There are benefit that must be attrib-uted to the transportation provided by motor vehicles when one considers the social economic and cultural fields of tymens activity. They are too apparent, to be denied. The motor car however has given us an unusual problem, which it seems de-mand, greater though, if we are to save the lives of some of the thousand, who are killed every vear in accidents, along the highways Solution of this problem improved automobiles are more power ful and the Americanis lust for apeed greater than ever Together the three make a killing combination without pre-
