Charges allege improper bulldozing

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — A McDowell man is facing criminal charges after allegedly performing some unwanted landscaping on property belonging to German Stumbo.

Basil R. Moore, 50, was charged with third-degree criminal trespassing and first-degree criminal mischief earlier this month.

According to the police report, Moore destroyed and damaged property causing a loss of $1,000 or more when he dozed a road and cut trees on Stumbo's property on Nov. 19.

Moore was ordered by Floyd District Court Judge James R. Allen to have absolutely no contact with Stumbo, including contact by phone, in person, or by third party.

Moore is scheduled to be arraigned on the charges on Jan. 21.

Insurer refusing to cover Grizzly lawsuit

by SHELDON COMPTON

PRESTONSBURG — An ongoing lawsuit between Grizzly Processing, a Banner company that operated a coal processing plant in that area for approximately a year, and a group of residents claiming the plant polluted the area and caused damages to themselves and their property has now shifted focus.

A countersuit filed in U.S. District Court in Pikeville by Wausau Underwriters Insurance Company, the company with which Grizzly had intended to cover them in the suit, is denying the obligation to do so.

On Dec. 10, 2007, two Banner residents, Richard and Bonnie Crisp filed a civil suit in Floyd Circuit Court against Grizzly.

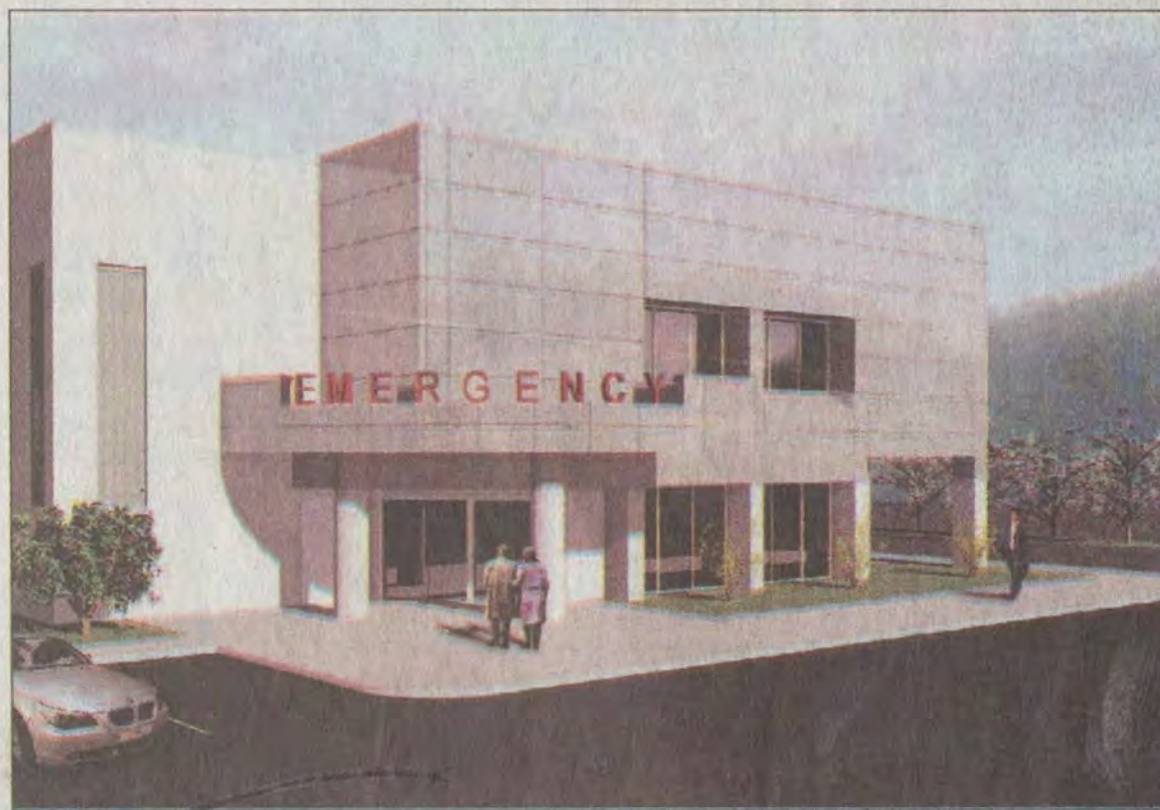

The complaint claims that the company operated the plant for nearly three years and that the coal mining activities caused their homes to be contaminated with coal dust and other pollutants and also asked for relief from the court for "continuous and unreasonable pollutants" caused by coal mining vehicles.

In addition, the lawsuit alleged that, aside from these two complaints, the Crisps alleged "the continuous dust, noise and contamination" interfered

Hospital readies for opening of new ER

by SHELDON COMPTON

PRESTONSBURG — Highlands Regional Medical Center announced plans Monday to open its newly remodeled emergency department after the first of the year.

The hospital said Monday the new emergency department will officially open on Jan. 5, according to Stephanie Damron, director of marketing and public relations at HRMC.

The move came as an effort to speed the treatment of patients and to offer additional privacy and comfort through the new design.

"The medical center saw the need to expand the emergency department to benefit our community," said HRMC Director of Emergency Services Hollis Whitehead, "and it has been one of our most successful capital projects."

The multimillion dollar expansion will include a dedicated triage room to effectively determine the nature and severity of patients' injuries, while also boasting new trauma rooms, private Fast Track rooms, a dedicated OB room, private emergency rooms with doors, an expanded work area for staff and a spacious waiting area for patients and family.

Whitehead went on to say the equipment that fills out the new space was "phenomenal."

Stumbo to introduce gambling bill

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

FRANKFORT — State Rep. Greg Stumbo has said in the past week he will file a bill for the pending legislative session that would put video lottery terminals in Kentucky's racetracks and pour millions into the horse racing industry and make huge strides in easing budget shortfalls in general.

"I'm convinced if we don't do something, we're going to lose our horse industry," Stumbo said in interviews last week. "We may end up with just two tracks."

The bill, which Stumbo said he will file regardless of the outcome in his race against House Speaker Jody Richards for that position, would generate $15 to $20 million into the coffers of the racing industry alone.

In addition, Stumbo said that in total Kentucky

Faces change with Highways reorganization

by SARA GEORGE
HIGHWAY DISTRICT 12

PIKEVILLE — Reorganization of the Transportation Cabinet means changes at the local level as well as in Frankfort. At Highway District 12, Kevin Damron is still chief district engineer, but several members of his administrative team are newcomers to their leadership positions.

A major reorganization of the Transportation Cabinet by Secretary Joe Prather and Governor Steve Beshear began on June 16, 2008. Implementation is now complete at District 12, which includes Lawrence, Johnson, Martin, Floyd, Knott, Letcher and Pike counties.

Damron's management team includes Paul Thompson, Mary Westfall-Holbrook, Sam Hale, Darold Slone, and Greg Couch, PE.

"The average age of our top six team members is just over 43," Damron said. "Despite its relative youth, the team also has a combined total of more than 120 years of professional engineering and administrative experience."

He pointed out that four team members are from Floyd County and two, including himself, are from Pike County.

"Many times people think that highway department administrators are from Frankfort," he said. "We want people to know that all the

Merry Christmas Juanita Caldwell Morrill 1913 - 2008

My First Christmas in Heaven

I see the countless Christmas trees in the world below,
Tiny lights like heaven's stars, reflecting on the snow.

The sight is so spectacular, please wipe away the tear,
For I am spending Christmas with Jesus Christ, this year.

I hear the many Christmas songs, that people hold so dear,
But the sound of music can't compare, with the Christmas choir up here.

I have no words to tell you the joy their voices bring,
For it is beyond description, to hear the angels sing.

I know how much you miss me,
I see the pain inside your heart.

Daughter, Yolanda Henecker, and family

Later school start time cuts teens' car crash risk

LEXINGTON -- Risks of automobile accidents involving teen drivers could be reduced through the institution of later starting times for high schools, according to a study by two University of Kentucky researchers.

The study, published Dec. 15 in the Journal of Clinical Sleep Medicine, was conducted by Fred Danner, professor and chair of the Department of Educational, School and Counseling Psychology in the UK College of Education, with Dr. Barbara Phillips, professor in the UK College of Medicine and medical director of the UKHealthCare Good Samaritan Sleep Center.

"Our findings are consistent with everything we know from laboratory studies about the devastating effects of chronic sleep deprivation on daytime alertness," Danner said. "They suggest that the typical pattern of moving school start times an hour earlier when kids move from middle to high school is not only bad for their performance in school but may also increase their chances for motor vehicle crashes."

Danner and Phillips looked at the sleep habits of high school students in Fayette County before and after start times were changed to an hour later. They found that these students were reporting an increase in the amount of sleep each night after the start time was pushed back.

The study also compared the number of motor vehicle crashes per 1,000 drivers age 17-18 during the two years before and the two years after the change in start times. The results indicate that after the change the average crash rate among this age group decreased in Fayette County, while the rate statewide — where start times did not change — increased over the same period.

These findings suggest a correlation between later start times and a decrease in automobile accident rates among teen drivers, Danner said.

Phillips says this study hints at the potential for additional research in adolescent sleep deprivation.

"We now have some cross-sectional prospective data that suggests shortened sleep is associated with obesity, in teens more so than adults,"

Phillips said. "One important study would be to see if the prevalence of obesity would fall if teens were able to get more sleep by delaying their school start times."

Phillips said researchers suspect that sleep deprivation could also play a role in mood disorders, impulsive behavior and attention deficit disorder.

Worth Repeating ...

A committee is a cul-de-sac down which ideas are lured and then quietly strangled.

— Sir Barnett Cocks

Amendment 1

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people to peaceably assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

A transition truly in the national interest

"It could send our suffering economy into a deeper and longer recession. And it would leave the next president to confront the demise of a major American industry in his first days of office."

— President George W. Bush on the auto industry crisis

These are unprecedented times. America is engaged in two major wars and experiencing what may be the most severe economic downturn since the Great Depression of the 1930s. While all of this is going on, America's leadership is about to change in a big way. It probably could not be a worse time for a presidential transition. But in 28 days, it will happen, and few new presidents will have been better helped through the transition by his predecessor than Barack Obama. Whatever history might say about President Bush in other areas, it almost certainly will lavish praise on him for his efforts to help Obama prepare to lead this huge and complex nation.

The modern formal presidential transition period began in 1952 when Dwight D. Eisenhower succeeded Harry Truman. Towson State University political scientist Martha Kumar told Voice of America recently that "(Truman) thought when he was going out that it was very important that whoever came in had a good sense of what was going on in the government." Truman himself had not known about the development of the atomic bomb when he took office after the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1945, she said.

Thanks to Bush, it's highly unlikely there will be such gaps in Obama's knowledge. Even before the first votes were cast in the November election, Bush had ordered the transition process under way. Intelligence legislation signed into law by Bush in 2004 allowed for the early security clearances of Obama transition officials. Even before the elections, Bush ordered high-level unclassified briefings on crisis areas such as Iraq and Afghanistan.

But going beyond what other presidents have done, the Bush White House has prepared more than a dozen contingency plans to help Obama transition to power. These plans include possibilities such as a Korean nuclear explosion, a cyber attack on American computer systems, a terrorist strike on U.S. facilities overseas or a flare-up of violence in the ever-volatile Middle East.

The Department of Homeland Security also has given crisis training to nearly 100 career officials so they can aid Obama's appointees, either before they are confirmed by the Senate or soon after they assume their positions. In addition to other steps, the White House has drafted dozens of long-term policy memorandums on the status of certain issues and suggested options for dealing with them.

President Bush also has invited Obama to attend a Jan. 7 lunch at the White House with former Presidents Jimmy Carter, George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton. Top that for a power lunch.

Bush sees a smooth transition as an important part of his legacy, and the nation should thank him for reaching out so graciously and effectively to his successor.

House week in review

by REP. HUBERT COLLINS

There has been a lot of speculation about how, and when, Kentucky lawmakers will address the $450-plus million shortfall that the recession has left us to clean up this fiscal year.

One idea that is being floated from Paducah to Pikeville is a proposed increase in the state cigarette tax. Since it was raised to 30 cents in 2005, many health advocates including more than a few lawmakers have called for a larger per-pack tax on cigarettes. Now the idea has the backing of Gov. Steve Beshear, who says he wants to increase the tax by 70 cents to one dollar a pack. A bill that would accomplish that in the upcoming 2009 Regular Session beginning Jan. 6 was filed in early December, and similar bills could be on the way.

The big question on lawmakers' minds, though, is when we will be asked to consider the tax proposal. One fly in the ointment is that the 2009 Regular Session, unlike the 2008 Regular Session, is not considered a budget session under the state constitution. That means that, constitutionally, it will take a 3/5 majority of both the House and Senate to approve any increase in revenue next session. Considering the Senate majority has not expressed approval of any tax increase, it is pretty much assumed that getting 3/5 majority would be nearly impossible.

There is another option: a special session, which the governor has said he might call sometime between Jan. 9 — when lawmakers end their four-day organizational part of the 2009 Regular Session — and early February when the second part of the 30-day Regular Session begins. The problem is that the special session option may have constitutional issues of its own. Since lawmakers will be on break during the last three weeks of January and not officially adjourned from the 2009 Regular Session, we will constitutionally still be "in session" which some say prevents us from being called into special session. Anything we do during a special session in that time frame, they say, could subsequently be challenged in court and thrown out. Bottom line? The passage of a per-pack tax hike will be difficult considering the constitutional and ideological challenges it faces.

Even if the proposal does manage to pass, it is projected to only cover half of the current shortfall. That means more state funding cuts are unfortunately on the way. The governor is asking most state agencies to cut their budgets by four percent as a result, with part of that percentage coming from a furlough plan that will call on each state employee to take three days unpaid leave by the end of next June. The good news is that basic K-12 education funding and state funding for mental health/mental retardation services and Medicaid will not be cut, while additional cuts to higher education — which has already had its state funds reduced by six percent this year — would be limited to two percent.

Although it only stands to reason that agencies would suffer cuts when the state falls on hard times, it is also true that hard times is when agencies need funding the most — and they usually need more funding than they received from the General Assembly in recent budget cycles.

County jails are a great example of government entities that rely on state funding but do not have enough revenue to cover their costs, which the jails say have collectively reached over $100 million annually. Lawmakers continue to look at whether we should increase funding for state prisoners who counties are now fiscally responsible for until sentencing, or whether the state should take over the operation of county jails altogether. Action taken last regular session that would allow more nonviolent Class D felons to be released on bail along with changes to increase the use of home incarceration and parole changes were expected to help counties somewhat, but many counties feel the latter especially might actually reduce their state inmate revenue.

Since the Kentucky County Judge/Executive Association sued the state a few months ago in hopes of prompting state reimbursement to counties for costs they incur from pretrial incarceration of state prisoners, I do not know how the 2009 General Assembly will choose to handle the situation. I do not know indeed if we even can address it pending a lawsuit and a recession that has forced our governor to propose the furlough of state employees. I do know that our counties are in fiscal trouble and that the state needs to increase funding to the jails if we are going to continue to make counties responsible for the pretrial care of state felons. Doing otherwise makes our "agreement" with the counties seem a lot like those costly federal mandates that threaten our state budget every two years.

Another thing I know going into the 2009 Regular Session is that we need to find ways to raise more revenue in the Commonwealth or more painful cuts will be leveled in future sessions. How we raise that revenue, whether it be from a cigarette tax increase or other methods like combined reporting of corporate income tax income (from which Massachusetts alone expects to reap $331 million), is still undecided. We have much to consider during the session beginning in two short weeks.

I'll go over education, health, safety and state pension issues that lawmakers will likely face in the 2009 Regular Session in my article next week. Until then, have a wonderful Christmas holiday!

Changes

management folks at District 12 are local people whose family roots are firmly entrenched in Eastern Kentucky.

Paul Norman Thompson, Administrative Coordinator served from 1993 until 2007 as the retail manager of Jenny Wiley Village in Prestonsburg.

From 2001 until 2008, he also served as an inspector with the Transportation Cabinet's Motor Vehicle Commission. In July 2008 he was named Administrative Coordinator for Highway District 12.

Mary Westfall-Holbrook, joined Highway District 12 in March 2001 as a project manager in what was then called Preconstruction (now Project Development).

In November 2005, Holbrook was named Construction Engineer and in July 2007 Construction Branch Manager. She assumed her new duties as branch manager of Project Development on Sept. 1, 2008.

Sam Hale is the district's branch manager for Project Delivery and Preservation I. This branch combines all construction and maintenance functions. Because of the district's size, there are two PD&P branches. The one which Hale manages includes Pike, Letcher, and Knott counties. He joined the Transportation Cabinet in October 2001 as D-12's Construction Engineer. In February 2005 he was named district Bridge Engineer, and in mid-August this year he accepted the newly-formed post of PD&P branch manager.

Darold Slone, of Kimper, is the district's second Project Delivery and Preservation Branch. Slone was formerly branch manager for Operations (Maintenance). He assumed the post of Operations Branch Manager in February 2003. He is now branch manager for Project Delivery and Preservation in Johnson, Martin, Floyd, and Lawrence counties.

Greg Couch, a native of Wheelwright, is manager of the newly-created Engineering Support Branch. He joined District 12 in December 1999 as Traffic Engineer, a post he held until September 2008, when he was named branch manager for Engineering Support. His branch includes the departments of Equipment, Materials (inspects and tests materials used by contractors to ensure contract specifications are met or exceeded), Traffic Engineering (signs and signals), Permits, Structures (such as bridges), and the new Roadside Environmental Department.

Each member of District 12's management team has an office at Highway District 12 headquarters on Loraine Street in Pikeville. Each can be reached by calling 606-433-7791 or (toll free) 877-433-7791. Normal office hours are 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The District Office is open 24/7 during weather events such as snow and ice storms or flooding.

could see nearly $300 million in revenue during a time when it is desperately needed. That money, he said, could be put toward education and prison funding in the wake of a long-standing budget shortfall.

The Lexington Herald-Leader reported Sunday that Gov. Steve Beshear had reviewed Stumbo's proposal from which the bill stems but had made no recommendations resulting from that review. Likewise, the same report stated a task force appointed by Beshear had also looked at the proposal, also failing to present recommendations.

A cornerstone to Beshear's gubernatorial campaign was the push to bring casino gambling to Kentucky.

Some specifics to Stumbo's bill would be to set aside 80 percent of the revenue generated by the video lottery terminals for what is being referred to as purse enhancements for the racing industry, which has shown a great deal of support for the proposed bill.

However, the exact details as to how that money might be used has not been elaborated upon.

Reports have indicated from the Legislative Research Committee that show estimates from that body saying the proposed legislation could see upwards of $400 million in annual revenue for the state, with about $110 million of that replacing revenue from the state's part of property taxes on motor vehicles and boats.

Further details from Stumbo's proposal suggest the first round of funding from the new revenue would be earmarked for the state's general fund. Then 30 percent would be returned to the tracks. Also, 15 percent up to $25 million would be used for drug and alcohol rehabilitation with another 15 percent up to $25 million would be given out to counties to cover the housing of state inmates in jails across the state.

Funding would also be generated to treat problem gambling, with 1 percent to be funneled into the PRIDE organization.

Any remaining revenue would then be sent back to the state's department of education, Stumbo has said.

"When patients enter our emergency department, they will find televisions in every patient room, progressive patient monitoring equipment and, most importantly, they will see our commitment to provide a great customer service experience and the highest level of care possible to the members of our community," added Whitehead.

Whitehead went on to say that, under the best of circumstances, there would be a lack of use for the department as use is directly correlated to injury, but said if and when that time came for a citizen of the area, he wanted them to be proud of their local hospital.

"We hope that no one ever has a catastrophic medical emergency," Whitehead said, "but if they do, we are ready to provide emergency treatment that you can be proud of from your community medical center."

with their ability "to enjoy and use their residences."

But the complaints did not end with the Crisps. By January 2008, more than 90 other people were tacked onto the suit in an amended complaint.

During the course of the lawsuit, Grizzly filed a claim against Wausau after the insurance company denied coverage for the ongoing litigation. Representatives with Grizzly claimed the company was bound to defend them in the suit and cover costs that might incur. The claim was denied based on the terms, conditions and exclusions in Wausau's existing policies, according to court records.

Now the insurance company has returned an answer filed in federal court on Dec. 19.

In the insurance company's answer, it maintains that policies known as Total Pollution Exclusions and Absolute Pollution Exclusions preclude coverage for the claims against Grizzly. More specifically, the insurance company said in its answer that the exclusions preclude coverage for defense and indemnity for "any bodily injury, personal injury and/or property damage claims asserted against Grizzly Processing" for which the coal company might be seeking coverage.

In a second claim for declaratory relief, Wausau contends that their policies do not provide coverage or relief which does not constitute damages within the meaning of their policies.

Grizzly Processing plant was owned and operated during the time of the allegations against them by Frasure Creek Mining, according to court records.

FLAVOR FORECAST

Familiar tastes reimagined in original ways

FAMILY FEATURES

Expect to see flavors that help us reconnect with time-honored favorites in modern, whimsical ways, according to the McCormick® Flavor Forecast™ 2009, an annual prediction of the tastes that will transform and inspire America's menus. Familiar ingredients will be reinvigorated with inspired new flavor twists to create contemporary dishes.

"For example, combining global elements such as smoked paprika and a trendy natural sweetener — agave nectar — can transform a sauce for pork ribs or chicken from simple and expected to hip and exotic," said Kevan Vetter, Executive Chef at McCormick. "This pairing represents a modern reinterpretation of sweet and smoky flavors, combined with a desire for all natural ingredients."

The new trend report identifies 10 top flavor pairings predicted to define the year. The forecast is punctuated with a desire to recapture the joys of the dinner table and find pleasure, and a bit of playfulness, in the foods we eat.

The popularity of slow cooking has inspired an entirely new generation of recipes. Spicy Pulled Pork in Tart Cherry Sauce with Vanilla Slaw is an innovative twist on the traditional slow-cooked pulled pork sandwich. The Southeast regional classic is updated with the addition of two antioxidant-rich superfoods — cayenne and tart cherries — that bring a slow underlying heat and satisfying sweet and sour balance.

Warm Rosemary Brie Cake with Peach Preserves embodies the resurgence of just-like-grandma's fruit preserves, reimagined with a savory partner. The juicy plumpness and intense, fresh-picked fruit flavors fuse with rosemary's aromatic hints of pine and eucalyptus for a progressive interpretation of familiar flavors. The pairing reflects a nod to the future of new regional American cuisine.

For more recipes and deliciously simple ideas to enjoy the flavor pairings, visit www.flavorforecast.com.

- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon McCormick Gourmet Collection Crushed Rosemary
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup (1 stick) butter, at room temperature
- 3/4 cup sugar, divided
- 4 eggs, at room temperature, separated

- 1 round (8 to 10 ounces) Brie cheese
- 1/2 teaspoon McCormick Gourmet Collection Cream of Tartar

Place 1 layer, skin-side down, in center of bottom of prepared pan. Cut remaining 2 layers in half. Place, skin-side down, around Brie in pan so that most of the bottom of the pan is covered with Brie, leaving about 1/2-inch uncovered around edge of inside of pan. Set aside.
2. Beat butter and 1/4 cup of the sugar in large bowl with electric mixer on medium-high speed 3 to 4 minutes or until light and fluffy, scraping sides of bowl occasionally. Add egg yolks; beat on high speed until well blended, scraping sides of bowl occasionally. Beat in 1/2 of flour mixture, milk and then remaining flour mixture on low speed until well blended, scraping sides of bowl occasionally.
3. Beat egg whites in clean large bowl with electric mixer on high speed 2 minutes or until soft peaks form. Mix remaining 1/2 cup sugar and cream of tartar in small bowl. Gradually beat into egg whites. Beat until stiff peaks form. Stir 1/3 of the egg white mixture into egg yolk mixture until well blended. Gently stir or fold remaining egg white mixture into egg yolk mixture. Pour and spread batter over Brie to create an even cake layer.
4. Bake in preheated 325°F oven 30 to 35 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Run small knife or metal spatula around rim of pan to loosen cake. Cool about 30 minutes in pan on wire rack. Remove rim of pan. Spread top of cake evenly with preserves. Serve warm. Refrigerate any leftover cake.

Movies from the Black Lagoon: 'Beyond the Door'

by TOM DOTY
TIMES COLUMNIST

If you love special edition DVDs of Hollywood classics, then you may be surprised that this Italian "Exorcist" ripoff got the deluxe treatment rather than something like "Citizen Kane." Then again, if you're a fan of artsy flicks with high ideals and pompous actors emoting under way too much make-up, you are probably too busy watching some "Merchant Ivory" snooze-fest to read this column.

The rest of you should read on, as this one is as ridiculous as it gets but totally delivers on all exploitation fronts.

The film begins with a new introduction from star Juliet Mills (TV's "Nanny and the Professor"), who appears a little tipsy as she mistakenly states that the film was inspired by "The Omen". She is politely corrected by the disc's producer, who politely refrains from noting that the first "Damien" film wasn't made until two years after this cinematic concoction. Once you get by the stilted intro, it's all downhill as the actual film begins.

It all starts with a creepy looking guy named Dimitri being accosted by a devilish voice while driving on a Pacific coast highway. Dimitri is informed that he can buy himself 10 more years of life if he helps deliver a baby which this demon will possess. Dimitri takes the deal and immediately panics as the evil entity welsches on the bargain and possesses his car long enough to bash through a guardrail and plunge into the ocean.

Next up we meet the mom-to-be, Jessica, and she's a bit of a car wreck herself. She thinks nothing of parking her convertible in front of a supermarket and leaving her grammar school-aged tykes unsupervised while she strolls the aisles.

Her kids are no bargain either and include a curly haired son, who drinks his Campbell's soup straight from the can, and a precocious daughter who curses like a sailor on shore leave.

Her husband, Robert, is glimpsed at work and he's no prize himself. He appears to be producing a record but his method of drawing good vocals from his musicians is to harangue them with a steady stream of expletives which at least explains the potty mouth on his daughter.

Into every life a little rain must fall and this fractured family gets a tsunami when mom announces she's pregnant and, almost immediately, begins exhibiting a broad spectrum of possessed behaviors.

Here the movie kicks it up a notch as we are treated too all manner of satanic shenanigans which include destroying a fish tank and giggling as the evicted pets flop about on the carpet; barking at one's gynecologist in the devil's voice; levitating around the apartment in Frederick's of Hollywood lingerie; and eating discarded banana peels off of the sidewalk. These antics are sandwiched between plenty of other bizarre sequences, which include a great one where Robert is harassed on the street by a gang of musicians, including a flutist who uses his nose to blow out a tune.

Just when things couldn't get weirder, Dimitri returns (hey isn't he dead?) and Robert accepts that this complete stranger is his only hope to save his wife.

All in all, this one's a keeper, though its fragmented structure and over use of montages might put off some viewers. The San Francisco locations add spark and the special effects department turns in some good work.

That said, the narrative is barely enough to justify an hour and 49 minutes, but you can always hit the fast forward button when you get tired of the endless shots of characters walking around the city.

If you like stupid endings then you're in for a bonus treat here, as the last shot of the film is supposed to be shocking but will only leave you scratching your head and wondering if you missed something. Trust me, you didn't.

Best line: "I'm deeply engrossed in the incredible existences of fish, including their methods of reproduction."

Deer harvest in 2008 already third highest ever recorded

TIMES STAFF REPORT

FRANKFORT — With several weeks still left in the season, deer hunters have already recorded one of the state's highest harvest totals ever. Kentucky hunters telechecked 117,124 deer as of December 22.

"The late muzzleloader wasn't so hot because of the weather, but we are already at our third highest harvest ever," said Tina Brunjes, big game program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "We have the free youth deer weekend coming up and also the January harvest and we should end up near 120,000. If we get good weather this weekend and the archery and crossbow hunters do well, we could squeak into second place."

The all-time deer harvest record is 124,752 set in 2004, followed by 122,233 in 2006.

"The free youth deer hunting weekend is this coming weekend and we encourage our youth to participate," Brunjes said. "They usually average about 970 deer for that weekend, but we would like to see it higher for this year."

Resident and non-resident youth ages 15 and under who are accompanied by an adult may hunt Dec. 27 - 28 without a hunting license or deer permit. Deer bag limits, zone and equipment restrictions and telecheck requirements remain in effect.

"It is a great avenue to get youth involved in hunting," Brunjes said. "Plus, it doesn't cost anything."

For all hunters, crossbow season for deer closes on Dec. 31, while archery season continues through Jan. 19.

Smallmouth bass fishing in snow is highly productive

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

FRANKFORT — We have experiences in the outdoors that can be transcendent, although the conditions are rough. Catching crappie after crappie in cold March sleet, bagging your biggest turkey ever in a chilling April downpour or taking a limit of ducks in weather so cold hot coffee quickly freezes on the rim of your cup make great memories.

Although these encounters test your mettle and enrich your life, few outdoor pursuits compare to December fishing for smallmouth bass in the snow. The activity seems incongruent — floating in a boat on ice-free water with white frozen snow lining the banks. You seem completely out of place,

KENTUCKY COACH BILLY GILLISPIE TALKED WITH LEADING SCORER JODIE MEEKS during Monday night's home game versus Tennessee State. MEEKS, who scored a career-high 46 points Saturday, picked back up the high-scoring habit Monday night, scoring 32 points as Kentucky won 102-58.

Wildcats continue to prepare for Liberty Bowl matchup

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON — The outside temperatures are hardly summer-like, but the Kentucky football team had a flashback to August with two-a-day practices on Monday.

The Wildcats worked out for 90 minutes Monday morning in the climate-controlled Nutter Field House and then went for another 90 minutes in the afternoon.

"It's a little different schedule, obviously, not as much time before we break for Christmas because finals were later this year," Coach Rich Brooks said. "That's why we're having a two-a-day today."

Brooks noted that how the team approaches practice is important when there is a month layoff between the end of the regular season and the bowl game.

"I think they continue to have fun with practice," Brooks said. "Sometimes players take practice as pure drudgery and maybe don't want to do it with enthusiasm. So far, the guys have taken it this year the same way they've taken it for two years, that it's an honor and a privilege to be able to practice at this time of year and it's exciting to go to a bowl game."

Meanwhile, a couple of Wildcat rookies in the National Football League had big moments on Sunday as wide receivers

Keenan Burton and Steve Johnson each caught a touchdown pass. Burton caught his first NFL touchdown for St. Louis, a 30-yarder vs. San Francisco. Johnson snagged a TD in Buffalo's win over Denver, his second score of the season.

The former Wildcats' success comes as no surprise to Brooks.

"They got into a situation where they were able to showcase their ability," Brooks said. "If they stay healthy, they're going to be big-time players for a lot of years in that league."

Another first-year NFL Wildcat, linebacker Wesley Woodyard, totaled 45 tackles and an interception while starting a recent six-game stretch when a veteran was injured.

"Yeah, we had some pretty good players last year, didn't we?" Brooks laughed when asked about Woodyard. Brooks, whose 10 years in the NFL included a term as head coach of St. Louis, also was asked how Woodyard — the SEC's leading tackler in 2007 — went undrafted.

"I was shocked he wasn't drafted," Brooks said. "For some reason, they just felt he was too small, I guess, and it's hard to judge the size of a guy's heart as well as his desire."

The team will gather in Memphis on Dec. 27 and begin final preparations for the AutoZone Liberty Bowl, which will be played on Jan. 2.

EK Miners set CBA winning margin record in 172-70 victory

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — The East Kentucky Miners — one of the highest scoring teams in professional basketball — established another record Sunday evening at the East Kentucky Expo Center. The Miners, a franchise that set a single-game scoring record of 194 points in a home finale as part of the 2007-08 season, defeated the West Virginia Wild 172-70 Sunday in another Interleague Challenge Game pitting a CBA franchise versus an ABA franchise. The 102-point spread is a CBA record for winning margin.

Mike Dean led the Miners with a game-high 50 points and 10 rebounds.

The Miners excelled offensively and defensively, holding West Virginia to a 29-percent shooting effort from the field.

"Mike Dean had a great ball game," said East Kentucky Coach Kevin Keathley. "We played much better offensively. Defensively, we didn't give up 100 points again like we did the game before. Instead, we were able to hold them to 29 percent shooting. I'm proud of our team and the tremendous effort that was given."

Eight different East Kentucky players scored 10 or more points as the host team rolled.

Jermaine Blackburn, fresh off of a rare quadruple-double performance the night before, scored 22 points, handed out 13 assists and pulled down 10 rebounds. Blackburn also recorded a game-high four steals for the Miners.

East Kentucky, which led West Virginia 86-25 at the half, never scored less than 36 points in a single quarter.

The Miners continued to dominate in the second half, outscoring West Virginia 49-22 in the second quarter.

East Kentucky shot 71 percent from the field and 84 percent at the free throw line.

Daniel Hicks led West Virginia with 26 points and eight rebounds.

East Kentucky will return to the Expo Center for another Interleague Challenge game Friday, Jan. 2. For the Jan. 2 Miners game and every matchup played on a Friday night for the remainder of the season, all tickets are $5 thanks to a partnership with Appalachian Wireless deemed $5 Fridays.

Fishing

casting a hair jig, the float and fly or a shiner with snow in your eyelashes. You feel you should be at home; that it is dangerous to fish in such weather.

Except it may be the best weather condition for catching the largest smallmouth bass you'll ever hold.

"On an overcast snowy day, light will be greatly diffused," said Gerry Buynak, assistant director of fisheries for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "This brings the smallmouths up shallower and they can be easier to fool. They are more likely to strike an artificial lure because of less light penetration."

Anglers should take advantage of this. In our premier winter smallmouth lakes such as Lake Cumberland, Dale Hollow Lake and Laurel River Lake, anything that can get smallmouth out of their usual deep-water lairs is a blessing. These lakes are so clear you can see where you chipped paint from your jig head in 10 feet of water. This water clarity pushes smallmouths deep for most of the year during the day, but snowfall and a leaden sky bring them up to feed.

"I also think it is a pressure-related thing," said Ted Crowell, former assistant director of fisheries for Kentucky Fish and Wildlife. "Snow brings along with it low barometric pressure. It is just like when it rains in summer. This turns fish on."

Crowell has spent many a winter day chasing smallmouths at Lake Cumberland and Dale Hollow. "It is unbelievable, the fish you can catch in December in the snow," he said. "There's nobody else on the lake. There's nobody in the parking lot. It's great."

Also, unstable weather places predators at an advantage over prey. The changing weather of a snow storm and the cold of winter disorient baitfish and smallmouth bass gobble up all they can. This is especially true for larger female smallmouths who must store up fat reserves for egg development in early spring. They need to eat.

The plummeting water temperatures of December also stress baitfish such as shad or alewives. They swim in circles and quiver as they fight death. This is why the float and fly technique is so deadly in winter. A small, light craft hair or duck feather jig suspended on light line 8 to 12 feet deep perfectly imitates baitfish in their death throes.

Another highly productive technique is suspending a large crappie minnow or medium-sized shiner under a bobber 6 to 10 feet deep off points. The bobber flutters on top until it abruptly torpedoes toward the bottom. Smallmouth bass that hit live bait in winter don't fool around. They strike fiercely.

Both of these techniques produce, because the baitfish suspend in the water column in tightly packed schools in winter. Smallmouth bass cruise under these schools looking for those alewives or shad acting peculiar and pick them off.

A black 1/8th to 3/8th-ounce rabbit fur or bucktail jig swum just above bottom and down those main lake points produced winter smallmouths for your grandfather and they do the same today. The old-school pork rind is still the best trailer. Find the smallest pork rind possible or cut a bigger one in half. Although the soft plastic chunk trailers prove much easier to handle and take on and off the hook, pork is still the best choice in cold water.

Main lake points from Beaver Creek down to the dam are great places to try on a snowy December day on Lake Cumberland, while the Spruce Creek area is tops for Laurel River Lake. Try main lake points and cuts near Phillips Bend in the mouth of Wolf River on Dale Hollow Lake. You'll be fishing the same waters that produced David Hayes' 11-pound, 15-ounce world record smallmouth bass in 1955. Those cuts and points closest to the old Wolf River channel are best.

Don't let snowfall scare you from chasing bronze this winter. Don some waterfowl hunting clothing or coveralls and a pair of warm boots. Grab some hand warmers, a thermos of strong coffee and your fishing rod. Five-pound smallmouth bass are waiting for you if you brave the elements.

Eagles roll past Kentucky Christian

TIMES STAFF REPORT

MOREHEAD — Six Morehead State University players scored in double figures, and the Eagles won the rebound battle 55-to-25 in a 99-39 romp over Kentucky Christian Monday evening in Johnson Arena.

The Eagle bench outscored the KCU bench 44-to-3, and MSU's leading scorers were reserves Terrance Hill and Derick Echols with 15 points each. Starters Kenneth Faried and Robert Murry had 14 points each, and starter Maze Stallworth and reserve Steve Peterson added 10 points each.

Echols hustled for 10 rebounds and had the first double-double of his collegiate career. Faried pulled down 10 rebounds, and combined with his 14 points, that gave him his fifth consecutive double-double. He also added five assists and four steals. Peterson handed out five assists and had seven rebounds. Ten of the 11 MSU players that played scored.

"Our kids were focused on the game tonight even though everyone is looking forward to a nice three-day holiday break," said MSU Coach Donnie Tyndall. "The bottom line was that we had to take care of business tonight, and I thought we did that. We took advantage of them inside with Kenneth (Faried), Leon (Buchanan) and Derick (Echols) all doing some nice things."

"I want to compliment Kentucky Christian on how hard they played. They're short-handed right now, and they will have several players returning to their roster when they play again in January."

The Eagles led 51-to-25 at halftime and held KCU scoreless over the last 7:44 of the game to spread the margin to 60 points.

The Knights were led by Svetomir Illic and Kalen Jones who scored 16 points each. Illic pulled down 10 rebounds, and Jones handed out five assists and had two steals.

MSU is now 4-8 on the season. The Eagles will travel to East Tennessee for a 7 p.m. EST on Dec. 30, then return to Ohio Valley Conference play with a two-game road trip to Austin Peay (Jan. 3) and Tennessee State (Jan. 5) just after New Years.

Murry earns second OVC Newcomer of the Week honor: Morehead State University junior guard Robert Murry has been named the Ohio Valley Conference Newcomer of the Week for the second time this season. He shares the honor this week with Delrico Lane of UT Martin.

Murry, a native of Decatur, Ga., hit five-of-10 shots and scored 10 points in MSU's home court loss to James Madison last Thursday (Dec. 18). He also had a rebound, assist and two steals.

"Robert continues to show improvement in practice," said MSU Coach Donnie Tyndall. "And, that translates into improved play in our games. I'm pleased that he is being honored for his efforts."

UK football program announces team awards

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON — Cornerback Trevard Lindley (Hiram, Ga.), who leads the Southeastern Conference in passes defended, was voted the top University of Kentucky football team award for the 2008 season, Coach Rich Brooks announced Saturday.

Lindley was voted the Wildcats' most valuable player in balloting of the Kentucky team members, one of two awards selected by the squad.

Lindley leads in the SEC in defended passes with 15, including 11 pass breakups and a team-high four interceptions, increasing the junior's career total to nine thefts. He has started all 38 games of his Kentucky career. Trevard scored his second collegiate touchdown this season with a 28-yard interception return against South Carolina and holds the UK record for pass breakups with 34.

The winner of the other award based on the team's vote, the squad's Most Inspirational Player, is senior tailback Tony Dixon (Parrish, Ala.), who led the Wildcats in rushing this season with 341 yards and seven touchdowns this fall. He has amassed 1,299 yards and 15 touchdowns in his Kentucky career.

Punter-kicker Tim Masthay was the only team member to win more than one medallion. Masthay was bestowed with the Jerry Claiborne Award as the player who best exemplifies the ideals associated with one of UK's most popular head coaches, and was selected as the team's most valuable performer on special teams.

Masthay was honored for his commitment to academics and the display of a team-oriented attitude. In addition to his outstanding work on kick-offs, he is currently ranked fifth nationally in punting with a 45.3-yard average, the second-best one-season mark in Kentucky history. He was also a first-team Academic All-America selection based on his 3.81 overall grade average.

Two other seniors captured top awards as selected by the coaching staff. Dicky Lyons (New Orleans, La.) was picked as the most outstanding offensive player despite playing only six games before suffering a season-ending knee injury. Braxton Kelley (LaGrange, Ga.) earned the most outstanding defensive player award after leading the Wildcats in tackles in 2008.

Lyons was the UK leading receiver with 33 catches in his six appearances and also averaged 12.4 yards on 20 punt returns. Dicky finished his career with 141 catches and 18 touchdowns. His reception total is fifth all-time at Kentucky. Kelley has notched 90 tackles this season and has started 41 games in his UK career.

Senior Garry Williams was honored as the team's top offensive lineman for the 2008 season, currently carrying a mark of 38 starting assignments at left tackle. Williams also won the award in 2006.

Senior cornerback David Jones (Belfry HS) and junior center Jorge Gonzalez (Tampa, Fla.) shared the award as the squad's most improved players. Jones was the Wildcats' regular starter at cornerback this season after starting only twice in his previous three years in the program, finishing with a career-high 32 tackles this fall. Despite nagging injuries, Gonzalez played more than any member of the Wildcats' offensive unit, logging 794 plays in the 12 contests.

Freshman receiver-quarterback Randall Cobb (Alcoa, Tenn.) was honored as Kentucky's top first-year player. He accounted for 605 all-purpose yards and also threw for 542 yards and two scores. Cobb paced the Wildcats with nine touchdowns, including a team-best seven scores on the ground.

Kentucky's honors for the most valuable players on the scout teams were presented to offensive lineman Trevino Woods (Athens, Ga.) and linebacker Will Johnson (Nashville, Tenn.), both first-year freshmen. Woods is expected to be a strong candidate at offensive tackle in 2009 and Johnson will work at linebacker and safety in preparation for next fall.

MSU fell to 7-4 overall, while the Rockets moved to 4-6.

WELLNESS Q&A

Surgical investment

by ERNEST BREWER

DIRECTOR OF WELLNESS & REHAB

CENTER
EBREWER@HRMC.ORG

Question: I am scheduled to have knee surgery in a few weeks. What can I do to prepare myself for it?

Answer: Undergoing an orthopedic type surgery can be a major event in someone's life. The way that I like to describe it to patients is as if it is an investment. In reality, it is an investment of time, money, pain, function, loss of time from work and disruption of your life in general. In return for that investment, you are hopeful that you will reap some significant benefits: decreased pain, increased function and increase ability to perform work or leisure activities.

The investment begins the moment that the surgeon recommends the surgery and you elect to have it done. What you do to prepare yourself for the surgery can have some significant impacts on the outcomes. One of the essential aspects of preparation is being well informed. Below I have listed a sample of some valuable questions to ask your surgeon before

"I want people to know just how active their local VFW is," Edwards said. "We participate in a lot of charitable events and also give awards to students."

Earlier this month, Edwards visited Betsy Layne High School to hand out checks to the winners of the Voice of Democracy Essay Contest, and also to Allen Central Middle School for the winners of the Patriot's Pen Essay Contest.

When Gov. Beshear came to Prestonsburg to have an early Christmas dinner with the families of the National Guard soldiers from the area that are currently deployed overseas, the VFW was honored for their service to the community in the form of a declaration and a plaque.

"I accepted the plaque on behalf of the Prestonsburg VFW," Edwards said. "We all work together to help the community."

In September, the VFW held a special fish fry for the families of all the soldiers in the area, with all veterans and families of veterans also invited.

Along with planning special events, the VFA also donated $4,500 to Floyd County schools last year, along with numerous flags, and donates $500 per month to the VA nursing home in Hazard. The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, with its auxiliaries, includes 2.2 million members in approximately 8,100 posts worldwide.

Its mission is to "honor the dead by helping the living" through veterans' service, community service, national security and a strong national defense.

Annually, the VFW and its auxiliary members contribute more than 13 million hours of volunteerism in the communities that each post serves, including participation in Make A Difference Day and National Volunteer Week.

Allen Central Middle School students Luken Parsons and Caitlin Kidd received checks from the Prestonsburg VFW for their Patriot's Pen essays.

FLY LADY

The New Year

Here it is a brand new year with all the promise of a fresh start that comes with it. At FlyLady we have learned that new beginnings can happen any time we choose and it doesn't take a new day, new week, new month or even a new year to start over. That doesn't change the fact that we still love new beginnings and starting fresh.

And even though we don't like New Year's resolutions we still make goals for ourselves. This is a healthy thing to do. The other night a dear friend ask me if there was anything I had not done in my life that I really wanted to do. This was a very tough question for me. I am a happy person and I get to do every day what God put me on this earth to do. There is not much better than that! So I thought about it for about ten minutes and came up with something that seemed very strange to my friend.

I told her I wanted to see a volcano and the Grand Canyon up close one day. That was all I could think of at the time. One day I will see them but if my life were to end today; I would not feel sorry for myself because I had not seen them. I have no regrets about anything. Every decision I have made in my life has ended up being a good one even if at the time it was not. I learned from my mistakes and did not pine away my future by beating myself up over past mistakes. None of us are perfect and the sooner we understand this and quit punishing ourselves for this lack of perfection the better off we will all be.

Perfectionism keeps us stuck in the past so we are unable to function in the present. Let's take that perfectionism bat you are beating yourself up with on a daily basis and use it to hit home runs. Each time you see perfectionism throwing you a curve ball; turn it around and hit it back to where it belongs; Out of sight and out of mind! Perfectionism is the Body Clutter we all have to face. Facing our fears head on and using those fears to propel us to a new level of understanding about ourselves and the world around us will help us to eliminate this clutter.

Fear is the opposite of love! In fact I believe that it is worse than hate. It is hate disguised as something else. When we uncover our fears and bring them into the light of day; we are acknowledging that we don't have to be perfect and that our fears do not make us less than. Fear of failure is nothing more than a lack of love for you and your abilities.

Face your fears head on in this New Year! Let go of your perfectionism and you might just find yourself FLYING!

Three comedies and one extremely heavy drama hit the shelves this week, with mixed results.

■ "Burn After Reading" — The Coen brothers return to light comedy after their extremely dark effort of last year, "No Country for Old Men." Here the tale is pretty tall and centers on a CIA agent who writes some poison pen memoirs, only to lose them. They are found by a pair of dimwitted personal trainers who try to blackmail him and the goofiness ensues. Fluffy and often dumb, but they get away with it due to a talented cast that includes John Malkovich, Brad Pitt, George Clooney and Frances McDormand.

■ "The Women" — Meg Ryan heads an all-star cast in this lively, though not very effective, remake of the 1939 screwball comedy of the same name. Still there's plenty of eye candy, with turns by Eva Mendes, Anette Benning, Debra Messing and Cloris Leachman.

■ "Hamlet 2" — Don't let the bad box office keep you away from this comedic gem that's big on laughs without a whole lot of plot to get in the way. Steve Coogan (the ill fated film director in this summer's "Tropic Thunder") stars as a failed actor who is an even worse high school drama teacher. He talks his school into letting him stage a musical sequel to "Hamlet" and the hilarity begins, and holds steady for almost two hours. ■ "Savage Grace" — This week's only drama plays like a Greek tragedy but it's actually based on a true story. The film casts Julianne Moore as a woman who marries above her station to a plastics magnate.

Their marriage would scare Burton and Taylor but things only get worse when they have a son who grows up amidst their hatred. Moore is okay but this one fails to give you any characters you can care about. Next week look for the belated release of "Eagle Eye" and check out Ricky Gervais in "Ghost Town."

can use a muffin tin, but they turn out better in a bundt pan. Cover with a clean, damp cloth and leave overnight at room temperature to rise. In the morning, preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Bake rolls for 25 minutes, until golden brown. Turn rolls out onto a serving plate and dig in!

Christmas Morning Strata
Serves 6-8
1 loaf French bread, cubed (either by hand or with a knife)
2 packages frozen chopped spinach — thawed and squeezed dry
3/4 pound Provolone, chopped
14 large eggs
2 1/2 cups milk
Salt and pepper — to taste
2 teaspoons dry mustard (optional, but adds a nice little bite)

3/4 pound cheddar, shredded
Grease a 9 x 13 inch baking dish.
Make a single layer of bread cubes in the bottom of the baking dish. Cover the bread evenly with the spinach. Then add the chopped Provolone cheese. Top with another layer of bread cubes.
In a medium sized mixing bowl, whisk together the eggs, milk and seasonings. Pour over the layers evenly making sure that the entire top layer of bread is moistened. At this point, you have two options: refrigerate it overnight or bake for 1 hour (350 degree preheated oven)
When you bake it, watch it starting at about 50 minutes. It shouldn't be ready to pull until its puffed up a bit and just starting to get golden brown (you don't want it too brown).

If you want to test it, a knife inserted in the center should come out clean. While it is cooling, top with the cheddar cheese and allow it to melt by itself. You might need to return it for just a minute to the oven to finish melting.
Makes 6-8 servings, depending on how hungry you are!

Wellness

surgery, I recommend that you write down your own list of questions, and take the list with you to use during the doctor's visit. Also, take something to write with you so you can jot down his answers, or you may want to record the conversation.
■ What are the risks involved? How likely are they?
■ What complications can arise after surgery? What are the signs of complications?
■ How much improvement can I expect from this surgery?
■ Approximately how many of these surgeries are done each year at this hospital?
■ What type of anesthesia will be used? What are the risks?
■ What type of implant will be used? What is the track record for this type of prosthesis?
■ Will I have to stop taking any of my medications before surgery?
■ What options are available to avoid a blood transfusion?
■ How long will I have to stay in the hospital? What criteria will be used to determine that I am ready for discharge home?
■ How much pain is normal to expect and how long will it last? Will I receive medication for the pain?
■ When will I start physical therapy? Will I need home or outpatient therapy? Would therapy be helpful to prepare me for surgery?

■ Will I need to arrange for some assistance at home? If so, for how long?
■ What limits will there be on activities — such as driving, bathing, climbing stairs, or work?
■ How long will I need to be out of work?
■ How often will I need to return for follow-up visits?
If the surgery is done on an outpatient basis, and there is no hospital stay, it would be useful to ask what functional milestones should be achieved from the time of surgery until the time of the follow-up visit. For example, how soon should partial and full weight bearing be performed, and what is the expected range of motion desired. If possible, it would be useful for you to have a general idea of some of the long range projections for functional abilities such as, "When can I expect to begin using a cane and then get rid of the cane?" If, in fact, you will be expected to utilize an assistive device, such as crutches, I highly recommend that you are fitted and instructed with the device before your surgery occurs.
Additionally, it is essential that you have a clear understanding of what your responsibilities will be in terms of caring for the injury after surgery. For example, you may need to know how to care for the incision site and how often to use cold packs or ace wraps. If a brace will be utilized, you will need to know under what circumstances you may remove it or unlock the hinges. Because the surgery is such an important investment, taking care of these issues and getting clear instruction before surgery is very wise. The absolute worst time to try to ask questions or try to learn anything is immediately after surgery. As you are sitting in the recovery area being revived from anesthesia, you are not likely at your full capacity mentally. So, take care of your post-surgical concerns and questions before the surgery takes place. If you are already attending therapy, your physical therapist can help you prepare your question list. It's worth the investment.

Center for Interfaith Action on Global Poverty launches malaria initiative

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Faith and development leaders from diverse religious backgrounds came together at Georgetown University Friday, Dec. 12, to launch the first initiative of the newly formed Center for Interfaith Action on Global Poverty (CIFA). Meeting to discuss ways to jointly combat malaria, the unprecedented meeting brought leaders from Catholic, Protestant, Jewish, and Muslim groups together.

"I'm convinced that the faith community's role in providing services to the world's less fortunate is underutilized, underappreciated, and underfunded," said CIFA's Chairman and Founder, Ed Scott. "We're here because we believe the faith community is critical to bringing hope to the 33 million global citizens suffering from HIV, the millions of children who are orphaned by HIV, the 350-500 million affected by malaria, and the one million people who die each year of malaria—85 percent of whom are children under five in Africa."

Founded by Scott in September, CIFA is led by Tim Shriver, President, and Jean Duff, Executive Director. Its board includes:

- American Jewish World Service, Ms. Ruth Messinger
- Catholic Relief Services, Mr. Ken Hackett
- Center for Global

- Development, Dr. Nancy Birdsall
- CIDRZ Foundation, Ms. Dale Hanson Bourke
- Compassion International: Mr. David Dahlin
- General Conference of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, Mr. Rajmund Dabrowski
- Georgetown University, Dr. John DeGioia
- Hope through Healing Hands, Senator William H. Frist, M.D.
- Islamic Society of North America, Dr. Sayyid Syeed
- National Association of Evangelicals: Mr. Richard Cizik
- World Conference of Religions for Peace: Dr. William Vendley

- Religious Action Center: Rabbi David Saperstein
- Tony Blair Faith Foundation
- Washington National Cathedral: Dean Samuel T. Lloyd
- World Vision, United States, Mr. Richard Stearns

At the event, key leaders from faith-based development organizations including World Vision, Catholic Relief Services, American Jewish World Service, Islamic Relief Worldwide, the Adventist Development and Relief Agency, Episcopal Relief and Development, Lutheran World Relief, Saddleback Church, the United Methodist Church, the Tony Blair Faith Foundation, and Compassion International pledged to increase collaboration and information-sharing in their efforts to eliminate malaria worldwide.

The Berkley Center for Religion, Peace, and World Affairs, which cosponsored the event, produced a new overview of faith-based activities against malaria entitled, Malaria: Scoping New Partnerships.

CIFA (www.centerforinterfaithaction.org) is a nonprofit organization dedicated to improving the capacity and effectiveness of the faith community in its collective effort to reduce global poverty and disease.

Love affects your giving

In "Today's Prayer," by Joel and Victoria Osteen, it was written, "Have you ever thought about how love affects your giving? I've heard it said that you can give without loving, but you can't love without giving. Love, God's love in us, prompts us to give of ourselves — our time, abilities, and resources. In fact, God is love, and the scripture tells us that the world identifies Christians by their love. That means the world will identify us as Christians by our generous, giving hearts."

Kim Little Frasure

Just last night, T.D. Jakes was on TBN sharing a sermon on giving. He asked, "Why is it that those who have the most to give, give to those who don't need it. And those who are struggling continue to struggle, however ... it is those who don't have it that tend to be the ones with the most giving hearts."

Whoa, that was the exact conversation Angie (a friend of mine) and I had just finished having as we shopped for a dear friend going through a trying time.

There we were ready and willing to fill that shopping cart with anything and everything our eyes could muster. There was just one problem. Neither of us had the wallets to match our giving hearts.

Angie said, "Kim if we had the money we'd spend it on everybody we know wouldn't we?"

"You better believe it," I replied.

It is times like these when that knot gets tighter in the stomach, when you want so badly to give and "the thought" most definitely isn't enough.

Pastor Jakes told of how he's seen the most prominent Christians bless other "prominent" Christians in the congregation while there were those less fortunate sitting right across their paths. How mind-boggling. How it seems those with more tend to get more and even get it free.

Take the movie stars or entertainers for instance who receive boxes upon boxes of free designer clothes when there are those without they could help so much.

Definitely makes you go hmmm doesn't it?

Lord help us one and all to let love affect our giving. May we be conscious of those in need around us and ready, willing and able to give!

Wishing you a most blessed Christmas.

'Til next week or the new year, give with a loving heart.

Theological Book Network offers unique opportunity to contribute books

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — For those who at year-end have a desire to give but fewer dollars to spare, the Theological Book Network offers an opportunity to make a significant difference in the poorest countries of the world by contributing new and used scholarly and theological books.

"The books that collect dust on our shelves are often greatly needed in libraries, schools and seminaries in the poor countries of the world," said Kurt Berends, executive director of the Network. "Individuals and institutions that clean out their book shelves can contribute to the education of many who often have no books at all." Although the Network does not collect Bibles or popular literature, it does seek scholarly and theological books and journals, which are often unappreciated in general book drives.

Such theologians as Martin Marty and Roberta Hestenes have donated their libraries when they retired, knowing the books would be used by those who truly understood their value.

The value of donated books and the postage to send them to the Theological Book Network are tax deductible. Books and journals can be sent using media mail, a special rate offered by the US Postal Service.

For more information, visit <http://www.TheologicalBookNetwork.org> or send books to: Theological Book Network, 3529 Patterson SE, Grand Rapids, MI 49512. A letter acknowledging the donation will be sent upon receipt of the book.
