A Better Prestonsburg

(By VIRGINIA MURRILL)

I went out for a walk the other day with the purpose of taking a survey of the town so that I could be more qualified to express an opinion on the subject "A Better Prestonsburg." I am naturally inclined toward optimism (I even think that the town is growing better) and so I tried to keep my mind that I would see the best side of town, very difficult, especially if I had any other suggestions for improvement. For this once I would be a cynic, I said, and try to close my eyes to the things I like about the town—I would become a cynic.

I started down the street looking in fence corners and vacant lots for stray rubbish. There was plenty of it. I made a special note of the dirt on the streets. I was getting along famously and then I made my mistake. It was a habit, I looked up at the hills and cynicism was lost. An impact of delightful surprise has never ceased to strike me every time I look up from Main street and see the hills towering over the town. It always gives me a feeling of wonder to see them, even when they are gray and drab, as though the hanging gardens of Babylon were put here for our special benefit without the expense or trouble of making them. I know that if I had started out for my survey in the fall when the hills are all flaming with color or in the spring when the wild flowers and blooming trees are plainly visible from the town, that I would not have a chance. How can I look at dirt on the streets and buildings that are perhaps in need of repair when every time I glance up I see a sight that makes me breathe more rapidly and makes my eyes glisten for the sheer beauty of it?

I turned around and decided that I would not be a sentimentalist. I was on a tour as a cynic. But trees were hanging over the streets and even in March they were budding. All over town I saw new streets, sidewalks being made or repaired, new buildings under construction, old buildings being re-modeled. Within the past three years I've been here there have been many improvements, a remodeled courthouse with a new addition, a new theatre which would be a credit to any town, a new bus station, several new business buildings, many new homes—the beginning of a neighborhood graded school building and started before that it was completed and now new bridges. I couldn't help but have a remembrance about the year I lived here when I was nine. There was a fire hole in front of the Methodist and which was never so dry but that it would fill little boats on it.

versal trait that people all want to be somewhere they are not. Therefore I propose for a better Prestonsburg that . . .

We begin to boost our town instead of finding fault with it. That we begin telling ourselves and all our acquaintances what a good town we have. That we take pride in the things we have in the town. We can rightfully take pride. I do not mean a blind loyalty which does not let us see the rubbish on the vacant lots and river banks, but one which makes us look at these things as they might be with flowers covering them. A loyalty which makes us look up at the hills and glory in them and makes us want to get rid of anything which mars the beauty our town is capable of having. It is hard, even for me with that incurable optimism of mine, really to enjoy the hills so much when a March wind comes sweeping down the street heralded by all the rubbish and dust which was once dust on the newly-paved streets.

PLIGHT OF MAN BEHIND SORRY MULE BRINGS RECITATION OF HIS WRONGS

(Chattanooga News)

A philosophical "conversation" between a farmer and his mule—a clipping mailed him from a friend in New Mexico, struck the fancy of John Lovell and the Hotel Patton manager was showing it about to friends here yesterday.

"Over the hill trailed a man behind a mule drawing a plow," the clipping read.

"Said the man to the mule: 'Jack and I am a mule, the son of a sack and I am a man made in the image of God. Yet here we work, hitched up together year in and year out. I often wonder if you work for me or if I work for you. Verily, I think it a partnership between a mule and a fool for surely I work as hard as you, if not harder. Plowing or cultivating, we cover the same distance, but you do it on four legs and I do it on two. I, therefore, do twice as much work per leg as you do.'"

"Soon we'll be preparing for a corn crop. When the crop is harvested I give one-third to the landlord for being so kind as to let me use this small speck of God's universe. One-third goes to you, and the balance is mine. You consume all your food with the exception of the cobs, while I divide mine among several children, six hens, two ducks and a banker. If we both need shoes, you get 'em, Bill, you are getting the best of me, and I ask you, is it fair for a mule, the son of a jack, to swallow a man—the lord of creation—out of his substance?"

"Why, you only help to plow and cultivate the ground, and I alone must cut, shock and husk the corn, while you look over the pasture fence and hew-haw at me."

"All fall and most of the winter the whole family from granny to the baby, picks cotton to help raise money to pay taxes and buy a new harness and pay the interest on the mortgage on your farm. And what do you care about that mortgage? Not a damn! You merely curs, I even have to do the worrying about the mortgage on your lousy, ungrateful hide."

"About the only time I am your better is on election day. For I can vote and you can't. And after election I realize I was fully as great a jackass as your papa. Verily, I am prone to wonder if politics were made for men or jackasses, or to make jackasses of men."

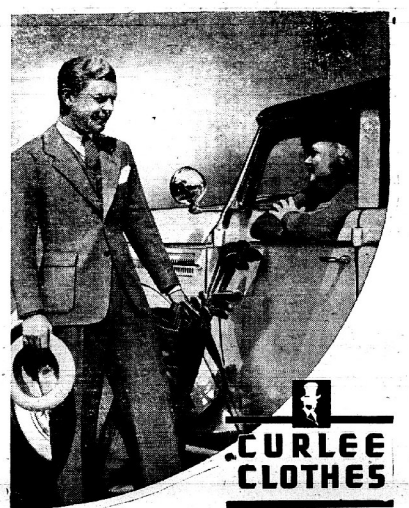

"And that ain't all; Bill; when you've dead that's supposed to be the end of you. But me? The parson tells me that when I die I gotta go to hell and burn forever. That is, Bill, if I don't do just as you says. And most of what he says keeps me from getting any kick out of life."

"Tell me, Willyum, considering these things, how can you keep a straight face and look so dumb and solemn?"

March 11 and came to Prestonsburg March 14. He was compelled to leave the following day to take a boat that will enable him to reach his home in Westbaden, Germany, April 13.

Mr. Haney, a merchant in Westbaden, hopes to bring his wife and six-year-old son to the United States to live. Mr. Oppenheimer says, as soon as they are able to furnish bond.

As a merchant in Westbaden he is not permitted to sell unless he "boot-legs" his merchandise. He is Mr. Oppenheimer's oldest sister's young-est son.

SUITS FOR EASTER

It's all around town and it's no idle gossip. The new Curlee Suits for Spring which we've just placed on display are the last word in smart, modern styling. No doubt about it—they're 'tops' in men's clothing value.

These Curlee Suits are designed and tailored to combine style with real wearing comfort and service. The materials represent a beautiful assortment of the very newest weaves and patterns. As in all men's clothing that carry the Curlee trademark—you can count on quality in linings and inner materials, those important parts of the suit that you can't see from the outside.

Don't pass up this opportunity for a real clothing investment—when planning your Spring wardrobe. You'll find, in our stock, just the suits you need for Spring and Summer wear. You'll find models and styles you will like—in sizes to fit you—at prices you can afford. Let your next suit be a Curlee Suit.

NEW RURAL HIGHWAY PROGRAM BEING SET UP

With the beginning of the highway department's new fiscal year on April 1, a new appropriation of $2,000,000 will be unmarked by the Commissioner of Highways for the improvement of Kentucky's rural roads. This is the sum authorized for annual expenditures by the General Assembly of 1938 which allocated the funds to be expended in the various counties on the basis of one-third on proportional population, one-third on proportional area, and one-third equally between the 120 counties.

The engineers of the department of highways are now engaged in negotiating with the fiscal courts throughout the state to prepare plans for the coming year's program.

In a large number of the counties during the past year the Division of Rural Highways continued its work in conjunction with the county fiscal courts or with the Works Progress Administration. This method has proven to be mutually advantageous to the Division of Rural Highways and the county fiscal courts.

The method has proved to be mutually advantageous to the Division of Rural Highways and the county fiscal courts.

Increased mileage out of proportion to funds expended.

Cecil T. Williams, commissioner of rural highways, reports that during the two-year period since the rural highways program was instituted, the paving work has been accomplished:

- Roads ditched and reshaped, 4,647 miles; roads graded and drained, 2,144 miles; roads re-surfaced, 1,974 miles; a grand total of 10,886 miles of rural roads improved. In addition there were also constructed 65 bridges of over 20-foot span.

Plans for the coming year contemplate the completion of work previously started, and such other projects which are planned also to include in the program a number of projects for which sufficient right-of-way may be obtained to permit construction that will be maintained for maintenance by the Department of Highways, thus bringing the total of annual up-keep to $2 million.

This policy, if consistently carried out, will lead to the eventual improvement of practically all important rural roads in the counties.

The recently adopted regular session of the General Assembly passed an act enabling the commissioner of highways to proceed with rural highway work in any county if no agreement can be reached with the fiscal court within 90 days after the fiscal year begins. This will prevent delays in the work should a disagreement arise in the court. It is expected, however, that plans and agreements will be concluded with most of the fiscal courts by April 1, and that work will be started shortly thereafter.

Great interest in the work of the Division of Rural Highways is being shown throughout the state. In many sections, donations, both large and small, have been made by local citizens to assist in carrying out the work in which the community has an especial interest. Commissioner Williams has received all kinds of gifts and suggestions which he will be glad to accept.

At the time of his recent visit to the County of Hancock, Mr. Oppenheimer says: "Hopes for U. S. Home."

FEDERAL COURT CONVENES 28TH

Ten Floyd Counties On Jury List; 110 Cases Docketed

Pikeville—Approximately 110 cases are on the docket for a hearing at the March term of the United States district court which will convene here Monday morning, March 28, at 9 o'clock, according to information received from the office of A. B. Rose, clerk of the Eastern district of Kentucky, at Lexington.

Twenty-five civil actions are on the docket, Mr. Rose states, and heard so and 90 criminal cases are also down for trial. The exact time the court will be in session here has not been learned, but it is expected all business will be concluded in a few days.

One change here which will probably lessen the difficulties of United States Marshal John M. Moore and his deputies is the improvement of the Pikeville city jail to meet the requirements of the federal government. Due to the fact that the Pike county jail has long been condemned by the federal authorities as unsafe for the housing of prisoners, Mr. Moore and his deputies have been forced to transfer their charges to some other place of confinement before nightfall. The improvement of the city jail will make this daily transfer unnecessary.

The money for this work, drawn from all counties of the district then in session and county have been announced by Mr. Rose at his office in Lexington as follows:

Willie Wolford, of Freeburn, Pike; Harmon Wilson, of Laura, Martin; Norman Effe, of Keaton, Johnson; Lee Woods, of Emma, Floyd; Walter Wagoner, of Waldo, Magoffin; Andy Wright, of Southdown, Letcher; Thomas Patton, of Prestonsburg, Floyd; Russell Williamson, of Inez, Martin; Cebof Stepp, of Sublett, Magoffin; John K. Hedrick, of Red Oak, Johnson; Matt Hancock, of Red Oak, Pike; Jimp Watts, of Halfie, Letcher; Chester Gillfill, of Stapfordsville, Johnson; Jimmie Shephard, of Garlock, Magoffin.

Also on the list are: Egan, Martin; W. L. Williams, of Lone, Floyd; Robert Sward, of Pigeon, Pike; R. L. Hall, of Betoy Lander, Floyd; Preston Hannah, of Leandro, Johnson; W. M. Preeco, of Inez, Martin; F. F. Penetration, of Whitesburg, Letcher; Chris M. NOT A REQUIREMENT--A NECESSITY

"There is a real need for vocational training in the schools of Floyd county."--Ishmael H. Triplett, Superintendent of Prestonsburg Schools.

The young man, had he wanted to do so, could have written A. B. after his name.

Here's a graduate of a well-known Southern university. But he was "down in the dumps"--no other expression describes his outlook.

"Yes," he decided, "I have a good education and it's mostly paid for. True, I know all about how to live the fuller life. But, you know, a full dinner pail means a lot in that fuller, richer life the idealists carol about."

"You'll admit that the enjoyments you have are deeper, finer than if you had never received an education."

"Sure. And my sorrows are deeper, too," he countered.

He could see little ahead for him. Since age seven he had been in school, a good student, dreaming great things. Now, possessed of his degree at twenty-two, Summa cum laude. His father is dead, his mother's farm under mortgage. He has been out of college almost two years now. Yet nothing to do--except brood. He glances distastefully toward Relief.

"What else is there for me?" he wants to know. "Here I am--sitting--talking--nothing else, except worrying. A jack-of-all-trades, good at none, perhaps, but they won't give me a chance at any. Now, take Relief. They pay fair wages for skilled labor. But I, with my Bachelor of Arts, my fraternity, my summa cum laude--what under heaven do these mean by way of earning my daily bread?"

"I know my Romance languages. I write a darned good thesis: I can talk your head off about the arts and sciences--but WHAT CAN I DO?"

"You," his listener breaks in, "have all the qualifications for a teacher."

"With two teachers for every school? And another school year six months away?"

"Yes, I'll admit that things look dark."

"Dark? Black, understand. I still have my wits about me and I don't want to seem melodramatic," he continued. "But why kid ourselves?"

"If all boils down to this: I, erudite scholar you have hinted that I am trained for no particular profession, with a smattering knowledge of everything in general, have one hope. That is--get at the business end of a meeting or shovel on a Relief project, or, if the mines pick up, get a job leading coal. A lot of good all those years of study have done me, my friend!"

Comments From The Capitol

The greatest political show of the century--you're about to see it, folks. The barkers are speling their wares, over radio, and courthouse platforms. The parade will soon get started. The hand wagons are being padded and the steps made low. The political pap is flowing. The big tent covers Kentucky. It is a two-wing show.

The aides of both Chandler and Barkley are looking over the council in the state, selecting the chairman and chairwomen for the campaign. Headquarters are mushrooming up in all sections. Judge Brad Stewart, of Paducah, Chandler's campaign manager, and Shackelford Miller, Louisville, Barkley's director of contact, have been drilling their lieutenants, counting noses and oiling their guns.

The newspapers long suffering and snowed under with piles of propaganda sent out from Washington and Frankfort, under the guise of news, have finally come into a kind of sanity. The milk and honey will begin to show in the early spring when both campaign managers will turn their big guns in the form of advertising, toward the eye voters of the rural sections, who will be the balance of power.

The gist of a bill proposed to help the counties of the state, those counties which are laid off financially and are not doing so well, comes in the form of a bill which is virtually certain. There will be no appropriations made to give these counties money. The way the bill, which is now prepared, reads, will establish a commission to see that each county puts its business in order, to take stock of what it has on hand, total all of its bills and then set up a budget under which it will operate and then start payment on its obligations. This will be much the same sort of reorganization as the state underwent almost three years ago and the bill which made it possible for the state to blaze a way out of the financial jungle. There is a contemplated measure now being discussed localizing the use of rural highway fund allotments for bond retirement. This would not become effective until April 1, 1940. That, folks, would be a month after the adjournment of the next regular session of the legislature.

Senator Strother Milton Paducah, has introduced a bill into this special session which would put the negro college at Paducah back on the map. This school was virtually closed. On an extension in January when the big one in the ground, his mouth shut, and his eyes open, and during his stay he heard plenty about the real firing in the Senatorial campaign which has pitted Governor Chandler against Alton Barkley, will not get under way until late in April or the first part of May. Although there will be speeches and a lot of hurrah in the meantime, the heavy shelling from the two sectors will be a summertime program. So anything that you hear now, just sit back and tell your neighbor: "My friend, you ain't heard nothing yet." At the current sitting both sides are busily engaged in making their organizations, naming county chairmen, chairwomen, and all of those who go to make up precinct organs. These folk are the most important people in our election and both sides know it.

Your correspondent has just returned from a trip to Washington, D. C. where he spent a few days with his big eyes to the ground, his mouth shut, and his eyes open, and during his stay he heard plenty about the coming campaign. In fact, he heard enough to make him believe that the Chandler-Barkley fight was as much at home in the national capitol as it was in Kentucky. Many folk who have merely read about Kentucky and Kentucky politics and passed it off as so much reading matter, are now taking an active interest in this race. Chandler, in his few visits there, has made lasting impressions. On the other hand there are people who believe that Barkley is too firmly entrenched to be moved. Among the big shots who are backing Barkley there is a feeling of danger. They realize that Chandler is a powerful figure and that he would make an even more powerful figure when and if he wins a Senate seat. Anyhow, Washington is taking this race just as seriously as Kentucky is and the feeling there is almost as high.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Frenchburg, Ky., March 14, 1938. Editor, Floyd County Times, Prestonsburg, Ky. Dear Sir:

I should be very much in your debt if you would send me a copy of your paper containing a write-up of the tournament games of the past week.

I wish to take this opportunity of expressing our thanks for the splendid way your people at Prestonsburg treated us while we were in your city.

The townspeople here and the entire student body and faculty have a great appreciation of the city of Prestonsburg for its hospitality and kindness. We assure you that such sportsmanship as was shown us will not be forgotten. I personally, have many friends in Prestonsburg and to these, also, I wish to add my regards.

Very truly yours, SHELBY REESE KASH, Supt. Menifee County Schools.

Ed. Ky., March 11, 1938. Editor, Floyd County Times, Prestonsburg, Ky. Dear Sir:

The suggestion you make about the stickers, "Let's Build the Injustice Trail" is indeed timely. It will give everyone interested, including those in Pike county, an opportunity to show how they stand and it will call attention to our needs at a time when it is possible for the powers that be to draw hurrings across the trail.

The open season for promises is at hand and unless we all stand together, performance will be a forgotten thing. From now on, politicians of Pikeville Saturday.

ELECTRIC SERVICE WITH SAFETY

Care of Electrical Appliances.

This is one of a series of articles prepared by the International Association of Electrical Inspectors to encourage the use of electricity in homes.

Electric heating pads are very helpful appliances...

Parents should inspect electrical toys for insulation weaknesses.

To assure a long life for heating pads, avoid so far as practicable sharp folds...

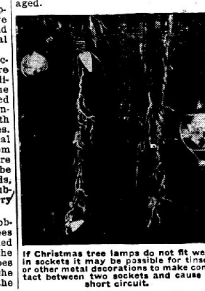

When it is necessary to wash appliances, make sure that they are disconnected from the circuit...

The precaution regarding keeping heating pads dry applies to all appliances so far as the heating elements are concerned...

There is one precaution to be observed in lighting Christmas trees with electric lamps...

screw-shells themselves or the metal bases of the lamps may be exposed...

Electric lamps for Christmas trees have largely eliminated a very serious fire hazard...

If Christmas tree lamps do not fit well in sockets, they should be replaced with other metal decorations to make contact between sockets and cause a short circuit.

The young mother is survived by her 17-year-old husband, Wallace Robinson; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Emory Hall, one brother, Cecil, and two sisters, Mrs. Julia Mitchell, and Miss Wanda Lee Hall, all of Garrett.

SHIKE'S POKES

(The Times publishes this column only as the views of "Shikepoke," not as those of this newspaper).

The big laugh of the Justice Thursday dinner came when the Governor lauded Zach for "getting the mountains out of the mud." He must have forgotten that Left Beaver is in the mountains and the mud, too.

Governor Chandler showed that he'd heard of Left Beaver's industry trail, though, for he prevented Zach with a fishing rod—now wasn't that thoughtful? Zach can sit in his car and cast, just above Diff, right in the industry trail. There's fish there, too—Doug Hays caught a good sized catfish there Sunday morning while prying his truck out of the mud.

What was it Mr. Humphreys and Mr. Keen Johnson said in Prestonsburg? "I'll have to build the Left Beaver road or shoot Doug Hays." The highway is not built and Doug Hays wasn't even half shot when I talked to him about 30 minutes ago.

Chief Greedy Intervenes

(By WILL BOGGS)

The sun was barely peeping thru the skyline of big timber on the ridge above Dick Robinson's trapping shack on the mountainside. Chief Greedy, a stout fellow with a thick mustache, was sitting on the log porch, leaning back in a chair. He had a month exactly since he and Dick had made a bet in Chicago's postoffice that the by-tandies in such instances as this, that it was cultivated expression and the chief's face was as smooth as a billiard ball. "You're not a bit of a gambler, are you?" Dick asked.

"I ain't no gambler," Chief Greedy answered. "I'm just a man that likes to see a fellow strip his shirt off and throw it to the ground."

"You ain't crazy, are you?" Dick asked. "I'm no kin of a crazy man, neither. I'm just one of these fellows that don't scare easy."

"But how are you gonna get down that 'bout killing' yourself?" Dick wanted to know, still unconvinced that the man would undertake such a thing.

"Don't you see them hand-holds?" Thomas asked, pointing.

Dick looked down in the direction indicated by Thomas and saw little recesses and rough places in the face of the precipice, but he did not see how by any stretch of the imagination they could be regarded as hand-holds. He remembered, too, with a shudder, a story that his grandfather had related about these same recesses, most of which were situated along the sides of a small crack on the face of the wall.

One day when he was a youth, the aged man had said, he came upon the rocks while hunting, and of course peered over into the secluded gully. What he saw there made him chill with fear. Scores of big rattlesnakes slithering on the little ledges or peering alongside the fissure in the wall; and down at the bottom of the court, in a wad of dry leaves, lay the biggest rattler that ever lived.

The old man swore. He raised his rifle to shoot it, and in doing so dislodged a little stone, which clattered down into the court and frightened the serpents into their dens.

"That dog of yours got choked at his shadder," he said, turning to Dick. "His wife shook up a couple of eggs and fried 'em for him."

"I'll just go down there and place an' show you 't it's an empty 't a pure man's meal matter," he said, stripping his shirt off and throwing it to the ground.

"Ye ain't crazy, are you?" Dick asked.

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

(By GORDON WILSON, Ph.D.)

INSTITUTIONS START?

All of us are aware of the passing of institutions, but an equally interesting study would concern itself with the origins of institutions. Why do certain things become the rule, and others equally interesting fail to materialize? So old a humanity and so lost in productivity are the origins of many of our customs that it is nearly impossible to trace the actual conditions that went into the making of institutions.

For example, how did language start, or, more specifically, how did a given language become differentiated from the nearest neighbors? We have been told that the first language was that of the Indians, and that the first word was "ah," which means "yes" in many languages.

It is interesting to note that the first word in many languages is "yes," and that the first word in many languages is "no." This is true of many languages, and it is interesting to note that the first word in many languages is "yes," and that the first word in many languages is "no."

H. J. MUSIC, 75, PASSES SATURDAY

Local Citizen Dies of Ruptured Ulcer In Paintsville Hospital

H. J. (Jeff) Music, well-known Prestonsburg citizen, succumbed in a Paintsville hospital late last week after a short illness from a ruptured ulcer. Mr. Music had been in ill health for some time, being blind the past few months. He was 75 years old.

He was revered and respected by all who knew him in Floyd county, where for many years he followed carpentry as a trade.

Funeral services were held in Paintsville at the home of his daughter, Mrs. R. E. Thomas, with the Revs. Willie Horn of Auxier, and G. W. Redding, of Prestonsburg, officiating.

Burial was made in the family cemetery on Little Paint under the supervision of the Arnold Funeral Home.

Mr. Music is survived by the widow, three daughters, Mrs. Lee Derosssett, Prestonsburg; Mrs. R. E. Thomas, Paintsville; Mrs. Alva Minus, of Asheville, N. C., and one son, Henry, who resides in California.

MRS. BORDERS DIES NEAR PAINTVILLE

Widow of Henry Borders Succumbs Monday to Pneumonia Attack

Mrs. Mary Rebecca Borders, widow of Henry Borders, died at the Borders home, near Paintsville, Monday night, a victim of pneumonia at the age of 78 years.

Born and reared at what is now Eureka, near here, Mrs. Borders was a daughter of Samuel Walker Porter and Mrs. Susan C. Porter, pioneer residents of this section. Besides a host of friends and relatives in this county, hundreds of acquaintances throughout this section mourn her passing. She had been a lifelong member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Surviving her are one sister, Mrs. Anna Mayo, of Prestonsburg; two brothers, T. L. Porter, Pikeville, and J. M. Porter, Prestonsburg; and one adopted daughter, Mrs. Katherine Borders Jones, of Paintsville.

Funeral rites were conducted from the Borders home Wednesday afternoon, and burial was made in the Richmond cemetery here beside her husband and son, Claude.

W. P. Maher, John McGurk, James P. Keller and Mike Cronin happened to be together one night recently when Mr. Maher remembered that he had an old picture, taken forty-two years ago. He went to look for it, remarking that he thought some of those present were in it. When he returned with it, it was discovered that there were 16 in the picture, and that the four who, by chance, were together that night were the only four in the group still living—Lexington Leader.
