LOVE LAUGHS AT LOCKSMITHS
—BUT NOT AT CLOCKS
They are both from Floyd county, but she's in the Bluegrass at school. He has a date to meet her at a designated spot at a certain hour to drive her home for vacation. Here she is on the stroke, but no girl. Then he waits—and waits—thirty-five minutes he waits, finally decides he's been done wrong by, sets off for other parts. Five minutes later, she arrives. And she waits a solid hour. So she stalks off in high dudgeon, wondering where the big brute could be.

FLY-CATCHING AND POULTRY
You might not think there is much in common between the poultry business and fly-casting for fish. But there is—as witness this story told by Mr. B. Burke, who is Deputy Game Warden, the grandpappy of Floyd county fly fishermen.

According to Mr. Burke, he saw upon a visit with him, a flock of 16 hens and 13 roosters—the said roosters being of every breed and color imaginable. This precocious mingling of bloodlines, says Burke, puzzled Mr. Burke, no end, so he asked Mr. Cusley the why and wherefore.

A SOUND PHILOSOPHY
In telling this, TOWN-WORLD cannot be accused, now that Forrest Short is dead, of trying to put a candidate above all others.

When Forrest's last campaign was over—and he had been re-elected, he asked him, "What do you think of the whole affair."

"Well," he said, "it seems that a lot of people were against me, but I was lucky enough to win. And I'm not going to say, either, that those who voted against me are bad people. They're good folks—and I intend to treat them as good people."

Such philosophy spelled success for this candidate and for the town, made friends here and throughout Floyd county. His was a kindly, sensible philosophy that too many of us, in or out of politics, can never master.

LETTER TO EDITOR
That certain party, who, before going to The Courier-Journal where he is now assistant state editor, was prominently associated with THE TIMBER, should know, if anybody does, the lack involved in publishing such a paper as we undertook last week. He writes the following two-line letter:

"How in the heck did you do it?"

THE GHOST WALKS
Back in World War I days when a certain coal vein was opened to development up the highway from here, the boys who were "in on the ground floor" evidently thought they had four sumpters. For they called the mining town "Eureka," which means, so we are told, "We have found it."

Now it would appear, however, somebody has decided to bring the "ghost town" back to life. For at the roadside up there stands this sign for all to see:

"Welcome to Eureka. Population, 40."

GRADUATION SPEAKER DIRECTS
REMARKS AT BOYS, GIRLS
"WHO WEREN'T THERE"

Address of George L. Evans, Frankfort, speaker at the county-wide graduation exercises here Friday night for 1941 Floyd county high school seniors, was dedicated to the boys and girls "who weren't there."

"You who are graduating tonight are on your way," Mr. Evans said, "but the boys and girls who are not here with you—they are the youngsters whom you have lost who have dropped out of school, who have suffered for lack of parental attention, boys who have lost their lives on hojo jaunts over the country, youngsters who, afflicted by illnesses, have gone to jail rather than school."

At the same time he congratulated the graduates whom he described as a select group, since only one of every hundred boys and girls who enter school continue study to be graduated from high school.

The graduates were welcomed by Mayor E. P. Arnold, of Prestonsburg, County Superintendent Town Hall presided at the colorful exercises and presented the diplomas. Advice to graduates was given by Superintendent Ithamel H. Triplet, of the Prestonsburg schools. The graduating classes were introduced by the several school principals.

Students, parents and friends from all sections of the county attended the exercises, the fifth annual mass graduation of the seniors of the county's nine high schools.

Prestonsburg gymnasium, scene of the exercises, was decorated in the colors of the several schools. The building was divided into sections to accommodate the representations of each school. Music for the occasion was furnished by the Floyd county band, directed by Jesse Elliott, and Robert Wallace, and the Floyd county chorus of singers from various schools under the direction of Mrs. P. A. Miller.

Both the band and chorus were lauded by Superintendent Hall as the county's finest, a statement in which Mr. Evans concurred.

SALARY SLASH
VOTE, VOID

Additional votes needed to pass cut over veto

If the cut in city officials' salaries is to go into effect as voted last week by the City Council, support of at least two of the three Councilmen absent from the meeting will be necessary. It was said this week, to override Mayor E. P. Arnold's veto.

The Council voted 4 to 1 for Councilman W. A. Pope's salary slash resolution. Councilmen Roy Payne, Bill Sowards and George G. Carter did not attend the meeting.

The salary schedule as voted would pay the Mayor $25 a month, the Police Judge $25, the Treasurer, $12.50 and the City Clerk, $10.

Dick Davis, manager of the city-planning services, told the Council that four of the seven new fireplaces required by the Actuarial Bureau before issuing a better insurance rating for Prestonsburg have been installed and the remaining three will be placed within the next few weeks.

The District Department reported that citizens gave full co-operation during Clean-Up Week. The sweeping of trash onto the street from certain places of business in Prestonsburg, however, and prosecution of such offenders was discussed.

PLACES NO CEILING

PEKSY MEASLES MAR
GIRL TRIO RECORD

Three Floyd county girls, members of high school graduating classes this year, established unusual attendance records.

Heading the list was Aileen DePries Wheelwright who in the last 12 years has neither been absent nor tardy.

Golda Prater of Martin high school had the same record for nine years. Most tragic record of the trio was that of Lillian Salisbury, daughter of Deputy Sheriff Lackey Salisbury. After attending school five years without an absence or tardy mark against her, she became ill of measles and could not attend the graduation exercises.

One of the best-known and oldest families in the Big Sandy valley, last Sunday observed in traditional "homecoming" manner the 95th birthday of Mrs. Sarah Wheeler, native Johnson countian and daughter of one of the valley's very earliest settlers...

As the story is told, Samuel Justice, at the age of nine years, started with his family on the long journey to a new home in Indiana. Samuel, youngest member of the family, was riding in the rear of the covered wagon...

He became tired of the journey and "dropped off" in the woodlands of what is now known as Johnson county and made his way to the log dwelling of a pioneer who "took him in" and reared him to manhood.

Young Samuel never saw his family for about 50 years, when he succeeded in locating his mother in Hamilton, Pa. Visited Mrs. Justice in the meantime he was married to the union was born Sarah Justice on May 23, 1846, who in 1868 wed Martin Vanburen Wheeler.

After three scoreless innings, K. Stumbo singled over second with one away and Akers promptly blasted a 400-foot homer over the left-field wall. In the fifth Wayland led no time getting back in the ball game. With two out, Baird hit for Bartley and reached first on an error. Baird was injured on the play, Wallace taking his place.

Adkins promptly made Wayland's second hit—a home run over the center field fence to tie up the ball game.

THE BURNING FORK ROAD—A BURNING ISSUE

THE Burning Fork road (Magothin county's name for the Salverville-Prestonsburg route) is a burning issue as The Salverville Independent views the impotency of Magothin county to take care of its own affairs, the inability of the county to acquire right-of-way by credit, or the sincerity, even, of county officials in undertaking to do their share in procuring construction of the road linking the two county seats.

Albert K. Moore, editor of The Independent, hits out, in straight-from-the-shoulder fashion, in citing alleged weakness of his own county and of its officials. In doing so, he throws squarely into the face of Prestonsburg and Floyd county civic groups and the Floyd fiscal court a challenge that may be read as the several organizations and the court run—not from, but toward, the issue, we trust.

Writes Mr. Moore:

We have heard much discussion recently regarding the road to Prestonsburg—known to us as the Burning Fork road. At Prestonsburg, a few weeks ago, we were informed that the only hold-up on connecting Salverville and Prestonsburg was the Magothin county side of the line, that the work on the Floyd county section was already underway and nearing completion.

At a meeting held with Highway Commissioner Brown, of Hazard, at the Carpenter hotel some few weeks ago by all the prominent Democrats of Magothin county—leaving out, by the way, the editor of this paper, who ceases to be "prominent" when he fails to do the bidding of the Democratic machine—we are told that Dr. Brown promised the early construction of the Prestonsburg road. But this promise was, of course, contingent upon Magothin county securing the right-of-way necessary, and this seems to be something Magothin county cannot or will not do.

Now Floyd county and its citizens say that county will build this road, including the Magothin county section, "if they have to take over part of Magothin's to do it."

We would suggest that, if Floyd county has any public-spirited men, or even one such man (Magothin county has none), who will advance the money for purchase of required right-of-way, or better: still will buy the right-of-way and donate it to Magothin county, then the whole affair can be dumped squarely in the lap of the State Highway Commission and the Democratic patronage bosses, right where it belongs.

From the best of our information, it would not take over a thousand dollars to purchase this right-of-way. Magothin county could not buy a dozen tomato plants on credit, and there is no provision in the budget, if the county has such, for this purchase. Therefore, it is up to some outside source to help out.

Wouldn't it be too bad if this source of election promises were taken away from the candidates for County Judge before the primary?

If Floyd county wants to benefit from publicity depicting it as dedicated in practice as well as in theory, to the task of helping a helpless neighbor as well as itself—if we are as interested as we should be in highway improvement in behalf of

Floyd county and another county, besides, then here we have the opportunity to do some actual work worthwhile.

NO ENCOURAGEMENT FROM THE STATE TAX COMMISSION

IT is estimated that three-fourths of the $20,000 expected to be saved on Floyd-Knotch circuit court costs this fiscal year will be saved in Floyd county; the fiscal court expenditures are budgeted; the state admits it doesn't need the money—and yet Floyd real estate assessments were recently hiked upward fifteen per cent by the State Tax Commission.

Which is little encouragement to officials who would economize.

Floyd county's tax assessment when it left the county Board of Supervisors to be submitted to the commission was above nine millions of dollars—slightly above the figures demanded by the tax commission last year. Yet a greater assessment was ordered this year, the "blanket raise" was made on owners of town lots and on the farmers.

If the tax commission is bent on raising assessments in the face of economies effected by the county, when revenue is not needed, when the assessment as submitted from the county by the Tax Commissioner and Board of Supervisors is at least equal to the demands of the Commission, the year before—if all that is true, just why should there be any economy when such economy reacts unfavorably to the taxpayers?

EXPERT TESTIMONY

FEW men in the world are better qualified to advise the people of the United States at this moment of world crisis than Colonel William J. Donovan, who spoke in Cincinnati Wednesday night under the auspices of the Citizens Fight for Freedom Committee. It is possible to say this not because Colonel Donovan is not more patriotic or devoted to his nation than many other Americans (although none excel him in this regard), but because he has sought out and possessed the knowledge upon which to base an intelligent and accurate appraisal of the world situation.

Colonel Donovan says that the United States is endangered by German aggression. And when he says so, it must be remembered that he is one of the world's most respected military observers; within the last half year he has traveled 35,000 miles through the war zones and theaters of diplomatic and economic intrigue in Europe, Africa, Asia Minor, and England. He has consulted military leaders and has been closeted with the heads of governments. He has carried a shrewd pair of eyes and a shrewd pair of ears through the zones where the most tremendous revolution of our times is occurring.

Colonel Donovan knows whereof he speaks when he depicts the engine of Axis aggression as something that the United States must face alone if England fails. He knows whereof he speaks when he says that it can harm us, and that we cannot appease it.

Colonel Donovan says that a defeat of Hitlerism is vital to the welfare of America and Americans—shopworkers, white-collar men, and capitalists alike. And he is in position to prove it, by personal knowledge, by incontrovertible fact.

Colonel Donovan says that Hitlerism is not inevitable; that the aid which it is in our power to give can overthrow the juggernaut of Axis aggression and end the present threat to the continued existence of the world we have known. He says England can endure with our aid; that there are weaknesses in the German situation which will crack under pressure.

In his speech here Colonel Donovan made no effort to impugn the motives or discredit the patriotism of the men who say that we should do nothing, or nothing more, to stop Hitler now. He accredits them with sincerity, and he speaks of them, without venom or passion.

This makes all the more effective his assertion that it is the duty of such men to prove that America would not be endangered by a Hitler victory when they say that we should not expose ourselves to the risk involved in trusting his defeat.

The expert opinion of Colonel Donovan emphasizes that risks lie along both courses ahead of America, but it emphasizes that the greater risks, and those with least promise of ultimate benefit to the nation, lie along the course of isolation or half-hearted measures. And America will do well to harken to his words.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

PORTER NAMED LOCAL DEALER FOR NASH AUTOMOBILES

A familiar and highly regarded figure in local automotive circles, J. Graham Porter announces his appointment as dealer here for the Nash Motors Division of the Nash-Kelvinator Corporation.

The company, it was announced, will handle all three series of new Nash cars, including the new low-priced Nash Ambassador "500," the big, high-economy car with which Nash is competing with Ford, Chevrolet and Plymouth in the mass market this year.

"Nash has been working for four years on its plan to enter the low-price field," declared Porter, "and this year brought out the only completely new 1941 automobile, with an array of features that are giving it tremendous appeal to buyers of the most expensive cars."

The Ambassador "500," he said, is distinguished principally by its size and unprecedented big-city economy. Front seats are nearly five feet wide, and in its price class its roominess is not surpassed in 26 different comfort measurements, he declared. Despite its size, the car will travel from 25 to 30 miles on a gallon of gasoline, with the average driver at the wheel.

4-H Clubs Join In Defense Activities

Defense activities in which Kentucky 4-H club members have joined include the growing and preservation of vegetables and fruits, the raising of chickens, pigs, sheep and beef cattle, dairying, the growing of cover and feed crops, the control of insect pests and livestock disease, and the improved feeding of meat animals. All these contribute to a better food supply for the people of this and other nations.

In selecting 24 district demonstration teams to go to Junior Week at the University of Kentucky June 9-14, it is estimated that 1,000 trained teams went into action. Every one of the 120 counties in the state was represented. Practically every phase of farming and homemaking, food production and food preservation was covered in these demonstrations.

The 4-H club method of learning by actual practice on the farm and in the farm home is reaching approximately 45,000 boys and girls in Kentucky this year. They are learning the best methods—getting a practical education without leaving these demonstrations.

Defense activities in which Kentucky 4-H club members have joined include the growing and preservation of vegetables and fruits, the raising of chickens, pigs, sheep and beef cattle, dairying, the growing of cover and feed crops, the control of insect pests and livestock disease, and the improved feeding of meat animals. All these contribute to a better food supply for the people of this and other nations.
