CONSTRUCTION WORK FOR GRADED SCHOOL WILL BEGIN AT ONCE

Plans Approved by Washington, State and Paintsville Offices

$46,000 APPROPRIATED

Only the issuance of WPA work orders is necessary for the starting of construction on Prestonsburg's new grade and junior high school building," said Congressman A. J. May, Monday, after the plans for the building were submitted to him last Monday by Architect H. A. Churchill of Lexington.

Plans for the completely modern structure have won the approval of the State WPA administration in Louisville, the WPA engineer in Washington, and the district WPA office in Paintsville and the necessary governmental appropriation of $46,000 which will be supplemented by the local county educational board.

According to school authorities credit for this much desired building for Prestonsburg should go to the labors of Congressman May, Mayor Carter, the school board and interested citizens.

Plans for the building reveal that it will measure 171 by 160 feet. The basement will be built of native stone and the upper two stories will be continued on page five

JOE WHEELER JARRELL REMOVED TO HUNTINGTON FOR SPECIAL TREATMENT

Joe Wheeler Jarrell, of Prestonsburg, who suffered a badly fractured left arm when the automobile he was driving sideswiped a truck on Left Beaver, was removed from the Beaver Valley hospital Wednesday and taken to Huntington where he will be treated by a bone specialist. He was taken to Huntington by Dr. Allen of the Beaver Valley staff.

Hospital attaches at Beaver Valley expressed this belief Thursday morning that it would not be necessary to amputate Jarrell's arm. It is not known whether he will recover sufficiently to assume his duties as principal of the Wheelwright graded school, which starts September 7.

"Breaks" Becomes Part Of Jefferson Nat'l Park

Congressman May Announces Appropriation Of $450,000 By Forestry Board For The Big Sandy Breaks

Upon his return here from Washington, Congressman A. J. May announced that approval of the "Breaks of the Mountains," as a portion of the Jefferson National Forest in Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee, was obtained last Thursday when the Forestry board in Washington appropriated $450,000 for that purpose. Congressman May began the fight for this project by introducing a bill in Congress several months ago.

Twenty five delegates from this section were present at the meeting in Washington when the question of taking the Breaks into the Jefferson National Forest was passed upon. Congressman A. J. May of Prestonsburg was present at the meeting, lending his support to the plan. Congressman John Flanagan appeared with Congressman May when the matter was presented to the committee.

The Breaks as a national project will be stocked with wild life and the governmental forestry service with all its features, will assume charge immediately.

One of the major features of the Breaks will be the proposed scenic highway, which will be built about mountain sides and over ravines thru a section unsurpassed in natural grandeur. The highway is routed through Pound Gap to the beginning of the Breaks of the Sandy and will be built by the federal government. Of the 125,000 acres in and about the Breaks added to the National Forest, 40,000 are in Letcher county, 15,000 in Buchanan and the remainder in Dickinson and Buchanan counties in Virginia. The Kentucky side of the park will include the Breaks, extending down Pine Mountain toward Whitesburg.

Maintenance of the Breaks by the government forestry service will also aid in flood control throughout the Big Sandy valley. (A proposed dam is planned for the left fork of the Levisa). Soil conservation will be bettered as erosion is lessened, thereby culminating the long continued drive launched by nature lovers in this section to make of the Breaks a national park.

JOHNSON AND REED GARRETT ARRANGES ARE SHOT TO DEATH PETE FOR LABOR DAY

Deputy Constable and Miner Slain at Wheelwright August 26

In an exchange of pistol shots at Wheelwright, last Thursday night, Gus Johnson, 32 year old deputy constable, and Ray Reed, 30 year old Wheelwright miner, were shot to death.

According to a police report, Reed and two companions were shooting on the road. Gus Johnson sought the aid of Wheelwright policemen. Gus Little and Con Oheek, before attempting to arrest the men.

When the three officers arrived at the scene scene of the shooting, they arrested Reed's companions and then began a search for Reed who had fled and hid in a garage on a weeded, empty lot.

When Johnson went behind the garage and flashed his light the shooting began. Reed then shot Johnson in the head and left shoulder.

In the following exchange of shots, Reed was shot fatally in the chest and right side. He died instantly. Johnson died. It is said, en route to the Methodist hospital at Pikeville.

ED PROBABLY USES ELEPHANTS FOR BAIT

Reputable witnesses, vouch for the fact that a mammoth catfish caught this week in George's Creek by Ed Newman, actually tipped the scales, at 41 pounds when weighed at Kroger's, after Ed had hoisted his catch to the rear end of his auto and had driven here.

Witnesses who were present at the weighing of the fish were: Dr. G. D. Gail, Callahan, Curtis May, Roy Weems and Charlie Crum, who said that the bones in the fish's throat were almost as large as his arm.

COURTHOUSE WING IS FOR 3 DEPARTMENTS

School Superintendent, Health Dept. and Com. Atty. Included

Dirt is being moved this week--preparatory to the building of a two story addition to the courthouse on the Mayo Trail side. The wing will contain office rooms for the superintendent of schools, the Floyd county health department and the commonwealth's attorney.

Overall the wing will measure approximately 58x44 feet and will be stuccoed to resemble the main structure. Archer & Dean of Huntington are the architects. The county board of education will share with the fiscal court the expense of the building, the construction of which will not be bid for by contractors, but will be erected by day laborers under a supervisor.

According to plans inspected at the county superintendent's office, the basement will contain space for four future rooms. The entire first floor will contain the school superintendent's offices, including secretary's room, superintendent's room, a reception room, supervisor's room, and a display and storage room for books.

The second floor will contain the offices of the health department and the commonwealth's attorney, among them being the attorney's office, reception room and a display room.

Dr. Stumbo's letter follows, in part: "For the past ten years I have been interested in holding school clinics for the removal of tonsils and adenoids for Floyd and adjoining counties. In my judgment there is a direct relation in health and the grades that a child makes. During the past ten years in all the clinics that I have held we have not had any A grade children. D and F students had any of the A grade children. The D and F students have straightened out the following year and more than 90 per cent of them have made A grades.

"Now if you will check up on all the students that made low grades last year, in my mind you will find that 90 per cent of them have enlarged tonsils and adenoids, also about 30 per cent of them enlarged turbinated bone.

"I don't believe that the State Board of Health will have anything to do with helping making those corrections. Although I do not see any reason why that they should object through their county health department from making this investigation. This of course can be very easily found out thru Dr. Ransdell. Or, you might take it up with Dr. A. T. McCormick, president of the State Board of Health. (Dr. Ransdell of the Floyd county health department states that although it is impossible for his organization to sponsor such a clinic, he will gladly cooperate if the clinic is held. He added that records in his office would reveal physical defects of school children, and that his staff could aid in making physical examinations.)

DECISIONS IN 3 CONTESTS STILL PENDING AS JUDGE SANDERS CLAMORS

Decisions for three contest suits filed against winning candidates in the recent August primary are still pending, as Special Judge Sanders G. Clay, Danville, ruled Thursday that attorneys may have until Sept. 9 to take evidence. The decisions are pending in the suits of J. B. (Jim) Hall and Lee P. May against Wayne Stumbo in the sheriff's race, and the suit of R. L. Holbrook against Willie Hall, successful Democratic candidate for magistrate in district 3.

It is expected that attorneys for the suits filed by Lee May and Jim Hall, both against Wayne Stumbo, will agree to consolidate their suits as one prior to the return here of Judge Clay for a session Thursday and Friday.

Dr. Stumbo Proposes Free Clinic For School Children

Dr. Walk Stumbo, through a letter to Floyd county school officials this week, offered a free clinic to school children of Floyd and adjoining counties. The matter is now being investigated by school officials.

TO THE VOTERS OF FLOYD COUNTY

I trust you will accept my apology for the delay in expressing to you my appreciation for the support you gave me in the primary election. Then permit me to say that words can not convey my deep appreciation to those so instrumental in securing the nomination for me. The loyalty of my friends deeply moves me and I shall ever cherish their memory. And to those who opposed me, I hold no enmity or animosity, but extend to them the true bond of fellowship and devotion. I earnestly solicit your influence and support for a united victory in November.

THE DESPERADO

The American bad man is the lineal descendant of Rob in Hood, Dick Sheppard, and Jack Wilcox, all famous in English history and English literature. Often he is excused for his exploits, some times because he first suffered wrong at the hands of his neighbors or the government.

And with his brother Frank he robbed the Chicago. And stopped the Glendale train. Psychologically it has been easy for Americans to find themselves in sympathy with lawless men for many of our earliest settlers were officially the enemies of the law.

Use of 1 to 24 on Clock Started in U. S. in 1884

The system of numbering the hours of the day from one to twenty-four, generally regarded as foreign, is of American origin, early records of the American Society of Civil Engineers disclose.

Prior to 1883 American railroads operated on "local" time, based on local meridians, and clocks in cities no farther apart than Chicago, St. Paul and St. Louis differed so much as to make it difficult to follow timetables.

Twenty-six nations were represented at the conference and it was then that the Greenwich meridian was selected as the base. The "one to twenty-four" system was also approved.

Old Device Still Boon To Farmers

This windmill is coming back... and fast. Of all places, too, this comeback is being staged in the United States, which in Colonial days had thousands of water-driven mills but very few that were hitched to the grids.

This sudden popularity is due to the demand for low voltage current needed to charge batteries in sections that are still without electric power lines. Incredible as it seems, there are still about 10,000,000 of the 31,000,000 homes in the United States without electric current.

THE FARM AND HOME

(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station) In planning wiring a house for electricity lights should not be forgot for basement and attic stairways they are not only convenient but may save injury from falls.

Milk and cream kept in tightly covered containers tend to spoil. An undesirable "smothered" taste and odor, it is better to cover with cheese cloth. Immediate cooling of milk by placing the cans in cold water is important, especially in summer.

Where wanted for hay only, Korean lespezea is usually not cut until in full bloom, which is about the middle of August in most of Kentucky. Kobus Tennessee 76 and common lespezea are not ready until two or three weeks later.

Three years of tests at the Kentucky Experiment Station gave alfalfa the prize for swine grazing. Oats and rape placed second with Korean lespezea and bluegrass about equal as third. Alfalfa-grazed pigs made better gains and consumed less corn.

In serving meals, many families follow the practical and simple method of placing the food on the table and having each person help himself. This method is informal and tends to promote a spirit of congeniality.

Cayne broke through her thoughts. "I suppose you don't make a hundred a week? A model, do you?"

"I average between forty and six hundred, depending on engagements. It's paid by the hour."

"I told Terriss I'd pay a hundred a week, but I don't want you to take on this job for the money alone. I want some interest—and I've got to have results."

Rachel got up and stood before him, straight and tall and earnest. "You can pay me only what I make at Vinco's, that would be fair, I think, and if I do 'get results' you can make up the difference. As I told you, I'll do my best."

"You're got to be very well, Miss Vincent, it's a go. You say you average between forty and sixty a week. I'll pay you fifty, of course you're getting your room and board, too."

Rachel felt that he would enjoy a little bargaining. "I'm obliged to pay half the rent of the apartment where I'm living whether I work or not. So you can't count my room as part of my pay."

"That's right, that's good business sense."

CHAPTER VIII

She was, then, accepted, but she could not quite believe it. She said to Terriss as they went down stairs. "But he didn't ask me any really sensible questions, and he told me nothing about what I'd have to do. I don't understand it."

"Well, Miss Vincent, I figure it out this way: Mr. Cayne's one of those men who gets himself on the way he can read character and you made a hit with him by being offhand and quiet. He likes you pretty well without you seeing people before you and there's always a point where folks who're nice give you a little more than they mean. You've pleased him that's all right, but you've got to be honest. I don't expect he'd take you, and you're lucky about it myself."

"You are! Then why did you ever let me go talk to him? Why did you tell him you were satisfied with me?"

"I didn't know what else to do. We might as well understand one another, you seem to be a young lady to me, a little smarter than the average, but whether you've got any sense at all about catching a very slick thief is something I can't figure."

Rachel had been wanting to ask a question and now she did it.

"Mr. Terriss, have you any idea who the thief is?"

"I'd be irregular for me to suggest anybody—but then this proceeding's irregular, to my mind. I'm convinced it's a trade job. This assignment is going to be no cinch for you, it's going to be tough work and plenty of it."

"I don't mind that," said Rachel, truthfully. "I'd rather do this than anything in the world."

Terriss favored her with a long appraising stare and she knew she had been overzealous. "It's terribly exciting!" she said.

The youthful sheen excited Terriss's latent suspicion. "It'm—that's one way to look at it," he said, dryly. "Now, you've got to be orders and take it easy and cautious, we'll get along."

"This is another world," thought Rachel, "another world and I must be careful. I can't believe that I'm going to see my own mother—my own mother—go into her house as a servant, wait on her, be her maid. It's perfectly wild, all of it. I must pretend I'm a servant and be a good servant and at the same time watch all the other servants. I mustn't let them know I'm working for Terriss, I mustn't let Terriss know why I wanted to do this work. I know he suspects there's something special in my mind about it. And then—Annel What will she say?"

"All the way back to Vinco's she fought the problem of whether to tell Anne and how to tell her and when, but she was silent. Her only satisfactory answer. It was a relief to see Curt Elton standing at the door waiting for her. She had promised, friendly, easy, somehow he gave her confidence.

"I know it's all arranged," he said. "Terriss phoned Vinco. I thought you'd come in carrying banners and singing songs of victory. What's the matter?"

"It seems so queer now I'm really in it. Maybe I've lost my nerve."

"Oh no, you haven't. Stop thinking about how you feel and concentrate on what you've got to do. There's plenty of that around. Vinco's been yelling at me for weeks to get you started on an appointment. Now I'm not going to bother you, but I do want to see you. You're all set to go into this Cayne house. Call me up if you haven't time for anything else, will you? I got you into this and I'm going to see you through it. And take it easy. It's not so very important, you know, just a stunt, and you can pull it off."

Which was all he knew about what it meant to her, Rachel thought. Even so, she found his point of view pleasing. "I'll call you up," she promised, and went on to placate Vinco.

That was not hard to do, for below his ruminations Vinco was highly pleased that one of his young ladies had qualified for a difficult and unusual task.

When she came home that night there were letters waiting for her, letters from Anne, two of them, brought in on one of the slow winter ships, and a letter from Bob Eddards. Pink was waiting, too, an amiable agreeable Pink who had seemingly forgotten all about their little stiffness. It came to Rachel suddenly that she'd have to tell Pink what she was going to do, yes, and she'd have to tell her about Genie Moore snatching her white beret. Pink would never be so little as to say she knew that. Evidently Genie hadn't brought it back. She put the letters aside unopened.

"Pink," she began cannily, "I'm going to take you out to dinner, we'll go some place where it's exclusive and snooty. I've got an elegant new job, so we'll celebrate."

"Oh, grand! I feel like a proud party. What's the job?"

"I'd be irregular for me to suggest anybody—but then this proceeding's irregular, to my mind. I'm convinced it's a trade job. This assignment is going to be no cinch for you, it's going to be tough work and plenty of it."

offered equal thrills. But at last Rachel had to go to her room and face the three unread letters.

She began with Bob's, written in his small clear script which was almost like print. It was all gossip, the winter fishing, the eerie whiteness and silence of the beach in the snow, the new kittens of Mrs. Duffy's cat Jerusha, the books Bob had read—mostly trash, he complained, the progress of the covered room, the breakdown of the furnace in the Congressional church.

Rachel put the letter down with relief that he hadn't asked her again to marry him or even made love to her. She didn't want to feel anything more. And Anne's letters were waiting. She opened them reluctantly, arranged them according to date and began to read the first one. It was not very long. Tante Helene, it seemed, had a persistent bronchitis and Anne was busy nursing her and running the house and property as well. Rachel could feel Anne's fatigue and her patience. "The servants have never here a long time and they don't want to make the least change in the household," she wrote. "I believe I'm only here to get hold of Tante Helene's money. The man on the farm is amiable because he's due to make a new lease and he thinks I'm going to be easy. They all have to be treated as if they were children. Tante Helene herself is difficult enough, she lies in her huge bed awaiting in woolen shawls and blankets of every color the rainbow and her sharp little voice clicks all day long except when she is coughing or when the doctor has the thermometer under her tongue. She considers illness a cruel and unjust punishment for sins never committed. She won't have a nurse, so Marie, her maid, and I wait on her. I try to get out of the doctor's orders and Marie paying no attention to them or to anything but her own little whims. It will be a miracle if she lives."

Rachel felt a moment of panic. If Tante Helene should die and Anne came sailing back to America while she was at the Caynes', what a mess that would be! She opened the other letter and read it while she was at the Caynes'. It had been written nearly a week later. And at once she breathed more easily. "I tell you at dinner. How about asking Tom and Rhoda Steele too, we've done nothing for them recently."

"All right by me, but we can't go any place very smart, if we only want what's right. I'm not sure that what I want is right but I want it just the same."

It was all right now, she could go ahead and not worry about being disagreeable to her mother. She understood. Anne would know what had pushed her on so urgently. But she wouldn't tell her anything, yet, she'd write tomorrow, before she started in at the Caynes', and say nothing about it. She wrote a long letter and told about Pink and Genie Moore and the Steeles and Curt Elton. Anne would like Curt Elton. It was strange to think how these letters communicated the very essence of Anne, the calmness, the steadiness, the power to resolve chaos into clarity. It was exactly what she needed. She dropped off to sleep thinking gratefully and lovingly of Anne.

The next day she went to see Terriss, who offered practical counsel. "You've got some sort of plain dress to wear up there, I suppose, and plain clothes to take," he said. "Mrs. Cayne will go through to motions of engaging you herself, but that's all right now."

Danish rappers of 4,000 years ago liked to take their ears as much as their sisters do today.

And one little lady 'way back in the Bronze Age even went so far as to wear short skirts. But she caught cold and died as a result.

That is the interpretation that serious-minded archaeologists place upon their latest "find" at Egved, Jutland's rocky shore used for correspondent in the Philadelphia Record.

The girl's remains, together with her clothing, remarkably preserved, were found in a hollow oak trunk of the Jutland's rocky shore used for tombs.

They don't know her name, but they call her Olga, and they say she wasn't over twenty and must have been remarkably beautiful.

Olga, it seems, had an oval face, a determined little chin, peary teeth and the flexion of hair that's all hokey. Mr. Cayne runs the house and has ever since they were married. If she asks you for a reference you tell her it's your first job of this kind."

"But what about uniforms? Ought I to have some?"

"No, the Caynes supply those. The thing is this, Miss Vincent: Mrs. Cayne is going to take you without any questions because her husband really runs that house and he's told her that he's getting her a maid. See? The servants have got to be satisfied with you, that's very important, they've got to think you one of themselves. You'll have to wear plain clothes and take plain clothes with you, and they oughtn't to be too new, either."

He droned on and on, describing the apartment, the servants, the whole articles and how they had disappeared, detailing methods of observation, time for reports, but Rachel did not hear much of any of it. Her thoughts were racing on to her own special hopes and expectations. At last Terriss paused in exasperation and a note of feeling raised his colorless voice. "Damn it, Miss Vincent, the more I say you go on this job, it was that we don't mean head noises. Right now is the time to begin; right here is the place to get your inspirations. So all together, girls! It's sew, sew, sew, your own."

But she was different from all other women of her time. The others, probably because of their pride in their newly discovered, but surely, dressed in voluminous garments.

Olga, however, rebelled. On her mother's primitive hand loom she wove a cloth of finely spun wool, with needles of bone and bronze, she knitted a neat sweater. By plaiting hundreds of woolen cords, she fashioned a brief skirt—so brief, in fact, that it came well above the knee.

With earrings of bronze wire and the traditional plaque on a braided belt, she appeared not unlike the modern outdoor girl.

But her revolutionary costume, it appears, was not suited to Jutland's climate. Scientists think that may have caused her death at such an early age.

PIKEVILLE COLLEGE WILL OPEN SEPT. 13

Enrollment To Be Limited To 400. President McClelland Announces

Pikeville College will open the fall semester September 13 with a record number of Applications for admission, according to present indications. The college has definitely decided to limit the regular enrollment to 400 students, which is the effective capacity of the college plant. In the future more careful selection of students for admission will be followed in order to limit the student body to that figure.

A properly balanced curriculum is one of the chief objectives at Pikeville College where courses are offered which combine the cultural and disciplinary advantages of the liberal arts curriculum with the more practical values derived from subjects with a vocational trend. Through two year courses are offered in Business Administration, Home Economics, Science and Teacher Training, as well as the accepted Prelegal, Pre medical and Pre dental courses.

In each of these courses the subject matter is arranged to give the student not only a grasp of the fundamentals of his major field, but at the same time a background of cultural and related subjects which will increase his usefulness and his capacity for advancement.

The new course in Business Administration inaugurated a year ago, has proven an excellent addition to the college offerings, and is rapidly becoming one of the most valuable and popular courses in the college curriculum. A considerable amount of additional equipment has been purchased for the opening of the fall semester.

THE CONQUEST OF TYPHOID FEVER

What is Typhoid Fever?
Typhoid fever is a preventable disease that can and should be stamped out. Each year about 44,000 persons in the United States and Canada have typhoid fever, and about 4,400 die of it. The average duration of sickness from it is eight weeks.

To Prevent Typhoid
First—Be sure that you use pure water, pasteurized milk or milk from hygienic dairies and clean food that is protected from flies.

Second—if you are living in or expecting to visit a community where the disease still persists, be vaccinated against typhoid and have all members of your family vaccinated.

Third—All persons having the disease or suspected of having it should be reported at once to the local health board.

Fourth—Waste matter from persons having typhoid fever should be mixed immediately with chlorinated lime or carbolic acid to kill the typhoid germs.

Typhoid Germs in Water
If the contents of poorly constructed privy vaults and sewers, and human discharges left on the ground drain into water systems, they may infect the latter with typhoid germs. These germs may be taken into the body with drinking water or with water used in preparing uncooked foods. Many typhoid epidemics are caused in this way.

Typhoid Germs in Milk
Typhoid fever germs often get into milk through carelessness or lack of cleanliness upon the part of those who handle it. They sometimes infect it when it is left uncovered. When milk is pasteurized—heated to 145 degrees for 30 minutes, typhoid fever germs are killed. Use pasteurized milk and keep it covered in a cool place.

Other Source of Typhoid
Typhoid fever germs often enter the intestines with food, especially raw foods. Outbreaks have been traced to clams, and to oysters fattened in polluted water, or from sewage-contaminated beds.

Human Carrier
Certain people, apparently healthy, carry typhoid germs in their intestines or urinary tract and cause many cases of typhoid each year through handling of foods with unclean hands. They are called typhoid carriers. Many cases result from personal contact with these carriers or with patients suffering from typhoid fever.

Things to Bear in Mind
Remember—Typhoid can be controlled by the use of pure water, pasteurized milk and clean foods; by the proper disposal of sewage; by screening privies and food against flies; by destruction of the fly and its breeding places; by search for and culling of carriers and by anti-typhoid vaccination.

Disinfectants
Chlorinated Lime—Mix one-fourth pound of chloride of lime with one gallon of water and keep in an earthenware jug. Pour plenty of this on all discharges from the patient and mix thoroughly with the discharges. Chlorinated lime is very cheap. It should be made fresh each day, for it deteriorates.

Carbolized water—mix five ounces of carbolic acid with one gallon of water. Keep in bottles away from children. Mark it POISON.

Vacation Typhoid
In arranging for a vacation, even for a day, select a place where the drinking water and milk supplies are pure. You should be sure that the water is protected against contamination from faulty drainage and that the milk comes from clean barns and is carefully handled. Be sure that the kitchen and dining room are properly screened to protect the food from flies.

When camping, it is always best to boil or purify water used for drinking, unless you know it is pure. Clear, sparkling spring water may be polluted by drainage. Water may be made safe for drinking by the use of tablets which can be bought for chlorinating water, or by adding three drops of tincture of iodine to each quart of water, or six drops to each quart if water is cloudy or contains sediment.

Rolls, With a New Appeal

By BEULAH Y. GILLASPIE
Director, Sealtest Laboratory Kitchen

WE've seen our guests devour these sour cream rolls by the dozen—and call for more! For the tangy appeal added through the sour cream always adds to delight. Why not try them, tonight?

SOUR CREAM ROLLS

2 cups thick 2 teaspoons salt
1 cup cream
1 egg
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup sour cream
1/2 cup melted butter

Build up and need to have warm. Move the yeast cake and add 1/2 cup of the milk and cream. The resulting dough is soft and can be used for the rolls and four gradually, stirring constantly until smooth. Brush with melted butter, cover, put in a warm place and let rise to about 2 1/2 to 3 times the original volume. Knead lightly for about 1 minute and cut dough in two parts. Roll out one part at a time in rectangular shape about 3/4 inch thick. Brush with butter and cut in lengthwise strips about 2 inches wide. Place strips on top of each other, and cut off pieces about 1 1/2 inches wide. Place the pieces on buttered small muffin pans with the cut edges up. Let rise in a warm place until double in size. Bake in a hot oven (425-F.) for 10 to 15 minutes or until golden brown. Brush with butter if desired. These rolls can be baked in about 2 1/2 to 3 hours. This recipe makes about 24 rolls.

Let Bill Farnsworth Pass on Blackburn's View of Joe Louis

(Wilton "Slim" Farnsworth, who devoted 30 years to journalism before deciding to turn to the cradle of endeavor, sits in as guest columnist for Hugh Bradley this week. He was a former New York sports editor and now general manager of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club.)

BY BILL FARNSWORTH I ASKED Jack Blackburn, a great fighter in his day and now boxing instructor and trainer of Joe Louis, just how he figured on the Brown Embalmer would have done against former heavyweight champions. His replies are mighty interesting. Here they are:

AGAINST JOHN L. SULLIVAN—"I never saw John L., but I understand he was a stand-still fighter who relied on one punch to win. I am sure that Joe's speed and punching power would have been too much for him."

AGAINST JIM CORBETT—"Corbett was foxy and Louis would have to tag him. They fought 25-round battles in Corbett's day, and I think Joe would have finally connected in the later rounds. If it went the limit then Joe would have lost the decision."

AGAINST FITZSIMMONS—"Louis would be too strong for Fitz—just as Jeffries was—and strength would have decided this one. Fitz wasn't fast, but crafty, and Louis couldn't have eased up for a second. But he could stop an opponent cold with either hand."

AGAINST JEFFRIES—"Jeff was big but slow. He was a powerful puncher, but I punches just as fast, but crafty, and Louis couldn't have eased up for a second. But he could stop an opponent cold with either hand."

AGAINST TOMMY BURNS—"Burns was too small. He couldn't punch a lick. I think Louis could make the round in this fight."

AGAINST JOHNSON—"Jack was a great defensive boxer. I have boxed with both Johnson and Louis. Joe throws much more leather and has decided the one. Fitz wasn't fast, but crafty, and Louis couldn't have eased up for a second. But he could stop an opponent cold with either hand."

AGAINST WILLARD—"This would be just another Dempsey-Willard affair. Farring size, Louis has everything to make him the winner."

AGAINST TUNNEY—"This is would be a FIGHT. How I'd love to see this one. Two men evenly matched in strength, speed of hand, speed and punching ability. If Joe got the least bit careless it would be all over. And the same would go for Dempsey if he slipped up for a second. Either could win by a kayo. Purely a matter of who landed first. If it went the limit I think Louis would get the nod on points."

AGAINST SCHMELING—"Joe has no ability to offer for their fight. During his playing days he said his next bout give the answer."

AGAINST SHARKEY, CARNERA, BAIR AND BRADDOCK—"The records speak for themselves."

When Lefty Gomez steps out of the ring to go to the box he always puts one foot in the tray that holds the bats. Does it even if he has just punched a bat out of the way to make room for his dogs. Also it is his proud boast that he never has a starred fate as to step on the bat for a foul line.

Ty Cobb is just beginning to show interest in reading about baseball. During his playing days he said he was too busy. . . Myril Hong, Yankee outfielder, has the smallest feet in the major leagues. . . He wears a size four shoe on one and a four and a half on the other. . . The Detroit Tigers are the only team in the big leagues run entirely by catchers, Mickey Cochrane, Del Baker and Cy Perkins.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

FIVE battles and six colts have won the Hambletonian, the rich trotting stake decided by George N. Y., every year. Only one filly, Regret, has won the Kentucky Derby, the run to which the Hambletonian most closely compares in the matter of general interest. . . Tommy Bluman, catcher and captain of the 1937 Harvard baseball team, may sign a Red Sox contract any day now. . . The St. Louis Cardinals have signed M. S. Surber, a 35-year-old Fawcett, R. L., pitcher. The grade snatcher will send him to Rochester. . . For some reason or other the St. Nicholas Palace, probably the best known of smaller light arenas, has changed its name to the Royal Windsor.

Mike Jacobs, the man who drove Madison Square Garden's 600 millionaires out of the boxing business, is president of the fast-insurance companies rate him as a half-million-dollar risk. . . It continues to offer the average citizen to understand the brainwork of racing officials.

It pays to referee prize fights. Chicagoans report that the cocktail bar of Tommy Thomas, the former featherweight, has improved 50 per cent since he handled the fight between Braddock and Dempsey. . . Jack Dempsey is predicting that the son of the late Billy Miller may some day disprove that myth which says some never follow in the footsteps of first-class fighting fathers.

Terry Denies Rumors He'll Head Farm System

Bill Terry still denies those rumors that he is to become general manager of the Giants' farm system next year. When pressed he ends the conversation by remarking that his contract as manager runs through 1938.

These rumors that Pie Traynor is through at Pittsburgh are becoming stronger. . . Glenn Wright still is hitting home runs with the bases full while managing the Wenatchee club in the Western International league. Also does some relief pitching when regular players faller. . . In spite of frantic hot weather pleas of the players nearly all American league managers ban swimming in the pool in that exorbitant Washington hotel at which they stay. The theory, also held by various foreign clubs, is that swimming tires and softens athletes engaged in other sports.

Gabby Hartnett's most valuable souvenir is the catcher's mitt he used in his first major league game. . . Napoleon Lajoie, one of the greatest of all-time batters and second basemen, took such good care of his eyes that when he rode on trains he refused to look out of the window. Said the telegraph poles flashing past the window were bad for his vision.

New York Racing commissioners get sore when dog track operators charge they are being discriminated against. The officials say dog tracks can operate with as much freedom as the race courses if they employ the same bookmaking system of betting. The trouble is that it does not work out very well at the dog track which need the certificate or part-mutual form of wagering to rake in heavy dough from small customers. . . The Lantz has added a new tag at his fancy Ayrshire Inn by refusing to have menus printed.

Casual question from a gentleman who long has noted how well that nation builds and operates other ships. . . "Do the British really want to win those international yacht races or do they think the favorable and sympathetic advertising in which goes to the great national losers helps with the national propaganda?"

Hal Schurmer considers it unlucky to sit on the left side of the bench. . . Johnny Evers, the famous Cubs' infielder, always wore his stockings inside out when luck was needed to settle a tough series. A heavy woolen sweater, worn in all kinds of weather, seemed to satisfy Hans Wagner that he was winning fortune properly. For years Walter Johnson used to stand on the same spot each day when he warmed up in the home park.

Elephants with trunks turned up are the good luck charms of auto races and a trust always were one of them suspended from his neck by a chain.

One day at Uniontown he was standing beside the track listening to friends congratulating him on winning a race where he had driven superbly and escaped death by inches at least a dozen times. "Funny part about it," laughed Hughes, turning his back to the track for a moment. "I guess I've been overplaying this luck thing all along. Fact is, I forgot my elephant this morning and haven't had it on all day."

A car with a driver anxious to finish with some portion of the prize money, came speeding down the track. It hit Hughes and tossed him a hundred feet through the air before he landed—dead.

Sunday School Lesson

GOD REQUIRES SOCIAL JUSTICE
International Sunday School Lesson for September 5, 1937

Golden Text: "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."
—Luke 6:31.

The first few verses of the 19th chapter of Leviticus are concerned chiefly with man's relationship to God and is a repetition, by way of emphasis, of certain laws which had been given before. God commands that his people be holy, that they love and respect their parents that they keep the Sabbath, refrain from worshipping idols and observe certain rules concerning the making of peace offerings.

Beginning with the 9th verse of the same chapter, the printed passage for today, God outlines more emphatically a code for the relationship of man to man. It should be recalled that no book in all the world so tenderly and justly and mercifully considers the condition of the poor as does the Bible and gives such a detailed plan for the accomplishment of social justice in the world.

Theoretically, at least, most of us will agree that we are not in sympathy with an economic system which permits widespread poverty in the midst of plenty and in which the great majority of the people just barely exist, if not forced to live in abject poverty. We all believe something should be done to correct such a situation but we try to pass the buck and lay the responsibility on the shoulders of someone else.

The requirements in this regard which God made for the Israelites are equally applicable to us in this day. We have the personal responsibility of making a practical application of social justice. If we do not know just how to go about it, reference to the command of God as laid down in Leviticus will help greatly.

The essence of this passage seems to be this: While you are laying up plenty of the material things of life for yourself, do not forget those who are less fortunate than you are but be willing to share your plenty with those who have not and with the stranger in your community. Do not steal do not rob, do not defraud. Be careful not to place stumbling blocks in the way of the unfortunate. Always render justice, regardless of the person; and not show partiality between the rich and the poor. Cleanse your heart of all hatred and the spirit of revenge, or, in other words, Love your neighbor as yourself. If you carry out these injunctions, you will see to it that every man gets just what weights and measures and, if the spirit of the law, as well as the letter is carried out, you will get the reward promised—fellowship with God himself.

Just what is social justice? A definition and practical application of it is summed up in the statement: Love your neighbor as yourself. The word "neighbor" does not have the narrow, restricted meaning attached to it in the Old Testament times, when only a kinsman or fellow-countryman was considered a neighbor. By an undue emphasis on "neighbor" instead of on "love," the Scribes had in fact, the command to love one's neighbor carried to such an extreme that it was considered a sin to love a neighbor, however, in his statement, recorded in Matthew 5:43-47, when he commanded his disciples not only to love one's neighbor, but also to love his neighbor who does them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you."

Just what does it mean to love one's neighbor? Is it making contributions to the Red Cross, or to the poor fund of one's church? Yes, this is one way, but not the only way. Love expressed itself in sympathy, kindness and in giving charity. As E. Stanley Jones expressed it, "Love to man was not in the teachings of Jesus to be a sentimentalist, but it was to work out in fundamental justice in human relationships. But the Christian world has found it easier to be charitable than to be just. Justice would give labor a just share in the proceeds of industry; now we give wages and charity."

How will social justice come to the world? Well, first of all it must come into our individual lives. We who profess to be Christians must rid ourselves of hatred, prejudice, or unchristian attitudes and motives. To all with whom we come in contact—be it the servants in our homes, the clerks in the stores, the men and women who rub elbows with us in the crowded thoroughfares of life—we must show forth the spirit of Christ. Beginning with individuals, it must extend into the homes, the community, the state, the nation and to the uttermost parts of the world. This will be possible if all men who follow Christ will remember and put into practice the admonition:

"Whatever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye also unto them likewise."

Negro Spirituals Born in Earliest Slave Era

The slave or negro spirituals are the outpourings of a suppressed people who were the victims of the brutal slave system. The Gulf States of the South were the worst offenders, and the songs reflect the condition of the poor people who lived there. Running through the whole series of spirituals, unending songs, observed a writer in the Montreal Herald, one is struck by the deep expectation of a life to come, and by the sense of a personal communion with the Deity. There is no doubt of the future life. The Eighteenth century negro was positive when he sang, "I know de Lord laid His hands on me," but his grandson was less certain and sang, "Lord, I want to be a Christian. The best of these spirituals were born in the earliest slave era, when previous meetings were forbidden, and the slaves stole away to meetings that were full of danger. Their religious and ethical sentiment, but an emotional affair, that burst out in spontaneous song, born these child-like faith in the personal Father, with whom they could have direct communication. Like all traditional airs, they varied to some extent each time they were sung, though the penitonic mode of musical form was adhered to. At a later period (1830), there appeared a band of "Jubilee Singers," who attempted to "improve" these old songs. They harmonized them and brought them "up-to-date," which robbed them of that personal character and charm which distinguished the spiritual.

Eating Gives You Away

Character is Revealed
If you are going to size up a man's character, watch him at work with his knife and fork, says a writer in London Answers Magazine. The person who removes the food gingerly from the fork with his lips is particular over trifles and has a somewhat nervous, but large-hearted and generous. He who mixes everything together on his plate is apt to make a hash of it and is not particular in anything particularly bad can be said of him, nothing has ever done or will do to him. Others eat feverishly, preparing the next mouthful, seasoning it, patting it into shape with sharp, jerky movements, and putting it off at a tangent and eating something different. These people are murderers and thieves in their hearts. They seldom finish one thing properly before starting the next, eat always in a hurry, but never in an orderly and methodical manner.

The quick eater is generally a quick witted, lively, energetic and ambitious. At times he may be rather unreliable and apt to rush at things without proper reflection, but he possesses a nice mixture of humor and sentiment. The slow eater is generally a plodder and is usually happy to remain in the same groove, unambitious, steady, and contented, with no particular attributes beyond living and letting live.

The Bastille a Royal Palace
The Bastille was a royal palace in France, built by Charles V in 1389. It was subsequently used as a state prison, in which political prisoners of the higher ranks were confined. The Bastille was destroyed by a mob of six men without trial, and on the mere caprice of the king, and were frequently kept confined there for years. Rhododendron
The rhododendron is the state flower of Washington, also of West Virginia. The plant is grown over a wide range, on the Pacific Coast and along the Atlantic seaboard, as well as in gardens in the central states. It occurs naturally in the South Central states, east of the Mississippi river. The real home of the rhododendron, however, is in the Orient, the greatest number of species and forms being found in China. Wild rhododendrons are a most colorful display of white, pink or rose-purple blossoms, but could be brought to a larger stage and a better perfection with cultivation. Some varieties which have been hybridized are much more elegant than those growing in the wild state.

Grasse Perfume Center
The industry for extraction of odoriferous constituents of flowers is centered in Grasse, a town in the Alps Maritime, overlooking Cannes. The flower fields stretch almost to the shores of the blue Mediterranean. Here the peasants work amid the fragrance, collecting an average of 2,000 tons of orange blossoms, more than 1,300 tons of jasmine, and more than 400 tons of violets annually. The yield of roses is enormous, for 2,000,000 pounds of the highly perfumed flowers are collected each season.

Safety Foundation Announces Awards for Saving of Lives

LIFE-SAVING awards to be made by the Light for Life Foundation, new national safety organization, will go exclusively to persons who perform heroic acts outside the line of duty and without compensation. It has been announced by Capt. Charles B. Scully, Executive Secretary of the Foundation and Director of Life Saving of the American Red Cross, New York. The Awards Committee of the Foundation decided that awards will be made after full consideration of the nominees' claims, "in cases where an individual personally used emergency lighting either in an attempt to prevent loss of life or to effect a rescue of people in danger of losing their lives." Emergency lighting was defined as any light that is portable, such as lamps, flares, flashlights, lanterns, etc. Any person eligible for consideration for an award was invited to submit his case. Foundation officials expect the awards to become an important factor in increasing the safety consciousness of the American people.

CAPT. CHARLES B. SCULLY

In any one year and may, at their discretion, make as many money grants; certificates of merit may be awarded in cases which the Foundation considers meritorious, but not exceptional; all applications for awards must be filed within one year of the act. Applications and nominations should be submitted to the Light for Life Foundation, Inc., 122 East 42nd Street, New York, N. Y. Dr. Frank S. American Boy Introduces A New Football Game

In the early fall issues of THE AMERICAN BOY there will be presented the story of a new game—six man football—fast as professional football, wide open as basketball; thrilling as hockey! The game came to life through the need of small schools for some substitute for 11 man football. It was developed by Stephen Epler, a Nebraska graduate student in athletics, developed the game of six man football to meet this need. In six man football anybody can score the possibility of injury from mass play is minimized, and the game is open enough for spectators to follow every exciting development. The new game is a hit. New schools are taking it up every day. In coming issues THE AMERICAN BOY tells the story of this practical new game. In addition, it presents The American Boy Official Handbook, which can be obtained from the magazine at 20 cents a copy or 15 cents when bought in bulk.

BRAINARD

Charley Hackworth reports that the condition of his father, 'Uncle Anthony' Hackworth, of Ivyton, is slightly improved, but that he is still gravely ill.

Mrs. Elisha Sparks was shot in the leg near her home last week and was taken to the Stumbo Memorial hospital at Lackey, where she is still a patient. Her condition is not regarded as very favorable. It was learned that the gun was in the hands of her son, Woodrow Sparks, and that the shot was accidental.

Estlin Grace, of Ivyton, was a visitor at the home of Malcolm Adams Sunday.

Levi Prater who has been at Springport, Mich., for some time, has returned home.

A picnic was held under the large sycamore near the home of Norman Holbrook Sunday. Among those in the party were Misses Juanita and Imogene Howard and Venus Dotson of Ivyton, and Messrs. Charley Fletcher and Thomas Patrick, of Ivyton, and Miss Josephine and Mr. Clarence Holbrook, of West Prestonsburg.

INCREASE IN COAL BUSINESS IS SEEN FOR NEXT MONTH

Coal Operators Expect Lake Orders to Increase Output of Mines

Although coal operations in Eastern Kentucky are now running on a curtailed basis and will do so for the next few weeks an improvement in production will be shown during the first part of October and will doubtless continue for several months. It was stated this week by coal operators in the Big Sandy valley.

Lake Trade Off

In making this announcement operators stated that the slack run now is directly attributable to the fact that lake orders, commonly numerous at this time, are now practically nil. The absence of lake orders is due to the fact that the lake regions enjoyed a mild winter last year and a considerable quantity of coal was held over in storage from last winter. Most of the mines which supply coal to the north take care of these northern orders between May 15 and October 15, which is commonly referred to as the 'Lake Season.' Many of the mines in this region which depend upon lake trade at this time of the year for part of their output are now working only one to three days a week, operators say.

Supporting their opinion for an improvement in the industry during the next few weeks operators point out that the federal Bituminous Coal Commission has just given the public and operators some idea as to what the price control act and from all indications progress is rapidly being made to place controlled prices in effect some time in October.

See $2.22 Per Ton

The price mentioned by the commission is $2.22 per net ton for run of mine coal for price area No. 1 which includes Eastern Kentucky, all of West Virginia, Pennsylvania and parts of Tennessee. A series of meetings have been called by the commission during the next few weeks. The most important and probably the final meeting has been called for September 27 in the hearing room of the commission at the Carlton Hotel, Washington, for the purpose of receiving evidence to enable the commission to establish and make effective final minimum prices.

The local operators are of the opinion that there will be considerable buying on the part of the coal buyers in advance of the new prices, which prices will probably become effective by October 1 and not later than Oct. 15.

Benefits All While this basic price will benefit all operators in this district it is expected to prove especially beneficial to the small operations where but $1.70 to $1.75 is now being received for the same coal.

The upturn in price will also prove beneficial to operators and miners alike, coal men point out. Some of the large operations have been kept open at a loss for several months, they say, while many of the smaller operations have been forced by competition to close their workings. Many of these small mines which have closed will be reopened under the new price scale and more men will be put to work, it is believed. —Pike County News.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN CLINIC IS SCHEDULED

Crippled Children From Four Counties Urged to Attend Clinic Here

The Crippled Children clinic to be held in Prestonsburg on Thursday, Sept. 9, by the county crippled children Commission has become an annual event which brings the hope of restoration of health and happiness to hundreds of physically handicapped boys and girls in this section. The clinic held by the Commission has become an annual event which brings the hope of restoration of health and happiness to hundreds of physically handicapped boys and girls in this section. The clinic held by the Commission has become an annual event which brings the hope of restoration of health and happiness to hundreds of physically handicapped boys and girls in this section.

This will be the seventeenth such diagnostic clinic held by the clinic this summer. More than 1,500 crippled children have been examined and as rapidly as possible cases in need of treatment are being admitted to hospitals in Ash Grove, Louisville and Lexington under the supervision of the Commission's doctors and nurses.

A number of children in this district have already received hospital care and are urged to attend the clinic in Prestonsburg at September 9 for a check-up on their present physical condition. Examinations and diagnosis will be made by Dr. M. L. Garred, Ashland, assisted by nurses on the Commission's staff. Cases in need of treatment may be sent to the King's Daughters hospital, Ashland, where the Commission maintains a special ward for its cases.

Health department and civic clubs in each of the four counties are promoting the clinic and assisting Miss Vera P. Pool, the Commission's field nurse, in locating new cases and arranging for their transportation to the clinic.

The clinic on Sept. 9 is free and all crippled boys and girls under the age of 18 years are eligible for examination.
