Phone Calls, Wires, Overtime Help Get Man to Son's Bedside

Ella Noel White, executive secretary of the Red Cross, advised that the Red Cross this week recruited some of the dozen or so steps taken last week-end to get a Florida county father in an army hospital in Germany where his son lies critically ill.
Last Friday Mrs. White received from Red Cross area headquarters in Alexandria, Va., a telegram advising that Walter Bryant's condition was such following a brain injury that the presence of his father, John M. Bryant, at the hospital in Germany was desirable. But area headquarters did not give the father's address. So Mrs. White sent wire to Bryant to Alexandria to learn the address. Back came a telegram stating that Bryant lived at Mt. Pleasant, the father had come to the Pike County Red Cross Chapter, and Mrs. White resorted to the telephone to call three to tell him to come to Prestonsburg.

Next was a telephone call to Huntington for plane reservations for the father to Newark, N. J., and a telegram to area headquarters to say he was leaving there. Then a wire to ask that their office get a letter to advise when Bryant would arrive there, how to identify him, and to ask that their office get him to the McGuire Air Force Base. But there were complications. The father was scheduled to reach here at the Newark Red Cross Chapter, but another came soon after from the Air Force base saying he had taken a taxi cab directly to the base this morning those who were at the railway station to meet him. IN MEMORIAM
In memory of our son and brother, Woodrow Osborne, who passed away 129 years ago.
What would we give to clasp your hands.
You happy face we'd like to see.
And hear your voice and see a smile.
That meant so much to us.
Just when your life was gay and bright.
Just when your years were best—
You were called from this world's strife.
To home and eternal rest.
Your smiling way and pleasant face.
Are a pleasure to recall.
You had a kindly word for everyone.
And died beloved by all.
Some day we all hope to meet you.
Some day we know we shall meet.
To clasp your hand in a better land.
In our heart your memory lingers.
We, as usual, will have a remembrance.
Dear Woodrow we do not think of you.
So, by memory, my Mother, Dad and Family.
Loving Love, Leda and Cecily
Osborne.

Know Your Soil, Say Lawn Experts; Analysis Should Precede Sowing

With those first balmy breezes of spring due soon, a perennial fever will soon sweep most homeowners again. It's lawn fever, and the symptom is frenzied activity out of doors. Just much of this effort is wasted since we quell the fever with costly, expensive, instead of straight thinking. You can have a beautiful Kentucky bluegrass lawn without an aching back. If you start right away, here is one step and one step that you can take to keep your lawn healthy.

Shingle? Yes, but how many times have you had your soil analyzed? That's a little over 100,000 agricultural stations say more than half the nation's homeowners have never heard of the practice and most of the rest think it's an expensive process used only by parks and golf courses. It's not. It's the wisest couple of dollars you ever spent.

Most of the state experimental stations or state agricultural colleges will do it for you, as will thousands of nurseries, seed companies, and research organizations. Most hard-wearing soils carry impurities "to your" dirt.

There is nothing to digging up a few ounces of soil but to be sure to go down six to eight inches. That's where your Kentucky bluegrass roots will grow and that's where you get the true picture. Of course you may need to take more than one sample if you have a large yard, but you should take the extra samples from places where you are having trouble getting a good stand of bluegrass.

Remember, the final goal of most lawns is a Kentucky bluegrass lawn and bluegrass thrives on a high nitrogen plant food. But if you soil for fertilizer, the seeds that come in the spring will thrive on that same fertilizer to the disadvantage of bluegrass.

FOOT SAVING EDUCATION

By H. C. Francis

What is the purpose of round heels of Jumping Jack Shoes?
It is easier to explain the advantage of the round heel of the human foot. Few people realize that the heel of every human foot is round. Nature is very strict about the subject. The feet are all out for variety for the fronts of feet — they are as different as faces — and some times — prettier faces — human feet are all alike, all round.
Walking has been defined as a process of falling forward. The first duty of the foot is to catch the weight of the falling body. For this purpose the round heel is as important as the automobile and the soft cushion of the heel is as important in absorbing shock as the air cushioned tire. Can you visualize the effects of equipping a car with square wheels and hard tires?
The roundness of the heel allows the foot to contact the ground with a smooth rolling motion. A flat heel would cause the foot to slip. Since twenty-four of the twenty-six bones of each foot are located forward of the ankle, slipping the foot is a flattening action similar to dropping a pencil. The NATURAL action of the foot is a grasping, rising action and Nature is usually right.

Do Doctors Want A Closed Shop?

According to a Courier-Journal poll, Kentucky doctors are overwhelmingly opposed to a medical school at the University of Louisville. Although the newspaper which conducted the poll is opposed to a second medical school in the state, inasmuch as it would compete with the University of Louisville's school of medicine, we are willing to accept the figures published by that newspaper as correct.

A heavy majority of practicing physicians and others of the medical profession have indeed been asked in addition to the University of Kentucky. The big question remaining with us is, Why?

Is it because the doctors are truly anxious about the cost of such a college? Kentucky is not a pauper state, although it sometimes acts very much like one. The Southern states with a per capita income less than Kentucky's have state-supported medical schools.

Is it because the University of Louisville's school of medicine is accommodating all the medical students who apply? If it is, something must be wrong at that university. We are told that eighteen medical colleges in states surrounding Kentucky have a list of eight applicants for every opening they have to fill. J. Stephen Watkins, president of the Kentucky Medical Foundation, only a few days ago complained that Vanderbilt at Nashville, Tenn., has received more than 700 applications for the 52 openings it has.

Is it because Kentucky has enough doctors already? The impartial American Medical Association and the Legislative Research Commission did not by any stretch of the imagination arrive at any such conclusion after making careful studies of the situation in the state. The AMA reported that more adequate facilities for medical education in Kentucky were necessary, and it recommended that a medical teaching center at the University of Kentucky.

The Research Commission found that the state had a shortage of about 1,100 doctors more than three years ago. That shortage has in all probability increased already, and by 1935 the dearth of doctors may reach 1,800, the Commission has predicted.

Or is it because a majority of Kentucky doctors are not all, by any means, but by a heavy majority—want what amounts to a "closed shop" for the profession? Mr. Watkins says, in effect, that that is the answer: "A number of doctors of our commonwealth," he said at Lexington, a few days ago, "do not want more doctors."

Which fails to consider the wishes and needs of the state and the thousands of Governor Chandler can do very stubborn man on occasion, and on this issue of a second medical school for the state we think he will stick to his guns.

In Summation: Not All White or Black

Kentuckians, these days fall into three categories.

1. Those who believe Governor Chandler can do no wrong.

2. Those who believe everything he does is wrong.

3. A scattering who regard him as neither saint nor devil, doing good as best as they can and wrong elsewhere.

The Times is willing to be placed in the third category. It insists that Governor Chandler and his official record to date are neither wholly white or black, that there are gradations of gray between "chandelated at his best and at his worst, just as in the case of other humans."

The Governor is playing politics both by note and by deed, and he is a past master at the job; yet some of his plans for Kentucky sound, even his redistributing his has its points; far more obvious gerrymanders have been engineered. Admittedly he is not fully informed on all the phases of the legislation and on all its effects, we are unwilling to say "reorganization of the welfare services is not without its points."

The Governor's plan for highway building merits approval, if it is not too far-reaching in terms which will be done with the money. An overwhelming majority surely will approve his plans for the improvement of the nation program for education in Kentucky. Certainly few in this section can offer a valid objection to his plan for a nation program to remedy economic ills of Eastern Kentucky.

As we look from a distance upon the Governor's official conduct, we think his greatest weakness lies in what obviously is a desire to work vengeance upon those who have opposed him. He naturally can be expected to side with his friends, but if he permits the settling of old scores to occupy his mind, Kentucky, Kentucky as well as his own record as Governor will suffer.

Legislation designed as a "tipper" for one set of interests at selected targets, or conceived to render one man or one coterie powerful to the exclusion of others—such acts are closely watched and if they get into the public good but to gain revenge or to strengthen the Governor's hand, then every act of the Governor is likely to be scrutinized. He becomes suspect and he loses the confidence of the people.

Hated, jealous, spiteful—these are the adjectives which could destroy "Happy" Chandler, even as they have eaten away like a cancer at capable men before him. If the Governor doesn't have a care, somebody will be saying, "Fardon, but your malice is showing."

THIRD POISON OPERATION SUCCESS

The third poisoning operation at Beverly Lake last Saturday and Sunday was highly successful, according to biologist Bernard Carpenter of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. Numerous snails were killed and very few fish were harmed.

The water will now be raised to the normal stage of 146 feet, and in 10 days in the next seasonal change April 1.

JIG FISHING

This weekend should be the best to date for jig-fishing from the lake angle. However, the weatherman may have other ideas.

Jig-fishing is relatively simple, almost as easy as casting pole fishing. As is needed is a long, stiff pole, about four feet of strong line, a treble hook, a good sinker, any kind of cork and some night crawlers.

Three to four night crawlers on the hook are sufficient and will attract the bass. It is essential to be as quiet as possible in moving the boat along the edge of the bank, about eight to ten feet out the pole is "jigged" along the edge of the water and the snags, water current, and possibly likely you are to land your limit.

Garrett had beaten the Hornets by 18 points during the season and 66-51 in the Floyd County tournament.

NOTE ON WEST VIRGINIA TECH

Palmer Hall, ex-Floyd County Superintendent and presently dean of West Virginia Institute of Technology, Montgomery, West Virginia, informs us of the fact that the school has scheduled for the past two seasons, the Golden Bears have led the nation in small colleges in scoring in the 1954-55 season, their 107.6 per game average is the highest ever recorded and in 1955-56 they hit for 103.4 per game.

One of the highlights of next season's play will be their participation in the Hofstra College Christmas invitational basketball tournament, that features the finest eastern basketball powers.

Many of Floyd county's graduating seniors, who have college aspirations both actually and scholastically, might do well to contact Mr. Hall.

FLOYD BASKETBALL GOES TO TOKYO

Several letters from Tokyo, Japan, to the editor and yours truly inform us that they keep up with the hectic Floyd County basketball race through the medium of this paper, and that they all refresh and relay each game after reading about it. They say, though they are 10 to 15 days late receiving the paper, each issue is looked forward to with intense interest. One ex-Wheelwright camper went so far as to ask us to send him the results of the Floyd County district tournament.

CHANDLER PRESENTS PLAN OF STATE REORGANIZATION

By Robert B. Hartine, Jr.

The Chandler administration's bill on state governmental reorganization was presented to the Legislature in special session Tuesday.

Before a joint session of the House and Senate—starting the first of four extended sessions—Gov. A. B. Chandler Monday night outlined 12 proposed changes in the government's setup.

One would create a new department of Public Safety to absorb the present State Police Department, leaving to the division status. Other divisions would be fire prevention, operator responsibility and accident control.

Chandler said he plans to increase the number of state policemen to 10,000, a number he felt necessary to maintain the law and to provide the necessary police protection to the state.

Red, Blue-Blood Hogs To Earn Money For College Education

Photo, Courtesy Hanspiller, Drug Jackie Howard, 13-year-old Dwayne 4-H Club boy watches his pedigreed Duroc gilt, bought in Michigan. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Howard.

Jackie Howard, 13-year-old 4-H Club boy, of Dwayne started out with a pig from the Duroc pig-chain two years ago by the 4-H Club Council. That pig grew, as all little pigs do if properly fed and cared for, and today Jackie has two pedigreed Duroc sows and nine pigs.

Those hogs have blue blood, the finest in the hog world. The gilt that farrowed the same pigs the other day is from Charger, the grand champion boar of Michigan last year. He showed against 18 herds from Michigan and other states to win his owner sold him for $500. Six of the nine pigs sold for $1500 a few months ago.

Jackie, in addition to attending grade school at Albion, looks after his pigs and or hog business, sells the Times on week-ends. He's working for an education, has already saved part of the money necessary to pay his college expenses. He plans to go to the rest from those red, blue-blooded hogs.

Jackie still has the 4-H pig-chain "pig" but it now weighs approximately 400 pounds. He cares for the Council's boar, made available to farmers here by local businessmen.

The Iwale boy's 4-H "pig" and her litter placed second at the county fair last year. The farrowed gilt was bought from Dean Funk & Son, of Waldron, Mich., who have been breeding champions in that state for ten years.

Mr. Funk married a Floyd County girl, the former Miss Bird Crum of Allen.

Statement by DuRan Moore

During the last week the Courier-Journal has carried news stories concerning suits filed by the so-called Floyd County Good Government Taxpayers League against present and former county officials, including myself. The Courier-Journal reported that five additional taxpayers had intervened in the suits by reason of the plaintiff having moved the court to strike their names as plaintiffs.

The intervening petition of the five additional taxpayers was no sooner filed, when two of these plaintiffs filed their individual motions to withdraw stating that neither Jesse K. Lewis nor any other person had been authorized to use their names in connection with these suits.

These suits have been filed for the sole and only purpose of embarrassing the present and former county officials named in the suits, not at the direction of any Floyd County Taxpayers, but at the direction of two attorneys, Jesse K. Lewis and Burns Martin.

The three petitions to vacate judgments heretofore entered by Judge Gramman are cases involving political fees of Burns Martin and the cases involving his political friends were decided by the same Special Judge Gramman. These cases have not been appealed nor has there been any petition to vacate these judgments filed by Jesse K. Lewis nor any of his associates.

Dewey Daniel Advocates Additional Mail Routes For Eastern Kentucky

Now mail-man routes in Eastern Kentucky have not kept pace with new roads in this section, Dewey Daniel, Hazard banker, says.

Having a former president of the Kentucky State Chamber of Commerce as chairman of the Republican State Party, Committee.

In the latter capacity he has written the Postoffice Department, requesting Eastern Kentucky Postmasters not to keep the department informed about the need for additional routes.

He asked the department to make surveys to determine how many new routes are needed. His off-hand estimate was at least 10.

People who live in sections which are reached by these new roads are wanted to receive their mail at three hours, he said. "Instead of walking several miles to a contaminated store and postoffice."

In addition to new routes made possible by new road construction, some of the existing routes could be extended. But the postmasters, he said, are not making the necessary recommendations.

while the golden years lie bright ahead . . .

WHAT kinder thought can love bestow than to ease the hour for the one who remains, when it's time for the final farewell.

Today, their golden and happy years stretching before them, many younger people provide the advance against the time when painful details of burial and expenses could add to the burden of survivors.

The sympathetic understanding of Kentucky's foremost funeral directors makes possible such insurance, underwritten by Commonwealth Life — one of the South's oldest and largest companies. Premiums are remarkably low, and there is almost literally no age limit. Example: at age 30, $500 protection can be bought for just $28.50, single payment, at age 70 for $432. Or, premium payments can be made at any frequency, from weekly to annually.

Think of burial insurance as your final gesture of thoughtful devotion . . . as your final act of love.

Millard Mayo Auxier Dies In Nebraska

Relatives here were notified this week of the death of Millard Mayo Auxier, 87 years old, Feb. 28 in the U. S. Veterans hospital in Lincoln, Nebraska.

Mr. Auxier was the son of the late George Auxier and Ann Prater Auxier, of Johnson county. He spent his early manhood there, later moving to Richardson county, Nebraska where he resided until the death of his wife, Mrs. Teresa Stagnator, Auxier. He then went to Los Angeles, California to live with his sons. He was a veteran of the Spanish-American War.

While in Florida he suffered a cerebral hemorrhage early last month, and was removed to the Veterans hospital in Lincoln, Nebraska. Burial was made this week in Falls City, Neb., at the former home. He is survived by four sons, Marvin, and Gordon Auxier, Los Angeles, Calif.; Clutter Auxier, Baraboo, Neb.; Lawson Auxier, Falls City, Neb.; two daughters, Mrs. Fred Sauer, Falls City, Neb.; Mrs. Maude Saliers, Baraboo, Neb.; one sister, Mrs. Martha Auxier Vaughan, Paintsville.

FARM FACTS

FARMING IN '56. For the past three months experts of all kinds have bombarded us with predictions about what's going to happen to us, economically speaking, in 1956. Although there is some disagreement about what will occur in some segments of our economy, there is general agreement that agriculture will not show much improvement soon. We can't sit back and wait for times to get better or for the government to take action. Generally speaking we will do the best we can—cutting the costs where possible, living within our income, producing more efficiently and trying to supplement our income with off-the-farm earnings. Many economies, although not enough to offset much of the lower income, can be put into practice on most farms. More exchange of labor and machinery, more soil testing and efficient use of fertilizer, more repairs and less new purchases will all be in the order of the day this year.

BAD BREAK. In addition to the national "cost-price squeeze" Kentucky farmers, especially tobacco growers, got some other bad breaks this year. They failed to get the cigarette tax reduced as they expected and a law which will increase the consumer's price and reduce consumption of cigarettes was enacted by the Legislature. This is expected to have a long-time, detrimental effect on tobacco prices. It looks as if the decrease in the farm vote is decreasing the farmers' influence in legislative matters. Fortunately, however, the tobacco acreage reduction voted last November has been cancelled by Congress.

CREDIT PROBLEMS. The jolt of the 45 million dollar decrease in tobacco income last year and the drop in hog prices is just now being felt. Banks and other credit agencies find that they are holding more past-due notes than usual. This, added to declining farm deposits, will make credit tighter in 1956.

A good credit standing at a sound financial institution is one of man's most valuable assets and he should try to maintain it. Some suggestions which will help maintain one's credit standing are:

1. Meet all obligations promptly. If impossible to do so, consult your creditors before the due date.
2. Have a definite repayment plan. Don't go into debt without knowing how it will be repaid.
3. File a financial statement with your financial institution each year.
4. Borrow only for essentials, and buy non-essentials only if other debt obligations have been met.
5. Keep accurate records.
6. Make a budget of expected income and expenditures and live within your income.

Hold That Line!

Dr. Frances Sherman Martin, Dr. Russell Hall, Wheelwright, Miss Blanche Duggins, county school health coordinator; Mrs. Fran Reed, County Attorney Holie County, Eastern; Quentin Allen Prestonsburg; Mrs. Noah D. Howard, Wayland; Magistrate Ellis Martin, Minnie, and Magistrate John May, Langley.

Jobless Claims Are Up Over December Total

WEEKLY KY. Feb. 27—Jobless workers jumped 25 percent last month over the December total, while job placements fell 18 percent. Commissioner of Economic Security V. G. Barnes reported today. Benefits paid in January totaled $1,589,350—compared with $1,348,156 in December, while for January, 1955, the total was $2,183,587. Claims for jobless benefits under state coverage, which climbed to 114,672 weeks of unemployment in January, were 29 per cent above the December total but nearly 77 per cent below the January, 1955, figure. New claims filed in January totaled 22,786 of which 21,485 were against the state unemployment insurance fund. Claims also were filed by 1,021 Korean war veterans and 169 federal workers. The new claim load was up 53 per cent from December and 14 per cent above January, 1955. The department attributed the increase in new claims to normal seasonal factors and to the return home of workers laid off in the automobile industry.

In emergency, it's double-barreled—with that new Dynaflo changing to full-power safety surge acceleration the instant you floor the pedal and switch the pitch.

And in moments—in luxury, in handling ease, in ride-stability in directional sense—you'll discover a literal truth: This is the best Buick yet!
