WANTED! A NEWSPAPER
By WRIGHT A. PATTERSON
(In the Publishers' Auxiliary)

Malcolm, Iowa, wants a newspaper, and the committee in charge of locating the right man insists it must be a good newspaper that will command the respect of the people of the community.

For many years Malcolm was a prosperous, progressive town, and still is. For many years Malcolm had a newspaper and a good one. It was edited and published by Mr. J. H. Doty. He produced not only a good paper but a prosperous one.

Mr. Doty's direction the newspaper enjoyed an excellent circulation coverage of the town and its surrounding farms. Its content provided a coverage of the local news of his community and also a liberal amount of high quality features, including interpretations of national and world events, good fiction and popular departments. It was the satisfying kind of newspaper that filled the needs of the people and left no place for an excessive circulation of outside publications.

The result was that the business that belonged to Malcolm was not attracted away from the town, and the merchants and the town were prosperous. Then, Mr. Doty having accumulated a reasonable competence, and feeling that he had carried his best, sold the paper. The new owner did not believe, I am told, in providing anything more than local news, and not much of that. He cut down on the quality, the variety and the quantity the newspaper had been providing. It simply began talking over others and these papers cut out the advertisements of merchants outside of Malcolm. This advertising attracted business away from Malcolm.

ROAD CONSTRUCTION

The fallacy in the theory that low-type highway surfacing will suffice has been proved the severe winter which held this section in its grip since last December until only a few weeks ago. When the thaw came the roads simply buckled and broke up like ice in a stream.

But it is not the intention of The Times to enter into an argument with anybody about past highway construction methods as "shown up" by the recent roads. What we are more interested in is the future. Present improvements and losses should make the needs for the future exuberantly apparent.

These appear most painfully on trunk highways. The Mayo Trail and Route 50 in this county the Allen-Lackey highways—wherever unpaved are possible, only at the driver's risk—which is given between Paintsville and London and out on the road from Paintsville to Mt. Sterling, these conditions prevail.

All of which points to the great necessity of paved trunk highways. Which puts the finger on the high partial and unfair manipulation of highway builders, which these years past has left a "missing link" in the Mayo Trail.

The new state administration promises a new deal in road matters, as in other affairs of paramount interest to the people. Such a turn of affairs is sorely needed and the promise Governor Chandler extends is, at least, very heartening. From trunk highways branch roads radiate to reach out into the real Floyd county—out into the up-the-creek places, to farmers hemmed in by mud since the day the white man widdled the Indian trail into a cleared stage for his ox-wagon. Though it is beyond the state's resources to pave these roads at this time, the work toward making them fit for year-around motor travel should not be stopped. Aside from farm-to-market roads now under construction, attention of the Floyd county man who knows his county or the stranger who knows into the county's geography and possibilities cannot but be attracted to Left Beaver and Johns Creek, two of the county's richest sections, which in this day are in the mud. The work began on Left Beaver is a good start, but a good finish also is needed. Johns Creek still hangs.

Talk of low-type surfacing for these roads, of course, brings us back to what has happened this winter to such routes. But such freezes are infrequent. And, if they were to be expected annually, what they would do to the roads would be as troubling to those who all these years have waded the mud or waded highways when they traveled.

THE AMERICAN GUIDE

Through the American Guide, now in process of compilation, every community in the United States is offered the opportunity of selling valuable free advertising.

The Guide representative, Mr. Sturgill, of Archer, is in Floyd county. He is now working toward the assembling of all information dealing with Floyd county's history, resources, points of interest, interesting personalities, legends, transportation facilities—in fact, anything that would interest the stranger reading of or visiting Floyd county.

If you know anything or anybody of such interest, it is to your own advantage and that of your county to report such information to Mr. Sturgill. This needs no further comment, since it should be evident that, if we are to attract tourists' auto traffic, we must at least give them some idea of what they may expect when they get here. Other sections are making themselves of this opportunity. We should do likewise. The service is free.

In order to assist Mr. Sturgill, the American Guide work as a whole and at the same time be of service to Floyd county, The Times invites its readers to submit through our office any material—in any form which they think may be of interest. Address your letters, either to The Floyd County Times or to Mr. Sturgill at Archer.
