THE STORY OF MORTIMER WRAGG

This is the story of Mortimer Wragg—a family man, motorist, good provider, responsible citizen. Mortimer isn't with us any more. But his story is his story.
Mortimer worked hard and never slapped his kids. Indeed, it was a dark day in the Wragg household when he even got as mad as he could get at them, and he never raised his voice to his wife. In business, in good works and charitable pursuits, Mortimer was a model of what an upright citizen should be.

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

THE YEA AND NAY, NAY

In my half century of observing, I find that some of our old folk language I have often been impressed with changing styles of assering or thinking or denying. The words at Piddley wasted years of few words when they addressed me and in no time they had said "Yea and nay, nay." We were talking to a woman and not wholly happy in her answer. We on the inside of the conversation knew that the fitness of speech was genuine unfettered, un-questioned. Why wade a whole lot of words to say yes or no? No amount of talking could make anything as obvious as yes or no. We had never seen a Quaker; only a few had ever heard of one, but I had at least this Quaker attitude. We said "Yea and nay, nay" at that.

The Quakers used to make such religious test of this some shaming questions. They took the Bible literally and left that saying there or less than ten and was marked or evasive or even sassy. When they were ridiculed for this blunt way of speaking they took to their "biblical" inviolables until society ultimately gave in and allowed them that privilege, just as they do not have in never today can assert or use some other term for their literally avoid the word "Yea." Great not at all.

Thinking someone for a favor has come through many evasions at Piddley and elsewhere. Most often we said "Much obliged" and then

The People Voted for Roads, Not for a "Road Machine"

The people of Kentucky last Tuesday gave Governor Chandler the biggest work program capital any Kentucky governor has ever enjoyed. Because they did so, the heaviest responsibility now rests on "Happ" Chandler that has been entrusted to a chief executive of this state. What he achieves with the millions of dollars that will be spent by his administration on the $100,000,000 road bond issue, how he spends that money and how well it is apportioned over the state will be closely watched.

The people voted for the road bonds because they want good roads. These were not Chandler voters that gave such overwhelming support to the issue. They were Democratic votes from both factions of the party, and they were Republican votes, too.

Now the people await the results. They will be watching the whole giant program, from the sale of the bonds on through the spending of the money, to see if indeed this is a program for the people and their roads as it was portrayed in those pre-election days.

They will not be satisfied with promises now. They will not be inclined to sit complacently by if the administration becomes uninterested in building a political machine than in building roads.

The Governor's responsibility is great. Given the magnitude of doing a great job for the state, he has been assigned, at his own request, a task of tremendous proportions. Great as it is, the task is not an impossible one, if Governor Chandler will set the down to the simple idea that the best politics is no politics in answering the clear mandate of the people.

This Road Cries for Another

Now open to traffic is a new scenic highway link, this stretch of road which connects the Prestonsburg-Auxier road with Dewey Lake and which extends via Van Lear to U. S. 25. The beauty of this new road as it winds around the mountain-side overlooks the Dewey Lake area is such that it urges further road construction. It proclaims the need of a road bordering the Lake on Ivan Hager Gap to Stratton Branch and the site of the boat dock nearby.

If such a road is not built, it-development of Dewey Lake State Park as a tourist attraction cannot be made. The site originally chosen for location of a lodge and vacation cottages—Arrowhead Point, about midway between the dam and the boat dock—still appears to be the best discussed. The sylvan setting as well as the expanse of water and the view of both recommended this site. But construction of buildings there until a road is built.

And even if this part of the development were to be done elsewhere, the scenic route along the lake would be needed, and not only from the Floyd county viewpoint or that of the visitor looking for beauty of water and woodland. The state itself has a stake in the matter.

If the road is to leave the lake where it does at near Hager Gap, and not to turn on it again, the state boat dock will find itself pretty well forgotten except by fishermen, because what the visitor otherwise is looking for—a scenic drive of real beauty, picnicking grounds, etc.—will be so pleasantly accessible by auto along the present new road that there will be little incentive for the motorist to drive on miles around to the dock location.

As the Times has on more than one occasion pointed out, Dewey Lake and Dewey Lake State Park have made a mile, all that any of Kentucky's several eye-catching impoundments have to attract tourists—if, only if, plans are made and work is done and money is spent there as elsewhere.

Plan Radio Program Marking Education Week

National Education Week will be observed locally with a program "The Miphred Words" over Radio Station WPRB, with seventh grade pupils of the Prestonsburg school participating. It was announced last week. The program will be heard at 11:30 a.m. today (Thursday).

Richard Wilson, Pulitzer Prize winner and Washington correspondent often seen on the "Meet the Press" television show, will be the luncheon speaker. He will discuss the aftermath of the election. Joseph E. Moody, of Washington, as the president of the association and Walter Thurman of Charleston, secretary. John J. Foster, of Huntington, vice president of the Island Creek Coal Co. and director of the association, is the program chairman.

Mrs. Nolene DeRossett announces the marriage of her brother, A. E. Thomas Purman, of Selvidge Air Force Base, Michigan, to Miss Betty Clemens of Richmond, Virginia. They will be married near the base of Selvidge.

COAL LEADERS MEET FRIDAY

Huntington Meet Is First Outside Capital in Years; Patsy Teen-Agers To Sing

The Southern Coal Producers Association will meet in Huntington Friday, the first time in its 15-year history it has held a meeting outside Washington, D. C.

On the entertainment program will be the Patsy Teen-Agers from David and the Pioneer quartet from Holden, W. Va. They will sing at the banquet at 7:30 p.m.

Officials of 275 mining companies from Kentucky, southern West Virginia, southwestern Virginia, and parts of Tennessee will gather for the one-day session.

Top government mining officials and nationally-known experts in coal production will address the association's annual membership convention.

PROSPECTS OF OHIO VALLEY BRIGHT, ENGINEER DECLARES

Cincinnati, Nov. 7.—America is moving to "riverbank locations," the Ohio Valley Improvement Association was told today.

And said Maj. Gen. E. C. Tschner, "All signs agree that the trend will accelerate in the future, and the Ohio Valley will continue in its forefront."

General Tschner is chief of the Army Corps of Engineers.

In the Ohio Valley, General Tschner said, "you have an industrial concentration that far overshadows that of Germany's famous Ruhr Valley, with infinitely greater 'built-in' dispersal, room for almost unlimited expansion, and a diversified kind of enterprise that the Ruhr cannot approach."

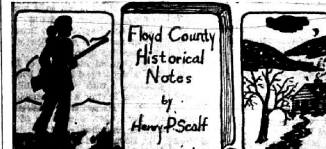

"You have a developed waterway system that is being modernized and soon will be the most capacious and up-to-date canalized inland waterway in the world," he declared.

"Most of your water problems can be solved by aggressive construction and intelligent conservation programs," General Tschner added. He also pointed to the area's vast reserves of coal.

"You are in a prime position to take a leading part in the new and still largely unexplored area which is being opened by atomic energy, light metal production and other high-powered modern industries.

"When these factors are added," he said, "there is no predicting what peaks the development of this valley may reach or what needs for river-related uses it may require."

About three years ago General Tschner said, a trade journal asked the question of whether we might not some day see 100,000,000 tons

Freight a year moving on the Ohio.

"Now I think it is not unreasonable to look forward to 150,000,000 tons as early as 1956."

"A year ago, the breaking of ground for New Cumberland Dam launched the beginning of the program for modernizing the navigation facilities.

"This year, Congress appropriated funds for start of work on Lock and Dam No. 41 at Louisville, and for advanced planning work at New Richmond (Ind.). The program is well under way and I am confident that its orderly completion is assured."

General Tschner tempered his optimistic outlook for the future of the Ohio Valley with these remarks:

"The area of effort in which I believe the Ohio-basin program is being seriously and dangerously delayed is not the navigation program but the flood-control program."

Declaring he would not "mince words," General Tschner added:

"This Ohio Valley, with its teeming towns and vast industries, is a sitting duck for a big flood. You are gambling against unpredictable nature with perhaps greater stakes than any group of people has ever gambled in human history."

The general said the Army Corps of Engineers is making a survey of flood-control plans to determine adequacy of projects built and planned.

"We will reexamine the needs of the valley for flood control, flood regulation, water supply, supplemental irrigation, and the like, and seek to plan the construction with a view of making the fullest possible use of all of the water resources of the basin."

OBITUARY

Another good mother, a faithful wife and kind neighbor has passed from this life into a glorious spiritual existence to enjoy, with other spirits of departed saints, the unspeakably beautiful scenes of eternity for a season, according to the Will of God.

This writer is referring to the passing of Dona Hopkins McCown, daughter of Elder James Hopkins and Mary Little Hopkins. She was born June 15, 1880. At the time of her passing on October 31, 1956, she was 66 years, 6 months and 14 days of age. On July 19, 1909, she was married to J. Henry C. McCown, Union City, Ind. They were blessed with three children named as follows: Mabel Marie Jackson, Michigan; James Thomas, Charlestown, Indiana; Edward Layman, who preceded her in death by drowning in Michigan while fishing with brother and friends. Both were buried at Herold in the family cemetery. Dona joined the First Baptist Church, Jenkins, Kentucky, during 1906 and transferred her membership to the Second Baptist Church in Ashland, Kentucky, where it is her husband has not become a member. She remained a faithful member until her passing.

It is not often that one whose life is so full of service to the Christian life shines as a beacon light to all those that knew her. Her devotion to Christian principles, to her husband, children, relatives and friends will be remembered as long as their memory lasts.

The beauty of her Christian virtues speaks in more eloquent tones than any words we can use. Like the body women of old, in spirit, she is at rest awaiting the resurrection of her body. Her redemption will then be complete, and in company with Sarah (Abraham's wife), with Rebecca, Rachel, Hannah, Naomi, Ruth, Elizabeth, Mary (the mother of Jesus), Lydia, Phoebe, Ursula, Lois and the other pages of Holy Writ. Also, in the company of her own dear loved ones, she will enjoy heavenly scenes. No wonder Solomon said, "A woman that feareth the Lord shall be praised." Her children rise up and call her blessed. Her husband also, and he praiseth her.

Native Floyd Woman In Author of Journal

Barbourville, Ky., Nov. 12 (Sp.)—The "Principal and the Public" is the caption of a two-page article appearing in the current issue of the Kentucky School Journal by Mrs. Mrs. Livingston, instructor in home economics at Union College.

A native of Betsy Layne, Mrs. Livingston has taught at Union College two years. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Baitsden, now residents of Oak Hill, Ohio.

Calling public relations a two-way street, Mrs. Livingston lists six pupils, alumni, parents, and community, as the best channels for influencing the people about the school. The most effective media for influencing others is, she writes, by word of mouth, newspaper, television, and annual reports.

"Now news is easy to get into the papers because of the circulation value of controversy is well known, but it requires more alertness, imagination, and perseverance to get space for 'quiet' news," Mrs. Livingston emphasizes.

The writer quotes Abraham Lincoln in stating "public sentiment is everything; with public sentiment nothing can fail; without it nothing can succeed."

Receiving her master's degree from Ohio State University, Mrs. Livingston has taught in the public schools of Loyalist, Ky., and Columbus, Ohio.

"A QUART OF KEROSENE"

In the summer of 1956 my wife asked me to get her a quart of kerosene for some cleaning she wanted to do. Away I went, still conscious of how easy such a task would have been a few years ago. Presently I began to doubt my success. I asked for kerosene at two garages, a neighborhood grocery, a chain grocery, and finally another garage before I could find a dime's worth of kerosene. At several of the places the proprietor and I would compare notes on the amount of kerosene the stores once sold and the very rapid change in recent years. One told me that in another Kentucky town where he had run a chain store, he kept 500 gallons of kerosene on hand regularly and was forever having to restock. But our time has changed right under our noses.

Now here I am, not worn out with age, not a rival of Methuselah, who can recall having visited in at least one home where tallow candles were the sole source of light. I grew up with coal-oil lamps as the highest form of illumination that any of us knew. My memories are of swinging lamps in parlors, of soft-toned shades on some of the lamps. In such elegant places of homely and useful lamps on the dining table and wherever the family gathered to read. Even at church the soft light from the lamps suspended from the ceiling or from the walls must have been that "dim religious light" that Milton talks about. And think of the old family lantern and the small circle of light that it made in a very dark world. For a very large part of my life now past three score, this situation remained in most rural areas. Just recently the R. F. A. lines have penetrated the remotest places. So that coal-oil and its various uses may be forgotten as soon as we have forgotten many another phase of our lives.

In the summer I visited several oil-water mills reworked and set to grind corn meal, like that on which so many of us were raised. One of the millers and I had a group of people fully as old as we but less fortunate in having seen civilization grow. The important part of old mills used to be not only as crushers of corn meal but as saw mills and flour mills and grist mills. The group was respectful but somewhat unimpressed. I am sure that most of the middle-aged men and women wondered why the people we had known did not go to the supermarket and get a bag of corn meal or to the building-supplies market and buy whatever tanks and such like were needed. These were people who were skeptical about the source of milk and wonder why it is necessary to have cows. However, I don't feel a pride in many of my younger contemporaries.

of their efforts to learn how our primitive civilization, often shut in by distance or rivers or mountains from most of the big world, managed to survive, to provide some of the luxuries of our lives and all of the necessities. This visible way of showing some of the folk arts by which our ancestors lived is one of the commendable phases of many of our parks and other show places. Many years ago in this column I mentioned Skansen, a show place in Sweden where every type of house and industry of the folk was and still is illustrated. I wished then for something like that in our own land before we become so standardized that we are all alike. Show me some such ideas are taking form so that within another decade or two we may be able to revive any foreign country in our living pictures of life as it was once lived. The popularity of these old-time transcripts of life shows that people who run tourist traps as well as serious-minded seekers after good folk representations are working in the right direction and will surely be able to have a reward, monetary or one of satisfaction at the interest in our folk origins, or our folk industries, or our folk inventiveness.

Farmers Of State Will Get Savings On New Rate Plan

Frankfort, Nov. 15 — Kentucky farmers are scheduled to save approximately $25,000 a year through the new rate plan, schedule announced today by C. P. Thurman, commissioner of the State Insurance Department.

Savings of about 42 cents on farm rates will be made by farms dwelling in buildings on their land, Thurman said. Explaining the superior type buildings, the commissioner said these included buildings constructed of good materials, properly maintained, with central heating plants, approved electrical wiring, solid masonry foundations and standard plumbing equipment. Credits also are allowable to better type barns and other outbuildings which are of superior construction and maintenance. Thurman said farm buildings which do not qualify as superior will be subject to a nominal increase in rates for both fire and extended coverage. He said: "I would estimate 70 per cent of the farm dwellings and outbuildings will qualify for the new rating plan." Other new insurance plans mentioned by the commissioner are Commercial property coverage which is so-called package policy applying to certain eligible stocks of merchandise covering "all risks" subject to certain limitations and exclusions. It covers fire, burglary, theft, transportation and extended coverage. Thurman said by consolidating these coverages in one contract approximately 25 per cent could be saved.
