WEEKSBURY POLICE CHIEF SLAIN

MURPHY SHOT TO DEATH BY BURKE SATURDAY NIGHT

Veteran Officer Killed in Lock-Up After Arrest of Slayer's Kin

BURKE JAILED HERE

Chief of Police S. J. Murphy, of Weeksbury, was shot and fatally wounded Saturday night at the Weeksbury city jail by D. (Maany) Burke, miner, after the officer had jailed the slayer's half brother on a drunkenness charge.

The killing, declared by authorities to have been one of unusual atrocity, aroused considerable feeling in Weeksbury where Mr. Murphy had headed the police force for the last eight years and had gained the friendship of all who knew him by his courteous but firm enforcement of the law.

One bullet from Burke's high-powered rifle struck the chief in the heart and he died within five minutes. "Why did you do that?" he called to his slayer, then fired two ineffective shots from his revolver before falling, it was reported here.

Shortly before the slaying took place, according to the version of the shooting recounted here, Policeman Murphy had arrested Wilson Hall, Burke's half brother, who, it was alleged, was in

BLACKBURN DRAWS 11-YEAR SENTENCE IN SLONE SLAYING

Jury Reaches Verdict Sunday Morning; No Appeal Is Expected

NEGRO ACQUITTED

A jury of the Floyd circuit court Sunday morning reached a verdict in the case of Bennie Blackburn, charged with the murder of Emery Slone, held him guilty of the charge and sentenced him to an 11-year term in the state penitentiary.

It was believed this week that Blackburn would accept the sentence without appeal.

Saturday, Dave "Popcorn" Miller, 48-year-old negro, was acquitted of the murder charge filed against him in the slaying, a week earlier, at Wheelwright of J. D. Tompkins, negro. Commonwealth's Attorney O. C. Hall said, after the trial, that the case was one of evident self-defense.

The Commonwealth, in the Blackburn trial, produced evidence which contended that Blackburn shot Slone, a Maytown merchant, after asking Slone to shake hands with him. Slone, his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Bailey, were sitting in the cab of Slone's truck outside the Green Lantern, at Knotley Hollow, a few miles above here after Slone had been threatened with a revolver.

"Undefeated" Prestonsburg Kiwanians Lose First Game

Paintsville Team, Strengthened by Absence of Arrowood, Has Edge Over Local Aggregation--Line-Ups Unavailable

Sound the Knell! Bring out the sackcloth and and a shovelful of ashes!

The hitherto "undefeated" basketball team of the Prestonsburg Kiwanis club Friday night went to the well once too often. And it was the Paintsville Kiwanians--also "undefeated"--who licked them. Yes, 10 to 4.

But that is only a small part of this story. You must hear how our "boys" (sic!) went down fighting. They haven't got up yet, they're so sore.

As the result of a series of goal-line stands--but this was a basketball game, wasn't it, or was it?--on the part of both teams, the half ended in a deadlock--0 to 0. During these two quarters vs. rious and sundry members of both teams did their utmost to help their opponents to score--in true Kiwanis fashion--but, no, they wouldn't accept charity, these proud

WAYNE MYSTERY ANIMAL IS KILLED AFTER ALL-DAY CHASE

Breaking through the ice when it attempted to evade those that had pursued it all day, Wayne county's fabled mystery animal was killed Christmas eve on Millum Creek in Grant district after an all-day chase.

Fond of pigs and sheep, the animal had harassed farmers of Grant district for six years. Several people had seen the animal in recent years but ever though many attempts to trap the animal had been made, it had always escaped and had become a mystery in Wayne county.

Discovered by Milton Nelson on Monday before Christmas, the animal was chased by him and other farmers in Grant district.

The animal, it was reported, was about five feet long, with the height of a sheep, and with feet and ears larger than those of a dog bound. Its weight was estimated at 10 pounds. It has a nose sharp and long like a pig.

The animal, it was reported, was being mounted and will be on display in the near future.

Mrs. Van Shunake and daughter, Wilma, of Garrett, were the guests of relatives here over the past week-end. Miss Bird Reed, of Lackey, near here, was the Sunday guest here of her aunt, Mrs. Charloffe Martin, and other relatives.

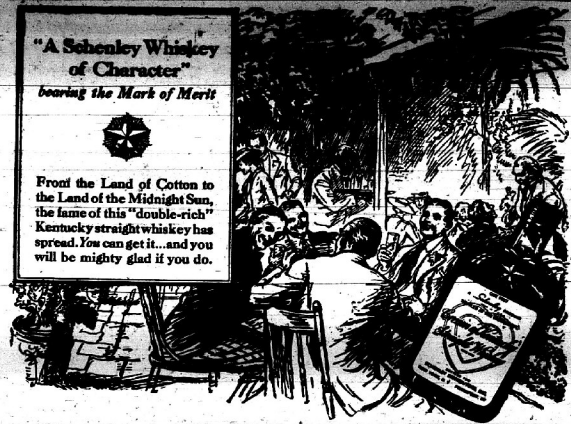

FIRST AID ON THE HIGHWAYS

Red Cross workers have begun to forge the Kentucky link in the nationwide chain of Red Cross highway first aid stations. One at Millersburg was the first organized in the state and other counties are following.

In each instance it will be necessary, before a station may display a Red Cross first aid sign, for the personnel of the establishment to have taken the standard course in first aid. At least one person with a knowledge of first aid must be in attendance at all times during the hours the station is open. The stations are being located in filling stations, wayside stores and at police stations. The Red Cross will train owners and operators of the place where the emergency accident treatment will be available and supply emergency medical equipment.

It is hoped that the Red Cross emergency service will reduce the highway traffic fatality toll, because it is a well-known fact that many traffic accidents are caused by motorists who are unable to stop at once by the side of the road.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airway emergency station. In it are Harry Ramill, millionaire mine magnate; his daughter, Lillith; and Vivian, Harry's only remaining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to the north, although they refer to him as a "worthless" Lillith Ramill, product of the best area, plainly shows contempt for Garth. Through Garth's guidance, the plane successfully reaches the claim site. Harry and Vivian, making several tests, assure Garth his claim is nearly valueless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are willing to take a chance in investing a small amount. Hearing treacherous advice, Garth actually removes a part from the mine. Garth, but their tone against him when they try to start the plane. Garth manages to set the mooseplane alight and the current carried it over the mountain ridge, where it is their only hope in reaching the wilderness. He then starts the engine and the plane starts the long journey. He insists that his daughter must be hereafter the plane is shot down. Garth escapes the outpost on the Mackenzie. Garth escapes the outpost in getting his companions into line.

"Though Garth had no pack, he stood up with the moose quarter on his back and lifted his end of the pole to his shoulder. He then was accustomed to packing. He took the meat on his pack-board and his half of the two quarters on the pole with a little difficulty as Harry toted the other end of the pole.

When they reached the camp Miss Ramill and her father were out grunting wood. At the returned to the thick smoke was rising from green sticks and leaves; at the other end, the pan of sliced wood was boiling hard. Harry and Vivian had lifted the moose quarters upon the rack. Garth brought water in the aluminum pot and cooled down the hot boiling meat. Miss Ramill had much to learn about the culinary art.

After the meal Garth glanced at the clock. "Mr. Ramill, the leanto and blanket are for you and your daughter. Harry can take the lead side of the fire. I'll keep it going. Turn in whenever you please."

A yawn surprised Lillith Ramill into a moaning laugh. She turned to her swollen-faced father.

"What a howling force, Vivian! Can you imagine me going to roost at sunset, instead of sunrise?"

Harry forced a smile and felt at a particular sore cluster of bites on the back of his neck. Mr. Ramill cast a wistful glance toward the fire.

"I presume, Lillith, you will prefer not to share the bed with me. Perhaps I can manage out here beside the fire, like Vivian."

"No," Garth differed. "You'll sleep under that blanket until you have hardened into a log and you'll turn in now. It's been a big day for you."

The girl bridled. "How about my wistful and the proprietaries?"

"Well leave that to you," Garth replied. "If you consider it improper to share the blanket with your father, you're welcome to sit up and help me grain these mosquitoes."

Harry stifled. "None of your insolence! You'll treat Miss Ramill with utmost respect."

"The lady shall receive from me all the respect to which she shows herself entitled," Garth said. "Why not make it mutual, all around?"

Lillith Ramill was no less completely unconvinced than the engineer. She spoke to her father: "By all means, say, Dad, if you're letting him order you around, I refuse to stay up and stare all night. Come on."

He cropt after her into the brush beside the fire and added water to the steaming mutton stew. He next began grating the hair from the moose bull hide. He could not stand stretched out and go to sleep no less readily than had the cheechacos. On the other hand, he was able to keep awake as long as he wished. He screwed steadily at the coarse moose hair, while his ears drank in the voices of the wild.

By the time the sun glared over the jagged crests on the northeast wall of the valley, Garth had the hair grained from both the moose hides. He started to cut into the larger skin, Miss Ramill crawled from the leanto. She blinked and yawned, straightened her rumpled night skirt, and slid down to lace her boots. He gave her a friendly good morning.

"Good! Pah!" she scoffed. "I feel like the morning after. Here I am flat. Not a drop of anything for a breakfast; no bath; no clothes; no face cream or toilet; no make-up! You've even a cigarette! Yet you have the face to give me about it?"

"At that, he could not resist giving her the old quip: "Cheer up; the worst lay to come."

She ignored it to point at the steaming mutton in the roid pan. "Look at that filthy mess; half full of ashes. If you had a spark of decency, you'd throw it out and wash me a pan of water for my face and hands."

He finished the cutting of a moose-meat piece before he replied: "In the first place, I'm too busy performing needed work to act as a wash-bowl."

In the second place, that mutton is not filthy. You'll say it's the most delicious apple you ever tasted. About the best, don't you head in the grill. That will give you a combined wash and bath. If you wish a smoke, there's the fire. For cosmetics, I'll soon be making up a batch of grease and pitch mosquito powder. My final dose of frolic went on too thin to last long."

She looked her disgust. "Grease and pitch! When I have a headache?"

"Soon as we start, we'll wash and brush it's a question which will go first, your net or your stockings. Dope yourself a wash and brush, and you'll find it a better cosmetic than rouge and powder."

"Shoo up— I'm too busy to depe-ate all, it will be on my legs."

"Quite all right," Garth replied. "Good thing they're so good. I might have had to waste cartridges to get rid of them. What I'd like to know is why they chose this solid meat, instead of the offal!"

As if in answer to the question, a snarling growl far deeper than that of the wolves came from the border of the moose house. Garth had killed the bull moose. Up out of the thicker reared a huge gray head. Massive forelegs stroked apart the willow stems with chisel-like claws girth or more long.

It was a grizzly—a full-grown ursus horribilis. Garth believed the beast to be as large as those monsters of the same breed that ruled over the southern Rockies and the Sierra in the early days when Indians still were armed only with bows, and the few white hunters carried only muskeled flintlocks.

The ears of the great she-bear were flattened back. Her little pig eyes glared red. The monstrous jaws opened to let out a roar of defiance that shook the solid ground.

"Good G—d! Mr. Ramill gasped. "A—bear!"

Harry grabbed Garth's shoulder. "Shoo!—d—n you!—Shoo, or give me that rifle!"

coming. He asked only that the pan be refilled to dissolve more of the molasses.

The three were accustomed to the free drinking of their kind. They had already begun to feel the lack of the usual cocktails, meantime wines and between-meals whiskey. This was aggravated by the lack of tobacco. To ease some as much as possible, he broiled a trout on a rafting willow stems, basting it with moose fat. The tender meat kept them occupied until the buffet broth soothed their jangled nerves.

There was a limit, however, to eating, and once its effect began to pass, the craving returned more intense than before. First Miss Ramill, then Exuby, and last of all Mr. Ramill began to make ironical remarks aimed at Garth. He ignored them for some time. The remarks became more of a friendly wit and sarcasm. He dropped a morsel upon which he had been sewing, and picked up his rifle.

"It's had enough of this bitter and sour berries, thank you all. Find these yourselves for a while. I'll go get the sleep I missed last night while acting as guardian angel of your sweet slumbers."

CHAPTER V

Meta Woman.

Far up the tundra slope, above the trough of his platinum placer, Garth found a dry moss-bedded rock on the sunny side of a boulder. He lay down, pulled his hatbrim over his eyes, and let himself fall asleep.

It was half an hour later, the sun was swinging round its wide circle in the shadow of the rock fell upon Garth. Roused by the passing of the warm rays, he pushed back his hat and sat up. He came down to the camp. Mr. Ramill sat beside the fire between the arms of a boulder. He was under the moss in the leanto lay open before the men.

Garth was employing the last contents of the sugar pouch into a pot of thick tea. She was first to see the "Meta" woman's approach.

"Hail to the chief," she mocked. "My dear Mr. Garth, you are most fashionable late to dinner. Will you join us with a cup of tea?"

Her father turned to eye the invited guest with a shade of uneasiness. He found what you were holding out on us, Garth. It's the only trick you failed to put over."

Exuby said nothing. He tensed, ready to spring up and shoot.

Finland's National Bath

Is Worth Talking About

In some country districts of Finland, both sexes frequently share the same vapor bath, for preparing the "sauna" as it is called, is an arduous task and the steam for one is enough for several people, according to a correspondent in the Detroit News.

All afternoon the housewife is kept busy heating great stones in the bath house oven. Then when the bathers like to cool off by taking a dip in the lake, the women are satisfied with a branch of birch leaves. The aroma from this is quite pleasant and fills the room with its fragrance.

After they have steamed well, the bathers like to cool off by taking a dip in the lake. The women are satisfied with a branch of birch leaves. The aroma from this is quite pleasant and fills the room with its fragrance.

AMERICA'S GUILTY CONSCIENCES HELP ENRICH TREASURY

America's guilty consciences, first officially recorded in 1911, have swelled the treasury's famed "conscience fund" to $618,233.08, officials revealed.

The first deposit was in President Madison's term, in 1811, when an unidentified person, "claiming to have defrauded the government, sent in $5. Since then, contributions made in every year but 1848, have ranged from a 1-cent stamp to $30,000. The latter year was 1911 when $54,923.15 went into the public coffers.

Correspondence in the treasury's conscience fund files seldom, chiefly to anonymous explanations of remittances "intended to lift loads from worried minds. One batch takes the tale of a drafted man in the Twenty-third Engineers who, after having paid the government $25 in conscience money, decided he wanted it back. He discovered it would take strict of congress.

The treasury officials told also of a man who sent a small remittance only to have the government discover he owed a whole lot more. The government collected in that case but normally contributions to the conscience fund are accepted without question or investigation.

The treasury has another fund, composed of contributions from known donors, totaling $1,590,879.89. To this was added the $250,000 bequest of the late Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, the smallest known bequest, made in 1927, was 10 cents.

In 1928 contributions from known donors totaled $971,260.28. The war years were conspicuous for bringing to the government contributions from persons desiring to help it pay its way. Bequests in 1924 totaled $18,233.88. Bequests have been made in every year without a break since 1913.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The forces that impel action reside in temperament. The ideals and convictions that guide it are hidden in the mind and heart. UNDEFEATABLES ARE DEFEATED

Then, bang! Lloyd Hamilton—not the film comedian, rather, the Paintsville tragedian, so far as Prestonsburg is concerned—dropped the ball through the net, hitting Joe Ward a glancing blow on the head. Joe woke up.

Forrest Short, of the Prestonsburg five, had a look in his eye that indicated he might appeal the case, but at this juncture he hauled off as he had been trying to do all the time—and got the ball through the net. (Prolonged applause.)

At this time representatives of the local press withdrew "allegations" informally filed against Col. Irvin Arrowood, of the Paintsville News, and ex-officio coach of the visiting team, to the effect that a trick ball was being used and that it could not be forced into the Paintsville goal. Striving to break the tie, we did try to have Colonel Arrowood—may Ruby Laffoon's soul rest in peace—and his team penalized halfway to the goal line because the gentle mint-and-julep from Paintsville was julep from Paintsville was coaching from the sideline.

But Mr. Hamilton settled that argument. He proceeded to ring up six more points in rather fast time, considering the track after Isbell had slid over it as often as he did. Then, despite a sweet flying tackle by Joe Ward and some close clipping by Fields, Branham, of Paintsville, added the crowning insult with another field goal.

Burke, of Prestonsburg, who played an excellent game despite the assistance (?) of his teammates, sank a field goal for Prestonsburg's final two points.

Paintsville was greatly strengthened by the absence of Henry Arrowood, editor of The Paintsville News, who was last seen listening to a dirty joke he thought might be "good" enough for his column and who, for which reason, did not turn up for the contest.

The line-up? Both teams refused to be "mugged."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the editor of The Times: I wonder if our county newspaper is aware of the manner in which certain relief work is being conducted. I live on Salt Lick Creek, where a road project has been started under the W.P.A. And STARTED is right. To date, a mere showing has been made on less than half a mile of this road. This, despite the fact that work began November 4—despite the fact that an estimated sum of $2,500 or more already has been expended on the project.

This work looks like an endurance loafing contest. Two miles away, on Brush Creek, relief work might mean work. For this project is a third farther along than the Salt Lick job, though the Brush Creek work began some time after ours did.

In my opinion, the main reason for this difference in progress on the two projects lies in the foreman. On Brush Creek, Ex-Magistrate Dan Prater, a resident of that creek who is intensely interested in getting a good road completed with the money allotted for his project, is the foreman. The two foremen on Salt Lick are from Maytown, five miles away, and Maytown will not be affected one way or the other if Salt Lick's road is never completed. I personally like both these gentlemen and have nothing against either of them, but we do feel that we are entitled to better service and more interest in our people.

Every landowner along this project on Salt Lick gave his right-of-way, and there were two of these who also volunteered their services as Deputy Clerk and Notary Public to take acknowledgments to deeds without one cent-of-pay. We are all deeply interested in good roads. We at first believed we at last would get out of the mud, but are now becoming discouraged. It seems to me that the Salt Lick community has men who are qualified to act as foremen and who at the same time are interested in the work. We, I believe have an average community with an average amount of common sense and ability. Then why not it necessary to send in men from another community and probably from another state to boss our labor over our own land and on our own road?

We have a number of men along this road who are qualified to act as foremen. We have some ex-soldiers who are unemployed, who need work and can do the work. It is unfortunate that there is not some court of justice and inquiry in this section wherein the people could file complaints and have injustices corrected.

Whoever effected the appointment of these foremen did this community a bad turn and should try to make amends by making some changes. I am for the New Deal and endorse the spirit behind relief. I do not want to convey the impression that there should be any blame against President Roosevelt for local injustices. But I do want to say that I am fully convinced that between Washington and Salt Lick Creek there is many a slip.

If FDR could only see these "slips" and know how often he is betrayed!

toxicated. Soon afterward, Mrs. Burke told Sheriff Stumbo and others Sunday, the slayer picked up his rifle and announced that he was going to the lockup and kill those two. The two were Policeman Murphy and Deputy Policeman Ben Mullett. Mrs. Burke is quoted as saying she pleaded with her husband not to go to the jail, and a Weeksbury boy said he heard Burke's threat and ran ahead, seeking to warn the officers of Burke's approach. When he arrived near the lockup, however, he found Burke so near that he feared to shout the warning.

Kicking open the door to the office of the jail building, Burke opened fire, it was stated; Four prisoners, one his half-brother, witnessed the shooting. Policeman Murphy was engaged in opening a door to a cell or in attending to a prisoner when Burke threw open the door.

H. S. McKallip, manager of the Elkhorn Pine Coal Company at Weeksbury, telephoned the Sheriff's office here, asking that a search be instituted for the slayer. Bloodhounds were summoned from Lexington, and the trail was picked up early Sunday. The posse searched the Burke home and followed the dogs about seven miles through the hills before the pursuit was considered fruitless and halted.

On the same day, Burke appeared in Neon; Letcher county, and surrendered to an officer there. The jailer of Letcher county late Sunday afternoon notified the Sheriff's office here that he was holding Burke in jail there. Sheriff Stumbo left Monday morning to bring Burke here. Burke opened fire, it was Burke told Sheriff Stumbo that he went to the lockup for the purpose of posting his rifle for his half-brother's bond. When he opened the door, he said, Policeman Murphy began firing. He returned the officer's fire in self-defense, Burke claimed.

Surviving Policeman Murphy are his widow, one daughter, Pauline, Murphy; two step-daughters, Weeksbury, Miss Cynthia Blum King, at home, and Miss Ruth Irvin King, at Weeksbury.

Mr. Murphy was a native of Louisiana, and his standing as an officer and citizen alike was such that both company officials and mine employees joined this week in expressing deep regret upon his slaying.
