Divorce In The United States On A Rampage

(By W. M. LKINS)

Protestant Churches Must Take a Definite Stand

Nowhere in the world does the Roman Catholic church recognize divorce and it is very rare a member of the church obtains a divorce, even in America.

If the Protestant churches would take the same stand on divorce, question that is taken by the Roman Catholic church, barring all those who obtain a divorce from further membership in their churches...

It must be remembered that as the years go upward in married life there are less and less to choose from...

Drunkenness is Only Minor Cause. Drunkenness, contrary to general opinion, is not a prolific cause for divorce...

In 1929 there were 201,468 divorces granted, but the first two years of the depression reduced that number to 183,564 to 1931. Every depression in this country has ever experienced has decreased the number of divorces obtained...

There is one, and only one, dominating cause for divorce, though there are many contributing causes. It is the wife or husband or both, get tired of each other and want to be free to exercise their sexual desires.

Today's Mansion

(By FLOYD WARRIX)

Our fathers though the years that's faded Built the mansion of today; Laid each brick with accurate fingers In its place so it would stay.

Though pain and strife and drastic sorrow Lived in hatred o'er the land, They fought and strove to build tomorrow With solid stone so it would stand.

Did works of others still their hearts? No! They cast them all away; They built the structure of our nation From death's cold stone and scarlet clay.

So let us keep in peace, O Maker! For most our prayer be made in vain? O, war!—the demon of disaster Must drain our life-blood once again.

MY OLD KENTUCKY HILLS

In the golden glow of autumn, Nature's beauties are unfurled; And are shown in magic splendor To the gaze of all the world. But to me the sight most glorious— One that fills my heart with thrills, Is the beauty and the grandeur Of my old Kentucky hills.

How the sunshine loves to linger In these hills so grand and great, Lighting up with golden splendor, While its beauty we partake. Some may rave of rolling valleys, Rivers wide and tiny rills, But to me there is no beauty "Like my old Kentucky hills."

O! I gaze enthralled with rapture At the blending and the hue, That no artist's hand has painted, But, my master's work I view. I am filled with adoration, And my soul with music thrills, Praise to "The Great Creator" For my old Kentucky hills.

CANDLE FLAME

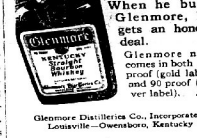

Time and custom alter, Thy years strange, With new manners, new ways, And many a change. But I recall that here and there Were candles in every room, Made one think of golden flowers Coming back to bloom.

Here and there a candle, On a winnow sill, Standing like a beacon Shining pure and still. No lights so clear and steadfast No flame so pure and fair, A candle in "An old house" Is like an angel there.

Candle light for corners, Candle light for nooks, May there be a candle burning When the last star falls. —LULA D. TRAUTMAN.

"If you really feel I'm all right, I'll go back, of course." She was glad of the interruption, the telephone bell. Mr. Terriss grabbed his hat. "I'm going along," he said. "You keep right on doing like you've been doing and you'll give us the right gear. I'm certain of it. Let me hear from you as often as you can."

Curt had a suggestion. "We'll go see a news reel and then stop in at a nice little club I know about and have a sandwich and listen to the music, there's a wench here who sings 'Stormy Weather' like nobody's business. I'll be down for you presently."

CHAPTER X

"But I tell you, Elinor, that if he doesn't enter in February he'll have to wait over until next fall," Mr. Cayne had invaded his wife's room and stood, the picture of exasperated powerlessness, reflected by her mirrors in every direction. She was there, too, the indomitable piece of fluff, which does not combat but slips away untroubled by strength and force, her peach velvet negligee lay around her shoulders carelessly and she adjusted it into a more becoming line. Rachel, every curl banished, neat as a nun in her gray afternoon tulle, concentrated on the tiny darn she was placing over a cigarette burn in one of Mrs. Cayne's lace slips, tried to look as blank as Mr. Terriss and not miss a syllable.

"Do you like this color on me, Peter?" Elinor Cayne looked at last. "We weren't talking about that. Listen, I want Holbrook to enroll in the spring term of the university."

"But I thought this year's classes were all arranged, or enrolled, or whatever they do."

"The girls take special work. Better for him than loafing and running around to parties with all these crazy kids."

Rachel wondered if Elinor's indifference could be an complete as it seemed. She stretched more slowly, she must know what Mr. Cayne and his wife had to say about Holbrook's trunks. So far she had been able to discover nothing significant about them.

"They're really very sweet, Peter. Of course they're young and thoughtless." Her tone implied: "And you're old and set."

Mr. Cayne caught the implication fully. "Oh, I know you think I'm in my dotage, but that's beside the point. Holbrook must have an education, this is the time of his life when he ought to be studying hard."

"Holbrook would study hard if you'd let him go to art school."

"Now, Elinor, look here. I've gone into this art racket thoroughly. What'll it get the boy? He can be an illustrator of stories for magazines, or he can draw pictures to go with advertisements or into catalogues, and unless he's a topnotcher neither one will give him anything but a poor living. If he paints portraits and landscapes and murals—well, my God, think of the square miles of canvases that are covered every year and what per cent of 'em sells? Be practical, Elinor. An artist has got to be mighty good, in the first rank, and then he's got a long hard struggle and mayn't land anywhere."

Elinor's face twisted in rage, her voice shrilled. "You never cared anything about Holbrook, ever since he was born you've wanted to make him into a hard miserly money-grubber like you give yourself. You think that's all there is in life—There's everything you don't see—beauty—and pleasure—"

"O Lord, hysterics again! If you'd just talk things over reasonably,"

"You don't want reason—you only want your own stupid way. But I'll fight for my child—he's not going to be ruined by your loathsome materialism."

Mr. Cayne went out of the room, banging the door; his wife burst into tears of temper.

"I'm the most miserable woman in the world," she sobbed, "I don't know why I ever married him, I wish I was a child, I wish I was young—and so ignorant—oh—and now I'll have to do my face all over again! It's mortifying to cry."

She turned sharply to Rachel, who was still working over her long-finished darn. "Don't sit there like a dummy. Bring me my special cream out of the bathroom—no, bring me a towel wrung out of hot water—and get some lot from Lena—hurry, hurry, I'll be as red as a lobster, and puffy—I could kill Peter if he were here!"

Rachel, soon standing ready with soap of ice wrapped in gauze, trying to look impersonal and yet concerned, was thinking in an odd way. Mr. Holbrook just asked her to lend him my wages till he gets his allowance first of the month. If you think I ought to do it—my wages wouldn't Mr. and Mrs. Cayne be sore if they found it out?

Lena's hand clapped above her forehead. "Oh, he's begun on you, has he, the little devil? Well, I don't know what this would be coming to, but don't you let him have a nickel. You'll never get it back if you do. He's had—let's see—the past year or so he's had over a hundred from me and half as much again from Bert, and he's never paid back a penny."

"But doesn't he get an allowance?"

"He gets a bigger allowance than your wages or mine neither. He gets plenty! No fear of that."

"The Lord only know, helling around playing the Crown Prince, I guess—I told him this summer when he was in the navy that I'd not let him have another cent, and Bert did the same, and he cried then, but Yateh—"

"What a time he had! He was smart, told him he was all tied up in a mortgage and said to Bert that he was to lose his job before he'd let that young monster get it over on him. Don't you begin for me, the past year it'll be the gift and not a loan."

"Why don't you or Mr. Towers speak to Mr. Cayne?"

"How can we, and him so good and kind and trying to do his best for the boy and her all the time hampering him and cutting across his intentions! He's got so much trouble with them both—Bert did threaten to tell on him, but we can't do it, we think maybe he'll grow out of it. Lotta kids get a wild idea about a time when their bodies' grown and their wits are still children. See what I mean? I'd cut my hand off for Mr. Cayne, let alone bearing the loss of a hundred dollars. But you stay out of it. Let him make wheedle the cash for him, she's done that and she'll do it again."

Rachel dropped the clean wet romaine into the wash-bag, and whirled it blithely around. "Then I'm going to save my eight dollars, she said, 'thank you for telling me, I'll never mention it.'" "I know you're not the kind to blab," allowed Lena, handsomely.

"I knew that from the first."

It was two days later, in the afternoon, when Lena called Rachel from the laundry and asked her to do some of the endless pressing required by Mrs. Cayne. "Look at here," she said, "here's the mason's special curry ordered for tonight and best if I'm not out of curry powder. Skip out and get it for me, will you, that's a good girl. There's just the one shop that carries the kind I use and they'll never set it here if I phone and Bert's not"

"Fifteen dollars," lied Rachel, your father, Mr. Holbrook, he's nice and kind, he'll let you have it. Or your mother would."

"Nice and kind like a steel trap when it comes to money! And mother's as hard up as I am. Look here, you put the eight dollars under my pillow when you fix my bed tonight, will you?"

"What d'you need it so bad for?" asked Rachel. "My gracious, you're rich people, I shouldn't think you'd need the eight dollars under your pillow when you fix my bed tonight, will you?"

chel over her shoulder. "Anyway I'm glad you came—what did father say about the school?"

"That's what I wanted to talk to you about—go ahead, Rachel, attend to your work."

Rachel went out, very straight and tall and angry. Her feelings against these two had darkened and increased. "I don't like them!" she thought with all the ruthlessness of youth. "Yes!"

She went back to the kitchen where Lena was preparing dinner. "Can I wash that salad for you?" she asked mechanically.

"I wish you would, I can't see when the stuff's clean any more. My glasses oughta be changed, but I can't seem to get round to it."

Rachel took the salad to the sink, filled a pan with water, and turned on the light just above it. "Lena," she said, "I'm going to tell you something because I'd like your advice. Mr. Holbrook just asked me to lend him my wages till he gets his allowance first of the month. If you think I ought to do it—my wages wouldn't Mr. and Mrs. Cayne be sore if they found it out?"

Lena's hand clapped above her forehead. "Oh, he's begun on you, has he, the little devil? Well, I don't know what this would be coming to, but don't you let him have a nickel. British Masked Men Operate in Secret and Specialize in Saving Scenic Cliffs

Although masked and working in secret like the Italian "Misericordia," the "Ferguson" Gang of London, unlike the Florentine society, does not wait until death calls into action their ministrations—the Ferguson help the living. After one of their periodical eclipses, they were recently discovered, by the London and End representatives of the Times of London, operating in Cornwall.

At intervals in the last few years masked men and women, emissaries of the "gang," have visited the promiscuous offices of the National Trust at Buckingham Palace Gardens to hand over bags or wads of currency, acquired no one outside the gang knows how or where. A recent gift was the second and final installment of the purchase price of 15% acre of cliff land, in order to keep it safe for the nation for all time.

feeling so well today. If the madame gets in before you get back I'll explain why you're out."

"I'd love to go," said Rachel. "I need some fresh air."

The man on the servants' elevator told her her cheeks were like the pink roses of Killarney as she came in a commotion which Rachel received with pleasure. He was a jolly soul and Rachel liked him. She unlocked the door of the apartment gaily and found Towers and Lena waiting for her, their faces drawn aghast. "The master wants to see you in the library," said Towers. "Right off. Don't take off your things."

Sit clutching the curry powder, Rachel hurried in to Mr. Cayne. He was pacing the floor. "Well, Miss Vincent," he began, "the thing has been at again. It's a sapphire bracelet this time."

Rachel's lips parted in amazement. "Are you sure? When did you miss it?"

"Right this minute, I came home early because I knew Mrs. Cayne would be out and I wanted to check

ONE, two, three smart frocks on his list ready to go—shopping, kitchenwards, to the office downtown. And as every woman knows, a well stocked wardrobe needs all three.

From Now On.

Says the jaunty model to the left, "I can tell I'm gonna feel well dressed in this little poplin frock; ready for sports, a matinee or dinner in town, and the confident high spirits my new lines give make me sure that I will be wanted at all three."

One Who Knows.

Miss Keep-the-Home-Beautiful, in the center, expresses herself: "Even when I do housework I like to look and feel fit."

When I dash out to the store or go across lots to the neighbor's to borrow an egg, I don't bother to change my dress because I have the feeling I'm doing all right as I am. I wouldn't think of a new season coming on without running up a generous supply of crisp, fresh dresses for myself. They seem to set one right, you know.

Egg as Cleanser.—The yolk of egg may be used for removing mud, chocolate or coffee stains from any kind of material except velvet. Rub into the stain, wash off with warm soapy water, and rinse thoroughly.

Cleaning Brass.—Never use vinegar to clean brass. Though it cleans at first, it soon causes tarnish. The proper materials for cleaning brass are oil and rottenstone.

Removing Tobacco Stains.—Tobacco stains may be removed from washable materials by moistening with lemon juice and bleaching in the sun.

Preparing Parsley.—Parsley washed with hot water, keeps its flavor better and is easier to chop.

up on her jewelry. I do that every few days now. And the bracelet's gone."

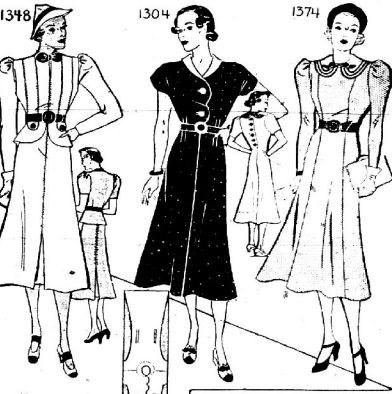

Rachel followed him into Mrs. Cayne's room, watched while he unlocked the safe and took out a worn blue leather bag. "There—period brooch, pink pearl pendant, topaz and enamel chain, moonstone cameo brooch, carved silver bracelet and those three rings. The sapphire bracelet was here last Saturday, and haven't looked them over since. He put the colorful trinkets back in the box and closed the safe. "But he had never felt less like a detective, but she followed her instructions. "I'll find out who's been in the house since Saturday and will you notify Terriss, or shall I?" As she said this she recalled Holbrook's name here last Saturday, and the fact that she hadn't put the eight dollars under his pillow as he had asked her to do. Her new gift, she supposed that he had got the money from his mother. Lena had said she would. But now—her suspicion came alive.

Mr. Cayne divined her double thought. "What is it, who've you got in mind?" he demanded. "Was anyone here while I was out—any of Mrs. Cayne's friends, or Holbrook's? Quick, think!"

Rachel simulated intense thought. "No, no one came in for bride, and Holbrook's had no friends except a couple of boys on Monday."

HOW OFTEN CAN YOU KISS AND MAKE UP?

NEW husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shrew for one whole week in every month. You can say "I'm sorry" and kiss and make up easier before making up than you can say "I'm sorry" and if you want to hold your husband, you'd better be a three-phase wife.

For three generations a woman has told another how to go "making up" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature to get on the system, thus insuring the disappearance of the functional disorders which women must endure in the three details of life: 1. Purging from the bowels. 2. Restoring the appetite for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age" with a clear conscience.

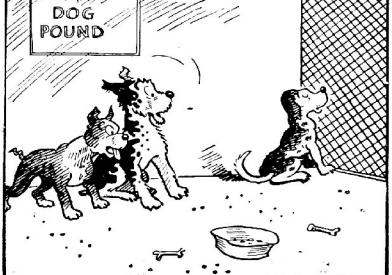

Mr. Cayne divined her double thought. "What is it, who've you got in mind?" he demanded. "Was anyone here while I was out—any of Mrs. Cayne's friends, or Holbrook's? Quick, think!"

Rachel simulated intense thought. "No, no one came in for bride, and Holbrook's had no friends except a couple of boys on Monday."

Gunfire Kills Two

After an investigation by Sheriff M. T. Stumbo, Commonwealth's Attorney O. C. Hall, and County Attorney Forrest D. Short, Mr. and Mrs. Pharis Porter and their 18-year-old son, Mims, who claimed he was in a Martin forest at the time of the shooting, were arrested and brought to jail here in connection with the shooting. Also brought to jail was Mrs. Porter's 11-year-old daughter, who refused to be separated from her mother.

When questioned in jail here all of the Porter family denied that they knew who did it. The death-gun has not yet been found.

At the grand jury's investigation here Monday, indictments were returned against Mr. and Mrs. Porter and son, Mims, all charging willful murder.

Prior to the investigation Marshal Lafayette revealed the scene of the shot which killed Warrick, saying that the shot came from the porch of the Porter home.

In the shooting at Ligon, following the death of Warrick, Bill Jones, Payne-baker mine foreman, was shot six times with a pistol, for Floyd county's fifth murder within five weeks. The slayer is unknown.

Jones' body, riddled with bullets, was found near the bath-house in front of Mr. Johnson's home. Six wounds from the .38-calibre gun were found in the body, one in the heart.

Jones, a former deputy sheriff, is survived by a daughter and a wife, who said that her husband had no one known enemy. She refused to name the enemy, however.

After the inquest, Coroner Norris stated that she "couldn't reveal the names of suspects at present." She added that there were several witnesses, "afraid to talk," who would be summoned before the grand jury.

When brought before the grand jury here Monday, witnesses told County Attorney Forrest D. Short that they were afraid to talk, adding, "if you knew the truth, you wouldn't tell either."

But it was not until after repeated questions and warnings from Circuit Judge Cantill, that sufficient evidence was supplied for the grand jury to indict Bee Reynolds, Will Reynolds and Ed Clay, all of Ligon, for willful murder, in an indictment that also charged conspiracy, murder and forcible entry. It was revealed that there had been previous trouble between Bee Reynolds and the slain man.

After going on and obtaining the gas, Conn and Stratton returned and were ambushed along the way. According to the report given here, the drivers of the wagon are suspected. When taken to the Beaver Valley hospital to have their wounds dressed, doctors found 11 shotgun wounds about the face of Conn.

UTILITIES STIFFEN RATE CUT BATTLE

Power Company in This Section Reported Threatening Court Battle

(By J. Howard Henderson)
(The Courier-Journal)
Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 18.—Utility companies are stiffening their fight against rate regulation by the Public Service Commission, and some, even, are beginning to deny the state has any right to fix rates that can be changed consumers.

This is in strange contrast with the eagerness of the utilities four years ago to create a state regulatory commission. Then the companies sought to strangle any tie-up of Kentucky communities with T. V. A. and likewise to prevent any rate reduction by cities and towns of the state.

To that end, the utilities joined to resist, almost without exception, to promote state regulation legislation. With a state law that they had a big hand in writing, and a commission satisfactory to them, the utilities were in a fair way of preventing reduction of rates through all of Kentucky.

The Chandler-Rhea fight for the Democratic nomination upset the plans, Rhea, scheduled to win, was defeated and in 1935 the Chandler committee set about extensive rate investigations. Through all of last year and half of this, the commission was able to effect rate reductions without litigation.

But recently the Kentucky Natural Gas Company, which sells wholesale to the Owensboro Gas Company, rushed to federal court to deny the jurisdiction of the state commission over its operations. And the Owensboro Gas Company was in Frankfort this week to resist an order of the commission for substantial reduction in consumer bills at Owensboro.

Meanwhile, the Kentucky-West Virginia Power Company this week resisted efforts of the commission to reduce rates in its territory throughout Northeastern Kentucky. Its insistence bore heavy indication that the company was ready to go to the courts to keep from lowering the rates, if that step became necessary.

Possibly this stiffening resistance of the company was back of the commission's decision this week to hurry to Knoxville for a conference with T. V. A. officials. Chairman J. C. McGregor and James W. Cammack, and J. A. Krug, chief of the technical staff, left Frankfort Thursday morning for Knoxville, where they were in conference with T. V. A. officials.

In the meantime, the commission has started proceedings to settle the root of one of the serious problems it faces. It will seek to require all utility companies in Kentucky to keep a perpetual inventory of all its properties.

The commission faces across a unique situation this week. The Kentucky-West Virginia Company is a subsidiary of the Appalachian Power Company. The commission had documentary evidence before it that the company had been sold to the parent company of the Appalachian and the Kentucky-West Virginia Company had testified that the stock had been watered. Federal authorities had uncovered a communication from the power company to the Kentucky State Tax Commission stating that although the book value of the Kentucky-West Virginia Company was about $12,000,000 its actual value was several millions less. This communication explained that there had been a write-up in the value of the stock.

This week N. M. Argabrite, vice-president of the Kentucky-West Virginia Power Company, testified before the Kentucky commission that the stock had not been watered and there had been no write-up in its value. He testified that the testimony of the president of the company given to federal authorities had been incorrect.

If the Kentucky-West Virginia Company succeeds in having its present contention put into the record upon which the Kentucky Commission will be forced to go through a long and tedious investigation before it can proceed for Eastern Kentucky consumers any reduction in their electric bills.

It would have been a relatively simple matter to establish whether the stock of the companies had been watered if the records and books of the companies were in existence, but Mr. Argabrite testified before the Kentucky Commission, as one of his superior officers had previously testified before a federal investigation, that the records and books of the various predecessor companies out of which the Kentucky-West Virginia and the Appalachian Company were formed, had been destroyed.

Mr. Argabrite's story as unfolded to the Kentucky Commission that the manager of the company discovered several years ago that the records stored in the vault of a building had been tampered with.

Mr. Argabrite testified that the records had been tampered with, but he could not say who had done it. He said he had been in the vault to put it on a new company vault in another vault in Charleston, W. Va. The books and records had been left in the vault—the second floor of the building.

The manager visited the building one day to show it to a prospective customer and discovered that the roof had sagged and, according to Mr. Argabrite, the books were on the second floor, were covered with "shot and manure."

These deposits had gotten onto the books and, combined with water, had rendered the books illegible, Mr. Argabrite said. Fearful that the weight of the books would cause the floor to cave in, as the roof had already done, the manager had all the records and books carted away and burned, Mr. Argabrite testified.

This closed the door to the inquiry into the amount of watered stock in the Kentucky-West Virginia Company. But the commission is still wondering how one element mentioned by Mr. Argabrite got on the records stored on the second floor of an occupied office building.

THE FARM AND HOME

(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)
A farm water system should have a capacity of 75 gallons per person, 15 gallons per pig, 15 gallons per cow, 2 gallons per hog, 2 gallons per sheep and 5 gallons per 100 chickens.

Sheep will eat about half an ounce of salt daily per head. Many good sheep raisers keep loose, barrel salt boxes, usually in a long box in a barn or shed, where it is protected from rain.

Two low convenient outlets, a mistake often made in wiring houses. Three or four base receptacles in every room are better. Plans should include sufficient outlets for lights and all types of appliances.

Dry mash suits for laying hens, recommended by the Kentucky College of Agriculture, shipped or mixed wheat feed, 300 pounds ground corn, 100 pounds; most sump or tankage, 100 pounds; salt, 5 pounds.

Rice cooked in milk, or in a mixture of half milk and half water, is "warm" vegetables. Vegetables tend to rot following sweating.

A pocket knife or pruning shears are used by most farmers to trim the feet of sheep. Feet should be trimmed by the farmer, not the veterinarian. Feet should be trimmed about once a year.

Next to fully hatched chicks, most of the accidents in brooder raising are caused by a mother hen sitting on a nest with her feet on the wire, or by a mother hen sitting on a nest with her feet on the wire, or by a mother hen sitting on a nest with her feet on the wire.

Storage plans for eggs that require ventilation. It is especially important for fresh eggs to be stored in a cool, dry place, with good ventilation. Open glass jars, with the lids on, are a good plan for storing eggs.

Ready-made grass for laying hens with some success in Utah and adjoining counties in Kentucky. The pasture and hay on the land. Kinds of grass to sow, grazing and management of bottom-land pastures must be varied to suit individual conditions.

Floyd Judging Team 6th Among 23 Teams At Kentucky's Fair

Competing with 23 teams, entered in the poultry judging contest for 4-H club teams at the State Fair in Louisville last week, the Floyd county team composed of Betsy Layne, youth Corrie Kidd, Carl Robinson and Joe Archer, placed sixth. In the individual competition among 69 boys in the judging event, Corrie Kidd placed twelfth.

The team was accompanied to the fair by County Agent S. L. Isbell, under whose tutelage Floyd county 4-H clubs within recent years have made exceptionally fine records at both state fairs and the annual 4-H club Junior Weeks in Lexington.

In addition to the team members above, Thomas Clarke May and Herman Osborne are alternates. The team roster also includes Vernon Clarke, who assisted Agent Isbell in training the lads for the stiff competition at the fair.

Among other Floyd countyans who attended the fair were Mrs. S. L. Isbell, Mrs. Mary Spears Hatcher, and Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Fitzpatrick.

Struck by a train as he lay on the railroad tracks near Clear Creek Junction Sunday morning, Andy Mitchell, 41, miner for the Payne-Baker Coal Company, suffered injuries that resulted in his death two days later at the Beaver Valley hospital in Martin.

The train, driven by engineer Ben Norris, was unable to stop, the engine traveling 10 car lengths past Mitchell's body. The tragedy occurred at the Clear Creek curve near the water tank.

Funeral services were held at Beaver Wednesday. The Arnold funeral home was in charge of the burial rites.

The only two surviving comrades of General Jack during the war between the states, Uncle Jeff Sizemore and John P. Meade, will attend this memorial service in honor of their deceased comrade.

VISITATION DAY TO BE OBSERVED HERE

Presbyterian Church Plans for Novel, Significant Program

Important days in the work of the local Presbyterian Church are being observed this Sunday, September 26, and the subsequent Sunday, October 3, in line with a nationwide program of the Presbyterian Church, United States of America. The coming Sunday is to be observed as Church Visitation Day, with teachers from the Sunday church school and others visiting in the homes of members of the church. A sermon appropriate to the visitations is to be preached at the morning worship hour by Robert A. Potter, minister. E. E. Clark is chairman of the visitation committee.

Two significant programs in the life of the Presbyterian church are to be observed October 3. At the Sunday School hour, 9:45 o'clock, Rally Day will be celebrated. An attendance goal of 125 was set by the Sunday school last Sunday in an effort to go beyond the modern record of 120.

A short program, "Marching Forward," under the direction of Mrs. Everett H. Sowards, superintendent, is to be given by Sunday School pupils.

At the morning church hour on the same day a world-wide communion service is to be held. Presbyterians observed the day last year. This year the world-wide sacrament is especially fitting for it is the hundredth anniversary of the foreign mission movement of the Presbyterian church U. S. A. Two million Presbyterians in America, and thousands of the church in mission lands are invited to these services being held on the day throughout the world.

Members of the church in Prestonsburg are urged to gather at the church on this occasion for communion with the living Christ and with one another.

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION OF LOCAL CITIZENS IS PLANNED FOR P'BURG

At a meeting of local citizens interested in Prestonsburg high school and the future of athletics in the school, plans were laid Tuesday evening for the organization of a permanent athletic association here.

The association is being formed in order to stimulate interest in athletics, to work for the progress of the school generally and to provide transportation for the athletes who live out of town and who cannot return home by school bus because of late practice periods. A membership drive will be started this week, it was announced, with a goal of 50 members before a permanent organization is effected. Approximately 20 persons attended Tuesday evening's meeting.

City of Prestonsburg Must Pay $18,000 To People's State Bank

A new writ was made in the long record of the City of Prestonsburg litigation with the People's State Bank of Frankfort, Saturday, when an order of the federal circuit court decreed that the bank recover from the city a total of $18,000 with interest on Prestonsburg bonds purchased by the banking institution. The court held that the bank has 36 $500 bonds on the town, dated August 1, 1921 and 8 bonds of the same denomination, dated Sept. 1, 1923, all of which are unpaid. The case remains on the docket for further adjudication on questions not decided in the opinion.

The suit has been in the courts for some time and was returned here for another hearing by the Court of Appeals.

SQUABBLES

For long years Floyd's citizenry have waged a fight for the completion of Left Beaver roads. It seems strange now that the highway department is ready to start work, that two or three Left Beaverites should seek court injunctions over petty details that will delay the greatest improvement ever attempted in this part of the county. Floyd countyans have fought shoulder to shoulder for a common purpose—let's continue to do so.

WHO CARES

The sun, our nearest star, is so far from the world that if the world's best driver in the world's best automobile, began driving at 60 miles an hour on a straight road to the sun, he would have to continue that speed day and night until about 1940—12 years hence—before reaching the sun.

WOE, WOE, WHO!

The following, which is taken from a weekly newspaper issued in Florida during the land boom, speaks for itself—perhaps too much. With the forgotten author's profuse apologies, the piece is entitled, "Woe Is Kentucky." Man born in the winds of Kentucky is of dead days and full of benzine. He fiddeth, fisheth, fuseth, and fighteth all the days of his life. He riseth up from the cradle to seek the scalp of his grandpa's enemy and taketh home in his carcass the ammunition of his wife's uncle's brother's cousin's father-in-law, who avengeth the dead.

When he desireth to raise hell, he planneth a neighbor, and lo, he reapeth fourfold. Yea, verily, his life is uncertain; and he knoweth not the hour he may be jerked hence. He goeth forth on a journey half-hot and cometh home on a shifter all-shod. He riseth in the night-time to let the cat out and it takes nine dozers three days to pick the buckshot from his person. He goeth forth in joy and gladness and cometh back in scraps and fragments.

He calleth his fellowman a liar and getteth himself filled with scrap iron even unto the fourth generation. A cyclone bloweth him into the house of his neighbor's wife and his neighbor's wife's husband bloweth him into the bosom of Abraham before he hath time to explain. He taketh a denizish into himself and a shotgun into his enemy, and his enemy's son Neth in wait on election day and lo, the coroner ploweth up a forty-acre field to find the remains of that man.

Woe, woe, is Kentucky! Selah, whoa, and so much for that!

BOB NEWSOME SLAIN AT VIRGIE SUNDAY; SHOTGUN IS WEAPON

Bob Newsome, 30, of Virgie, well-known in Floyd county, was shot in the head with a shotgun fired at close range Sunday, at Virgie. Coroner John W. Call, of Pikeville, said that officers were seeking John Wright, of near Virgie, in connection with the shooting. Officials said that Newsome had been acquitted of murder charges twice within the past five years, but did not reveal if they believed the slaying charges had anything to do with this killing.

He resigned an important position with the dental clinic of General Hospital, Louisville, in order to accept this appointment.

ALL-STATE

Regardless of how the local football heroes play in their Beltry opener here Saturday, we expect great things from husky all-conference Jim Dotson when the Blackcats journey to Louisville to tackle the mighty warriors of St. X. the following Saturday. Dotson gained honorable mention last year on several all-state selections, and by playing hang-up ball in the St. X. game, the publicity that will result from the Louisville newspapers will do much toward assuring him of an all-state berth this year.

HIGHWAYS

Sometimes, we wonder if highways in our part of the state should not only be divided by a white line down the center, but have a different colored line in the center of each driver's lane as well. It might psychologically persuade motorists to stay in their own driving lanes on curving hillside roads.

PHILOSOPHY

The shortest and most complete philosophy of life we ever read was Johnson's statement, "Big bugs have little bugs that bite 'em; and so on, ad infinitum." If readers pause to realize that much more than half the human race dies from the bite of little bugs (germs) on talking of the far-reaching meaning of Johnson's humorous words will be realized.
