PRESTONSBURG — Rain dampen the spirits of those participating in the Floyd County Relay For Life on Friday, as the event set new records for both teams and county by bringing in over $78,000 for the American Cancer Society.

"I was afraid the weather would hurt us, but it cleared up and we had wonderful participation," said Robin Bartrum, with Relay For Life. "We had a good crowd, over 50 survivors, and we ended up raising $30,000 over our goal."

Three teams participating in the walk raised over $10,000 each, with Highlands Regional Medical Center topping the list at $17,717. Saint Joseph-Martin

Rescue squad hosts swift water rescue school

PRESTONSBURG — Calling the training a "maiden voyage," Tim Cooley, captain of the Floyd County Rescue Squad, said he was pleased with how the organization's first swift water training went this past weekend.

The training, which is referred to as a "moving water rescue technician course," spanned the weekend and was, according to Cooley, some of the most endurance-testing training many of the 16 participants had ever taken part in.

"I had statements from all of them that this was by far the toughest training they had ever done," Cooley said.

The training started Friday night with a four-hour classroom overview of hydrology, rescue methods, personal protection and equipment, among others topics. The next morning, it was on to lakeside at Jenny Wiley Dam in full gear to begin the physical testing.

"There's a 300-meter agility test and conditioning they have to pass before they can even go any further with the training," said Cooley. "The first half is dragging a victim and the second half is just swimming as hard as they can to get back."

The training then went to another site near the campus of Big Sandy Community and Technical College for another round of training and ended with a written exam on Sunday for final certification.

The rescue squad gained national certification to become a site for this training earlier in the year and saw participants from Wolfe and Johnson counties attend this past weekend.

The work will continue throughout the summer with the technician training, as well as what Cooley referred to as awareness courses that cover some more basic aspects of the training. There are several counties across the state that have already signed on for this training including Warren, Bath, Letcher and Rowan counties, as well as the Hazard and Pikeville fire schools.

"I'm happy with the way things went," Cooley said of the first training session in Prestonsburg. "Of course, there are things we'll work on as we PRESTONSBURG — Timothy Marsillett, the Prestonsburg man indicted in 2008 for allegedly helping Richard Adkins in a plot to kill 46-year-old Tommy Bentley, was in court Tuesday for a competency hearing.

Marsillett was found competent to stand trial following the court hearing and now has a trial date set for April 5.

Marsillett was indicted on July 16, 2008, on charges of complicity to commit murder, first-degree arson and first-burglary. These charges came following his arrest on May 24, 2008.

Adkins, charged in his indictment with murder, arson and burglary, among others charges, waived the chance for a trial in his case and admitted to shooting and killing Bentley in March 2009 in exchange for a life sentence.

As part of Adkins' plea, he has agreed to a life sentence on the murder charge, saying he shot Bentley and various sentences on all the remaining charges to run concurrent with one undercover agent with a machine gun, a pistol and two silencers to be used for the murder.

According to the summary of the investigative activity that led to the arrest warrant, Barnett called the undercover ATF agent's cell phone on March 5, 2009, requesting that they meet in Mount Sterling. The agent reported that he met with Barnett at a hotel in Mount Sterling where he was handed $5,000 in cash by Barnett, who told him that he would receive an additional $4,000 once he had completed the murder. The agent said that he showed a picture of the intended victim to Barnett, who confirmed that it was the person that he wanted killed. The agent met Barnett again at the same hotel and provided him with the guns along with several hundred rounds of ammunition. The agent reported that he conducted a National Firearms Act records search to verify if Barnett had any of the weapons registered with the ATF. None of the weapons had been regis-

Bigger preschool investment needed

As Kentucky looks to advance education, the focus is typically trained on a student's performance toward the end of the K-12 experience. Progress is measured by reducing dropout and remediation rates and increasing the number of those graduating and heading on college.

But what happens before a child enters the school system can have a large bearing on how he will leave it. Better preparation prior to kindergarten could give a child a greater chance of excelling in the classroom and better prospects for beyond graduation.

It seems logical that support early in life — even before entering kindergarten — can make a child more receptive to learning and more likely to be a productive student. Nationally, studies have supported the idea that expanding offerings of prekindergarten programs for children is an investment that will pay off down the road. A report in April from the Pew Center on the States summed up research from six states that found that students who had participated in prekindergarten programs were less likely to be held back once entering school and performed better in testing and academic proficiency.

There's no similar, direct evidence yet in Kentucky to specifically support the assertion that investing early in children will pay off in the future. It was only last year that the state adopted a more precise system for tracking students through their educational careers and gaining better insight into how many students drop out and for what reasons.

The numbers are not there — yet — to have a detailed understanding of what impacts a child educationally between prekindergarten programs at ages 3 or 4 and graduation at age 17 or 18 in Kentucky. Kentucky has lacked the capability to determine whether devoting dollars to early childhood education has produced more successful students, but the ability to track student performance over time is increasing. The state needs to be able to look at which students excel, and draw a better conclusion of why.

But generally the statistics show an improvement in Kentucky and a greater return on the investment taxpayers are making in the education of the state's children. An education index created by the Kentucky Long-Term Policy Research Center found that Kentucky has risen from 43rd in the country in 1992 to 32nd in 2009, based on math and reading test scores, ACT composite scores, dropout rates and other indicators. The center has found a correlation between the amount invested in education and performance in national standardized tests.

Using research from other states, University of Kentucky researchers Christopher Jensen, Ken Troske and Casey Brasher estimate that for each dollar spent on preschool programming, the state will see a five-to-one return on that investment in public and private benefits. That can come from higher-paying jobs for those students who have preschool and less likelihood that those children will end up relying on social services or behind bars, according to that October 2009 study.

During a time when lawmakers have preserved the main funding formula that delivers state dollars to local school districts, Kentucky has cut what it invests in preschool programs. Providing preschool to children whose families are below 150 percent of the federal poverty line received $75 million in the current fiscal year but will drop to $72.4 million next year and $71.8 million the following year.

Expanding preschool programming to cover all children under 200 percent of the federal poverty level will take nearly twice that. It's an investment that is even more daunting during a time of sagging state revenues and budget cuts.

Increasing access to early childhood education will take the intelligent shifting of resources within the state's education budget and allocating money from other areas of state government. If the long-term payoff for early childhood education is declining incarceration rates, money could be shifted from prison costs as the number of inmates drops to boost preschool programs, for instance.

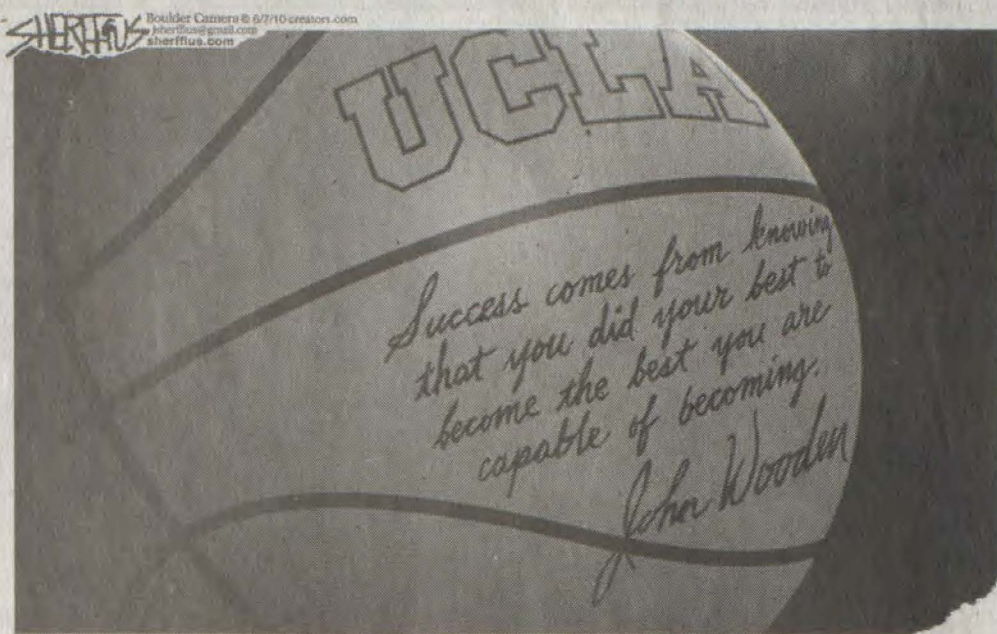

Kentucky is beginning to see some of the benefits of its investment in education and its efforts at reform, and new data in coming years will provide even more insight. The state will need to continue to be creative with its limited resources and not forgo long-term benefits by making short-sighted spending decisions.

Guest Column

House week in review

by REP. HUBERT COLLINS

Lawmakers ended a six-day Special Session on May 29—the first Saturday the General Assembly has met in session since 1993, and 1978 before that—after passing a $17 billion two-year spending plan that doesn't raise a single tax and includes a fix for the state unemployment trust fund, a 2-year road plan and Transportation budget for the Commonwealth.

Both the governor and the General Assembly agreed early in the 2010 Regular Session—which ended in April—that there would be no new taxes in any budget that was passed. The plan, instead, was to reach a deal that would avoid a government shutdown while plugging the expected two-year shortfall.

The budget, passed and sent to the governor for his signature on May 28—the fifth day of the six-day Special Session—accomplishes these goals through cuts of 3.5 percent in fiscal year 2011 and 4.5 percent in 2012 for most state agencies (with lesser cuts for postsecondary education and Corrections) increased government efficiencies, limited bond indebtedness, and some added revenue. Exempt from across-the-board cuts that most agencies will face are Medicaid, merit-based KEES scholarships earned by thousands of Kentucky high school students each year, and per-pupil funding that public schools receive through the state's SEEK formula designed to equalize education funding among school districts.

The two-year spending plan keeps the 177 instructional days now found on the public school calendar, holds down additional General Fund-supported debt, limits agency-fund debt for universities and other entities to around $515 million, adds around $20 million to the state's "rainy day" budget reserve trust fund, and allows the governor to order limited furloughs. Changes to employee and teacher health insurance are expected to save the state around $94 million over the two years.

Added to the budget in the final hours of the Special Session was a mechanism for school districts to fund aging schools most in need of replacement. Under that plan, the state will match funding for districts that levy what is called an "equalizing nickel", or 5 cents per $100 in property value, to fund facilities construction. The money would only go to so-called "Category 5" schools—those facilities considered to be in the worst shape.

The revenue plan, also given final passage and sent to the governor on May 28, is expected to save the state upwards of $89 million over the budget cycle through tax code changes, including modifications to the state's new home tax credit and a credit for the film industry. Tax incentives to benefit rural and low-income communities through business investment are also part of the revenue legislation.

Another priority during the Special Session was a bill to shore up the state's ailing Unemployment Insurance Trust Fund. That measure—which is similar to a bill that passed the House but stalled in the Senate in the recent Regular Session—gained success on May 28 when it was given final passage in the Senate. Supporters of the bill, now before the governor for his signature, say it will help balance the fund that pays weekly benefits to Kentucky's thousands of unemployed by evening out what is paid into and paid out of the fund.

Agreement on a two-year state road plan and a bill that will fund operations of the Transportation Cabinet was given final passage on May 29. The bills will provide funding in several key transportation areas through 2012, and lawmakers were determined to see the measures passed. Important work on roads, bridges, aviation and other areas can continue because of action taken on these bills in Special Session.

My colleagues and I are very pleased that we were able to finish this Special Session within the one-week time period lawmakers had set for ourselves (although we had hoped for five days instead of six). But the good thing is the extra day enabled us to take care of the transportation issues left hanging on the 28th. The next two years will not be flush with money for the Commonwealth, but state government will continue to operate, making this special-called Session worth it.

SOCIAL SECURITY NEWS

This Father's Day, teach an old dad a new twist

by PAUL D. BARNES
SOCIAL SECURITY REGIONAL
COMMISSIONER IN ATLANTA

Who says you can't teach an old dad new twists? All across the nation this Father's Day weekend, people are telling their fathers, grandfathers, and other special men in their lives about a new "twist" in the law that may help them qualify for extra help paying for costs associated with their prescription drugs.

When you're spending time with Dad this weekend, ask him if he can use some help paying for his prescription drugs. If so, tell him about the Medicare Prescription Drug Plan and the extra help available through Social Security.

If Dad is covered by Medicare and has limited income and resources, he might be eligible for extra help to pay for his monthly premiums, annual deductibles, and prescription co-payments. The extra help is worth an average of $3,900 per year.

If you're met with a resistant, "No, I've looked into it before and I don't qualify," then let him know the law changed in January 2010. As volunteer spokesman Chubby Checker will tell you, a new "twist" in the law makes it easier than ever to qualify for the extra help.

Thanks to this new "twist" in the law, we no longer count any life insurance policy he has as a resource, and we no longer count as income any financial assistance he receives regularly from someone else to pay his household expenses like food, mortgage or rent, utilities or property taxes.

Don't take our word for it, see Chubby Checker's rocking message at www.socialsecurity.gov/prcriptionhelp.

To qualify, he must be receiving Medicare and:

- Have income limited to $16,245 for an individual or $21,855 for a married couple living together. Even if his annual income is higher, he still may be able to get some help with monthly premiums, annual deductibles, and prescription co-payments. Some examples in which income may be higher include if he or his wife:

- Support other family members who live with them;
- Have earnings from work; or
- Live in Alaska or Hawaii; and

- Have resources limited to $12,510 for an individual or $25,010 for a married couple living together. Resources include such things as bank accounts, stocks and bonds. We do not count his house or car as resources.

You can help Dad fill out an easy-to-use online application for your dad at www.socialsecurity.gov/pr scription help. To apply by phone or have an application mailed to you, call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778) and ask for the Application for Help with Medicare Prescription Drug Plan Costs (SSA-1020). Or go to the nearest Social Security office.

You and your dad can learn more about the Medicare prescription drug plans and special enrollment periods, visit www.medicare.gov or call 1-800-MEDICARE (1-800-633-4227; TTY 1-877-486-2048).

Maybe it's been a few years since Dad did the Twist. But saving an extra $3,900 a year on prescription drugs may help put a new spring in his step.

SURGEON GENERAL'S WARNING: Cigarette smoke contains carbon monoxide.

KSP warns of telephone fundraising scams using state police name

FRANKFORT — Citizens throughout the state should be on guard for telephone solicitations requesting donations for the benefit of the Kentucky State Police.

According to Lt. David Jude, commander of the KSP Media Relations Branch, the agency has received numerous reports from individuals throughout the state regarding efforts to raise funds for the families of fallen troopers or to purchase drug dogs for schools. "These calls are not authorized by the Kentucky State Police," he said. "They should be reported to the nearest state police post as soon as possible."

The agency's Electronic Crimes Branch is conducting an on-going investigation of the matter, he added.

The Kentucky State Police Professional Association, a separate organization consisting of KSP troopers and retirees, occasionally conducts fundraising efforts, but is not involved in such activities at this time.

The Kentucky State Police offer the following tips to reduce the risk of telephone fraud:

■ When in doubt, ask for more information in writing.

■ Never feel obligated to provide your credit card number over the phone.

■ Ask questions such as "How much of the donation will go directly to the charity as opposed to paying for administrative costs?" The fewer questions the caller can answer, the less likely it is legitimate.

■ Ask for a call-back number or website address so you can research the organization and contact them later.

■ Hang up if a caller offers to send a messenger to your home to pick up cash or a check

USDA announces funding assistance for microentrepreneurs in rural communities

LEXINGTON — Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack announced last week during the National Summit of Rural America that USDA is seeking applications to support the development and ongoing success of rural microentrepreneurs and microenterprises. Funding is available from USDA Rural Development's Rural Microentrepreneur Assistance Program, which is authorized by the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (Farm Bill). The Rural Summit is an opportunity for rural Americans to share their vision and ideas for creating a more prosperous and more promising future for rural America. "The Obama Administration and USDA understand that helping small, start-up businesses is fundamental in building a sustainable rural community," Vilsack said. "This new program will help provide access to capital, business-based training and technical assistance to the smallest of small businesses. We need to embrace new strategies to help create a thriving rural economy." USDA assistance provided to rural areas under this program may include loans and grants to rural microenterprises and microentrepreneurs and business-based training and technical assistance grants to rural microborrowers and potential microborrowers. It also may include other activities as deemed appropriate by the Secretary to ensure the development of rural microenterprises. Applications will be accepted throughout the year and awarded on a quarterly basis. For fiscal year 2010, applications must be received by July 16, 2010. The total amount available in fiscal year 2010 is $45.1 million. Of this, $36.2 million will be available for loans, $7.6 million will be available for microlender technical assistance grants, and $1.3 million will be available for technical assistance-only grants. More information on how to apply for funding is available in the June 3 Federal Register, page 31413.

http://edocket.access.gpo.gov/2010/pdf/2010-13380.pdf. USDA, through its Rural Development mission area, administers and manages more than 40 housing, business and community infrastructure and facility programs through a national network of 6,100 employees located in the nation's capital and 500 state and local offices. These programs are designed to improve the economic stability of rural communities, businesses, residents, farmers and ranchers and improve the quality of life in rural America. Rural Development has an existing portfolio of more than $138 billion in loans and loan guarantees.

Johnson edges Floyd in health and wellness competition, but both declared winners

The central office staff of Floyd and Johnson County Schools tallied their final weigh in calculations for the Floyd-Johnson County Central Office Wellness Competition that began in January. On Thursday, Floyd County Supt. Henry Webb and Johnson County Supt. Steve Trimble met and compared results. The competitors agreed they both came out with winning results as they lost pounds, and as an added benefit now have a better focus on health and wellness to continue the year. Floyd County's office yielded a 5.11 percent loss and Johnson County a 5.49 percent loss. The superintendents began the Wellness Competition on Jan. 8 with the intent to provide a focus on health and wellness for staff in both a fun and rewarding way. A wellness scholarship, with a $250 minimum, will be awarded to one senior in each district. Scholarship winners will be selected based upon the best essay that addresses the importance of health and wellness. Participating staff member contributions will make the scholarships possible through personal contributions. Team participants agreed the competition has provided an extra incentive and encouragement to eat healthy and to exercise.

Beef Fajita Salad with Mango-Serrano Vinaigrette

FRESH FROM THE GRILL

Sizzling SUMMER SALADS

FAMILY FEATURES

A sensational summer menu can be simple, yet satisfying; exotic, yet familiar. Instead of making salad a sleepy side item this summer, mix things up and add some sizzle to the table with a sumptuous entrée salad straight from the grill.

Grilling adds intense flavor to summer's freshest salad ingredients. Try choosing a selection of colorful fruits, flavorful meats, crisp vegetables, delicious seasonings and luscious marinades that pop. Two delectable choices that can make your grilled salads sing are beef and fresh mango. Beef is a traditional summer grilling favorite. In fact, according to a recent survey, conducted by Pelegrin Gray on behalf of the Beef Checkoff Program, 55 percent of Americans prefer to grill beef, such as a steak like filet, ribeye or T-bone, versus other meat. Also, mango is the world's most popular fruit, and a year-round source of the naturally sweet, refreshing taste of the tropics.

For recipes and instructions on how to select and cut a mango, visit mango.org. Visit BeefItsWhatsForDinner.com for beef grilling guidelines and additional recipes.

Asian Beef and Wild Rice Salad

Makes 4 servings

- 2 beef top loin (strip) steaks, 3/4 inch thick
- 2/3 cup light Asian-style dressing, divided
- 1 1/4 cups long-grain and wild rice blend
- 2 1/2 cups water
- 1 medium red bell pepper, cut into 3/4-inch pieces
- 1 1/4 cups hothouse cucumber, cut into half-moon slices
- 1 1/4 cups frozen shelled edamame, thawed
- 1/4 cup sliced green onions, divided
- 2 tablespoons chopped cilantro

Place beef steaks and 1/3 cup dressing in food-safe plastic bag; coat evenly. Close bag and refrigerate 15 minutes to 2 hours.

Cook rice in water according to package directions, omitting butter and salt, if desired. Cool in large bowl.

Remove steaks from marinade; discard marinade. Place steaks on grid over medium, ash-covered coals. Grill, uncovered, 15 to 18 minutes (over medium heat on gas grill, covered, 11 to 15 minutes) for medium rare (145°F) to medium (160°F) doneness, turning occasionally.

Add pepper, cucumber, edamame, 2 tablespoons green onion, cilantro and remaining dressing to rice; toss to combine. Season with salt.

Carve steaks into slices. Place salad on plate. Arrange steak over salad; top with remaining green onion.

Beef Fajita Salad with Mango-Serrano Vinaigrette

Makes 4 servings

- 3 medium mangos, peeled, pitted and cheeks sliced off
- Olive oil
- 2 medium poblano peppers
- 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 pound beef top sirloin steak, 1 inch thick
- 1 large red onion, cut into 1/2-inch slices
- 1 cup radishes, thinly sliced
- 2 tablespoons chopped cilantro

Vinaigrette:

- 3 tablespoons lime juice
- 3 tablespoons water
- 1 to 2 serrano peppers
- 3 tablespoons olive oil

Brush mangos with oil. Place mango cheeks and poblanos on grill over medium, ash-covered coals. Grill poblanos, uncovered, 9 to 10 minutes (gas grill times remain the same) or until skins are blackened, turning occasionally. Grill mangos 8 to 14 minutes (gas grill times remain the same) or until very tender, turning occasionally. Seal peppers in food-safe bag and let stand for 15 minutes. Cool and cut mangos into 3/4-inch cubes and reserve.

Press black pepper onto beef steak. Brush onion with oil. Place steak on grid; arrange onion around steak. Grill, uncovered, 17 to 21 minutes (over medium heat on preheated gas grill, covered, 13 to 16 minutes) or until steak is medium rare (145°F) to medium (160°F) doneness and onion is tender, turning occasionally.

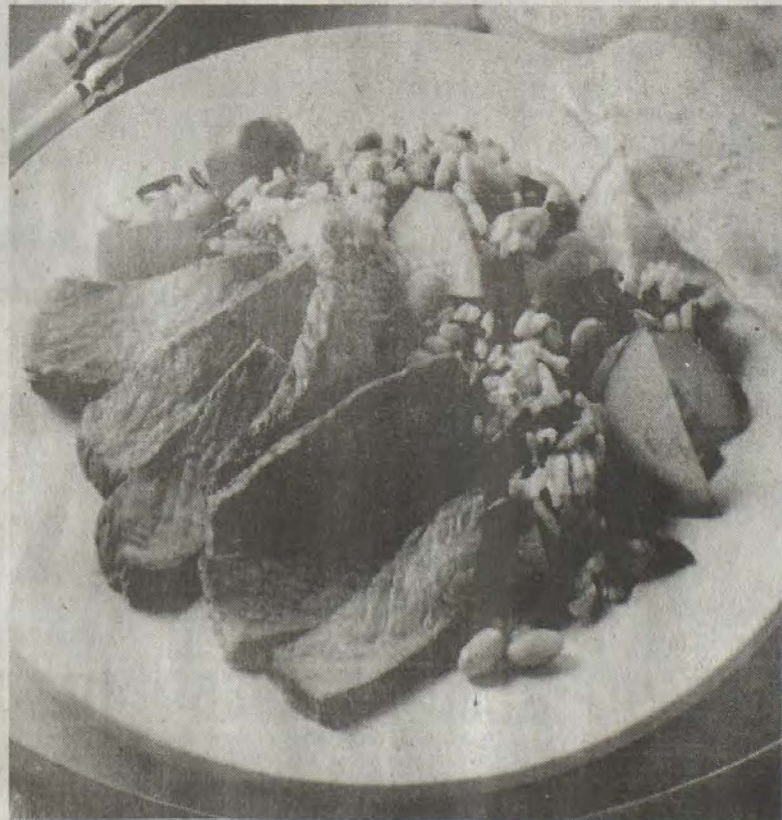

For vinaigrette, measure 1/2 cup cubed mango and combine with lime juice, water and serranos in food processor. Cover; process until smooth. With motor running, slowly add oil, processing until well blended. Season with salt, as desired.

Discard skins, stems and seeds from poblanos; cut into 3/4-inch pieces. Carve steak into slices. Halve onion slices. Place beef, remaining mango, onion, poblanos and radishes on platter. Season with salt. Drizzle with vinaigrette; toss to coat. Sprinkle with cilantro.

Simple Steak Grilling Tips

- Use a medium heat setting on a gas or charcoal grill. For charcoal grills, carefully hold the palm of your hand at cooking height above the ash-covered coals. Count the number of seconds you can hold your hand in that position; approximately 4 seconds is medium heat.
- Always use tongs to turn steaks. Using a fork will pierce the beef, allowing flavorful juices to escape.
- For best results, cook steaks to medium rare (145°F) or medium (160°F) doneness. The most accurate way to determine temperature is with an instant-read thermometer.

Make the Most of Mangos

- Mangos contain more than 20 different vitamins and minerals, are an excellent source of vitamins C and A and a good source of dietary fiber.
- Color is not the best indicator of ripeness. Simply squeeze the mango gently to determine ripeness level. A ripe mango should give slightly, but not be too soft.
- To ripen mangos, store at room temperature. Once ripe, store mangos in the refrigerator for up to five days.

EVERYBODY'S SCIENCE

Lowly no longer

by SANDY MILLER HAYS
AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH SERVICE

We just might have to retire that old-fashioned moniker "the lowly spud."

Just think of all the slams the potato takes: When someone's main form of exercise is flexing their fingers over the TV remote control, we dub them a "couch potato." If somebody's put on a few extra pounds, we joke about "passing up that second helping of mashed potatoes."

But in fact, we Americans are united in loving our spuds — there's no denying it. Potatoes are America's No. 1 vegetable crop, and we consume about 130 pounds of them annually per capita; that's certainly food for thought! Also, can you think of another vegetable that so changed American — and world — history? (I'm thinking of the Irish potato famine of 1845, which led to massive migration to the New World.)

Potatoes actually go through a lot to make it to the dinner table. Late blight, the disease that caused the aforementioned Irish potato famine, is still around and still making life miserable for growers. There's a pest called the Columbia root-knot nematode, which costs U.S. growers some $20 million annually, and the growers also have to contend with the potato tuber moth.

It's often a long, long trip from field to kitchen pantry. Seventy percent of all U.S. potatoes wind up as chips, fries or dehydrated potato flakes, but before they meet their fate, they can spend up to 10 months in storage. While there, they often have to self-heal wounds they've suffered during harvest, and also face the problem of unwanted sprouting.

At harvest, potatoes are dormant. But during storage, that dormancy ends and sprout growth starts. Sprouting can cause numerous biochemical changes in the spud, which diminishes that potato's nutritional and processing qualities. This post-harvest sprouting is typically controlled during storage by the use of chemical inhibitors.

But the scientists of the Agricultural Research Service (ARS) think there's a better way to help potatoes get through those long months in storage. They're looking for less costly, non-chemical solutions to the problem by identifying the genetic cause of early-sprouting tubers.

For example, they've identified internal mechanisms that signal those troublesome sprouts to start growing, and they're also isolating the genes responsible for these signals. Once they've nailed that part of the problem, these genes can be used in potato breeding programs to modify the sprouting characteristics of any given potato line.

But what about all that ribbing about potatoes' role in our ever-expanding waistslines?

The truth is, the scientists at ARS are taking a good thing and making it even better, where potatoes are concerned. In their research unit at Aberdeen, Idaho, they're focused on boosting spuds' protein and vitamin C content. Clearwater and Classic, two potato varieties released in 2008, boast 30 to 40 percent more protein than the standard Russet Burbank variety.

And ARS scientists in Prosser, Wash., are investigating potatoes' antioxidant and phytochemical potential. Antioxidants, as you know, are natural substances that help our bodies defuse naturally produced troublemakers called "free radicals" that roam around inside our bodies, attacking cell walls and other body parts we'd just as soon keep intact and working well. Phytochemicals are health-protecting compounds found in fruits, vegetables and other plants.

The ARS scientists at Prosser have devised new analytical methods for detecting and measuring phytochemical concentrations in potatoes. Using these methods, they've found a range of phenolic concentrations — from 100 to more than 1,500 milligrams per 100 grams of dry weight — in both wild and cultivated potato lines.

What's so great about phenolics? For starters, these natural compounds from plants may help diminish cardiovascular disease, respiratory problems and even certain types of cancer. One such phenolic, called chlorogenic acid, is being tested by university scientists for its potential to lower blood pressure.

What's more, the ARS scientists say some of these potatoes have high levels of antioxidants that even rival those of antioxidant superstars like spinach. So take that, Popeye!

Proteins, vitamins, antioxidants, phenols — what more could any of us ask of a vegetable? I'd say it's time we admitted the spud is lowly no more!

The Agricultural Research Service is the chief in-house scientific research agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. You can read more about ARS discoveries at www.ars.usda.gov/news.

TIMES STAFF REPORT

WILLIAMSBURG – The University of the Cumberland's women's golf team had a very successful year as it ended the 2009-2010 season ranked 18th in the nation with two individual participants in the 2010 NAIA National Championship Tournament. The Patriots, in addition to faring well on the course, also excelled in the classroom.

Cumberland golfer Whitney Blankenship (Raccoon) was named a 2010 Daktronics-NAIA Women's Golf Scholar-Athlete.

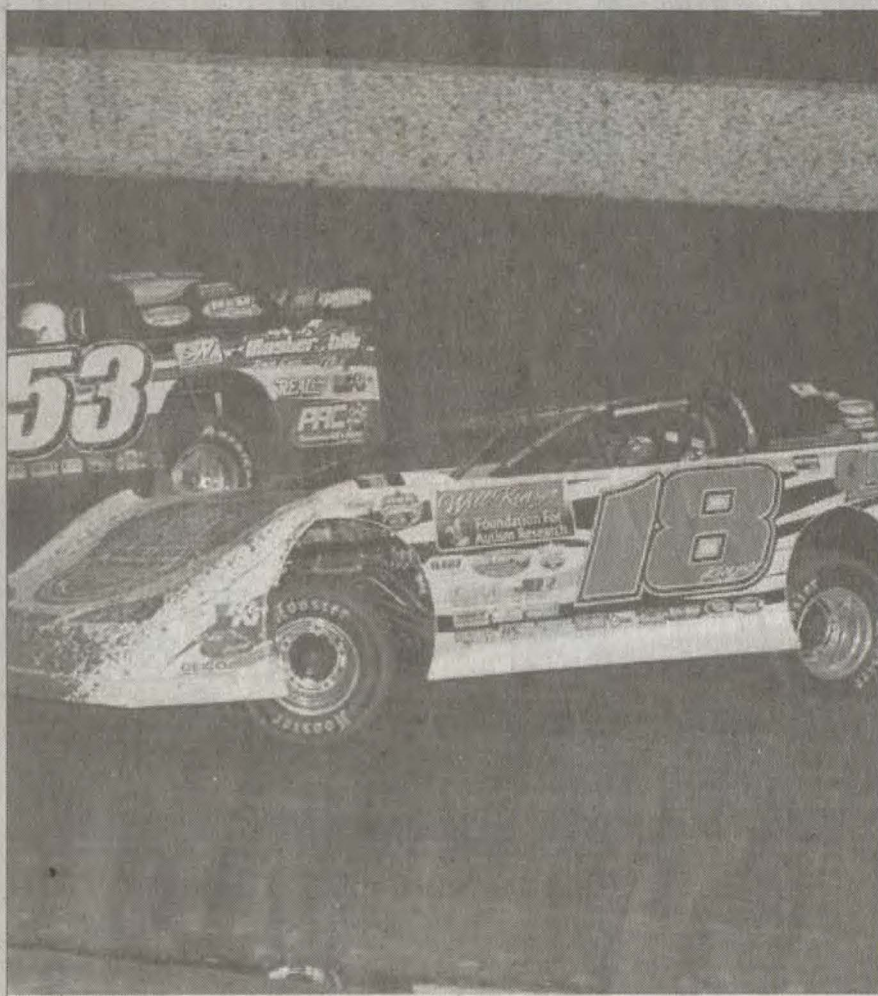

Blankenship

Nominated by each institution's head coach, a student-athlete must maintain a minimum grade point average of 3.5 on a 4.0 scale and have achieved junior academic status to qualify. 86 student-athletes have been named 2010 Daktronics-NAIA Women's Golf Scholar-Athletes. Blankenship is a Pike County Central High School graduate.

"We are really proud of Whitney and what she has been able to do in the classroom," Cumberland's Coach Chris Kraftt said. "She's a very hard worker, a great student, and a great example to the rest of our team. I hope she continues to do this well as well as our other athletes."

Kinzer set to race in Dream 100

TIMES STAFF REPORT

ALLEN – Veteran Dirt Late Model driver Brandon Kinzer will be in Rossburg, Ohio this week, competing in the Dream 100 at storied Eldora Speedway. Prior to the Dream 100, NASCAR driver Marcus Ambrose will pilot a Kinzer race in the Prelude to the Dream.

The Kinzer team was able to stay close to home over the weekend, competing at 201 Speedway in bordering Johnson County.

Kinzer and his No. 18 Dirt Late Model team made the short tow to nearby 201 Speedway in Sitka on Saturday evening, for an unsanctioned $3,000-to-win feature race. Kinzer ran fourth in his heat race, earning a transfer into the A-Main where later wound up eleventh in the final rundown of the 30-lap feature.

Former Wildcat Adrian Smith inducted into Naismith Memorial Hall of Fame

Times report

LEXINGTON – Former University of Kentucky men's basketball standout, and member of Adolph Rupp's 1958 Fiddlin' Five National Championship team, Adrian "Odie" Smith will be inducted into the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame as a member of the 1960 gold-medal winning U.S. Olympic basketball team.

"I never thought something like this would happen to me," said Smith. "The Olympic team was a very special team and just having the opportunity to go in to the Naismith Hall of Fame, I just really don't have any words for that. I'm so thankful for Northeast Mississippi Junior College, that's the only scholarship I had, and then UK giving me the scholarship to come on there."

Smith ranked fifth on the Olympic team in scoring, averaging 10.9 points per game as the U.S. team finished the Summer Olympic Games held in Rome undefeated, winning each game by an average of more than 42 points.

"The Olympics was an unbelievable experience. We had four NBA Rookies of the Year (Oscar Robertson, Walt Bellamy, Terry Dischinger, Jerry Lucas) on that team, and just to be a part of the talent of that team, I never thought I'd be a part of something like that."

Two of the things I remember most are the opening day parade, marching into that stadium with over 100,000 fans and they played (our) national anthem, what a feeling that was; and the day we got the gold medal, when you stood up on that stand and they put that gold medal around your neck, that was a very special thing too."

A native of Farmington, Smith averaged more than 28 points a game at Farmington High School his senior season.

He played his first two years of college ball at Northeast Mississippi Junior

After averaging 10.1 ppg in two years at UK, Smith joined the Army and played for two Army All-Star teams. While in the Army, Smith won gold medals for the U.S. in the 1959 Pan-American Games in Chicago and the 1960 Rome Olympics.

College, where he led the team in scoring for two straight years, finishing with 1,524 points in 64 games (23.8 ppg). In 1956, Smith became only the third junior college player to receive a scholarship to play at the University of Kentucky.

After averaging 10.1 ppg in two years at UK, Smith joined the Army and played for two Army All-Star teams.

While in the Army, Smith won gold medals for the U.S. in the 1959 Pan-American Games in Chicago and the 1960 Rome Olympics.

Following his stint in the military, he returned home to play in the NBA for 10 years with the Cincinnati Royals and the San Francisco Warriors.

He was MVP of the 1966 NBA All-Star Game held in Cincinnati, playing with and against players including Wilt Chamberlain, Bill Russell and Rick Barry to win the honors.

He retired from basketball in 1972 after playing one year with the American Basketball Association's Virginia Squires.

The 1960 U.S. Olympic Team will be one of two teams and eight individuals entering the Hall of Fame on Friday, Aug. 13, in Springfield, Mass.

UK men's basketball program announces satellite camp schedule

LEXINGTON

University of Kentucky basketball coach John Calipari and his staff will travel around the state of Kentucky in June and August to teach the game of basketball to the youth of the Commonwealth with an upcoming series of basketball instructional day camps.

The tour will include 10 sessions in five cities, beginning with a June 14 stop in London (North Laurel HS) and Williamsburg (Whitley County HS). The tour will head to Somerset (Southwestern HS) and Danville (Danville HS) for a session in each location on June 15, followed by stops in Elizabethtown (Elizabethtown HS) and Bardstown (Bardstown HS) on June 16.

After a nine-day hiatus, the camp tour will resume for a day on June 25 in Louisville at St. Xavier HS and Christian Academy of Louisville. The 2010 satellite camp tour will conclude on Aug. 5 in Mason County (Mason County HS) and Newport (Newport Central Catholic HS).

The camps, which will include instruction from the Kentucky Basketball coaching staff, allow participants to learn the game of basketball through a fundamental, intensive learning environment. The camps will give individuals the chance to learn more about the game of basketball, introducing drills that can be used at home.

Open to children in kindergarten through sixth grades, each session will also help the individuals develop positive attitudes, as well as gain more confidence on and off the court. In addition to learning the game, participants will receive a Kentucky Basketball t-shirt, as well as opportunities for autographs and photos.

The fee for each camp is $75 per child. Online registration is available. All camps will open at sites one hour before check-in. For more information, please contact the Kentucky Basketball office at (800) 852-2875.

Due to NCAA regulations, schools are only permitted to hold basketball camps within 100 miles of their home campus.

ABC picks up Cards-Cats football game for first time

By Chip Cosby

THE LEXINGTON HERALD-LEADER, KY. (MCT)

Jun. 5--The Kentucky-Louisville football game is coming to ABC Sports for the first time. The network has picked up the Sept. 4 season-opening contest featuring the head coaching debuts of Joker Phillips and Charlie Strong.

The game will kick off at 3:30 p.m. and is part of a three-way regional telecast that also features UCLA at Kansas State and Connecticut at Michigan.

The Kentucky-Louisville game has been carried by the ESPN family of networks on several occasions but never by ABC.

ESPN/ABC spokesman Mike Humes said this year's game was attractive to the network for several reasons: the in-state rivalry, a matchup pitting the Southeastern Conference against the Big East, and the angle featuring two coaches in their first game on the sidelines in Phillips and Strong.

"There's a number of story lines there," Humes said.

The game will also be the first played in the newly expanded Papa John's Cardinal Stadium, which has increased its seating capacity from 42,000 to about 55,000.

UK leads the all-time series 13-9 and has won the past three games in the modern rivalry, which resumed in 1994. The Wildcats return 11 starters from a 7-6 squad a year ago, and Strong will be attempting to rebuild a Cardinals program that went three straight years without a bowl appearance under Steve Kragthorpe.

Four Cats drafted in first 8 rounds

The Lexington Herald-Leader, Ky. (MCT)

Jun. 8--Junior second baseman Chris Bisson became the first University of Kentucky player selected in the 2010 Major League Baseball Draft when the San Diego Padres chose him in the fourth round on Tuesday.

Bisson, a native of Orleans, Ontario, was the 124th overall pick.

Kentucky has now had at least one player drafted in the top five rounds in three consecutive seasons.

Eight picks after Bisson, the Seattle Mariners drafted former UK left-handed pitcher James Paxton, also in the fourth round.

The 50-round draft began with Monday night's first round. Rounds 2-30 were scheduled Tuesday, with rounds 31-50 on Wednesday.

Bisson was an All-Southeastern Conference second-team selection the past two seasons.

In 51 games and 50 starts in 2010, Bisson batted .329 with 12 doubles, one triple, five homers and 35 RBI, stealing an SEC-leading 32 bases in 39 attempts.

Paxton, a native of Ladner, British Columbia, was drafted in the first round in 2009 by Toronto but did not sign with the Blue Jays and planned to return for his senior season at Kentucky.

However, UK refused to let Paxton rejoin the team unless he agreed to an interview with the NCAA concerning his eligibility and his dealings with the Blue Jays. Paxton sued UK, then ultimately chose to skip his senior season and prepare for the draft playing for an independent minor-league team in Texas.

In three years at UK, Paxton started 24 games and appeared in 55, posting a 5-3 record and a 4.91 ERA.

Barnhart says UK's lofty status brings scrutiny

Lexington Herald-Leader, Ky. (MCT)

Jun. 5--In his first public comments since The New York Times reported that NCAA investigators are looking Eric Bledsoe's academic background and his recruitment, Kentucky Athletics Director Mitch Barnhart suggested UK's lofty basketball status brings this kind of scrutiny.

"The flag always blows really hard at the top," he said Friday on the Nashville radio show 3 Hour Lunch on 104.5 The Zone. "And so it's blowing hard up there. And if you want to be at the top of the flagpole, you've got to understand how hard it blows."

Barnhart also noted that hiring John Calipari brought even greater attention to the program.

"Our program will be under scrutiny anyway because we're Kentucky, and then you throw (Calipari) in the mix and it's going to be under greater scrutiny," he said. "So you're mandated to be absolutely on it every day... Two years ago people were not paying a whole lot of attention to Kentucky, and all of a sudden we're relevant again."

Barnhart did the interview while at the Southeastern Conference Spring Meeting in Destin, Fla.

Barnhart said he thought UK had done a good job evaluating Bledsoe's academic record before bringing him to campus.

"Sandy Bell in our compliance office does a marvelous job," he said. "She's really good at what she does. We went through every review at our level, at the NCAA level on Eric's academics, and they were comfortable with it. We're comfortable with it. (The NCAA) cleared him."

"He fought hard for us for a year, we wish him all the best. He did everything down the stretch academically we needed him to do."

Barnhart declined to say if he believed The New York Times' story had been fair.

"I'm not going to get into fairness," he said. "People have to live with what they do, and we're comfortable with where we are with Eric Bledsoe and wish him all the best as a pro."

Barnhart adamantly objected to the leaking of Bledsoe's academic transcript and hinted at possible legal action.

Solicitation of Public Comment

The Kentucky Division of Abandoned Mines (KYDAML) is soliciting public comment on a proposed Abandoned Mine Land Enhancement Rule Reclamation Project in the community of Wheelwright, in Floyd County. The project is being proposed pursuant to guidelines in 30 CFR 874.17, and the Commonwealth of Kentucky's Abandoned Mine Land Reclamation Plan. The Division will accept comments from the public until close of business June 18, 2010. Any person or group may submit comments in writing through the United States Postal Service or via email.
 The project involves a proposed cooperative reclamation effort between the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources (DNR) and a contractor to remove coal refuse material from an abandoned coal refuse dump located on the west side of KY Highway 306 near Wheelwright. The refuse material was deposited by previous pre-law mining operations. The project proposes to remove the refuse material using suitable equipment and transport it to a local permitted preparation plant.
 After refuse removal operations are completed, the former dump area will be regraded and revegetated in a manner described in the project narrative.
 You will find a description of the proposed project and plan maps on the internet at <http://www.aml.ky.gov/> for viewing and download. Or call (502) 564-2141 and request to have a copy of the project mailed to you.
