in Barberville, Fla., Feb. 12-17. Against some of the stiffest Dirt Late Model competition in the country, Kinzer performed admirably behind the wheel of his No. 18 GRT machine. After narrowly missing the A-Main on three different occasions and waiting through a pair of rain-outs, Kinzer finally broke through during the $10,000-to-win finale at the Daytona Beach venue Saturday evening.

Kinzer timed in a disappointing fifty-fifth fastest in qualifying for the 360 OTC World of Outlaws Late Model Series show on Saturday night, but rallied his machine to a sixth-place finish in the heat race and a second place effort in the B-Main. His runner-up performance to Dirt Late Model Hall of Famer Billy Moyer in the consolation event earned him the right to compete in the 50-lap feature race. After rolling off 22nd on the starting grid for the A-Main, Kinzer completed 49 green flag laps and was credited with a 24th place finish in the final rundown.

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

INDIANAPOLIS – Beginning with the 2007-08 soccer season, if a player enters the game improperly equipped, and it is discovered by an official, the coach will be cautioned (yellow card).

This addition to Rule 4-3 was one of four major rules changes approved by the National Federation of State High School Associations (NFHS) Soccer Rules Committee at its January 28-29 meeting in Indianapolis. The rules changes were subsequently approved by the NFHS Board of Directors.

"Rule 4-3 previously placed responsibility on the coach to ensure that each of his or her players is properly equipped," said Tim Flannery, NFHS assistant director and liaison to the committee. "This change will now provide a consequence for coaches who fail to comply with the rule."

As a result of this addition to Rule 4-3, a portion of Rule 5-2-2-d-3 was deleted that required the official to examine the uniform and equipment of each player to ensure compliance with the rules. While the legality of player equipment is determined by the referee, the head coach has the responsibility to ensure that players are properly equipped.

A change in shinguard requirements approved last year aimed at reducing the risk of injury has been delayed one year. Instead of 2007-08, shinguards must meet the National Operating Committee on Standards for Athletic Equipment (NOCSAE) standard effective with the 2008-09 season.

"Not all manufacturers could guarantee that shinguards would be available prior to the start of the fall (2007) season in all areas of the country," Flannery said. "This will give manufacturers more time to adequately supply these types of shinguards to local equipment suppliers."

Bob Lombardi, chair of the NFHS Soccer Rules Committee and associate executive director of the Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association, said although the requirement has been delayed one year, the eventual implementation will be a positive step for high school soccer.

"Players no longer will be able to wear inappropriate, undersized shinguards," Lombardi said. "Manufacturers are required to produce shinguards that will minimize risk to players. Correctly sized and safety-regulated shinguards should greatly assist in the reduction of leg injuries in high school soccer."

The new NOCSAE shinguards will be stamped or labeled with the NOCSAE logo. They will specify which size is correct for a particular sized player, making it easy for players, coaches and officials to differentiate which shinguards are to be worn.

The final major rules change involves placement of the team benches on opposite sides of the field. Although team benches are on the same side of the field in most cases, Rule 1-5 does allow an exception for teams to be placed on opposite sides of the field. Beginning next year, when teams are placed on opposite sides of the field, they shall be placed diagonally across from each other.

"With this change, substitutes will be able to be seen easier since they should no longer be standing in front of the team benches," Flannery said.

Several editorial changes were made, with the most significant ones in Rules 1-4-1 and 5-3-1. The rules committee clarified in Rule 1-4-1 that portable goals should be anchored at least two yards in front of the base of the existing football goal posts, not two yards in front of the uprights. Rule 5-3-1 clarifies the mechanic that is to be used by officials when coaches or bench personnel receive a subsequent caution for misconduct. The correct mechanic calls for showing a vellow card first, followed by a red card, as opposed to showing the yellow and red cards together.

Soccer is the fifth-most popular sport for boys and girls at the high school level. According to the 2005-06 High School Athletics Participation Survey, 358,935 boys are involved in soccer and 321,555 girls participate in the sport.

THROUGH MY EYES

I know I promised last week to catch you all up on the latest happenings in my busy family's life, but I guess I lied. This week has turned out to be just as busy, if not busier, than the last one! Yikes! And it's still wintertime out there. I can only imagine how busy things are going to get when spring rolls around and everyone gets back out busy as new little bumblebees. Oh, well what can I say? Until next week, when things

One student bravely replied,

Students from Carl D. Perkins Job Corps helped package the trees for the give-away to area residents.

2007 FCCD annual Tree give-away

While state and national leaders discuss global warming and other environmental issues, Floyd Countians recently pulled together to make a difference when the Floyd County Conservation District held its Annual Tree Give-Away in early February. Around 8,000 tree seedlings were distributed this year. With the help of the Carl D. Perkins Job Corps Center, the District was able to prepare the trees for give-away. Residents from all over the county showed up to get the free trees that will help to combat soil erosion, provide refuge for wildlife, and beautify our natural environment.

James Staggs, along with students from South Floyd High School, distributed trees to that area of the county.

The Floyd County Conservation District would like to thank the organizations that Winchester native with Floyd County ties stars in newly released 'Ghost Rider'

by Kathy J. Prater FEATURES EDITOR

"It's all pretty exciting," said Joan Chaffin, of McDowell, in reference to the fact that her son-in-law, Matthew Long, a native of Winchester, is now starring in one of the hottest movies to be released thus far this year. Long, who is married to Chaffin's daughter, Lora, a 1997 graduate of South Floyd High School, is starring in the just released blockbuster,"Ghost Rider."

"Matt actually gets to play a young Nicolas Cage in the film," said local minister Arnold Turner, Lora's uncle. "He has about the first entire twenty minutes or so of the movie," Turner said.

"At one point, they show Matt on a motorcycle, wearing a helmet, speeding down the road," said his mother-inlaw. "Then, and it's pretty cool they way they do it, his face sort of morphs into Nicolas Cage's face and then he (Cage) takes over the character as an older person," she said.

Though that scene is Matthew's last in the film, Joan shares that talks are already underway for a Ghost Rider sequel and that Matthew's contract calls for him to be in that film, as well. "Right now, he's on location filming a movie with Amanda Bynes," Joan said. "It's pretty exciting the way things are taking off for him.'

Long, a 1998 graduate of George Rogers Clark High School, in Winchester, displayed a natural talent for acting at a young age and was encouraged by his teachers there to study theater and to pursue a career in acting. He studied theater arts at Western Kentucky University, graduating in 2002. It was at WKU that he met his future wife, Lora. Lora also graduated from WKU and went on to pursue a career in newscasting in Michigan. "She enjoyed that," said her mother, "but now she's at home. Matt's career is keeping them both busy at this

The power to change our world

by Marla Cilley

Today has had me thinking about the memories we will leave with our families

Though we may not aspire to beheads of state, we can still take babysteps to help make a difference in our world. We are the shining example in our homes. Our personality, whether it is positive or negative, flows through our family. It is up to us to set the tone in our home. If we are grouchy, then our babies will be grouchy, our critters will be fussy and spouses will go hide. our Isn't it better to have our babies remember us for the twinkle in our eyes when we say "Yes!" when asked if we will come and play? And all because our homes are not weighing heavily on our hearts! Now I have huge puddles rolling down my face. Life is too short to not live it to the fullest! When we are dead and gone our babies are not going to remember how clean our homes were, but they will remember that their mother or father was happy and that they filled their homes with love.

I just heard the music "Going Home" from Antonin Dvorak's New World Symphony on TV. I turned off the TV and put on my favorite radio station to hear mine and Robert's favorite symphony by Camille Saint-Saens; The Organ Symphony. That beautiful music brought back a touching memory of our first kiss. I guess it is those little memories that stay with us all of our lives. My sweetie choreographed our first kiss to the 4th movement when the organist pulls out all the stops on the organ and fills the air with the most wonderful sounds. We don't listen to it often but when we do we are touched by its beauty and power. I feel that this was a God Breeze to affirm this message to you!

We all have the power to change the world even if it is just our own little neck of the woods. Our attitude is everything. I want for you what I have Peace! Peace in knowing that I will be remembered for my smile and my positive, contagious spirit! I live by these rules:

Don't sweat the small stuff; what doesmatter doesn't n't matter. Laugh every day even if it is at yourself.

And love like there is no tomorrow! We all have the power to change the world in our own little neck of the woods; it doesn't matter if you are uestion: My young grandson has recently been diagnosed with Asperger's Syndrome. Could you explain to me exactly what Asperger's is? His usage of words and the way he relates to us shows that he is highly intelligent. He loves numbers, and he does follow instructions. However, it is hard sometimes to get him to do his homework because he loses interest. Will he get over this as he gets older? Any help you could give so that we would understand this better would be appreciated.

nswer: Asperger's Syndrome (AS) is offi-Lcially part of the autism spectrum of disorders. In general, these conditions are characterized by impairment in language and communication skills plus repetitive patterns of thought and behavior. Asperger's, however, is kind of an uneasy fit into this classification. While children with AS show marked deficiencies in social and communication skills as well as exhibiting autistic-like behaviors, they have normal to superior intelligence and language skills. This sounds like your description of your grandson. By contrast, children with true autism usually lose any language that develops before the onset of autism.

Martha A. Simpson, D.O., M.B.A. Associate Professor of Family Medicine

In addition to their excellent language skills, these children usually have formal speech patterns. Children with AS also exhibit behavioral rituals and poor interaction with peers as well as socially and emotionally inappropriate behavior. They tend to have poor motor skills and muscular coordination.

Asperger's Syndrome - 'Little Jamily OHIO Medicine Professors' lacking social skills

The primary presenting symptom of AS is an obsessive interest in an object or topic to the exclusion of almost everything else. For example, some children with AS have become experts on railroad engines, the passenger list of the Titanic, clocks, the philosophical nature of time, deep-fat fryers, the makes and models of cars, and fast-food restaurants.

Children with AS have an insatiable desire to know everything about their topic of interest. They will talk about little else. They will lecture their family and schoolmates on that topic. In fact, Hans Asperger, the Austrian physician who first bears his name, called these children his "little professors."

The diagnosis of AS can be difficult because there is no one standardized test for AS. Also, AS can be hard to differentiate from other behavioral or developmental disorders like hyperactivity(ADD) and high-functioning autism. The core group of symptoms that the doctor uses to diagnose AS are abnormal eye contact, aloofness, failure to turn when called by name, failure to use gestures to point or show something, lack of interactive play and lack of interest in peers. At least one of these behaviors plus repetitive or restrictive behavior must be present before the age of 3 to make this diagnosis.

Treatment of AS is geared toward the presenting symptoms. A good program is individualized for the child and his or her interests. There are no medications for AS, but coexwrote about this syndrome that now isting problems may need to be treated. Speech therapy can be very helpful for these kids. They are taught such things as how to react to social cues and the kinds of responses that are appropriate to use in various social situations.

> AS is a lifelong disorder, so your grandson won't outgrow it. However, afflicted adults can lead productive lives, but they may need continuing counseling. There is research going on to find the cause of AS and to develop new treatments.

Long was quoted as saying, "I'm glad I grew up where I did, it's a great place...it gave me a moral grounding you can't get in lots of places" in an article that ran in the September 10, 2004 edition of The Courier-Journal, when he had just landed his first starring role, in a WB network series entitled "Jack and Bobby." Though the series was fairly short-lived, running for only one season, it gave Long the national exposure he needed to jumpstart his career.

Joan recently joined her daughter and son-in-law for the New York City premiere of Ghost Rider just last week. "It was exciting," she said.

"Very exciting. To see all those people, such good actors. And to see how exciting it was for Matt and Lora. They were as nervous and excited about it all as I was, I think," she said.

"The movie is doing really great, from what I'm told," she said. "And I hope everyone gets the chance to Paintsville and Pikeville.

"Matt's a good boy," she said. "He's not a run-around, he's very grounded with very good morals. Just the kind of son-in-law you would want for your daughter."

New Arrival

those gold stars!

Remember this when you're trying to get your children to eat their vegetables. They aren't going to be telling you how much they love their green beans! Perhaps a little reward is in order, like a choosing a toy at the dollar store at the end of the week for eating as many bites of their vegetable that was on their plate each night as their age. In other words, if your child is 3, having him eat 3 bites will earn him a gold star. Put a gold star on the calendar and at the end of the week, ta da! He gets a reward!

This isn't bribing! This is rewarding excellent behavior. You are teaching your child life skills when they learn to eat their vegetables. And vegetable eating is very important for understanding the significance of nutrition and how that will impact him or her for the rest of their lives.

This week, sit down with your children and give them the opportunity to earn a reward! Teach them that vegetables build muscles (ask to feel your child's muscles before they eat their veggies and after—let them know you think you felt them grow!) and make sure you're setting a good example, too! Your child won't eat his vegetables if you don't.

Remember—gold stars are for everyone, young and old!

Here's my recipe for Gold Star Cheesy Broccoli Soup—a great warmer upper, chock full of phytonutrients. Enjoy!

- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1 large bunch broccoli
- 3 medium potatoes, peeled
- and diced
- 6 cups chicken stock
- 1 1/4 cups milk (lower fat grams by using skim) • 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese (can use less) • Salt and pepper to taste • 1 cup low-fat cheddar cheese, shredded (can use less)

Melt butter in a 4-6-quart soup pot. Saute onion until softened, about three minutes. Cut broccoli into flowerets and thinly slice tender upper portion of stems. Add to pot along with potatoes and chicken stock. Cover and simmer until potatoes and broccoli are tender, about 20 minutes.

Puree mixture in several batches in food processor or blender. Return puree to soup pot and stir in milk, Parmesan cheese, salt and pepper to taste. Gently heat (a hard boil will cause the soup to break and the milk to turn to curds!)

To serve, ladle 8-ounce servings into broiler-safe dishes. Sprinkle each bowl with a little bit of shredded cheddar cheese, put it on the broiler for a second and serve, all hot and bubbly. Your family is going to love it!

color. But you cannot measure darkness. A simple ray of light can break into a world of darkness and illuminate it. How can you know how dark a certain space is? You measure the amount of light present. Isn't this correct? Darkness, then, is a term used by man to describe what happens when there is no light present."

Photogenic baby

Regan Kinley Bryant, the nine-month-old daughter of Kevin and Amanda Bryant, of Weeksbury, was named "Most Photogenic" in the Wee Baby Miss Sweetheart Pageant, held Sunday, February 18, 2007, at South Floyd High School. Her family sends her a big "Congratulations!"

Wedding

Collins-Prater

Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey and Sherry Collins, of Prestonsburg, are pleased to announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Ashley Nicole Collins, to Joshua Prater, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary and Sheila Prater, of Prestonsburg.

The bride-to-be is a 2005 graduate of Prestonsburg High School. She will graduate this coming spring from the National College of Pikeville as a pharmacist technician. She is currently employed with Man Power, of Prestonsburg.

The prospective groom is also a 2005 graduate of Prestonsburg High School. He is employed by Star Construction Company.

The wedding ceremony will take place on Saturday, March 3, 2007, at 12 p.m., at the Fitzpatrick First Baptist Church, in Prestonsburg.

The gracious custom of an open church wedding will be observed.

define who we are, then we can only assume that God is evil."

This quieted the student and he did not respond to the professor's hypothetical summation. The professor, now quite pleased with himself, boasted to his class that he had proven once more that "religious faith" was a myth.

Another student then raised his hand and said, "May I ask you a question, professor?" "Of course," the professor replied.

The student then stood up and asked, "Professor, does cold exist?"

"What kind of question is this? Of course it exists," the professor replied. "Have you never been cold?"

The other students in the classroom snickered at the young man's question.

The young man, however, persisted, replying, "In fact sir, cold does not exist. According to the laws of physics, what we consider cold is, in reality, the absence of heat. Everybody and every object is susceptible to study when it has or transmits energy, and heat is what makes a body or matter have or transmit energy. Absolute zero (-460F) is the total absence of heat. And all matter becomes inert and incapable of reaction at that temperature. Cold, therefore, does not exist. We have merely created this word to describe how we feel if we have no heat."

The student then continued, "Professor, does darkness exist?"

The professor responded, "Yes, of course it does."

The student replied, "Once again you are wrong, sir. Darkness does not exist, either. Darkness is, in reality, the absence of light. Light we can study, but not darkness. In fact, we can use Newton's prism to break white light into many colors and study the various wave lengths of each Then, the young man asked the professor,"Sir, does evil exist?"

Now uncertain, the professor responded, "Of course, as I have already said. We see it everyday. It is in the daily examples of man's inhumanity to man. It is in the multitude of crime and violence everywhere in the world. These manifestations are nothing else but evil."

To this the student replied, "Evil does not exist, sir, or at least it does not exist unto itself. Evil is simply the absence of God. It is just like darkness and cold, a word that man has created to describe the absence of God. God did not create evil. Evil is the result of what happens when man does not have God's love present in his 'heart. It's like the cold that comes when there is no heat, or the darkness that comes when there is no light."

The student then sat down and the professor said no more.

The young man's name? Albert Einstein (Reputed to be a true story.)

Sentence

During the sentencing phase, the jury learned that at the time of Combs' arrest, he was on supervised probation for a drug trafficking conviction he had received just two months before. An additional 10-year sentence was recommended in light of this, which the jury again recommended run consecutively with his other two convictions.

Formal sentencing for Burns and Combs is set for April 6.

Floyd County Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Wayne Taylor said the convictions were a compliment to the jury's determination to carefully look at the evidence provided following a thorough investigation by the state police and Kentucky Vehicle Enforcement officers.

"This is a sentence that is consistent with a lot of drug trafficking convictions that we obtain, so we're obviously very pleased," Taylor said.

The case resulted from several complaints of drug activity at Burns' residence registered by neighbors on Aug. 18, 2005. When responding to the complaints, four state police and vehicle enforcement officers testified that two state police officers went to the back door to request permission to search the home after two other officers had witnessed Combs snorting a white powdery substance off of a table for more than a minute while looking through a front window. Burns answered the door and gave them permission to enter and search.

When the officers entered the home, Burns' young daughter yelled, "It's the police," and three of the officers testified they saw Combs throw a small bag of cocaine into the trash and wipe the powder off the table in an effort to conceal evidence. Another man was present at the time of the arrests, but officers testified there was no doubt it was Combs they saw through the window because he was not wearing a shirt and had white powder on his pants when they arrested him.

Burns, who was the only witness called by the defense, was forced to admit she was in possession of methadone illegally after admitting the methadone found in a drawer was hers and she had no prescription for it. She also admitted that she had lied during prior questioning about a scale that was found in her closet. Three scales were found in her bedroom, two in a drawer by her bed which she testified were hers, but she denied owning the scale found in her closet. She later recanted that the scale was not hers after she admitted that a small blue box, which was filled with over $2,000 she testified was hers, was found to be the box in which the scale had originally been sold in.

Taylor said his office is very pleased with the outcome of the trial and said it will send a message to the community that drugs are not welcome in the county.

"I think the verdict against both of these defendants continues to send a good message out that we are against drugs, and with sentences like these it will make people think twice," Taylor said.

of the Drug Enforcement and Professional Practices Branch within the Kentucky Cabinet for Health and Family Services in Frankfort, will be on hand to explain how KASPER works, why it is an important and necessary tool, and to discuss some of the success stories the program had produced in the Fifth Congressional District.

"It is working, and working very well," said Attorney General Greg Stumbo, "We have slowed them (drug dealers) down greatly."

h The KASPER system tracks all controlled substance prescriptions dispensed within the state. A KASPER report lists all scheduled prescriptions prescribed to an individual over a specified time period, usually a couple of months, as well as who prescribed the medication and where it was dispensed.

The system is not meant to prevent people from obtaining their prescriptions; it is used as a source of information for doctors and pharmacists as well as an investigative tool for law enforcement officials to track potential drug dealers.

To make the reports more accessible, Kentucky became the first state in the country to initiate an on-line version of the system in March 2005 known as eKASPER (Enhanced Kentucky All Schedule Prescription Electronic Reporting). The on-line system allows authorized users to track prescriptions 24 hours a day and receive requested information within 15 minutes.

The Kentucky State Senate passed a resolution on Tuesday to further expand the KASPER program by calling for Kentucky to enter into agreements with state's around the country to share drug monitoring information with one another if each state's programs are compatible with one another. The resolution would prohibit any person from obtaining a prescription for a controlled substance without having formed a valid doctor-patient relationship, at which time the patient would be physically examined and a medical history of the patient obtained. Sen. Ray Jones, D-Pikeville, introduced the legislation and said expanding the program will prevent drug abusers from crossing state lines to doctor shop for prescription drugs.

"The KASPER program is proving to be an increasingly effective tool in combating the problem of prescription drug abuse in the Commonwealth," Jones said.

"will meet those goals" of which Brown spoke when this year's scores are gathered and released, she, along with the rest of the board, agreed that Floyd County parents, for now at least, should continue to have the choice of where they want to send their children to school.

"I think you will have to come back later," she said, "but for now, you will have that choice."

The board agreed unanimously to allow the reciprocal agreement between Floyd County and Johnson County schools to remain in effect.

Coaching

the decision. "Anyone can go to a teacher and ask them to 'help' a child to continue to play on a team, not just principals, but other teachers and parents, as well," she said, in response to some board members' concerns in regard to teachers possibly feeling pressured to give a student passing grades to allow them to remain in active play on a team when their "boss" would perhaps need them to make up a winning team.

"I feel, with this decision," said board chair Jeff Stumbo, "that we are simply asking our principals to focus on our schools ... in academics, with drug problems and with discipline problems."

In other discussion, Greg Adams, maintenance director of Floyd County Schools, reported would have required companies to provide methane detectors to each miner was deleted.

Bill

"There are still some good provisions in the bill, but most of them have been removed," said Tony Oppegard, an attorney who represents coal miners and widows of miners.

"The bill was basically hijacked," said Rep. Brent Yonts, D-Greenville, sponsor of the original proposal. He said he was not sure whether he will support the new version, which was offered by Rep. Robin Webb, D-Grayson.

Under Webb's modified version, the additional inspections wouldn't be mandatory until 2009, after the Office of Mine Safety and Licensing has added the personnel necessary to carry them out.

State Rep. Jim Gooch, D-Providence, had said previously that he didn't expect to call the legislation up for a vote in the Natural Resources and Environment Committee, which he chairs. He changed that stand on Thursday when to the board that the school system is currently spending "about $79,000" to allow coffee pots, microwaves, portable fans, personal refrigerators and other such convenience appliances to be used in individual classrooms.

"And about another $15,000 by failing to turn light switches off," he added.

Adams made the comments in regard to a utilities report that he presented to the board members during the meeting. The board agreed to gather more information in regard to the matter before making any final determination on the issue, which will likely be discussed in future meetings.

The Floyd County Board of Education will meet in regular session at 6:30 p.m. Monday at Betsy Layne Elementary School.

Webb, a former coal miner, offered a revised bill.

"It sounds like a much improved version," said Bill Caylor, president of the Kentucky Coal Association. "It has some important safety provisions. But the devil's in the details."

Melissa Lee, whose husband Jimmy Lee was killed in an underground explosion in Harlan County last year, was among a group of widows who visited the Capitol on Wednesday to urge passage of the mine-safety bill. She said the state needs a stronger mine safety law that "protects the other men who are providing for their families."

The proposed mining legislation follows one of the deadliest years in recent history for coal miners in Kentucky. In all, 16 miners were killed on the job in 2006. Five of the deaths were from a single Harlan County underground mine explosion in May.

The legislation is House Bill 207.
