HEALTH NEWS

Compiled by Dr. Marvyn Ransdell
Director, Floyd County Health Dept.

YOUR FRIEND— THE HEALTH OFFICER

YOUR HEALTH OFFICER CAN ADVISE YOU ABOUT HEALTHY LIVING

This is the first of a series of articles which will appear in the Floyd County Times outlining the work of the county health officer. You are all familiar with the work of the county health officer. Now we tell you how children that policy officers are their friends to whom they may go if they are in trouble, just as in health officer. Until quite recently he was generally considered an uninvolved visitor who investigated bad smells and other nuisances or who looked up a quarantined sign when one of the children had a communicable disease. Now we know that the modern health officer is more than a kind of sanitary policeman. Though some of us may have only the faintest notions about the new public health program.

The change in health work has come about, in part, because the sanitary condition of our cities has been so improved that the health department has been relieved of much of the work of cleaning up insanitary nuisances and this has permitted the health officer to take on new functions which have to do with keeping people well, not merely protecting them from disease, call for how relationships between health officials and the public. For instance, the health officer of old would COMPEL people to remedy insanitary conditions, but the modern health worker can only PERSUADE them to live the healthy life.

Have you a clear picture of these newer duties of the health officer? His staff activities which protect every one, children, adults, homes, and the community as a whole. It is of great importance to you own welfare that you know just what a modern, well equipped health department can do. So let us consider in turn some of his activities.

Bookkeeping for Humanity

The all-important ledger in humanity's bookkeeping is the record of births and deaths which the health officer keeps, but the most sensitive barometer of a city's health is the death rate of children under one year of age. This the health officer watches with great care.

Important as it is to the health officer that every birth be recorded, it is much more important to the child that his birth registration be made and kept for at some later day a duplicate birth registration may be urgently needed to secure a position, to prove citizenship, to obtain a marriage license or passport. As so many other occupational arise throughout life from cradle to grave in which evidence given by an accurate registration of birth may be of the greatest help, make sure that your baby's birth has been recorded. (To be continued.)

CANCER

Commenting on the steadily mounting curve in the fatal incidence of cancer within the last quarter century, Dr. A. T. McCormack, state health officer, declared yesterday that the disease now ranks second as a cause of death in the United States and so constitutes a major problem in public health.

In 1906, when the American registration area was first formed, the crude death rate from cancer, it was pointed out, was 63 per 100,000 population. In 1920, this rate had advanced to 83.4; while in 1929 (the latest year for which figures for the registration area are available), it had jumped to 96.1—an increase of over 52 per cent in 23 years. The total number of reported deaths from cancer in this country in 1929 was 111,549, heart disease, with 267,000 deaths to it credit, alone claiming a greater number of victims. In Kentucky in 1929, 1,574 people died of cancer; while, in 1930, one year later, the number had increased to 1,965.

While 20 years of scientific research and careful study have," says Dr. McCormack, "so far failed to establish a specific cause of cancer, the general opinion of scientists is that it originates as a local disease, which, unless removed or destroyed, spreads to neighboring tissues, enters the blood stream and so is carried to distant parts of the body. If detected and properly treated while still localized, it can, in the majority of instances, be erased. The chief reason why fatalities from this disease are occurring so increasingly frequent lies in the fact that people all too often usually ignore or ignore the early signs until the malady has advanced to a stage where, with our present knowledge, cure is impossible.

"Cancer can occur anywhere on the outside or inside of the body, but certain locations seem to be more so. In fact, the most frequent locations are, namely, corresponding to areas that are liable to chronic irritation. When it occurs on the outside, it is much easier to discover in its earlier stages, and in its early stages, it is most likely to result in a cure.

"The disease has, roughly speaking, three stages: the precancerous, the localized cancer and the extensive cancer. The precancerous stage may be manifested by chronic sores, white patches on the mucous membranes, elevated pigmented moles, wart, leucoplakia or some other similar abnormal condition. Prompt removal of such conditions immediately upon their appearance would go a long way toward preventing the disease. The wise and safe course is to consult a competent physician just as soon as any abnormal growth or condition appears.

In this way, he is assuming of course, a diagnosis and treatment of a cancerous condition, should any be found to exist, while it is still localized and so most susceptible to cure. When the condition is advanced and so not removable at the patient, indications of its condition are most likely to manifest themselves only after the malady has advanced beyond the curable stage. Hence in its earlier stages is not accompanied by any appreciable degree of pain. If it were, it is safe to assume that a large percentage of the cases now resulting in fatalities would be detected in their incipient and cured. If thorough periodic physical examination were the general practice, many people over 25 years of age, the rest of life at which the greatest value of the disease begins, it is confidently believed that a sufficient number of precancerous, and localized cancer cases would be discovered and cured not only to check the rising curve of fatal cancer incidence, but also to start it on the decline.

SMALL FIELDS CAUSE FARM INEFFICIENCY

Small, ill-shaped fields, so common on many Kentucky farms, cause inefficiency and loss of time, says the report of a recent study of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. In reporting a farm management study of 25 farms in the south-central part of the state.

On these farms, which ranged from 22 to 250 acres, from nine to 21 fields were found, with an average of 21 fields to the farm. The farm with one field had 96 acres of tillable land, which means an average of 11 acres per field, while the farm with 21 fields had 221 acres of tillable land, an average of 10.5 acres to the field. The average size of all fields on the 25 farms was about five acres.

Small fields, says the report, make it difficult to follow a definite, uniform crop plan for each acre. Improvement of the use of large tractors, mechanical power and the increasing machinery generally increase the amount of turning in preparing land and harvesting crops. Inasmuch as the amount of turning involved, and hence more work in handling livestock.

A map is presented of a 100-acre farm as it was originally and its small fields, and as it is now divided, in accordance with plans made by modern methods of the farm's subdivision. The 11 small fields were combined into 10 fields of approximately 10 acres each, which can be handled in a 10-hour rotation in comparison with a regular crop and livestock system of farming. The department suggests that all farm owners in a good time to study the farm arrangement and plan the removal of fences to provide larger fields for more efficient farming.

TAXES LOWEST IN KENTUCKY

The Kentucky Progress Commission in compiling data to be used in attracting new industries to Kentucky has found Kentucky has the lowest average county and state tax rate of all the states.

The Commission said the individual tax rates, taken from a study made by the state tax commission, were based on a national government census. "Kentucky has the lowest county and state tax rate of all the states," the report says. "Kentucky has the lowest county tax rate, the lowest of all the states." "The next lowest is 332.40 per cent." "Kentucky has no state death or inheritance taxes." "Kentucky has a net capital gains and municipal bonded indebtedness of 317.1."

"The next lowest bonded indebtedness per capita is $240.63." "The highest is $140.63."

"Kentucky has the lowest income tax." "Kentucky has the most favorable tax on industries of all the states." "If you think that taxes are too high in Kentucky, where will you move?" "Geoffrey Morgan, acting executive secretary of the commission, said Kentucky's indebtedness in outstanding warrants did not compare in amount to bonded debts of many other states."

PARADES, THE CEMETERY AND THE PLAYGROUNDS

Thirteen Armistice Day parades have swung down the road since word closed around the world that peace had come. Thirteen times, men have paraded to triumphant music.

There has always been a thrill to marching men, ever since the first knights wore their steel and to seek out the sound of a martial drum and a little tin horn. There is an innate martial rhythm in man that makes him join the ranks.

But war itself is a bitter reality. The holiday that precedes it is nothing more than a dazzling film in the sun.

Broken ranks, rank numbers, half-remembered battles, show that still green buds, in other lands, too far away for flower tributes, are added to the living. The dream-impinged hearts of the men who came home aren't always placid places. Battle fires leave scars sometimes, that 12 years ago are slow to heal.

An army on parade is a flamboyant thing. All gray in action is a tragedy. The brave gleam of the passing helmets doesn't lead to a daydream. The bravery which the soldiers displayed in battles, half-over under the fogged weeks of 12 years, isn't forgotten. It finds a permanent expression on civilization. Because the suffering that went with it has dimmed its scar across the years is added reason that the time for the abolition of war, so far as is possible, is at hand.

The fragment of a marching army should always be a plea for universal disarmament.—Terre Haute, Ind., Star.

WARFIELD EMPLOYEES' DONATIONS AID NEEDY IN VARIOUS SECTIONS

Employees of the companies comprising what is known as the Charleston group of the Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation, and of which Warfield Natural Gas Company is a part, have voluntarily donated one day's pay beginning with the month of November and continuing for three successive months thereafter for the relief of the needy and unemployed, and which will be distributed in the different localities in which this gas company operates. It is estimated that the total amount so raised in the four months will amount to about $25,000. It is the intention to disburse this amount to the local charities in the different communities in which the gas company serves the public. The local charities will receive their quota of this fund. This help should go a long way toward alleviating distress in this community. This act on the part of the employees was purely voluntary and shows a most commendable spirit toward the unfortunate who are without employment or in distress. Employees of this corporation are said to be the first in this section to adopt this course of relief at this time of depression.

Uncle Alf Taylor taken by death. One of the South's most widely known men, known for the picturesque 'war of the forest' which he and his brother, Robert, fought for the governorship of Tennessee...

Uncle Alf Taylor, 'The Sage of Happy Valley' died Wednesday at Appalaeh hospital, Johnson City, Tenn. The funeral was held at Johnson City, where 'Uncle Alf' was a member.

In an address which he delivered former governor made an eloquent appeal for Senator Robert C. Hoak, of Knoxville, in the House of Representatives...

Time is the price which he and his brother, Robert, fought for the governorship of Tennessee. In 1884, Alfred A. Taylor, 'The Sage of Happy Valley' died Wednesday at Appalaeh hospital, Johnson City, Tenn.

CATLETTSBURG SQUAWKS

Two days following the football game played here between the Catlettsburg high school team and the Catlettsburg high school...

The following was characterized as being for the late Clifton, being the game, I hope, on Wednesday...

Well, all we have to say in response to these 'catlets' is this: Prestonsburg won fairly and that the letter team won. It is quite probable that Clifton, in a review of the Catlettsburg game...

Our most vivid impression of the game was its dullness. Prestonsburg played what must surely have been its worst game of the season...

How English Merchant of 1489 Sought Custom

One of the earliest posters ever printed in England is to be seen in the Bodleian library, and concerns a Summa service book, printed in 1489 by Wynkyn de Worde. It reads as follows: "If there be any man spiritual or temporal to buy our pysses of two and two somonparacions of Solington. This shal be after the form of this present letre, which ben well and truly correct, late hym come to Westmynster into the almshouse of the red pyss, and he shal have the good and chepe." The manner of presentation is somewhat interesting. The book is a copy of a book written in the Middle ages, which were fast being put to rest. A new force had been let loose, which in the course of the next century was to revolutionize not only the art of advertising, but the whole of European culture.

Famous English Potter

Joseph Wedgwood was born on July 12, 1730. He was the youngest son of a potter and came of a family of which members had been making pottery in Staffordshire, England. Soon after the death of his father in 1738 he became skilled in the art of throwing pottery on the wheel. In 1753 he became manager of a small pottery. In 1759 he began work on his own account in the Ivy House pottery at Etruria. Salt glaze and green and yellow glazes seem to have been his first studies. However, the fine white English earthenware was just reaching perfection and Wedgwood became one of its best known makers. He presented a service of his ware to Queen Charlotte and later to the king. He next turned his attention to artistic pottery and reproduced designs based on the later phases of Greek art.

WORLD WAR VET SHOT BY BROTHER

Aaron King Wounded Saturday Night; Shooting Accidental, Claim

Aaron King, World War veteran of Osborn, this county, is in the Methodist hospital, Pikeville, wailing a gallant battle for life after having been shot through the left lung late Saturday night at his home on Toler's Creek. Tuesday morning he was conscious a good chance of recovery after having been in a serious condition for two days.

It is claimed by Joe King, father of the wounded man, and other witnesses that Aaron King was shot when Marston King, brother of the wounded man, accidentally discharged Aaron's revolver as the two wrestled for its possession. It was said here that Marston King was attempting to wrest the weapon from his brother's grasp when Aaron is said to have aimed at a heated object in the room.

Notified of the shooting, Sheriff E. J. Sturgill sent Deputy Sheriff Grover Allen to Mud Creek Sunday to make an investigation of the affair. Information gathered by him has resulted in the arrest of Marston King, who is being held in the county jail.
