Center for Autism opens

PRESTONSBURG — Local leaders and community members visited the Highlands Center for Autism to check out the facility during an open house on July 30.

The center officially opened on July 28, around a year after the initial plans to create a program based on the Center for Autism at the Cleveland Clinic Children's Hospital.

According to the Autism Society of America, "Autism is a complex developmental disability that typically appears during the first three years of life and affects a person's ability to communicate and interact with others. Autism is defined by a certain set of behaviors and is a 'spectrum disorder' that affects individuals differently and to varying degrees."

"I know the program at Highlands will not only be a success, but it will be a jewel in the state of Kentucky for the treatment of children with autism," said Leslie Sinclair,

Thousands rally against cap-and-trade

Those who attended Saturday's rally were fervently in support of coal mining and against passage of a "cap-and-trade" bill currently under consideration in the U.S. Senate.

HINDMAN — The grounds of the Knott County Sportsplex were transformed into a sea of bipartisan support for the coal industry Saturday, and organizers now say they are looking ahead to another event in Washington, D.C.

An estimated 15,000 people gathered at the site, according to organizers with Coal Mining Our Future, to take part in a rally against the "cap-and-trade" bill recently approved by the U.S. House of Representatives.

Community wishes Martin well in retirement

MARTIN — A popular Martin physician is hanging up his stethoscope for good after close to 50 years of providing family health care to the people of Floyd County.

Dr. Lowell D. Martin was honored by friends, family, coworkers and patients for his service during a special celebration held in Martin on July 30.

"Dr. Martin, we thank you for 47 years of dedicated service to your profession and community," said Kathy Stumbo, president of Saint Joseph-

Martin. "Enjoy your retirement with your family."

The Tommy Webb Band entertained the crowd with bluegrass music, while cooks prepared hamburgers and hot dogs on the grill. Despite the entertainment and food, most of the crowd focused on Dr. Martin as they waited for an opportunity to thank him for choosing to practice medicine in Floyd County instead of moving to another part of the commonwealth, or another state, for more money.

In Loving Memory, Dad

"Our Dad"

He has been our inspiration
Looking back through the years
Memories of a gentle man
Are among our souvenirs.

His good advice made us strong
And his guidance helped us so
If we give credit where it's due,
Then he's the one we owe.

It's hard to accept the fact
That he's no longer around
When it comes to a kinder man
None has been found.

What he's meant to us goes deeper
Beyond what a poet could say
And anything we tried to do never did repay.

We hope we made him understand
The value of his worth he lived up to what he was
"Humane and down-to-earth."
He expected nothing in return
For giving all he had
And made an impact on our life
A special guy "Our Dad."

In Loving Memory of My Husband Henry McGlone On Our birthday and 54th Anniversary

Dear God,
Please help me, in my feeble way, to somehow do something each day to show my loved one who has passed away (April 24, 2009) only 3 months ago, today, that my faith in him stood each test. Let me show him in some small way the love I still have for him each day and prove beyond all my doubt and fear the love he had for me, I hold so dear.

All the happy memories go flitting through my mind. In all my thoughts and memories I always seem to find the picture of your face, the memory of your touch, and the little things I came to love so very much. I cannot go beyond my thoughts or get the love we had out of my mind. I will always keep you in my heart and forever in my mind.

Although I may not have told you, I think you knew it was true that I found daily happiness just spending the time with you. There is happiness in knowing that my heart will always be a place where I can hold you and keep you near to me.

The stairway to heaven is too steep for me to climb. God let me have you for all those years so I could call you mine. I will be sleeping by your side when God calls me home. No pain, no sorrow, no tears shall be shed. I will be sleeping by your side forever in a peaceful, restful sleep. We will always be together in the sweet by and by.

Your wife, Lydia

Rogers announces $17.85 million to fight drugs

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Rep. Harold "Hal" Rogers announced Friday that the House of Representatives has approved $17.85 million for a variety of drug interdiction and eradication programs that benefit southern and eastern Kentucky.

Through Rogers' leadership, Operation UNITE, drug enforcement operations in the Daniel Boone National Forest, nation-wide prescription drug monitoring programs, and marijuana eradication efforts by the Kentucky National Guard all received funds this summer during consideration of the FY10 federal budget.

"I applaud the House for passing these important funding measures to rid our communities of drugs. As our region continues to tackle the epidemic of drugs, it is comforting to know that Operation UNITE and state and local law enforcement partners will be able to carry on their successful programs and rid our streets of drug pushers while drug users get the help they need," said Rogers. "The combination of crime investigators, church pastors, educators, and medical professionals has made a tremendous impact on our neighborhoods and has taught our young people of the serious dangers of drugs. Operation UNITE brings hope to our region as its vital work strengthens communities, offers addicts a way out, and encourages families to live drug free."

The following is a summary of the 2010 funding passed by the House of Representatives:

- $4.45 million for Operation UNITE's law enforcement operations was included in the FY 2010 Commerce, Justice, Science and Related Agencies Appropriations bill which passed on June 18, 2009. One of UNITE's priorities is creating drug task forces for interdiction, confiscation and undercover operations.

- $2 million for Operation UNITE to continue its school substance abuse counseling, curriculum development, substance abuse treatment and voucher programs was included in the FY 2010 Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education Appropriations Bill passed on July 24, 2009. UNITE also organizes local citizens' groups, coordinates drug treatment programs, and works with educators to expand drug awareness programs in local schools in an effort to keep the region drug-

- $7 million for the Hal Rogers Prescription Drug Monitoring Program to continue efforts throughout the county to monitor prescription drugs through state-sponsored purchase tracking programs included in the FY 2010 Commerce, Justice, Science and Related Agencies Appropriations bill which passed on June 18, 2009. With rising numbers of people using prescription drugs and selling them illegally, this system operates in 33 states and allows law enforcement and the medical community to effectively monitor drug distribution and diversion.

- $900,000 for marijuana eradication, methamphetamine lab disruption, and drug enforcement in the Daniel Boone National Forest was included in the FY 2010 Interior, Environment and Related Agencies Appropriations bill, which was approved by the House of Representatives on June 26, 2009. Law enforcement will work to keep this national treasure drug free and safe.

- $3.5 million for the Kentucky National Guard to continue counter-drug efforts throughout the Commonwealth was included in the FY 2010 Defense Appropriations Bill passed on July 30, 2009. The Kentucky National Guard is a critical part of state-wide drug prevention activities and is working hard to ensure that Kentucky is a better place to live as drugs are taken off the street.

These legislative measures await further action by the U.S. Senate.

A national ID

Not many people may have heard of the Real ID Act. Under the original law, passed by Congress with little or no public debate in 2005 in response to the Sept. 11, 2001, terror attacks, anyone who might be boarding an airliner in this country after Jan. 1, 2010, or entering a federal building, will need to present a "Real ID."

As a matter of principle, having to possess and show a standardized, tamper-resistant federal ID card is not a bad thing. It provides for a level of security, and it's something needed if workable immigration reform is to be achieved in this nation.

The 9/11 commission originally proposed the Real ID because 18 of the 19 Sept. 11 hijackers had obtained state driver's licenses and used them to board planes on the day of the horrendous attacks. But since Real ID was enacted, states have been in open rebellion because of the costs of implementing the program. The National Governors Association has estimated the costs imposed on states to be as high as $11 billion. So far, 13 states have passed laws refusing to implement Real ID, and others are considering doing so. In California, Sen. Gilbert Cedillo, D-Los Angeles, has introduced legislation to bring state law into compliance with Real ID.

The problem, as many others and we see it, is the procedures for obtaining a Real ID. Under the original law, every applicant for a driver's license would have to present to his or her state department of motor vehicles a verifiable birth certificate, a verifiable Social Security number, proof of address and proof of immigration status. This and other information would have to be digitized and entered into a database accessible to other states' motor vehicles departments.

Here are some of the major problems:

First, verifying all these documents would be extremely time consuming (meaning costly to state taxpayers) for state DMV workers. Also, many Americans do not have verifiable birth certificates issued in the United States.

Second, state motor vehicle department data is fairly widely accessible, though some states, such as California, have enacted laws to limit access to these data. However, privacy rights experts warn that data collected by states could turn into a treasure trove for identity thieves.

To avoid these problems, a modified program, Pass ID, has been introduced in the Senate. It still would require a secure national ID card, but it would be far less costly for states to implement because data such as birth certificates and home addresses would not have to be verified. Nor would states have to construct databases searchable nationwide.

Experience tells us Real ID in its original form never will be implemented. The revised proposal has its own flaws, but at least it provides a way to move forward. Congress should debate and approve an amended ID law.

Public health is the issue

A few years back I made the healthy, informed decision to quit smoking. Two years, five months, four days, and 12 hours to be exact, but who's counting? The main reason I gave up the habit was that I was tired of keeping myself awake at night wheezing. I thought, "Ok, if the sound of my own breathing is this obnoxious, perhaps I should quit smoking." A secondary reason, however, was that I could see the writing on the wall, and it was a "No Smoking" sign.

We all know smoke is bad. There is no one on the planet who is disputing this fact. Sure there are those who debate just how bad it is, but everyone agrees, it's bad. I'm not going to waste column space boring you to death with endless data and statistics, on why smoking is bad. Instead, I'd like to try to sell you on another idea of why the city should pass this ordinance.

As of July 2009, 24 states have passed statewide smoking bans, including North Carolina. A "No Smoking" sign on Tobacco Road — who'd of think? There are also 19 localities in Kentucky that have created some form of smoking ban.

After Lexington passed their smoking ban in 2004, cities and towns across the state started falling like dominos. Paintsville and Pikeville have both passed some measure of a smoking ban, and now, after much urging by local activists, Prestonsburg and its leaders are considering following suit. That was until local leaders decided to start loading the ordinance up with exemptions in an effort to "protect the rights of business owners." Their stance is that, because smoking is legal, establishments should be able to choose for themselves whether or not to allow it. This argument is simply a diversion to take the emphasis off the real issue. The real issue is whether or not the city council will continue to allow one segment of the population to kill the rest of us.

Near the turn of the 20th century, a radical journalist named Upton Sinclair traveled to Chicago to investigate the miseries of the working class, and expose their plight in a novel. But what he is remembered for is pointing a spotlight on the disease-ridden conditions of the meat packing industry. "The Jungle" caused a public outcry that would help spur Congress to pass the Meat Inspection Act and the Pure Food and Drug Act of 1906. Those in power looked at the industry, and rightly decided that there needed to be some regulation to insure the public health. There was undoubtedly some O'Reilly-esque conservative of the time who felt these acts were an unnecessary regulation of capitalism, but I think most of us agree, clean meat is a good thing. I like my steaks medium rare, free of tubercular bacteria.

Had Congress decided against regulating the meat packing industry, instead encouraging them to police their own, we would likely still be eating rotten meat. I don't know if you've followed the news in the last year, but American business doesn't exactly have a track record for making self-imposed changes that protect the consumer. If you doubt me, go take a look at your 401k to refresh your memory. In the history of this country, almost without exception, it falls upon the government to provide regulations and restrictions on business in order to protect the citizens.

This ordinance represents an effort by the local government to affect the public health for good or ill. There are some on the council, who would like to deflect the issue by trumpeting the rights of business owners. Don't let them. It's time to let our leaders know, that we're done eating rotten meat.

Smoke ban opponents employ 'smoke and mirrors'

As I express my opinion regarding the proposed smoke-free ordinance in Prestonsburg I want to make it quite clear that, as a former member of Prestonsburg City Council (1988-1994) I have great respect and understanding for the eight individuals who now sit on that side of the table. I encourage everyone to appreciate the dedication and commitment required to serve in a capacity as the "people's voice" in local government. During my six years such issues as the restaurant tax, liquor by the drink and Mayor-Council vs. Commission form of government were all debated and discussed and hard decisions were required of each of us sitting there. Therefore it is with a great understanding of your position that I write this letter.

As I see it, there are some clear issues of disagreement, in reality two major arguments that are being tossed out against the ordinance and one major argument in favor of the smoke-free ordinance.

First, those who are against the smoke-free ordinance want to point to this "intrusion" by government into private business. The argument would be that anyone who pays business taxes, fees and has a permit should be allowed to decide about whether to permit smoking in the business or not. My answer is that, as you read the voluminous laws of federal, state and local governments, you will find many instances where, for the good of the many, the government has established rules and regulations regarding business operations. I could cite numerous CFR, KRS, KAR and the Uniform Commercial Code which allows the much enjoyed free enterprise of our democracy. But let's just say that government regulating business is not anything new. And let us add that one of the roles of government and its elected representatives is to make laws that respect the rights of all citizens, not a select few (maybe 30 percent) who choose to smoke. The majority, not the minority, deserve the right to breathe "smoke-free" air. Any decision regarding law should consider the best interests of the majority of residents.

A second popular opinion is the entire issue of charitable gaming revenues and the dependence upon these by deserving local charities. This argument continues despite much evidence to the contrary. Surveys in communities that have gone smoke-free indicate no reduction in such revenues after the implementation of the ordinance. This includes sites in Kentucky and in Delaware. These independently commissioned surveys measure what has actually occurred, not just the fears of those who were opposed to the ordinance, and the surveys were based upon real numbers obtained in a reasonable time before and after the ordinance went into effect. The surveys do take into account underlying economic conditions and are published in respected scientific journals. I seriously doubt that those who enjoy bingo will stop playing for the inconvenience imposed by an ordinance that would simply require a short "break" from the game.

In summary, arguments one and two are presented by those who would use "smoke and mirrors" to confuse the issue and to open large gaps, or "loopholes" in the implementation and enforcement of the law. The key word in these efforts is exemption. A weakened ordinance can appear to take small steps toward the goal but leave the issue completely unresolved. A good ordinance will be strong in its statement that the issue is not a business issue, not a political issue but is a public health issue that allows no exceptions or exemptions beyond those guaranteed within private residences or facilities as named in the original (first reading) ordinance. Anything beyond this sends the message that second-hand smoke is not an issue.

Therefore let's look at the facts about secondhand smoke and determine who should be protected. Secondhand smoke is a toxic air contaminant. Secondhand smoke is the third leading cause of preventable death in the United States. There is NO risk-free level of secondhand smoke. Many Prestonsburg residents do not smoke, but at least 70 percent are regularly exposed to secondhand smoke in workplaces and public places. Opponents of the smoke-free ordinance advocate that citizens have a choice as to whether to enter a "smoke-free" establishment and that the proprietor of that establishment should have the choice whether to permit smoking. With the documented knowledge about secondhand smoke, these arguments won't "hold water." Government must insure that the public can base its business choice upon quality of business product and quality of business service absent any issue of whether to walk through second-hand smoke in the process. Any limits of choice should fall upon the few, not the many.

Little Sandy Singers and Actors perform

PRESTONSBURG — Big Sandy Community and Technical College presented the Little Sandy Singers and Actors in concert on July 24, at 7 p.m. in Gearheart Auditorium in the Pike Building on the Prestonsburg Campus.

The performance was presented by the children participating in BSCTC's annual summer Children's Music and Drama Camp under the direction of Laura Ford Hall, BSCTC Assistant Professor of Communication and Music and Drama Director. Assisting Hall were Clayton Case, Alyson McKenzie, Candace Preece, Lindsey Small, Wada Robinson, and Sarah Adams. Timothy Cooley served as Technical Director for the production.

"The children named themselves the Little Sandy Singers," Hall said. "Having seen and heard the Big Sandy Singers, they asked if they could be the Little Sandy Singers."

The children are from all over the Big Sandy region, representing Floyd, Pike, Johnson, Martin and Magoffin counties.

Twenty-six children participated in the camp this summer where they learned basic and concepts of vocal music as well as a drama/acting component. They applied all of the concepts they learned during the live production that included choral music "Circle of Life" from the Lion King, "Seasons of Love" from Rent, "Splash Splash," "Car Wash," "Amazing Grace My Chains are Gone," and more. The students also performed comedy skits in the form of monologues, duos and short plays.

The performance also featured a Michael Jackson tribute by student Jesse Osborne and a gospel music segment.

"The workshop this summer was fun, memorable, and full of talent," said Hall. "It was a blessing to get to work with every child and I look forward to working with them even more as they grow."

The BSCTC Music Program looks forward to upcoming events including the Big Sandy Singers new album release in October and the Singers' performance in Dollywood on Aug. 13. The ladies' community singing groups InHarmony and Serenade will start again on Aug. 31st, and the Big Sandy Idol program will begin auditions and shows in each of our region's high schools in Sept.

Rally

amount of greenhouse gases that can be emitted from coal-fired power plants and forces companies to purchase permits for the right to burn carbon emitting fuel, a part of the plan critics say could cause a drastic increase in power bills for the everyday consumer and make burning coal impractical for these companies.

Many present at Saturday's rally said coal is inextricably intertwined in the society and economy of Eastern Kentucky, and damage to the industry is bad for the region.

Mike Eversole, of Perry County, works for International Coal Group and said he attended the rally to show his support for the industry and the jobs it provides. He noted that he couldn't predict what the cap-and-trade bill would do to the industry, but if the mining of coal halts, so does the economy of Eastern Kentucky.

"If there wasn't coal there wouldn't be electricity," he said. "There wouldn't be a whole lot of other stuff, because about everything ties into coal. Not only that, but wherever there was coal mines in the towns, it would hurt the economy."

The rally was held on a former surface mining site near Hindman, and many made note of the fact that the Sportsplex itself is being paid for with coal severance funds. The Perry County Fiscal Court had on display several items used within the county paid for by coal severance receipts, such as one of the ambulances used at the Perry County Ambulance Authority, as a display of how coal mining had made an impact on the services local government can provide.

Mixed in with the miners and their families were several local and state politicians, both Democrat and Republican, from several counties in Kentucky, and they all had something to say about the effects cap-and-trade would have on the everyday consumer's wallet.

"The administration in Washington with the cap-and-trade bill, they're after us. All they're doing is a hidden tax," said Democratic state Rep. Fitz Steele, of Hazard. "We're going to pay 25 to 40 percent higher at least in energy prices, not counting our food and fuel prices, and not counting when people get laid off and lose jobs. We're going to have to help take care of them, too, which that means other programs will be cut on down the line. It will be a domino effect."

State Sen. Brandon Smith, a Republican from Hazard, noted that party and county line politics didn't seem to play in Saturday's rally.

"People are all together for one cause, that we obviously want to impact or shape the cap-and-trade issue where it doesn't just wipe us out," he said, adding that coal could lead the country down a path to energy independence. "Everybody complains about us, wanting us to be fuel independent, and yet we're purchasing oil and borrowing money from countries that hate us. The only thing we have that every side has looked at and said it could make us independent is coal, and we've turned our back on it."

State Sen. Robert Stivers, R-Manchester, had some harsh words for the Democratic leadership in Washington, saying House Speaker Nancy Pelosi and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid don't have the best interests of Eastern Kentuckians in mind.

"There's people in Washington named Pelosi and Reid. I want you to remember those names," Stivers told the crowd. "because anybody that walks up there, and they want to sit here and say they want to talk the talk, and they're going to walk up to Washington and walk the walk with them, they're not walking the walk with us."

Several other speakers were included in Saturday's rally, including Perry County Judge Executive Denny Ray Noble, Knott County Judge Executive Randy Thompson, and state Rep. Keith Hall.

Haven King with Coal Mining Our Future noted that Saturday's rally was in part a gauge to see how much support the coal industry could muster for a later rally in Washington, D.C. According to King, the estimated 15,000 people who showed up this past weekend illustrated that there is enough interest in traveling to the nation's capital to hold a similar event.

"We've got plans to go to Washington," King said, noting that the next rally will be held after Congress comes back into session. "They come back Sept. 7, so we're trying to plan around that and see."

Hundreds of people have already signed up and said they will attend the rally in Washington, and King added that his group has been in contact with coal associations in several other states in an attempt to gain more support. King said for local residents, he believes transportation will be provided to the nation's capital, and those interested can email Coal Mining Our Future at info@coalminingourfuture.net for details.

"We've got the interest, we saw that the people came together," he added. "Those people were fired up because I think they're realizing Congress is moving too fast, and we need to slow them down." Eventually the country needs to move to use more renewable energy, and everyone realizes this fact, King continued.

An estimated 15,000 people attended Saturday's rally in support of the coal industry at the Knott County Sportsplex.

"We're not against renewable energy," he explained, adding that the country should move to make wind and solar technology more efficient. He also added that the country should have moved to utilize coal-to-fuel technology 30 years ago as well.

King said he thinks eventually some political campaigns in the state could hinge on the coal issue, and he doesn't see how people from Eastern Kentucky could overwhelmingly vote for candidates taking the anti-coal stance.

"I don't see how someone from Eastern Kentucky could vote for someone that's against coal," he said. "Without coal, you know what we'd be."

Goodwill, Family Circle holding back-to-school clothing drive

SOMERSET — To ensure that every child goes back to school in style this year, Goodwill Industries of Kentucky and "Family Circle" have teamed up to launch a 5 million pound clothing drive, which will run from Saturday, Aug. 1, through Wednesday, Sept. 30.

The partnership will be featured in the September issue of Family Circle, the magazine's first-ever issue dedicated to a back-to-school theme, as well as www.shopfamilycircle.com, the brand's new e-commerce destination.

Family Circle and Goodwill invite parents to put their gently-used adult and kids' clothes to work by donating them so that another child can have a "new to them" outfit for their first day of school. The donated items will be sold at more than 56 Goodwill retail stores throughout Kentucky, making affordable clothing available to families on budgets. The program will also generate revenue that funds Goodwill's job training programs and career services to help families achieve economic success.

"Not only is donating to Goodwill a great way to clean out closets and teach your children about gratitude, responsibility, and the opportunity to help others, but your donation will help fund Goodwill's job training, employment counseling, and adult literacy programs for people with disabilities or other disadvantages," said Ken Bean, vice president of the Cumberland Division of Goodwill Industries of Kentucky.

Readers can help Goodwill and Family Circle reach their five million pound goal by attaching the coupon from the magazine's September issue with their clothing contribution. The coupon can also be downloaded and printed from www.shopfamilycircle.com/goodwill, where readers can find helpful information about organizing their own back-to-school clothing drives.

"The Family Circle community is always looking for ways to give back and get involved," said Carey Witmer, publisher of Family Circle. "Partnering with Goodwill — both in the magazine and on our new e-commerce destination — is a great way to give our readers the tools to help families in need."

program director of the Cleveland Clinic Center for Autism. Shelli Deskins, Ph.D., director of the Highlands Center for Autism, was pleased with the opening. "It was quite a successful day," Deskins said. "I am confident that our children will make great progress and that we will grow quickly. We've assembled a talented group who work wonderfully with the children. We are fortunate to have a president and CEO, and members of the board of directors, who recognized the critical need and took swift action to make this a reality." According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, one in 150 children in the United States is born with autism, and a limited number of treatment services and facilities are available nationwide. The Highlands Center for Autism currently has the ability to accommodate up to 20 students, and hospital officials expect the center to grow in the future. "We hope to see the center grow and create additional components that will one day position it to become a regional and national resource for the diagnosis and treatment of children with autism, said Harold C. Warman Jr., president and CEO of Highlands Health System. "Highlands is proud to lead the way, in Kentucky, to treat children with autism. It's been exciting for all of those who have worked on the center and watched it come together. Now, they remain excited for its future growth and success, and especially excited for the many lives the Center for Autism is sure to touch."

Burglary

Among those items were a Playstation 3, a Dell laptop computer, various collectible lighters and an extensive knife collection. The open case had remained somewhat dormant for the past several weeks until recently some photographs were taken of a number of the knives and later shown to Newsome, who identified them as belonging to him. Wheelwright police officer Randy Johnson said the unnamed individual was shown the knives and had known of the burglary, which led him to Newsome, according to statements.

These items were recovered following investigation into a burglary taking place at Wheelwright on July 4. A father and son have been charged with receiving stolen property, but a suspect for the burglary is still being sought.

ing the initial search. Police initiated the search at approximately 7:30 p.m. Saturday night and finished some two hours later, recovering a total of 63 collectible knives and the missing Dell laptop, along with the other items. Perry's father, Jimmy Perry Sr., was also taken into custody at the residence. After questioning, the father and son allegedly told police they had purchased the items from an as of yet unnamed individual and were consequently charged with receiving stolen property. Both Perry Jr. and Perry Sr. said the items were bought about a week after Newsome reported the burglary to police. Now the investigation will shift focus in seeking a suspect to connect to the July 4 burglary itself. "There will be more arrests pending," Johnson said Saturday. "We'll be continuing the investigation through to a conclusion from this point."

pected use of alcohol. Two bicycle crash fatalities occurred and one of those victims was not wearing a helmet and one crash involved the suspected use of alcohol. Bicycle crashes occurred in Hardin and Jefferson counties. Through August 2, preliminary statistics indicate that 447 people have lost their lives on Kentucky roadways during 2009. This is four fewer fatalities than reported for the same time period in 2008. There were 369 motor vehicle fatalities and 202 of those victims were not wearing seat belts. Eighteen pedestrians have been killed. Fifty fatalities involved a motorcycle and seven fatalities involved an ATV. A total of 100 fatalities have resulted from crashes involving the suspected use of alcohol. Citizens can contribute to highway safety by reporting erratic drivers to the Kentucky State Police toll-free at 1-800-222-5555. Callers will remain anonymous and should give a description of the vehicle, location, direction of travel

While many people on the verge of retirement have specific plans about what they are going to do once they say goodbye to their careers,

Martin said he isn't so sure about what the future might hold. "I'm just going to lay back," Martin said. "I may teach some. I've always liked to teach." After hearing testimonies from friends and family, Martin was presented with gifts from Dr. Chandra Varia, Sen. Seniors lead Betsy Layne girls' team in summer play

Reynolds headed into second season as head coach

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

BETSY LAYNE – Defending 58th District girls' basketball champion Betsy Layne played 22 games as part of its summer season. The Lady Cats played 11 games prior to participating in the Georgetown College team camp. Betsy Layne played 11 games during the Georgetown camp, which featured girls' high school basketball squads from across the state.

Devon Reynolds is headed into her second season as Betsy Layne head coach. Betsy Layne finished the 2008-09 season 16-9. Eventual champion Johnson Central defeated Betsy Layne 42-19 in the 15th Region Tournament semifinals.

"Our girls did well this summer," Reynolds said late last week. "During the summer games we were able to consistently play nine girls. All nine girls have the capability of playing a lot of minutes and this is especially important to our style of play. Our seniors – Megan Hamilton, Lindsey Martin, Faith Reynolds and Amby Tackett – played well this summer. I was impressed with the play of our seniors and their efforts."

Hamilton will enter her senior season touted as one of the top girls' high school basketball players in Eastern Kentucky.

"Megan had a great summer playing some of the best ball I have seen her play," Reynolds commented. "She has an incredible amount of talent and I really think she is going to shine during her senior year."

Last season, Hamilton averaged 16.9 points and 3.9 steals per game.

Martin has developed into a proven floorleader for the Lady Cats.

"Lindsey Martin is a great point guard who doesn't get the recognition she deserves," Reynolds added. She is the true definition of a leader by example."

Last season, Martin averaged 4.1 assists and less than one turnover per game. She also averaged nine points per outing.

Faith Reynolds is an emerging post player for the Lady Cats.

"If center/forward Faith Reynolds carries her play from the summer over into the season she will definitely have a great senior year and will make a big impact on our game," Reynolds said.

Tackett is a talented newcomer for tradition-rich Betsy Layne.

"Amby Tackett is an addition to our team this season," Reynolds noted. She is a great shooter, can handle the ball well and played well during our summer games."

Junior Taylor Hott – one of Eastern Kentucky's most underrated girls' high school basketball players – averaged 17 points and over three steals per game for Betsy Layne last season.

"Taylor is a tremendous defensive player as well as one of our top offensive threats," Reynolds added. "Taylor was named to the WYMT all mountain defensive team this past season."

Betsy Layne is scheduled to host Allen Central in a 58th District opener Dec. 4.

UK star Meeks to appear in Pike, Knott

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE – Former University of Kentucky stand-out Jodie Meeks will visit Eastern Kentucky next week for a series of autograph sessions in Pike and Knott counties. Meeks is set to do autograph sessions August 15, at Wal-Mart in Pikeville from 11 a.m.-1 p.m., the Knott County Sportsplex from 2-4 and at Pikeville High School from 6-8. Meeks set the single game UK scoring record last season with 54 points against the Tennessee Volunteers. The Milwaukee Bucks drafted Meeks in the second round of the NBA Draft.

Meeks set the single game scoring record on January 13 at the University of Tennessee and led the Wildcats to a 90-72 victory. That night saw the Norcross, Georgia native hit a school record 10 three-pointers. He broke the record of 53 points Dan Issel had set in a game against Ole Miss.

The 6-4 Meeks left the University of Kentucky early to enter the NBA draft. He recently completed play in the NBA Summer League where he averaged over 16 points per game.

Meeks began his career at the University of Kentucky by earning freshman All-America honors. He averaged 22.1 points per game and led the team in free throw shooting as its first sub off the bench. His sophomore year was lost largely to injury, but he still managed to average 8.8 points per game. He lost 20 games of the season to a variety of injuries including a hip flexor strain and a stress fracture of the pelvis area.

"Getting Jodie to come to Eastern Kentucky is a great thing for our local basketball fans," said David Clevenger of BCI Basketball. "He will sign autographs for the two-hour period at each location. Admission won't be charged for the events, but those that attend the event will be expected to purchase memorabilia to secure an autograph."

"The autograph signing is one of a number of special basketball events that Kentucky BCI Basketball is committed to bringing to the region. Events like these show our commitment to the youth basketball market and give local families a chance to create lifetime memories."

Wal-Mart of Pikeville, Total Pharmacy Care of Pikeville, Potter Medical Clinic of Lackey and Kentucky BCI Basketball are sponsoring the autograph sessions.

SPORTS EDITOR

PRESTONSBURG – Longtime Floyd County educator Pete Grigsby Jr. is in the early stages of a three-month break. Grigsby recently retired from his position as Floyd County Schools Assistant Superintendent. Following a mandatory three-month stint away from the board office, Grigsby will begin work as Floyd County Schools Athletic Director Nov. 1. His three-month break started Aug. 1.

Former Floyd County AD Keith Henry will work with Grigsby out of an assistant role. Before Aug. 1, Grigsby had the opportunity to meet with some of the school ADs and coaches in the Floyd County system. He plans to meet with all of them when he gets back on the job in November.

"I'm looking forward to getting started," Grigsby said. "It's important that we build a foundation of participation – organization from top to bottom with the high school coach in each sport as the leader while emphasizing to build for the future. There's so many benefits that come from athletics."

Grigsby, who has earned KHSAA Court of Honor recognition, played basketball at the University of Kentucky under legendary coach Adolph Rupp following a brilliant career at Martin High School. The Floyd County native made a name for himself in the coaching ranks as he led the McDowell High School boys' basketball program to statewide prominence as a head coach.

IRS alerts public to new identity theft scams

The Internal Revenue Service reminds consumers to avoid identity theft scams that use the IRS name, logo or Web site in an attempt to convince taxpayers that the scam is a genuine communication from the IRS. Scammers may use other federal agency names, such as the U.S. Department of the Treasury.

In an identity theft scam, a fraudster, often posing as a trusted government, financial or business institution or official, tries to trick a victim into revealing personal and financial information, such as credit card numbers and passwords, bank account numbers and passwords, Social Security numbers and more. Generally, identity thieves use someone's personal data to steal his or her financial accounts, run up charges on the victim's existing credit cards, apply for new loans, credit cards, services or benefits in the victim's name and even file fraudulent tax returns.

The scams may take place through e-mail, fax or phone. When they take place via e-mail, they are called "phishing" scams.

The IRS does not discuss tax account matters with taxpayers by e-mail.

The IRS urges consumers to avoid falling for the following recent schemes:

Making Work Pay Refund

This phishing e-mail, which claims to come from the IRS, references the president and the Making Work Pay provision of the 2009 economic recovery act. It says that there is a refundable credit available to workers, consumers and retirees that can be paid into the recipient's bank account if the recipient registers their account information with the IRS. The e-mail contains links to register the account and to claim the tax refund.

In reality, most taxpayers receive their Making Work Pay tax credit, which was designed for wage earners, in their paychecks as a result of decreased tax withholding, not as a lump sum distribution from a federal fund. Additionally, consumers and retirees who are not wage earners are not eligible for this tax credit.

Inherited Funds/Lottery Winnings/Cash Consignment

In this phishing scheme, recipients receive an e-mail claiming to come from the U.S. Department of the Treasury notifying them that they will receive millions of dollars in recovered funds or lottery winnings or cash consignment if they provide certain personal information, including phone numbers, via return e-mail. The e-mail may be just the first step in a multi-step scheme, in which the victim is later contacted by telephone or further e-mail and instructed to deposit taxes on the funds or winnings before they can receive any of it. Alternatively, they may be sent a phony check of the funds or winnings and told to deposit it but pay 10 percent in taxes or fees. Thinking that the check must have cleared the bank and is genuine, some people comply. However, the scammers, not the Treasury Department, will get the taxes or fees.

Form W-8BEN

In this scam, fraudsters modify a genuine IRS form, the W-8BEN, Certificate of Foreign Status of Beneficial Owner for United States Tax Withholding, to request detailed personal and financial information. This could include nationality, passport number, bank account and PIN numbers, spouse's name and mother's maiden name, or other personal or financial information or security measures for financial accounts. The scammers may use the genuine form number and name or may make up a new form number, such as W-4100B2.

They either e-mail or fax the form or letter. If only a letter, the letter itself contains the request for the personal and financial information. The letter, which claims to come from the IRS, states that the recipient will face additional taxes unless he or she quickly faxes the required information to the number provided by the scammer.

In reality, taxpayers file the genuine Form W-8BEN with their financial institutions, not with the IRS. Additionally, the genuine W-8BEN does not request the taxpayer's passport number, bank account number, security or similar information.

Refund Scam

The bogus e-mail, which claims to come from the IRS, tells the recipient that he or she is eligible to receive a tax refund for a given amount. It instructs the recipient to click on a link contained in the e-mail to access and complete a form for the tax refund. The form requires the entry of personal and financial information. The refund scam is the most common one seen by the IRS. Several recent variations on this scam have claimed to come from the Exempt Organizations area of the IRS. Some others have included the name and purported signature of a genuine or a made-up IRS executive.

Taxpayers do not have to complete a special form to obtain a refund. Taxpayer refunds are based on the tax return they submit to the IRS.

How to Spot a Scam

Many e-mail scams are fairly sophisticated and hard to detect. However, there are signs to watch for, such as an e-mail that:

- Requests detailed or an unusual amount of personal and/or financial information, such as name, SSN, bank or credit card account numbers or security-related information, such as mother's maiden name, either in the e-mail itself or on another site to which a link in the e-mail sends the recipient.

- Dangles bait to get the recipient to respond to the e-mail, such as mentioning a tax refund or offering to pay the recipient to participate in an IRS survey.

- Threatens a consequence for not responding to the e-mail, such as additional taxes or blocking access to the recipient's funds.

- Gets the Internal Revenue Service or other federal agency names wrong.

- Uses incorrect grammar or odd phrasings (many of the e-mail scams originate overseas and are written by non-native English speakers).

- Uses a really long address in any link contained in the e-mail message or one that does not start with the actual IRS Web site address (www.irs.gov). To see the actual link address, or URL, move the mouse over the link included in the text of the e-mail.

What to Do

The IRS does not initiate taxpayer contact via unsolicited e-mail or ask for personal identifying or financial information via e-mail. If you receive a suspicious e-mail claiming to come from the IRS, take the following steps:

- Do not open any attachments to the e-mail, in case they contain malicious code that will infect your computer.

- Do not click on any links, for the same reason. Also, be aware that the links often connect to a phony IRS Web site that appears authentic and then prompts the victim for personal identifiers, bank or credit card account numbers or PINs. The phony Web sites appear legitimate because the appearance and much of the content are directly copied from an actual page on the IRS Web site and then modified by the scammers for their own purposes.

- Contact the IRS at 1-800-829-1040 to determine whether the IRS is trying to contact you.

- Forward the suspicious e-mail or URL address to the IRS mailbox phishing@irs.gov, then delete the e-mail from your inbox.

Genuine IRS Web site

The only genuine IRS Web site is IRS.gov. All IRS.gov Web page addresses begin with http://www.irs.gov/. Anyone wishing to access the IRS Web site should initiate contact by typing the IRS.gov address into their Internet address window, rather than clicking on a link in an e-mail.

FOR THE TIMES

It was 40 years ago last Monday that Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin first set foot on the moon, capturing the attention of the entire world. While we remember that time in history, we should also be looking ahead as we forge a new path into outer space with the collective efforts of the international community.

We made other trips to the moon following that July day in 1969, but mankind has yet to return in over 30 years. We should have been further along than we are today in space exploration.

After all, it was only a few years after the Wright brothers took flight that we had established an intercontinental air service, and only a few years after that before we made international flight common practice.

It was only 66 years thereafter that we escaped the gravitational pull of the earth and walked on another heavenly body. So why is it, as we've made so much progress in manned flight, that we haven't been beyond the moon?

I suppose the biggest obstacle is cost, but somewhere along the line is competition. In the 1960s we had the Russians, but today we don't really have anyone with whom we're competing to set a human foot on Mars or anywhere else for that matter.

The Chinese have set a goal for the moon, but we've been there and done that, so there no impetus for us really get into a race. Add to that the notion of how much it would cost to travel to Mars and it's no wonder why we haven't set a date as to when we'll be able to go as the public isn't all that compelled about the issue.

A lot of people today seem to be disinterested in space exploration. With all of the terrestrial issues we face I can see why, but exploring the other regions of our solar system is something that I personally see as quite important.

We need to set up settlements on other planets and moons and take the first real step in becoming a society that is not bound by the shackles of our own world, but one where traveling to the moon is as

20 YEARS LATER

Family and friends continue to push for country musician's entry to Hall of Fame

Twenty years after his death, the legend of Keith Whitley continues to grow as fans, friends, and family push for the late country musician's entry to the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Whitley, a native of Sandy Hook, rose to prominence in 1984, and continued on the path to stardom until his death from alcohol poisoning in May of 1989. In that short period of time, 19 of Whitley's songs landed on the Billboard country charts. The song "I'm No Stranger to the Rain" earned Whitley his first and only award from the Country Music Association.

Bonnie Hill, a resident of Floyd County, serves as director of the Keith Whitley Association and is one of the leading voices in preserving the memory of Whitley and his work.

"Keith's music has influenced a lot of people," Hill said. "We would really like to see him inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Some big names in the music industry would also like to see it happen."

Hill is a long-time fan of Whitley's music, having watched him perform in concert several times.

"I was talking to Flo, Keith's sister-in-law, and I asked her what I could do because I felt like I owed something to Keith," Hill said. "I created a petition and posted it online. It has over 3,000 signatures."

On Saturday, the Keith Whitley Association presented a special concert at Renfro Valley that included the presentation of a portrait of Whitley drawn by well-known artist Corey Frizzell to the Kentucky Music Hall of Fame.

Later this year, on Oct. 10, the stars will come out for a memorial concert in Whitley's honor at the Nashville Palace that will include performances by Ralph Stanley, Ken Mellons, Billy Ryan and others.

Whitley will be a candidate for induction to the Kentucky Music Hall of Fame in 2011.

'The Legend of Jenny Wiley' will take you back in time

Almost three years have passed since we last saw "The Legend of Jenny Wiley," a musical based on the life of eastern Kentucky's local heroine, portrayed on the outdoor stage at Jenny Wiley Theatre (JWT).

"I constantly hear people say that they saw the show back in the 70s, 80s or even the 90s, but the show has evolved so much since then. It's always different, this season especially," said Executive Director, Martin Childers. "We've created a gorgeous, more realistic set that we plan to use for many seasons to come."

"The updated set blends seamlessly with the natural surroundings of the park and impressively recreates the environment of frontier Kentucky," Childers explained.

"In addition to the new set, the costumes and props, particularly firearms, are historically authentic due to the efforts of Costume Designer, Sarah Farnham, Props Master, Joshua Hurlley and Production Manager, Dupre Berry. I know people will be thrilled and surprised by the spec-

Telling the story of a pioneer woman who sees her family killed and is taken into captivity for a year as a rousing and entertaining musical is not an easy feat, according to Childers.

"The key to bringing our audiences along for Jenny's difficult journey is to give them a world and people they can relate to and believe in," Childers said. "This production showcases the relationships, hardships and celebrations of the pioneer people of Kentucky. Jenny's story is legendary, but we can't forget that it's a true story of the power of the human spirit, and much like in the Biblical story of Job, it is Jenny's unerring faith that sustains her."

"The Legend of Jenny Wiley" opened on Saturday night at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets are available by calling the Jenny Wiley Theatre's box office at 606-886-9274 or by visiting online at www.jwttheatre.com.

Our Yesterdays

The Floyd County Times reported in its February 10, 1938, issue that Senator Joe P. Tackett, of Floyd County, introduced a resolution to the Kentucky Senate, last week, protesting the alleged encroachment of the federal government on state's rights, and asking the two Kentucky Senators, Barkley and Logan, to oppose the anti-lynching bill, now before the national Senate.

"Our Yesterdays," printed each Wednesday in The Times.

26 kids perform as the Little Sandy Singers

Big Sandy Community and Technical College (BSCTC) presented the Little Sandy Singers and Actors in concert on July 24, at 7 p.m. in the Gearheart Auditorium located in the Pike Building on the Prestonsburg Campus.

The performance was presented by the children participating in BSCTC's annual summer Children's Music and Drama Camp under the direction of Laura Ford Hall, BSCTC Assistant Professor of Communication and Music and Drama Director. Assisting Hall were Clayton Case, Alyson McKenzie, Candace Preece, Lindsey Small, Wada Robinson, and Sarah Adams. Timothy Cooley served as Technical Director for the production.

"The children named themselves the Little Sandy Singers," Hall said. "Having seen and heard the Big Sandy Singers, they asked if they could be the Little Sandy Singers."

The children are from all over our Big Sandy region, representing Floyd, Pike, Johnson, Martin, and Magoffin Counties.

Twenty six children participated in the camp this summer where they learned basic and concepts of vocal music as well as a drama/acting component. They applied all of the concepts they learned during the live production that included choral music "Circle of Life" from the Lion King, "Seasons of Love" from Rent, "Splish Splash," "Car Wash," "Amazing Grace My Chains are Gone," and more. The students also performed comedy skits in the form of monologues, duos, and short plays.

The performance also featured a Michael Jackson tribute by student Jesse Osborne and a gospel music segment.

"The workshop this summer was fun, memorable, and full of talent," said Hall. "It was a blessing to get to work with every child and I look forward to working with them even more as they grow."

commonplace in the future as traveling to Europe is today. Not to mention that space travel is really neat in theory.

But think of all the possibilities that landing on Mars, setting up permanent colonies, and living off the land of a barren planet presents for the future of our species. Mars, for instance, is no doubt full of natural resources we can exploit for the furtherance of our own development, and practices like terra farming could set the stage for future missions into the farthest reaches of our own solar system, and eventually beyond. There is no reason for us to think that Mars is as far as we can go.

Space exploration can also help us answer the question of whether or not we are alone in this universe as well. We know from scientific observation that the universe has countless stars, and there's no reason to think that there isn't one out there just like our sun, with a planet orbiting it just like our earth. It wasn't an accident that mankind was put on this earth, so why should we think there aren't more like us?

We did indeed take a giant leap on July 20, 1969, and I hope we're destined to take an even larger step sometime in my lifetime.

Isn't her life worth 70¢?

If increasing Kentucky's cigarette tax saved just one child, it would be worth it.

The fact is, higher cigarette taxes are proven to reduce youth smoking. A 70-cent increase in our tax would keep thousands of kids from smoking and raise millions for critical programs - including tobacco prevention, health care and education.

Anything less short-changes our kids and the state budget.

Call Rep. Stumbo at 1-800-372-7181 and tell him to support a 70-cent cigarette tax increase.

Cigarette taxes - our kids are worth every penny.

Through it all, newspapers did their jobs, too

We salute newspapers across Kentucky. When power was off for more than 700,000 state residents, the Internet was down, many cell phones didn't work and Kentuckians begged for news about the ice storm and emergency shelters - and just about anything else - overall, Kentucky newspapers didn't miss a beat - or an issue. Keeping their readers informed was their top priority.

Kentucky's newspapers - we bring the news closer to home.
