On Monday, Feb. 22, Chester was returned to the Greendale Reformatory, at Greendale, Ky., by C. R. Cummings, an institution employee. A communication to E. L. Sturgill, keeper of the Floyd county jail, from S. K. Holland, Greendale superintendent, stated that he was an escaped inmate of the reformatory. ### COURT TO BUILD TEN-TON BRIDGE

Suspension Span At Banner To Serve Prater and Mud Sections

A ten-ton suspension bridge, to be built at Banner, Ky., is now being advertised for bids by the Floyd fiscal court. An unofficial source estimated the cost of construction reaching the neighborhood of six or seven thousand dollars. W. C. Rimmer, Prestonsburg engineer, drew the plans for the structure. It is designed to be suitable for auto traffic and will be similar in construction to the Big Sandy river bridge at Emma, Ky. The announcement came from the office of Forrest D. Short, county attorney, where March 20 was set as a tentative date for the fiscal court to receive the bids. The bridge has a span of 366 feet across the breadth of the river, suspended between two concrete pillars by wire cables. The road bed of the bridge is figured to be approximately nine feet wide and will accommodate one-way traffic. The approaches to the span were estimated by H. L. Mayo, county engineer, to be 30 feet in length. The bridge is to be constructed of wood on iron framework. Mr. Mayo, who drew original plans for the Banner bridge, said Thursday night that one end of the bridge on railroad side of the river would be located on the property of I. N. Hall and the other end would be on the Harkins and Fitzpatrick property. Continued on page four

PAINTSVILLE-TO LOUISA STRETCH IS TO BE PAVED

'37 PROGRAM

A report received here this week states the highway department is surveying the Mayo Trail from Paintsville to Louisa in preparing to give the 26-mile stretch a high type surface in accordance with the Federal Bureau of Roads specifications. A company of 13 highway engineers is now engaged in "straightening out" the curves along the route. A minimum width of 60 feet was asked in both counties for right-of-way. It was stated that the top of the surfacing would probably be concrete. The contract must be let before July 1, otherwise the federal money for this project will be withdrawn from state's '37 road build. County officials at Louisa have promised speedy cooperation in securing rights-of-way. The 1937 Federal Aid program of the Kentucky highway department, according to an announcement from Frankfort, includes 47 projects on arterial highways in 35 counties. Listed as one of the "important pieces of construction" in the southeastern section of the state, was the improvement of the Right Beaver road from near Dinwood to the Knott county line near Lackey. ### Blast Destroys Inland Gas Company Tractor

Company Calls Halt In Pipe Line Construction--200 Men Idle; Drilling Rig Dynamited

LOCKHART, TRUSTEE, MAKES STATEMENT

W. E. Lockhart, trustee for the company, in a statement regarding the trouble over the construction of a twelve and a half mile pipe line, said that it was caused when the company tried to use a rock drill and a caterpillar tractor. "We started to construct an eight inch pipe line from Lackey to within two miles or so of Hindman. Everything was moving along all right until we began to use a caterpillar tractor and a winch to haul pipe up steep hills where it could not be handled by teams. Mr. Lockhart said that the trouble first started when a rock drill was placed on the job to cut through heavy rock on some of the ridges over which the line was to be constructed. He said that several men forced the driver to abandon use of the drill. "We intend now," Mr. Lockhart said, "to apply to the federal court for an injunction prohibiting any one from interfering with our workmen or with the construction of the pipe line."

1853 INDICTED IN FLOYD COUNTY IN THREE YEARS

Data on Crime Being Compiled by Circuit Judge John W. Caudill

Judge John W. Caudill revealed, from data on which he is compiling on present crime conditions in Floyd county, that since the beginning of his term in office, Jan. 1, 1934, grand juries in the Floyd circuit court have returned a total of 1853 indictments in a three-year period. Of this number, 114 were murder charges, 11 were charged with manslaughter, 807 for other felonies and 1,146 misdemeanors. The number of misdemeanors, Judge Caudill stated, are in addition to the number of cases tried in the magistrates' courts. In discussing the condition of the county, Judge Caudill said that although these figures are appalling, the previous records will show that the number of crimes in this district, composed of Floyd and Knott counties, have decreased to some extent during this period. Recent statistics show that in Kentucky 27 per cent of the convicted criminals are under 21 years of age, while in Floyd county, the jurist pointed out, the percentage of these who are becoming hardened criminals at such a tender age would run much higher. # Sunday School Lesson

THE NEW COMMANDMENT

International Sunday School Lesson for Feb. 28, 1937

Golden Text: "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another, John 13:34."

After the incident related in last week's lesson, Jesus left the vicinity of Jerusalem and went northward to the borderline between Judea and Samaria and thence over the Jordan into Perea. There he stayed a short time. Intending to attend the Feast of the Passover in Jerusalem, he again crossed the Jordan and returned to Bethany, to the home of Martha and Lazarus, a few miles out of Jerusalem. It was during this visit that Mary anointed the feet of Jesus with the very costly ointment.

While many were wondering if Jesus would attend the Passover in Jerusalem, knowing the intense hatred of the Pharisees, Jesus rode into the city riding a colt, receiving the tumultuous acclaim of the multitude. This was a fulfillment of the prophecy and was the beginning of the end for Jesus. He was fully aware of this fact.

Among the multitude were certain Greeks who, not satisfied with their own religion, had accepted the Hebrew faith. Hearing of Jesus and his wonderful works, they wanted to see him for themselves. Whether they had the desired interview or not is not known, but what Jesus says in John 12:23 seems a reply to them.

Dr. Erdman interprets the words thus: "You would see me then you have arrived at exactly the right time, for the Son of Man to be glorified. Not glorified in the sense we usually think of pomp and splendor, fame but honored by God. It was not through the working of miracles, nor through his death and resurrection that Jesus was revealed to the whole world and by the cross was made known to him."

Jesus was comparing himself to a grain in wheat which, in order to prove its greatest blessing, must be planted, lose its corporate identity as a grain, in order to bear forth new life and bear fruit. The self-sacrifice of the grain was to him a resurrection. "And the self-same law of service, which reigns on the throne of heaven governs the dustiest and darkest on earth. To be self-centered means, spiritually, to abide alone and therefore to perish."

Then Jesus uttered his great law of life through death: "He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." George Reith says, "Self-love leads to destruction and death. The present and temporal must be sacrificed for the future and eternal a truth served."

peculiarly in place for Greeks whose essential conception of life in its fullness, beauty, vigor, was asserted by Jesus. He also reminds his hearers that he who would serve him must be willing to follow him. Where—anywhere, even at death. What is the reward offered for such service? Jesus says that he who trusts serves him shall be "where I am and him will my Father honor. What more could we ask or desire."

Realizing the close approach of Gethsemane and Calvary, Jesus shows the human side of this nature when he cries, "Father, save me from this hour; but follow me from this cause came I, and will glorify it again."

Indicating the manner of his death, Jesus declares, "And if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." The phrase "I be lifted up," probably has a double meaning, including both his death on a cross and also his ascension from the earth into heaven. In the phrase "will draw all men unto me," Christ clearly intimates that though crucified, he was not to abide in death, but was soon to rise and set up a kingdom drawing all subjects unto it.

Christ on the Cross is the great magnet, pulling with all the power that love has, drawing broken sinners to his side, and setting up a kingdom drawing all subjects unto it. ### THE STRING BAND

Since the radio has come into general use, there has been resuscitated from oblivion what was certainly heading in that direction the string band. And it is gratifying to note that some of the bands now in existence are strikingly like those of other times. Each band is appearing on programs far from being the regular kind, however. A man in a distant state wrote me about hillbilly bands and the music to be played. He said that he had been elected director of such a band but did not even know what instruments should be played. He had written to several music companies but had been unable to secure any information. I sent him a list of well-known instruments for his band. I would like to listen in on a hillbilly band as they play. I fear it would be the wrong kind of old-fashioned music. I have heard some of these instruments as follows: French mandolin, washboard, bones, fiddle, guitar, and banjo. I have heard some of these instruments as follows: French mandolin, washboard, bones, fiddle, guitar, and banjo.

SYNOPSIS

Kezia Marsh, pretty, selfish and twenty, arrives home in Corinth from school and is met by her brother, Hugh, who lives in the Marsh home where her widowed mother, Fluvanna, was reared...

CHAPTER III—Continued

It was whispered around that he had been threatened with prison, that he had used company money for his own use. People shook their heads and said...

CHAPTER IV

Hugh was intensely annoyed as he buttered his breakfast roll. 'You are late in getting up, are you not?' he asked...

CHAPTER V

'You want to? Leave this little place, our place? The labor-vitae hedge is coming along so nicely, and the peach and plum trees were planted...'

wide smile curved her lips. 'At least I've asked you. But it has turned out exactly the way I expected it to... I'll write to Beryl today.'

At the plant that morning, he visited the different departments, checking with the foremen on the progress of the work.

A little after ten a long distance call came in from Congress City about some steel meat they had delivered for road building.

He sent for the records, talked with the foreman and decided to make the trip to Congress City himself, a drive of 50 miles.

A fine day—and if he drove, why not take Dorrie? They could go over the New Forest road, which wound along a ridge of the hills.

He saw Dorrie sitting at the table in a low almost inaudible voice as he entered the front door. She was looking at him with a look of surprise.

'I'll slip into that green dress you like and be with you in a minute.' 'You are late in getting up, are you not?' he asked...

'You want to? Leave this little place, our place? The labor-vitae hedge is coming along so nicely, and the peach and plum trees were planted...'

'Exactly.' 'You want to? Leave this little place, our place? The labor-vitae hedge is coming along so nicely, and the peach and plum trees were planted...'
