HE READS THE WORDS

You've seen the words of the Greatman, of Price, and the words of his woolly words for... there's a very little cold weather ahead. May be a cold spell the next few months or early next, but nothing to make any special preparations against.

Of course, when reputation is weather pro-nosticator through his reading of the words has been established over a period of 20 years, says the dark spot or near the tip of the southern end of his words tells that and he will witness to prove that the woolly words is 85% correct.

Of course, he collects several of the words around the first of October, each year. He reads their colors, this way: If the "blacks" are from red to black, it is on the woolly side; if the "blacks" are from black to red, it is on the woolly side.

One time, Oearthright recalls, "Bill" Turner's hair burned in December. He wanted to know about it, but he didn't know. He wanted to know about it, but he didn't know.

Our weather forecast will say by his woolly words, that on another time-honored weather prophet with considered weather.

"The groundings," says he, "is good to eat."

RESIDUAL OIL COSTS VALLEY COAL OUTPUT

Perkins Offers Bill To Carb Importer, Club Here Notes Its Effects

The falling coal industry of the Big Sandy valley lost a market for approximately $50,000,000 of coal last year as the result of importation of cheap foreign residual oil from other countries, and had no other alternative but to import the coal from the south.

The same day, Representative Carl D. Perkins introduced in the House of Representatives a bill to amend the act relating to the importation of residual oil from other countries.

Congressman Perkins said he has done showing this effect on the coal industry through the importation of foreign oil last year.

The Kewanee Club's resolution thus describes the situation:

"It has been brought to the attention of our club that the heavy importation of certain foreign products into the United States is adversely affecting the coal industry of Eastern Kentucky."

HIGHER RATES AHEAD ON GAS

PSC Allows United Fuel Rise Adding $36,000 To Section Gas Bill

Higher gas rates are in the cards for residents of Eastern Kentucky as a result of a decision by the Public Service Commission.

The P. S. C. entered an order granting United Fuel $36,000 as an emergency raise. The firm had asked for an emergency raise of $107,000.

Its emergency raise was included in the sum of $158,000 which it is seeking in another petition not on an emergency basis.

Irvin Stumbo of the local United Fuel Company, says that his company has had only two small raises since the company entered this field here about 25 years ago.

Floyd Group Presents Petitions to Engineers, Told Study Is Necessary

A delegation of Floyd county people who presented petitions urging deepening of Dewey Lake by five feet were told Monday by Colonel Henry H. Perkins, assistant chief of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, that any possible action is a thing of the future to follow the decision of the State Conservation Commission.

The petition, totaling almost 3,000, urged the Engineers with solid evidence of the sentiment of the people of the area for more water in the lake. Col. Perkins said he could not say whether the Engineers are not opposed to the improvement, but that they must consider the capacity of the reservoir for flood control before adding more water and gas compensation of easements with gas companies and other landowners will be necessary before any action is taken.

The Floyd delegation contended five feet more will not damage the lake as a flood control project, but will entail no material changes at the dam itself, will not cost so much or require installation of a flood control project, but will entail no material changes at the dam itself, will not cost so much or require installation of a flood control project.

Income Tax Reports Over NEW STRAND THEATRE

BLADES OF BLUEGRASS

Lexington, Ky.—Ever wondered why how Lexington was selected as the site for the University over several other towns and cities in Kentucky which were anxious to become the seat of the University?

Several Central Kentucky towns had a few in their favored parts of the state figured in the scramble when the time came to select a permanent home for the University.

Thomas James H. Hopkins resides in his "The University of Kentucky: Origins and Early Years" how lowdown throughout Kentucky fought from 1878 to 1880 to become the state's University town.

Frankfort had long wanted the state college and hurriedly proposed uniting it with an auxiliary institute there. Citizens of Harrodsburg desired the college in their town, and Cincinnati made a loud bid for the school along with numerous other smaller Central Kentucky towns.

Finally, however, inducements offered by Bowling Green in Western Kentucky and Lexington in Central Kentucky could not be matched by the other towns, and these two emerged as the real contenders in the race. Bowling Green proposed that the school be connected with Oglethorpe College of that city and offered a large and a donation of $50,000.

Action of the General Assembly of 1880 set Lexington as the site and finally eased apprehensions of the Fayette county citizens. And, when the University celebrated its 50th birthday at an annual Founders Day program on Feb. 22, it also will mark its 73rd year of operation at Lexington's old fair grounds.

KENTUCKY ON THE MARCH

Today's little story may interest thousands of Kentuckians who are concerned about the deplorable condition of our public school system and possible ways of improving it.

Dixie village, my habitat, had no public school. The nearest thing to a public school was a "day" affair taught by a young woman from nearby Corydon, in one room of a vacant residence. Tuition was a dollar a month. It was there I learned the alphabet. Next season I went to Dawsford Grove, one-room school two and a half miles from the village, as did most of the other Dixie children. There I learned to spell simple words.

At that time a young physician named J. R. Sigler was urging parents to vote a special tax to establish and maintain a first-class two-room grade school with the principal teaching high-school classes. The campaign was strictly one-man job, and done so quietly that most of the folks hardly knew about it until an election was held and the school was voted.

Many things have happened since that school that my class went through the four first grades in six months.

Social Security Face Value

Four out of five of the widows or wives and children in this country are protected by old-age and survivors insurance, according to Tommy Thompson, local Social Security Representative.

Thompson points out that, while the original Social Security Act provided monthly benefits for the wage earner only, the present law provides such a wide variety of insurance benefits that practically everyone dependent upon the wage earner for support is protected by this insurance.

The face value of the life insurance protection afforded by social security is approximately $275 billion, Thompson declares.

Monthly benefits ranging from $25 to $85 per month are provided for eligible workers who retire at any time after reaching age 65. Benefits are provided for the dependent wife, child, or husband of the retired worker also.

In addition, the law provides for the payment of benefits to survivors of insured workers who die regardless of the worker's age at the time of death. Thompson lists the following types of survivors who may qualify for monthly benefits: Unmarried children under 18 years of age, widows who have reached the age of 65, widows under 65 who are caring for children, and dependent parents, Thompson says.

In some cases the total benefits payable to the family amount to $187.50 per month, which is the maximum permitted under the law. In addition to monthly benefits, lump-sum death payments, ranging from $75 to $250.00 are also provided.

Why Sacrifice the Power at Home? THE importation of residual oil, a cheap competitor to U.S. production of coal and oil, is a result of this country's carelessness to develop and retain foreign sources of fuel in the event of war.

But this line of thinking is faulty. Without American— that is to say, U.S.—fuels, this country might be powerless in wartime. To court foreign oil sources at the expense of our industry is a calculated—and American industry apparently has been classified as expendable.

GOP HARD PUT TO FIND JOBS

Only 102 Postmaster Posts Open, Cooper Tells Central Body

One of the big jobs facing Republicans is to find political jobs for their supporters when none are available. This is the general opinion of the Republican State Central Committee meeting in Louisville last week.

Senator John Sherman Cooper said Kentucky has more than 2,000 postmaster jobs—more than any other state—but only 102 of them are now available.

There are thousands of other federal jobs held by Kentucky Democrats, but practically all of them are frozen out by Civil Service, and until the law is modified the Democrats will continue to hold them, unless the jobs are abolished.

None of this was obtained firsthand at the committee meeting because the meeting was closed to the press by motion of Herman McGaule, Grayson, a former president of the Kentucky Education Association, and second by Dr. M. D. Lacey, Pikeville.

About 75 Republicans not members of the committee attended the meeting and of the 36 compromise proposals 28 were passed and four were represented by proxies.

Senator Cooper discussed patronage. He said 102 postmaster jobs are available at present, either by death or resignation. Eight of the 102 are in county seats such as Lexington, Pikeville, Glasgow, and Hardinsburg.

In recommending persons for jobs, Cooper expects to do business along organization lines, acting that is on recommendations by county chairmen and county committees and the state committee. Cooper stressed, however, that anyone had a right to write him directly in applying for a job.

Regarding the 1,900 of state postmaster jobs frozen under Civil Service, Cooper said they fall depends on what action is taken by Congress on recommendations to be made by Attorney General Brownell and his staff.

Cooper is not in favor of letting down the bars as Republicans claim the Democrats did, but he does believe something will be done to ease the freeze now enjoyed by the Democrats.

"We're the victors," seemed to be the consensus of Republicans at the committee meeting, "but where are the posts? We've won after 20 years of Democratic jobholding, yet more than 95 per cent of the Civil Service jobs are held by Democrats. We don't feel that the merit system, in filling these jobs, was fully recognized."

NEW MINING LAWS Become Effective, Penalties Provided

All coal mines operating in Kentucky must have licenses by Feb. 15. It was stated by the office of a D. B. Cook, chief mine inspector, this week. The requirement was set up by an amendment to the mining laws at the last General Assembly.

The licenses are non-transferable, renewable each year, and operation without license is punishable by a fine of $25 to $200 each day operated. It was added.

At the same time the mine inspector's office stated the requirements for employees, as used in mine operations, are as follows: A safety mine foremen and fire bosses must have certificates granted on examination by March 15. Foremen and assistants who had certificates before passage of the act are not affected. Assistant foremen are given until March 6 of next year to comply with the certificate requirements.

P'BURG GROUP IS ORGANIZED

Views of 21 Members On School Questions Are Almost Unanimous

The 21 members of Advisory Committee on Educational Policy named for the Prestonsburg schools, met to assemble information for the Kentucky Legislative Research Commission on school questions on Tuesday night.

The difference of opinion arose over the question, "Should the public school program include adult education?" Twelve voted "Yes," to seven "No."

Chalmers H. Frazer, superintendent of Prestonsburg schools, acted as temporary chairman of the meeting and explained the work to be done and what the purpose of the committee was.

Mr. Frazer explained that the program if put into effect will mean that every school district in Kentucky will have the same basic program established below which more can fall with minimum amount fixed to be spent on each child.

All 21 committee members agreed each child should receive nine months' schooling a year, that the public school program should include kindergarten but not junior colleges. They suggested the University of Kentucky should establish extension centers to bring junior colleges near the people.

The Prestonsburg district, the group was told by Mr. Frazer, spent $2.97 per pupil last year for teaching aids other than textbooks.

The school head also said 836 are listed in the school census of the district, with 725 enrolled in the public schools, 15 in private schools (kindergarten), with 100 not in school at all.

Water Pollution Body Re-Elects Henry Ward As Sewage Policy Told

Henry Ward, State Commissioner of Conservation, was re-elected chairman of the Kentucky Water Pollution Commission at a meeting held in Louisville recently.

Ward was chairman of the commission since its establishment in 1950. Earl Wallace, Commissioner of the Department of Fish and Wild Life Resources, was re-elected vice-chairman.

Extension of sewers by a municipality adds to its pollution problem, it is the position of the commission that it is improper to approve such extensions without assurances that the municipality recognizes its responsibility to provide treatment, and that it has specific plans to correct that condition.

This does not mean of necessity that the commission will refuse permits for sewer extensions until a sewage treatment plant is built and in operation. The commission recognizes that it may be required to approve sewer additions as a safeguard to public health and to provide for the orderly development of a community, it does mean, however, that the commission wants to know that sewage treatment is being included in the plans of the community.

There are a number of cities in Kentucky which are growing rapidly, increasing the discharge of their sewage into public streams. Little progress has been made toward construction of sewage treatment plants. The commission feels that they should recognize and accept their responsibility to treat sewage as well as to set it away from individual residences and business and industrial establishments.

Harry O. Zimmerman, Wheelwright, is a member of the commission, representing industry.

If You Remember . . .

The two boys carried the dog out over the fields and up a rolling point. Arriving at a grassy spot under the shade of a small cedar they laid the burden of the dead collie down and began slowly to dig. Excavation was slow and as it progressed became frantic. A few strokes of the mattock and the digger handed it to the other boy who, in turn, dug awhile. At last, the task completed, the dog was placed in the DEGRAVIER had covered with lumpy clay. Old Ring was buried and the eyes of the boys were wet with warm tears.

BETSY LAYNE

CLUB HAS SEWING MEETING The Betsy Layne Woman's Club held the first of a series of afternoon sewing meetings, February 7 at the home of Mrs. T. J. Chandler.

The purpose of these meetings is to make items for sale to make funds for the club's proposed work for 1953. At this time plans of work were outlined and projects decided upon.

The recent flood disaster in Holland was discussed by Mrs. Berchard Hardwick, club president, and it was voted to send a CARE package to Holland.

Miss Alice Williams, club president for the Heart fund drive, reported that plastic hearts had been placed in the business places of Betsy Layne and vicinity and everyone was urged to make contributions. Miss Williams also presented the following facts concerning the Heart Campaign:

The Heart Campaign is the most important of the year. Heart disease is the nation's leading cause of death; it attacks all age groups; it makes for a great social and economic loss. Among other things, the Heart Association makes possible greater scientific knowledge concerning heart disease, broader public understanding and local cardiac programs.

At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served. The following were present: Mrs. J. Williams, Becher Hardwick, Edward Lykins, Miss Alice Williams and the hostess, Mrs. Chandler.

OLD FLOYD COURT RECORDS REPAIRED BY BOOKBINDERS

The Records Rebuilding Service, workmen of St. Augustine, Florida, have completed the work of re-binding books in the offices here of the Circuit Court and the Circuit Court Clerk has seen in the course of their work many valuable, interesting and historical records.

They saw the marriage certificate of Thomas and Nancy Hanks Lincoln, parents of Abraham Lincoln, at Elizabethtown, Ky., when they searched there in Virginia the records they saved and re-bound contained names of the most illustrious of this state and the nation. Names like Washington, Madison, Jefferson and many others ran all through the ancient volumes.

Many a legal and historical record will come about some day and owe the success of their findings to such work as is being done here by the Service. That work is to preserve the record of the counties. It is work that has to be done at the site of repository, for the records cannot be taken away.

The company, headed by John J. Dobbs who is assisted by his wife and her brother, Dr. W. H. Hays, have two crews on the road, traveling all over the United States. They have rebounded volumes in Mason, Perry, Johnson and other Eastern Kentucky counties as well as counties in other parts of Kentucky.

In Manassas, Virginia, they repaired a book upon which some Civil War soldier had done his own notes. In speaking of this, Mr. Dobbs recalled how a northern soldier had carried away a deed book from there and when the war was over the authorities at Manassas thought it recovery impossible. Then there came a letter from the north stating that the deed book was found in the attic of a home. Would the officials at Manassas want it back? They certainly would.

Not only has the Service re-bound books, but it has also repaired books with historically famous people having their records thereon but they have worked upon very old books, too. At Princeton, Alabama, Virginia, they repaired a deed book going back to 1888. Deed Book 7 repaired there dated to 1748.

The worst records, Mr. Dobbs says, are in Tennessee. The most missing and mutilated records are in the path of Sherman's March to the Sea. The northern soldiers burned the court records and only the records were saved that the fleeing clerk had carried away. At Georgetown, S. C. the clerk fled with the most important records, thinking that he was in the path of the northern advance. The invading federal captured his records on the South Carolina coast and burned them. If he had stayed at Georgetown the books would have been secure.

Books on the sea coast deteriorate faster than inland records, they state. A lot of old records bound 148 years ago are in better condition today than those bound and put into use 50 years ago. The older they say, built for wear and tear.

Mr. Dobbs had this to say of Virginia records: "There they are more conscious of the need to preserve the records than any other state we have been in. The DAR there is very much alive and is busy trying to preserve the records." Of Floyd county records he said that they compare favorably with those in the better-kept courthouses.

CAFETERIA TO BE BUILT

Frankfort, Ky.—The State Property and Buildings Commission intends to proceed with plans for construction of a new cafeteria building at the Kentucky House of Reform, Greendale, even though bids are running substantially above the originally anticipated cost.
Gov. Lawrence Wetherby announced that the State was committed to building the new dining hall and cafeteria building as part of the new Youth Authority program. The Fayette County grand jury has criticized the way food has been served at the institution in the past. Initial bids indicate that the structure will cost approximately $200,000—some $40,000 above the originally anticipated cost.
The new building will have accommodations to feed 535 persons at a meal, including about 100 staff personnel.

CARD OF THANKS

We are deeply grateful to all our friends—relatives and neighbors who came to us in our time of grief upon the death of our beloved husband and father, Edward L. Horny, would especially thank the Rev. Moses Kitchener and Rev. Howard Church for their comforting words, those who sent floral offerings and the Garner and Colburn Funeral Home for its efficient service.

ARTHRITIS?

I have been wonderfully blessed in being restored to active life after being crippled in nearly every joint in my body and with muscular weakness from head to foot. I had Rheumatoid Arthritis and other forms of Rheumatism, hands deformed and my ankles were set. Limited space prohibits telling you more here but if you will write me I will reply at once and tell you how I received this wonderful relief.

IT'S A GOOD WORLD
BY WILMAY

About twenty of us enjoyed a luncheon with Marie Oatle in England recently. Like her sister, Thelma Daniels, the woman can do literally anything. Every dish was so attractive you'd have thought a chef was in charge.
Those Wayland women are excellent in many respects. Their women's club is one that uses its money in which is plentiful, and they have some good programs. Everyone has a favorable comment about the activities of Wayland students at the school. This is commendable to school and town alike.

Gerald Griffin, whose ability we admire, best us to the story about the Pattons. Fully 5 years ago, we told many of plans to write an account of Dock and Ellen for The Times. He did a much better job and we rejoice that the O.'s used it. It takes truly good people to raise the children of others.

We wonder if Frank and Margaret Pickle, of Martin, have had quite a few laughs over inquiries that some Pickles are breaking marital ties. Margaret and James are about congenial and happy a couple as can be found anywhere.

Denise Taylor is talking recently about the library he and Maggie have started for their trio. They showed good judgment several years ago by moving where the kids could have more room. One is not surprised they are surrounding theirs with good books, the best of childhood friends.

One man said a short time ago that he does not see how on earth his wife can do so much, that she never stops. Others, too, wonder how she is one of the best community and church workers in Eastern Kentucky. All really owe to Dorothy Allen, know it because she will put first things first. God can do so much more with our lives than we, if only we give Him the chance and the right-of-way!

Pearson bouquets are getting too numerous to bestow, so many at work. Madeline Sherman Martin, Topsy Butler, Inez Ward and Madeline Ward of the Baptist Church are turning in work regularly. Wanda Osborne donated a pile of second-hand garments from her store, for costumes. Lenore Osborne and her committee of seamstresses are starting work with a bank. Get your material to them at once if you want free service. Mrs. C. R. Marshall, in bed with virus pneumonia, issues orders from there, to her groups in the art department, where Beverly Taylor, Ida Allen, Pauline Osborne, Garry Grigsby, Bobbie Martin and David Watson are rising to go. Randolph Griffin says he will help do the work but no pay for him. The man did much more than his share last year, far more than many of us. Charlie Dickman said that he would see that this assignment for his church was done, if he has to do it alone. Any job that falls to get done is passed on to James Salisbury, who has come made whereby he can do the impossible.

Orchids go to Blanche Dingus for her enthusiasm and ability. Here is the hardest job of all. She is the director, with the big responsibility to the public. This year she is ably assisted by Mrs. E. P. Grigsby, one of the most talented women in Martin. Last year, some predicted the Patient could not be put on in five weeks' time. Now, some wonder if these two gals can have 300 characters ready or full-dress rehearsals and picture-taking in mid-March. It won't take long to tell. Watch The Times for Page 6! personal soon.

Last year only Martinians—persons living, working, attending church or school, or belonging to civic organizations—were eligible for the cast. But Martin has run out of folks who can and will serve. The first outsider honored is Tom Patrick, of Maytown, one of the outstanding Christians of the county. It is an honor to the Pageant to have him replace another active believer, Clarence King, who moves to Paintsville soon. Mr. Patrick has the role of John, the beloved disciple.

Congratulations to President Eisenhower for saying he may not be available after this term. When all presidents reach that decision and devote themselves to doing a good job, instead of building political fences, we will have much better government.
