For hundreds of nights and thousands of anxious hours you worried about his safety... prayed for his return... asked only that he come back to you whole.

of any sum of money whatever. When the title was examined and found good by the attorneys for the land company, a survey made and the acreage ascertained, the land was bought and paid for, the title was then direct to the Cumberland Lumber Company. The new owner was anxious to get started into production of lumber and asked me to recommend some person to carry on logging operations, which I did, and I was again helping one of my constituents to have a job with the prospect of years of work. The job then shut down because they could not get machinery, such as tractors, trucks, skidders, etc. and remained idle for months while overhead expense continued. They then changed managers and started to produce lumber. They found that most of the lumber was being sold without their knowledge on the commercial market, and the proceeds were being deposited in bank—not to the credit of the Cumberland Lumber Company, but to the manager's own credit. I then advised Mr. Garrison to bring suit for possession of the property and for an accounting by the operator, which he did, and as a result of the law suit, the property was sold for $40,000 in cash and remitted by their lawyers to the Cumberland Lumber Company which left a total loss of about $8,000 on the entire Cumberland Lumber Company transaction.

I neither asked for nor received compensation or fee for anything I did. All accounts, bank statements, checks and correspondence were delivered voluntarily to the Mead Committee through its assistant counsel, Mr. Flanagan, just prior to the time I testified before the committee. At the time I did testify that all these documents were in the hands of the committee and as the counsel knows and has stated, they fully explain all the transactions showing no irregularities of any kind and a full accounting by me of all the funds I received. For this reason, I am at a complete loss to understand why the Mead Committee asked in their hearings Saturday morning to explain either through the chairman or counsel that the testimony given them on June 4 was in their files as were all the documents, checks, statements, and bank records. Not one cent was either paid in or received by me for compensation of any kind.

The newspapers have carried photographs of an endorsement on a certain check of one of these companies purporting to bear my name, signed as president of the Cumberland Lumber Company. I have never been president of the Cumberland Lumber Company and certainly would not sign my name as such. I do not know who did it but I did not. I did not endorse that check "A. J. May, President." The payee of the check was the Cumberland Lumber Company and it was placed to their credit. I advanced funds for the Cumberland Lumber Company on several occasions and the check for $13,647 was reimbursement to me for such advances for which I have deposit slips. A complete audit of all my dealings with the Cumberland Lumber Company is being made and will be submitted to the press.

Meanwhile, the following developments took place during the week in the course of the Mead Committee investigation:

Last Friday, Maj. Gen. L. H. Campbell, Jr., wartime chief of army ordinance, complained that Congressman May put "special pressure" on him to help the Illinois firm. "It was unfair to me," he said, adding that he "got red under the collar" over Mr. May's insistence.

Saturday, Edward Schaffer, of the General Accounting office, told the Mead committee that the name of A. J. May appeared as endorser on checks and drafts from the munitions firms to a total of $18,039.07. One such check in the amount of $13,647 from the Erie Basin Metal Products Company, Schaffer testified, bore the individual endorsement of A. J. May in addition to the signature of the company. It was cashed, he said, at The First National Bank, Prestonsburg.

These funds, Schaffer said, were advanced for lumber which, as of last April when he examined the company's books, had not been delivered. The Cumberland Company, he testified, later returned $23,000 to Erie Basin.

L. W. Fields, Whitesburg, told Senate war profits investigators Monday that Congressman May promoted a lumber deal in 1943 on representations that he had the proper contracts for war contracts and that "we both draw big salaries."

The testimony, before the Mead War Investigating committee, Monday, that Congressman May promoted a lumber deal in 1943 on representations that he had the proper contracts for war contracts and that "we both draw big salaries."

Fields identified a letter to him from May, dated Oct. 3, 1943, which represented the Congressman as putting up money for the lumber deal and being "in position to lose more money than anybody" if it should fall.

I have already paid $10,000 on the purchase price," the letter said, "and expect to put up another ten thousand dollars including purchase of machinery."

Secretary of War Patterson testified Tuesday that Congressman May called him three times, the first in March, 1943, to enlist his aid for the company, but he said emphatically that the calls had nothing to do with the awarding of army contracts.

Patterson said May asked him once to cancel a proposed cutback in production schedules of one of the Illinois firms, Batavia Metal Products, Inc., and again to help the company obtain an "E" award. On both occasions he intervened on behalf of the company, the first time because the company was making badly needed shells and the second time because he believed the production award was "thoroughly deserved," Patterson said.

But the Secretary said he turned down a third bid for help from May last September when May, who is chairman of the powerful House Military Affairs Committee, called him over to his office to protest against a War Department order holding off further government payments to the company.

"There is not a word of truth in that," the Secretary said. "Congressman May never spoke to me about an awarding of contracts or any other contract. It is idle gossip and utterly untrue."

Dr. and Mrs. O. G. Pennington left Monday for his father's home, near Bowling Green, Ky., after hearing news of their young son, Gary, & ill there of strep throat.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Campbell and Mrs. Josephine Leake, of Pontiac, Mo. and Mrs. Eugene Bourland and Mrs. Leola Emma Baldrige, of Cravens, Tex., have been Mrs. W. A. Dingus, of Cravens, Mo., for several days.

WIRE YOUR FARM
DOLLARS & SENSE

ELECTRICITY can work wonders for you and your family, can bring more profit to your farm, but it can only do so to the degree that you plan ahead. You must plan to provide large enough wires for it to follow and plenty of outlets for you to take it from the wires and put it to work. That is a job for a good electrical contractor—a man who has the know-how of handling electricity, so that you get an ample supply and that it comes to you safely.

Electricity on the farm makes available a low-cost dependable form of energy. If wisely and liberally used, it will save labor, increase production and make farm life more enjoyable.

Electricity is ideal for producing light, heat, cold and POWER. It is safe, dependable, and the cost is low.

Use Electricity to automatically operate farm and home equipment. The more liberally it is used, the lower its unit cost. The Electric Way is the Modern Way—Always.

Neighboring TOWNS

Are Calling MORE THAN EVER . . .

If you've experienced a delay recently on a call to a nearby town, you may have wondered why, since most of your calls to more distant places are going through promptly. Here's the answer:

Between nearby towns and cities, folks are calling more than ever . . . one-fifth more calls today than during even the peak of the wartime load. The resulting occasional congestion will be relieved as rapidly as materials can be secured and additional circuits provided.

Washington Writer Tells of Hackworth Views, Personality

GREEN H. HACKWORTH
Lives peacefully together.

Editor's note: The following, from the Courier-Journal, is reprinted here, the better to acquaint our readers with a man whose distinguished career does this, his home county, honor.

By DONIE CARMACK
Courier-Journal Washington Staff Writer

Washington, Feb. 25—Even in 1938, when war was breaking over the horizon in defiance of treaties and law Green H. Hackworth, American member of the new United Nations Court of International Justice, was reaffirming his belief that "the pendulum must, it would seem, ultimately swing in the direction of the sanctity of treaties and of international law and order."

The international jurist and legal adviser to the State Department, who has sat in on all United States foreign policy since 1928, was making a speech at the University of Virginia on peaceful settlement of international disputes. He quoted Will Rogers, who said, "The trouble with Austria was that she was not so close to her," to point up his own realistic view that "as long as nations and people are engaged in differences with each other, international differences are never at an end."

But the Kentucky-born jurist, with a 30-year career in the State Department, has had an engaging faith in arbitration of disputes wherever there is a will to find a way. With the majority of his colleagues, he was pledged to keep the peace, his election marks the historic entry of the United States into a world court of justice, one of the five main organs of the United Nations. Though he was judge on the old Permanent Court of International Justice at The Hague, the United States was never a member.

An ardent liberal in international law, Hackworth advocates the development of it to keep step with the events to which it must be applied—and out of which new phases of it must emerge.

"Although the changing scene of international affairs has greatly widened," he wrote, "nevertheless international writers still repeat familiar rules of peace and war that arose in an age when the shore could be reached at most at a distance of three times the range of cannon, when all the known land was capable of permanent occupation and when oil and even coal were not thought of as necessities of war."

International law, he continued, cannot remain static. It rules to govern the conduct of nations as stated in terms too sweeping or too far in advance of the time, nations will flout them, even as they flout an archaic rule.

On the bright side of the international ledger, Hackworth holds that arbitration of disputes at least provides a possibility that amicable adjustment might be reached, that airplay of common sense public opinion a chance to assert itself and, finally, that the mere passing of time would be a zest for war. The world often has pointed to our unfortified borders of nearly 4,000 miles to the north and nearly 2,000 to the south as unexcelled examples of how na-servant was preferred over the small salary of the government with its "honorable" position. He is now in the family home, 1200 1/2 St. Louis, Mo. He has spent his life in the State Department.

By statute, he created all treaties and other international agreements, and especially the League of Nations, and the United Nations. The department's register devotes a full page just to listing the legal adviser's duties.

The new position now in London, Hackworth will leave the Queen Elizabeth Wednesday if the United Nations conference adjourns by then. He and his wife, the former Clara Christy of Huntington, W. Va., who attended the San Francisco Conference with him, will move to The Hague when the tribunal convenes in the old court's quarters, probably the middle of next summer.

Their son, Earl C. Hackworth, also a lawyer in the State Department, but not in the legal division his father headed, will accompany them to the court's opening.

The Hackworths live in Chevy Chase, Md. The judge, say people who know him, is quiet and reserved, but with a dry wit. His diversions are golfing, reading and concert. He's a great admirer of Lauritz Melchior—but he has had little time for them, Mrs. Hackworth said. It usually was 8 p.m. when he arrived home from the State Department.

His wife and joy, she added, are grandchildren Bobby, 8, and Rickey,

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

HOW TO KEEP 'EM ON THE FARM

Floyd County Times:

Far be it from me to tell you how to run your business, but I am sure you are able to run my own satisfactorily. But it always seems as if the other fellow can see at least a few good angles for us to work or take advantage of. I don't know what I was thinking of, I don't know what I discarded the idea.

The spirit of your paper always relays the feeling that you and your staff are interested in the veteran. So, I thought I would approach you with this idea which someone should work if it is possible. As I am a veteran myself this might have the odor of selfishness to you and I am partially so. On the other hand, it seems to be of mutual benefit. That is, I suppose you might need an ear.

As our county is largely a mining section with its farming thrown in as a sideline, it is in a position to have taken up mining with at least some farming in mind. In the neighborhood now with unsettled conditions in the mining industry, many all miners, veterans also, will be themselves actually doing a lot of farming. As you know, I am already, you can also see that one just taking up this mode of living is going to be handicapped greatly by the fact that he has no one to turn to. I know, everything seems to be harder to start than it is in the past. The case money is involved which more than likely should be spent for food. The soldiers, who could likely get the Red Cross to tide them over if they were forced but they would like to be self-supporting, naturally.

Under the above conditions, our veteran, if he wishes or is forced to take up farming as his chief means of support, will be forced to forego an advantage of one thousand eighty dollars, your minimum which the C. I. Bill of Rights allows a veteran for on-the-farm training. He will be compelled to do this unless some one offers him the Veterans' Administration for their rights, for the on-the-farm training program. I do not doubt most any veteran can qualify for this training.

This particular county so far has been denied the benefits of the veteran under the program due to the fact that this region is not considered an agricultural section. You do have a County Agent, Home Demonstration worker, stock market, etc. I would like to see if you could allow our privileges of military assistance and skilled instructors under the C. I. Bill of Rights. I would like to ask you should our boys have to leave their home county, relatives and friends, to go to some other place, just to qualify for benefits given by Congress to farmers? Aren't we able to do something about this? Our fathers raised us by farming. Should those who wish to form be forced to leave Floyd county and to an agricultural region that perhaps is crowded and needs very little in the way of skilled farmers' instructions? Don't you think our section needs the money. The instructors and scientific farmers that the on-the-farm training under the C. I. Bill of Rights is bound to bring?

Inspectors Suggest Hazard Elimination At Clear Cr. Mine

Improved ventilation, elimination of ignition hazards, and better handling of explosives are practices are recommended for the 800-ton-a-day Clear Creek mine of the H. H. Edick Brothers Mining Co. of Hattiesburg, a federal coal mine inspection report released recently by the Bureau of Mines. This Floyd county development employed 241 men at the time of inspection a few weeks ago.

Ventilation was inadequate in some sections and the air currents were not being carried to the working face by fans. Inspectors J. Marron and William J. Buswark reported, because room crooked work had closed, line brackets were not used, and the means to detect the working faces were not provided. They recommended that these and other substantial ventilation conditions be corrected.

Proposing that smoking and the use of open lights be banned in the mine, and that several automatic devices be adopted to prevent electric arcs and sparks. Inspectors Marron and Buswark also suggested measures to help prevent and to correct mine fires.

Timbering should be improved by the prompt use of safety posts, removal or support of unsafe roof and frequent roof tests during the working shift. Inspectors also recommended that the use of safety belts, and the use of safety boots, and the use of safety goggles, and the use of safety helmets.

Employment Increase At Lacey Mine Creates Need for Added Safeguards

Production and employment have increased during government inspections of the Central Elkhorn Coal Company's No. 3A mine, near Lacey, necessitating additional safeguards for life and property, a Federal coal mine inspector reported to the Bureau of Mines following a recent inspection of the mine.

The mine employed 360 men and averaged 1400 tons of coal daily when it was examined. It is now being worked by 400 men and 300-ton output daily in June, 1945.

Although Inspector Shaw commended several recent improvements, he suggested several supplementary safeguards and urged that the mine be operated in compliance with Bureau standards for "gassy" mines. These standards called for more extensive ventilation, gas tests before and after blasting and before and during the operation of non-permissible electrical equipment. Underground, pre-shift mine examinations and a gas sampling underground.

Shaw recommended installation of a split system of ventilation with additional air-courting devices to eliminate the possibility of a gas pocket, and better ventilation of newly-adapted systematic timbering rules, formation of a double-shield system, use of gas protection, after underground transportation of blasting supplies, and removal of 200-Tons of haulageways and ample shelter for elimination of some gas-prone haulage practices, fuse protection and other electrical safeguards, removal of electrical equipment, weekly examination of air courses, and removal of old, unsafe and mine-rescue procedures.

The inspector commended the installation of an additional ventilating fan in a drift-off housing on surface and the installation of a larger fan for the No. 1 fan. Other recommended improvements included adequate cap pieces in timbering, frequent testing of haulageway roof, use of approved installation of surface trolley wires, screen and removal of the fan belt and fans, adoption of a positive personal safety system, use of safety helmets, adding clothing by brakemen, formulation of company safety rules, removal of old, unsafe and mine-rescue procedures, and the use of a daily record of dangerous conditions observed underground.
