DOTY

Names of streams in this and nearby counties usually have a story, few of which have been told. M. D. Collins, Jr., of Jackson, traces the naming of Big Doy in this county and Little Doy in Kentucky. Little Doy empties about one mile above the mouth of Caney Creek, east side of the mountain. Big Doy is little more than a mile long, and Big Doy is about two miles long. The river between the two is called Doy Gap. Near this gap there are two objects which are well known to the older citizens of the county. Two black sugar trees stand, not very far from Doy Gap.

CASH AWARD WON BY LOCAL TRAPPER

Dennis Morgan's Mink Pelt Earns Award for Pelt Handling in Sears 18th National Fur Show

Read How You, Too, May Win an Award as High as $1,000.00 This Year!

Proving again that "better pelts handling pays," this local trapper got an extra $500 in cash, one of the Daily Awards in Sears 18th National Fur Show, and, besides, a chance to share in the big major awards!

What the trapper did, you too can do, whether or not you sell your furs through Sears' Raw Fur Marketing Service. For Sears Fur Show offers, this season, a total of 342 different cash awards, including the First Award of $1,000.00 for the best handled pelt of all.

Pay You 3 Ways First, every award is in addition to the cash you get for your pelts. Second, Sears can be depended on to obtain for you or price. Third, even if you don't win an award, careful handling enhances the value of your furs.

Morgan Again Wins Sears' Daily Award

Dennis Morgan, well-known trapper from Germantown, again is a winner of the daily award for correct pelt handling in the Eighteenth National Fur Show conducted by the Raw Fur Marketing Service of Sears, Roebuck and Company.

Morgan's carefully handled mink pelt brought him one of the $5 daily awards, as a result of its being judged one of the finest received at Sears Raw Fur Marketing Station in Memphis on Jan. 4, and in addition, entitled Morgan to consideration for one of the major awards, including $1,000 first award, to be selected at the final judging, which will be held in April.

Sealed bids will be received by the Floyd Fiscal Court until Jan. 25 at 10 a. m., on rebuilding the swinging bridge located at the mouth of Spewing Camp, two miles east of McDowell on Left Beaver Creek. Plans and specifications may be procured at the office of the County Judge. The Court reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Announcement

In order to avoid any misunderstanding in the next election for county officials, I hereby announce my intention to enter the race for Magistrate, District No. 1, Floyd county, subject to the action of the Democratic party. This may seem unusual as the race does not occur until the fall of 1948, but I do this with full respect to the would-be candidates for the same office and in fairness to the voters.

In the eyes of professional politicians this office may be considered small but I feel that the office of the Magistrate and the duties of said office are of the very gravest importance and justify plenty of time for the voters' consideration.

Your servant,
JESSE WALLLEN

FOR STATE SENATOR

In announcing my candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Senator from the 29th Senatorial district (Floyd, Knox and Martin counties), I wish to assure the people of these three counties upon my record.

During the term I have served you as your State Senator I have never missed a Senate rollcall at either the 1944 or 1946 sessions of the Legislature. I introduced and helped to enact the compulsory Workmen's Compensation bill for protection and aid of thousands here enjoying no such benefits; and in all school matters I voted 100 per cent for all beneficial school legislation.

I have served the people as best I could and gladly submit my record for your investigation. I will appreciate the support of you all. (Pol. adv.)

Floyd County Times

OFFICIAL ORGAN FOR FLOYD COUNTY, KY.
Published Every Thursday by
PRESTONSBURG PUBLISHING CO.
Entered as second class matter June 18, 1921, at the postoffice at Prestonsburg, Ky., under the act of March 3, 1879.

THIS IS WORTH A TRIAL

NONE has made so bold as to venture an estimate of the annual damage created in Floyd county by forest fires. And no responsible person will, for there are too many imponderables that enter into the matter.

What happens over the 176,348 acres of timberland in this county as fire sweeps the hillsides is a story that cannot be told. For it is as much a thing of the future as of the present. The observer can easily see that valuable timber is being destroyed, that wildlife is being burned alive or harried from native shelters, that the "scorched earth policy" is one of intense destruction. But none can estimate the damage that will remain over the years from such destruction—the lasting damage to soil through erosion and flood or the continuing loss of vegetation by death in the flames or by retarded growth.

As vastly magnifiable as all this is, however, there now is presented to the fiscal court of Floyd county this one fact from which guess-work has been extracted:

At a cost not to exceed $1763.48 per year, or one cent for each acre of timberland in the county, real and effective fire protection may be had.

Senate Bill No. 111, enacted at the 1912 session of the State Legislature, enables any county to co-operate in this way with the Division of Forestry.

Such co-operation, already effective in some counties of the state, is proving, as it is told, a very real deterrent to forest destruction by fire. In this county it would mean that a fulltime fire warden would be appointed at an adequate salary, fire towers would be built at strategic points, modern firefighting equipment would be made available and firefighting units would be established over the county and the men who compose these units paid for the time spent in fighting woodland blazes.

To this $1763.48 Floyd county would contribute the federal government would add twice as much—and state and national funds in addition would supply whatever other sum is needed each year to do the job right.

This, we are assured, would in no wise smack of the pitiful mockery of fire protection that was made a few years ago, when a forest district comprising a small portion of the county was established, then, to all intents and purposes, forgotten. This plan provides for the fulltime employment of a fire warden whose sole business it will be to stop forest fires.

The subject of forest fires quite appropriately claimed an important part of Circuit Judge E. P. Hill's instructions to the grand jury here recently. Judge Hill, a conservationist with thought to the future of the county, expressed concern for youngsters now in school who are to live and draw their sustenance from these hills, years hence.

This is a subject the fiscal court can act appropriately, and more effectively than any other group of citizens, give attention.

The fiscal court spends the county's money on roads and bridges and other necessities of community life. Its members consider their respective districts' needs in spending this money as wisely as possible. Heretofore, they have not spent money in this work of conservation, a work that vitally concerns every district of the county, because no effective plan has been presented to them.

Now, with such benefits offered at low cost, let us hope the court adds forest fire protection to the county-sponsored projects intended for the benefit of all citizens.

The least that can be said for such a measure is—it is worth a trial.

With some of his neighbors, he started in pursuit of his brother. They overtook him in what is known as Doby Gap. Reece discovered his pursuers and seeing his inability to escape, sat down behind a large hollow tree, apparently to rest, and pushed the money up in the dooryard or rotten part of the tree. He denied any knowledge of the money when searched by his brother, but his brother, having seen him sit by the tree, found the money in the dooty of the tree. Andy did not mention his brother, but reprimanded him in a nice way. Forever after, these creeps have been known as Big and Little Doby.

WERE IN THE CLEAR

Prestonsburg's schools last week read without the least bit of dismay of a Sturgis, Ky., pastor raising the well-known ruck because the schools there are aiding and abetting lotteries through school children.

Time was when this description by the Sturgis minister of conditions there applied here:

"The students sell chances on school premises and from house to house on every conceivable item from pies, cakes and candies to turkeys."

The people down Sturgis-way, we are told, are not taking the minister's complaints seriously. So what is their reaction, it's been done for 40 years, the money thus raised has been spent for the schools and could not have been raised otherwise. And, besides, there isn't a case on record of anybody taking up gambling as a result of selling chances.

"THE TIMES has never been right clear on this matter. It hasn't developed any definite ideas about this business of taking a chance. Since Biblical days folks have been gambling in some form or another. The old game of casting lots is mentioned back then, and folks have been laying their chances, their money or their ambitions on the line ever since. One thing we are clear about and that is this:

It is illegal to gamble, in a game of chance or otherwise, in one fashion, it should be illegal in any other.

We develop a slow "burn" which is fined or jailed for winning a quarter or so in a penny-ante game while the big boys get by while winning and losing hundreds, even thousands. We feel like rebuking the agencies who see the law cracking down on the big street carnivals to operate with impunity every skin game the humanity of man has conceived.

And why, may we ask, is it unlawful to operate a slot machine, our own hand that it is, while a patch board that will shadow-eyes you dizzy as persona grata? You don't have to be any older to take a punch at the elusive lucky number than to pull the bandit's arm."

Oh, well . . . This gambling business is one that takes you way back. If you want to get down to the hair-splitting stage, you can call every man in business, in politics, in the professions a gambler. Even life itself, they tell us, is a gamble. The schools here have taken the right step, however you feel about it.

NEWS FOR THE FARMER

To aid farmers in maintaining the fertility of Kentucky soil, $7,451,000 of the proposed 1947 Agricultural Conservation Program funds have been allocated to the state this year. Mr. D. B. Rouse, State Director of the Production and Marketing Administration, announced this week.

As in past years, these funds will be used to repay a part of the farmers' costs for approved conservation practices on their farms during the year or to furnish certain materials, such as lime and phosphate, used in carrying out these practices.

Soil conserving and soil building practices for which the funds may be used were selected from among those recommended by eleven farm-ownership committees in the state-wide conservation program for 1947.

These include: spreading of ground limestone on farm lands; applying phosphate to eligible cropland and legumes; applying potash to grasses and legumes; seeding winter cover crops; turning under green manure crops; establishing or improving permanent pasture; contouring stockwater dams and ponds; planting row crops on the contour; terracing and ditching land to reduce erosion and conserve moisture; draining wet land; planting forest trees and harvesting needed legume seeds.

Each farmer in Kentucky will be able to qualify for assistance in carrying out any of these approved practices needed on his farm. To insure an equitable distribution of the funds, a farm allowance is set up for each farm in the state. This allowance is based on the cropland and non-crop pasture in the farm. Specifications for each approved practice and maximum rates of payment for 1947 have already been determined and may be obtained from county ACP officers.

While farmers have carried out many soil conserving practices in the conservation program of recent years, only a start has been made in the total job that needs to be done. According to recent estimates of soil conservationists, the following are some of Kentucky's most urgent conservation needs:

(1) A basic application of 16 million tons of lime to approximately three million acres of farm land. Even after this basic application, farmers would need to spend one and a half million tons of lime annually to maintain soil fertility in the state. Or the state's entire cropland acreage, all but about two million acres need lime.

(2) Application of 183,000 tons of phosphate annually. In terms of 20 percent phosphate material, this would mean an annual application of nearly a million tons.

(3) Application of approximately 90,000 tons of potash annually.

(4) Seeding of winter cover crops on approximately 15 million acres planted each year; to cultivated crops and on about three million acres of trespassing sod.

This was in reply to Clark's contention that in the recent coal mine strike, Lewis and the UMW had persisted in the policy of "continued defiance toward the law, the courts and the rights of the people of the United States."

Justice Frankfurter broke in the argument at one point to say that it was "important" to determine whether, assuming that Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough had no right to issue a restraining order, the union could "float such an order" after it was issued.

Joseph A. Padway, counsel for the American Federation of Labor, and the union contended that Judge Goldsborough's court lacked jurisdiction to entertain the government's request for the restraining order.

When Frankfurter asked for more argument on the point he raised, Padway said he had not had time to present further argument on this phase.

Hopkins argued for the union with interesting gestures, that the government erred in citing the defendants for both criminal and civil contempt. He further declared it was not until Dec. 4, the date Judge Goldsborough imposed the fine, that the defendants were told the specific charges against them.
