EASTERN KENTUCKY FRUIT CROP GOOD

One of the best Eastern Kentucky fruit crops in years was expected at three meetings held by the Kentucky State Horticultural Society.

Eight counties were represented in the attendance at the convention at V. P. Rife and the organizing committee in Fleming county.

Three hundred persons attended the meeting at the Fordson farms in Pike county, where 2,000 fruit trees and 800 Latham raspberries are being grown under the management of R. E. Cuthbert.

The Eastern orchards were the first in the state to install a pipeline system of spraying to replace the portable power sprayer.

 2. Reasonable and sensible economy in effecting public improvements.
 3. Lower taxes, to the end that both old and new industry may find encouragement to operate in Floyd county rather than to face discouragement, particularly relief from exorbitant taxes for the farmer.
 4. The improvement of Prestonsburg's streets and the direction of special attention toward keeping the town clean.

THE THIRD DEGREE

George W. Wickersham and associates, after conning the prohibition situation and finding it difficult to report thereon, have delved into various nooks and crannies of our system of law and justice.

Latest of the committee's reports pertains to the brutality practised by officers of the law in procuring confessions from criminals or criminal suspects. It is inferred that those responsible for the report are opposed to such tactics.

Brutality in the relation of one human to another or of humans to animals is to be condemned, of course. That is to say, inhuman treatment under ordinary conditions is wrong.

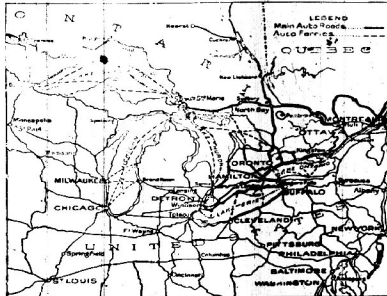

But we are not to consider only one side of the question. We should not consider only the sob-sisters and the defense attorney's side of the matter.

The American public must agree that the task of dealing with criminals and carrying out to any slight degree of satisfaction the aims of justice, is no sinecure. The art of thwarting justice has become a highly-developed science. Money, much money, is back of crime, the utmost in secrecy is guaranteed, competent defense counsel is at the disposal of the defendant.

It is the task of enforcement officers to penetrate the maze and emerge, holding the criminal by the scruff of the neck. And they must not be too long about it. Murder is committed. Who did it? Unless the murderer is brought to justice, who will be the next victim and how many will there be? A bank is robbed, several thousands of persons are affected. It is the task of the law to apprehend the robbers, and they must be punished.

No, the work of law and order should not be an inquisition. Prosecution should be the aim of the law rather than persecution. Evidence should be sought by legal and humane means—except in certain cases where drastic action is absolutely necessary, with the law made an impotent thing by a brutal criminal sneering behind the protection of ironclad secrecy and diverse means of protection.

We nominate for the Third Degree Al Capone, "Legs" Diamond and their henchmen. The end to be attained should justify the means.

Our readers will be glad to learn that the Canadian Government has issued a series of road maps of Canada and the United States for the benefit of those contemplating a visit to the Dominion. The map appearing on this page is a small scale sketch of one of the sheets in the series, but the actual map shows the different highways in detail.

With its innumerable lakes and rivers now made more accessible by paved highways, Canada presents almost unlimited attractions to the vacationist. The intending motorist, camper or angler will find in that country every facility necessary for an enjoyable holiday.

Those contemplating a Canadian vacation should make application for information to the National Development Bureau of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa, from which secure maps covering the area between any state and Canadian province, together with a leaflet, "How to Enjoy Canada," which contains a summary of the regulations pertaining to entry of automobiles in Canada, may be obtained. Other interesting literature on the scenic and recreational attractions will also be supplied free of charge.

Hero of "War Of Roses" Prepares For Birthday

All Taylor, who has almost forgotten by all, has made plans for celebrating his 53rd birthday August 14. He is going back to his farm at Harry Valley, near a Knoxville, Tenn. hospital.

"All the children will be there," he said just before submitting to entry to operation, "and we'll plenty of watermelons to eat, and plenty of cakes and lemonade."

Tennessee's demerol politicians, however, looking back on more active days, said he wouldn't fight the "war of roses" over again for a "key to the White House."

How different, and yet how typical of the man, who in his early thirties, trampled all over Tennessee with his brother, Robert L. Taylor, and waged the now historic "War of Roses" for the governorship of the state.

All was nominated in 1888 by the Republicans of Tennessee for governor. A few weeks later the Democratic party nominated Bob Moore as All's opponent. There has been no other political campaign like it in history.

The brothers waged their campaign together, speaking from the same platform, riding together on horseback and sleeping together at night. Before starting on their campaign, their mother made them take the following oath:

"You swear before God and your mother not to use abusive language toward each other; that if you ever become angry at each other, one of you will come off the ticket; that you will conduct your campaign on a high plane, using no base, arguments, solely on party principles."

"Mother said she'd thrash us if we broke that promise," Uncle All recalled.

The campaign became a "War of Roses" when a horrid house hold-er planned a red rose on All and a white one on Bob as they left after a week-end visit.

Bob, called the "Knight of the White Rose," won the race and was later elected to the United States senate, in which office he died in 1912.

It was not until Uncle All reached the age of 72 that he was finally elected governor of Tennessee. In 1920 he rolled up the largest Republican majority ever given a candidate of the party in Tennessee, defeating his opponent by 43,015 votes. He was defeated in 1922 when the state swung back into the Democratic column.

Uncle All served Tennessee in Congress from 1888 to 1894 and in 1924 was a presidential elector.

Reflecting upon the "War of Roses," Uncle All declared, "I wouldn't go through that campaign again for the key to the White House."

Tracing the Word "Pie". The word pie was unknown to English speech until the year 1803, and we are told by the late eminent philologist, Sir James A. H. Murray that it occurred in our literature first in Compton's of Bolton priory in Lancashire in 1803, in which there is an entry concerning the use of fruit in pies and pastells for the body-guard of the priory, Cateran priory, writes Frank H. Vintely, dictionary editor.

When Hamilton "Sounded Out" Washington On The Presidency

Politicians and statesmen of the day. The "sounding out" began in Washington, D. C., on August 13, 1928, when George Washington of America, was first "sounded out" by Hamilton on the subject of the presidency.

When New Hampshire ratified the constitution on June 21, 1788, the first step was taken toward the adoption of the constitution. The ratification was followed by the ratification of the constitution by the other states.

Who was to be chosen president? That was the important question and the one which was being asked in the "sounding out" of George Washington.

But Washington was very happy as a farmer at Mount Vernon. He had served his country long and faithfully and was now desirous of enjoying the domestic tranquillity which he had at last secured.

Alexander Hamilton, without doubt one of the greatest politicians ever produced in America, thought and felt differently. With Washington at the helm, Hamilton visualized a strong and orderly government.

Brutality Of "Third Degree" Shown By Wickersham Body

Washington, Aug. 10.—A file of systematized police brutality spreading over half the nation, a record of illegal law enforcement by barbarous "third degree" methods was unfolded today by the Wickersham commission.

"Assessing its duty was to lay the blame and shift it," before the public, the commission examined into a single weighty volume of lawlessness in law enforcement, more than five score proved instances of extortion confessions.

It urged upon President Hoover legislation or a constitutional amendment if necessary, to end such "outraged" violations of the fundamental principles of constitutional liberty.

It cited the Leopold-Loeb case, in which an innocent school teacher was beaten into confession as being attention upon the "third degree."

Refers to Snook Case. It turned to the Snook case of Ohio, showing the unbecomingly persistent to a prosecutor who struck the unshy professor on the jaw to obtain a confession.

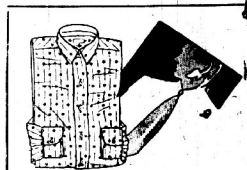

The commission refused to discuss the inability to examine witnesses and because a pardon for one of the men accused of the 1916 San Francisco preparatory day bombing now is under consideration.

In addition to its assault upon the "third degree," the report condemned as no prevention of "outraged" "unfairness in prosecution" by district attorneys and judges.

It dealt with nearly 100 instances of trials following so closely upon arrests as to leave the accused no time for defense; denial of counsel to the defendants and actual misreading by court and prosecutor.

The bulk of the report was written by Professor Zachariah Chaffee, Jr., of Harvard, and Walter H. Pollak, and Carl S. Stern of the New York bar. A Chinese Zhen Sun, arrested in connection with the murder of three members of the Chinese education mission in Washington, was held incarcerated for eight days in a hotel room, and although physicians reported him actual, he questioned him almost continually night and day.

downed. An appeals court reversed the conviction. A Finn in Los Angeles, arrested without cause when he argued with a policeman, was beaten with brass knuckles until covered with blood. In 23 cases, a young Mexican woman, charged with having killed her child by smothering it to death, was re-arrested after 35 hours and confessed.

In Clarkdale, Miss., a negro, charged with murdering a white man, was tried in the floor and water poured on his nostrils. The report contended, nevertheless, that this was overlooked by the publicity of false confessions, the unconstitutionality of extorting statements from both the guilty and innocent and the fact that of 106 appeal cases studied nearly half the convictions were reversed because of "third degree" methods.

"The effect upon the police is obvious," the report said. "The third degree, in its nature, brutal most brutal, those who practice it. Their fight against lawlessness, if waged by forbidden means, is degrading almost to the level of a struggle between two law-breaking gangs."

RED CROSS NEWS

In the last seven years the American Red Cross has been annually an average of $927,000 out of its own funds and $675,000 from contributions by the public in the relief of disaster victims. That is the total staff to deal with the work of relief and reconstruction is the entire staff of the Red Cross.

Red Cross appeals to its members for membership. In this way it is enabled to care for these thousands of women who join the Red Cross, and so contribute to the millions in money and services for helping the Red Cross in a position to meet these emergencies as they arise. Let us all get busy and when the drive is on, let us have as our slogan "50¢ a Week for Red Cross Since the War."

THE RISE OF VIOLENCE
Last week's outbreak of gang killings in New York led Commissioner Edward P. Murphy to declare that the record of shooting fatalities in recent years, particularly with reference to murders committed with revolvers and shotguns. The rise of this particular type of violence in Gotham alone is appalling.

A more fundamental remedy must be found. The many and highly uniform laws against carrying deadly weapons have been enforced as they should be. There have been many arrests in which gangsters have been arrested and guns taken from them, who later were dismissed from court and their weapons returned as legitimate property. Moreover, any new state laws and regulations as to the sale and purchase of firearms. Elsewhere a known gangster can purchase an arsenal if he desires. The effect of New York's excellent statute in this respect is entirely nullified because the city's gangsters can be supplied with arms from the rest of the country. Must we forever continue to sell implements of death to everyone who has the price, leaving no record of sale and regardless of purpose to which the arms is to be put? Cincinnati Enquirer.
