RED CROSS MEET HELD ON MONDAY

Record of Last Year's Work Reviewed - ROLL CALL NEAR

The Red Cross chapters of Floyd, Johnson, Pike, Martin and Magoffin counties met in Paintsville Monday, to discuss the past year's work and to make plans for the approaching winter and the Roll Call.

It was pointed out by Mr. Maurice Roddy, the representative from national headquarters in Washington, that in no section of the whole United States should the winter relief and extreme importance of the fifth annual roll call be felt more keenly than right here in this section of Kentucky. If citizens of this section but remember how locally and gratefully the Red Cross served them during the crisis created by the drought of 1930, no trouble in more than raising the roll call quota should be experienced.

In last year's roll call in Kentucky a total of 2,213,145 was given to relieve flood victims. A total of 1,720 applied to the flood chapter for aid and 1,000 passed by investigators. The roll call quota for next year is 2,000,000. The roll call for stock, 1,300 packages of seed were given, 1,062 families were given food orders. By these figures it may be seen what the Red Cross will do for the people in time of disaster. To do less than more every possible. It is hoped that the roll call quota for next year will be a record for the people in time of disaster. To do less than more every possible. Kentucky's Small Towns May Lose Most of Their Insurance Protection

Insurance officials have recently pointed out the fact that it may be necessary for their companies to discontinue writing fire insurance in Kentucky communities, Classes 9 and 10, these being the villages and small towns which have no organized fire protection.

The losses on this business have been so high and the rates so high that to continue writing it would be ruinous unless some relief is granted.

During the five years 1924-1928, inclusive, for each dollar collected in fire insurance premiums from owners of dwellings in unorganized towns, $1.17 was required to pay losses and expenses.

For every dollar collected for fire insurance on mercantile buildings and hotels, $1.17 was required to pay losses and expenses.

There is a law in Kentucky which prohibits that insurance companies are permitted to charge rates that will produce reasonable profit. Not only is there no profit in unorganized villages and towns, but the losses sustained are too high to be continued.

While the figures given above are for the period ending with 1929, the figures for 1930 do not improve the showing. From the record so far, it would appear that the present year will be worse than 1930.

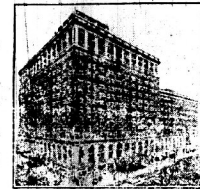

Each company will, of course, do as it pleases in the matter, but the indications are that until an increase is granted, most of them will write the least possible amount of business in the small towns in Kentucky. This may present an especially serious situation in the case of mortgaged property.

LET'S RAISE HORN POULTRY

A Big Sandy firm, dealing in country produce, finds the local supply of eggs to be far below the local demand. This firm is sending its agents to central Kentucky and throughout the state to meet the extra demand. After buying all that can be found in Johns, Lawrence, Mag. the Morgan and Mendenhall counties, there is yet such a scarcity as to justify the dealer in getting his other markets mentioned above.

We are greatly surprised to learn this fact, and it has caused us to gather information and estimates as to the production of livestock country in the country. It is a good thing that the country now is producing about one-fourth of the annual average production of 17 years ago. This is accounted for largely by the fact that when the soil is not so fertile, some very hard work must be done to get the best results. In general, many farmers and raising poultry for market. Money was easy and the men turned their attention to other work that brought in more money. The work on found it necessary to look as hard as in previous years. So the poultry business dwindled into insignificance.

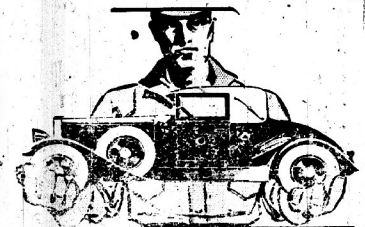

But the time has come when it is necessary to go back to the old, dependable lines of production. Poultry is one of the most profitable and steady cash crops that can be grown in this part of the country. Modern methods applied will increase the profits. Prices will fluctuate, of course, but so does the value of the dollar.

"Why My Next Car will be A FORD"

When you buy a Ford there are two things you never have to worry about. One is reliability. The other is long life.

Here's an interesting letter from a Ford owner in North Carolina:

"My Ford was purchased May 8, 1928, and has been run 121,567 miles. It has never stopped on the road for repairs of any kind whatsoever except punctures.

"The brakes were adjusted at 101,000 miles. My gas mileage averaged 21 miles to the gallon, and on tires 17,000 miles per tire. I traveled over all kinds of road conditions—mountainous and flat.

"I consider this a wonderful record and I assure you my next car will also be a Ford."

This is just one of many tributes to the reliability and long life of the Ford. A Ford owner in Iowa tells of driving his Ford 73,000 miles in a single year. Another writes of 120,000 miles of good service.

Think ahead when you are considering the purchase of an automobile and consider what it will be like after thousands of miles of driving. Will you still be satisfied? Will you still say "it's a great car"?

If it's a Ford, you know everything will be O. K. It will be taking you there and back in good style, just as it has always done. And you will have saved many important, worthwhile dollars in cost of operation and up-keep and low yearly depreciation.

PRESERVE SWEET CIDER BY CANNING METHODS

It is as easy to preserve sweet cider as it is to can fruits, and requires no more equipment, says the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

Some persons think it is practically impossible to preserve apple juice merely by the use of heat and sealing.

Without the addition of some chemical preservative to act as a preservative, this is not the case.

The use of any preservative in fruit not making a good investment in little juices is unnecessary, if the juice is footwater. Also watch the width of your properly pasteurized and sealed, in child's shoes. The foot should be drawn fact there is no preservative which should be used in quantities permitted by law or with ordinary regard for health which will prevent fermentation in juices which have not been properly sealed, or which are open to the air after heating and sealing.

When small quantities of juice are being preserved for home use, ordinary glass jars, fruit jars of quart or half-gallon size are excellent containers.

The jars should not be of the screw-top type. Any of the various lighting, seal or other glass topped types which do not permit contact of the contents with metal may be used. The containers should be thoroughly washed with the jars, which are to be used with them. After washing, both the jars and tops must be sterilized. This is conveniently done by placing the jars on their sides in a wash boiler or other good sized vessel, setting on stove, pouring in enough cold water to completely cover the jars, bringing to boiling and keeping it at that temperature for 10 minutes. The jars should then be removed from the water one at a time, filled with the juice (allowing for expansion), sealed and pasteurized in a water bath at 75 degrees F.

It is 25 minutes, depending on the size of jar. Pasteurizing is the time when the air is in the jar at present.

Area Taken From Mexico

The treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, February 2, 1848, conveyed to the United States the territory which has since become the states of California, Nevada and Utah, part of Colorado, and the largest parts of New Mexico and Arizona. Previous to that time, this territory belonged to Mexico.

Five years later, the United States purchased from Mexico about 45,000 square miles of northern Arizona for $2,000,000. Since this treaty, Mexico has lost approximately the same amount of land as it has gained.

Nothing Modern About the Use of Spectacles

Glasses for the aid of our sight are almost as old as civilization. It is not far-fetched to think that the Athenians 2,500 years ago knew of lenses.

The ruins of Nineveh yielded the oldest known piece of transparent glass, which was dated 2,500 years ago.

The first of our present-day spectacles was produced by Roger Bacon, who in about the year 1280 A. D. made a reading glass for use in studying the smallest letters.

SOME SOCIAL CUSTOMS IN WASHINGTON'S DAY

Many of the official social customs in vogue today had their beginning during the first days of Washington's administration, when it was found that in spite of the earnest desire of the young republic to be as definitely removed as possible from the customs of European court life, it was nevertheless necessary to designate some customs which should be preserved, and which at the same time would be in accordance with the chief executive's idea for the state of the nation.

The Thursday dinners, at which Col. Humphreys, the president's aide-in-chief, was to receive one hundred and twenty guests, were held at the White House, to begin on the 22d of August. At the central table, seated in the line, was a long mirror, made in sections and hinged in places, on which stood mythological statues in china. The family plate, which, since coming to New York, had been melted down and reproduced in more elegant style, each side displaying the arms of the Washington family, with its usual head cover around the rim, adorned the table.

Roast beef, veal, lamb, turkey and duck, and varieties of game, in which Manhattan Island abounded, with jelly, fruit, and jellies, were served on the table before the guests made their entrance. Mrs. Washington sat at the end of the table, and the president's secretary, Tobias Lear, at the other. In the center of one side sat the president himself. After the meal the president would raise his wine glass, all would drink a toast, and the ladies would retire to their after-dinner indulgences. The Washingtons used good champagne, but ordinarily used a silver mug of beer stood beside the president's plate, though not at state dinners. An invitation to dinner was no more than it is now, regarded as a command, and there was no person or member of the family were instances of regrets being sent for one reason or another.

MISS STUMBO HONORED ON BIRTH ANNIVERSARY

Several of the younger set were guests at a delightful dinner party on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. D. O. Harmon. The occasion was the birthday of Mrs. Harmon's charming young granddaughter, Miss Katherine Harmon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harmon, and was so planned that it came as a complete surprise to her. The table was lavishly set with white, the decorations being simple and in line with the occasion, favors and dinner service. When Miss Stumbo entered the dining room the guests, who were already assembled, greeted her with a "Happy Birthday" chorus and she was led to her place at the table where there was a heap of packages containing many beautiful gifts. After the packages were all opened and the donors had been graciously thanked by the honoree, a delicious dinner of several courses was served. During the remainder of the evening the guests were entertained with music.

Those enjoying this delightful affair were: Misses Peggy Wells, Oval Bingham, Dora Golie, Julia Grace Porter, Julia Hinson, Geraldine Allen, Ruth Oppenheimer, Ruth Francis, Vivian Hatcher, Inez Richmond, Kathryn Stumbo.

Mrs. W. M. Blair and Miss Mae Beam, of Huntington, W. Va., spent the week-end here, guests of friends and relatives.

G. A. R. RANKS DWINDLING

The annual meeting of the G. A. R. was held at Des Moines, Iowa, last week. Men who marched with Sherman to the sea marched again in the yearly parade of the Grand Army of the Republic. The story of the grand review has been told sixty-five times before, but its recollection, last week before thousands was as inspiring as when first, finished with history, 2,000,000 combatants swung along in the first triumphal march in the nation's capital.

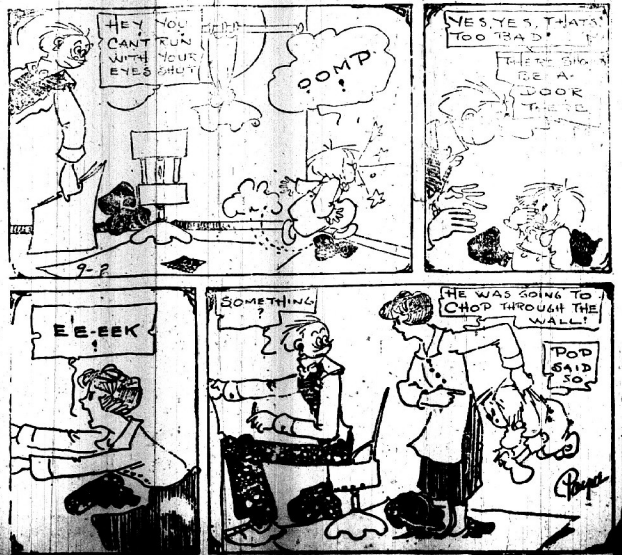

of those two million, fewer than a thousand marched at Des Moines. Nearly as many more were in attendance last time has not dulled their zeal, even though war was a long-ago affair. The title of march was 17 miles long. Some years ago it was two miles and before that, longer. Some have wondered the years—their average age is nearly 80—and walked erect, eyes front, arms swinging, step firm. For most, though, only the spirit, tested and proved at Appomattox and Vicksburg and Lookout Mountain and that don't mind them. The fact that they are still here is a tribute to their endurance.

HARRISON TO APPEAR HERE NEXT TUESDAY

Vanhorn Jury Disagrees, Dismissed Here Monday

Second trial of Glenn C. Vanhorn charged with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Ida Wright Vanhorn, on August 21, 1929, resumed Monday morning in the jury being discharged by Circuit Judge C. B. Wheeler after it had been hopelessly deadlocked over Sunday.

Most of the bitterness and some of the sensational features which characterized the first trial of Vanhorn in the October of last year were absent. Little evidence other than that which was produced at the first trial was brought out in the second trial, which began on Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. and did not end until late Saturday night. Again the Commonwealth took the position that Vanhorn drove the family auto over the "X" marks above Albin in order to effect his wife's death. A conversation in which the defendant is alleged to have offered to be hanged in place of Mrs. Vanhorn in a jail cell was also brought out. It was also noted that the defendant had been removed from the seat cushions of the car. The cushions were then removed by the use of an air gun.

The defense, on the other hand, offered the testimony of the defendant himself and that of character witnesses. Vanhorn testified that his wife was driving the auto at the time of the tragedy because she had asked his permission to do so and that she had control of the car when a passing auto created a cloud of dust. It was pointed out by the defense that the defendant was also injured. Trend of the defendant's testimony was to show that the tragedy was the result simply of an accident. Aft. tests of the car cushions, defense contended, were caused by leakage of the batteries in the auto.

The court of appeals a few months ago reversed the verdict of the Floyd jury which last October sentenced Vanhorn to life imprisonment, on the grounds that the proof was of a nature that was insufficient to justify the verdict. Because of this, the Commonwealth was faced by the task of producing new evidence and more definite proof of the defendant's guilt.

Harlan Hatfield Case Up for Trial Here Thursday Morning

Trial of Preston Hatfield, charged with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Harlan Hatfield, on May 22, 1929, was begun in the Floyd circuit court Thursday morning.

The defendant claimed, following his arrest, that the shooting was accidental. Mrs. Hatfield was fatally wounded on June 22 when a rifle shot severed her spinal cord. Her husband held the rifle from which the fatal shot was fired, it is alleged. Mrs. Hatfield died two days later.

The shooting took place in the woods on Riley's Branch, near Bethelville, where the husband and others are alleged to have been drinking. From there Mrs. Hatfield is said to have attempted to dissuade her husband.

HOE CHOLERA NOTICED

It seems that a number of livestock owners in this section and a few in the county have been bothered with a disease among their herds which is commonly known as "hog cholera."

This is blamed on the fact that a number of hogs have been brought from other parts of the state.

The best method of controlling the disease is by vaccination. County Agent Ishel offers to do the vaccinating free of charge, providing the livestock owner will furnish the vaccine.

Few Without Some Sort of Covering for Body

Practically every individual in the world in the tropics that has been studied by scientific observers has been found to wear some form of bodily covering of the body, either in the form of the bill of a bird, or of feathers, scales, or of hair of various materials, be it on the head or on the body, or of woven clothes or garments of cotton or other vegetable or animal fibers. The inhabitants of the New Hebrides and of Central East Africa are examples of all these. The most primitive people are burden carriers. Protection against insect pests of breach cloths. Tradition and native styles usually dictate the use of certain forms of loin coverings, even to the minutest detail.

SUMMER'S LAST STAND

Summer, loath to leave a land of beauty, lingers while holding Kentucky in its fervid embrace. Field and garden crops have benefited to the greatest extent and the discomforts of the temperature are not without their concomitant blessings. Even the latest forest trees stand full-panoplied in locally matured fruit and there at ripening berries like a sentinel, warns of the coming change.

The leafless grasshopper fades away the long hot afternoon hours, ignorant of the relentless advance of the inevitable conquerors of all the evils, diseases of life on every hand. Yet the grasshopper, like every growing thing "whose seed is in itself," will not fail to the hour when winter's snows have melted and one or more of several legions.

How luxuriant are the roadside ranks of golden-rod, 8-foot-high they stand with waving yellow nodding as thick as an ostrich plume. Royal purple ironwood is now being succeeded in the uncracked meadows by carpets of wild aster, the tiny daisy-like, white-petaled variety which the honey bees love. The delicate blue heart-leaved aster is seen in the woods or along more shaded roadsides, especially in the hills. Orange hawkweed flashes its brilliant beauty at the passer, and the bright Jerusalem artichoke fairly covers creek banks and hillides in places. All the flowers of autumn are here. Summer's warm embraces have not discouraged them. Like every crop planted by the hand of man or the beneficence of nature, the wild flowers are prolific in this year of plenty. It is as though they sought to brighten weary eyes, to uplift downcast thought, to call attention to the unprecedented outpouring of natural blessings. Goldenrod and wild sunflower, indeed, are cheerful witnesses of a source of supply for which the nation may in this year of plenty be truly grateful.

COW EXHIBITED IN COURT ROOM

Greenup, Ky., Sept. 23. - Hunted six miles from Claybrook, Ky., in a truck driven by sheriff's deputies, a cow answering to the name of "Bossie" was used in a court case here last week.

The trial was that of Sam Carter, accused of the theft of cows from G. A. Reeves, a landowner. Bossie was brought to court on the request of the jury, which was conducted after an hour's deliberation.

Reeves identified Bossie as his property, but Carter said he bought the animal from the landowner's son-in-law, and the jury was asked to settle the matter.

Chewing her cud contentedly, and switching her tail to fan away the flies, Bossie watched the judge and spectators while undergoing examination by the jurors.

Two more hours of deliberation failed to bring a verdict and the judge dismissed the jury.

EXHIBIT URGES APPLE STORAGE

The storage of apples for winter sale was the subject of one of the exhibits at the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, at the state fair in Louisville. A miniature model storage house showed the principles of ventilation and insulation.

The College of Agriculture is urging the storage of some of the big crop in the state this year. As has happened in previous years of big apple crops, prices are low this fall.

The problem in storing apples, says the exhibit, is to keep them from becoming water-soaked and to keep them from becoming moldy. The exhibit shows how to store apples in a cool, dry place.

Use Your Imagination: The exhibit shows how to use your imagination to make a storage house for apples. It shows how to make a storage house that is cool, dry, and well-ventilated.

In 1764 he was selected to draft Boston's instructions to delegates to the general court relative to the proposed English tax. This document is remarkable as the first public American protest against the right of Parliament to tax the colonies. Adams became the house of the Massachusetts legislature. Adams seems to have defied most of that assembly's public papers. In February, 1768, he wrote the circular letter to the other colonies asking them to sign. When the King demanded that it be rescinded, the House refused to comply and British troops were sent to Boston for this and other reasons. When the revolutionary spirit came to blow a storm in the early 1770's, Adams denounced his greatest service to the cause of American independence by keeping the press from reporting the events. He helped to make the crisis inevitable by constantly criticizing and writing about it, and by his continued discussion of the legal and national rights of the colonies. In 1772 he revised the Massachusetts constitution of 1780, and was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Adams was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.
