Water under pressure increases Farm Profits

BOOSTS EGG PRODUCTION
Plenty of water increases egg production. Water is wanted in winter, still greater increases are obtained.

INCREASES MILK PRODUCTION
Records show milk production increases 10 to 24% when cows have enough clean, fresh water.

GARDENS YIELD MORE
Get more produce from gardens by watering regularly—once a better quality, too. It's easy with water under pressure.

LIVING WILL BE BETTER

You can enjoy all of the conveniences of modern baths and kitchens with water almost at top where you want it.

WHY is this an economic fact? Because when you have running water on your farm, Mr. Farmer, labor costs go down at the same time that farm production goes up.

You know that the average milking cow needs from 200 to 300 pounds of water a day... that a flock of hens needs 80 pounds daily... and each hog requires about 16 pounds of drinking water a day.

The Government is authorizing the manufacture of greater quantities of devices that will aid in greater farm production, such as electric water pumps. The time is ripe to make plans to take advantage of this labor saving device on your farm, and we will be glad to help you with your plans.

In addition to pumping water for you automatically, there are many other ways in which electricity can help you increase production and cut costs.

WPB Drops 210 More Bars To Civilian Production

In a series of sweeping moves to facilitate the reconversion of industry and speed the flow of a wide variety of peacetime products into the hands of consumers, and to avoid price inflation on a buyers' scramble, WPB has dropped 210 more individual controls over industry.

These moves are further steps toward achievement of the fundamental WPB policy to make it easy for industry to help itself and to solve its problems without government assistance. J. A. Krus, WPB chairman, said in announcing the revocation of controls.

Limitation on the number of radios, refrigerators and trucks that could be manufactured for civilian uses are removed. Restrictions on a long list of other products were lifted and materials freed for consumer goods. Affected are metal furniture, domestic stoves and laundry equipment, electric fans, motorcycles, storage batteries, photographic film, shipping containers, oil-burning equipment and a large number of other products.

The press has urged fullest possible measure of labor-management harmony during the period of reconversion, and has appealed to American labor to continue its wartime no-strike pledge.

Industrial construction may now be undertaken without WPB authority. The relaxation of construction controls affects construction of factories, plants and other units used primarily for manufacturing, processing or assembling of goods or materials; construction of facilities owned by a manufacturer that are necessary for handling raw material or components, or for the distribution of its products to the retailer; and work on units not primarily used for industrial work if the construction is to prepare a part of the unit for such work.

With almost all controls over consumer durable goods abolished, WPB expects a sharp and growing increase in production of such items in the remaining months of the year. A time-table for the expected production of certain major items include the following predictions:

The possibility of approximately 3,000,000 new radio sets for civilian users by the end of the year.

About 25,000 electric fans probably will be made in the third quarter and something like 100,000 should be produced in the fourth quarter.

Non-commercial refrigerator production is expected to rise from between 125,000 and 150,000 units in the third quarter to about 700,000 units in the fourth quarter. The post-war demand is now estimated at six million units. However, it is expected that the needs of the military will remain high.

Some 300,000 electric washing machines are expected to be made in the fourth quarter compared to an expected production of 50,000 machines in the third quarter.

Much more film will be available for the public than in the past.

About 410,000,000 worth of metal office furniture and the same amount of household metal furniture should be made in the third quarter.

The production of domestic ranges should increase from an expected 100,000 in the third quarter to some 100,000 in the fourth quarter. Home electric ranges should appear on the market in fair quantities by December.

Removal of all ceilings on the production of passenger cars now permits automobile manufacturers to produce as many cars as their capacity permits.

With military cutbacks freeing nylon for civilian use, WPB considered action to allow the fiber to be immediately available for women's stockings for retail sale by Thanksgiving or at least by Christmas.

THE HEALTH OF YOUR LIVESTOCK

By BECHLER L. SCUTCHFIELD Licensed Veterinarian

1. Prevention of Diseases.

An important step in keeping your livestock healthy is the prevention of diseases among your animals. The familiar old saying, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," can also be applied to veterinary medicine. The most important methods of prevention of diseases are vaccination, feeding a well-balanced ration and avoiding sources of infection.

The vaccination of animals to protect them from certain diseases is probably the most important factor in modern prevention of diseases. The administration of vaccines to susceptible animals consists of injecting living or dead bacteria which produces an artificial immunity. Everyone realizes the value of vaccination for the prevention of diseases in human medicine, and many have begun to realize the value in veterinary medicine. A good example of this in the veterinary field is the vaccination of dogs for hog cholera. Practically all dogs should realize the value in vaccinating for hog cholera. Any animal properly vaccinated against a disease will not have that disease. Some of the diseases which vaccination has proven of value include: encephalomyelitis, anthrax, bang's disease, blackleg, shipping fever, hog cholera, swine erysipelas, rabies and distemper. It must be remembered that certain of these vaccines are living agents in that they contain living bacteria, such as bang's disease and equine encephalomyelitis. Therefore, any animal injected with these vaccines actually have a mild form of the disease. Sometimes this is an important factor in the prevention of disease as any recently vaccinated animal will carry the disease to another animal. It should be remembered that vaccination should be undertaken only when the animal is in a healthy condition. An animal which is a very poor risk for vaccination.

There are certain other disturbances of animals which are not produced by the above mentioned agents but rather by faulty nutrition. Protein, fats, carbohydrates, minerals and other food substances must be present in certain percentages in a balanced ration and also are necessary to keep your animals in top shape. Lack of certain vitamins play a large role in veterinary medicine. Aconemia in cattle is due to lack of vitamin A. Astoria in horses and black tongue in dogs have been proven to be due to lack of vitamin B. Rickets in lambs is due to lack of vitamin D and large percentage of sterility (inability to produce young) is due to lack of vitamin E. Therefore in prevention of diseases it becomes necessary for the animals to receive a balanced ration. Generally artificial feeding as practiced now deprives many animals of proper nutrition is dependent on the producer. Definitely care only as fed in the ration are sections is not a balanced ration.

Isolation and segregation must be considered as the most important factor in avoiding infection. Any animal which is infected with a disease that may be transmitted to another should be placed in a pen or stall well away from any other animals. Where a large number of animals are involved in an outbreak of disease, the correct procedure is to remove the well animals from the pens that they have been sharing with the sick animals and place them somewhere else. The wrong step usually taken by most people, is just the opposite, as they usually take out the sick animals and leave the well animals in the same pen or stall.

Always isolate or quarantine any newly purchased animals on the farm for two to four weeks as they should always be looked upon as disease suspects. Put the newly purchased animals in pens or stalls separate and some place away from those animals that have been on the farm. Very often people disregard this rule and lose all their animals. I have seen many farmers purchase a hog from a truck or community sales market and place the newly purchased animal into a pen of healthy hogs. In a few days the newly purchased animal developed a contagious disease and infected the healthy hogs as well. Consequently the farmer loses all of his hogs. Carefully watch the newly purchased animals during the isolation period for nasal discharges, coughing, loss of appetite, difficult breathing, diarrhea, constipation, paralysis or partial paralysis, vomiting, swelling of joints and disinclination to move.

Veterans and Unions May Clash on Job Issue

Labor unions and veterans' organizations seem to be headed for a clash over peacetime jobs, an Associated Press dispatch said Wednesday.

That opinion was expressed by many veterans in Washington who have worried over the employment problems that will come with the eventual return of 13,000,000 veterans. They don't want to be quoted by name, but they all say that legislation demanded by veterans groups never will be accepted willingly by organized labor and no acceptable compromise has been accepted.

When the showdown will come, no one can say, but it may be fairly soon over a bill Representative Knutson (R., Minn.).

This bill has the support of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion, while labor groups, by endorsing the Knutson bill, has agreed with its principles. These organizations have a combined membership of 3,000,000, and are growing so rapidly they may soon double in size.

Organized labor, with its 15,000,000 members is opposed to the measure. The Knutson bill would give veterans seniority credit for time spent in military service, and also credit for seniority for the six day and double time for Sundays.

Labor is opposed to the measure in going back to his old job, or he could be credited with this seniority package at his location at "Bald Eagle Rock," one-half mile south of Prestonsburg, Ky., on U.S. 28, and publishes this notice in accordance with state law. 9-2-45-pd.

Instruct the grand jury as to election law violations after each election. I have already arrived at the definite conclusion that $52,000 was spent, in which I myself took part to some extent, and I am certain the total will reach $100,000."
Commenting on his contest suit against Mr. Davidson, which he dismissed last Friday, Judge Stephens said: "I have dismissed my contest suit against Alex L. Davidson without one cent of cost to him, his friends, supporters or otherwise after we agreed on certain fiscal affairs which have existed in Floyd county for many years." Explaining that his candidacy for the office of County Judge was prompted by his desire to eliminate some abuses from the county's fiscal affairs, he enumerated the reforms or savings he desired in a statement of conditions:
1. Floyd is the only county in Kentucky wherein the magistrates "by subterfuge or some means," have placed themselves on a salary.

2. Floyd county has employed a county doctor at public expense, an act prohibited by law. Only one county in Kentucky—Jefferson—has such authority.
3. The fiscal courts of "more progressive" counties fix salaries of deputy sheriffs, and the Sheriff has a $5,000 legal salary, plus legal expenses. Boyd county has adopted this policy and, while that county does not collect nearly as much in fees as Floyd, many thousands of dollars in excess of the Constitution's salary limit are returned to the county treasury. "If this money were returned to the county treasury," he added, "many roads would be built in the rural sections and the people would not have to have a helicopter to get out."
"The only way to see these laws enforced," Circuit Judge Stephens declared, "is to keep hammering through publicity at the public mind."

D. B. Arnett, of Prestonsburg, was named foreman of the grand jury.

SELF-REGULATION
A sound practice...

In the brewing industry, as in any other business, a few retailers may not always operate according to proper standards. But the Kentucky brewing industry's Self-Regulation program provides a practical method of correcting infractions and of maintaining a high standard of operation among retailers.
In Self-Regulation active cooperation by retailers is maintained by the Kentucky Committee's field men, who regularly visit places selling beer and ale. They observe actual operating conditions, and, where necessary, make suggestions for improvement.
Such alertness plus the Kentucky Committee's cooperation with law-enforcement authorities assure reputable retailers, who sell beer and ale in wholesome surroundings.
