Jobless rate worsens in 74 counties

The Associated Press

FRANKFORT -Unemployment appears to be worsening in most Kentucky counties. The Kentucky

Office of Employment and Training reported Wednesday that jobless rates rose in 74 counties between December 2006 and December 2007. The rates fell in 33 counties and remained the same in 13 others.

Fayette and Woodford counties had the lowest unemployment at 3.7 percent each. Jackson County had the highest jobless rate at 10.1 percent. Magoffin County followed closely at 10 percent.

Prestonsburg fire chief to retire

by JACK LATTA STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — It was announced this week that the Prestonsburg fire chief will retire in February for health reasons after 13 years of distinguished service.

Fire Chief Gary Dotson, 49, was told by doctors last May that because of an aneurysm on his aorta, he should retire from active firefighting duty.

"I kinda laughed when I saw WYMT's report saying doctors left me no choice ... I have a choice," said Dotson. "I've always been a hard charger."

Dotson began firefighting as a volunteer while still in high school - "back in the day, when you could do that."

where he received a bachelor's degree in police administration. Commissioned as an officer in the Army through the ROTC program, Dotson served 11 years as an infantry officer, and in military police.

"I always wanted to be a cop, and ended up being a fireman,' said Dotson of his previous edu-

Henry Webb, fourth from left, took his place at the board table for the first time Wednesday night in his new role of superintendent for the Floyd County school district. The board will meet again, at May Valley Elementary, this coming Monday, January 28, at 6:30 p.m. Among the topics slated for discussion will be the transition of McDowell and Osborne Elementary sixthgraders to South Floyd Middle School in the upcoming year.

MARTIN - Although the decision to transfer sixthgraders from McDowell and Osborne elementary schools to South Floyd Middle School for the upcoming 2008-09 school year, has, in effect, already been made, members of the Floyd County Board of Education found themselves discussing the matter yet again at Wednesday evening's meeting of the school board, held at choice in the matter. Valley Elementary May School.

Some concerns in regard to transportation and ease of transition were discussed, with board member Dr. Chandra Varia still voicing her opposition to the move. Dr. Varia said that she feels that many parents in the area prefer their children attend Allen Central Middle School rather than South Floyd Middle, and that she believes that families should be given a

Though board chair Jeff Stumbo said options are in place for those parents willing to transport their children, the prevailing opinion appeared to be that for purposes of the school transportation department, sixth-graders from the McDowell and Osborne areas would be provided bus transportation to South Floyd Middle only.

Beshear says casino proposal coming soon

by JOE BIESK ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT - Gov. Steve Beshear said his gambling proposal should be ready for state lawmakers' consideration by early next Beshear, speaking at a news conference Tuesday, also stood by his previous estimate that state government could reap up to $500 million per year from casino gambling. Some lawmakers grumbled that an administration-backed proposal had not been offered yet, but Beshear said the plan is being worked out and expected by early next

"We're hopefully going to have the legislation prepared in early February, which will give the General Assembly plenty of time to consider it, hold hearings on it, ask any questions that they would like," Beshear said.

In his campaign to unseat former Gov. Ernie Fletcher, Beshear claimed Kentucky should legalize casino gambling as a way to retain millions of dollars that were otherwise being wagered in bordering states. Kentucky already allows gambling at horse tracks and bingo halls and through a state lottery.

Schools implementing wellness policies

by KATHY J. PRATER FEATURES EDITOR

The emphasis is on health and Floyd County school administrators and teachers are doing their best to instill their young charges with a desire to live healthy lives. That begins with learning about good food choices, healthy portion sizes and the benefits of physical activity.

Long an advocate of physical education in schools, Assistant Superintendent Pete Grigsby Jr. says he is glad to be in charge of composing and implementing a countywide school wellness plan.

"We've formed a wellness commit-working hard and doing everything we can to comply with state law in regard to Senate Bill 172," Grigsby said. Senate Bill 172 requires that schools develop plans by which students receive educational instruction in regard to nutrition, are provided adequate physical activity opportunities, and by which vending machine programs are restructured.

Floyd schools have already replaced sugary drinks and vending machine snacks with healthier choices. Bottled water, flavored milks and a variety of juices have replaced soda. Nuts, granola bars and other such healthier choices have replaced calorie-laden tee, of which I am the head, and we're snacks such as high-fat chips and snack cakes. In addition, children are being offered the opportunity to participate in exercise breaks during instructional periods as well as the opportunity to join school fitness clubs.

> With funding dollars stretched, Grigsby says such alternatives to regular physical education programs allow students to "get up, stretch, move about and get their heart rates up.'

> "I'm still, and always will be, in favor of structured physical education programs and classes. But so many of our schools, and councils, say they can't afford it, so we're getting the kids moving all we can with exercise breaks and recess periods and such," he said.

Grigsby also reports that local hospitals, health department personnel and county extension offices have partnered with the schools to conduct presentations to assist in educating children about the importance of good nutrition and physical activity in regard to leading productive and healthy lives.

"We've had some great presentations from people who are really dedicated to helping children learn, and we have some really good fitness clubs at the schools. Many of them meet after school, but we're finding that parents and kids are in favor of the clubs, and

In 2006 Namaste began exporting their program via a web-based community that would allow schools across the nation to adopt their techniques and tools.

"We think this is the ideal answer to help other schools adapt our philosophy, curriculum and activities that have been so successful for us," said Slade.

According to a release from MCA, Mars Inc. sponsored 20 $500 grants this year to schools across the nation. MCA was one of those

The grant was applied for by MCA Librarian Matilda Kilburn, and selected after Kilburn shared her 200-word story that MCA students required the resource books on nutrition and wellness to prevent obesity and encourage healthy living.

Past recipients of the award have used their grant money in various ways, including buying yoga mats for gym class, investigating healthier options in the cafeteria and forming a Parental Advisory Council on health and wellness.

Namaste's innovative approach to health and wellness was featured in a May 2005 issue of People Magazine.

"We wanted to create an environment that nourishes both the mind and the body of children," said Slade. "Our philosophy is based on research showing that students who are healthy and active perform better in the classroom."

According to a report issued by the Floyd County Schools Wellness Committee, overweight children are more vulnerable to high blood pressure, gall bladder disease, sleep apnea, asthma, and bone and joint problems. Type II diabetes and "fatty streaks," the beginning stage of hardening of the arteries, are also problems associated with weight gain.

"We've had a specific timeline to adhere to," Grigsby said. "The state has mandated these requirements and we're keeping them. We even started out ahead of the game back in 2001, before Senate Bill 172 came into existence in 2005. So far, so good, and we plan to keep at it. Also slated for further discussion is the possible rescission of a recently implemented policy barring the use of Floyd County school buildings on Sundays. Stumbo said that he had recently been made aware that the Betsy Layne Training used the Betsy Layne Elementary School building to conduct their meetings for "about the past 15 years."

Stumbo said that he was in favor of allowing the group to continue meeting as they have and that he would like for board members to consider revising the policy so as to allow the building to be used on Sundays. "I understand that they meet in the middle of the day, so it doesn't interfere with (church) services," he said.

'We also need to be aware that schools close by are also holding the meetings," he said. Stumbo said that if Floyd students began attending meetings at nearby Pike County schools, that the possibility existed that they would form new friendships and contacts that could pose a threat of having the children desire to leave their old school to attend one in another district. "It's just something to think about," Stumbo said.

legalizing casino gambling at Kentucky's horse tracks and possibly some other locations. The General Assembly would have to approve amending the state's constitution, and that decision would require ratification by voters.

Beshear has said the revenue collected from casino gambling could pay for other government expenses such as education and health care.

Kentucky is facing a budget shortfall over the next two fiscal years of about $880 million. Beshear has already ordered 3 percent budget cuts for various state agencies and public universities to cope with a $434 million budget shortfall in the current fiscal year, which ends June 30.

Lawmakers are expecting to hear Beshear's budget proposal for the next two fiscal years at a joint session of the House and Senate on Jan. 29. Nevertheless, some have complained that Beshear's gambling proposal was not frustration Tuesday that lawmakers haven't been better informed on the issue.

'I'm trying to figure out, as all of this goes on behind closed doors, who's going to be helped and who's going to be hurt by expanded gambling in this state," Firkins said. "And I'd like to know who's driving the truck on this thing, who's involved in the effort to put this bill together.

Firkins said lawmakers have been told the casino legislation is being touted as "an economic bailout" for the state, and he said he wants to know when the major players are going to be talking publicly about the issue.

"A bill is not going to just drop on this legislature mysteriously from out of the sky," he said. "There is going to be a lot of wheeling and dealing before that bill gets to us. We need to know what's involved in that wheeling and dealing, and the sooner the better."

However, there was "no wheeling and dealing going on" over the matter,

"There's a lot of moving parts to an issue like this, and we're just trying to make sure that we get all the information we can and make the best decision we can going in," Beshear said.

House Speaker Jody Richards, D-Bowling Green, reiterated Tuesday that he expects a casino measure to pass the House. Leaders in the Republican-led Senate have said they would withhold judgment on a bill until it passed the House, but Senate President David Williams has said he opposes casino gam-

Meanwhile, Beshear also disputed an economic study by the Legislative Research Commission last week that predicted state government would only collect $314 million, not $500 million. The report compared "apples to oranges" because it didn't review Beshear's proposal, he said.

He was recalled back into armed service in 2002 and served in Qatar, before retiring at the rank of major.

Dotson said of his decision to retire as fire chief that his doctors told him that his medical condition can be deadly, and he must limit his physical exertion and keep his blood pressure down. "If this thing busts, that's it.'

After a summer in which PFD battled several fires, Dotson said, "I got to looking back and realized I was doing things I shouldn't be doing."

"I hadn't considered what might happen in an emergency situation if I went down, and how that might affect the other guys, and the people who count on us," said Dotson.

Dotson said lifting and heavy exertion were things he felt he could control, "but you can't control stress.' That point was made clear to Dotson when PFD responded to a house fire where children were believed to be inside. Though it was later confirmed that the home was empty, a routine check of the firefighters by EMT workers after the blaze revealed Dotson's blood pressure was

"sky-high." Dotson said he had not tion to join the Lexington Fire

Dotson, who officially retires on Feb. 29, will be replaced by Bobby Carpenter, as interim fire chief. Carpenter spoke highly of Dotson saying, "He has distinguished himself both in the military and as a firefighter." Carpenter added that Dotson's retirement was "a loss to the firefighter service."

Acting as assistant chief and fire marshal for the last four years, Carpenter began his career as a volunteer after graduating from Prestonsburg High School. After two years he was brought on as a paid firefighter.

During his first tour with Prestonsburg Fire Department, Carpenter helped set up the first dispatch department for the city. Prior to that, the fire department had provided dispatch service to the police.

Carpenter left Prestonsburg attend school Cumberland College, where he graduated with a bachelor of arts. While attending Cumberland as a full-time student, Carpenter worked weekends at the Pineville Fire Department.

This was the first year that firefighters in the Lexington-Fayette Urban County government were eligible to retire. said Carpenter. Due to the large number of retirees the Division of Fire and Emergency services ended up hiring 26 new firefighters. Carpenter served for seven years in Lexington as a firefighter, working on both the awards & review and safety committees.

Carpenter left Lexington in 2002 and returned to Prestonsburg. All total, Carpenter has worked as a firefighter for over 20 years, with experience in both rural and urban settings.

"Bobby is very knowledgeable and I feel he will keep the Prestonsburg Fire Department moving in the right direction," said Dotson. In the future Carpenter says PFD will focus on fire preven-

Bill would ease safety requirements for smallest surface mines

FRANKFORT — The state's smallest coal companies would get a reprieve from a year-old mine safety law under legislation pending in the General Assembly, The measure would relieve companies that employ fewer than 10 miners from having to keep two certified mine medics on duty during working hours. Ancel Smith, D-Leburn, said the requirement adopted by the General Assembly last year created some unforeseen hardships.

"I'm just trying to help some small people here who are trying to survive" financially, Smith said. "It won't hinder the safety."

Lawmakers, reacting to the deaths of 16 miners in 2006, passed a law early last year to provide additional safety protections. The law requires state mine inspectors to double the number of visits they make to underground operations, puts methane gas detectors in the hands of all work crews and mandates that companies keep a vehicle close to work crews to haul injured miners to the surface in case of accidents. Among other provisions, it also requires that ventilation fans stay on at all times, unless they are undergoing maintenance, to keep fresh air flowing into mines and to prevent the buildup of methane. With the law in place, Kentucky had no underground coal mine fatalities in 2007.

Smith's proposal to allow small coal operations to work with only one medic on duty faces opposition from mine safety advocates, including Lexington attorney Tony Oppegard, whose law firm represents widows of coal miners killed on the job. Oppegard, a former mine regulatory official at the state and federal levels, said lawmakers didn't arbitrarily choose to require two medics. It was done, he said, so that if one was injured, the other could provide treat-

"To save a few bucks, they're putting miners' lives at risk," Oppegard said. "I think it's detrimental to mine safety. It's unnecessary, and it's shortsighted." The architect of last year's mine safety law, state Rep. Brent Yonts, D-Greenville, said he isn't opposed to tweaking the law to accommodate two-man crews that use augers to dig coal out of a mountainside. If Smith is willing to amend his bill to specify that it pertains to twoman augering operations, Yonts said he could support it.

Kentucky Coal Association President Bill Caylor said easing the requirement on the smallest mining companies makes sense.

"It's not meant to diminish safety," Caylor said. "It's just trying to cut back on the burdens of the small businessman."

House passes bill to help veterans get government jobs

FRANKFORT — Military veterans would have a better chance of landing jobs in state government under legislation that has cleared the House. The legislation requires state agencies to give preference to honorably discharged soldiers when filling jobs. The House approved the measure 97-0 on Wednesday. It now goes to the Senate for consideration. The bill is one of several introduced over the past three weeks intended to reward veterans for their military service. Democratic state Rep. Mike Cherry of Princeton says the bill would add up to 10 "preference points" to test scores used to gauge an applicant's qualifications and would require that state agencies grant interviews to veterans for jobs that don't require

Advanced placement bill clears Senate, on to House

FRANKFORT - A plan aimed at boosting the number of Kentucky students taking toplevel high school courses cleared the Senate on Wednesday. Lawmakers say the approximately $4.25 million proposal will help high schools offer more rigorous advanced placement courses that could lead to college credit for students who

"This bill will take us a gigantic step forward in Kentucky," said Sen. Ken Winters, R-

Murray, the bill's sponsor. Among other things, the bill would expand the availability of advanced placement classes by giving high schools grants to develop math and science programs and offer more virtual classes online. The proposal would also cover students' costs of taking the exams, which cost about $80 each. The measure, which cleared the Senate on a 36-0 vote, heads to the House for consideration.

Amendment I

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people to peaceably assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

Editorial roundup

The News-Gazette, Champaign, Ill. on the economic stimulus bill: Given the general nervousness about the economy, it's pretty clear that the Democratic-controlled Congress and Republican President George Bush will pass an economic-stimulus package designed to prevent a feared recession.

But there's a danger, in this election year, of a political bidding war aimed more at stimulating the loyalty of voters than the economy.

President Bush announced a general tax-stimulus package Friday, suggesting tax rebates to individuals and families and tax cuts intended to spur business spending and hiring. ...

But there are all different directions this program can go, and that could be a problem if legislators don't exercise some restraint.

... U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts said the package must "start and end with America's working families" while New York Democratic U.S. Sen. Charles Schumer said legislation must not only include tax rebates but "spending stimuli that jump start the economy." Congressional aides say greater food-stamp allotments are up for discussion. ...

The die, however, has been cast, and it's likely that most people will get a check from the government. But Congress needs to be careful not to exacerbate a problem it's trying to solve.

San Antonio Express-News, on wiretap failures:

Politicians can talk all they want about national security, but what the FBI really needs is a good office manager.

If that sounds facetious, consider a recent development that is as disturbing as it is embarrassing: A telephone company recently cut off an international wiretap after the agency failed to pay its bill on time, according to a government audit released this month.

The audit, conducted by the Justice Department, criticized the FBI for the poor handling of funds used for undercover investigations, Reuters reported.

And while the incompetence led to the disruption of a wiretap case, it has repercussions beyond a single incident, making the agency vulnerable to theft and mishandled invoices, according to the audit.

Politicians engage in lofty debates about whether the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, which governs electronic spying in intelligence cases, makes it too cumbersome for agents pursuing leads on terrorism.

That debate, however crucial to the war on terrorism, is reduced to absurd irrelevance when the FBI cannot do what hard-working Americans are expected to do every month pay their bills on time. ...

The Miami Herald, on much-needed actions to stimulate nation's economy:

In a welcome show of bipartisanship, Congress and White House are coalescing around the idea that an economic boost is needed.

There are good reasons to worry that the country is going into a recession, if it isn't there already. ... That said, there are right and wrong ways to stimulate the economy. Economists generally agree on the central principles: The boost has to be temporary, timed right and targeted for effectiveness. The goal is to increase spending that spurs growth and economic activity.

Remarkably, congressional leaders and the White House generally are in agreement on these principles. Moreover, there are signs that each side is bending, which should encourage quick action. The tussles, of course, will come over specifics of the stimulus package. Tax rebates for individuals, more unemployment aid and food stamps, tax breaks for business and more are on the table.

For his part, President Bush was smart to take permanent tax cuts out of his proposal. ... Congressional Democrats also signaled willingness to consider provisions to aid businesses. Those are promising signs. :

Congressional action will work best if combined with action by the Fed, and Mr. Bernanke has suggested there will be a cut in interest rates. That's encouraging, too.

Whether or not the economy is in a recession, ordinary people are feeling the pain from the housing debacle and steep gas prices. Relief will be welcome. ...

Senate week in review

by SEN. JOHNNY RAY TURNER 29TH DISTRICT

We began our second week of the 2008 legislative session in joint session with the House of Representatives. Governor Beshear delivered his State of the Commonwealth Address in the House chamber, largely discussing the financial condition of the state and what we can and should accomplish within the serious financial constraints we face this year.

I was happy to see that Governor Beshear shares some of our views on the future of the Commonwealth. Given the extraordinarily tight budget we face, this is really an opportunity to make sure our priorities are in order. This is the perfect time to reevaluate what services state government must provide, and identify how we can provide them more efficiently and cost-effectively. We may have to make some short-term sacrifices, but delay means forcing even-more painful sacrifices on future generations of Kentuckians. At the same time, we must continue our strong investments in education and economic development so that we can attract and fill the jobs we want our children and grandchildren to have. Balancing our true needs with our resource constraints will take hard work and ingenuity over the next three months, but I believe my colleagues and I will meet the challenge. Governor Beshear will address the General Assembly again later this month to spell out specifics of his budget proposal.

The full Senate also passed its first also approved a measure that could would eliminate the primary-election runoff in the governor's race. Under current law, a runoff is needed when no slate receives at least 40 percent of the votes in its party's primary.

The measure was somewhat controversial when it was proposed in last year's session, because it would have affected the ongoing gubernatorial campaign. Fortunately, no runoff's were necessary in either party's primary, but we cannot expect to dodge that bullet every four years. Counties statewide could have spent $5.4 million — $1500 per voting precinct - to prepare for a runoff had we needed one last year, a financial bite few if any of them could afford. Now that we're far removed from the campaign, we can hopefully pass this money-saving legislation without current political considerations entering the debate. Other measures are also moving through the process. Among the bills now heading to the Senate floor is Senate Bill 2, wide-ranging legislation aimed at improving math and science education in Kentucky. Under the bill, schools could receive grant money to develop middle- and high-school programs to boost the number of students taking rigorous math and science classes. A similar provision would seek to expand energy-technology career education across the Commonwealth. If we want to ensure a better future for our children and grandchildren, we need to make sure they have the tools to compete and reach their full potential. Our target is to offer all students the opportunity to take challenging courses that both engage their intellects and prepare them for the new world economy.

The Senate Judiciary Committee

bill of the 2008 session. Senate Bill 5 make our roads considerably safer. The bill, which now awaits a vote by the entire Senate, deals with the issue of driving under the influence of drugs or alcohol.

Senate Bill 71 would allow law enforcement to arrest anyone caught driving under the influence of drugs, within certain parameters. Blood or urine tests would be used to determine whether the driver was impaired; prescription drugs taken as directed would not be illegal. There is currently an overwhelming burden on our police officers if they want to charge someone with driving while high, allowing too many dangerous drivers on our roads. Stiff DUI laws have helped decrease the numbers of drunk drivers on our roads, and we hope that treating drug intoxication in the same strict manner will do similar good. At the same time, the bill would lessen the threshold to penalize the most intoxicated of drivers. These drivers, whose blood alcohol level is nearly twice the legal limit, are by far the most dangerous, and getting them off the roads could drastically reduce the number of accidents in Kentucky.

The legislative process will continue picking up momentum in the weeks to come. That makes this a very important time for lawmakers to stay in touch with the people we serve, to report on our work and ask for feedback. If you'd like to share your thoughts on any issue confronting the Commonwealth, I hope you'll take the time to get in touch with me through the General Assembly's toll-free Message Line at (800) 372-7181 or e-mail me at johnnyray.turner@lrc.ky.gov.

BSCTC student Kara Kelly with light of her life, daughter Kaileigh Faith.

Kara Kelly

Beating the odds with positive outlook

by JOSHUA BEGLEY BSCTC FACULTY

To look at Kara, one would never think that she began life with a potentially crippling congenital hip dysplasia. In fact, she gets around better than many of her peers, attending a full day of classes on Mondays and Wednesdays at BSCTC's Prestonsburg Campus; working as a teller for First Financial Bank in Elkhorn City on Tuesdays, Thursdays, Fridays, and Saturdays; and still taking time to take care of her twenty-month old daughter, Kaileigh Faith, at home. Congenital hip dysplasia is a very serious disease-one that could rule every aspect of a person's life, but Kara has not only surpassed it, she has essentially made it into a strength.

Kara practically grew up in the Shriner's hospital. She spent the first six months of life in a cast and had to learn to crawl and walk in braces. She has undergone several major surgeries to correct her dysplasia and today walks just as well as anyone else, but it has left its mark on her in more than just physical ways.

Her father left before she was one and gave up all parental rights because he could not handle having a handicapped child. He has been little more than a ghost in her life. To support the two of them, Kara's mother, Deborah, went back to school to become a nurse. Deborah eventually remarried, but her second husband died of leukemia in 1997.

Kara has persevered through it all. She graduated from the Barbizon modeling school in 2004 and graduated from Pike Central High School with high honors. While she was in high happened—she became pregnant. Like being able to walk, Kara should have never become pregnant. The odds of her conceiving were astronomical due to her hip dysplasia, but again she beat the odds. Unfortunately, her classmates and even some faculty and staff ridiculed her and basically treated her as though her life would now be over. Thankfully, Kara did not listen to these voices. She had her daughter, finished high school while working 30 hours a week at Food City, and eventually enrolled into Big Sandy Community and Technical College where she is striving to earn an associates degree in nursing.

Eventually, Kara wants to become either an along with all this, she is also engaged - to Corey Chaney, Kaileigh's father.

But what makes Kara truly remarkablebeyond her amazing accomplishments—is the fact that she has not let a potentially crippling, life-altering defect rule her life. Many times people with severe problems allow those problems to define who they are and what they can do. Kara has refused to fall into that trap. Her success was determined long before she entered Big Sandy Community and Technical College with her positive attitude, her sparkling intelligence, and her strength of will. Her accomplishments in life are inevitable because she chooses to live life in a way that says "I can" rather than "I can't."

Trickle-up effect

by MARLA CILLEY

When we turn on our televisions and radios, the first thing we hear is how bad the economy is. I have a theory about all of the spin that is going on in the news. This has to do with our hearing. We have heard about the "trickledown effect" from the government to the people. Well, why can't it be the other way around? Let's try a different approach. For lack of a better term, I am going to call it the "Trickle-Up

Leanne and I taught you in our book "Body Clutter" that we need to look back just a little to see what has happened so that when we are faced with decisions to make, we will not keep making the same mistakes over and

We have an acronym for STUFF. It is: Something That Undermines Family Fun. We have allowed "stuff" to suck the life right out of us. Let me break this down for you:

In our inability to love ourselves, we have medicated ourselves with stuff., our attitudes. You know the saying, when the going gets tough; the tough go shopping. We would do anything to keep our minds from dealing with what needs to be done. We shop, shop, shop and then bring it home. Eventually, our homes begin to close in on us. We start looking for a new home that will hold all of our stuff. The more storage, the better; we may even rent a storage unit for the stuff that won't fit. We never get rid of anything for fear that we might need it one day. Let me just say that this is the 'poor" way of thinking. I was taught by Rita Davenport that what you think about, you bring about. Our way of thinking has created this downturn in

This way of thinking has been shaped by what we mostly hear; although we see alot in print, too. Every magazine, newspaper, television news program and political candidate is filling our heads with gloom and doom. I say let's quit listening to them. We have the ability to have a positive outlook on our lives by doing a few simple things.

Turn off your TV and radio. If you have to listen to something, choose programs that uplift your spirit, not drag you down into the gutter. Listen to beautiful music and books on tape.

family OHIO UNIVALSITY Medicine

Martha A. Simpson, D.O., M.B.A.
Associate Professor of Family Medicine

I just saw in the paper that one of my favorite sports figures may have testicular cancer. It is a young guy, 22, and is in great shape. I thought only old people who didn't take care of themselves got cancer. Can you tell me more about what might be going on here?

While many cancers are much more common in people over 50, there are also certain types of cancer that primarily affect babies, children and young adults. Testicular cancer is typically found in young men between the ages of 15 and 40, with the early 20s being the most frequently affected age group. There are about 8,000 new cases every year in the U.S. Overall in this country, testicular cancer accounts for about 1 percent of all male cancers and about 390 deaths annually.

As with many cancers, there are often no symptoms except for a painless lump. In fact, a painless testicular lump is the most common finding that brings a patient with testicular cancer into his doctor's office. Most often this lump is discovered by the man during a regular self testicular exam or during his regular shower routine. However, at other times the first symptoms that a man may notice are pain in the testicle or scrotum, enlargement of a testicle, or a sudden collection of fluid in the scrotum for no apparent reason. Sometimes, though, the only symptom may be a general feeling of heaviness and discomfort in the low back, abdomen or

Some people are at higher risk for testicular cancer than others. White males of Scandinavian descent have the highest overall incidence of testicular cancer. A family history of testicular cancer or a personal history of testicular cancer increases a man's risk. Men with an undescended testicle or men with a history of congenital problems in the genitourinary system are also at increased risk for the development of this disease.

If your physician finds a testicular mass, he or she will probably first recommend an ultrasound and some blood tests. The ultrasound can determine if the mass is a fluid-filled cyst or a solid tumor. It can also help your physician gauge the size of the mass. The blood tests can check for "tumor markers" — elements in the blood that are higher when cancer is present. Depending on the results of the ultrasound and blood tests, the doctor may recommend a biopsy.

Testicular cancer typically strikes

young men from 15 to 40

Generally when a testicular biopsy is called for, this means the suspicion of cancer is quite high. For this reason, the entire testicle is often surgically removed. Not only does this help prevent the spread of the disease to the other testicle, it makes a second surgery unnecessary if the lump is found to be cancerous.

Great strides have been made in recent decades in the treatment of testicular cancer. About 95 percent of men with this disease are now cured of it. Sometimes surgical removal of the diseased testicle is all that is needed. In other cases, depending on the type of cancer and its stage at diagnosis, chemotherapy and/or radiation may also be helpful. With one type of testicular cancer, a second surgery to remove lymph nodes is often helpful. As with all cancers, though, early detection not only improves your chances of a cure but also usually results in an easier course of treatment.

making them a big batch of delicious pancakes. He found a big bowl and a spoon, pulled a chair up to the counter, climbed up and opened the cupboard door and pulled out a heavy canister filled with flour, spilling quite a bit of it on the floor in the process.

Never mind, not discouraged, he scooped some of the flour into the big bowl with his hands, mixed in most of a cup of milk and added some sugar, mimicing Mom's skilled culinary efforts as best he could.

In the wake, he managed to leave a floury trail on the floor which his kitten had managed to walk through, leaving behind a few well placed tracks here and there. Brandon, too, was covered with flour and beginning to get frustrated.

He wanted this surprise to be something really good for Mom and Dad, something that would make them very happy, but it was getting very bad, very fast. Brandon didn't know what to do next - whether to put it all into the in the kitchen doorway. Big, oven or on the stove, plus, he didn't know how thestove even worked!

As if things weren't bad enough, suddenly he saw his kitten licking from the bowl of mix and reached to push her away, knocking the full egg carton to the floor!

Frantically, he tried to clean up this monumental mess but only slipped on the eggs, getting his pajamas white and sticky and wet. Just then, he looked up to see Dad standing crocodile tears welled up in Brandon 's eyes. All he'd wanted to do was something good, but he'd made a terrible mess of it all.

He was sure a scolding was coming, maybe even a spanking. But his father just stood there, watching him. Then, walking through the mess, Brandon's dad picked up his crying son, hugged him and comforted him, getting his own pajamas white and sticky in the process! That's how God deals with us. We sometimes try to do something good in life, with all the best intentions, but it somehow turns into a mess. Our marriage gets all sticky, or we insult a friend, or we can't stand our job, or our health goes sour. Sometimes we just stand in tears because we can't think of anything else to do. That's when God picks us up and loves us and comforts and forgives us, even though some of our mess gets all over

In life, we have to remember that just because we might mess up, we can't stop trying to "make pancakes" for others. Sooner or later we'll get it right, and then they'll be glad we tried. And, most importantly, so will wc.

Four new releases this week included two films that you can enjoy with the young ones as well as two films you should keep them far away from.

■ "Saw IV" — "Jigsaw" returns, via flashback, in this evenly paced sequel which opens with the grisly autopsy of the villain who orchestrated elaborate traps for his victims in the previous entries. This turns out to be good news as flashbacks give actor Tobin Bell a chance to show the audience what made his character into the madman who put everyone through their paces in previous entries. The bad news is that they kill off series regular Dina Meyer, a female detective in all the films, which puts two FBI agents on the trail of her murderer. This leads to another set of traps and 90 minutes to save a character before the final trap is set off. Another interesting ending but those have been petering out since the second entry.

■ "The Hunting Party" — War-torn Bosnia is the setting for this one, which mixes thriller, action and comedy elements. Richard Gere stars as a disgraced journalist who states, on a dare, that he can interview a war criminal. Unfortunately the man in question believes Gere is leading a hit squad to terminate him and responds appropriately. Not bad, though it loses steam at the end. An opening montage reveals a lot about the way news is covered (obscured) and there is a sturdy supporting role for the talented Terrance Howard ("Hustle and

"Sydney White" - Snow White gets updated in this coming-of-age comedy which transports the action to an incoming freshman at a university.

Amanda Bynes ("Hairspray") stars as Sydney, who feels pressure to join her mom's sorority but is drawn into a group of outcasts (who aren't named Grumpy, Sneezy, etc.) whom she galvanizes into challenging the status quo. Entertaining and a nice role for Bynes, who honed her comic timing on the dreadful "The Amanda Show.' ■ "The Game Plan" — Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson anchors this family film which focuses on an NFL quarterback who faces serious lifestyle changes when he finds that he has an 8-year-old daughter from a previous marriage. The young lady has a powerful impact on his hedonistic lifestyle and helps the man grow up and put aside childish things like dating arm candy when he can be with his daughter's wholesome ballet teacher. Not Shakespeare but well rendered and a nice role for The Rock.

they give you enough to feed your entire family. And what do we do? The food comes, we oooh and ahhh over how big the portion is and then we dig in. We will either eat till we're stuffed and bag it up to take home or we'll eat it all and complain about how full we are.

Let me share with you how many calories are in a typical chain restaurant meal. For fun, I'm going to share with you something I just ate at a major chain restaurant (thinking a salad would be a good choice) and how blown away I was that it was this many calories and this much fat-it's just unbelievable!

The Chicken Caesar Salad I ate had 1,010 calories and 76 grams (yes, SEV-ENTY-SIX) of 'FAT!! Hello?! I was absolutely STUNNED!! That's just not doing my body any favors! 13 grams of that 76 fat grams were saturated fat, too.

What does that tell you? Two things:

Diva

1) BEWARE of "healthy" main course salad options at restaurants and,

2) Restaurant salad dressings are usually really, really over the top fatwise and

And that brings me back to my original point: less food—we don't need to cat all of that! The "all-you-can-eat" mentality is particularly pronounced at restaurants. They BRAG about their hefty portion size! So how do you handle restaurants? Know what you're walking into, for starters. If it is a chain restaurant, look on line to see if you can find the menu and the nutritional info for the menu. Not all restaurants do that, but there are other sites out there with that info-just google

Second, have a back up plan. Order sauces, dressings and anything else that will lend a huge caloric and often, fatty punch to the meal, on the side. All restaurants will happily accommodate...just

Third, if you haven't split your meal with a dining companion, ask for a doggie bag right when your meal comes. Cut your meal in HALF or more, and bag it up. If it is off your plate, you are less apt to chow down on it and leave with a Thanksgiving-stuffed feeling.

And last but not least-keep restaurant eating as a treat and not a part of your weekly plan. Eating at home is always cheaper, most likely to be more nutritious, you control the fat and the salt and the service is predictable, right? Eliminating the negativity and commercials from the clutter in your heads will be a great beginning to the Trickle Up Effect. Don't get me started on all those commercials telling us what we "need"! The government seems to think that more spending is going to get us out of this rut. What does more spending do for you with your household budget? We spend it on clutter. That clutter needs a home and it is going to take yours from your family. More spending jacks up our credit card debt and eventually makes us feel bad. When we feel bad about ourselves and our homes, we start that downward spiral. Many of us are living paycheck to paycheck because we have homes and driveways that are filled with stuff because "something" said we needed it. I feel that we can make a difference in the hopeless feeling that is sometimes portrayed in the news media. When you are FLYing your outlook is happier. Those surveyors who call your home are wanting to hear about how bad things are. Don't give them the fuel to pollute our minds. I think the New Hampshire voters had a little trick up their sleeves with all these news people and pollsters in their state. I'd bet they all got together and decided to mislead them. After all, isn't it your right to keep your vote private? Whose business is it,

Here is my list for learning to feel more hopeful:

1. Shine your sink!(Don't shake your head 'NO' until you have tried it!) 2. Plan your meals and cook what you planned:

3. Pick up after yourself and get out into the sunshine and move your body! 4. Get rid of clutter in your home, and your head. 5. Live within your means; your income and the walls of your home.

6. Count your blessings and not your troubles. 7. Go to bed at a decent hour and turn off the TV.

8. Do it now! Do something today that will make tomorrow

9. Don't sweat the small

doesn't matter. 10. Laugh every day, even if it is at yourself.

11. And lastly, Love like there is no tomorrow. Because all we really have is today! Make the best of it, instead of feeling sorry for yourself.

Let's make our homes peaceful places to live so that we don't have to get sucked into the "Oh, Whoa is Me" syndrome!

Are you ready to FLY? Go shine your sink! It's a start to the Trickle-Up Effect!

Pikeville men's team moves up to 17th in NAIA Div. I poll

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE - Pikeville College has moved up three more spots in this week's NAIA Div. I poll.

The Bears are now 16-2 on the season and has won 13 consecutive games. They'll begin league play this weekend when they play host to West Virginia University Tech at 4 p.m. Saturday after-

The Bears used a convincing 87-60 win over Alice Lloyd College and a forfeit over Ohio State-Newark to stretch their streak to 13 and move up three spots to No. 17 this week.

Mountain State University got nine of the 11 first-place votes in the poll and remains atop the poll at 18-0. Georgetown, 19-0, is hot on their heels at LSU-Shreveport and Lee (Tenn.) complete the top five.

Of those, only 15-1 Concordia has a loss. California Baptist is 14-1 at No. 14, and Pikeville is one of four teams with two losses and the only one out of the top Campbellsville (18-3), under the direction of Paintsville native Keith Adkins, moved back up one place to No. 9 in a week that saw a lot of mobility in the rating. After six of the top eight remained the same, no team from ninth to the end held its position.

Georgetown Pikeville, Campbellsville are the only Mid-South Conference teams among the 44 getting votes this week.

The NAIA will continue to issue

No. 2 again this week. Concordia (Calif.), weekly ratings each Wednesday until March 5 when the final poll is released. Unlike other ratings which are used more for arguments than anything else, the NAIA poll plays a critical role in determining who makes it to the 32-team national tournament in Kansas City.

> There are 16 automatic qualifiers from the 11 conferences affiliated with NAIA Div. I basketball, and the winner of the independent tournament also receives a bid. Those teams will be removed from the final poll and the top 15 teams remaining will receive at-large bids to complete the tournament's bracket.

The 71st Annual Buffalo Funds-NAIA Division I Men's Basketball National Championship tournament will be played March 19-25 at Municipal Auditorium in Kansas City, Missouri.

Lewis named Louisville Reds sign pitcher Jeremy Affeldt No. 1 Memphis cornerbacks coach

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LOUISVILLE - Former Green Bay Packers defensive quality control coach Eric Lewis was hired to coach the cornerbacks at the University of Louisville, announced Cardinals' head coach Steve Kragthorpe on Wednesday.

Lewis joins the Louisville staff after spending two seasons with the Packers, who were eliminated by the New York Giants in the NFC Championship Game on Sunday.

Hired by Mike McCarthy 2006, the 31-year-old Lewis joined the Packers after serving as the secondary coach at Ball State University for three seasons.

With the Packers, Lewis assisted cornerbacks coach Lionel Washington and seccoach ondary Kurt Schottenheimer. His duties include breaking down opponent game film as well as organizing the playbook and installation.

While at Ball State, Lewis coached former Cowboys safety Justin Beriault to backto back first team All-Mid-American Conference honors (2003-04) and 125 tackles in

Pittman earns another OVC Newcomer of the Week honor

TIMES STAFF REPORT

MOREHEAD - Morehead State University sophomore center Brittany Pittman has earned the Ohio Valley Conference Newcomer of the Week award this week, it was announced Monday. Pittman averaged a double-double in the Eagles' two games last week, and this is the third time she has carned this honor in 2007-2008.

A 6-foot-3 Lexington native, Pittman averaged 17.5 rebounds per game in MSU's two games last week, including exploding for a career high and OVC-season high 23 boards in a 78-51 win over Jacksonville State. That total ranked tied for the the fifth highest game in school history. Pittman also nearly completed a triple-double against JSU with nine points and a career-high tying seven blocks. Against Samford, she contributed 11 points, 12 rebounds and six blocks.

Pittman ranks third in the nation in blocks. She is one of MSU's top all-time shot blockers.

This is the seventh weekly award MSU has received as a program this season.

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

CINCINNATI - Cincinnati Reds Executive Vice President and General Manager Wayne Krisvky today announced the signing of free agent LHP Jeremy Affeldt to a one-year contract through the 2008 season. Terms of the deal were not disclosed.

Krivsky said, "Jeremy gives us another veteran with a versatile points, Derrick Rose added arm who will compete for a spot in our starting rotation."

Affeldt, 28, last season for the Colorado Rockies posted a 3.51 ERA in 75 appearances, both career highs. He pitched in all four games of the World Series against the Boston Red Sox and didn't allow a run in 3.0 innings (2h, 1bb, 2k). During the regular season right-handed batters hit just .211, the fourth-lowest average among all National League southpaw pitchers.

On Aug. 16 at San Diego, Affeldt allowed five earned runs without retiring a batter. His ERA in his other 74 appearances was 2.75. In his Major League career, Affeldt is 25-27 with a 4.74 ERA and 18 saves in 42 starts and 244 relief appearances for the Kansas City Royals and Rockies. He made all 42 of his starts for the Royals, including 33 from 2002-04 and nine more in 2006.

EKU hires Dean Hood as head football coach

TIMES STAFF REPORT

RICHMOND - Eastern Kentucky University introduced Dean Hood, former Wake Forest and EKU defensive coordinator, as the 13th head coach of the Colonel football program Tuesday afternoon in O'Donnell Hall, Student Services Building Auditorium.

Hood, 44, joins EKU after working at Wake Forest University for the past seven seasons. Under Hood's direction, the Wake Forest defense was known for creating turnovers and scoring touchdowns. The Demon Deacons forced 186 turnovers from 2001-07, more than two per game. Last fall, Wake Forest led the Atlantic Coast Conference with 35 turnovers forced on its way to going 9-4 and capturing the Meineke Car Care Bowl.

"When we began this search, we identified several characteristics that we sought in our next head coach," EKU Director of Athletics Mark Sandy said. "Dean Hood is a wonderful blend of those ideals; great teacher, excellent recruiter, a person of high character, and someone who has been part of the EKU football heritage."

"We are very excited to be back," Hood said. "My wife is from here and we are happy to have our kids near her family. I am looking forward to the challenge of being a head coach. As you progress in this profession, you always think about doing things your own way. This is a chance to implement those thoughts.'

From 1994-98, Hood spent five seasons as an assistant coach at Eastern Kentucky under College Football Hall of Fame coach Roy Kidd. He served all five years as the secondary coach and the last two seasons as the defensive coordinator. In Hood's first stint at EKU, the Colonels captured two Ohio Valley Conference titles and advanced to the NCAA Division I FCS playoffs three times.

"We were fortunate to have a field of candidates, identified by Mark Sandy, who were men of character and proven coaching ability," Eastern Kentucky University President Dr. Doug Whitlock said. "I concurred in Mark's recommendation that Dean Hood was the best positioned to lead our football pro-

"This was a big deal for me," Whitlock continued. "T have been an Eastern football fan for almost 50 years; so I wanted us to find someone who would fit in with the community, had the kind of values that our football program has traditionally been built upon, and hopefully had been a part of the EKU football tradition. And, yes, we wanted someone who has been and will be a winner. Dean Hood fills all those par-

At Wake Forest, Hood and the rest of the Demon Deacons broke every program record imaginable in 2006 and set many other milestones. WFU won the ACC title for the first time since 1970 by shattering the program record with 11 victories. The Demon Deacons earned a berth in a BCS bowl game, taking on Louisville in the FedEx Orange Bowl.

Much of the credit for Wake Forest's 2006 league championship fell to the defense. The Demon Deacons allowed just 15.4 ppg to rank second in the ACC and 21st nationally. Against the run, Wake yielded just 105.8 yards per game to rank 21st nationally, the third lowest total in Wake Forest history. Against the pass, the Demon Deacons recorded 22 interceptions, second most in the nation.

Hood's defenders earned All-ACC mention 14. times. That list includes four NFL draft picks - Calvin Pace, Montique Sharpe, Eric King and Josh Gattis.

This will be Hood's first head coaching position and just the third EKU head football coach in the last 44 years.

"Knowing first-hand what Coach Kidd built here, this is one of the best jobs in the country," Hood said. "I remember when I was here the first time thinking how many guys in the history of athletics are still coaching in a facility named after them. That is rare. It is exciting to be at the helm of this program.'

"Dean will be a tremendous role model for our student-athletes," Sandy said. "He has worked with two of the best people who have ever served as mentors for young men - Roy Kidd and Jim Grobe. I am sure our current players, recruits, and fans will be impressed."

Hood was a three-time All-North Coast Athletic Conference selection during his playing days at Ohio Wesleyan University. He was also named a first team All-American defensive back during his senior year and served as team captain his final two seasons. The native of Ashtabula, Ohio, was inducted into the OWU Athletic Hall of Fame in 2001.

Hood graduated from Ohio Wesleyan in 1986 with a degree in biology. He went on to earn a master's in physical education from West Virginia University in 1989.

Patterson leads Kentucky to 72-66 win over No. 3 Tennessee

by WILL GRAVES ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON - Even Billy Gillispie smiled about this one.

Playing the kind of gritty defense that was the first-year Kentucky coach's trademark during his days at Texas A&M, the Wildcats smothered No. 3 Tennessee 72-66 on Tuesday night, forcing even the perennially grumpy Gillispie to crack a smile as the final seconds ticked away.

"We're really getting tough," Gillispie said. 'T'm telling you they were tired going into the game (but) our guys really fought hard. They dug as deep as they possibly could.'

Patrick Patterson led Kentucky (8-9, 2-2 Southeastern Conference) with 20 points and eight rebounds. Ramel Bradley had 16 points and Perry Stevenson added 14 points and seven rebounds for the Wildcats, who were 24of-28 from the free throw line and shot 49 percent from the field.

But it was Kentucky's defense which Gillispie had said was so porous the stretch, with disastrous results. at times this season it made him ill that pushed the Wildcats to their first win over a top five team since beating then-No. 4 Louisville in December 2005.

Kentucky held the Volunteers (16-2, 3-1) to just three field goals over the final 10 minutes to snap their 11-game during much of Gillispie's tumultuous winning streak. Tennessee's 66 points were the fewest the Volunteers have scored this season and nearly 20 points below their average.

"They missed some shots tonight they usually make," Gillispie said. "I thought our defense was pretty good. They are so hard to guard. We did an outstanding job.'

Though Tennessee's Chris Lofton scored 22 points, knocking down five 3pointers to set the SEC record for career 3s with 367 to break the mark held by former Arkansas guard Pat Bradley, Kentucky did an excellent job shutting down the rest of the Volunteers.

"We helped out each other on defense," Patterson said. "We were passionate tonight.'

Tennessee shot just 39 percent from the field, including 7-of-26 on 3-pointers. Take out Lofton's 5-of-10 effort from behind the arc, and the rest of the Volunteers were 2-of-16. Rather than try to exploit its size advantage in the lane, Tennessee settled for 3-pointers down

"We didn't have that intensity," Tennessee coach Bruce Pearl said. "I don't think it's because we were too confident at all. I just think getting up for a game every single night (is difficult)."

Though the Wildcats have struggled season - losing to Gardner-Webb and San Diego at home during a nightmarish nonconference schedule — the worst may finally be over.

"I told my team coming in that Kentucky didn't come in struggling, they've been playing the best basketball they have all season," Pearl said. "I think the last couple of weeks they've been playing well."

The win was Kentucky's second over a ranked opponent at Rupp Arena in less than two weeks. The Wildcats beat then-undefeated Vanderbilt in double overtime on Jan. 12, escaping after blowing a 16-point lead.

They showed more grit in this one, rallying from 10 points down early in the second half, eventually tying the game at 50 with 11 minutes left on Joe Crawford's second consecutive 3-point-

The teams spent the next nine minutes trading the lead before the Wildcats went ahead for good, 62-60, on two free throws by Bradley with 1:30 left.

Tyler Smith missed a 3-pointer — a common refrain for the Volunteers in the final minutes — and Bradley hit two more free throws to push the lead to four. Lofton then missed a rushed 3pointer and Jodie Meeks hit two free throws to put it away.

"We had the shots that we wanted, but I think we rushed them," said Tennessee forward Wayne Chism, who had 12 points. "We had good looks, we just couldn't knock them down at the Gillispie knew his young, inexperienced squad couldn't run with the deeper, more athletic Volunteers, so Kentucky spent most of the game grinding it out. The Wildcats would run 25 to 30 seconds off the shot clock at times, trying to shorten the game.

It worked despite the best efforts of Lofton. Mired in a shooting slump for much of the season, Lofton didn't waste any time heating up on the court where he became a high school legend. The native of Maysville - about an hour northeast of Rupp Arena - gave the Wildcats one last look at what they've been missing the last four years.

He hit a 3-pointer two minutes in, then took advantage of some overaggressive Kentucky defense by faking the jumper then slicing through the lane for two layups. He ended the half in style, giving the Volunteers a 36-30 lead ,with a fallaway 3-pointer just before the horn sounded.

Lofton disappeared for long stretches in the second half and was held without a field goal until the final 12 seconds, likely ending the highest ranking in Tennessee history.

"This was a huge confidence boost for us," Patterson said. "We believed we could win. When we play like this and believe in ourselves, we can roll."

second triple-double of the season and only the 12th in Big East regular-season history, the Cardinals' scoring leader paced an 80-60 rout of South Florida with another unselfish perfor-The junior forward didn't score until more than five minutes into the second half Wednesday night, but nevertheless helped Louisville (14-5, 4-2) build a 19-point halftime lead and cruise to its fifth win in six games.

Williams had 10 assists in the opening half and finished with seven points, nine rebounds and 11 assists.

"What I told the guys at halftime is, 'Some of you guys think scoring leads to greatness," Cardinals coach Rick Pitino said.

"Not only did he have 10 assists, but he didn't even attempt a shot. That's the impressive thing in today's world of instant gratification. That's an amazing thing for a guy just to go out there and say: 'Look, I'm getting my teammates easy shots.' You just don't find that today. That's why he's such a terrific player.

Earl Clark came off the bench to score 18 points and grab eight rebounds as the Cardinals bounced back from a 10-point loss at Scton Hall. USF (10-10, 1-6) has lost six straight - all in the Big East by double digits - after winning its conference opener against Rutgers.

Jerry Smith and David Padgett scored 12 apiece for Louisville, which led 45-26 at the half and used a 10-0 run to end any threat for a USF comeback after the Bulls trimmed their deficit to 63-49 with eight

"They were open. ... I didn't do anything special. I just threw them the ball," Williams

"I want to change my role to being the No. 1 playmaker on this team. Everybody's got different jobs, and my job as a playmaker is to get everybody else points."

Clark was 6-of-9 from the floor and scored 14 in the first half, and the Cardinals methodically built their 19point halftime lead while limiting USF to 39 percent shooting and using superior depth to wear down the undermanned

"We thought these guys could play with us, five vs. five," Pitino said. "We went all out with three different presses to try to play 10 vs. five because that's where we thought we had an edge."

Once again, Kentrell Gransberry was a virtual oneman show for USF until fresh-

Williams was more than man Dominique Jones got on track in the second half. The 6foot-9 center scored 14 of his team's first 18 points and finished with 22 on 10-for-16 shooting.

> Jones scored all 15 of his points in the second half.

Louisville squandered a 14point second-half lead against Seton Hall, but USF doesn't have nearly enough offensive punch to overcome such a

"That was a really good bounce-back game for us," Pitino said. "We're playing real good basketball right now. The correlation is we have good health, and that's a big part. We have a healthy lineup."

And a lot more talent than USF, which dropped to 5-34 in league play since entering the Big East three years ago.

"There's not a whole lot to say. ... We were outplayed," said Stan Heath, USF's firstyear coach. "That's a quality team. They have so much depth. They just come at you in

MOREHEAD - When the latest NCAA Statistics report was released on Monday, the Morehead State University men's and women's basketball teams, along with several individuals on those teams, were listed among the nation's lead-

In NCAA Division I women's basketball, Morehead * State ranks second in the nation in blocked shots per game (6.9). The Eagles broke the school single season record Saturday against Jacksonville State and now have 124 rejections on the year. The Eagle women also rank in the top five in the nation in three-pointers made per game (8.1, 5th) and three-pointers attempted per game (23.6, 4th).

Individually, MSU's Brittany Pittman continues to rank third in the nation in blocks per game (4.2) while sharpshooting senior Tarah Combs dots the list as the nation's fourth best three-point shooter with 3.3 per game. Her eight three-pointer effort against Jacksonville State on Jan. 19 is tied for the third highest game in Division I this season.

Pittman's 23 rebounds against JSU on Saturday also makes the list of the best individual games so far, coming in as the third highest rebounding game. The Eagles broke a school record with 15 total three-pointers against JSU, and that is tied for the 10th highest number of treys in a game this season. Anitha Smith-Williams boasts the sixth-best assist game in the country this season with 14 handouts versus Alice

On the men's side, senior floor leader and point guard Nikola Stojakovic ranks seventh in the nation in assists per game with 6.8, while his efficiency also has him ranking 29th in the country in assist/turnover ratio.

Junior forward Buchanan ranks 42nd nationally in free throw percentage, but his 15-for-15 perfect game at Bowling Green earlier this year is the best free throw percentage in a game of any Division I player in 2007-2008

West Virginia slips past rival Thundering Herd, 66-64

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

CHARLESTON, W.Va. -Mark Dorris led Marshall with 20 points and 10 rebounds for his first double-double of the season but it wasn't enough as the Thundering Herd men's basketball team dropped a 66-64 thriller to West Virginia in men's basketball action at the Chesapeake Energy Capital Classic on Wednesday.

Trailing by double digits for nearly the entire the game. Marshall rallied late in the game as guard Matt Walls hit a 3-pointer to cut the margin of deficit to just three points with four minutes remaining. Freshman Tirrell Baines followed up a Walls trey with just over a minute to go to cut the Mountaineer lead to two at the 1:30 mark.

After a 1-for-3 stretch from the free-throw line by WVU, the Herd took control of the ball and called timeout. Darryl Merthie was fouled on his 3point attempt and buried all three attempts to even the score at 64-64 with just 32 seconds remaining.

WVU forward Da'Scan Butler came back down the floor and hit a game-winning jumper in the lane. Merthie took the inbound pass down the sideline but was stripped as he tried to drive toward the hole while time expired.

Marshall struggled from the field early and the Mountaineers jumped out to a 37-27 lead at the half behind 6-of-10 shooting from threepoint range. WVU guard Alex Ruoff was 3-of-5 shooting in the first half and was one of four Mountaineers in double regulation and five players figures, finishing the game with 11 points. Ruoff was named the Capital Classic MVP for West Virginia.

"It was a good game," Marshall head coach Donnie Jones said. "There were some tough plays down the stretch. (West Virginia) made the shot they needed to make.

"I'm proud of the way our team fought. We were already missing some people injurywise and then Dorris fouled out. Our team fought and scraped and I'm really proud of our guys."

The Herd was without leading scorer Markel Humphrey for the second consecutive game (stress fracture in foot).

Both teams found themselves in foul trouble late in fouled out in all. Dorris, MU's Capital Classic MVP, left the game with 5:37 remaining in the game as did the Mountaincers' Wellington Smith just seconds later. Tyler Wilkerson also fouled out with just over four minutes to play and Joe Alexander fouled out with 1:29 left.

Merthie scored 20 points with four rebounds and an assist. Baines netted five points with seven rebounds.

Neither team took advantage of its free throw opportunities as MU shot just 63.6 percent from the stripe (21for-33) and WVU went 11for-28 (39.3 percent).

Marshall will travel to Houston to face the Cougars on Saturday at 8 p.m. ET. in a Conference USA matchup.

Falcons hire Jags defensive coordinator Mike Smith as head coach

by CHARLES ODUM

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA - The Atlanta Falcons say Mike Smith is everything they want in a head coach, no matter that he's never been one before.

The first test for Smith, the former Jacksonville defensive coordinator hired by Atlanta on Wednesday night, will be to outlast the 13-game stint of Bobby Petrino, the 2007 rookie coach who quit during the season to return to the college ranks. "Mike possesses all of the key qualities we were looking for in a head coach," said general manager Thomas Dimitroff, in his first month on the job.

Dimitroff said the 48-yearold Smith, a 26-year coaching veteran, "has strong experience with winning teams, a track record of success, a solid, smart approach to the game, and high character and integrity."

Smith, the Jaguars' defensive coordinator since 2003, had his second interview with the Falcons on Friday.

Smith said his emphasis on each side of the line will be the running game.

"My goal is to build a welldisciplined, hard-nosed football team that will be able to run the football on offense and stop the run on desense," Smith said. "I've always believed that's what makes championship teams.

Falcons quarterback Byron Lestwich was with Smith in Jacksonville for four years.

"T've played against his defense more than anybody in the world," Leftwich said. "I did it every day in practice for four years. I think he's a great guy for "A lot of people might not know his name, but I've seen the work he puts in every game, how guys were so prepared on Sundays that they knew exactly what teams were going to do."

Smith, a former defensive assistant with Baltimore, had the league's No. 12 defense with Jacksonville this season after sixth in 2005.

Leftwich said Smith would never receive enough credit in Jacksonville because many assumed Jaguars coach Jack Del Rio, a former defensive coordinator, was the real mastermind of the defense.

Jaguars defensive end Marcellus Wiley confirmed that opinion when he said on ESPN Wednesday, "Jack Del Rio was the defensive coordinator, and if it wasn't him, it was (linebacker) Mike Peterson."

Wiley said Smith "was just a guy who stood at the front of the room when Jack Del Rio was leading the defense.'

Wiley said the Falcons "really went down low on the totem

Jaguars defensive tackle Marcus Stroud said Smith is "definitely a deserving coach."

"He's been a good coach for a long time," Stroud said. "He will bring stability and a toughminded approach. He's a leader and will do a great job in Atlanta."

Leftwich said he was aware of Wiley's comments but said of Smith: "I was with him for four years. Somebody had to be calling those plays in Jacksonville. It was him.

"We always said Smitty would be a great head coach because the time he put in and the way he interacted with players and how seriously he took

The Falcons were mostly woeful in their 4-12 season, but most of the few bright spots were on defense, where Smith will find several established or ranking second in 2006 and gained the trust of a lot of Coleman, Keith Brooking, DeAngelo Hall, Lawyer Milloy and Michael Boley.

> before Even hiring Dimitroff, Blank's search focused on defensive coaches. The Falcons may try to build a strong defense around those established players while rebuilding an offense devastated by the exit of Michael Vick, the star quarterback who was the face of the franchise before his guilty plea to federal dogfighting charges.

Vick is serving a 23-month sentence. He also is under an indefinite suspension by NFL commissioner Roger Goodell.

A key early decision by Smith and Dimitroff will be whether to chose a new quarterback with the Falcons' first pick, as high as No. 3 overall, in the April draft.

The Falcons tried three starting quarterbacks in 2007, but Leftwich, Joey Harrington and Chris Redman are not seen as long-term answers at the posi-

The loss of Vick was too much for Petrino to overcome. Petrino quit with a 3-10 record to take a job at Arkansas, leaving secondary coach Emmitt Thomas to finish out the 4-12 season as the interim head

Smith will be Atlanta's sixth coach since December 2003. Before Petrino quit, Dan Reeves and Jim Mora were fired. Wade Phillips and Thomas worked three games each as interim replacements.

Smith first interviewed with Blank before the Jaguars lost to the New England Patriots in a divisional playoff game. His second meeting with the team was his first opportunity to meet Dimitroff.

Other candidates included Minnesota Vikings defensive coordinator Leslie Frazier and former Ravens defensive coordinator Rex Ryan.

The team did not wait on an interview with New York Giants defensive coordinator Steve Spagnuolo.

Teresa Earnhardt out front and running the show at DEI

by JENNA FRYER ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOORESVILLE, N.C. - High above the showroom floor, Teresa Earnhardt surveyed her employees as they hurriedly finished setting up for a reception.

When everything was finally in place and her media guests had been seated, the owner of Dale Earnhardt Inc. gracefully made her way to the front of the crowd to deliver a brief welcoming address. Then, the woman who has spent the past seven years shunning the press, stepped off the stage and worked the room.

Although she disappeared before the formal presentation of DEI's season goals, her effort didn't go unnoticed. It was a huge step for Earnhardt, who has stayed out of the spotlight since husband Dale Earnhardt was killed in the 2001 Daytona 500.

"Teresa's been dedicated and devoted to the racing organization," Max Siegel, the president of DEI's global operations, said Wednesday at the season-preview luncheon. "There has been some miscommunication that's been out there, and we've tried to surround her with a management team that can give her some comfort that things are being addressed and the right information is being disseminated and we are moving forward.

"She has participated in this company, whether it's out in front of behind the scenes, and I fully expect her to continue to do so."

The perception has long been that Earnhardt is an absentee owner who cared little about the race team and focused more on preserving the legacy of her late husband. It didn't help when the once-mighty organization hit a competition slump, and a personality conflict between Dale Earnhardt Jr. and his stepmother caused friction in their negotiations on a contract exten-

When Earnhardt Jr. grew weary of feeling underappreciated, and became convinced DEI could not be competitive with his stepmother in charge, he decided to leave the company at the end of last season. The bulk of his enormous fan base turned on Teresa Earnhardt, classifying her as the wicked stepmother who was well on her way to running DEI into the ground.

But she's taken numerous steps some large, such as merging with Richard Childress Racing on an engine program and acquiring Ginn Racing to build a four-car team, and others as small as simply speaking publicly - to prove that DEI is dedicated to moving forward and winning its first Sprint Cup title.

Surprised to learn Teresa Earnhardt had mingled with the media, front is good for the company.

"Max is a great face for the business, and if it's him, it's him. She doesn't have to do anything she doesn't want to," Earnhardt Jr. said later Wednesday at Hendrick Motorsports, his new race team. "It's up to her what she wants to do. If she wants to let Max handle it, then that's who we should all respect as the leader of the

But it would help, I think, the morale of the guys around there for her to plug in more into what's going on, so when she does come up to you and make a comment, you believe it's sincere and you don't think that's just her way of putting in her two cents every six months.'

The soap opera surrounding Earnhardt Jr.'s departure now officially over, DEI is doing its best to focus on who is with the company and not the driver who no longer races the flagship No. 8 Chevrolet.

The team is proud of its four fulltime teams, which will be championed by respected veteran Mark Martin, who was acquired in the Ginn merger and will pilot Earnhardt Jr.'s old ride for most of the season. Martin will split seat time with newcomer Aric Almirola, one of many young drivers DEI is grooming for the future.

The team also has Martin Truex Jr., who qualified for the Chase for the Earnhardt Jr. said putting herself out championship last season, and Paul ie season that ultimately closed on an upswing. Regan Smith, another Ginn acquisition, will fill the lineup and run for rookie of the year honors.

But it's hard to pretend that Earnhardt Jr. is no longer around. The majestic race shop seemed stripped of any mention of him, his 17 career victories and two Busch Series champi-

While not specifically addressing the whereabouts of Junior's memorabilia, Siegel said DEI will still root for

"I think on any given week, we have eight opportunities in three companies to make a positive impact on the Earnhardt legacy - Dale Jr. at Hendrick, the drivers over at RCR who are powered by Earnhardt-Childress (engines) and our five Cup drivers here," Siegel said. "This company is focused on the improvement of this race team and becoming a fine organization across the board, we have a great team of people who are here."

Unaware that all signs of him had vanished, Earnhardt Jr. said he didn't take it as a personal slight.

"I don't know what else you would expect," he said. "I'll tell you one thing - I don't think there's any animosity, and I don't think they would do anything to directly insinuate that we're totally free of that, or we don't want to have anything to do with him

Menard, who weathered a rocky rook- or we don't want to recognize his time here or whatever.

"I don't think there's any intention on that. I don't think Max is like that, I don't think Teresa is like that. If there is, it doesn't matter to me, because it 'doesn't matter to me. But I'm sure it looks different over there."

ARCA-Carter takes over No. 46 car: When the 46 Ford rolls off at Daytona, it may look much the same as it did in years past, but in reality, much has changed inside the Larry Clement-owned camp.

For one, the famous ARCA RE/MAX Series machine will be without its longtime occupant - ninetime champion Frank Kimmel after he announced he was forming his own team for 2008.

Clement will still be the car owner however, but the car will have a new cast of characters in and around it in 2008, most notably, a new driver.

That new driver is Denver, North Carolina racer Matt Carter, son of longtime NASCAR Cup crew chief/car owner Travis Carter.

The 45th annual ARCA 200 at Daytona will air live on SPEED at 4 p.m. ET Saturday, Feb. 9. The first practice is Thursday, Feb. 7 from noon-5 p.m. SIM Factory Pole Award Qualifying is set for noon Friday followed by final practice from 5:10-6:15

Bengals hire former Ravens' LB coach

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI - The Cincinnati Bengals on Wednesday hired as linebackers coach Jeff FitzGerald, who's had that role at Baltimore the last three seasons.

FitzGerald follows former Atlanta Falcons defensive coordinator Mike Zimmer to the Bengals as coach Marvin Lewis works on a defense that has struggled while the Bengals missed the playoffs the last two seasons.

Four Ravens linebackers - Ray Lewis, Bart Scott, Terrell Suggs and Adalius Thomas - were named to the 2006 Pro Bowl and the Ravens have been among the top NFL teams on defense. Last season, the Ravens defense ranked second against the run (79.3 yards per game) and sixth in overall defense (301.6 yards

The Bengals, who fired defensive coordinator Chuck Bresnahan and linebackers coach Ricky Hunley after a 7-9 season, were 27th in yards allowed and gave up 385 points.

FitzGerald, native of Burbank, Calif., played linebacker at Oregon State and began his coaching career as a graduate assistant at the University of Cincinnati. The 15-year NFL coach also INDIANAPOLIS - Tony Dungy insists family always comes before football.

But Dungy believes he can make those priorities coexist - even if it means long com-

With his passion to coach high, his family supportive of his ambitions, and the Colts team owner intent on bringing him back, Dungy followed his heart and his family's wishes Monday deciding to return for at least one more season as head coach before turning the job over to his chosen successor, Jim Caldwell.

"I love this franchise, I love my family," said Dungy, whose contract runs through back if I was going to shortchange either one, or my children were not for it. It was really a family decision."

The weeklong deliberation created an emotional tug-ofwar for the deeply religious

His family recently moved back to Tampa, Fla., and his 16-year-old son, Eric, is attending high school there. The perception was Dungy had to chose between leaving the NFL so he could be spend more time at home - as he often cajoles other parents to do - or becoming a regular commuter on off-days to fulfill family obligations.

Dungy believes he can do both well

Owner Jim Irsay offered to reducing his day-to-day workload, provide his own private jet for trips to Tampa, and give Dungy a chance to groom his longtime friend, Caldwell.

It wasn't the offers that convinced Dungy; it was the opportunity to keep winning and the chance to use coaching as a pulpit for his message.

"I enjoy my job, the players, the staff we have here and Bill (Polian) and Jim," Dungy said. "But it is a platform and that's something I talked to my wife and pastor about. I said 'I could stop and start a ministry, but I might not have a platform like this.' So I see it as a little more than a job."

Irsay wasn't the only Colts official relieved. Team president Bill Polian was pleased 2009. "I wouldn't have come make Dungy's life easier by with the outcome, and last week players repeatedly expressed their desire to have Dungy back.

> "I think there's not a guy in this locker room who wouldn't love to see him back," defensive tackle Darrell Reid said then.

> The 52-year-old Dungy has spent more than half his life coaching in the NFL and became the first black coach to win a Super Bowl last season. He'd like to add to that collection next season.

By promoting Caldwell to head coach-in-waiting, the Colts could also keep their legacy of stability in the coaching ranks in place.

Two-time league MVP Peyton Manning has played for only two head coaches, Dungy and Jim Mora, and one Manning's quarterback coach offensive coordinator, Tom Moore, in 10 seasons.

Running backs coach Gene Huey has been with the team for 16 seasons, offensive line coach Howard Mudd and linebackers coach Mike Murphy for 10, and defensive coordinator Ron Meeks, defensive line coach John Teerlinek and defensive backs coach Alan Williams all came with Dungy in 2002.

"I think that would be the hope and that we do keep moving forward, keep those guys in place, keep the same systems in place and keep getting the same types of players." Dungy said. "I think that would be Jim's hope." Caldwell, who turned 53 week, has last for six years and Dungy's assistant head coach the last three. With the unusual succession plan in place, Caldwell also gets a new title, associate head coach.

His only previous head coaching experience on the college or pro level was at Wake Forest where he went 26-63 in eight seasons.

However, he had become a trendy candidate over the past year, interviewing for jobs with the Atlanta Falcons and Baltimore Ravens earlier this month and the Arizona Cardinals last January.

Caldwell will now be included in more decisionmaking discussions although Dungy will retain his vote.

In 2003, King's Daughters brought together our team members, physicians, volunteers and community to help us create a new mission and vision for the medical center. These two themes describe who we are and what we want to become:

Our Mission: TO CARE. TO SERVE. TO HEAL. Our Vision: WORLD-CLASS CARE IN OUR COMMUNITIES.

It is our 3,656 team members who truly make King's Daughters an extraordinary place to work. Congratulations and thank you, Team KDMC, for making King's Daughters a true community partner, and creating a caring, compassionate environment for our patients and their families.
