"Talking Clock" Invented By Prestonsburg Jeweler

A "talking clock" that, instead of striking the hour, speaks its time, is the product of the ingenuity of Duke Giff, of Prestonsburg. Mr. Giff has combined a clock and a phonographic principle into a home-made cabinet 23 inches high, 13 inches deep and 15 1/2 inches broad. After conceiving the idea of a clock to speak the time, in the latter part of 1935. Its "voice" comes from a record located beneath the clock mechanism and passes through a speaker installed over the clock dial.

To me, though, the main question is whether Scotland is drifting toward America along with her. Among themselves, at least, the Scots have always had the reputation of bringing England along through the centuries. And if you don't believe it, you don't believe in a true Scot. He stands ready to offer supporting dates, names and statistics.

Ed Barrow of the Yankces long has been negotiating the unhallowed negotiations provide the best results. Now and then—as during the latter years of the war—Ed yields to the temptation of a fine fanfare of publicity during the weeks immediately preceding the signing of a contract. But the blather surrounding such yieldings only serves to convince him the more that regular methods are the best. Immediately thereafter he returns to the policy of offering a fair price.

Public prints reported the big out-fielder as threatening to coach baseball at Arizona university rather than sign the contract offered by the Giants. One reason why Promoter Bill Johnston is topping all the 35-year-old records at St. Nicholas Palace is a very good reason.

Sunday School Lesson

THE POWER OF JESUS OVER DEATH

International Sunday School Lesson for Feb. 21, 1937

Golden Text: "I am the resurrection and the life."—John 11:25.

The question which Job, despairing of life, asked, "If a man die, shall he live again?" is a question which man has been and is still asking. This question and the longings of the human race for some knowledge of the life hereafter are best and most satisfactorily answered in Jesus (Christ, who is Lord of life and the Master of Death).

On three recorded occasions Jesus demonstrated His power over death by restoring life to those who had died. The first was when, seeing a funeral procession and moved with compassion at the grief of the mother, he restored life to the son and gave him back to his mother. The second was when he raised the little girl daughter of Jairus and the third is the incident recorded in our lesson for this week.

Receiving a message from his beloved, Jesus, Mary and Lazarus, was seriously ill. Jesus deliberately tarried in Perea for two days before going to Bethany where they lived. When he began his journey that Lazarus was dead—and so informed His disciples, but in order that their faith might be strengthened, he held them before the fact he had not been there before.

When Martha heard that Jesus was coming, she went to meet him and rebuked him for not having come sooner. Jesus, however, assured her of His power to give life to the dead. He then asked to see Mary. Soon Mary came and uttering the same words that Martha had uttered, "Whether he had not died," moved at the deep grief of the sisters and the waiting of the Jews who were with them.

Jesus asked, "Where have ye laid him?" Touched to the very heart by the intense sorrow of His friends, Jesus displayed the human side of his dual personality and went with them.

John Wayne has the lead and Jean Rogers is the beautiful blond center who is trying to find out a bit about a pugilistic racket. Tommy Bupp is very good as the orphan Harry Wood as cast as Keby, and Ward Bond as Camryn.

The New Pictures

"THE GOOD EARTH" A marvelous production of Pearl Buck's literary masterpiece. It reputedly cost $3,000,000 to make and took four years to complete.

"MEN ARE NOT GODS" This is the story of a dramatic critic, played by A. E. Matthews, who writes a scathing review of an opening night of Ornelo.

"SINNER TAKE ALL" This mystery movie was adapted from Whitman Chambers' "Murder for a Wanton."

"OFF TO THE RACES" This is another adventure of the Jones family. Sam Summerville has the role of a horse-loving uncle who persuades the young suitor of his niece to bet his slim bank account on a horse race.

"CONFLICT" This picture is based on Jack London's story "The Abysmal Brute" and the scene is laid in the great outdoors of the old logging camp days.

They proceeded to the cave in which Lazarus had been placed four days before and, that decomposition had more than likely set in, Jesus commanded that the stone be rolled from the door. This done, Jesus offered a prayer of thanksgiving to God and as a means of informing those who stood by what he was about to do, was in conformance with the will of God, he cried with a loud voice, "Lazarus, come forth." To the amazement of those who were there, Lazarus immediately responded and came forth from the tomb still bound in his grave clothes.

This is the last miracle which John records and has been called Christ's crowning miracle. It is his last miracle before the miracle of his own resurrection and, with this exception, is the climax of all the signs which were told to prove that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye may have life by His name.

Jesus had often demonstrated that he was the Lord of Life, when he healed the sick, the lame, the restored sight to the blind and the deaf; fed the hungry and forgiven the sins of the penitents. By restoring life to those who had died, and by rising from the grave himself, he made it possible for us to have life after death had no power over him—and that he was Master of Death.

May we be sure of power over death? Jesus shows us the way to have this assurance when he says: "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth on me, though he die, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth on me shall never die."

When Jesus said, "I am the resurrection and the life," he meant that Jesus Christ claimed he would come again. When he says, "As we shall live also, and he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live," it simply means that he will be raised to life.

THE FARM AND HOME

(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Money that is spent without a reasonable return in satisfaction is money wasted. Why should money that might go for recreation, for instance, go for a light accidentally left burning all night, or for cheap dishes that were quickly broken?

A working library on home-making problems is easily built up. Bulletins obtainable free from the state agricultural college, articles from farm magazines, and good advertising material may give a start. Many persons like to make a scrapbook or keep a card catalog on home beautification, gardens, foods, etc.

To be healthy means more than being physically fit. It includes mental reactions that are true, and having a wholesome, helpful attitude toward other people. Health depends on heredity, environment, but also upon a person's reactions to his environment. To prevent food spoilage, watch the temperature, moisture and easy access of air where food is stored. Cellars and refrigerators may largely control temperature. Foods such as milk and tomatoes, which spoil easily because of their large amount of water, must be handled carefully.

When children have a regular schedule of household work they learn to plan for it and develop a sense of responsibility. As most people have to face difficult situations in life, it makes it easier if they have learned to carry their share of the load.

FOOD PRICES AND PROSPERITY

There is, we hear, some weeping and gnashing of teeth over the fact that the price of retail foods is advancing, having reached a six-year high as the New Year began.

While the general level was higher than at any time since March, 1931, it was only 8.46 per cent over the 1923-25 level. Encouraging, however, is the report that there has been a sustained increase in farm prices, and that farmers in Floyd county and elsewhere are actually receiving prices for what they sell that are above the level of prices for the things they buy.

What we don't know about economics will fill many large volumes but we are intensely interested in seeing farm prices go up because of our conviction that, in the long run, prosperity of the people of the United States depends primarily upon the prosperity of the nation's farmers.

Meanwhile, what about advancing food prices? Well, that will have to be met by advancing wages to people who work by increased salaries to people supposed to work and, perhaps by eating less food on the part of those who neither work nor are supposed to work.

INTERESTING ITEMS

Interesting items of news that recently caught the attention of editors include: The electrocution of a young woman in a large city, when she forgot that she had rigged up a live wire to protect her room from intruders.

Another was the fatal stabbing of a man attending a banquet, where more than 500 persons listened to a speaker, but were unable to tell how, when or by whom the man was murdered.

The third was the 'lucky mistake of a postman' who misread an address on a large parcel and delivered more than $300,000 worth of stolen jewelry to an honest family. The gems had been stolen in another city and were intended for a 'fence' but were promptly delivered to the police and eventually returned to the owner.

CANEY CRUSADE TO START SAT. FEB. 20

Route Touches Twenty Seven Western States On Annual Crusade

The annual Crusade of school children from Caney Creek Community Center this year through 27 western states is slated to start Saturday, Feb. 20. This year's tour, it is said, will be the greatest of any previous years, and will probably take around four, or five months.

On these Crusades the students stage plays give entertainments and speeches for the purpose of raising funds to finance the school. A great benefit is realized to the Crusaders in getting acquainted with the various sections of the United States.

They will follow a schedule arranged over a year ago, following a route through the southern states to the Pacific Coast travel along the coast and return east by a northern itinerary.

Economy Championship in the 352-mile Gilmore-Yosemite Economy Sweepstakes. This year, a Graham Cavalier finished second... Winning the title with a mark of 53.4 miles per gallon and 23.95 actual miles per gallon, a Graham Supercharger, for two years straight, defeated 20 or more cars representing nearly every American manufacturer—for two years straight, demonstrated its sole right to the title, "America's Economy Champion"... Call today for your sample ride in duplicates of these famous national champions. Prove to yourself the truth of the great Graham Supercharger slogan, "Faster and faster on a gallon of gasoline than any car in America."

RIDING BEHIND

When riding horseback was the chief method of getting anywhere it often fell to the lot of a younger brother or sister to ride behind an older brother or other member of the family. When one was very small, this was a thrilling experience but after one could ride alone, it was nothing short of insult. Ab brothing er with a scant two or three years start ahead of you would be given the chief place in the saddle; you would have to cling on in your misery or stay at home. And when you got to the country store or to church, you had a) the staring eyes turned in your direction Big brother frequently did something to call attention to the helplessness, hoping thereby to glorify his own mature size and ways. If the saddle were one with a horn on it after the Texas fashion and brand new, it was at the re humiliating to be seated behind it rather than on it. Though greatly experienced, I still do not know the proper way to hold on while riding behind. When I got scared and grabbed my brother under the arms, I was threatened with annihilation; when I held on to the saddle he accused me of pinning him. I felt I would surely fall if I did not hold to something. What I wanted was to reassure myself occasionally by pinning my hands on the horn of the saddle the way the big boys did.

Riding behind when the horse is smooth-gaited is not so bad; a hard-gaited horse, the kind we used to say could trot all day in the shade of a tree, just about ruined us. The big boy in the saddle could crook his legs and take out some of the jolts; our dangling legs were not braced against anything to relieve the jolt. The worst thing the rider-behind could experience was a horse race, in which big brother desired to beat all the other boys. Though I never knew any boy to get killed in such races, I have always feared for the little fellows tightly clinging regardless of the rules, to the wild horseman in the saddle. Many a farm boy who has never been to sea has experienced all the pitches and tosses that a ship can make. Pillions had disappeared before our time, I suppose, but ladies still often rode behind, especially young girls who accompanied their fathers to the country store. The pillion had been replaced by an orange transfer section to a very large platter. Fill the center with the veal which has been combined with the well seasoned white sauce and thoroughly heated. Garlic with a dash of paprika, carrots and parsley. Chickew with Tomato Sauce 1 tablespoon flour, 1 frying size chicken 1 cup tomato juice 1 small onion 1/2 teaspoon chili powder Salt and black pepper Prepare and wash chicken as for frying. Salt, roll in flour and put in frying pan containing 2 heaping tablespoons of hot fat. Fry brown on both sides and when done add to tomato juice, onion chopped fine, chili powder and black pepper; sprinkle flour over top. Add 1 cup of boiling water and place in oven. Cook 1 hour. Woodcock and American cheese 1 large can tomatoes 1 egg, salt, butter Paprika and red pepper Cut cheese in cubes. Place a small piece of butter in saucepan, add cubed cheese, and melt. Stir tomatoes, while cheese is melting and add to cheese. Beat egg, adding sea salt. When tomatoes have been thoroughly mixed with melted cheese, add egg, stirring rapidly. Let cook over slow fire until proper consistency. Serve on dry toast with crisp bacon. Salmagundi Toast 1 pound of Hamburger 2 tablespoons butter 1 can vegetable soup 1 can of thick gravy or white sauce 1 teaspoon salt 1 teaspoon dried celery leaves 6 slices of toast Broil hamburger in butter until just free of its color. Add soup, gravy, salt and seasonings. Heat thoroughly. Serve on toast and accompany with a crisp salad. Spinach Dumplings 1 egg, 1-4 cup water 2 cups flour 1-2 teaspoon salt 4 teaspoons baking powder 2 cups hot finely chopped spinach Beat egg until very light. Add water and mix well. Add flour, salt and baking powder and mix thoroughly. Roll dough thin and cut into squares. Place a tablespoon of well seasoned spinach in center, fold dough over, pinch ends together. Drop in boiling, salted water with 1 onion, sliced, cover and cook 15 minutes. Serve with roast pork and scalloped potatoes.

How to EASE a COLD FOR 15¢

INSTEAD of buying costly medicines to relieve the discomforts of a cold, try the way almost any doctor would use the modern way - genuine BAYER ASPIRIN. It now costs only 15¢ for a 20-tablet box - two full doses for a quarter. The way you use it is this: Two BAYER ASPIRIN tablets (one tablet you find a cold coming on, taken with a full glass of water. Repeat, if necessary, after 4 or 5 hours. Do not take more than 12 tablets in 24 hours. Bayer Aspirin acts to fight the fever and relieve the pain of colds. Relief comes quickly. Ask your doctor for genuine BAYER ASPIRIN. Mother of Our First President

THE girl who was to become the mother of George Washington was something of a belle in her native colony, Virginia. Mary Ball, descended from a good English family, was called "the rose of Epping Forest" in her girlhood.

At twenty-two, Mary Ball married (on March 6, 1730) Augustine Washington, then a widower with two little boys. Her first child she named George after her old family friend.

Mary Ball Washington was sixty-eight when the revolution began. Since communication was then so primitive, she often did not know for months at a time whether her son was alive or dead.

SYNOPSIS

Keris Marsh, pretty, selfish and twenty, arrives home and is met by her older brother, Hugh. He drives her to the March house where her widowed mother, Fluvanna, a warm-hearted, self-sacrificing and understanding old woman, waits her sister.

"It's a shame when a woman is at the age when she can enjoy life most," continued Jerry. "I wish she is taken with something ghastly like that I my aunt was a wonderful looking woman too."

"You remember that 'don't you, Gavin?" "Uh-hm."

"Elien has something of my look at times." "A girl is usually indebted to her mother."

"No, but I have hopes of getting something better. A fellow has to start at the bottom in the steel business. I intend to go to the school for salesmen if I can get it."

"A sort of one," Jerry grinned. Gavin glanced at Jerry's suit meaningly. He had computed his seat and suspected Jerry of extravagant taste in clothes.

"I'll see what I can do with her father." "Elien went to the front steps with Jerry. 'You rousin' man,' she whispered, 'captivating Mother like that!'"

"I took your cue. You said 'Be nice to her' and I followed instructions." "A cigarette? How about two?" "Make it two," she answered laughing. She was proud, hopeful, unutterably happy.

The first Hugh Pendleton had come out from Connecticut in the year 1802 as a trader with his horses and an ox team over the hazardous mountain roads, and taken up land along the Fenchang Valley in Ohio. He built a cabin near the stream and traded with the few settlers and the wandering bands of Indians.

Presently the word traveled about that two settlers, Wyant and Nash, had erected a blast furnace on the shore of the river a few miles above the settlement.

about that two settlers, Wyant and Nash, had erected a blast furnace on the shore of the river a few miles above the settlement.

Hugh's trips to Pittsburgh had awakened his interest in the need for iron in a new community, and a nebulous idea took form as he sat on the coffee and tea and flour.

Wyant died and Nash moved on to Indiana, abandoning the simple furnace, while Hugh figured and planned and explained to his sons.

The Pendleton boys went into partnership when they grew up, started another furnace. By the middle forties, Hugh Junior, Caleb and Silas Pendleton were the owners of a successful iron works which employed eighteen hundred men.

The Pendletons intermarried with the Woods, the Renshaws, the Motzels, the Deborrys, newcomers from Virginia, the east and England, until in the nineteen thirties the relationships would have taken up at unexpected places.

Fluvanna was the great-granddaughter of the first Hugh, descending through Hugh, his son. Her father had been El Pendleton, and she his only child—a surprising anemone creature, fine-boned as most of the Pendleton women were.

Although James Marsh had been a student of distant cousinships turning up at unexpected places, much of the leadership of old Hugh Pendleton had descended to the next of the family; the women had grace and fastidiousness. Alien blood mingled with their, warm blood, cold blood, but something racial persisted.

"Working?" asked Gavin in the first pause. "I have a job as storekeeper at the Arrow Steel Works," Jerry answered.

"Thirty-five a week." "His fist at his lip, Gavin shook his head. "No, but I have hopes of getting something better. A fellow has to start at the bottom in the steel business. I intend to go to the school for salesmen if I can get it."

"A sort of one," Jerry grinned. Gavin glanced at Jerry's suit meaningly. He had computed his seat and suspected Jerry of extravagant taste in clothes.
