GOOD AND FAITHFUL SERVANTS

The Floyd fiscal court, as a whole, The Times has been fond, approves the work done in this county during 1931 by both the Floyd county health department and the county agent.

It is to the credit of the court that its members appreciate the value of these two departments to Floyd county, and more credit will accrue to them when, as is expected, they appropriate the county's part of the funds necessary to the continuance of the farm and health work.

The record of the health department is too well-known to justify an exhaustive discussion of its great record. It is only right to say, however, that Floyd county's health department is unsurpassed in a state whose health service is a model after which other states pattern.

No less active and effective has the county agent been since his arrival here in March, 1931. County Agent Isbell came to this county when Floyd county farmers were facing their greatest financial crisis. Immediately, he was busy with the farm loan. This work finished, he turned to the 4-H clubs, working steadily and enthusiastically with the boys and girls of this county, building for Floyd county a farm future. Besides organizing a number of clubs in which several hundred boys and girls became interested and worked through the summer to a successful completion of many worthwhile projects, he trained a state championship farm practices demonstration team composed of junior club boys. At the district club camp his boys and girls ranked high, the champion camper being a Floyd county boy. This indicates that not only knowledge of farm science but also character have been derived from this work by the boys and girls.

Besides this work, County Agent Isbell has visited hundreds of farmers, discussed with them their individual problems, offered valuable advice; and, in such cases as was painfully evident in this county recently with the appearance of hog cholera, did the work of a veterinarian, inoculating swine against the disease at no cost to the owner above the actual cost of the serum and saving farmers hundreds of dollars worth of hogs.

This back-to-the-farm movement is gathering momentum; those close to the soil seldom starve. And whatever encouragement Floyd county's fiscal government can offer, whatever assistance it can be to the farmer, will be given in a fine cause.

These are but a few of the reasons we have for believing that County Agent Isbell and the county health department will find Floyd county's administrators of its fiscal affairs not only willing but eager to have them continue the work which they have been doing, and the value of which cannot be estimated in dollars and cents.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S 'FIGHTINGEST' GENERAL

As the nation begins this year the celebration in honor of its greatest man, Washington, every man who helps him fight the battle for our independence shares in his glory and status national interest. In the front ranks of those dashingly officers, says the United States, George Washington Bicentennial commission, was "Mad Anthony" Wayne, whose name is familiar to every American boy who loves a hero.

Interest attaches to Anthony Wayne from the moment of his birth, for he picked New Year's Day itself for his important event. He first saw the light at Easttown, Pa., on January 1, 1745, which makes this day his 187th birthday anniversary. Wayne was named Anthony after his grandfather, an Irishman who lived in Ireland for some years before migrating to Colonial America. Here he built up a modest fortune, so that his grandson Anthony was able to start life with a good advantage in the way of education. He also came naturally to his fighting blood, the grandfather having served with distinction under the command of William III of England, and the father took active part in the French and English wars in America.

In fact, young Anthony's martial spirit was in the way of his schooling. Under the boy's dress, however, there was a manly nature that more time would have to be given to study and less to playing soldier, or Anthony would have to leave school. He later was sent to the academy which he named the University of Pennsylvania, and there distinguished himself in mathematics and at the age of 18 he became a surveyor. Like the youthful George Washington, he had some early in the outbreak of the campaign for independence, Anthony Wayne led his men through the fray. In 1775 he served, along with John Mifflin, in the Pennsylvania Committee of Safety, and in that same year he organized and led the 11th Pennsylvania regiment of soldiers. On January 3, 1776, he was commissioned a colonel, and took his regiment to reinforce the army at Dunbar. At Three Rivers he led with all his characteristics the dash an assault on a superior British force, and there received the first of the six wounds he suffered during the Revolution.

Next he was sent to Fort Mifflin, but there the enforced captivity was too much for his ardent spirit, and he brough of Washington a proposal of action in the field. In February, 1777, he was made a brigadier general, and two months later he joined Washington in the commander-in-chief's headquarters in New Jersey, giving good account of himself. At the Battle of Brandywine, Wayne was given the important duty of leading the center of the line at Chappin's Ford against the advance of Cornwallis's Hessians, and so spiritedly did he resist the British attack that he received credit from many military authorities for saving Washington's army from a rout. A little later a force under Wayne was overwhelmed by a British force under "Sir Philip" Hensley at Red Bank, and though they suffered what became known as the "Red Bank Massacre," Wayne brought off the main body of his men.

During the heart-breaking winter at Valley Forge, it was Anthony Wayne's raids on the British lines for supplies that many times saved Washington's army from outright starvation, and these forays were a sore trial to the enemy. When Cornwallis took his army out of Philadelphia that year, Wayne was ordered to hang on to the British rear, and wherever he appeared there was invariably a fight. At Monmouth, Wayne did more than any other except Washington himself to save the American army from disaster and convert that action into a drawn battle.

When Stony Point was to be taken, Washington relied upon his fighting general, Wayne, and there "Mad Anthony" brought off the most daring exploit of his whole career. Stony Point was covered by water so as to render the fort itself an island. Wayne took his command to within a mile and a half of the place, and waited for midnight. Then he sent his men forward in two columns to carry the redoubt by the rear. To insure the element of surprise, the charges were removed from the

WHEN CHEAP ROADS ARE GOOD ROADS

Roads of the oil and gravel type have made their appearance in many places the last year or two. One of the best examples of this kind of road is the road consisting of graded gravel or crushed rock, which is mixed with bitumen directly on the road bed.

8499 The New Mexico Highway Department estimates maintenance cost of asphalt roads at $1200 per mile, with about 3000 miles a day, and for bituminous concrete surfaces $175. Good roads are a sound investment. The new oil surfaces have shown a way to get good roads for comparatively little money.

That A Famed Writer Thinks of Kentucky and Kentucky Charm

A Cumberland River valley in Kentucky... Mrs. Nina Wilcox Putnam, internationally famed author, seems to be rather keen about Kentucky. She recently made a motor trip through Kentucky in the realization that "until we crossed the Kentucky border the old spirit of American friendliness her experiences in a popular weekly magazine of large circulation." Of Kentucky, Mrs. Putnam herself said in part: "As for Kentucky... the roads, impossible in most sections five years ago, are now making it possible to take in the inevitable development in a pleased spirit its individual charm." "The new highway (Midland Trail) has all the appearance of a detour with all the comforts of modern road building. And nobody can help being struck by the extraordinary courtesy and good manners of the people there." "I saw a lot of hand-kissing and snuff-taking in Europe, and I only wish that I had seen it in Kentucky. I saw a lot of hand-kissing and snuff-taking in Kentucky, and I only wish that I had seen it in Europe." "I should be easy to bring in three or four times the number of tourists next summer that we had last season. As many other states and nations are doing, the tourist business is being developed in a big way. With her new share in during the coming summer, Kentucky can be given credit for a big share in the development of the tourist industry."

Opening of the First Congress Delayed by Lack of Quorum (Continued from page one) wheels. Members from the far South came by steamer. Taverns were indifferent in service and often so crowded that it was impossible to secure comfortable accommodations, so it was small wonder that the members of Congress were loath to leave their homes and firesides for the uncertain comfort of the long highway to the seat of the national government. Wealthy New York citizens had contributed the sum of $32,000 for the purpose of remodeling the old city hall, repainting and renovating the building, which, when completed, received the new name of Federal Hall and was chosen by the city council at the disposal of Congress. These alterations, incidentally, were made by Major L'Efant, who later laid out the city of Washington. The appearance of the hall was impressive for those days, the architecture in Tuscan style with seven openings and four massive pillars in the center, supported by heavy columns, above which rose four Doric columns. The center was ingeniously divided to admit children starts in the morning, which, with the seats and other furniture in the hall, and the sculpture of thirteen arrows surrounded by olive branches over each window, marked it as a building set apart for national purposes. The entrance on Broad street opened into a large, plainly furnished room, to which every one had free access, and beyond this was the vestibule which led in front to the hall of representatives, and through arches on each side. The vestibule was paved in marble. The hall of representatives was somewhat octagonal in shape, with niches for statues at intervals. The windows were about sixteen feet above the floor, the fine walls being interrupted by four great fireplaces. In the niches between the windows were trophies carved, and the letters U. S. in cipher surrounded by laurel. The speaker's chair was on an elevated platform opposite the principal entrance. Each member had a separate light and desk, the desks of the members were seated in two galleries in front of the speaker's desk. The general public was admitted only to an area on the floor outside the bar. In this room the windows were hung in light blue damask, the seats covered with the same material. The Senate chamber was if anything more elegant than the hall of representatives. It was approached by stairs on the east side of the vestibule, and entered by a long gallery, communicating with an iron gallery as well as with the hall of representatives. There were three windows at each end, those toward Wall street opening into an outdoor gallery, the other toward the east side of the building. It was in this gallery that George Washington took the solemn oath of office, the packed throngs witnessing the ceremony about for an instant in addition of their loud and hoarse.

THREE KILLED IN FLOYD IN PAST-FORTNIGHT

(Continued from page one) John Newsome was arrested and placed in jail, charged with the murder. Newsome is alleged to be free until his sister, Mrs. Hall, made an affidavit upon which he was arrested for being an accomplice. It is said, Mrs. Newsome leaves his widow and two small children. The body was buried near the home of Left Beaver. The third slaying was that of a negro at Ford by another negro, whose name was given as A. J. Smith, who is in jail here. Parr Fike and Clyde Dewey, who were employed in road construction on a piece of road between the man and mountain. In an affidavit given to County Attorney S. B. Coombs, of this county, when first taken to the hospital at Pikeville, Fike stated that a crowd of seven or eight Floyd county men first started the trouble. He named Ed Gearheart as one of the men who used a pistol in the shooting. According to Dewey, he and Fike were in company with a girl from Beaver Creek, near on their way to Pikeville. They parked on the Pike county side of the mountain to get their motor car. A crowd of seven or eight men drove up and pushed them down. Dewey thought the crowd had some kind of trouble and called out to them, asking if they needed help. It was then, Fike said, that the men came to their car and exchanged a few hot words, after which they apologized. Dewey said that the man he knew as Ed Gearheart pulled a pistol and shot him through the leg. Another man, whose name is unknown, grabbed Fike's pistol from his holster under Fike's coat, at the same time shooting Fike once through the chest. Dewey said.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Jackson county, abundantly supplied with feed and a host of its livestock home owners, is sending truckloads of products to the fortunate regions. Loads of beans, apples, peaches, cabbage, brussels, beef, turkeys, chickens and canned goods have been sent to some points for the coal fields according to County Agent W. R. Reynolds. In addition, canned goods are being assembled for the agent and sent within the county.

The county agent, in cooperation with local interests, has announced a three-year program to develop sheep raising in Marion county. Owners of 22 flocks will follow practices designed to improve their sheep and produce high quality spinning fleeces. The flock, selected for the county, will serve to demonstrate to all farmers how sheep raising can be made a reliable source of income.

Highly successful county farmers grow a total of 200 acres of corn at 100 bushels to the acre, according to suggestions made by County Agent J. W. Miller. They applied 150 to 200 pounds of superphosphate to the acre, planted selected seed and used intensive methods of cultivation. As a result more than seven acres under common corn growing methods. "The object of these demonstrations," says the county agent, "is not only to grow more corn on fewer acres and thereby release for pasture and timber the sheep lands that are less suitable for cultivation."

S. D. Hall, of Powell county, is one of the best growers of Korean lespedeza seed in Eastern Kentucky. He produced 1,000 pounds of seed from 100 acres. The application of 224 pounds of superphosphate to the acre increased yields of seed by 100 pounds to the acre. Mr. Hall is a member of the Kentucky Seed Improvement Association.

Among the County Agents

Graves county farmers received 330,000 for milk delivered in November by the Milk Company of Mayfield.

Madison county farmers have disposed of more than half of their big southern molasses crop.

Montgomery county farmers are replenishing their feedlots, many of them buying hereford in Kansas City. An association has been organized to market Christian county's large crop of lespedeza seed.

Walter Steamer gathered 1,500 bushels of corn from 30 acres of his own land in Clay county. The county knew its largest corn crop.

Harrison county 4-H club members won $300 in prizes on stock exhibited at the Louisville fair cattle show.

Eighteen barns were built and five old ones remodeled in Jessamine county this year.

Lawrence county farmers increased their wheat acreage this year, much of which will be cut for feed. Previous to last year practically no wheat had been grown in the county for 10 years.

Arrangements are being made in the drain a large acreage of fertile land in Rowan county.

Bell county farmers report satisfactory production of soybean hay this year.

Mrs. Walter Perry, of Trimble county, made a profit above feed cost of $701 from her flock of 554 hens.

The Hopkins County Golden Hoop Club is making extensive plans to improve sheep production next year.
