A CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION? (By A. B. GUTHRIE) (Author of "The Big Sky") No reason actually exists for regarding a constitutional convention with misgivings. The "fears" expressed by certain reactionary leaders have the ring of propaganda. By no other means can Kentucky so quickly and surely square governmental structure with progress than through convention. It doesn't do to say that what was good enough for pappy is good enough for us. The fact is what was good enough for one generation is never good enough for the next. Good roads, better schools, street elevators, airplanes and airports, gasoline engines and radios, regulation of public utilities—all these advances and scores besides have come about because people realized that improvements and conveniences were possible—desirable no matter if pappy didn't have the benefit of them. It seems to me, however, that a deeper point is to be found in this professed uneasiness of the gentlemen who shy away from a convention. Implicit and sometimes explicit in their position is a fear of the people. They act as if all the smart Kentuckians were dead, as if there wasn't enough courage and honesty and honor, to execute a workable constitution. Leave it to the dead, they say: the living can't be trusted. We say rubbish. We say that what dead Kentuckians have done, live ones can do—and can do with due attention to developments undreamed of by deceased elders. We aren't afraid of the people, and we aren't afraid, as are these backward-looking men, that a new constitution will be a case of out of the frying pan into the fire. The idea of special interests dominating the convention and "destroying" the constitution is ridiculous. In the first place, the voters at large elect representatives to a constitutional convention—and we don't think they'll elect dishonest or stupid ones. In the second place, the voters will have opportunity to decide, after the new constitution is drawn, whether to adopt it or retain the old one. Where lies any danger there? Through the decades Kentucky has got along pretty well through a democratic, or, if you prefer, a representative system of government. We say it will get along all right that way in the future much better than if the hopes and live needs and live people must defer to dead times and dead decisions and delegates long underground.

RENEWAL OF FAITH SEEN CURE FOR PSYCHIC ILLS "Nothing would do more to keep people from needing the help of psychiatrists than a renewal of intelligent, vital, personal religion," declares Harry Emerson Fosdick in The Reader's Digest for July. A religion built on faith in the purpose of one's existence, and devotion to persons and causes outside oneself as a primary condition of a healthy life, the author says. Citing the fact that there are today 4,011 "accredited psychiatrists" in the United States, Dr. Fosdick says more disordered lives being produced than they can possibly deal with. His solution is not to increase the number of psychiatrists but to keep people from needing psychiatry. "An inner serenity," which the author holds necessary to true religion, is impossible to many, he believes. "Multitudes today have no place inside themselves where, in a noisy and turbulent world, they can calm down and be quiet. Turmoil without tranquility is their life, and the emotional effect of such peaceless living is disastrous." Excellent character studies are as unfortunately, is not an impractical, but an indispensable factor in emotional and mental health. Self-respect is another. The admission of failure gives a person an excuse to evade all responsibility. But true religion "annihilates that alibi to smithereens," the author contends. Some psychiatrists are suspicious of religion, even hostile to it, because in many cases it produces silly, irrational neuroses over monistic peccadilloes, threatens people with penalties for breaking nonetical codes, and thus causes complexes for which there is no sound reason." But the cure for such "petty, perverted religion" is not Irrigion, Dr. Fosdick says, but "great religion."

Liberty No. 2 Mine Adds Almost Score Of Safety Measures. To supplement nearly a score of recent safety improvements in the Liberty No. 2 mine at Samson, the county a federal coal mine inspector has proposed further precautionary measures in a report released by the Bureau of Mines. Operated by the Floyd Etchison Coal Company, the mine employed 52 men in the daily production of 700 tons of coal when inspected under the Federal mine safety code in June by Russell Shaw. Recent safety improvements included the removal of coal dust from the tipple and haulageways, effective rock-dusting, purchase of equipment to slay coal dust during cutting operations, additional air-lock doors, gas-safety examinations for hoarders, warning devices for each locomotive, discontinuance of pushing empty trips from the surface to underground sections, guards for the trolley wires at man-trip stations, a cut-out switch for each branch trolley circuit, underground telephone service, added mechanical safeguards, fire-fighting equipment at strategic underground locations, and the discontinuance of smoking in the mine. To strengthen generally good operating conditions, Inspector Shaw recommended adherence to the timbering standards, sufficient timber to protect face workers against roof falls, safer methods of transporting explosives and detonators underground, substantial incombustible stoppings in crosscuts between main intake and return airways, air-lock doors or attendants for single doors, shelter holes or suitable clearance at main haulage switches, further safeguards for high-powered pumps, frames and trolley wires, frame-grounds for certain electrical equipment in the No. 4 section, and overhead protection for locomotives and the track mounted face electrical equipment, other than the new drill.

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY FOLKLORE By GORDON WILSON, Ph.D. Western Kentucky Teachers' College Bowling Green, Ky.

BOWSER AND THE WILDCAT

HERE is a yarn right from Fidelity, one that Colonel Major of the Columbia Broadcasting Company asked me to send to him. Al Blackberry had a best dog in his neighborhood; I know, because Al said so, every time he had a chance and sometimes when he had to make a chance. Bowser was the name of the great dog. Just what kind of a dog he was I cannot say; I doubt whether Bowser himself knew how many strains of shepherd, collie, foxhound, bloodhound, terrier, and plain dog he contained in his ornery body. But ancestry aside, Bowser was what all hunting dogs would like to be.

As all my influential friends know, I am a Democrat by birth, but I do not disown nor condemn my son for his belief in politics. His father, the late M. V. Meade of Pike Ky. (Hi Hat) and also his grandfather, T. S. Meade, his uncle, H. P. Meade, prominent merchants of Hi Hat, and S. T. Meade, another uncle, McDowell, also merchants, are all Republicans. His father, M. V. Meade, was postmaster and merchant at time of his death.

Foster was only five years of age at the death of his father. His mother, Eva Gibson, a first-class teacher in the Knott county schools, had a young man in the way and thought so. So let's all forget politics and give strength and ability of this young man and the handicaps he has had in life without an earthly father to assist or scold. His opponent is Doug Hays, McDowell, Ky., a man old enough to expire.

Sincerely, EVA MEADE HALL, (Pol. adv.) McDowell, Ky.

Entered as second class matter June 18, 1927, at the postoffice at Prestonsburg, Ky., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Who's Splatching the 'Scutcheon Now?

WHAT'S the world, more particularly Kentucky, coming to? Opponents of a new Constitution for Kentucky infer that the state which now has four native sons on the Supreme Court of the United States cannot or will not supply men capable and honest enough to do a good job of re-writing the Constitution and that its people as a whole are incapable of judging, after it is written, if it is a good or a bad job.

Which is another reason why THE TIMES would like to see the matter put to test: a new Constitution written and submitted to the people for approval or rejection.

If the people of this state haven't the sense to compare the present Constitution with the revised version a Constitutional convention would produce, and then choose the bad and keep the good—it don't make no difference, now.

This interests Us

OUR contemporary, The Statesville Independent, and Highway Commissioner Watkins engaged, during the recent primary election campaign, in an interesting exchange of views on the matter of road-building as affecting Maguin county. At the risk of appearing to judge the scrap from one of the principal corners, we give the victory to The Independent on points at least half of which are correct. In particular, concerned the Statesville-Prestonsburg highway. This is the route that Mr. Watkins on one occasion was quoted as saying would be surfaced before he left office (a quote that he, incidentally, later denied). It is the route that remains unsurfaced while the state is spending above $40,000 to re-surface a section of Route 40 between Paintsville and Sulphur Springs—a 104-mile project on a road that already is one of the best in Eastern Kentucky.

What interests us most was Mr. Watkins' allibi for the state's failure to backstop the Prestonsburg-Sal-spring road. This, as published in The Independent, was to the effect that the road was of too recent construction to be strong enough to sustain or justify surfacing.

All the more interesting does this statement become when it recalled that Mr. Watkins approved surfacing of the route to David, which connects with this same Prestonsburg-Sulphurville road, although the David road was not more than three years old when surfaced while the main Middle Creek route dates back to WPA days.

Worth Considering

DISCUSSED at the district Bankers' Association meeting here recently was a matter that was not strictly banking but which could mean money in the bank to this and other sections of Kentucky.

The Jefferson county forester explained what is being done within a few miles of the city of Louisville. In brief, he talks about the county forest preserve. Such bonds are an indebtedness only against the forest holdings themselves and are amortized only through sale of forest products.

This law empowers a fiscal court to issue bonds for purchase or establishment of other forms of a county forest preserve. Such bonds are an indebtedness only against the forest holdings themselves and are amortized only through sale of forest products.

Bonds for this purpose may be issued without approval of popular vote, inasmuch as they are not a liability against the taxpayers.

Acting under such authority, the forester said, the Jefferson fiscal court established the Jefferson county forest preserve.

That is the story. THE TIMES does not, at this time, say such a move would be the most feasible within the range of the Floyd fiscal court, but it would remain members of the court that the plan one deserving of study and careful consideration.

Floyd county's area is, theoretically, 68 per cent forest. Actually, at least half of that 68 per cent represents land that should be in forest but which is nothing but denuded hillsides. Erosion is unimpeded, as a rule. Waste of remaining forest resources continues. Whether a reserve or a huge reforestation undertaking is most needed, it is certain something should be done—not years from now, but soon—if ours is not to become a wasteland.

ENTERTAINS ON 11th BIRTHDAY

Patricia Purley was hostess to a group of her friends on her 11th birthday anniversary at her home on First avenue on Aug. 26. A birthday cake with 11 candles was the centerpiece for the gifts that had been presented to her by friends who came to wish her many happy returns of the day. Refreshments were served to about 30 guests.

Johnson-Co. Woman Is Hit-Run Victim

Paintsville, Ky., Sept. 8—Mrs. Barbara Blanton, 18, Staffordville, Ky., was found dead on the highway in front of her home at 8 o'clock Friday night by her husband, Quentin Blanton, the victim of what Arty Prenton, Johnson county coroner, said was apparently a hit-run driver. The coroner said she received a fractured skull and numerous other bruises.

The Sports Round-Up

UNDERSTANDING THE "T" FORMATION

In days of yore, the football tactics employed were exceedingly simple. It was merely to point out the direction the ball carrier was going, then line up and shut it out until the whistle was blown. The rule-poly individuals who weighed in the vicinity of 250 pounds and who could hardly move out of his own tracks was called upon to make his ball as a lineman. Any man who had the intestinal fortitude to throw his ball at that stationary toman was called a backfield man.

Several decades later, football developed into the simple and double-wing back, initially started by the grand old master of football, Pop Warner. Jack Sutherland, now coach of the Pittsburgh Steelers, developed it into a power system when it was still in its embryonic stage. He used double opponent and mousetrap blocks. It quickly engulfed the center and remained the foremost system for many years, even though the Notre Dame system with its balancing and the "W" system of Clark Shaughnessy, then coach of Stanford. It was when it introduced the rudiments of the basic "T" which was later developed by George Hitas of the Chicago Bears and Greasy Neale of the Philadelphia Eagles. The man in his opinion was quickly installed and so the system was on its way to completely revolutionize football. The question is often asked, "What is the 'T' and what makes it so dangerous?"

Principally the "T" formation has unshackled the center. It has completely emancipated him. In all other formations, the center must squat down, with both hands on the ball, absolutely defensive and open to receiving any amount of punishment that may be dealt him at the leisure of the defense guard. For the center in the "T" formation can only be called "half a man," thus only half a blocker. But in the "T" formation, the center does not have to look at the receiver—the center pass the ball blind, keeping his head up to see what is going on and when blocking, obstructive to the play. He can cock his left arm

Date of assessment of property: when, where and by whom listed in whose name assessed.

Following is copy of the law governing listing of property for taxation purposes:

(1) All taxable property and all interests in taxable property shall be assessed and valued as of July 1 of each year unless otherwise provided by law. It shall be the duty of all persons owning or having any interest in any personal property having a taxable situs in this state to list or have listed between July 1 and September 1 of each year such property with the county tax commissioner of the county where it is located, except as otherwise provided by law. All persons in whose name property is properly assessed shall remain bound for the tax, notwithstanding they may have sold or parted with the property.

(2) Real property or any interest therein shall be listed in the county district where it is located by the owner of the first freehold estate therein, and it shall be assessed with reference to conflicting title. If the owner fails to list the property, the county tax commissioner may assess the same in the name of the owner, if ascertainable by the tax commissioner, otherwise in the name of the occupant, if ascertainable, and otherwise to "Unknown owner." The undivided real estate of any deceased person may be assessed to the heirs of such person without designating them by name.

One of our fine organizations, the Men's Club, organized several weeks ago. This club has already performed several noteworthy acts, expressing civic pride and interest. Sponsoring a drive for and securing city bus service to Pikeville, cleaning the town's sidewalks of weeds for the benefit of pedestrians, and securing hospitalization for a member of a needy family. Other worthwhile projects are under consideration for the future.

Toy and Mrs. Walter Binney and children have returned to their home here. They will leave within the next few months to do missionary work in the Philippines.

The Methodist Sunday school held its annual picnic on the school lawn last Sunday. Special guests for the occasion were the Rev. and Mrs. W. B. ### Low Cost Feed Grinding at Home for Hungry Livestock

THROUGH a study of 20 farms where accurate records have been kept, the Virginia Farm Electrification Council finds that on the average the cost of grinding feed has been cut in half by home grinding. The average farm in the group grinds 24.4 tons a year but the study shows that for any quantity over 3 bushels a week home grinding electrically is profitable under conditions usually found.

The actual cost for electricity to operate the mills on these farms was only one cent a hundredweight but in figuring the cost of home-ground feed for the above comparison the Council took into consideration all the costs including interest on the investment in the mill, depreciation and repairs.

Farmers generally recognize the value of properly ground grain for quick "finishing" and to increase both weight and milk productivity of cattle.

Grind your feed on the home farm—Add Pounds Electrically Ground.

INFORMATION OF INTEREST TO VETERANS

(No. 5 of a Series)
OUT-PATIENT CARE
Veterans Administration has answered the six questions most frequently asked by veterans about out-patient treatment in a VA hospital clinic or by their own physicians at government expense.

The questions were asked in a survey that VA conducted recently to learn how much veterans know about their Federal benefits. The questions and answers follow:
Q. Am I entitled to treatment in an out-patient department?
A. Only if you have a service-connected disability, or if you have a non-service-connected ailment, and are on leave from a VA hospital and ordered to report to an out-patient clinic for periodic treatment or examination. Eligibility for out-patient treatment is set by law and, except in rare instances, treatment is limited to those with service-connected ailments.

Q. Under what circumstances may a veteran be admitted to a VA hospital through the out-patient department?
A. Veterans with service-connected disabilities who requested out-patient treatment and who then are found to be in need of hospitalization, often are assigned to hospitals by doctors in the out-patient clinics. Also, veterans who have no service-connected disabilities may apply to out-patient clinics for hospitalization, if physical examination discloses the need for hospitalization, such care will be arranged for by the staff of the out-patient clinic.
Q. Does VA provide maternity care to veterans or their dependents thru out-patient clinics?
A. No. Only veterans with service-connected ailments are eligible for treatment in out-patient clinics, except under rare circumstances.

Q. What is the waiting list for hospitalization?
A. Veterans with service-connected disabilities may be provided medical care first. Then, if beds are available and if veterans with non-service-connected ailments say they cannot afford to pay for treatment elsewhere, they may be admitted to VA hospitals. Inasmuch as VA almost always has more applications for hospital care from veterans with non-service-connected ailments than it has beds, there is always a group of veterans awaiting their turn for hospitalization.
Q. How long does a veteran have to wait before he is hospitalized?
A. If a veteran has a service-connected disability, he does not have to wait to receive hospitalization. If he has a non-service-connected ailment and he is in an emergency case, he is admitted immediately. But if he has a non-service-connected ailment that is not an emergency, he must wait until a bed is available. The time he must wait varies. Some hospitals are more crowded than others and thus have longer waiting lists.
Q. May a veteran be treated by his own physician on the outside, at VA expense?
A. Yes. If he has a service-connected disability and receives prior VA approval for such care.
