Feathering Foes' Arrows

To ruminant upon evils, to make critical notes upon injuries, and to be too acute in their apprehensions, is to add unto our own tortures, to feather the arrows of our enemies, and to resolve to sleep no more; for injuries, long dreamt on, take away at last all rest.—Sir Thomas Browne.

If You Have a Child

ASK YOUR DOCTOR THIS

Ask Him Before Giving Your Child an Unknown Remedy

Practically any doctor you ask will warn: "Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first."

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy—"milk of magnesia"—the standard of the world is established. For over half a century, many doctors have said "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" safe for children. No other is "quite like it."

Basketball Men Unexcited Over Zone Defense Squawk

Experienced basketball men are paying little attention to recent screams about the zone defense of the country. At a recent Basketball rules committee points out that this type of defense is almost as old as the hills and that coaches always have had a capable way to offset it without pleading to a local law to make things easier for a particular player.

Fred Perry's favorite tippie at such times is orange juice.

Big-time hockey players are not exactly billing meek cooing when they meet Bill Stewart these days. They say the Chief Referee technically is most proficient arbuter, but that he sets himself up too much as a supreme power and otherwise has himself too Johnsoned. Benny Leonard has abandoned, at least for the present, the notion of opening a new restaurant in Madison Square Garden. Rube Goldberg is a few of the base-ball stars who will compete in the Bowling Congress in New York City this spring. Tony Cucinello, Heinie Groh and Jimmy Archer also are giving more than a thought to the affair.

Ed Stevens, the automobile man who used to jump the gun on Irish-American A. C., has a young son who thinks nothing of clearing five, ten inches in elementary school competition. What S. Cobb Thinks about Beverly Hills and "Probes." Out here, our two favorite headlines are "Rift" and "Probes" and some ideal marriage between movie stars has begun to split at the seams and the other that some functionary has been in office long enough for the professional investigators to start investigating.

Irvin S. Cobb The famous De Witt, one of the greatest statesmen of the age in which he lived, being asked by a friend how he was able to despise that multitude of affairs in which he was engaged, replied that his whole art consisted in doing one thing at once.

The government says the survivors of the sinking of the Titanic are increasing in number. I started to add that this proves the Indians are behind their own feat, since we've left them very little of our own to hold, I stayed my hand.

The Spoils System. This isn't a criticism, it's a timid little prediction based on all the political experience that the past gives us. Pledges of curtailment in governmental expenditures, as emanating from the House of Representatives, are undoubtedly sincere. But Andy Jackson or whoever it was first coined the line, expressed the correct idea when he said that to the victor belonged the spoils—not to let them spoil too long either.

So it shouldn't surprise anybody or deeply shock anybody, except the few C. O. boys scattered through congress, if Pennsylvania and Missouri want certain other plenty out of the treasury for continued relief work on behalf of Sen. Guffey and Mr. Pendergast and such-like benefactors of the human race. Not that the ins are any greedier than the outs; they're merely more anxious since the days when nearly all the smart wags seemed to be Republicans and near-by to let them spoil too long either.

France's Inconstancy. FRANCE has just lent a vast sum to Poland, and Poland, it is admitted, will use the money to increase its war strength. If Poland should repudiate the debt and default on the interest, a howl will go up from the "Catholics" that'll ring around the world.

JESUS THE GOOD SHEPHERD

International Sunday School Lesson for February 14, 1937

Golden Text: "I am the Good Shepherd: the good shepherd layeth down his life for the sheep."—John 10:11.

This allegory of Jesus as the Good Shepherd follows the events recorded in last week's lesson. While talking to the man whose sight he had restored and to the Pharisees who had thrown this man from the temple and excommunicated him because he would not agree with them that Jesus was a Sabbath-breaker and therefore a sinner, Jesus goes on into this week's discourse by likening the Pharisees and false teachers to thieves and robbers who would enter the fold by means other than by the door to steal the sheep.

Jesus goes into detail as to the relationship of the shepherd, the shepherd's care for his sheep and the love of the shepherd for the sheep. When those who listened failed to understand what he was talking about and the references and Jesus was making to themselves, Jesus explained the allegory by declaring, "I am the door of the sheep." George Adam Smith, who is talking one day with a shepherd in Palestine when he pointed to a hole in the wall of the sheep-fold thru which the sheep entered and asked Jesus, "And what are you saying to us, Jesus?" replied the shepherd, "I am the door, meaning that at night he slept with his body across the hole to prevent any harm from befalling his sheep."

Again Jesus says, "I am the door; by me (through me) if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and go out, and shall find pasture." "The thief cometh not, but that he may steal, and kill, and destroy: I came that they may have life, and may have it abundantly." Anyone who comes to God through belief in Jesus enjoys the safety, freedom and blessing which only He can give, but the thief of unbelief and sin only enters one's heart to steal men's finer impulses, kill his hatred of sin and destroy and joy with them. There are those who think of the Christian life as a "hard row" to pull and a "hard row" to live, but a deeper spiritual life than any other else in the world. And, more than that, he has seen abiding life because the believer in Christ is promised everlasting life.

Changing the metaphor in referring to himself as the "door," Jesus says, "I am the Good Shepherd," and then proceeds to draw a sharp contrast between himself as the good shepherd and the religious leaders of his day whom he refers to as "hirelings." The good might not only mean kind, but also gentle in contrast to the hireling who receives money for his care of his sheep. The Good Shepherd's care for his sheep in good weather and in bad, sees to their every need, protects them from all harm, even to defending them at talking one day with them, if needs be, to laying down his life for them. The hireling, only interested in the care of the sheep because of the money he receives therefor, runs at the first approach of danger, thinking of his own life rather than that of his sheep.

Jesus again repeats, "I am the Good Shepherd," adding, "And I know mine own know me, Jesus does not look up sheep for the shepherd. When those who listened failed to understand what he was talking about and the references and Jesus was making to themselves, Jesus explained the allegory by declaring, "I am the door of the sheep." George Adam Smith, who is talking one day with a shepherd in Palestine when he pointed to a hole in the wall of the sheep-fold thru which the sheep entered and asked Jesus, "And what are you saying to us, Jesus?" replied the shepherd, "I am the door, meaning that at night he slept with his body across the hole to prevent any harm from befalling his sheep."

Christ here to the Gentiles, distinct from the Jews, the Christian people of God, and with him equally the sheep of his fold. These Gentiles have heard the voice of Jesus, echoing down through the ages and millions have accepted and believed on him. Jesus promises that these sheep shall become the flock of one shepherd—the Good Shepherd. The church of Christ is an indivisible body, with separate parts, it is true, but all with the same purpose, bound together by a common faith, a common hope and one Lord. In our golden text, Jesus declares that the Good Shepherd willingly gave his life for his sheep thus calling attention to the fact that his death on the cross, which was to die, was absolutely voluntary. A man having the power to take his life, but lay it down of himself. Because he died, those who believe on him shall never die.

WOMAN'S CLUB

Continued from page one. Mrs. Fanny Janelle, teacher of the city, presided at the meeting. The club members present were Mrs. J. D. Mayo and Thelma Howard, at two city square ballads, Mrs. Guy Fortune Teller, and Mrs. J. D. Mayo. The club selected a humorous poem entitled "The Program of the Program" written for the program by our own club secretary, Mrs. H. F. King.

Mrs. E. P. Hill gave a report on part of the club's welfare program, saying that 141 garments had been made for refugees by the girls of the N.Y.A. of material furnished by the club.

While reporting plans for tree planting to beautify the city, Mrs. Mayo, club chairman of art expressed her desire to continue the road-building of Lombardy poplars on the trail approaching Prestonsburg.

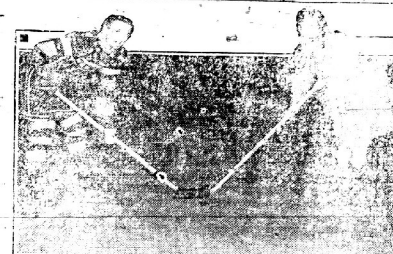

This Mr. Maggard made an offer from the N.Y.A. of 500 for trees and shrubs for local beautifying public grounds. Mrs. J. D. Mayo, Mrs. W. P. May and Mrs. Green Allen went in committee to plan details for the offer.

Mrs. E. P. Arnold reported that a Safety Council had been formed from constituents representing all civic organizations to deal with problems of traffic legislation and enforcement.

For the educational part of the program, a folder of safety rules were being given to the driver as he gets his 1937 car license and safety contests were being held in the school.

THE 25-MILLIONTH

FORD

HAS JUST BEEN BUILT

It has never occurred before in automobile history that 25 million cars of one make have been produced under one management. The 25,000,000 Ford cars built for the Ford Motor Company production line on January 12, 1937.

The figures represent a remarkable contribution to the social welfare, the industrial stability and the general progress of our country.

People respect Ford efficiency. They know Ford uses fine materials, the best workmanship at good wages, the most exact precision measurements. They know these things are passed along to purchasers in the form of extra value. Naturally, they like to do business with such a company. That is the only reason it has been required to produce 25 million cars.

Naturally, too, they expect more of a Ford car, more this year than last year—more each year than the year before. They have every right to expect more. They are getting it. They are getting it in the form of a Ford car—and wears the lowest Ford price tag in years.

People expect more of a Ford car because it's a Ford—and they get more, for the same reason. It is undeniably the quality car in the low-price field.

Bright Star

By Mary Schumann Copyright by Macrae Smith Co. WNU Service

Kezia Marsh, pretty, staid and twenty, arrives home in Corinth from school and is met by her father, Hugh Marsh...

They rose and floated away to the rhythm of the sentimental music...

The music ended with an increased tempo and a final bang. They walked to their table where the waiter had placed their dessert.

"That's Hugh Marsh—you remember we called at Cousin Fuvanna's one night? The one in green with the stunning hair is Dorrie, his wife."

"I think a person so beautiful creates a wall around themselves. Such a picture that you're a little in awe of them, wondering over the effects of your feet, realizing you make them conscious of the admiration you feel, and they're amused by it."

"You'll meet her soon. She wants me to take you over some night. Just as they were leaving, Kezia came in with Arthur Williams and they met on the steps."

Arthur danced the invitation. "Come—fasten on! What's the idea of leaving now?"

They drove down the winding drive to the main road where we had stayed," said Jerry, regretfully. "Kezia's charming, isn't she? I wouldn't have minded meeting Hugh and what's-her-name, too. We could have had a good time."

The knowledge that she was dragging him away from the gay company for an awkward interview with her family, made her feel guilty.

As they spun along the concrete road toward town, edged with suburban bungalows and an occasional farmhouse, she wondered what would Mother say?

Mrs. Pendleton was evidently waiting for them, for she sat very erect in a gorgeously stiff carved, high-backed chair.

"Ellen's father and I were very much surprised—very," began Mrs. Pendleton accusingly.

"Just what do you mean by that?" she spaced her words and fixed him with a glittering gaze.

"I was feeling better, hoping even so faintly, that I might be able to get a pleasure of life again—and then this comes!"

"I started with a sore throat, an infection in the blood stream. A very slow and dangerous disease. Few are ever cured."

"I have an aunt who is an invalid," Lizzie looked somewhat mollified. "I started with a sore throat, an infection in the blood stream."

"Do not put too much wax on floors. A little wax and plenty of polishing makes a better-looking floor."

Try mixing gingers cookies with cold coffee instead of water. Pastry made with too much water is tough and hard.

Going to the Party?

WHERE is the party? At Mrs. Smith's or West's street and it looks awfully much as though the principals were caught by the candid camera.

Mother, the Hostess. Mother is the perfect hostess, calm and assured because she knows her all-occasion frock with its sprightly crisp apron (Pattern 1220) is becoming and appropriate.

And the Guest. The guest just arriving is wearing her trigest Sew-Your-Own. She likes it because the padded shoulders and swing skirt make her hips look smaller.
