Old Mayo Residence Destroyed by Fire; 2 Other Homes Burn

A Friday evening fire destroyed the 90-year-old residence of the late Dr. H. H. Mayo, near Martin on Ky. Ave.

The Martin Fire Department aided in the saving of outbuildings. The home was occupied at the time of the blaze by Mrs. Mayo and a girl companion. Damage was estimated at $20,000.

The fire, discovered about 4:30 p. m. by Mrs. Mayo who was inside at the time, was thought to have originated in a back room heated by an open fireplace. The walls were falling when discovered. It was said, two rooms, of the two-story building, were destroyed a century ago by the Mayo family in the home of L. L. Lafferty at Drake. The blaze started in the attic, it was said. Lafferty was away at the time and his family escaped by the night. Damage was estimated at $5,000.

The home of John Kidd at Trum destroyed the night of Feb. 4 by a fire of undetermined origin. Efforts of the Betty Layne volunteer fire department to save the structure were in vain as the fire truck reached the place too late. Outbuildings were saved. Amount of damage was not disclosed.

Your Mutual Benefit Life Plan

"You can keep the advantages of your partnership without risking your business."

A partnership may offer tax advantages which overshadow the greater safety of corporate structure. But those advantages may vanish where the possibility exists that the death of one partner will destroy the business or create a new partnership of undesirable heirs or "outsiders."

No partnership needs to run such risks. Under a simple business insurance plan developed by Mutual Benefit Life, funds are made available for taking over a partner's interest, keeping the business intact, and realizing partnership advantages.

Well-trained, up-to-the-minute Mutual Benefit Life men are always available to work with you, your attorney and your accountant on any business life insurance problem. The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, Newark, N. J.

here for the City Council to decide which plan will be adopted.

Plan No. 1 provides for two pumps, each of which would cost $17,500 and which would restrict the water accumulating behind the flood-gate at the second street fill here to the low-lying areas extending up to the edge of the B. P. Omaha property between Second street and Lake Drive. Plan No. 2 which would employ two pumps costing $30,000 each, would restrict accumulation of water behind the flood-gate to the low land in the vicinity of Friend street. The third plan would employ two pumps costing $30,000 each and a third costing $7,000 and would take care of water as rapidly as it accumulates behind the flood-gate.

Plan No. 3 which would permit owners of easily flooded property to make fills an improve their property, would cost the city about $75,000. Plan No. 4, it was said would entail local expenditure of about $16,000, plus the estimated $3,400 outlay required for acquiring property rights. This outlay, however, would be included in the cost involved, either of the three plans is used. The Times was told Plan No. 2 would cost about $3,000 more than Plan No. 1.

E. S. Senator John Sherman Cooper and Congressman Carl D. Perkins have insisted on local flood protection, plus the construction of storage reservoirs in the headwaters of the Big Sandy and its tributaries. Engineers estimate that a dam on the Pound river and another at Flat Trap would have reduced the recent flood here by about five feet.

That this represents the largest rural secondary program ever proposed for this county.

Additional projects are being studied at the present time under the suggestions made by the Automotive Safety Foundation, and several miles of road are under construction for bituminous surfacing during the coming construction season.

In discussing the magnitude of Governor Chandler's expanded road program, Commissioner Wells explained that when the sale of the bonds voted at the last November Election is accomplished a tremendous road building program will be initiated.

Residents of the creek say they anticipate little trouble in the future over "red dog" hauling. The state trucks have hauled all the cinders away.

A GOOD TEAM
The University of Kentucky's Wildcats took their 17th Southeastern Conference basketball title. The Kentucky team led the colorful powerhouse this year that it has been in other years; there isn't an All-American on the squad. But it has some other qualities that offset this lack of color and power.
Fans have been touched by the fact that Ed Beck, the big center on the Wildcat five, has stuck to his post, doing fine work despite the fact that his wife is dying of cancer and he knows it. This Beck is already in, or is on the way to becoming, a Methodist minister, and he recently preached to an overflow congregation with all his teammates in the crowd. The team sum, as a part of the service, "On the Jericho Road," and the congregation was so large that two services were held.
That team could lose every game and still not be bad.

A GOOD TEAM
The University of Kentucky's Wildcats took their 17th Southeastern Conference basketball title. The Kentucky team led the colorful powerhouse this year that it has been in other years; there isn't an All-American on the squad. But it has some other qualities that offset this lack of color and power.
Fans have been touched by the fact that Ed Beck, the big center on the Wildcat five, has stuck to his post, doing fine work despite the fact that his wife is dying of cancer and he knows it. This Beck is already in, or is on the way to becoming, a Methodist minister, and he recently preached to an overflow congregation with all his teammates in the crowd. The team sum, as a part of the service, "On the Jericho Road," and the congregation was so large that two services were held.
That team could lose every game and still not be bad.

The Time is NOW!
It is time for the people to take a new approach to their problems as citizens and taxpayers of Floyd county. If this county is to make the progress it should, it must have a constructive program.
I want to pledge now, to the fullest extent of my ability and energies, that I will use all the power and influence of the County Judges' office to build roads up our creeks and branches. My idea is to go to the heads of the creeks and to come out building roads and not stop and be satisfied with a few hundred yards of road.
I believe the people are ready and willing to help with a program that would mean so much to them.
My idea is to make Floyd county fit for our people to continue to live in. We need them here in this county, not in some other part of Kentucky or in some distant state. But those who live up creeks and branches where there are no roads cannot be blamed for moving away in search of better living conditions. They are tired of their children having to wade mud and water, trying to get to school, and men doing the same as they try to get to work.
I invite every man and woman who has the best interests of Floyd county at heart to think and act with me along these lines.
Sincerely,
BILL GOOLLEY

THE BIG SANDY, ONE OF FOUR ORPHANS IN WATERWAY DEVELOPMENT, CHARGED

The Green River Valley Citizens League recently drafted a statement citing the needs of the Big Sandy, Kentucky, Cumberland and Green rivers and comparing what these watersheds have received in comparison with benefits received by the Tennessee river and the lower Cumberland.

The statement follows, in part: "Work on the lower Cumberland River high dam should be stopped forthwith if Congress cannot otherwise provide funds to initiate immediate construction of flood control-water storage in the far upper reaches of the Big Sandy, Kentucky, Cumberland and Green river watersheds of Kentucky. The lower Cumberland reservoir provides no flood protection for Kentucky while the upper projects will do so, and at the same time furnish unshakable economic possibilities of Kentucky's coal valleys. These areas have never received even a minor share of funds to develop their precious water resources, including the 17 small reservoirs mentioned later herein on the upper Big Sandy, Kentucky and Cumberland. Stopping the lower Cumberland project is a tough medicine, but at least, the recent disastrous floods on the upper Big Sandy, Kentucky and Cumberland justify the immediate transfer of engineering personnel and funds. These very same steps were taken by the Truman Administration following the great Missouri Valley flood early in this decade.

The Big Sandy, Kentucky and Cumberland have been favored with one per cent of the funds devoted to the Tennessee and Lower Cumberland river the fiscal year starting with 1934. In that period the shares roughly have been: Tennessee $220 million, Lower Cumberland $20 million, Big Sandy $6.3 million, Kentucky $3.2 million, Green $16.8 million. The ratio is 100 to 1 in favor of the Tennessee and Lower Cumberland, although neither can match the economic possibilities of the other four, especially the coal-steam-electric generation and other coal-based industry at which TVA excels.

The best will counsel still more decades of patience on the part of the neglected four watersheds, even though individually each one is larger in size and every other aspect so far as Kentucky is concerned. The Green is the largest watershed in Kentucky, covering one-fourth of the State. Assuming the Big Sandy, Kentucky, Upper Cumberland and Green should continue the role of cheerfully accepting the blame, it is rational to inquire the reasons for this undue preference heaped on the Tennessee and lower Cumberland. More than anything else, the Big Sandy, Kentucky, Upper Cumberland and Green have gotten exactly what they deserved as measured by their complicity over these twenty-five years and perhaps by their erstwhile docile acceptance of the doctrine that water resources development means taxpaying non-owners. However, in recent years these kind thinkers in the Green River valley have become convinced that better business to fight for a substantial share of such Federal funds. This decision was too slow in coming, but it has cost hundreds of millions to the local economy, but the Green in 1946 awakened to its possibilities and in saving fiscal 1952 has won about $12.4 million, proving that it pays to fight in doing so. The Tennessee Valley, with $200 million and could save him hundreds of millions more but for the fact that it has been "hogging the trough" year in and year out.

In the Tennessee Valley, starting with fiscal 1934, we have witnessed the world's outstanding example of very successful overall water resources development, so much so that this success has made it comparatively easy to enroll the powerful support of its own citizens and beyond the confines of the Tennessee Watershed. This Galah finally poured over into the lower Cumberland when the latter was part of the Tennessee State as well as Kentucky and it was not long before the lower Cumberland Watershed was also unduly preferred, until at the end of twenty-five years that area has been favored with more than enough funds to complete the total development of the Big Sandy, Kentucky, Upper Cumberland and Green water resources. It was indeed a Godsend that the Tennessee Valley's water was developed in time to permit the huge expansion of coal-steam production for the atomic era and without which TVA would be something less than the success it is. While this expansion might have taken place in the main Ohio Valley, with its developed water resources, seemingly it was not until later that its private industry stepped into the breach. It is prepared the Big Sandy, Kentucky, Upper Cumberland and Green could have averted great extra cost to the taxpayers because all this coal-steam power could be made there at much lower cost. This is the main burden of this paper but flood control is uppermost.

While the Tennessee and lower Cumberland were being favored with the huge sums there was not much left for four orphans out of the total sum to be devoted each year to the overall Ohio River Watershed. And when the main Ohio Valley's needs were also extracted it is small wonder, indeed, that anything was left for the orphaned Big Sandy, Kentucky, Upper Cumberland and Green. An effective example of how the Tennessee Cumberland and Main Ohio devour the funds are the recent Budget recommendations for fiscal 1956 viz. nearly $22 million for the main Ohio in Kentucky, almost $9 million for Cumberland, $121 million for TVA, while the Big Sandy is left out completely and the Kentucky is in fact almost $2 million and the Green for slightly more than $2 million. A current inequity is charging the Big Sandy with the cost of the main Ohio which are beneficial also to the Indiana, Illinois and Ohio. It is true that the Tennessee Valley figures are swollen unduly by funds for steam plants while other valleys are not so favored, still we cannot disregard this situation even if other valleys do not seek funds for steam plants. Given water storage, the Big Sandy, Kentucky, Upper Cumberland and Green can have control can be had at lower cost in the upper Big Sandy, Kentucky, Cumberland and Green whereby Kentucky will benefit, as will the lower Ohio and Mississippi, the latter to the same or greater extent as from the lower Cumberland high dam.

 There are more than 100,000 varieties of sea-shells and their collection has become a global hobby, report Donald and Louise Peattie in the March Reader's Digest. A shell may look like a pearl frozen in the stone, or like an ear, an eye, a screw, a butterfly, a turban, the paw of a lion, the comb of Venus or the wing of an angel. Each once housed a living creature.

control can be had at lower cost in the upper Big Sandy, Kentucky, Cumberland and Green whereby Kentucky will benefit, as will the lower Ohio and Mississippi, the latter to the same or greater extent as from the lower Cumberland high dam.

Making the water flow by the coal is cheaper than hauling the coal to the water. Although elementary, the Green River Valley has been unable to win recognition of this rudimentary fact or, otherwise, every one of its four reservoirs authorized by the Congress way back in June 1933 would now be completed and in operation to make possible the lowest cost coal-steam electricity in the world. Instead year after year, we have sadly witnessed giant steam plants going in to build in the next five years the Moha, Upper Green and Barren reservoirs of the Green River valley, even if the yearly cost will be less than $5 million or a total of $40 million for all three projects? Yet, the economic favor them over shamefully against the lower Cumberland high dam or against additional TVA steam plants if built in the Tennessee or lower Cumberland Valleys. It would not be difficult to make a similar showing in favor of reservoir projects in the far upper reaches on the Big Sandy, Cumberland and Green but the problem is to convince the right people in the National Administration and the Congress. This, indeed, seems completely without hope. The current budget is unquestionably swollen beyond recognition and that is why we demand at the outset of this study that the lower Cumberland project be stopped if Congress cannot otherwise provide funds for the four orphans. The eye-fall of hydro power to be made on the lower Cumberland is interruptible and it is available 70 per cent of the time it will be miraculous. And flood

Park Attendance Jumps A Million

Frankfort, Feb. 28 (Sp.) — Nearly a million and a half more people visited Kentucky State Parks in 1956 than in the previous year, Mrs. Bea Kilgore, parks director, has reported.

In 1955 there were 4,008,000 visitors at the State parks, while last year the figure jumped to 5,500,000, she added.

Mrs. Kilgore believes the sizeable increase resulted from lower rates during the off season, fishing, expanded facilities such as controlled hunting, and an increasing general interest in Kentucky's state-operated parks by residents not only in the Commonwealth but also throughout the region.

State Foresters Work Sans Rest In Flood Crisis

Frankfort, Feb. 28 (Sp.) — State foresters in Eastern Kentucky did heroic work during the recent flood in that section of the Commonwealth, Conservation Commissioner Laban Jackson said.

Some of the foresters worked continuously for more than two days and nights as the flood waters hit cities and towns with little warning, Jackson said. State foresters gave first notice of the possible flood danger in Eastern Kentucky, Jackson reported. He added:

"The group assisted in Allen, Barwick, Beattyville, Buckhorn, Bush, Canoe, Charies, Haddix, Hazard, Jackson, Jerkes, Krypton and other communities during the billion-dollar disaster. Loss of life would have been greater had it not been for the foresters' radio system, local officials said.

Two foresters, Bill Music, Prestonsburg, and John Griffith, of Pike county, while assisting others, had their own homes flooded and each lost their personal possessions as a result.

Other men, such as Earl Young, of Wagon, Morehead, a radio technician for the foresters; Walter Green, of Hazard; Clarence Lehr, with Music and Griffith, were extremely helpful in notifying officials and others of the rising waters, in directing emergency units to stricken areas, and later in acting as guides for relief units.

The foresters arranged for an emergency transformer to be brought to the Buckhorn school and infirmary at the start of the flood, saving that place from having no electricity during the disaster.

Others set up communication relay units to keep authorities posted on the various flood conditions.

Conservation Dept. Conducts Contest

Frankfort, Feb. 28 (Sp.) — The State Conservation Department is conducting a contest to determine Kentucky's most effective soil conservation district.

"We feel local cooperative effort by all concerned should be encouraged," said Commissioner Laban Jackson, "and the outstanding example recognized by suitable awards and recognition to team members."

Teams are composed of the local agents, work unit conservationists of the Soil Conservation Service, vocational-agriculture teams and members of the board of supervisors. The contest ends June 30. Awards will be five vacations in Kentucky State Parks.

T.B.-Mental Plan Is Begun By State

Frankfort, Feb. 25 (Sp.) — Two state agencies have initiated a joint program to provide better treatment for mental patients suffering with tuberculosis.

Gov. A. B. Chandler announced that tubercular mental patients will be treated at Hazelwood Sanatorium, Louisville.

The Mental Health Department will be responsible for custody and psychiatric treatment of the patients. Medical and nursing care will be provided by the Tuberculosis Hospital Commission at the sanatorium.

Dr. Harold McPheeters, mental health commissioner, and Joe D. Miller, director of the commission, described the plan as a "joint co-operative program."

The two agencies hope to achieve more rapid recovery of the patients and enable them to return to society sooner.

DORAN SAYS DISTRICTS CAN'T FINANCE NEEDS

Morehead, Ky., Feb. 22 (Sp.) — "The school districts of Eastern Kentucky cannot meet their building needs from local sources and state aid," Dr. Adron Doran, president of Morehead State College, told a House committee in Washington, February 13.

Dr. Doran told the legislators in a prepared address that "it is the solemn duty of the Congress of the United States to appropriate sufficient funds to relieve the critical situation among the schools of Kentucky."

Also appearing before the committee, which is considering legislation relating to schoolhouse construction, were Dr. Robert L. Martin, Superintendent of Public Instruction, and Marvin Dodson, executive secretary of the KEA.

Dr. Doran said, "If the school districts of the 17 counties in the Eastern Kentucky Education District were to levy the 50 cents tax rate provided by state law and incur a bonded indebtedness equal to 2% of the assessed valuation of property as provided by the State Constitution, they could meet only 35% of their building needs."

He added, "Kentucky needs 10,000 additional school rooms which cost $50,000,000. The school districts of Eastern Kentucky need 1,800 of these rooms and are estimated to cost $9,017,500. This means that of all the school rooms needed for the schools of Kentucky 20% of them would have to be built in Eastern Kentucky to meet the needs of the schools in this area."

Capitol Notebook

Frankfort, Feb. 25 (Sp.) — Now that the primaries are held in May instead of August, Kentuckians begin savoring politics even before the Spring thaw. Out in the country the other day, this writer came across a candidate posting his picture on telephone poles. He said he'd run out of tacks, but that wasn't stopping him. He was pulling the tacks out of old campaign posters and using them to nail up new ones.

KENTUCKY FEATURETTE

Late in the summer of 1778, a 18-year-old boy, James Ray, killed a big-winged duck near Fort Harrod. When he had roasted the fowl, a man of military bearing emerged from the forest. The boy offered to share his duck. The man seemed starved and ate all of it. After the stranger asked questions about the settlement, the boy offered to guide him to the fort. Thus, George Rogers Clark introduced himself to Harrodsburg. He later became leader of the settlement.

I recall my father after he had supper some nights would go into the kitchen, use meal and make cornbread with grease in it. He would put it in a baking pan, set it propped up before the fire to cook. Mother always had meat boiled. We used homemade dark sorghum molasses. I was raised on a farm about four miles from Glasgow—C.P.M., Detroit.

I recall the adage that when the shipwreck was heard at eventide it would rain that night—Mrs. Heber Keathly, Pikeville.

I recall about 50 years ago legislative halls at Frankfort rang with silver-tongued oratory. It was really musical, but it resulted in some crazy laws on the books at some times the oratory prevailed over good sense. Of course, we have nothing like that now, except when a new dog law comes up—B.L.Y., Paris.

20,000 Young Mothers Dispose of Children On "Black Market"

Financial and legal restrictions on legitimate social agencies force 20,000 girl mothers to dispose of their children in the baby "black market," charges Alice Lake in the March Reader's Digest in an article, "Why Young Girls Sell Their Babies."

"A private agency seldom has funds to support a girl through her pregnancy and hospitalization," reports the writer. "She must seek help from a public agency, usually a welfare department. But the girl who leaves her home city, to have her baby in secrecy, is usually ineligible for such funds." It most states a girl is eligible for public aid only if she has been a resident for a year.

Music

From the time he first heard a crude shepherd's pipe until today when he delights in sophisticated orchestration, music has been an indispensable adjunct to the needs of man.

Whatever they are, merry or melancholy, music enhances them. Good company... good food... good drink take on a more pleasurable aspect where there's music in the air. Music soothes and stimulates, rouses and relaxes, cheers and comforts.

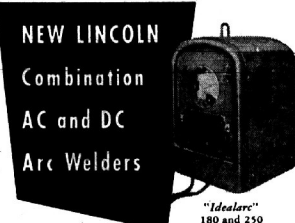

Music moves armies... and the gentle hearts of women.

This is music for every man... the doleful, rhythmic chants of cotton patch and levee... the free and swinging songs of the prairie... the stately ballads of the mountaineers... the nostalgic folk tunes of a homeland... the tense, pulsing beat of restless cities.

Wherever he is... wherever his origins... wherever he goes... every man seeks the music he wants. And there's no more convenient, more pleasing way to enjoy good music than on the juke box.

Flood-Damaged Lawns Can Be Handled Easily

Home owners worrying about their lawns covered during the recent Eastern Kentucky floods can take immediate steps that will bring back the grass, says N. R. Elliott, UK Agricultural Extension Service lawn specialist.

Many lawns are covered with only one to a half inch, of flood silt and deposit, he said. Leave these lawns alone, as the grass probably will easily grow through this thin covering.

Where silt and deposit are piled higher than that, shovel off the covering until about an inch is left. Chisel grass seed sown now probably will bring a good, quick grass cover, Elliott says. Ryegrass sowed at the rate of 3 pounds per 1,000 square feet of lawn, raked loosely to cover the seed, will probably suffice. To this should be added about a quarter pound of red top seed per 1,000 square feet, Elliott said. These two will probably give a quick cover which can be mowed this summer.

Don't use expensive bluegrass now, he advised. Wait till mid-September; sow from one to three quarters of a pound of this per 1,000 square feet at this time.

And don't fertilize either, Elliott points out. The flood-borne soils on lawns probably are rich enough now. Where lawns were covered with 5 to 8 inches of silt, etc., sow the ryegrass seed now right on top of this deposit, he recommends. No fertilizer is needed for this planting, either.

NEW SOCIAL SECURITY LAWS RESULTS TOLD

The result of recent Social Security changes are now being felt in full force in the Pikeville Social Security office, according to Thomas B. Thompson, district manager.

"Last week," he said, "we took care of more than 500 items of business. These included personal claims interviews, visits to neighboring counties, issuance of new and duplicate Social Security cards, providing information, approving application for payments, and making changes or adjustments in benefits already being paid."

"This increase in office callers has caused a slow-down in the completion of initial benefit payments," Thompson explained. He said many self-employed farmers are making applications for the first time and a sizeable number of retired workers and widows neglect to bring needed records when they call to make application for payments.

Generally speaking a retired person needs some proof of his age. So do widows of retired workers and widows age 62 or older. Also, widows usually need to have their marriage records, and birth certificates are always needed for children under 18.

In addition, self-employed individuals must present a copy of their last year's income tax return—along with a receipt for payment of Social Security taxes.

Thompson emphasized that the Social Security office is always glad to answer all inquiries about Old-Age and Survivors Insurance. Persons desiring general information, though, might be better served if they defer their questions until a later time. "But under no circumstances," he added, "should a retiring worker or the family of a deceased worker put off getting in touch with us."

Another temporary inconvenience to the public, Thompson pointed out, is that persons tend to call at the Social Security office early in the morning, and early in the week. "We always have more people on Mondays—and more in the mornings. There'll be less waiting time," he explained. "For persons who call in the afternoon—preferably in the middle of the week."

The virtues of milk are well known. It offers flavorful, healthful, and economical nutrition. Many of us can rattle off these fine qualities like a parrot. It seems as though there is something for everyone of us to admire in milk.

When you pick up a bottle of milk you're buying a lot more than just milk. You buy services which help you enjoy healthful, delicious milk at all times. Services such as pick-up to take to plant, pasteurization, and delivery to store or home.

One quart of milk per day for children and one pint for adults is a good measure. Drink it or eat it. Milk can be prepared in one way or another that you like and so get what you need. Here is a recipe you may try.

MILK GRAVY
4 T fat
2 c milk
1/2 c lard
Heat fat in pan over low heat, add flour. Cook until frothy, constantly stirring. Add milk at once. Stir until cooked thick, season. Simmer five minutes. Pour into a hot bowl and serve to accompaniment, potatoes or meat.

He has been overseas since January of last year.

Sizemore was an interior decorator at the Consumers Paint Factory in Gary, Ind., before entering the Army in October, 1954.

Retired women workers, wives of retired workers, and widows may now receive payments at age 62. Those persons can make their applications anytime before next November—and still not lose any payments.

"Generally speaking," Thompson said, "persons will be helping themselves if they bring proofs with them when they call, refrain from calling early in the week, and do not make unnecessary follow-up inquiries."

at Johnsonville, Waits Bar, Kingsport, the Green River, the John Sevier in the Tennessee Valley and Shawnee, Johns and Madison on the main Ohio followed lately by the Green River in the West. In every one of these the coal must be hauled and handled several times at cost. In the Big Sandy, Kentucky, Upper Cumberland and the Green the coal could be conveyed from the mines, without ever seeing the light of day, directly into the hoppers of the power plants. But only if the reservoirs upstream were functioning to provide a constant and regulated supply of water would this be attractive. Every one of these giant power plants exist by reason of selling huge blocks of power directly to Uncle Sam, so any saving in power cost possible at these sites is important. Upper Cumberland and Green should be going into the U. S. Treasury. That these reservoirs are now paying dearly for their complacency and so is Uncle Sam. Other large power plants have been located in the main Ohio Valley in recent years, especially those serving large industrial consumers requiring substantial blocks of power. What would the Big Sandy, Kentucky, Upper Cumberland and Green do to them without the need for power? Industry would be the power beyond any question of doubt and that is why TVA wants still more steam plants. In other words, Kentucky's coal valleys without flood control-water storage, are deprived of the right to consume a substantial tonnage of their coal at the mines even if private industry could save Uncle Sam and bring in millions of dollars yearly. Surely there is more to Kentucky than just the Tennessee, Lower Cumberland and main Ohio Valley. This combination of ample and constant water supply alongside coal reserves not only makes possible the lowest cost electric energy of an uninterrupted nature, but the time is fast approaching when low cost gas must be made at the coal mines to replace the depleted supply of natural gas that is constantly increasing in price. Coal-gasification requires huge quantities of water and is one of the steps in the ultimate production of gasoline from coal. The need of water stored in upper reservoirs for this purpose was emphasized in the engineering report of December 14, 1951 entitled "The Synthetic Life Fuel Plant, Kentucky." That report provides considerable detail as to water supply possibilities in the coal-bearing counties on the upper Big Sandy and Kentucky as well as the far reach purposes of the Cumberland and the coal-bearing counties not helped by Lake Cumberland and other reservoirs all too far downstream to utilize the Upper Cumberland coal without expensive transportation and handling. It is more important to point out that the suggested reservoirs, four in the upper Cumberland, six in the upper Kentucky and seven in the upper Big Sandy would be factors in preventing the devastating floods of the flash variety. At the same time the stored waters by attracting industry should make jobs in the Big Sandy, Kentucky and Upper Cumberland. The report also advocated five small reservoirs on the Green River, Barren and Edmonson counties but the authorized major reservoirs on the Nolm, Upper Green and Barren would more than meet the requirements along with low flow regulation authority for the Corps of Engineers.

There is nothing synthetic about producing gasoline from coal even though the Federal Government has greatly curtailed its expenditures in recent years for the perfection of suitable processes. Few realize that private industry is quietly proceeding with steps, although indirectly toward that goal and simultaneously the low cost generation of electricity is tied in with this little heralded activity. And what's more important is that it is all being done where an ample and constant supply of water flows by the mine supplying the coal. The sad part is that once again Kentucky was not prepared respecting water supply to reach out for this golden opportunity. Instead, recently not one plant but a whole series of plants, including coal mining, power generation, Char - chemical, and aluminum smelting, were located in the upper main Ohio valley; a few miles down stream from Wheeling, West Va. This stupendous undertaking involves the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Company, the American Gas & Electric Company, the Ohio-Matheson Corporation and, among others, even the Standard Oil Company of Ohio. The coal is to move directly from the mine through a plant producing char in type of coke and gases. The char goes to the power plant and gases through a chemical process. These same gases can be converted to the synthetic oils including gasoline. Of course, the electricity is essential in the production of ammonia. The fact that hundreds of millions of dollars are being invested in this undertaking should be sufficient to convince Kentucky that it ought to provide the needed water at its coal mines to qualify for any such industrial developments as this. It is only the beginning. If Kentucky is content to rely on its Ohio River frontage for such enterprises may be point out that save for TVA steam plant at Paducah and its accompanying atomic works, Kentucky has been by-passed time and again. For example, the Joppa power plant went to Illinois, the Alton Smelter and Madison power plant to Indiana, the Atomic Works to Ohio, etc. But up its four coal-bearing regions on the Big Sandy, Kentucky, Upper Cumberland and Green, Kentucky would have the advantage in such instances of lower production costs if only the needed water supply is stored.

The aforementioned American Gas and Electric Company is building at least three more power plants over coal reserves, all of which are so-called breeder stations involving single 450,000 KW generating units. It is noteworthy that one of these breeders is being located near Terre Haute, Indiana on the Wabash River, which site appears to be more than 100 miles from the AG&EO's transmission system. By employing the comparatively new practice of using 330,000 volt transmission, it is attractive because AG&EO has found that "if all coal sites available are met it is almost universally true that energy can be transmitted over distances of say 200 miles cheaper than by power lines." This pointing a finger at locating power plants on coal reserves. Therefore, if the Big Sandy, Kentucky, Upper Cumberland and Green River Valleys with their huge coal deposits are at long last provided with water storage, as is possible at such small investment then TVA, AG&EO and others should be attracted to these watersheds even though their transmission systems may be somewhat distant. For example, if the Green River Valley had the water, would the Louisville Gas and Electric Company, be justified in continually building additional generating plants at Louisville? Or, for that matter, would the Public Service Company of Indiana be constructing a large power plant at New Albany, Indiana? The answer is NO in spite of the fact that these coal-bearing transmission systems are miles from the Green River Valley. The Big Sandy coal is another example, it is less than 100 miles to the southern Ohio Atomic Works, which is drawing some of its power from Madison, Indiana, over a 100 miles distance. And the coal is being hauled to Madison.

There have been several statements to the effect that had the Buckton Reservoir been completed on the Kentucky River the recent flood damage would have been considerably less in spots. This must be true since the system of reservoirs on the Tennessee were again completed during the same period. The lower Cumberland semingly fared well with its several reservoirs in operation. The flood situation on the Green would hardly have been noticeable if its four projected reservoirs were realities. Construction it is being strung out over a period of years seemingly for lack of funds. Would the Roush and the Buckhorn be dragging, if the lower Cumberland high dam had not been needlessly injected by Congress last year? The latter is anything but an emergency nature and save for navigation it is not justified of all. Flood control-water storage in the upper Big Sandy, Kentucky, Cumberland and Green should be preferred forthwith. Standing together these four orphans will prevail.
