Jobless rate drops

For the first time since February 2009, Kentucky's seasonally adjusted preliminary unemployment rate fell below 10 percent to 9.9 percent in July 2010, according to the Office of Employment and Training (OET), an agency of the Kentucky Education and Workforce Development Cabinet. The revised rate in June 2010 was 10 percent.

The July 2010 jobless rate is .9 percentage points lower than the 10.8 percent rate recorded in July 2009 for the state. The 9.9 percent rate recorded in July 2010 is the lowest unemployment rate recorded since February 2009 when the rate was 9.6 percent.

"The decline in Kentucky's unemployment rate in July 2010 continues to be a result of the decrease in the state's civilian labor force because people have become discouraged in their job search. People who have not looked for a job in the last four weeks are no longer counted in the labor force," said Ron Crouch, director of research and statistics in OET.

The U.S. seasonally adjusted jobless rate remained at 9.5 percent from June 2010 to July 2010, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

Second animal cruelty charge filed

by JARRID DEATON FEATURES WRITER

TRAM - A Tram man has been charged with two counts of cruelty to animals after Floyd County Code Enforcement Officer Randy "Hoot" Bryant located a mule that appeared to suffer from neglect on the man's property.

The case has been merged with an earlier case that involved a cruelty to animals charge

Wayne Clark, the alleged owner of the animals, was charged with two counts of seconddegree cruelty to animals.

According to Bryant's report, "Upon arrival at the Clark residence, did observe one mule tied to vehicle. Animal appeared malnourished as well as dehydrated from continuous exposure to the sun and lack of accessible drinking water. Animal's coat was matted from lack of cleaning and brushing."

The case also involves a horse that was allegedly subjected to mistreatment by being tied up, which caused its leg to be cut to the bone by the rope.

Clark was also charged with public nuisance through accumulation of rubbish after Bryant

Numerous city, local, state and coal company officials made the drive up to Slate Dump Hill in Wheelwright Thursday for a groundbreaking for what those involved say could ultimately be a coal removal and reclamation project that could see city coffers filled with nearly $500,000 when work is completed.

Coal could mean boost of half-million to Wheelwright

by SHELDON COMPTON STAFF WRITER

WHEELWRIGHT - City leaders saw a break in what has been nearly a two-year process of finding some use for, or rather a company to remove, coal reserves located along a ridge known as Slate Dump Hill in the city limits.

As far back as March of last year, city attorney Tim Parker said that a bid had been awarded to a company to remove the coal, but that a holdup developed with members of a family, long since moved away from the area, who still owned

Pike flood victims sue coal companies

by JARRID DEATON FEATURES WRITER

PIKEVILLE - Prestonsburg attorney Ned Pillersdorf is representing a group of residents from the Harless Creek area of Pike County who claim that coal mining activities contributed to the damage that occurred to their homes and property during the devastating flood that occurred on July 17.

The lawsuit alleges that AEP Kentucky Coal and the Cambrian Coal Corporation were engaging in ongoing coal mining activities in close proximity to the Harless Creek area of Pike County in 2009 and 2010. The plaintiffs allege that the coal companies "either caused and/or exacerbated the horrific flooding and destruction ... following a rainstorm that occurred on July 17, 2010."

According to the lawsuit, "The defendants' mining activities played a substantial role in causing massive amounts of water to suddenly escape from their mining sites that resulted in the Harless Creek Road being transformed into a raging river that engulfed and destroyed many of the plaintiff's homes, vehicles and other property. During the tidal wave of water unleashed by the defendants, many of the plaintiffs were left stranded in their homes and helplessly watched as their homes and personal possessions were destroyed and washed away."

The lawsuit cites the violation of mining regulations by the coal companies, along with the violations of environmental regulations, as evidence to support the plaintiff's claims.

The plaintiffs are seeking compensation for damages that includes loss or diminution in value of homes, destruction of homes, lost contents, lost vehicles, loss of earnings, the replacement of the water supply and other damages included pain and suffering and the costs of alternative housing and transportation along with other reasonable foreseeable damages.

Changing the future of Alzheimer's

by TERI SHIRK

Baby boomers and Gen Xers whose parents or grandparents have been ravaged by Alzheimer's Disease would surely welcome a cure — a breakthrough that would restore the precious memories and personality traits loved ones have lost and enable them to perform simple, everyday functions such as smiling, speaking and recognizing a

A cure to one of America's most feared and costly disease is the ultimate goal of the Alzheimer's Association.

But even modest advances that slow the progression of Alzheimer's or delay its onset would dramatically reduce the numbers of today's active adults who suffer from the disease over the next 40 years. Incremental improvements also would achieve dramatic savings for the Medicare and Medicaid (not to mention out-of-pocket costs not covered by these federal programs and not including the value of inpaid care given by family members and others). Those are two compelling reasons to reverse America's chronic underinvestment in, and the lack of a national plan for, Alzheimer's research.

Rapidly Aging Population Means Dramatic Increase in Alzheimer's

A recent report released by the Alzheimer's Association jound that, absent even incremental advances in the onset or progression of Alzheimer's Disease, the number of Americans 65 and older who are suffering from the disease will balloon 265 percent, from 5.1 million today to 13.5 million, by mid-century. In Kentucky, the numbers will grow from 80,000 to nearly 212,000.

The report also found that, without a breakthrough that will delay onset or slow progression, the total annual cost of care for Americans with Alzheimer's will rise from $172 billion today to more than $1 trillion in 2050.

Today, there is no cure for Alzheimer's. And there are no treatments that can prevent, delay, stop or slow the progression of the disease.

What if?

But what would happen if a breakthrough that delayed onset by five years occurred by 2015? In that case, according to the report, we would see a dramatic reduction in the number of Alzheimer's victims in as little as 10 years, as the number of Americans 65 and older with the disease would decrease from 5.6 million to 4 million. By 2050, 5.8 million fewer Americans would have Alzheimer's, and 3 million fewer Americans would be in the severe stages of

The costs for treatment also would drop significantly: the Medicare and Medicaid programs combined would save $42 billion annually by 2020 and $362 billion annual-

Similarly, a treatment breakthrough by 2015 that slowed the progression of Alzheimer's - assume a scenario where those with the disease would remain in each of the mild and moderate stages five times longer than they do now — would mean:

■ The number of Americans in the 'severe stages of Alzheimer's in 2020 would drop from 2.4 million to 1.1

■ The number of Americans in the severe stages in 2050 would drop from 6.5 million to 1.2 million.

Annual Medicare and Medicaid savings would be $34 billion by 2020, and $180 billion by 2050.

While America's search for a cure is ongoing, the projections clearly show that research leading to breakthroughs that delay onset or slow progression of

House week in review

by REP. HUBERT COLLINS

Public pension reform is an issue that tracks far beyond the Bluegrass State where public employees who, like 91 percent of full-time public employees nationwide, are guaranteed a retirement pension based on their salary and years of service.

These so-called "defined benefit" plans have been the standard retirement choice for most states for decades. But as pension costs have risen over the past decade with a decrease in plan contributions and increasing number of retirements among other factors, defined benefit states have found themselves looking at a plan most private sector companies have been using since the early 1980s: the defined contribution plan.

Defined contribution plans, which include 401(k) plans, are individual retirement accounts that invest contributions from employees and employers to meet an individual's retirement needs. How much money is in the plan at the time of retirement is that person's retirement income, which means much of the risk assumed by the state is passed on to the individual.

When you look at today's investment markets, any risk probably looks too risky. We all wish we could go back to those "good old days" of the late 1990s and 2000 when the good old' defined benefit plan seemed to work just fine. As recently as 2001, according to State Legislatures magazine, 31 of the 73 state defined benefit funds that use the most common accounting methods had assets totaling more than 100 percent of the amount they would eventually have to pay out in benefits. Now, the number of state even close to being 100 percent capable of meeting all its accrued liabilities is Delaware.

Still, only a small number of states have switched over to defined contribution plans, while a few offer both a defined benefit and defined contribution plans. Some offer defined contribution plans as an option for employees. Some states that did use defined contributions plans eventually switched to cash-balance or back to a defined benefit plan because of poor investment returns for members of the retirement system. But the fact remains that a large majority of states are defined benefit based, and the few examples of state that have tried defined contribution plans have done so with mixed results. According to Legislatures magazine, Nebraska used a defined contribution plan for its state workers for 35 years but changed to a cash-balance plan to get better returns. West Virginia, which enrolled its teachers in a defined contribution plans 20 years ago, switch to a defined benefit plan in 2005 because of small growth in invest-

States that have recently changed the general layout of their retirement plans include Alaska, Georgia, Michigan and Utah, where major investment losses led lawmakers just this year to offer new employees a choice: a defined contribution plan, or a reduced defined benefit plan that employees must contribute to "if the state's contribution turns out to be inadequate," the magazine reported. The second option also provides workers with an individual retirement account in which any amount of employer contributions not used for the defined benefit part of the plan is deposited.

It is that second option that most closely resembles the plan in Georgia, which dropped its defined benefit plan in 2008. And under Michigan's new system, approved this year, requires all new school employees be enrolled in a hybrid defined benefit and contribution plan after July 1 of this year. The hybrid raises both age and years of service requirements for the defined benefit plan compared to the current defined benefit plans for school employees and adds defined contribution plans as an option. Alaska also recently moved from a defined benefit plan to alternatives. .

I guess we could say the jury is still out, so to speak, on how the changes states have made to their plans will work out. Kentucky's pension reform of 2008 also needs tweaking as we discussed last week. Pension costs are rising, and states cannot afford the debt. So more work must be done.

I will have more news affecting our Commonwealth next time. Have a great week ahead.

by DONALD KAUL OTHERWORDS

Tea partiers get upset when you call them racists. "We're not racists," they yell. "We're God-fearing Americans who don't like Obama's socialist, affirmative-action ways. We just want freedom from government interference in a colorblind

So you say, "What about that time a bunch of you lined up at the Capitol and yelled racist epithets at black congresspersons as they went into the building?

"It never happened," the tea partiers shout. (When they're not yelling, they're shouting.) "Show us the clips. There are no videos of the alleged incident. It never happened."

Well, they've got a point. Everything that happens these days seems to be recorded on somebody's camera and finds its way to YouTube with startling rapidity, yet there are no pictures or recordings of the inci-protestors could have been yelling "Freedom for Niger," or something

Right-wingers like Glenn "Loony Tunes" Beck have taken up the partiers' cause with a counter-attack, charging the black legislators and their allies with "reverse racism."

I don't know exactly what that means but I'm guessing "Nyah, nyah, you're another" is close to it.

It is my considered opinion that they are both right. Tea partiers are racists. So are African Americans who object to tea partiers. Racism is woven into the very fabric of our society. It's written into the Constitution, our founding document, which for purposes of representation and taxation counted black people as three-fifths of a person. As further evidence I offer a column by Charles Blow of The New York Times. Blow writes about polls he's found interesting, complete with charts and graphs. Recently he laid out the results of a Quinnipiac poll on attitudes toward President Barack Obama, broken down by race and ethnicity.

For example, the poll asked people whether they would vote for Obama if the election were being held today. Eighty-seven percent of African-American respondents said they would. This compared with only 49 percent of the Latinos interviewed.

Whites? A mere 28 percent said they would vote for the president this time around.

That remarkable gap is repeated in the poll on a variety of issues. Does the respondent approve of the way Obama is handling the presidency? Ninety-one percent of the blacks say yes as against 37 percent of the

Cats play in Canada, Reds lead division

Night Race rolls back around at Bristol

by RICK BENTLEY TIMES COLUMNIST

Ever get to a point where you have to sit back and wonder what is happening to you? I'm pretty sure today will wrap up one of those weeks for me.

As you may have heard, the Kentucky basketball team played three games in this Canada week. Beginning Sunday, they played on consecutive days in Windsor, Ontario, in a facility the size of the Pikeville College Gym. Or at least that's how it looked on Sunday during the two or three minutes I had it on.

Look, I love the Cats as much as the next guy, but good Lord, it's August here. I'm a firm believer that college football teams shouldn't play until September, so imagine how I feel about August basketball.

I should tell you something else: While I was vaguely aware that they were going to Canada at some point, I had no idea it was last weekend. And I had to be told that it was on television. I had no idea. In hindsight I wasn't surprised it was being broadcast - I'm a little stunned ESPN didn't bump baseball for it, but they'll probably wait until does something abroad for that - but was completely unaware it was on until about 15 minutes before the first game started.

It was amazing to me that on Sunday night when my options were limited to a baseball game between teams I can't even remember right now because the Bengals were blacked out that I couldn't stomach more of it than I did. And I'm going to shoot you straight here - even though I had it on the game a couple of minutes I don't remember watching a single trip up the floor. Finally I flipped it to the baseball game, or maybe to something I'd taped over the weekend. I don't actually recall.

On Monday, with the Reds not even on, I didn't bother to turn it on. Of course, it was nearly 8 before I made it home but still, I didn't even think about it.

And had it not been for Bobby Norman Facebook I would have never known Tuesdays was an afternoon game. I was a little tied up with football media day and fall sports pictures, so again, I was clueless.

When did this happen to me?

And it's not just summertime UK basketball that fails to excite me these days. Last weekend was the final major golf tournament of the year and I saw none of it. That one, to be honest, isn't too much of a surprise. And before you jump to conclu-

UK Football: Defense turns up pressure

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON - The University of Kentucky football team put in some new blitzes on the defensive side of the ball Wednesday and wasted no time in showing them off, turning up the pressure on the offense, first-year head coach Joker Phillips said after practice.

"It (practice) was good with this weather," Phillips said in reference to the cooler temperatures. "We had a lot of energy and the defense got after the offense a little bit more today because we put in some more blitzes. The offense wasn't as efficient in picking them up and protecting the football and the quarterback."

Phillips said that one of the goals of this team this season is to get better throwing the football.

"We have to get better at that," Phillips said. "That is one of our goals in the spring and fall is to make sure that we are more efficient throwing the ball. To be efficient throwing the ball, you have to be efficient in picking up blitzes and those things. The defense just got after the offense today."

Phillips is especially pleased with the play of junior-college transfer Mychal Bailey at the safety position. The UK head coach said he was happy with how Bailey played in the scrimmage last Saturday, saying he was one of the guys, along with freshman Jerrell Priester that was playing "really, really fast."

"Mychal Bailey is putting a lot of pressure on a lot of people," Phillips said. "Again, he is another guy that is starting to get a lot of reps because Dakotah Tyler has been out for a couple of days resting some soreness. With all the reps that he is able to get it will help him get into the game. He is going to be on every special team, now it is a matter if he can line up for us at safety and he continues to show us that he has a chance to."

Phillips noted that sophomore wide receiver La'Rod King has a stinger in his neck and is considered day-to-day while it is being monitored.

Kentucky will continue practice Thursday, hitting the field early for the second and final two-a-day practice of camp. UK will then have one final tune-up practice on Friday before scrimmaging Saturday.

UK Football to hold Operation: Move-in - The University of Kentucky football team wants to make it easier on UK students moving back to campus. All 105 players in fall camp will take time Friday morning to help new and returning students move into their dormitory rooms.

The Wildcats will start moving in the students at 8:30 a.m. before heading back to camp and meetings around 10 a.m. The players and coaching staff will head to the Complex Mall area before 10 a.m. to have a small pep rally/photo opportunity with President Lee T. Todd Jr. and First Lady Patsy Todd.

Alzheimer's Disease offer substantial benefits. Yet no one government entity has the sole purpose of mounting a full campaign against Alzheimer's Disease, and there is no oversight agency to ensure that every dollar spent on Alzheimer's disease is used to ensure the best possible research, the best possible care and the right number of nursing beds for current and future victims and their families.

The Alzheimer's Association is advocating legislation that would create a National Alzheimer's Project Office to develop and implement a comprehensive national plan to change the course of Alzheimer's Disease. The legislation (S. 3036 / H.R. 4689) builds on recommendations of the independent, bipartisan Alzheimer's Study Group which found that an office dedicated to Alzheimer's could

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

As one who occasionally must write a headline or so, I joined many others who face the same chore in being thankful for the new President's short name. But it isn't perfect, I begin to gather.

Of course a headline writer can abbreviate as they did with FDR and JFK and others. With Ford in charge, there shouldn't be any need for that.

But already they've run into trouble. There was the recent occasion when the President blasted General Motors for that price increase. And the boys who indite the headlines found that they might complicate the situation by simply saying "Ford Blasts General Motors." So, to make clear that this wasn't a tiff between the giants of the motor industry they had to go for the longer word, "president."

This name could cause trouble later, on another court. Democrats might be driven up the wall by insistent claims of the opposition that "There's a Ford in your Future," and, in like manner, Republicans might, if the economy fails to brighten, be plagued with reminders that there's a Model T in the White House.

NOW WHY WOULD THEY?

SUCCESS STORY

BSCTC a stepping stone for Bogar

BY DAPHENE KIRK GOBLE

PAINTSVILLE - Jonathan P. Bogar is a prime example of a Big Sandy success story. Bogar hails from Canada. He is married to Kimberly Nicole Bogar. They have two children, Kaden and Kylie. After graduation from high school with a background in welding, Bogar and several family members decided to enroll in the Technical Programs at Big Sandy. The idea appealed to Bogar because of his interest in welding. Additionally, the added company of commuting to school with others eased financial burdens.

"Compared to other educational institutions, Big Sandy's tuition fees were affordable and the quality of education was second to none," Bogar said.

Belfry Technology Center, Instructor, Mike Scott encouraged Bogar to seize the opportunity and attend school at BSCTC.

When asked about his educational experience at BSCTC, Bogar explains, "I was fortunate to have two wonderful instructors in Bobby McCool and John Mckenzie. Bobby and John proved to be valuable mentors and provided priceless instruction and support for me. I absorbed valuable expertise from their diverse backgrounds. Bobby comes from a military and scholastic background. He provided the academic and chemistry side of the welding trade to my educational experience.

John's skill set afforded valuable, unique expertise in real world application of the welding trade. Bobby and John were very instrumental in my academic success. It did not take me long to realize that BSCTC offered exceptional education opportunities far beyond most other educational institu-

Bogar elucidates, "Big Sandy's dedication and commitment to content knowledge and the experiences, contacts and acquaintances I obtained at Big Sandy bolstered my success. Big Sandy gave me the tools I needed to be successful in my occupation. When I applied for employment at Belfry Technology Center, my education from Big Sandy set me apart from the other candidates. It was a deciding factor in securing the position. I love my job and feel I am successful in every facet of my profession. My professional life is a mix of all of the educational experiences I have shared throughout my life and Big Sandy is a big part of that experience. BSCTC was a great place to get a quality education at an affordable price, close to home."

Martha A. Simpson, D.O., M.B.A. Associate Professor of Family Medicine

My son is starting school this fall. He'll be in the first grade, and he seems nervous about it. Though he's been in kindergarten, the jump to first grade appears to be daunting for him. He cries every day and says he doesn't want to go to school. What can I do to help him adjust to this new phase in his life?

Thanks for this timely question. The school year will be starting in just a few short weeks in many parts of North America. It's not uncommon at this time of year for children and parents to become a little anxious as they begin dealing with the annual back-to-school ritual of buying school clothes and supplies. When a child is experiencing what is called "school anxiety," the approach of the school year can be particularly challenging. School anxiety is very common, particularly when a child is just starting school or adjusting to a new school.

Fortunately, there are some things you can do now to make the first day of classes - and the rest of the year - go more smoothly. First, visit the school with your son. Make arrangements to do that now, before that hectic first day of classes. That way your son can become familiar with the location of his classroom, the lunchroom and the playground. You can take advantage of the visit to meet your son's principal and teachers.

School anxiety is common, but there are ways to help

If your son rides a bus to school, make sure he knows the pick-up and drop-off points as well as basic safety rules, including the proper way to walk along or cross any streets between the bus stop and home.

You can help ease your child's apprehension about school by stressing the positive benefits. Try to instill in him a love of learning, and be sure he knows why it's important to get an education.

One way to do that is to take an interest in learning yourself. If your child sees you reading at home or taking an interest in school projects, you'll be fostering the idea that learning is important in your family.

When you meet the teacher, talk with her or him about the amount of homework your child will receive. Then, set up a household schedule that allows for homework time every night. Provide a comfortable, quiet place for your child to do his homework

Finally, all parents should take time to tell their sons and daughters that they are proud of them and the work they do at school. Part of every parent's pledge should be to accept your children for who they are - nurture those qualities that make each child special, and take every step you can to help them improve in areas of weakness. But, don't be afraid to discipline them with love - firm but kind - when they need it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your ability to maintain a balance between sense and sentiment once again helps you sort through apparently conflicting choices and ultimately arrive at the right decision.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Before you seek the advice of colleagues about a potential career move, you might be better off getting counsel from someone who won't be affected by the choices you make.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It can be a challenging week for some relationships if the normal giveand-take flow changes with one side doing most of the giving and the other the taking.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A new opportunity could bring with it much anticipation along with some anxiety. Take time to sort out your options as well as your emotional considerations.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Are you sure you have all the facts you need to let that matter move to another level? Don't be rushed into a decision unless and until you feel it's the right thing to do.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Pace yourself as you prepare to take on that more demanding project. Be careful not to let your energy reserves drain away. Take time to relax with people close to you.

They are convenient, a great source of potassium and come in their own carrying case. Pack it on the very top and wrap in a napkin for protection. # Mower jump-start can be done, if you know what you're doing

by TOM and RAY MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:

This question isn't about a specific car, but is a general equipment question. Of course, during the winter, my riding lawn mower has gotten no driving time, and thus the battery has died. I was wondering if it is safe to jumpstart the lawn mower with my car, and if you have any tips on how to do it. Thanks!

Cameron RA Carefully.

TOM: Right. Every year we hear about some moron who doesn't know what he's doing and blinds himself in a battery explosion. So if you're planning to be that moron this year, Cameron, stop reading right now.

CLICK & CLACK

Talk Cars

RAY: Seriously, if you don't know what you're doing, ask someone who does to help you.

TOM: But if you're technically adept, this is a perfectly good solution. Your car battery is 12 volts. Most riding mowers have 12-volt batteries, too. Of course, you need to check to be sure.

RAY: If your mower uses a 12-volt battery, use the jumper cables as you would when starting another car. Hook the positive cable to the positive terminal of the car battery. Then connect the other end of that cable to the positive terminal of the mower battery.

TOM: Then connect the negative cable to the car battery's negative terminal, and the other end to the frame of the mower. They come off in exactly the opposite order.

RAY: Because the battery on a riding mower often is buried down deep underneath the seat, be especially careful not to allow any part of the positive clamp or the exposed cable to touch the frame. Otherwise, you may end up with a hairdo like my brother's.

TOM: Or a hairline like my brother's

RAY: Finally, make sure the car's engine is turned off. The alternator in your car produces way too many amps for the lawn mower, so you don't want your automobile engine to charge the lawn mower's battery. You want it to provide the mower's battery with just enough juice to start the mower's engine. Once the engine is started, the mower's own generator will charge the battery.

TOM: Jump-starting a riding mower from a car or truck is a trick that landscapers use all the time. But there are several even better solutions for homeowners,

RAY: One option is a "jump pack." That costs 50 or 60 bucks. It's essentially a plastic-encased 12-volt battery with jumper cables already attached to it. You plug it into a wall socket once in a while to keep it charged, and when you need to jump-start a car or a mower, you tote it out and clamp the built-in cables to the dead bat-

TOM: Another great option is a trickle charger. You can get a cheap one for about 40 bucks. You can use it on your car or mower energy to power the headlights, batteries. But in this particular case, you could hook it up to the mower the day before the first big spring cut. Then go to sleep, and you'll be ready to hack down your wife's prized tulips first thing the next morning.

Is this a bright idea? Dear Tom and Ray:

I enjoy your column every week. In our cars, the headlights turn off automatically when we exit the vehicle, so there's no danger of leaving the lights on and draining the battery. So my wife and I just leave the headlights on all the time when we're driving. I think if anything, this is safer, as does she. Is there any reason not to drive with the headlights on all the time? What about the fog lights? Unless you have a reason not to, we'll continue to do it. Thanks. — Rob

TOM: The only real downside is that you'll have to replace your headlight bulbs more often.

RAY: But if you're willing to pay that price for the additional visibility you get, you're certainly not doing any damage to the car.

TOM: It does take a little bit of and that energy ultimately comes from the gasoline. So your mileage will be reduced by a very small degree. It might not even be measurable to you, but it will make a small difference.

RAY: All of this applies to the fog lights and driving lights, too. I would caution against leaving auxiliary driving lights on, because they're often the equivalent of your bright lights. That'll just annoy oncoming drivers, and they'll crash into you on purpose, negating the enhanced safety you get from the lights.

TOM: But we agree with you driving with your lights on is safer. The easier you are to see, the more likely that other drivers will see you. And if you're willing to pay the price in bulbs and gas mileage, light it up, baby.

figure which bodies belong to their respective bosses. The goons get together and decide that Corrosco had to be at the bottom of the attack (giving credence to the theory that the elimination method is the best way to figure out a mystery, and it sure helps when all of the other suspects are stains on a screening room wall).

The survivors retaliate kidnapping Mr. Corrosco's niece, Rina, in hopes that her dad, Guiseppe, will pressure Mr. C into trading his life for the woman's. No soap guys.

Mr. C turns out to be one of those ruthless fashion plates who is not afraid to dress like Hugh Hefner (in a robe) while rocking a polka dot ascot. The man has no fear. He does, however, have a healthy streak of paranoia and orders Lanzetta to kill Rina's dad if he tries to raise a ransom Lanzetta does his duty and wipes out Giuseppe after the man raises a half a million lire for his daughter. He then keeps the dough (he's evil not stupid) and rescues Rina on his own.

Soon the crime cartel that runs everything sends a man to mediate this dispute. His efforts only increase the bloodshed and wind up convincing Corresco that the only way out is to kill Lanzetta and blame the whole thing on his corpse. Only problem is Lanzetta's not ready to die, though he is hip to how the game works and he's ready to take charge.

This all leads to a triple ending where just about everybody dies and every bridge gets burned. It's well-paced fare that benefits from Di Leo's keen sense of pacing as well as his fondness for American Richard Conte (Barsini in "The Godfather") is at his oily best as Corresco. He's slicker than a snot sandwich and just as vile.

Henry Silva, however, rules the roost as Corresco's right arm, Lanzetta. He allows the character to be innocent enough at all things love to briefly fall for Rina, but he's even better when he's turning on her and splattering everyone he knows with automatic weapons. Silva is the perfect guy to play a sociopath as he always appears to be on the cusp of showing some emotion, but manages to resist the urge.

Di Leo serves all of this up with a punchy techno score and some of the goriest gunfights this side of a

■ "The Last Song" — Let's start at the bottom with this cash grab from the major studios that tried hedging its bets by casting a popular teen idol (Miley Cyrus) in an adaptation of a one of Nicholas Sparks' many books. This is just pure dreck that finds a father and daughter trying to mend fences while spending the summer together. Greg Kinnear tries hard as the dad but Cyrus just isn't up for the material. She has shown she can handle lighter fare but should probably hone her acting skills on a few "Lifetime Television Movies" before tackling another big budget

■ "Furry Vengeance" — Woodland creatures rebel against a greedy land developer who wants to turn their cheap laughs and does a fine job of getting them. The CGI is credible so they don't embarrass themselves too much. Brendan Fraser is even more animated than the critters and gets a few yuks for his efforts. Turn off the brain and park yourself and the kids in front of the set for this feature.
