What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Every shipyard in our country is setting amazing records in the construction of a new kind of marine so essential to the transport of supplies and men to the seven seas. The overall cost of these hundreds of ships now building runs into millions of dollars.

There has been plenty of electric power for war production.

The electric companies under business management, supplying about seven-eighths of all America's electric power, are a BIG job to do—and did it!

Many of them are called "Victory" ships and you are contributing to this victory by your purchase of War Bonds — at least ten percent of your income, every payday. We'll need these ships after the war, too. When Peace comes.

Poor fellow! It's no wonder he's "treadbare" and down to his last mile. The way he's been kicked around.

Don't run your tires ragged. They may be the only ones you'll get for a long time, and they won't last long without proper attention. Have your tires re-capped in time—don't wait too long. No rascaling certificate needed for passenger tire re-caps.

When the Long Distance Telephone Operator

JAYS: "I'm sorry, due to heavy business, there will be a one- or two-hour delay on your call."

It Means: All long distance telephone lines to the place you are calling are overcrowded with urgent war business.

Under such conditions, if your call isn't extremely urgent, it will help a lot if you will tell the operator to cancel your call, so as to avoid still further crowding of the lines.

If your call is important, but you can wait until some other time to talk, then tell the operator to cancel the call, and try again when you find the lines are less crowded.

The deeper we get into this war, the greater the demand for more and more long distance telephone service for war agencies. Their calls must go over the same lines that civilians use.

So in order to give all aid possible to those who are responsible for the successful carrying on of this war, we are asking civilians to make only the most necessary long distance telephone calls, and to be brief on all calls.

May we count on your cooperation?

THE WORLD'S BIGGEST WIND

TO BLAST THE WORLD'S BIGGEST WINDBAGS!

A scaring, raging hurricane seldom hits harder than 100 miles an hour. But at Wright Field, Ohio, the Force engines whip up an almost unbelievable storm and to help improve American military planes.

In fact, electric power is basic to nearly all war production. It turns the machines that turn out tanks, planes and guns. It welds the steel seams of ships. It flashes the urgent words of war by air and by wire.

War has brought shortages of many materials, but there has been plenty of electric power for war production.

The electric companies under business management, supplying about seven-eighths of all America's electric power, are a BIG job to do—and did it!

GERMAN DEATH RATE
Diplomatic sources from Europe report that the German death rate is going up and the birth rate is going down.

Meanwhile, exact figures on the German birth rate have been lacking. These indicate the usual downward trend of births, despite Hitler's frantic efforts to make procreation popular.

Neapolitan diplomatic sources report that business men in Germany are beginning to foresee defeat. But the people as a whole will not be discouraged by approaching defeat, and their morale will not crack, until the German army suffers a major military reverse.

Those who expect the bombing of Italy to cause a revolt of the people are badly mistaken. The bombing may knock out her industrial production and cripple her fleet and shipping, but will not cause a popular revolution.

Reasons for this are twofold. Nazi troops have such a stranglehold on Italy that no revolt could get beyond the borders, and no leaders left to head a revolt.

Rado Balbo was an opponent of collaboration in southern Italy, as well as a proponent of the flight of the Italian people, but too old to lead.

Rodolfo Graziani was also skeptical about the Italian people, but too old to lead. He was a supporter of the flight of the Italian people, but too old to lead.

People Hate Mussolini.
Yet the sentiment of the people in Italy is such that they would welcome deliverance from Mussolini and Hitler. U. S. diplomats waiting for release from internment after Pearl Harbor were told secretly by Italians: "We will not forget!"

As yet there has been no bombing of Rome, but some indication of what might happen was given early in the war when the German planes over Rome for four nights. The people poured out of the city on everything that had wheels, including push carts, bicycles and baby carriages. Yet the French had dropped nothing more harmful than leaflets.

It is reported that when Allied bombers come over the city, the people flock to the altar of their patron saint, San Gennaro, and with Mussolini in mind, say: "Dear San Gennaro, tell them he's not here!" in Rome.

Northland BY GRANTLAND RICE

IN TURNING the clock back with a few extra spins we come to the day we saw a pretty pair of football players—Don Hutson and Sammy Baugh.

I have seen and power, drive and dash. It struck with pile-driving force. But against this, Stanford was taking a murderous beating through the air.

The photo action. This is a department of Air Corps Supply is under my supervision in the absence of the officer in charge. Looking forward to your paper next week, I am.

Will you please re-print the following letter from a reader in the Dayton, O. Journal-Herald?
"Dear Sir: At the front those of us who are fortunate enough to have a radio in our organization follow the news with those interest."

"I only wish I knew," he said. "We'd be all around him. We knew where the ball was going. We knew how to break it up. I'd be within two feet of Hutson, and then something would happen suddenly, he'd have the ball and be on his way to another touchdown."

At the time this didn't seem to make much sense. But Hutson cleared the Stanford record of any defense detentions in later years when he came to the Packers.

Part of the answer—At Alabama, Hutson cut off the hundred in a shade better than 98. He could high jump six feet.

He has hands made of steel. He has a body that is unbelievable. Above all, he has Tris Speaker's knack of judging the ball's flight to a foot and getting there before it follows the ball with his eye. He knows where to be at the split second, cutting in on Al. As Curly Lambeau, George Halas or Steve Owen.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THROUGH AND BACK AGAIN
Editor, Floyd County Times:
I receive your paper from my desk every week and I am glad to know I get it from the mail room. I usually read it through and back again, and especially the column "Floyd County Goes To War."

I have been a member of the Post Office since July 1942. Since October I have been preparing data for a promotion to 2nd class as a staffer. The last one being to staff sergeant's rating. I am the No. 6 Basic Training Center, Camp Supply, serving under the supervision of First Lieut. Charles L. Moore, of Madison, Wis.

This is truly the best place for an army post. It is the only place around climate make it possible to wear our summer uniforms over 10 months every year.

The air forces have taken over all the rear coast hotels here. The Headquarters Squadron of which I am a part is quartered in the Sorensen Beach Hotel, which is a 25 room building. The Post photo action, this is a department of Air Corps Supply is under my supervision in the absence of the officer in charge.

S. Post, Wm. L. BALDRIDGE,

Will you please re-print the following letter from a reader in the Dayton, O. Journal-Herald?
"Dear Sir: At the front those of us who are fortunate enough to have a radio in our organization follow the news with those interest."

"I only wish I knew," he said. "We'd be all around him. We knew where the ball was going. We knew how to break it up. I'd be within two feet of Hutson, and then something would happen suddenly, he'd have the ball and be on his way to another touchdown."

At the time this didn't seem to make much sense. But Hutson cleared the Stanford record of any defense detentions in later years when he came to the Packers.

Part of the answer—At Alabama, Hutson cut off the hundred in a shade better than 98. He could high jump six feet.

He has hands made of steel. He has a body that is unbelievable. Above all, he has Tris Speaker's knack of judging the ball's flight to a foot and getting there before it follows the ball with his eye. He knows where to be at the split second, cutting in on Al. As Curly Lambeau, George Halas or Steve Owen.

Four Sons of McCoy Feudist Fight For Uncle Sam; One Is Prisoner In Germany, Another Is In Africa

Four McCoy brothers, grandson of a leader in the Hatfield-McCoy feud that raged across the Kentucky-West Virginia border in the early century ago are now fighting for Uncle Sam the Army.

They are sons of Mrs. John Chaffin McCoy of Williamson, formerly of Webb and the late Walter McCoy, a Hatfield-McCoy feudist who was one of 21 killed in a mine strike at Matwain in the early 20's. Their mother is the daughter of W. D. McCoy, the merchant and postmaster at Webb. Their grandfather, Bud McCoy, was a banker of Raleigh, Mo., leader of the McCoy-McCoy feud in the Hatfield-McCoy feud.

Sgt. Carl Clyde and Claude enlisted on the same day in June, 1940. Sgt. Clyde was reported missing in action Feb. 14 last when the Germans broke through East Belgium and he was captured. He is now a prisoner in Germany. He has been in the hands of the Germans for 11 months.

THESE DESERVE CITIZENSHIP MEDAL

THE TIMES has a profound admiration for any man or woman who is doing his or her part at home during this greatest of all wars. On the "home front," the miner, the shipyard worker, the factory employe who produces for victory is a patriot who should be recognized as such.

But on this home front there is another group of workers who are probably the unsung heroes of the times. They are not making guns or planes, but they are a job of importance to wartime America and of greater importance to the post-war America.

These are the teachers who have stuck to the classroom, resisting the lure of high-paying war jobs, accepting the lowest wage scale in the national economic picture and meeting with a minimum of protest the burden of the higher cost of living.

If any group in America is entitled to bicker and demand, and actually quit, the teachers are. But something that has reached the spirit of the true teacher during her years in the classroom binds her by impalpable ties to one of the most important and most ill-paid jobs in the civilized world.

There are few teachers in Floyd county who could not have left the classroom last year and immediately stepped into high-paying war jobs. These who will teach this year could do the same. Some teachers have quit, some will—but not those teachers of whom we speak. Such men and women should be remembered when this war is over.

For those teachers there is no Army or Navy "E." For them there should be a special Citizenship medal.

"WE WON"

YES, the time is coming when from every throat in America will well the triumphant cry, "We won!"

When that glad day comes, there should be a bit of nose-counting done just to see who "we" are.

Will "we" who decline now to buy War Bonds be the ones who won?

Will "we" who snitched and cheated and griped in the rationing program be the winners?

Will "we" who waxed rich on exorbitant war profits be counted among the victors?

Will "we" who "soldiered" on the job and walked out of war production plants just because they broke up our crap game—will we share the glory of victory?

"We" are a lot of people. Yes, we all will have won. Some of us will have earned a part of the very real glory that comes with victory over an evil foe. And the rest of us—we will have had won for us nothing more than the right to go our hypocritical ways, claiming a sham glory for ourselves where none is due, and continuing to breathe the air of a land that would be better off without us.

WHAT "GENERAL" CHANDLER WANTS

By J. HOWARD HENDERSON In The Courier-Journal

FRANKFORT, Ky., May 25—Let me postulate that the reason Senator A. B. Chandler acts the way he does is not to be found in Japan, or Germany, or England, or Russia, or what they may or may not do.

The Senator's actions do not stem from the war at all. He is not much concerned about the war, or he would chart his course for unity among the Allies, not disunity; for confidence, not suspicion.

Senator Chandler got to like he is in Kentucky, long before the war started. He developed his political philosophy here, made his political alliances here, long before the war. To him the war is another political vehicle.

What he is enacting at Washington on a national scale he worked out in Kentucky twelve years ago. He used it to win him the Governorship. He hopes it will catapult him into the Presidency next year, or before he dies.

PHILOSOPHY OF RUIN

It is for all his outward buoyancy, a philosophy of destruction. Motivated by the Lafoon forces for Lieutenant Governor, he had not become accustomed to the seat until he was tearing at the vitals of the Lafoon Administration.

It does not matter that there was much about the Lafoon Administration subject to organization in 1938 by attempting to defeat Senator Allen W. Barkley for re-election. By the death of Senator M. M. Logan Senator Chandler finally got into the Senate and until he had worked away a full six-year term he was pro-Roosevelt.

But Senator Chandler never was a Roosevelt man. He was against his domestic policies. He was an isolationist when he ran for Senator in 1938.

HOW HE FELT ABOUT THE WAR "I'll never vote to send an American mother's boy to fight on foreign soil," he shouted then. The Senator should take the childishness of that to heart. Maybe he sees that he has no reason to be so cocksure in his strategy if he'll remember that five years ago he knew so little he believed by staying home we could keep out of a war.

He was an isolationist then because he thought on that issue he could go to the Senate and hurt Roosevelt. His boom companion through the years has been Senator Harry F. Byrd, who often has headed the Roosevelt-haters.

All through 1937 and 1938, Senator Chandler hobnobbed with the anti-Roosevelt forces, in Kentucky and nationally. J. Dan Talbot was against Roosevelt and Senator Chandler was against Talbot. Senator Chandler grew thick with the Huey Long crowd in Louisiana as soon as Huey turned on the President.

When James A. Farley quit the President, Chandler took up with him, hoping that Farley could make a good President. That is no guesswork. Chandler told hundreds of his friends what Farley might do for him.

WAR! WHAT'S THAT? In the 1938 campaign Chandler tore at every phase of the New Deal. He criticized the W.P.A., relief, referred to the President as "that fellow." He refused to attend a dinner given in Louisville by Senator Barkley, made Frederick A. Wallister up an invitation to Senator Barkley to attend a welfare meeting in Louisville, at which Chandler told his audience he might be elected to the Presidency.

That is what Senator Chandler is after. He's not much worried about the Japs destroying us before we and England and Russia whip the Germans. The Senator really doesn't know much about the war. Traveling over the country to study war activities, he's been talking about tying the West and South together to elect a President.

He'll be the South, he'll tie the West to himself with the Japanese scare. He badly needs a token raid by the Japs on Seattle, or some Pacific town. With that he thinks he'll be on his way to the Presidency.

It is an obsession with him. He believes he can make himself the leader of the opposition, ready to take command the moment Roosevelt falters. Chandler thought the time was right in 1938. He talked anti-Roosevelt to every caller.

EYE ON THE WHITE HOUSE The President was not handling the domestic problem right. He was putting too much restriction on business. What was needed was someone with Chandler's viewpoint, who would turn business loose. It would bring back prosperity.

The idea soured. By primary time in 1938 business was straghtening out without the use of Chandler's formula. Chandler went to a round-robin dinner in 1938. He had not recovered his old-time majorities last year, even after two years of token support of the President. Last year, even with the fraudulent count in Harlan, his state majority dwindled to 40,000.

But the Chandler opinion was growing by leaps and bounds. By 1942 he was prepared to say of the American General Staff that its members were subject to undue influence, while only he, Chandler, stood guard to see that nothing but the protection of the American people be considered. That, he said, was looking an eye on the Presidency, was his purpose.

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph.D. Western Kentucky Teachers' College, Bowling Green, Ky.

PASSING OF THE OLD BARBER SHOP

BEFORE women began to wear short hair and therefore to need the professional assistance of the barbers, the barber shop was a very intimate place. It was not a lady (there were no "ladies") to enter its doors. It was just a little less masculine than a saloon, which no lady entered, except, in the stories, when she came after her husband. From its long association with men it had a flavor that the dressed-up places we have now can never know.

Where are the rows of mugs that used to be displayed a tiny bit too obviously in a cabinet or on a shelf? Each bore, in bearding letters, the name of its owner, who left the mug and the shop for his own particular use when the barber shaved him, trimmed his beard, or edged his hair after a haircut. No gentleman (there were no "men") then would think of shaving himself except in dire emergencies. I have known men of very moderate means who walked down town early every morning to be shaved in style, when they could have cut off all their beards in a tenth of the time and saved themselves the walk and the shop fee. But they would have lost the chance to impress the hot pot, who did not or could not follow their swashbuckling manners. Just a few days ago I invaded an ancient barber shop and saw some mugs equally ancient; they took me back to years ago when such things were as much a badge of being well up in the world as the office of a high-bred pair of horses to a surveyor.

Barber shops were once a general reading room. Some of this tradition is left, but we do not go to the shop to see the popular magazines, especially the daring one, such as Life in its older form. The news stands offer a much easier and better supplied place. Sometimes I have waited for my haircut while some of the would-be newsstand buyers in the eighth grade dropped the contents of the county newspaper to the other sleepie people who were waiting for their turn at the paper or barber.

All good barber shops specialized in shampoos, of course, and also baths. Traveling men, who had only a few brief hours in town before tackling the wide-open spaces of the country, where many of their customers lived and sold goods at roadside stores, stopped at the barber shop and washed off a few layers of road dust and sweat. Then there was, and is, the bootblack, who has changed very little since I could first remember, though I do believe that he is more matter-of-fact now than he was formerly, when he was always a bluish boy with very shiny teeth.

Barbering was done on the farms in the yard on Saturday afternoon, free of charge, by the hired man or one of the neighbor boys. The haircut cost nothing and was worth just about that much. The one big feature of it was that the hair was off and not dangling in one's eyes. It was a proud moment when a country boy could swagger into a city shop and be served as if he were one of the men whose gold-littered mugs adorned the walls. Never after that proud moment could he submit to the clumsy torsion of a barber's hand, the hired man with the general utility scissors that they farm home had.

MONEY TALKS

By FREDERICK W. STAMM

Economical and Director of Adult Education University of Louisville

THE system of price and wage controls established by federal agencies is doing a good wartime job. The OPA and the War Labor Board have been working hard to keep prices and wages within reason. We have experienced a measure of inflation, but nothing like that we would have had if we had eliminated all government control.

The question now arises as to whether our system of federal price control and rationing will be able to combat inflation at the approach of victory or after the actual end of the war. By the time the war is over, the volume of accumulated excess purchasing power will be enormous. Savings accounts in banks all over the country are increasing monthly, and people are buying War Bonds by the billions. This is well illustrated by the over-abundance of our April War Bond drive and the fact that our retail stores are crying for more goods to sell. Never before have the American people had so much money to spend and so little merchandise available to spend it on. During the next several years, if the war lasts that long, the accumulated shortages of consumer goods will have created a staggering deferred demand. With the conversion of wartime production to peacetime production we may expect people to be in the market for millions of new automobiles, radios, refrigerators, electric irons, and machinery of all types. Money will be withdrawn from banks and spent for all types of goods. When we couple this with the growing exasperation on the part of businessmen, farmers, laborers, and the public in general over "inflationary" controls, it is likely there will be pressure for their removal from the American scene. Under such circumstances, there could easily develop an inflationary psychology sufficient to produce a serious increase in prices.

Many of us will remember that after the last war prices kept going up until 1920 and that we did not have a general price decline until late in 1920 and early in 1921.

If we are to escape the dangers of postwar inflation, it seems to me that we must continue governmental control for some time, even though some of us would like to see it abolished. At least, that is something to think about.

Solennized Here Apr. 17

Announcement was made this week of the marriage of Miss Fanny McGuire, attractive daughter of M. J. McGuire, of the Johns Creek road, on April 17, to Ensign Waido Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Smith, of Drott.

The ring ceremony was performed at 2 o'clock at the Methodist parsonage, the Rev. W. B. Garriot officiating. Mrs. Smith was carried in a navy suit with British tan accessories, her corsage being red roses. The only attendants were her sister, Mrs. Ellsworth Collins, and Mr. Collins.

Immediately after the ceremony they left for San Francisco, Calif., where Ensign Smith returned to his ship after a brief honeymoon. Mrs. Smith has returned to Kentucky for the duration of the war.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Had any news from George and his family since they moved away, Judge?"
"Yes, I had a letter from him just before yesterday. He's in Kentucky, at the family's home and they all like it there. George says he has a fine job in a beverage distillery. He brought out an interesting point in his letter I hadn't thought of before. He said that while the beverage distillers are working 24 hours a day, 7 days a week turning out war alcohol for the government for ammunition, tires, medical supplies and chemicals, they still are able to account for nearly a billion and a half dollars in taxes each year. That's an account of the fact the beverage distillery, though working 100% for the government, are still able to supply the public with beverages from the reserve stocks made during peacetime."
"Quite an unusual case, isn't it, Jim?"

RESTAURANT SCENE—100 (Restaurant food quality will be cut 50 per cent in the new rationing regulations.—News item.)

Customer—What's good here?
Waiter—Do you mean things we've got or haven't got?
Customer—Have you any cold cuts?
Waiter—Everything we've got is out, hot or cold.

Customer—Is there a specialty of the house tonight?
Waiter—Yes, sir. It's our All Out Blueplate.—Just what is an All Out Blueplate?
Waiter—We're all out of most everything on it.

Customer—Suppose you come back in a few days?
Waiter—What's the use?
Customer—There's quite a long list of things here.
Waiter—Yes, but we don't serve them.

Customer—What's the idea of putting them on the menu?
Waiter—Morale, I suppose.

Customer—Some of these things are marked with stars. What does one star beside a dish mean?
Waiter—I mean we ran out of that yesterday.
Customer—What does two stars mean?
Waiter—Two stars means that the OPA banned that dish from the rationing list.

Customer—What's the chances of getting these things with no stars beside them?
Waiter—Fifty-fifty.

Customer—I see you have a choice of soups.
Waiter—No choice; just a soup. We may have it and we may not. Customer—Is the tomato soup canned?
Waiter (amazed)—I should say it was. You've canned soup it's 12 cents EXTRA.

Customer—How is the fish today?
Waiter—Fish is the only product we see enough of to know much about. It looks good.
Customer—I think I'd like some sardines.

Customer—Don't be silly. Where do you think you are, at the RITZ!!!
Waiter—Maybe I'll just have some vegetables.
Customer—Maybe the vegetable situation changes from minute to minute. Eat up your spinach canned vegetables. I'm afraid you'd have to be satisfied with FRESH ones!

Customer—Oh well, I'll leave it to you. Bring whatever you can.
Waiter—Now you're talking sense.
Customer—And will you bring some catsup or chile sauce?
Waiter—OH, YOU MEAN YOU WANT THE $3 DINNER!

Churchill had one complaint against his doctors during his recent illness, R. Kooloff Jr. hears. They wouldn't let him smoke in the city gas tent.

IT IS quite a racket, after taking a look at Rivers and Maunula that the sport of the new variety of the game is being played for. The game is played for a goal of 100 points.

There is no reason why some of the various sports should come through with a fine heavy-weight parade.

For there is no comparing the quality of instruction in army and navy training for the past week with the other big rounds. Army, navy, marines, air force and coast guard now have a lot of the outstanding talent and, teaching the unformed, in a job and hook, feint and block, use of hands.

handle a right cross and the various other details that make up a pro boxer's trade.

They have been called in by the hundreds and while they may not all be the best instructors of all-time, they at least know the rudiments and most of the fundamentals.

Not So Many
Professional boxing is one of the hardest and most intricate of all sports—all competitions.

So there won't be many who will finish around the front rank. It isn't often that nature produces a heavy-weight champion—meaning one who has the size, the strength, the speed, the skill, the durability and the coordination required to top the list.

You get a Dempsey and a Tunney together with no one else close. You get a Tunney and Gene, although Gene the time was a light heavyweight.

Tunney's record is one of the ring classics. But he always thought that Bob Martin might have gone a long way if he hadn't figured in a motorcycle accident that left him with a badly injured head.

I have been told, by those who should know, that Martin suffered a blood clot that effectively wrecked his chance for coordination. But Bob was a fine-looking prospect when he came back from France in the middle of the war.

Tunney seven years before he was ready for Dempsey, then ranked as unbeatable. I doubt that any ring man ever worked as long, as hard and as smartly as Tunney managed to reach the top.

He was certainly no flaming ball of fire when he faced Soldier Jones, on the Dempsey-Carpenter $1,000,000 card.

Gene then was just another name on the program. He was never a natural athlete in the way of speed and power. But he more than made up for these defects by his determination to learn and keep in condition.

There was never any doubt about his size, his strength and his courage. A combination of head and heart is always something to bank on, so in the meanwhile, it took Gene Tunney to learn and keep in condition.

Crowds Will Be There
Sports' winter campaign, East and West, have shown the crowds will be present.

THE GARDEN

By JOHN S. GARDNER
Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics

THE VINE CROPS

These are cucumbers, the melons and the squashes. In most preparations they so much resemble one another that they can all be distinguished together.

Although a vine crop, the cucumber is not a true vine. It is a herbaceous plant with a creeping habit. The leaves are large and heart-shaped, and the flowers are yellow. The fruit is a bumpy, green, cylindrical vegetable. It is usually eaten raw, sliced into rounds or spears. It is also used in pickles and relishes. The vine is trained over a trellis or support. It is a cool weather crop and is usually planted in the spring. The soil should be rich and well-drained. The plants should be spaced 12 to 18 inches apart. The vines should be trained to grow in a single file. The fruit should be harvested when it is firm and has a green color. It should be stored in a cool, dry place. It will keep for several weeks.

Lacking mature complete fertilizer ("Victory Garden") should be broadcast. It should be 30 square feet, and worked in as far as the superphosphate, just above.

Two plants in a hill is a "perfect stand" and hill-spacing is as follows: cucumber, 2 by 3 by 4 by 4 feet; bush squash, 2 by 2 by 4 by 4 feet; running squash, 4 by 4 by 4 by 4 feet; cantaloupe, 2 by 3 by 4 by 4 feet; watermelon, 8 by 8 by 10 by 10 feet.

Vegetable are as follows: Cucumbers, Spaghetti, Giant, Gem, Chippendale, Pickling, Lemon Green, and others. Bush squash, White, and others. Running squash, Bush, and others. Cantaloupe, Bush, and others. Watermelon, and others.

Gift from WHAS Permits Doubling of Mountain 'Listening Centers'

The executive committee of the University of Kentucky board of trustees, in its session on May 20, has granted a financial gift to the University from the station, WHAS, of $10,000 to permit doubling of the number of mountain listening centers.

The impact of the war on many parts of the Kentucky mountains has increased the importance of the listening centers. These centers are now being placed in areas where the population is sparse and where the need for news and information is acute.

WHAS is now operating 41 listening centers in the mountains. The gift from the station will permit doubling this number to 82.

The present gift by WHAS to the listening center system is the second such contribution by that station in two years ago the same station presented the University with 40 radio sets, completely modernizing the system at that time.

Although the University of Kentucky listening centers are located in Floyd, Breathitt, Morgan, Magoffin, Leslie, Letcher, Knott, Clay, Clay and Martin counties, the new centers will be concentrated in Leslie and Knott counties.

There are the "Flying Minute Men". At first their submarine patrol was merely a "wing job". They spotted a submarine and were supposed to radio a shore base and then hover nearby waiting for a leader to come to the scene.

Finally the restriction was waived, and today there little submarines planes carry small bomb racks, bombs, and bomb sights.

Turner Mine No. 4 Commended On Several Safety Features

Commenting on the mine for a number of safety features, federal coal mine inspectors have suggested the elimination of smoking underground, safer blasting methods, and ventilating improvements to increase protection of life and property in the Turner No. 4 mine of the Sizemore Mining Corporation near McDowell.

The recommendations were offered to correct unsafe conditions and practices observed during a routine inspection of the mechanized-loading mine in January, according to a report made public by Dr. R. R. Sayers, director of the Bureau of Mines. Opened last July, the No. 4 mine employs 20 men and produces about 200 tons of coal daily.

Dr. Sayers commended the company and workers for ordering permittable electric cap lamps to replace open flame cap lamps worn at the time of the inspection. Commendable safety measures noted in the report included adequate clearance along the haulage tracks and adequate lighting, the use of permittable explosives for blasting, adequate timbering, and good supervision and discipline.

The federal proposals designed to supplement these measures called for frisk of explosives electrically in a permissible manner instead of with blasting caps and fuse, the use of cap pieces on all timber supports, and the wearing of protective hats and safety shoes by all workers.

The Bureau representatives also recommended that more air be circulated at the workface fans underground by tightening leaks in line trances and that crosscuts be driven not more than 90 feet apart along the main entry.

Although there was no evidence of methane, an explosive gas, in the No. 4 mine, the inspectors cautioned that methane often is liberated unexpectedly in so-called non-gassy mines. They suggested that the foremen and make regular tests for the presence of methane. The mine has a rating of non-gassy from the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals.

While there was little coal dust along the conveyor lines, the inspectors noted that the coal dust collector during operations was explosive. Accordingly, they recommended that the underground passages be rock-dusted and that the coal be wetted during cutting and loading operations.

Another suggestion was that the electric power lines be hung on insulators and not be permitted to lie on the floor at some points.

Company figures showed the mine had seven disabling injuries, including 26 lost man-days of work last year, according to the inspectors. Alphon V. Paul and Harvey P. Lendis.

a day to the individual miner. The board recommended, too, creation of a "body of appointed experts," organized as a commission to work with the administrator of solid fuels for war (Secretary Ickes) on various matters pertaining to coal mining but outside the fields of labor disputes and wages.

This commission, it said, might be able to assure the mine workers a greater benefit than they now enjoy from six-day operation of the mines. It added:

"This commission would be in a position to study each other's problems as the parties, or the board, might wish to refer to it. The commission would consider, on the part of the operators, matters of safety, and improvements in living conditions for the miners, and on the other hand, improved efficiency in mining operations, as well as the transportation and marketing of coal."

The labor members of the WLB vigorously discredited from the board's report the UMW's request for all wage increases, but approved all other actions involved in the order.

"The labor members submit that this request for a 25 per cent increase of the miners' justified because of the tremendous and uncontrolled rise in the cost of living during the past two years," they said in their majority opinion.

"Wages, vacation and indemnity are the prominent characteristics which marked recent attempts to regulate prices," they added. "At the same time the regulation of wages has been followed so rigorously that workers have been allowed a relatively small and numerically few wage increases. . . . The failure of price regulations makes imperative that wage regulation must be realistically applied."

In disallowing any straight-time wage increase, the majority stressed that "the miners have been averaging about 200 working days a year, and with increased operations would have a substantially larger annual income."

The majority opinion noted that "the miners' earnings on a straight-time basis in 1942 averaged $1,081 an hour, and commented that this was $211 higher than the hourly earnings paid in manufacturing industries as a whole, and 50 per cent above those paid in coal-mining.

'White Lightning' Supply Short As Result of Sugar Rationing

Lexington, Ky., May 25 — If you fret for lack of enough sugar for your morning coffee (if you have the coffee), you qualify to shed a sigh of relief for the poor moonshiner.

The rationing mountain fellow who in pre-rationing days manufactured his own "rough medicine" now has time on his hands.

Federal District Judge H. Church Ford noting the absence of illicit whiskey charges in his courts and traced the situation directly to the rationing of sugar, an essential ingredient of "white lightning."

Time was when the chief occupation of law-enforcement officers who served the mountain country was the tracking and seizing up of those crudely-made whiskey stills, and the raiding party sometimes nabbed enough sugar to sweeten the pot.

Great Salt Lake. Moonshiners bought their sugar by the hundreds of pounds, and of course, it now takes a lot of ration coupons to buy in such quantities.

Although much metal goes into the construction of moonshine stills, the metal shortage has played no part in curtailing operations of the No. 1 hill country industry. The stills are thrown together with old lead cans, wash tubs, barrels and a few other articles found in most any junk yard. In fact, there were instances during recent scrap metal drives when patriotic moonshiners contributed metal pieces easily recognized as still parts.

Any way, the erstwhile moonshiner can look the "revenooer" right in the eye these days—and that is a sweet privilege.

All-Synthetic Tire On Display Here

First all-synthetic rubber passenger car tire has arrived in Prestonsburg and is on display at the Sandy Valley Tire Service, local Goodyear dealer. The tire, known as the "S-3," is being manufactured by Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company factories in government-owned, but factory-operated plants.

This new tire is made from synthetic rubber known as GR-3 (government rubber-Strene) produced in government-owned, but factory-operated plants.

In making its "S-3" tire, Franklin W. Moore, of the Sandy Valley Tire Service, pointed out the best available material for the tread and the use of the pre-war Goodyear Deluxe line of tires, including low-s-trick Superweld tires.

high-carbon, steel wire, finest compounding materials, double breaker protection, compression design and its link grip tread design combining maximum tread wear, non-skid safety and quiet operation.

"This new tire," Mr. Moore pointed out, "should not be confused with the earlier War Time (WT) which was made of re-cycled scrap rubber. The new 'S-3' is built of all new synthetic rubber."

Frank Kadlac, Harlan county, realized $88 about feed coals on a stock of 117 hens during March.

Mrs. Forrest Preston, of Johnson county, makes an average of 80 pounds of cheese every year.

An increase of 30 per cent in poultry production this year is planned in Anderson county.

Expiration of Stamp J Extended, More Coffee Allowed Next Month

Red Stamp "J," worth 16 points of rationed meats and fats, will be good throughout June instead of expiring May 31.

In announcing this the Office of Price Administration said it took that action to avoid a rush on retailers on the Saturday preceding Memorial Day.

Stamp No. 24 will be good for one pound of coffee during the one-month period from May 31 through June 30.

OPA also announced that four new series of red stamps (a total of 64 points) will become valid at weekly intervals beginning May 30 and will be good for meat-fats purchases through June 30.

The extension of the validity of stamp J leaves K, F, O and H expiring May 31. Stamp J became valid Sunday.

The schedule of validity dates of the new red stamps, each good for 16 points and all expiring June 30, follows:

K, May 30; I, June 6; M, June 13 and N, June 20.

WHERE THE TRADE WINDS BLOW

The flow of the South Seas . . . Although he had been through the hell of Guadalcanal, survived seven attacks of malaria and seen his part of sinking Japs, Marine Lieutenant Austin White recently wrote his Cincinnati friends, Miss Janet Meeker, that he had bought a Count Fleet for $750. With all his unpleasant experiences memory-fresh, he could not resist that touch of patriotism in writing his article about the South Sea holdings.

"At one end of its 31-mile head it is a night-room house. There is a white thing in an area except by the trade winds where water is their come."

deated for release any transfer to the army enlisted reserve. About 150 are going into essential war jobs and the others are returning to farms.

The deadline for applying for release under the "over-38 rule" is July 1, and Selective Service officials said they expected a large number of applications to be made between now and then.

For a time the army was releasing men over 38 conditionally, but officials found that many were taking essential jobs for a short time and then quitting to go elsewhere that the regulations were changed.
