Track supporters to take their case to panel

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

The Kentucky General Assembly may or may not heed Governor Breton Jones' every word, but Jones can't accuse the people of Eastern Kentucky of ignoring him. Following the governor's advice, a small group of Kentucky Downs supporters will take their cause on the road next week to air their grievances with the Kentucky Racing Commission. That advice was given in May, when a group traveled to Jones' Frankfort office to complain that the racing commission had acted "in a biased, capricious manner" in denying Eastern Kentucky racing rights to conduct live harness racing at Kentucky Downs in 1993.

House Majority Leader Greg Stumbo, D-Prestonsburg, met with the protest group the same day, vowing to introduce to the General Assembly legislation abolishing the racing commission and to prepare litigation against the commissioners for imperfections that have financially damaged Eastern Kentucky Racing.

That legislation has been pre-filled and could be acted upon by late summer, Stumbo said, adding that there could be grounds to sue racing commissioners in Floyd District Court.

Despite allegations, Jones told the Eastern Kentucky envoys that he was unable to legally interfere with the commission's decision and that they should address the commission at its next meeting.

Floyd County Chamber of Commerce Director Keith Akers said Tuesday that a protest group will travel to Louisville's Churchill Downs to meet with racing commissioners on Wednesday, June 8, when former Governor Julian Carroll, representing Eastern Kentucky Racing, will request live racing dates for 1994.

Mike Falkerson, one of the racing commissioners, said Tuesday that there is a very good chance that request will be honored, although hopes for a 1993 racing season at Kentucky Downs are all but lost.

"I don't think anybody on the commission wants (Eastern Kentucky Racing) to drop the ball," Falkerson said. "If they can't get the stuff done that was approved for '93, there's no reason on Earth they can't race in '94. Rome wasn't built in a day and if you believe the Bible, it took God seven days to create the universe."

Akers said that protestors would rally together Tuesday, June 7, at 7 p.m. at Jenny Wiley State Park's Wilkinson Stumbo Convention Center. The public is urged to attend, Akers added.

Driver jailed for murder

Larry D. Robinson

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

A Prestonsburg man died Saturday evening from injuries suffered four hours earlier when he was run over by the alleged boyfriend of his estranged wife.

According to Trooper Ghomer Prater of the Pikeville Post of the Kentucky State Police, William Kent "Bucky" Rose, 52, was hit at 2:20 p.m. Saturday by a vehicle driven by 43-year-old Larry D. Robinson. Rose was transported to Highlands Regional Medical Center and air-lifted to Cabell-Huntington Hospital in West Virginia, Prater said, where he was pronounced dead at around 6:30 p.m.

Prater said that the incident apparently occurred after Rose stopped his car in the middle of the road near the bridge at Banner, exited the vehicle and began walking toward Robinson's vehicle.

"The fatality was possibly the result of an earlier dispute," Prater said. Robinson had reportedly been dating Rose's estranged wife, Mary Rose, a passenger in the Rose vehicle at the time of the incident.

Robinson was arrested at the scene by officers of the Kentucky State Police, Prater said, and was lodged in the Floyd County jail. He was charged with murder.

At an arraignment hearing Tuesday, Prestonsburg attorney Neal Piliersdorf entered a not guilty plea on Robinson's behalf, contending that the death had been accidental.

Floyd District Judge Danny Caudill declined to set bond and scheduled a preliminary hearing in the case for Tuesday, June 8.

Rose was a conductor for CSX Railroad Corporation. He is survived by his wife, Mary DeRossett Rose; and two sons, William Kent Rose II, of Prestonsburg; and Allen Thomas Rose, of Frankfort.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 10 a.m. at the Carter Funeral Home in Prestonsburg.

Rescue squad will conduct annual fund-raiser today

Turn the radio on Wednesday and listen to the 27th annual Floyd County Rescue Squad auction.

The auction begins Wednesday at 3 p.m. on WDOC. It airs daily from 3 p.m. until sign-off at 9 p.m. On Saturday, the last day to get in on the bargains, the auction begins at noon.

Items to be auctioned include a trunk lid from the Rusty Wallace car that crashed at Talladega, a couch and chair donated by Hylon Homes and granite vases donated by Nelson-Frazier. Flower arrangements, hair cuts, service jobs, tires, batteries — items too numerous to mention in limited newspaper space — will also be auctioned.

The public may view the items upstairs in the rescue squad building on Highland Avenue, Prestonsburg, during the auction.

Funds from the auction will be used to update equipment and to train members of the squad.

Vote recanvasses requested by four

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

Although the polls closed more than a week ago, Primary Election '93, like the countless thousands of campaign signs it spawned, apparently continues to clutter Floyd County's landscape.

Apparent vandalism and mechanical failures at the polls delayed voting in many precincts last Tuesday and forced voters at many precincts to cast paper ballots, prompting outgoing Commonwealth's Attorney Jerry Patton to order seven of the faulty voting machines impounded and to request that Attorney General Chris Gorman investigate charges of voter fraud.

A spokesperson for Floyd County Clerk Carla Robinson Boyd said this week that Patton, along with three other candidates, has also demanded a recanvass.

So far, she said, only Patton, judge/executive candidate Dale McKinney, judge candidate Junior Joseph and District Three magisterial candidate Chris Hall have officially requested a recanvass. Hall, an independent candidate for the District Three seat, was not on the May Primary ballot and his request may not be authorized by state law.

According to unofficial vote tallies issued last week by Boyd's office, Patton lost to challenger John Earl Hunt by over 530 votes, with a total of 7,996 to Hunt's 8,530. McKinney lost to incumbent John M. Stumbo by 2,050, with a total of 7,142 votes to Stumbo's 9,192; and Joseph was defeated by Roger Webb, who earned 3,281 votes to Joseph's 2,707. Hall at least is square off against GOP contender Curtis Hall and Tommy Neil Adams, who ousted incumbent Betty Caudill.

A date for the recanvass has not yet been scheduled.

Government center plan okayed

Fiscal Court gives go-ahead to three-phase project

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Floyd County officials gave the go-ahead Friday to a three-phase construction project which would include building a new county government/courthouse facility, a new jail and revamp the Big Sandy Area Juvenile Detention Center.

Chenault Woodford, with the architectural firm of Chrisman, Miller and Woodford, gave a presentation on the new three-story government center at Friday's fiscal court meeting. Plans include construction of a two-level underground parking area and a three-story above ground structure which would house local and state government offices.

No cost estimate for the 90,000 square-foot building was given, but Woodford did say it would cost eight dollars per square foot per year to operate the facility which equals $720,000 annually.

County officials hope to offset the operating cost by renting office space to the state.

County offices would be moved to the new facility which will include private office space for magistrates. Complete details of plans and a cost estimate on building the structure should be completed by November.

Floyd Fiscal Court members also approved proceeding with plans to build a new 110-bed jail, to be located on the parking lot behind the courthouse.

Schematic design plans for a new $3.3 million jail were approved by

College auditorium to be seat of justice

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Prestonsburg Community College's Pike Auditorium will be the site for real courtroom drama beginning Monday when Floyd County Circuit Court Judge John David Caudill moves into his interim courtroom facility.

Administrative Office of the Courts Regional Court Administrator Linda Grimm said Tuesday that the PCC auditorium will be used as Floyd County's second circuit courtroom until a permanent facility is constructed in the former Korner Drug Store building in Prestonsburg.

Since Judge Caudill was appointed to the bench last year, he and Circuit Judge Harold Stumbo have had to share the county's only circuit courtroom.

Judge Caudill said Tuesday that he is thankful to have a courtroom of his own and appreciates the cooperation of PCC's staff.

"I think it will be a fine facility within the college and I appreciate the college at lending me the opportunity," Judge Caudill said. "I especially want to thank Linda Grimm for all her work in assisting me in getting a temporary facility. I also want to thank Circuit Judge (Stephen) Nick Frazier for his efforts."

Grimm said jurors reporting for jury duty for Division II Circuit Court will report to the college campus and will be allowed to park on the campus lot in areas that are not reserved.

Grimm added that the permanent facility in the Korner Drug Store is expected to be completed by July 15.

Forum to focus on state government

State workers and the general public in the Floyd County area will get the opportunity to have their say when the Governor's Commission on Quality and Efficiency holds a public forum in Prestonsburg on Friday, June 4.

The areas under review include fiscal management, human resources, technology, workforce training, human services, public safety and government operations.

The Prestonsburg forum, which is open to the public, will be held at the Big Sandy Area Development District office on Resource Drive, from 3 p.m. until 7 p.m.

Hearing set in attempted robbery from the First Guaranty National Bank at Martin.

A preliminary hearing was set for June 9 for a Prestonsburg woman charged in connection with last week's thwarted attempt to get money

Rhonda Vanco, 33, also known as Rhonda Harris, was charged Thursday with first degree attempted robbery, kidnapping, unlawful imprisonment, terroristic threatening and theft by extortion for allegedly forcing Michael Taylor, 31, of Jackhorn, at gunpoint to drive her to the Martin bank to withdraw funds from Taylor's account.

On Thursday afternoon, Vanco allegedly went to Taylor's place of business at Turkey Creek pretending to be pregnant and asked Taylor for assistance in fixing a flat on her vehicle, Floyd deputy sheriff Ricky Thomsberry said. When Vanco got into Taylor's vehicle, she showed Taylor what appeared to be a .45 caliber weapon and told him to drive to the bank and withdraw money from his account and give it to her, Thomsberry said. Vanco also claimed to have an explosive device in her purse and told Taylor that his house and his neighbor's house had been wired with explosives, Thomsberry added.

When Taylor stopped his vehicle in the bank parking lot, he fled the vehicle and called police from a local service station.

Deputies Thomsberry, Daniel Hutchinson, Eugene Hutchinson and Homer Neeley later arrested Vanco, who was sitting in a booth at Zippie's Pizza located behind the bank.

On Thursday, police found a pellet gun, a fake explosive device and several articles of clothing on a creek bank behind First Guaranty, Thomsberry said Tuesday.

Vanco is lodged in the Floyd County Jail on a $50,000 or 10 percent cash bond. At an arraignment Friday, not guilty pleas on the charges were entered and Floyd District Judge Danny Caudill appointed a public defender for Vanco.

The case is under investigation by the Kentucky State Police and the FBI.

the court, and county officials hope to defray operating costs by housing state and federal prisoners.

The single-story structure would house minimum security prisoners in a dormitory-type area within the jail and would have double occupancy cells for more serious criminal offenders.

Woodford, whose firm is also designing the jail, said the facility could be in operation by the fall of 1994.

The third phase of the project calls for remodeling the Big Sandy Area Detention Center to increase the number of juvenile offenders to be housed from 18 to 36.

In other action Friday, the court approved loaning almost $200,000 to the solid waste department "to meet past due bills" for hauling garbage to Pike County and Pritchard, West Virginia.

The loan, totaling $180,543.08, is made up of funds transferred from the following accounts: deputy judge/executive; custodial supplies; utilities; insurance; transfers; unemployment insurance; county surveyor; and new equipment for the E-911 system.

The court held no discussions on the reasons for the loan or how accounts would be affected.

Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo did say that a $200,000 "loan or grant" for a transfer station is pending in Frankfort.

County Attorney Jim Hammond reported that he is continuing to investigate an "alleged" state violation issued to the county for operating an illegal transfer station. Hammond also said he is investigating reports of conflicts of interest complaints about the meeting schedule of the Solid Waste Commission and other "complaints" concerning the Solid Waste Commission.

Also Friday the court: held first reading of the 1993-94 county budget which is estimated to be $6.7 million; passed resolutions to take in a roadway at Doty Branch; to lease facilities from Ray and Kelly Slone for the Slone Mountain Squirrel Festival; to enter into an agreement for a regional E-911 system; and to apply for a regional D.A.R.E. grant.

All members of the court were present for Friday's meeting. The next regular meeting of the court is Friday, June 18 at 10 a.m. at the courthouse annex. The meeting is open to the public.

End the suffering

by Scott Perry

Last week's election offered several good reasons for Floyd County to take a giant step into modern times.

When voters are forced to use paper ballots because voting machines don't work, or they are discouraged from voting because of technical problems at the polls, it's time to change.

Many of our neighbors find voting as simple and convenient as pushing a button.

Because that's all they have to do.

Computerized voting machines that fit into a suitcase make voting much less of a chore and keeping tabs on results much less of a headache.

They're fast and efficient and easy to repair, compared to their bulky, out-dated and undependable lever-type cousins.

The cost associated with changing over, no doubt, will be high.

But what better justification is there for spending taxpayer money than spending it to make it easier for them to participate in their own government?

The Floyd County Fiscal Court can make the switch and we recommend that they do.

There's no good reason to make voters suffer any longer.

Slow down and live

To a coal truck driver on Turkey Creek. Why?

Why were you traveling so fast? Were you in a big hurry to get home so you could spend more time with your family? You almost killed part of mine.

While going around a curve on the Turkey Creek road on the evening of May 24, you crowded my sister off the road. It would have been nice had you stopped to see if she survived. Sure, the road needs to be wider! Until that happens, please slow down!

On May 12, eighty-three individuals attended our "Survival Skills for the Single Parent in 1993" workshop featuring home and car maintenance. It took the direct assistance of more than thirty-nine individuals from twelve agencies to put together this event. Mayo Vocational Technical School provided supportive staff and students to guide first-timers through the hands-on activities. Other agencies that helped included Big Sandy Area Development District, East Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program, Mountain Comprehensive Care, Kentucky State Police, Job Corps, and the Department of Social Insurance staff from Pike, Johnson, Magoffin and Martin counties. Coffee Break

by Scott Perry

This column is dedicated to those who occasionally find the call of nature irresistible and answer by exchanging the comforts of home for a long weekend of camping out and a minimum of two days without a shower....

Butchstock 93

They came from far and near, from all walks of life, to commemorate the first holiday of summer near the banks of the Big Sandy on the farm of lawyer-farmer Butch Walker, our longtime step-neighbor in law and godfather of our son's pet lizard, Blackie.

It was a dark and stormy night.

Oops, getting ahead of ourselves.

Tent City was abuzz early Saturday as families and friends arrived with enough food to supply Sherman's march to the sea and enough children, large and small, to bait a dozen trotlines.

Ha, ha. Just kidding about that last one. We didn't actually stick the hooks in them...we used duct tape.

The campfire was ringed by tents of all shapes and sizes, including one split-level and our own "Old Brownie," a veteran of many outings and victim of many sharp sticks. Old Brownie served as headquarters for a gaggle of giggling teen-age and pre-teen girls, who stocked it with survival gear...like make-up cases, solar powered curling irons and fireproof safes in which to secure their stock of rap music and supplies of Clearasil.

As night fell on the first day, the young ones were coated with mosquito repellent and tucked away in their sleeping bags while the moms and dads gravitated toward the heat radiating from a 55-gallon drum of salsa to spit and whistle and tell tall tales of their adventures in horseshoe pitching and picking burrs from their underwear.

A good time was had by all. Day two arrived with the sounds and smells of breakfast. The small ones headed out to explore the wilderness while those who had participated in the previous night's good time had by all downed dangerous doses of aspirin and Roloids with their morning coffee.

As the day wore on, more horseshoes were flung, more bodies were sunburned, more fish went uncaught and another railcar of salsa was unloaded and consumed. It was a dark and stormy night.

As thunder rumbled and lightning flickered in the distance, brave campers circled the campfire to roast anything that would burn (including the socks off our own feet, though it would have been nice if our compatriots would have allowed us to remove them first), singing songs of the 60s and telling jokes that were just as old.

Then the rains came, driving the last holdouts to their tents where some slept and others bailed and all hoped they would not have to answer nature's call before the storm ended.

Morning came early as the soggy and groggy emerged for coffee and Roloids, some saddened by the prospects of breaking camp and some already heading off toward showers, soft mattresses and Egg McMuffins.

Tent by tent, the campers left, already reminiscing over their adventures and threatening blackmail with the photos they had taken.

Back to civilization, to careers and occupations they trekked, filled with memories and covered with poison ivy.

And, despite their varied backgrounds, one common trait will bind this hearty band of wilderness families together forever....

None of this gang could ever pass the scrutiny of a Supreme Court confirmation hearing.

Unless, of course, they make howling at the moon one of the qualifications.

Put another log on the fire....

Decriminalization of drugs is a myth

by Leonard Larsen
Scripps Howard News Service

The Clinton administration, so it's said, will shift direction of the federal "war" against drugs, turning—at least beginning a turn—away from tough enforcement and interdiction and more toward treatment and education.

It may be reading too much into a policy that hasn't even been announced, but the trial balloons cut loose from the White House have even encouraged a round of renewed wacky speculation that the happy day of drug "decriminalization" may be coming, at least brought back for discussion.

That's the time envisioned by a range of experts from addicts to recreational users to libertarian children of privilege, solemn social workers, burned out judges and lobbyists for expensive drug treatment centers.

In its pure form, "decriminalization" will come when laws and cops will be replaced by understanding and kindly concern—and when it's needed—a shot or snort or smoke or swallow of your drug of choice will be available at low cost and with a federal guarantee of purity.

The speculation of a drug policy shift was helped along by the Clinton White House, which has encouraged reports to read the message of change into recent events.

First President Clinton named Lee Brown, a former New York City police commissioner, to be the new White House drug "czar," an office that Clinton had skeletalized soon after his inauguration and left conspicuously empty.

Then it was said that Brown would "place more emphasis on treatment and prevention" programs and that his office, small as it has become, would be elevated to Cabinet status.

The next suggestion of a drug policy shift that will soft pedal the law-and-order emphasis of the past decade came from Attorney General Janet Reno, who's become the Clinton administration's reigning hero and authority on nearly everything.

In the weird atmosphere of a presidency that's sinking in public favor, Reno has become a lone bright light, all by claiming personal responsibility for one of the worst tragedies in law enforcement history, the disaster that claimed an estimated 80 lives at Waco, Texas.

So when a new-policy drug czar comes aboard and the heroic attorney general forecasts change from drug interdiction and enforcement and when the bible of the Washington establishment, "The Economist," has editorialized in favor of "A Common-Sense Drug Policy," we should all be on warning that the drug "war" will be fought another way.

And helpful advice is already being delivered, the some of it from the "decriminalization" movement whose basic teaching is that the trouble isn't with the tons of illegal drugs that flood the nation or the murderous organizations that distribute the drugs or the millions of users and addicts with all the tragic health and criminal problems they bring with them or the crushing national costs in lost lives and property.

The trouble, it's said, is in the legal prohibitions against drugs. Drop the laws and the prohibitions and— presto—the American drug problem will become a simple problem of supply and demand.

Very simple, or so it's said. For users who resist counsel and treatment, there would even be Uncle Sam pharmacies to sell drugs at reasonable prices, cutting out the criminal middlemen.

Sharp in the world of "decriminalization" might stop by for some pot, maybe some cocaine, perhaps some heroin or LSD if guests are expected. And don't forget the coin machine at the door to get a few rocks of crack for their kids.

Far-fetched, maybe, but it's not yet explained how "decriminalization" of drugs will decriminalize the criminals and how vast networks of criminal operations—networks now delivering billions of dollars in profits spread among hundreds of thousands of criminals—will simply disappear.

The myth of "decriminalization" is that government order can be brought to a drug culture and a maze of criminal networks that thrive on constantly widening markets, even into elementary schools, all of the structures protected by murderous gunmen.

That won't just go away, certainly not with "decriminalization" and not with relaxation of enforcement.

Get rid of mandatory sentencing

by Scripps Howard News Service

The latest shot in the long-running, low intensity war over mandatory minimum sentences for federal crimes was fired the other day by Judge Harold Greene of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. Greene balked at sending a 25-year-old drug dealer to jail for 30 years.

The case before the judge involved possession of 0.25 ounces of cocaine and heroin with intent to sell. Because the defendant had three prior felony convictions for drugs—and thus was a "career criminal"—he automatically drew 30 years without parole.

Judge Greene found this mandatory minimum sentence "grossly out of proportion" to the crime; the prior, non-violent offenses also involved small amounts of narcotics. Insisting that he must have discretion to take this fact into account, Greene gave the offender 10 years—and ruled the congressionally imposed minimum sentence unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court has previously upheld even more draconian state mandatory sentences, so Greene's revolt probably will not withstand appeal. Nevertheless, Congress should take heed.

Many, if not most, judges oppose statutorily required, automatic minimum sentences—and so does the Sentencing Commission, created in the Sentencing Reform Act of 1984. The commission was charged with developing guidelines intended to reduce unneeded disparities in the sentences handed down by different courts for the same crime. But unlike mandatory minimums, the guidelines leave room for judges to weigh a wide range of mitigating and aggravating factors.

The guidelines were devised to eliminate overly harsh and overly lenient sentences, which offend the public's sense of justice. By contrast, high mandatory minimum sentences sometimes compel excessive harshness. Like the recently publicized abuses of the search-and-seizure power—one family's farm was seized by police because six marijuana plants were growing in a field—they show public authorities overreaching to prove their toughness in the war on drugs.

Some advocates of legalizing drugs have long warned that the impossible task of suppressing the drug trade would inevitably lead society to adopt police-state tactics. Without buying that argument, we are wary of the dangers. Congress should repeal its macho but misguided mandatory minimum sentences.

Police nail Martin County drug ring

Two Coldwater residents were arrested last Tuesday on charges of drug trafficking within 100 feet of a school.

Oscar Fannin Jr., 27, and Jaylene Hall, 31, were arrested at their apartment by Kentucky State Police. When police entered their apartment, they found a large quantity of drugs and a scale.

Police seized five bags of marijuana, a variety of pills, a 32-cartridge KSP scanner, and almost $2,000 in cash.

KSP received a number of complaints that drugs were being sold from the apartments. A surveillance operation was set up and, after it was determined that drugs were being sold, a search warrant was obtained.

More arrests are expected. — The Mountain Citizen

Hospital faces NLRB hearings

The Pikeville Methodist Hospital has been under scrutiny following a decision by the National Labor Relations Board that places the hospital under its jurisdiction.

The NLRB is conducting hearings now over alleged unfair labor practices that occurred in December 1990.

The Steelworkers union, representing hospital employees, filed the unfair labor charges. Then the labor board determined that it had sufficient evidence to take before an administrative law judge.

The board determined the NLRB has jurisdiction over the hospital.

The hearings brought on the hospital employees who said they lost their jobs during the AS of how they have lost their jobs during the hearings. — Mountain Citizen

Johns gets contract in Pike

Pike County property valuation administrator Rco Johns officially gave up his PVA position to become superintendent of the county school system, succeeding Larry Burke.

Johns signed a two-year contract last Thursday that would provide him with a salary of $85,000 per year. One of the stipulations of the contract was that he resign as Pike PVA.

Johns' contract was approved by a 5-0 vote. He promised to work "to improve" the school system.

Johns also planned to set up meetings with Kentucky Education Commissioner Thomas Blosser to ask for assistance on education reform and with Penny Sanchez, director of the state's Educational Accountability Program, to discuss changing the school system. — Mountain Citizen News Update

THE REAL "SIN" OF EXCISE TAXES

by Thomas J. Donohue

When governments need money, increasing the consumer excise or "sin" taxes on gasoline, alcohol and tobacco often is one of the first proposals on the table. For example, President Clinton is expected to include significant excise tax hikes in his health care reform plan. But a pair of recent studies by the Policy Economics Group of the Peat Marwick accounting firm prove that the economic harm from higher excise taxes far outweighs the perceived benefit.

According to the studies, families making less than $30,000 a year pay five times more as a percentage of income in excise taxes than families earning more than $60,000 a year.

The studies also show that 54 percent of American families earn less than $30,000 a year. Those families take home a disproportionate 19 percent of the total income in the United States. In contrast, the people who make the most—families earning more than $60,000 a year and receiving 48 percent of the nation's total income—pay only 22 percent of the excise taxes paid each year. Clearly, the excise tax burden falls on the wrong people—the people who have the least to pay. This is grossly unfair and unacceptable.

Higher excise taxes also discriminate against rural residents, where the average family drives 40 miles a day. Compare this to an average of 25 miles a day for urban families, many of whom have access to subsidized mass transit systems. As a result, the studies demonstrate that an average rural American would pay 62 percent more in excise taxes than an urban resident.

Higher excise taxes also would unfairly target certain industries, including trucking, alcohol and tobacco. From a trucker's viewpoint, the proposed energy tax, or "But" tax, in the president's economic plan really is a camouflaged excise tax on fuel. The proposed But tax on petroleum products is more than twice that placed on other energy sources, including natural gas, nuclear power and coal. When fully phased in by mid-1996, the But tax would drive the cost of gasoline and diesel fuel up by about 8 cents per gallon, which means that more than $2.9 billion would be added to the trucking industry's fuel bill.

Manufacturers of alcohol and tobacco products, which already face crushing excise taxes, also would be seriously hurt by a tax increase. The studies show that doubling the excise taxes on those products would cost more than 170,000 American jobs, and doubling the fuel tax would result in another 130,000 unemployed.

Let's not make one population group or a handful of industries pay for government spending problems that clearly are everyone's responsibility. Americans always have been willing to pull their weight and pay their fair share. Fairness is all we ask.

Thomas J. Donohue is president and chief executive officer for the American Trucking Association in Alexandria, Virginia, and president of the Washington, D.C.-based Coalition Against Regressive Taxation.

Knife cuts freedom short

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A Floyd County man who pleaded guilty Tuesday morning to a misdemeanor charge of receiving stolen property and received probation could see his freedom short-lived after he allegedly tried to sneak a knife into the Floyd County Jail.

Byron Keith Martin, 20, of Printer, appeared before Circuit Court Judge David Caudill Tuesday morning and pleaded guilty to a reduced theft charge in connection with the theft last year of a vehicle belonging to Mack Jacobs of Martin.

Just after Judge Caudill sentenced Martin to a year in jail, which was probated for two years, Floyd County Deputy Sheriff Lloyd Powers served Martin with a bench warrant from Clark County for failing to pay a fine in that county.

Powers took Martin to the jail for processing and, after repeatedly denying he had any contraband in his possession, Martin handed over a small knife, Powers said.

A motion to revoke his probation was filed Tuesday and the issue will be heard by Judge Caudill on June 11. Martin and Billy Shepherd, 19, of David were indicted earlier this year on a charge of receiving stolen property for allegedly stealing Jacobs' vehicle last October.

The two were scheduled to stand trial Tuesday morning, but assistant commonwealth attorney Jeannie Channell and defense attorney David Williams worked out a plea agreement just before jurors were seated in the case.

Under the agreement, Shepherd was sentenced to a two-year prison term and ordered to make partial restitution to Jacobs. Judge Caudill revoked Shepherd's bond and set a June 11 sentencing date.

Martin was sentenced after he entered his plea.

Shepherd and Martin were arrested last October by deputies Daniel Hutchinson and Shawn Roope who found Jacobs' vehicle on property owned by Shepherd's grandparents.

EKU will begin annual summer orientation sessions in June

Just a few weeks after Eastern Kentucky University graduated about 2,000 students, roughly that number will begin their pursuit of a college degree when they visit the Richmond campus for summer orientation.

On 12 dates in June and July, about 2,400 new freshmen will get a red-carpet (well, in this case, maroon) welcome to life at EKV. The orientation combines small-group tours and informational sessions, lunch and an afternoon advising/registration session, after which students will leave with their fall schedule in hand.

Students undecided about a major may schedule any one of the following orientation dates: June 17, 22, 23, 24, 29 and 30 and July 1, 13, 14, 15, 20 and 21. Students must schedule in advance the day they plan to attend orientation.

Only those students who have been admitted can attend an orientation session. Anyone who plans to enroll as a new student at Eastern this fall but hasn't been admitted should call the admissions office at (606) 622-2106, or toll-free in Kentucky, 1-800-262-7493.

Also, six dates have been set aside for transfer student orientation: July 6, 7, 8, 26, 27 and 28.

Blue, grey will battle in Civil War re-enactment

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

Middle Creek will again echo with the sounds of battle when the Blue and Grey clash Sunday during a re-enactment of the Civil War battle that took place along its banks.

The Civil War re-enactment will be held at 2 p.m. June 6 on the original battlefield site two miles west of Prestonsburg on Kentucky Route 114. The Battle of Middle Creek was the largest battle in Eastern Kentucky, and some historians say it marked the beginning of James A. Garfield's climb to the presidency.

Members of the 5th Kentucky, the 91st Ohio and the 1st Kentucky re-enactment troops will hold an encampment June 4, 5 and 6 on the battlefield. The public may tour the authentic camps Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Troops will conduct a battlefield tactical demonstration Saturday at 1 p.m.

Ladies in the group will gather for a Ladies' Social around 4 p.m. Civilian re-enactors will discuss the lifestyles of 19th century women. Lecturers will answer questions from the public and will also discuss attire worn during the Civil War era.

Refreshments will be available on the site Sunday. Proceeds from the sale will be used to fund next year's event.

Funding for future events is badly needed. The Middle Creek Battlefield Preservation Society hopes to bring recognition to the site through annual battles and through an on-site museum. For more information about donating or becoming a volunteer, call Prestonsburg Tourism at 886-1341.

New map depicts geology of Kentucky in dramatic detail

Kentucky—or, more specifically, the rocks of which Kentucky is made—is depicted in dramatic detail on a new wall map just released by the Kentucky Geological Survey at the University of Kentucky.

The map, which is one of the most detailed ever produced at this scale, was made possible by years of intensive mapping and research that have made Kentucky the best mapped state in the nation, said Donald Hutcheson of the KGS.

Notable for its scientific merit as well as its artistic appeal, the map is officially known as the Sesquicentennial Edition of the Geologic Map of Kentucky, honoring the 150th anniversary of the KGS in 1988. It is printed at a scale of 1:500,000, with one inch representing approximately eight miles.

The map depicts the types and location of rock formations which lie beneath Kentucky's soil. Clearly shown are the extensive systems of fault lines and other geologic structures. Several cross sections provide a view of the rock formations in profile beneath the earth's surface, and correlation charts show the relationships among various units, including principal coal beds.

U-2 spy pilot lived life of mystery

May Day has found Russian leaders and citizens observing the military might of the USSR in Moscow's Red Square for most of the last half century.

At the height of the Cold War, a young man from the mountains caused a furor when he "dropped in" on our then-adversary behind the Iron Curtain and for months, the incident that followed held center stage in the world.

Francis Gary Powers was born in Eastern Kentucky, in Letcher County, the son of a coal miner. He grew up mostly in Wise County, Va., near Pound, where the sons of miners generally became miners. Although he liked his mountain home, he longed for the adventures the outside world could offer.

Powers received flight training from Uncle Sam and became a civilian pilot for the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), America's principal spy force.

On May 1, 1960, Powers took off in a new U-2 glider plane from a CIA-controlled base in Turkey on a reconnaissance flight over the Soviet Union.

His mission was to photograph missile and industrial sites and nuclear power bases in order to determine if we were being caught in a "missile gap."

Should anything go wrong, Powers was supposedly seeking high altitude weather information.

His altitude was evidently not high enough. A Soviet guided missile hit the tail section of his plane. In split seconds he had to decide whether to eject or crash and die.

Because of the nature of the mission, the aircraft was equipped with a self-destruct button. Powers was ejected from the cockpit into the skies over Russia before he could push the destruct button. Nor did he take the death capsule as some say he was instructed.

Although the plane crashed not far from where his parachute landed, Powers was found before he could get to it. He was arrested and accused of being a spy and "enemy of the Soviet people." The plane was found with the film and other espionage evidence.

Not knowing his plane had been found with the evidence intact, Powers insisted his flight had been for weather reconnaissance and that he was "lost." Nikita Khrushchev was infuriated.

The Soviet leader launched a tirade against the United States in the scary days that followed. The televised trial which followed found the Russians condemning the U.S., with evidence for all to see.

Powers' court-appointed attorney portrayed him as a pawn in the hands of "greedy American imperialists and warmongers."

The Russians saw an opportunity to exploit the huge media event and allowed Powers' wife and his parents to visit him and to attend the trial.

It was expected that Powers would receive the death penalty. But because he eventually told the truth and apologized for his deed he was given a ten year prison sentence.

His father then began systematically contacting every possible source to enlist their assistance in gaining his son's release. In less than two years, on February 10, 1962, Powers was released on the border of the Iron Curtain, in Berlin, as part of a spy-exchange.

Following his release by the Soviets, Powers returned to the States and worked in California. He rarely returned to his native home in the mountains.

Powers died in a helicopter crash near Encino, Calif., on August 1, 1977, while working as an aerial reporter/pilot for a Los Angeles television station. Although he had 25 years of flying experience, under difficult circumstances, he mysteriously ran out of fuel and crashed into a mountain.

The 1976 Hollywood movie, titled "Francis Gary Powers: The True Story of the U-2 Spy Incident", cast another famous native of our mountains—Lee Majors—in the starring role.

Lightening the load for postal carriers

Neither rain nor snow nor 35 pounds worth of back and shoulder pain will stop the U.S. Postal Service, but researchers are trying to ease the load a bit.

There's no clear winner yet, but Karwowski suspects an adjustable satchel made of lighter-weight synthetic material would be most comfortable.

Road construction turned upside down

Longer life in a thinner layer—that's what a new concrete mixture could provide in repairing residential streets and parking lots, says a University of Louisville researcher.

Civil engineering professor J.P. Mohsen added polypropylene fibers to concrete and worked on bonding it to existing asphalt surfaces in a 2-inch layer, less than half the thickness of the traditional asphalt blacktopping. He is evaluating the bond strength, exposure to temperature extremes and its performance under traffic loads.

Floyd County receives awards from USDA

Floyd County has received special recognition by maintaining an error rate in the Food Stamp Program of less than 5 percent. The Award for fiscal year 1991 represents an error rate of 3.47%.

The plaque for fiscal year 1992 shows an error rate of 1.87 percent. By maintaining an overall error rate of less than 5 percent, Kentucky was entitled to enhanced funding and received a check from the U.S.D.A. for $4.3 million for the fiscal year 1992. Kentucky was the only State in the Southeast Region, which is comprised of eight states, to receive full enhanced funding. Alger Pigman, field service manager, regional, expressed his deep appreciation to all case workers in the Floyd County Office. "It was their hard work and diligent efforts that enabled Floyd County to receive this Award," Pigman said.

Neighbors

Neighbors Farm in Red Bush is a pen and ink drawing by Red Bush artist Catherine S. Wells, a member of Mountain Heritage Arts and Crafts. For inspiration she remembers a quote from H.D. Thoreau: "Heaven is under our feet, as well as over our heads."

Redbush artists becomes member of Mountain Heritage Arts and Crafts

A Red Bush resident has joined the ranks of Mountain Heritage Arts and Crafts, based in Prestonsburg. Catherine S. Wells, a native of Maysville, works in pencil, pen and ink, oils and water colors and with collages. She has exhibited in The Gallery at Central Bank, Lexington and in the Headley-Whitney Museum, Herold painting, "Constant Changes," is on display at the Cardinal Valley Show in Ashland.

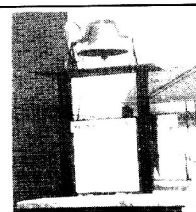

Wells said she decided to share her work through Mountain Heritage after she received a letter from the group's director, Brenda Crouch. Wells said she was encouraged to join with other artists and craftspeople because she was able to find a place to show and share her art work. She receives inspiration for her art through the wildflowers and woodland at the head of a hollow where she lives with her husband, James, an English teacher, and her three children: Jesse, 14, Miranda, 12, and Carrie, 6. She became interested in art through her sister who had taken art classes in college, and her high school art teacher, who encouraged her to continue with her talent. She also learned the techniques of art under the tutelage of Doug Adams, an art professor at Morehead State University.

Her other hobbies include canning chairs and gardening with flowers, vegetables and herbs.

BRING IN THE FENCES

I spent last weekend in Cincinnati with some friends of mine from school. Seems that the Queen City is becoming the central location for all us Displaced Dukies.

It was a lot of fun hanging out with a large number of the old crowd again — talking about upcoming weddings (not mine, thankfully), laughing at the old inside jokes, making fun of the people we used to make fun of, gorging ourselves silly at A Taste of Cincinnati and other assorted fun stuff.

But nostalgia's not what this column's about.

Friday night, our little posse felt like sitting around the apartment where most of us crashed. (I think Kevin and Leslie Kuchinski have finally recovered from our visit — thanks, guys.) We were just hanging out and catching up when something caught my eye on Headline Sports.

We had the sound off on the tube, but I saw a graphic stating that baseball's playoffs had been expanded to eight teams and that play-off coverage would be regionally televised. (Yep, you guessed it, Mike's writing another sports column...)

The numbskulls went and did it. They changed baseball.

Now, if you're one of those people who has an attention span of 30 seconds or less, or if you think that baseball is the most boring, mindless game ever invented and you believe Wrigley Field should become a parking lot, all I've got to say is:

Stop reading.

Now, Read an old installment of "Popcorn" instead.

You won't be bored, then.

What was I saying...

Oh, yes, an eight-team playoff. It seems that the baseball owners, fed up with the fact that TV ratings are falling faster than Willie Clinton's approval marks; that ticket prices are headed skyward and that many fans would rather sit at home and watch Tan Gogs than head to the ballpark.

So, to "boost fan interest" in the game, the owners decided in their infinite wisdom to put more teams into the race for the world championship and to make fewer playoff games available on network nationally — which opens up the way for pay-per-view.

What brought this on? Why are fans losing interest?

Well, if you're not a die-hard fan of a team (like I am with my beloved Cubbies) it's almost impossible to keep up with who's on the roster, with free-agency scrambling things so much. There are no benchmark players that represent a team, like Pete Rose or a Willie Stargell, for instance. All the players are more concerned with making in the green than getting out and playing for a team.

Take arbitration, for instance. Arbitration hearings start the week after the World Series ends and runs until spring training starts. As a result of these hearings and free agency, the game gets stiff like Larry Anderson of the Reds, Eric Davis of the Dodgers and even Paul Assenmacher of my Cubbies making multimillions.

And that's all you hear for most of the year — money. Money or lock-outs or strikes or offseason bar fights or paternity suits or car crashes or weapons violations.

Nice, wholesome family stuff. Really helps with marketing.

And who's being marketed? The game's best players are winners like Barry Bonds and Jose Canseco. Who wants endorsements from these guys? Carlton Fisk does an ad for Nike and Nolan Ryan does Advil, but both of those are because these guys are twice as old as the rest of the league and still get the job done.

Would you want Air Barry's?

Once the season gets started, most of the money talk stops, except for people like me wondering why I can't get in left field for some team, drop a few fly balls, and collect a paycheck (witness Caesar Hernandez). Teams concentrate on winning the Division to get a chance to play for the pennant.

Who needs to finish first now? Second place teams — into the playoffs now. Imagine the Big Red Ma-

Rebels, Wheelwright track season ends at state

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Last weekend marked the end of the high school track and field season.

Although the Allen Central Rebels and Wheelwright Trojans did not bring home that much hardware, the season for both squads was termed successful by both coaches.

"Everyone's time was what we expected it to be," said Allen Central coach Dewey Jamerson. "We ran faster times and set some school records."

"It has been a good season for this year. We did well and didn't embarrass ourselves."

"This has been a tremendous track season for us here at Wheelwright," said Trojan coach Donnie Daniels. "We ran in six meets and finished second in the EKMC as well as placing third in the region.

"That's pretty good for a new program. We have come a long way and I feel real good about the season."

Timewise, according to Jamerson, the Rebels turned in some of their best performances. Kevin Stumbo placed 12th overall in the state in the 800 meters with a time of 2:15.39.

The Rebels 400 meter relay team of Kevin Allen, Kevin Patton, Jason Samons and Dan Stumbo placed 13th overall with a 4:17.19, which is a new Allen Central school record.

Shawn Robinson placed 14th overall in discus with his toss of 108' 6". Robinson had better throws during the season.

Kevin Patton was 12th in both the triple jump and long jump events. Patton had a leap of 19' 4" in the long jump and was measured at 38' 8" in the triple jump.

The Rebels 1600 relay team placed 13th overall with a time of 4:03.25. The foursome included Kenny Scarberry, Dan Stumbo, Estill Stumbo and Kevin Stumbo.

In the women's events, Jessica Wade took ninth place in the state in the women's 3200-meter run. Wade ran in at 13:09.03.

Jenny Wiley, a senior, was 10th in the state in the 400-meter run with her time of 1:03.84.

"It was Jenny's second fastest time," explained the Allen Central coach. "It was Jessica's third best time."

The Allen Central women's 1600-meter relay team of Wiley, Lisa Stumbo, Anne Harvey and Dreama Isaac placed 14th overall with a time of 4:57.41.

The two-mile relay time took 11th place with their time of 11:22.93. The team consisted of Wade, Wiley, Stumbo and Harvey.

"That was the fastest time for our two-mile relay team," said Jamerson. "We ran about what we expected to in the meet."

"The competition was really tough down there," said the Allen Central mentor. "We may have been shut out as far as the medals go but we ran at our maximum. I couldn't ask anything more out of them."

Wheelwright's Muntu Odion took the highest finish for anyone from Floyd County. He placed fifth overall in the men's 110 hurdles but, according to Coach Daniels, the two-day events took its toll on the speedster.

"He was worn out," said Daniels. "He no sooner finished the 110 hurdles that he had to get in the starting gate for the 100-meter dash. It was just too much for him to do."

Oden, who took part in four events in the preliminaries, had to run with a slight groin pull.

"It is unfair to the runners the way the state meet was set up," said Daniels. "There is no time for them to rest!"

Greg Johnson was measured at 6 feet in the high jump and earned him eighth in the state overall. Ironically, the third place finisher had a jump of only 6 feet. The difference?

"Greg had more scratches than the first place finisher," said Daniels. Ricky Little, in his first year of competition, ran in the 1600-meter run and was 15th overall.

"Ricky had been out so much this year because of being sick," said

Damron handcuffs Belfry Pirates on five hits in 5-3 win

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Last year the Prestonsburg Blackcats could not even get out of their district to play in last season's regional tournament.

But on Thursday night, the Blackcats scored two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to defeat a very strong Belfry Pirate team 5-3 and advance to the championship game of the 15th Regional tournament at Johnson Central.

Senior Sean Damron overcame a rocky start and settled down to earn the victory in a distance-going outing.

Prestonsburg scored the winning runs with one out in the sixth inning. Cory Reitz bounced out to short to start the inning and catcher Mark Carroll pounced on Ryan Ortega's grounder in front of the plate for the second out.

But Seth Hyden kept the Prestonsburg inning alive with a base hit. He stole second and went to third on a wild pitch. Kevin Varney, who started for Belfry, worked the count to 3-1 on Damron. He then threw the ball into the dirt for ball four, but some alert base running by Hyden gave the Blackcats the lead when he slid safely in at home plate on the wild toss.

Damron moved to second on the play at the plate and eventually scored on Aaron Tucker's RBI double that gave Prestonsburg the 5-3 lead.

Damron got the first two batters in the Belfry half of the seventh before giving up a single to Varney. Damron came back and got Peyton Roberts on a pop foul to Hyden at third to end the game.

Damron struggled at the onset as the Pirates threatened to take an early lead leaving the bases loaded in the first inning.

Denzil Young doubled with one out against Damron before Carroll pounced to short for the second out. Damron then had problems finding the strike zone as his pitches were consistently low. He walked Varney and Roberts to fill the bases before

Blackcats fall as Pikeville three-peats in regional

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The Pikeville Panthers made 15th Regional baseball history last Saturday afternoon by becoming the first team ever to win three consecutive regional championships.

The Panthers of coach Dave Thomas found a way to win in tournament play when they posted an 11-5 win over the Prestonsburg Blackcats.

Scott Anderson won the distance on the mound for Pikeville for the win. Anderson, who started for the Panthers against Betsy Layne in the semifinals, lasted only an inning in his first start but was impressive in the championship game.

Anderson allowed five runs to the Blackcats while scattering six hits. He fanned four and walked four.

Freshman Jason Hackworth was impressive for the Blackcats through the first three innings as he held the Panthers scoreless.

Pikeville reached the right-handed for three runs in the bottom of the fourth as they figured Hackworth out.

Hackworth ran into trouble in the fourth and was chased in the fifth as C.D. Poston followed him to the mound. Hackworth walked two batters while striking out four. He allowed six runs on six hits in suffering the loss.

Prestonsburg took a 1-0 lead in the third inning after Hackworth pitched out of a jam in the bottom of the second.

With two out, Seth Hyden singled, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored when Aaron Tucker reached on an error at third base.

Pikeville threatened in the second on base hits by Justin Harris and Brock Justice coupled with a balk call on Hackworth that put runners on second and third. But Hackworth came back and got designated hitter Keith Ison looking on a third strike and struck out Lynn Parrish to end the threat.

The Panthers did finally solve the offspeed pitches of Hackworth in the fourth inning when they pushed home three runs. With runners at first and second, three consecutive singles and a walk accounted for the three runs.

Harris' second hit of the game started the rally as Justice drew the one-out walk and Ison singled to load the bases. Parrish singled home one run and the other two scored on Anderson's base hit.

Anderson, who was breezing along, ran into some difficulty when Prestonsburg tied the game at 3-3 in the top of the fifth inning to keep the game interesting. A walk to Ryan Hayden, Hyden's hit and two Pikeville errors opened the gate for the Blackcats.

Ortega walked and Hyden roped a double to center that was misplayed by Mickey Lawson. Rightfielder Tyrone Mullins also erred on the play and Hyden ended up at second base and Ortega at third. Sean Damron lifted a fly ball to right deep enough to score Ortega. Hyden scored to tie the game on Aaron Tucker's RBI single.

Hackworth seemed to be tiring in the fifth as his pitches stayed up and Pikeville jumped all over them. Hyden's error of the bat sit if P. Blair was the beginning of a four-run fifth for Pikeville.

One out later Tony Newsom singled and Justice doubled home both runners for a 5-3 game.

Coach Russell Shepherd had seen enough and motioned for Poston from the bullpen to face Ison. Ison promptly greeted Poston with an RBI single, scoring Justice, who moved into scoring position on the throw to the plate.

Parrish made it 7-3 with a base hit. He stole second and Anderson drilled a line drive, sending Parrish only to third base where he was eventually picked off on a strong play from Tucker.

But Prestonsburg still had some fight left in them as they played two more runs in the sixth that kept the Blackcats in contention at 7-5.

Robbie Risner was hit by a pitch and Jason Crisp collected an infield single. When the ball was thrown away, Risner reached third where he scored on Cory Reitz's base hit. Both runners moved up when Ortega laid down a sacrifice bunt. Hyden's ground ball up the middle knocked the tip of Anderson's glove and rolled over to second baseman Blair who threw Hyden out with Crisp scoring. Damron's fly ball to center ended the inning.

Pikeville added to their two-run lead in top of the seventh as eight batters went to the plate in scoring four times for an 11-5 game. Jason McCoy and Blair each had two-run singles.

The Blackcats put two runners on base in the bottom of the inning but were unable to score as their season ended when Crisp hit a fly ball to left.

The Blackcats ended a rather successful season at 21-9 while the Panthers will advance on to sectional play at Knott County Central when they will face Boyd County.

Betsy Layne blows early lead, falls to Pikeville Panthers 4-3

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

J.P. Blair came on in relief of starter Scott Anderson and blanked the Betsy Layne Bobcats over the final five innings as the Pikeville Panthers earned a berth in the 15th Region championship game with a 4-3 win. The Panthers, who trailed 3-1 after two innings, kept chipping away at the Bobcat lead and tied the game in the bottom of the sixth inning against starter Barry Clark. Blair, who replaced Anderson in the second inning after Betsy Layne had scored three times for a 3-1 lead, picked up the win for Pikeville. Clark suffered the loss. Centerfielder Mickey Lawson had the game-winning RBI with a base hit in the bottom of the seventh that scored Jason McCoy. McCoy reached base with a one-out single off Clark. On a pickoff play, first baseman Shawn Newsome lost Clark's throw for an error with McCoy going to second base. Lawson then lined a base hit to center. Centerfielder Barry Collins charged the ball and would have had a play at the plate, but Collins was unable to pick up the ball as McCoy, with coach Dave Thomas running with him from third base, scored the winning run. Collins, after failing to pick up the ball, just fell to the ground in disgust. It was a very unhappy Bobcat team that saw their season come to an end, but it was the same old habit that has haunted them all season -- failure to drive in runs. The Bobcats left two runners on base in the first inning with only one out. With less than two outs, a runner was left stranded at second. In the third, runners were left at second and third and a runner was stranded at third in the seventh frame. Pikeville had taken a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the first after Betsy Layne threatened but was unable to score. McCoy walked, stole second and went to third on a passed ball. He came around to score on Blair's liner to center field. Betsy Layne wasted little time in getting to Anderson in the second. Shannon Newsome walked and went to second on a passed ball. Chris Potter bounced the ball toward third but, when Brock Justice fielded the ball, no one was covering first and Potter legged it out for an infield hit.

Brandon Castle roped a base hit to right center, scoring Newsome with Potter moving to third. Castle was cut down on a steal attempt at second base for the first out. Shawn Newsome then walked and Potter scored on Barry Collins' RBI single with Newsome moving around to third. Collins then broke for second and, on the throw to second, Newsome came in to score and give the Bobcats a 3-1 lead. Blair came to relieve Anderson and got Derrick Newsome and Scott Ousley on grounders to second to end the inning. Clark retired eight consecutive batters until Justin Harris bit a long drive to the deepest part of the ball park that fell in for a double. The ball hit against the 390 mark in dead center field. Brett Coleman, pinch running for Harris, scored on Justice's base hit to make it 3-2. Harris' second double of the game allowed Pikeville to tie the game at 3-3. Harris doubled with one out and scored on Tony Newsome's RBI single. Blair got stronger as the game progressed and retired eight straight Betsy Layne batters until Ousley tripled in the seventh with two out. Cleanup hitter Bud Kidd walked to the plate with the go-ahead run just 90 feet away. Kidd struck out to end the inning. It was a happy Coach Thomas that followed McCoy to the plate for the winning run. Thomas had both arms lifted in the air as the celebration began. Clark worked the full seven innings for the Bobcats in a strong outing. He allowed four runs on six hits. Clark struck out two and walked three. Blair worked the final 5 2/3 innings, allowing no runs and giving up just three hits over the final frames. He fanned six batters and walked two. Betsy Layne finished their season with a 23-16 record and will return most of this year's players. The Bobcats have been consistently one of the top regional teams and will contend next season. Pikeville improved to 22-13 on the year.

chance back in the 70's winning 120 games and getting upset in a five-game play-in series by some upstart team like the Dodgers who finished second, 14 games back.

Preposterous. What's next, moving the fences 50 feet closer to the plate for more home runs to excite the fans? Shorter base lines? An extra run if a home run travels more than 450 feet? A "pitch clock" and only allowing two strikes per batter to speed up play?

Land mines in the outfield? The owners' major problem was blaming the game itself for its present day woes. Not outrageous salaries or questionable labor practices. What they needed to do was look at the NBA, which had a similar reputation back in the 70's.

Enter David Stern, NBA commissioner. He took the league, marketed it much better, made the stars accessible and, more importantly, got their names out. The league had its characters, even up to the present day, where you've got the "World according to Charles."

People flocked back to the league and look at the results now. Ten years ago, the NBA playoffs were barely televised. Now, they're on every weekend and the conference finals are in prime time on NBC during the week.

So much for a league that was dying not twenty years ago.

At the end of Field of Dreams.

which is probably my all-time favorite movie, James Earl Jones says something like, "Through all the years and all the troubles, one thing has linked us all together. The game. It's been the same through the years and it will remain the same."

I guess he was wrong. Maybe the powers that be will return to their senses, realize their mistake, put things back the way they're supposed to be and come up with a more creative solution.

I won't hold my breath.

Later days.

Mullins whiffs 15 in 27-1 Astros win over Martin

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

John Mullins was the man of the hour for the Draft Astros as he struck out 15 batters and tossed a nifty two-hitter in his team's 27-1 rout of the Martin Braves in the Beaver Creek Little League last week.

The Astros scored 19 runs in the first inning and never was threatened in the 14-hit attack.

Byron Hall had three hits in the game for the winners including a three-run double in the first inning. Hall finished with two doubles in the game and a single.

Brent Stone had a run scoring triple also in the first inning. He later collected his second triple. He had two RBIs in the contest.

Graten Allen drove in two runs with a base hit in the wild Astro first. The Astros scored a run in the second on a triple by Stone and an RBI triple by Mullins. In the third, Joe Skeens singled and scored for the Astros after stealing second and third.

Becky Wright singled for the winners in the fourth inning and scored on Stone's third hit of the game, an RBI double. Jimmy Lee Stumbo had an RBI double in the inning, scoring Stone.

Graten Allen singled to start the fifth for the Astros and he came in to score on Kyle Williams' triple.

It was the fourth straight win for Clinis Hall's ballclub after they dropped their first three games.

The Braves scored their only run in the top of the sixth on a walk to Brian Jones, who stole second and third and came in to score on a passed ball. The Braves collected two hits in the game and both were doubles by Larry Mullins and Jones.

Orioles edge Martin Cardinals 11-10 on Combs' bases-loaded walk

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The Duff Orioles kept rolling and improved to 7-2 on the season with a 11-10 edging of the Martin Cardinals.

Chris Combs drove in Kenneth Childers with the winning run when he was hit with a pitch with the bases loaded.

The Cardinals tied the game, 10-10, with three runs in the top of the sixth inning. Childers had walked before Heath Scott struck out. Nick Stumbo doubled and Ivan Gunnels walked with two out to load the bases. Combs then was nailed with a pitch and Childers trotted home with the winning run.

The Cards led 1-0 before two runs in the bottom of the first gave the Orioles the lead at 2-1.

Martin took a 3-2 lead with two in the fourth on a triple by Click and Martin scored four times in the sixth. They made it 6-2 in the fifth with two more runs.

Duff went ahead 7-6 with a five-run fifth but fell behind 10-7 after Martin scored four times in the sixth.

Hayes was the losing pitcher for the Cardinals and John Ousley picked up the win for the Orioles hurling the final inning.

Gunnels had a triple for the Orioles and Nick Stumbo doubled. Stumbo finished with three hits in the game. Gunnels had two and two runs batted in. Childers also drove in two runs.

Shawn Henson started on the mound for the Orioles but was unable to finish after being ejected from the game. Stumbo pitched two innings.

Smoky Mountain Wrestling returns to Paintsville High School on June 4

Smoky Mountain Wrestling returns to the Paintsville High School on Friday, June 4, with an all-star lineup that promises to be the most exciting card yet presented in Paintsville. The Paintsville Volunteer Fire Department is once again sponsoring the action, which will be the debut of several new faces.

The main event is a battle for revenge that has the makings of an old-style family feud, when Jim Cornette's new Heavenly Bodies: the Gigolo, Jimmy Del Ray and his cousin Dr. Tom Pritchard, battle the Armstrong brothers, Scott and Steve. The Bodies underwent a lineup change last month when the Rock and Roll Express forced Stan Lane out of SMW, but Cornette claims, and may agree, that this is the strongest Bodies combination yet. The Armstrongs are out for blood over the incident that took place in Knoxville last month in which Cornette hospitalized their father, Bullet Bob Armstrong. This could be the closest the controversial Cornette has come to getting his just desserts in Paintsville.

In another tag bout on the card, Cornette plays a part as well, as the Rock and Roll Express, Ricky Morton and Robert Gibson, are signed to meet a mystery team Cornette has brought to SMW. No one knows who the team will be, but the clues given so far are that they outweigh the Express by 200 pounds, and they're nationally known stars who intend to get even with the Rock and Rollers for crossing Cornette. The Express are confident that they can meet the challenge, but it's hard to prepare for two men whose identities remain unknown.

In a $20,000 Bounty match, Wild Eyed Southern Boy Tracy Smothers meets the huge Killer Kyle. The bounty has been placed on Tracy by manager Ron Wright, who wants someone to eliminate Tracy from SMW so that his man, the Dirty White Boy, can have a clear field to the title. Tracy is on a real hot streak, but the awesome Kyle could present problems for him in Paintsville.

Dirty White Boy will be there as well, taking on Prime Time Brian Lee in a match of former SMW champions. Both men will be trying to further their standing in the ratings. Also, White Lightning Tim Horner meets Suicide Blonde Chris Candido. Candido is a newcomer to SMW, but his outrageous boasts have already earned him a reputation as a loudmouth. This should be a fast-paced contest.

It shapes up top to bottom to be the best lineup yet in Paintsville, and it takes place at the Paintsville High School on Friday, June 4, with bell time promptly at 8 p.m.

Prestonsburg Cubs win, create logjam at the top

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

If you ask one of three teams in the Prestonsburg Little League who is in first place, you will probably get three different answers and all three could be correct.

You see, the Prestonsburg Cubs took advantage of some shaky defense by the Prestonsburg Indians and coasted to a 4-1 win over the previous first place team.

With the Cubs win over the Indians, three teams stand at the top of the league standings with identical 6-2 records. The Indians, Rangers and Cubs are tied for the number one spot.

The duo of Eric Price and Dustin Crisp combined for 11 strikeouts for the Cubs while allowing only one run on six hits.

Drew Brown went the distance for the Rangers, giving all four runs while scattering three hits. He walked eight batters, struck out six and hit one.

The Cubs scored twice in the fifth inning for a 4-1 lead after the game was close at 2-1 through the first four.

Price started the inning with a walk and he later came around in scores on Grant Castle's base hit. Castle stole second and third then came home on J.D. Hatfield's grounder to first.

Crisp, who came on to pitch for the Cubs in the fourth, set the Rangers down in order in the fifth.

The Rangers missed a chance to score in the sixth after their defense held in the top of the inning. Todd Kidd tripled to right with two outs but was later tagged out trying to steal home.

The Cubs scored first in the first inning when Neal Lamm doubled to left, stole third and scored when Rangers catcher Kalen Harris threw the ball into center field.

The Rangers loaded the bases against Price in the first but left them loaded when Ricky Powers grounded out to the pitcher.

Chris Prater led off the Cubs second with a base hit and scored again

LADY ANGLERS ENJOY SUCCESSFUL BASS FISHING IN JAPAN

In recent years, several top American bass tournament anglers have been invited to compete in fishing contests in Japan, but until recently, none of the Americans had actually won one of the events.

"That changed earlier this summer, however, when lady angler Linda England won a major tournament near Tokyo.

England and Fredda Lee, both members of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff, had been invited to compete in Japan as guests of the Daiwa Corporation, a major manufacturer of fishing tackle.

"Basically, a bass is a bass no matter where it lives," says England. "I was fortunate to locate some fish along a dropoff and also around some boat docks, the same places we find them in American lakes. They bit plastic worms and crankbaits, too, the same lures we use.

"The biggest problem I had was learning to read my depthfinder. It was marked in meters rather than feet."

England and Lee were the first female anglers invited to fish in one of the Japanese tournaments. Other OMC Pro Staff anglers who have competed in Japan include Ken Cook, Larry Nixon and Guido Hibdon.

"I was a little apprehensive at first," admitted England, "but the Japanese are very gracious hosts and did their best to make us comfortable. They are extremely interested in American bass fishing and are very anxious to learn our techniques.

"Language was not really a problem, either," England continues, "because fishermen everywhere just seem to be able to communicate with each other.

"We did have an interpreter who stayed with us the entire time, however, which was good, because we were interviewed by several radio, television, and magazine reporters before and after the tournament.

"I was absolutely amazed at the coverage the tournament received, especially in a city as large and diverse as Tokyo."

The two Johnson pros spent three days practicing on the lake, and then were paired with a Japanese angler during the tournament. The lake, Lake Kasumigaura, is about 20 miles outside Tokyo, and is one of several lakes on which bass tournaments are conducted.

"I believe my partner may have been more nervous than I was at first," England laughs, "because of all the publicity we were receiving. At one point, we had seven camera boats filming us.

"We weighed in last, too, and then I was nervous, because I did not think we had enough fish to win."

Both ladies had been invited back to Japan to compete in future bass tournaments, and both are looking forward to the possibility of going.

"Just getting to go was a great experience, and winning the tournament was just a bonus," says England. "I'd love to fish some of the other lakes just because of the enthusiasm the Japanese have for bass fishing."

POINTS OFTEN PAY OFF FOR HARD-TO-CATCH BASS

You only have an hour left to fish, but thus far the bass haven't cooperated a bit. All you have to show for your day on the water is a sore shoulder from hours of fruitless casting.

Most bass fishermen, even the best tournament pros, have been in this situation. What do they do to catch a bass?

"Fish the points," explains Guy Eaker, a veteran tournament angler and a member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff.

"When I'm in a tournament and desperately need a fish, I start fishing main lake points with a crankbait. Eventually, I usually catch something, too. Points nearly always pay off with some bass on any lake anywhere."

The keys to fishing points, explains Eaker, are to start fishing the shallow part of the point first and gradually work deeper, and to retrieve the crankbait with the current rather than against it.

"It's important to start shallow so you don't frighten any bass that may be there," explains the Evinrude pro. "Keep your boat in deep water and fan your casts across the point. That way, you can completely cover the area and gradually move deeper until you do find bass."

Eaker always fishes with the current because he feels bass will be facing into the current looking for food. The fish will see his lure, which will appear more natural to them.

"Not every point will have bass," says Eaker, "but some of them will. When I'm looking for bass like this, I start on one shoreline and fish all the points on that side, then cross the lake and fish the points on that side. Sooner or later I'll catch a bass."

Eaker usually uses several different crankbaits in these situations because he's working different water depths as he gradually moves along the point. The most important thing, he says, is to use a lure that reaches the bottom.

"Crankbaits imitate crayfish, so you need to use a lure that digs and bounces along the bottom the way a real crayfish does," he explains. "Most strikes actually come just after the lure hits and bounces away from an object."

Like most pros, Eaker prefers to use 10 or 12-pound test line with crankbaits because it allows the lures to dive deeper. He also uses a seven-foot rod because of the hook-setting advantage it provides.

"Everybody has some type of last-ditch tactics they use when they really need to catch some bass," concludes Eaker, "and I've tried most of them over the years. Fishing main lake points is one of the most reliable I've found."

Track

Daniels, "if he had been able to run most of the year he would have done better."

Lori Tackett, a surprise in Wheelwright track and field, took ninth place overall in the women's discus. Tackett, who won several meets this season, bettered her previous throw of 83 feet when she threw the discus 90' 11".

Carrie Miller was eighth in the long jump for Wheelwright.

"I don't know what the plans are for next year at South Floyd as far as track and field goes, but we have laid some good solid ground work to build on next year," said Daniels. "Hopefully, we will have some come from McDowell and step in and help out."

Daniels said that many students will not participate in track and field because they think it is "uncool."

"They see no benefits in it," said Daniels. "But there are more benefits in track and field than any other sport. What other sport can a student go and participate at the varsity level as a freshman?"

"It is a sport that has not gotten the recognition that other sports get," he said, "so the students don't think of it as a sport."

Daniels said that he wanted to thank all those that help with the track and field program at Wheelwright and made it the success.

"The parents of the kids have been tremendous and given money when there was not money left," he said. "I was glad that their kids were able to take part in the track and field."

"It is strange that this is the last year for Wheelwright High School and we did so well in all the different sports. I'm hoping that with the consolidation that we will be better off in athletics at the new school."

Wheelwright and Allen Central will return some talented performers next season.

Sharks "devour" Garrett Rangers

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Brent Akers carried a no-hitner into the fifth inning against the Garrett Rangers in the Floyd County Babe Ruth League last week and had it spoiled when Michael Pack singled in the inning as the Rangers scored six times.

However, the rally fell short as Harold went to 2-0 on the season with a 19-9 victory over Garrett.

Akers had the defense behind him as well as making the right pitches. The Rangers were held scoreless until the fourth when they pushed across three runs to make it a 15-3 game.

Harold scored five runs in the first as 10 batters paraded to the plate. Brandon Castle had a two-run double in the initial inning and Wesley Collins picked up an RBI with a base hit. Mark Tackett scored a run with a two-base hit.

Two more runs in the second for the Sharks made it a 5-0 game. Shawn Rose singled, stole second and scored on Collins second hit of the game. Castle, who had walked ahead of Collins base hit, scored on a wild pitch.

In the third, the Sharks swam to a 8-0 lead as Chris Hebrook scored an unearned run in the inning.

Twelve batters went to the plate for the Sharks in the fourth and they scored eight times to blow open the game, taking a 16-0 lead. Rose had a two-run double in the inning scoring Johnson, who singled, and Brad Kidd, who also singled. There were four walks in the inning.

The Sharks scored three runs in the fifth inning to make it a 19-9 rout. Chad Case came on to pitch in the fifth with two men on base and one out as Akers ran into some wildness. Combs started on the hill for Garrett and suffered the loss.

Collins, Akers bats lead Harold Sharks past Belfry

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Wes Collins and Brent Akers collected two hits each to lead the Harold Sharks Babe Ruth team past the Betsy Layne Twins in the opening game of the new Floyd County Babe Ruth season.

Brandon Castle went to the mound for the Harold team and went the distance in his team's 9-3 win. Collins collected two triples in the game and Akers had two hits while driving in two runs.

Castle scattered four hits while striking out 12 batters. He gave up two walks in the contest.

Harold scored single runs in the second and third innings for a 2-0 lead. Castle, who reached on an error and stole second, scored the first run in the second on a wild pitch. Craig Hamilton came in to score in the third on a double by Brad Kidd.

The Twins scored twice in the fourth to tie the game at 2-2 on a single, triple and a Sharks error.

Harold batted around in their half of the fourth, scoring three runs for a 5-2 game. Collins hit his first triple of the game and scored on Willie Meade's base hit. Mark Tackett and Shawn Caudill walked with Tackett scoring on an error off the bat of Kidd and a Shawn Rose RBI single.

Harold added their sixth run in the fifth when Collins tripled and scored. Three runs scored for the Sharks in the sixth on a base hit by Rose, a walk to Castle and Akers' two-run double.

Betsy Layne scored their final run in the top of the seventh inning.

Castle had 12 strikeouts and fanned the side in the fifth inning. He walked only two batters.

RE-ELECT OWENS—MAGISTRATE

THANKS TO ALL THE VOTERS OF DISTRICT 2

I want to thank EACH and EVERY VOTER of District 2 for coming out on Election Day and electing me the Democratic Candidate for Magistrate of District 2. —BUT THE RACE IS NOT OVER UNTIL NOVEMBER. I would like to ask the Democratic Party to pull together and stick by me. No matter who you supported in the May Primary—I'M ASKING YOU NOW FOR YOUR VOTE and SUPPORT IN NOVEMBER. I was really pleased with the results of the election, especially when I saw that in the WAYLAND/LACKEY Precinct that I had nearly doubled by votes since the last election. In the GARRETT/ROCK FORK Precinct, I ran a strong second. My friends and neighbors in BOSCO, BEECH GROVE, and MAYTOWN were really good to me. Not only did I carry these precincts, BUT I RAN AWAY WITH THEM. It shows that PEOPLE DO APPRECIATE THE HARD WORK THAT WE HAVE DONE. In BEECH GROVE, out of approximately 400 votes cast, I received 302 of them. I was counting on the people of the JOHN POSSUM Precinct at Martin to stick with me as they had in the past, and THEY DID—I CARRIED IT AGAIN. As we moved into the ALLEN Precincts—I WAS SURPRISED and VERY HAPPY to find out that I carried the OLD ALLEN Precinct for the first time ever. In the NEW ALLEN/DWALE Precinct, I nearly doubled my vote count there since the last election and ran second. I was REALLY PLEASED to see the MIDDLE CREEK/DAVID Precinct vote count. Not only because I carried the precinct, but it became THE BIGGEST Precinct in my district for me. IT'S OBVIOUS that the people of Middle Creek and David are looking for someone who will help them, and I WILL. THANKS TO ALL THE VOTERS OF EVERY PRECINCT IN DISTRICT 2.

TO ANSWER MR. HOWELL'S LAST AD BEFORE THE ELECTION:
Mr. Howell said that I made these remarks—"I was told by our Magistrate when I asked him for a job, he replied that being a Veteran does not mean anything in Floyd County." THIS IS NOT SO! Mr. Howell did not ask me for a job. He asked me for all the bridge contracts in this county. I told Mr. Howell that I COULD NOT give them to him but he could come in and BID on them like everyone else did. IF I could have given him the bridge contracts, he probably wouldn't have had time to run against me. —BUT YOU, JUST CAN'T DO THAT —YOU HAVE TO GO BY THE LAW—IT HAS TO BE BID.

TO ANSWER MR. ROBERTS' LAST AD IN THE FLOYD COUNTY TIMES BEFORE THE ELECTION:
He made it sound like I got drunk and shot up the BP Station —sounds like to me he got half the story AND GOT THE WRONG NAME. I DON'T have any problem at all going with Mr. Roberts and having a drug and alcohol test done IF he will agree to take a lie detector test that he has never burned his own house OR other people's houses, OR HAD IT DONE. I didn't think there was going to be any "mudslinging" in the last week's paper or I might have brought up SOME of the old stories when you were Magistrate — how you were accused of purchasing a $500 (five hundred dollar) pair of cowboy boots on a county credit card out west OR how you were charged with 12 COUNTS of theft by deception OR how the county went broke while you were in office.

P.S. People, I was under the impression that in the last week's paper before the election that there wouldn't be any mudslinging. But they were muddling in the last week's paper before the election so I WOULDN'T HAVE TIME TO ANSWER—I'LL ANSWER THE STADS NOW. I WANT TO THANK THE PEOPLE OF DISTRICT 2 for not being fooled by these "CHEAP SHOTS." —ON TO NOVEMBER and a VICTORY IN THE FALL.

Sports in Kentucky

Bob Watkins

BITS 'N PEOPLE

Why do these things happen? With Kentucky high school all-stars in basketball and football all-stars struggling to draw a crowd in summertime, organizers for both booted it again. Apparently, neither consulted the other before setting game dates.

The Kentucky-Tennessee high school football all-star game is June 19. Kickoff time in Commonwealth Stadium is 6 p.m.

Up 1-64, the Kentucky-Indiana girls' basketball all-star game tips off at the same time, with the boys' game to follow.

KY. VS. TENN.

Want a look at Ky. Mr. Football Billy Jack Haskins (Paducah), along with fellow UK signee Donnell Gordon (Oldham Co.) and a host of other blue chippers?

The 10th annual Kentucky-Tennessee high school all-star football fracas kicks off at 6 p.m. in Commonwealth Stadium.

Trinity's Dennis Lampley (whose son is a UT signee) will coach the Kentucky stars.

Tickets will be on sale at the gate, $5.

KY. LIONS CLUB HALL OF FAME

Excellent choices, sort of, the '93 Ky. Lions' Hall of Fame inductees. John Pelphey, Ky. Mr. Basketball in 1987 represents the latest chapter in 'The Kentucky Story'—Small town boy goes to big city and makes good. Story lines: "Opie" the Right Stuff Pelphey ... from Paintsville.

John Tong, His Dapper-ness, over three decades, has become as much an institution in Louisville and Freedom Hall as UK's former play-by-play man, you know the one, is in eastern Kentucky.

Tong is a good choice, but there is a man who deserves Hall of Fame induction ahead of him.

For almost 35 years, Bob White of the Louisville Courier-Journal has covered every high school event in our state, including the Kentucky-Indiana series.

If distinguished service and longevity are criteria, White should have been a '93 inductee.

Pelphey and Tong will be recognized at halftime of the Kentucky-Indiana all-star game June 19 in Freedom Hall.

Comment: Induction of the ever-popular Pelphey won't hurt ticket sales either.

READERS (RIGHT) WRITE

Delphia C. Branham, Elkhorn City, is glad "Rick Pitino does the recruiting for UK instead of readers like Meryl Hertzman (of Burlington). Mr. Hertzman, wake up! Farmer, Pelphey and Feldhaus only come along once in a lifetime. I loved them and my family loved them. But we also loved(d) the 92-93 Wildcats.

"You have to recruit players you need to compete in the NCAA and Rick Pitino's record shows he's done that. I challenge you to complain about Kentucky greets Pat Riley and Dan Issel to name two (out-of-staters). If you have a problem with UK's players, perhaps you should become a U of L fan."

COMMENT: Thank you for writing.

DIS 'N DATA

Tennessee basketball coach Wade Houston let two assistants go earlier this month. Back from NCAA exile, Dwane Casey is looking for a job.

Worthy goal for Kentucky's '93 football team: Peach Bowl, Dec. 31 in Atlanta (ESPN). Word is Peach officials want a runner-up in SEC East or West Div. against an ACC team. Likewise, the Florida Sunshine Classic on New Year's Day is interested in another SEC team.

"The only NBA job that can lure Pitino from Kentucky," a colleague of mine said last week, "is the Boston Celtics."

Comment: The only man on the planet more popular for the Celtics job than Pitino, if and when it comes open, is Larry Bird.

Three reasons why UK didn't need Damon Flint: No scholarships. Sophomore Tony Delk and freshman Jeff Sheppard.

One of the big winners in next month's NBA draft—Glenn Robinson of Purdue won't be in it. Next year he will be No. 1 pick.

PSST! PICK MASHBURN

Psst! Pat Williams, Choose Mashburn!

The Orlando Magic gets first dip (again) into the NBA college talent pool next month.

Since Orlando already has the best center in the NBA, GM Williams is looking at a "piece of mabogany" to put alongside Shaquille O'Neal.

The betting favorite is Chris Webber. But it says here Kentucky's Jamal Mashburn is the best choice because:

1. His range of skills is infinitely better.
2. His personality would blend far better with Shaq's than the oft-times hard-headed, stackjawed Webber.
3. I'm betting in three years Mashburn will be an all-star doing community service work, making Disney World TV commercials and Webber will be bellyaching for more money and asking for a trade to Detroit.
4. Orlando's salary cap.

WANTS MORE U OF L!

Several callers to WHAS's Sports Talk radio show with Van Vance last week suggested Sports In Ky. do more reporting/analysis on University of Louisville athletics.

Thank you.

Question: Would Louisville joining the Southwest Conference be anything like Bill Clinton's hair dresser moving to Floyd's Barber-shop?

And Texans talk funny too.

U of L Football: Word is Howard Schnellenberger believes his '93 team might be special. With an exciting quarterback, Jeff Dromb, a beefed up offensive line and improvements in the rushing and kicking games, could be.

Point of interest: U of L's schedule is uphill (again). But, if the Cards could take a 3-0 record (San Jose St., Memphis St. and Arizona St.) into a Sept. 25 home date, anything could happen. Opponent: Texas.

Comment: Cards better build some early "mo' what with a last eight-week stretch that includes visits to Pitt, West Va., Tennessee and Texas A&M.

U of L Basketball: Denny Crum's Cards won't have Damon Flint, but may spring a big surprise on Cardinal fans anyway. Carlos Turner will walk on this season.

Says here if the 6-4 rookie has his ducks in a row, Turner could help U of L be a Top 5 team by Christmas.

Postscript: If it happens and Turner is as good as projected two years ago, by mid-January Dick Vitale will be sticking a microphone in the kid's face.

Postscript II: Jock Sutherland on Carlos Turner: "If a guy can't get a second chance in his own hometown, where can he expect to get one?"

Hunch: 1994 will be the year Denny Crum is nominated for induction into the College Hoops Hall of Fame.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL PLAYOFFS

Trying to sell a Nightline-format sports program idea, NBC's Bob Costas says there are issues aplenty to make it work.

One issue, Costas says, is the state of big-time college sports. It is "fundamentally corrupt. Not flawed, but fundamentally corrupt."

"That idea won't play well with Costas' bosses and other network moguls since they are part and parcel to the alleged corruption. How? Money.

Latest example: Nike Co. is lobbying for an eight-team Div. I football playoff. Says it would net $102 million for the NCAA.

CFA coaches are against a playoff, but presidents and directors of athletics are wavering as the money pile grows higher.

Footnote: If Judith Sweet or Donna Lopiano is chosen to succeed Dick Schultz as NCAA executive director, says here Nike and other playoff proponents can forget it. At least for a while.

Have a point of view you would like to share? Write to Bob Watkins, Sports In Ky., P.O. Box 124, Glendale, Ky. 42740.

Belfry

designated hitter Bret Bostic popped to Hyden at third for the final out.

Belfry took the early lead at 2-0 with two runs in the top of the third inning. Damron was still experiencing some control problems, but coach Russell Shepherd elected to stay with his ace hurler.

Young opened the Belfry third with a base hit and took second on a passed ball. Carroll reached on an error by Hyden when the throw went wide of first. A good recovery of the baseball by first baseman Thomas Ratliff nailed Young at the plate as he tried to score on the miscue.

However, Damron still could not find the plate as he issued back-to-back walks to Varney and Roberts to load the bases for the second time in the game.

Bostic then delivered a base hit that sent the Pirates out to a 2-0 lead. Belfry left the bases jammed as Shane Lockard hit a fly ball to centerfield.

Ratliff put the Blackcats back into the game in the bottom of the third inning as he delivered a two-run double that scored Damron and Anthony Howell to tie the game at 2-2.

Damron singled with one out and Howell had a two-out base hit. Ratliff was left stranded at third base.

Damron started to settle in on the mound and got the Pirates in order in the fourth and the Blackcats took their first lead with a single run in the bottom of the inning.

Jason Crisp scored after leading off with a single and moved to third on Reitz' base hit. Varney fanned Ortega and the Pirates elected to walk Hyden intentionally to load the bases. Damron hit a high fly ball to right that scored Crisp for a 3-2 Prestonsburg lead.

Belfry struck quickly in their half of the fifth when Varney tripled to right centerfield and scored on Roberts sacrifice fly to center to tie the game at 3-3.

Belfry went out in order in the sixth before Prestonsburg scored the winning run.

Damron, although he struggled early, was strong over the final three innings. He allowed three runs (only two were earned) on five hits. He fanned four batters and was guilty of walking six. All six walks came in the first three innings. Damron gave up only two hits to the Pirates over the final four frames and did not walk anyone.

Varney suffered the loss in a distance-going outing. He allowed all five runs on six hits. Varney fanned six batters and walked five.

Belfry completed their season with a fine 21-9 record while Prestonsburg improved to 21-8 on the season and a berth in the championship game.

Heritage on the Hill Day, held Thursday, May 27 at Betsy Layne High School, was two hours of cultural exchange — two generations teaching each other about their shared mountain heritage.

The twenty senior citizens from the Betsy Layne Senior Citizens Center who participated in the event were the center of attention. Students watched with rapt attention as the seniors gave hands-on demonstrations in the arts of quilting and cooking, lectured on tracing the family tree and held a concert for students in the library.

In turn, students held a computer demonstration in the computer lab, showed off their gardening talents during a walk through the school's greenhouse and opened the woodworking shop for a tour.

The special event was part of a community service program funded by a $10,000 federal youth service grant the school received this school year, according to Lisa Roberts, community service program coordinator at the high school. Betsy Layne High School, located on a hill off U.S. 23, was one of only 16 schools in the state to receive the grant.

Roberts was chosen as coordinator by the school's site-based council. "My job is to get students involved in the community," Roberts said. "To encourage students' involvement, she was the key organizer of Heritage on the Hill. "This is the first Heritage on the Hill. It gives the students a look at a different culture than what they are used to. The primary base of the community service program is at Betsy Layne. I hope that within the next few years, schools in the entire county will be included in the program."

Teresa Campbell, Betsy Layne Senior Citizens director, said that the purpose of the special day was "to intertwine high school students with the elderly generation." During the sessions, both students and seniors pitched in with the cooking, the quilting and playing and singing at the concert.

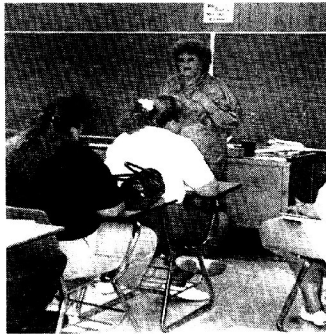

Agnes Kidd, a retired teacher, watched the cooking demonstration. "Today's been a wonderful day. It gives the children incentive to learn. They seem to be real enthused."

Home Economic students Donnie Elkins and Paul Salisbury watched the quilting demonstration in one of the home economic rooms. "I think it's very educational to learn about the past," Elkins said. "The younger generation should do more with senior citizens. We can learn more from them."

Salisbury added, "It's good to sit down and watch them make a quilt. My grandma did it and I didn't watch her."

Stella Stumbo was among the senior quilters. "I've been quilting since I was eight-years-old," she said. "The day has meant a whole lot to me. I enjoy quilting so much. We've volunteered to come down here and help quilt this one out once a month or every two weeks."

Principal Al Osborne said about Heritage on the Hill, "For us this is just the beginning. We believe the Appalachian heritage is an integral part of education. We hope to add it to the curriculum. This is a good first start."

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE WINNERS OF PRIMARY ELECTION '93, AMERICA'S FAVORITE SPECTATOR SPORT:

Dear Sirs and Madames (and by "Madames," I am simply referring to the ladies who won their respective offices, not to any particular candidate — male or female — who sought public office or campaign contributions merely for financial gain or who offered services of any sort in return for votes — get your minds out of the gutter):

Notwithstanding the various and sundry cries of "Fraud!" and "I demand a recount!" and "I bought $40,000 worth of votes and still lost — somebody cheated me!" YOU, ladies and gentlemen, are the next generation of what we like to call "public servants."

"public servants" before. Others of you are new to the profession. Whichever may be your particular case, let me say on behalf of the fine, fine people of this great country of ours, please, be gentle with us. You are our future, and our past has been somewhat checkered. Certainly, in any administration, rumors of graft and corruption circulate like ladies of the evening at a Democratic national convention, whether they have any basis in truth or not. However, we, the people, will promise you that we will keep the rumors to ourselves if you will be fair, just and forthright with us.

We the people want you to remember that the term "public servant" does not mean that the PUBLIC serves YOU, it means that YOU serve the PUBLIC.

We the people want you to know that, despite any titles, responsibilities or powers of office, We hired you and WE can fire you.

We want you to know that, despite any titles, responsibilities or powers of office, you are not "better" than we, but are our equals.

When we call upon you for help, we want to be listened to, not treated rudely or summarily dismissed. When we call upon you for help, we want you to do unto us as you'd like us to do unto you (and we also want you to know that if you DO do unto us, we WILL do unto you).

We want action, not excuses. We want a better, brighter tomorrow, not the bitter gloom of another year.

We want you to LEAD us, not FOLLOW any personal agendas. In short, we want you to keep your promises to us. At least the ones you made publicly and legally. In return, we will offer you undying gratitude, friendship and a swift and clean re-election

Thank you for your support,

The people of Floyd County

P.S.: Okay, now that I've done my public duty and spoken for the people, let me tell you what I want.

First, I want gravel for my driveway. Then, I want liquor and plenty of it. Next, I want cash. Lots and lots and lots of cash. And maybe a pool.

Or I will make your lives a living H-E-DOUBLE-HOCKEY STICKS!!!! I'll use what little power I have as a member of the Fourth Estate to publicly embarrass, debate and humiliate you. I'll be on you like a tick on a dog, watching your every move, waiting for even the slightest HINT that you might even be THINKING about fixing a PARKING TICKET!!!!

I'll hound you all to early graves.

But it doesn't HAVE to be like that. We can all get along just fine.

All you have to do is send small, unmarked bills in a plain brown envelope.

Or else.

Thank you for your support,

FIVE DOWN AND
TWENTY TO GO

Remember the old gag? Dumb Donald: Know how to lose 20 pounds of ugly fat? Dumb Dora: No. Dumb Donald: Cut off your head.

Well, it may be an old gag, but from the way my weight reduction program is progressing, I think it's the only true way to get rid of the fat 'n' good.

My 7-day weight reduction program recommends rewarding yourself when you lose a few pounds so when I dropped the first two pounds, I treated myself to a banana split and a half-pounder bag of Snyder's potato chips. That little binge set me back about two days on my seven day plan so I had to start all over again.

After finally shedding four pounds, I rewarded myself by eating everything I could get my hands on for one entire day. The results were noticed instantly as the zipper on my pants burst open when I burped. It wouldn't have been so bad if we hadn't been in a restaurant at the time.

The day following the "incident," I decided to try another diet that didn't adhere to the theory of the reward system. On this diet you only get to eat what is prescribed on a sheet of paper. The unfortunate part about this is the sheet of paper is smaller than a chewing gum wrapper. After the words "water" and "lettuce" are printed on it, there isn't enough room left for "Big Mac and Fries."

After one week of the Paper Diet, I barely had the strength to roll up the piece of paper in a tiny little ball and swallow it. I chased the paper down with a Meal-Lovers Pizza and a waffle cone of Pringles and Cream. Needless to say, the water I lost was quickly regained by the time I took my last lick.

Finally I was determined to reach my perfect weight. However, my perfect weight and the weight prescribed for me differ by approximately 15 pounds—give or take a few calorie measures. Undeterred in my mission, I chose to announce to my family one night that I was no longer going to eat after 5 p.m.

"Great. You'll lose weight if you don't eat all the way up until 5," my husband said. "Where's my supper?"

"I'm not going to cook because I'm on a diet."

"But I'm not on a diet," my son cried.

"If I cook, I'll eat it," I retaliated.

"We still have to eat!" my husband yelled.

"There's food in the fridge."

"But it's not cooked."

"C'mon, Dad," our son said.

"What's so hard about heating up a Hot Pocket? She does it."

"You're right, Son," my husband agreed.

Five days later my son and daughter looked anemic and I had lost a pound and a half if I took off all my clothes and stepped on the scales gently as I held onto the wall.

"I've lost six pounds myself," my husband said.

"Yeah! And I've lost three."

The whole episode was so depressing that I went out and bought a double cheeseburger and a chocolate milkshake. You'd think by now my body would compensate for my food binges and allow me to maintain my weight instead of gaining during those times of stress. That is not the case.

If I continue to lose and gain weight like I have been doing, my skin will be as pliable as Silly Putty. And as depressing as losing weight can be if you see me purchasing a guillotine, you'll know that I took the old gag seriously.

IT'S OVER

Well, the May primary is over and things should calm down until late September or early October.

Kim Frasure

This is, of course, if there are Republicans coming out this fall. I made a couple of comments during last Tuesday's election that got me some weird looks and some shaking of heads, but even if what I'm wondering seems ridiculous to most, I'm still wondering—so I do it out loud.

It just doesn't seem fair that every single person registered to vote can't vote because the party they're registered under has no candidates.

So there wasn't one Republican running in the primary. Maybe Republicans wanted to vote for a few of those Democrats that were. No way, you say!

Wake up! It's the 90s people. Some do cross over, you know.

It just seems weird to me that all my life I've been raised the "democratic way"—fair. It just seems so "undemocratic" to me when every single person registered can't vote.

Every time I talked to someone about this I got the same response—There are no Republicans running. So what!

One gentleman even made the comment that there were only 14 Republicans in this county anyway and that I'd just have to wait until more folks registered Republican before I'd see them in the primary.

I also heard, "Ronald Frasure has got grandchildren coming up and that man's carried the Republican Party for years." Well, that's true from my viewpoint.

But I still think, however crazy it may be, all voters should be able to vote in every election, regardless of their party affiliation.

AMS visited by North Carolinians

Adams Middle School was visited by two actors from "Poetry Alive" located in North Carolina.

The actors, Dennis Leiby and Cal Gerocious, gave a stupendous presentation. They went out into the audience and chose students and teachers to participate in their skits. They presented poems like "Casey at Bat," "Annabell Lee" and "Jabberwocky" from Alice in Wonderland.

The program was followed with a presentation to homeroom winners in the Young Authors Program. AMS students did an outstanding job with their books this year. Every child was presented a ribbon. Homeroom winners and county winners were honored with more elaborate ribbons. AMS has 12 county winners. They are as follows:

Ray Manns, Exceptional Category; Ty Martin, Graphics Category; Nathaniel Lankey, Picture Book Category; Joshua Stanley, Skills; Ashley Derossett, Illustrated; Ann Hall, Poetry; Melissa Eise, Graphics; Paul Jessen, Illustrated; Mashonna Austin, Skills; Xavier Scott, Illustrated; Amy Williamson, Poetry and Mike Castle, Skills.

The "Poetry Alive" program was made possible by the work of media specialist, Kimberly Reynolds. She and Paula Collins worked together on the presentation to the young authors.

The county winners and their teachers will attend an awards ceremony at Jenny Wiley Lodge on May 27 at 6:30. The young authors will be presented with a $50 savings bond.

Essays were written by area Floyd County high school students who are learning to communicate through writing.

by Kermit Howell and Simon Boyd

It was an early October morning, about 5:30 a.m. when the phone rang. I slowly got out of my comfortable bed to answer the phone. When I picked the phone up, it was Simon. He said, "Be ready in an hour if you want to go fishing."

I said, "I'll get my things ready." After he hung up, I put on my old rugged clothes. Then I got my new shiny rod and reel. The silver round Classic 33 has a shiny long screw in the middle of it. The black release switch is attached to the hard silver cover. The small movable drag switch is to control the small, sharp teeth. I got my old rusty tackle box. The black Ranger tackle box has a small plastic handle on top of the movable, smooth lid. The silver metal hinges are attached to the black box with rough, shiny screws. The red smooth shelves have small, rectangle shaped dividers with my new, colorful lures. I went back into the kitchen and made some eggs and bacon for breakfast.

Simon said, "Kermit, come out here and help me hook up the boat." I walked outside. We jacked up the boat. Our boat has hard, brown paddles on it. It has a black, fast motor. The seats are soft and black. It has a height anchor on it. The round, black steering wheel is next to the clear, hard windshield. The small, round gas pad is beside the steering wheel. Simon got into his truck and backed up under the trailer of the boat. We lined the trailer up with the hook-up piece and bolted the boat trailer to the truck. I asked Simon if he wanted a cup of coffee.

He said, "No, but thanks anyway." I went back into the house, got my equipment and put it into the truck. I got into Simon's caddy apple red Chevy truck. We pulled out of the driveway. We were on our way to Dew Lake.

As we pulled in at Dew Lake boat dock, I turned to Simon and said, "Do you have that feeling in your stomach like today will be the day we catch the big one?"

Simon said, "That is why I love to fish, the feeling of catching the Big one."

I said, "That must be the excitement of a lifetime."

The bait shop was not open when we went by. We unloaded the equipment into the boat. Simon went back up to the truck and backed the boat into the water. As we unhooked the boat, Simon went back up to the truck to pull the trailer out of the water.

We got into the boat and went out to our fishing spot. Our fishing spot is up in a little hollow like a valley about 1.5 miles out in the lake. The fishing spot is a place where the big fish stay under the old water-logged house lying on the bottom of the lake.

After we got there, I said, "Simon, let's put some fresh bait on our hooks and catch us a couple before it gets hot."

Then Simon said, "I'm going to cast my pole to the right of the boat." So, I slowly cast my line into the clear, blue water.

Then, everything got boring because there was nothing going on. I was looking at the clear blue sky. It was as hot as it could be.

Simon told me about the first time he ever caught a fish. He said his bobber was getting a little nibble, then it went under. He said he gave his little pole a yank and started reeling it in. He said, "It took me a few minutes to get it in because it gave me a big fight." It was a two-inch minnow.

I was thinking to myself, "Simon, that little varmint is lying to me about that story." I started dying laughing at him.

I told Simon about the first time I ever caught a fish. I told Simon that my pole started to bend. I gave it a little yank. Then, I started to reel it in. It took me a few minutes to get the little sucker in. It was a little bluegill about five inches long. I was so happy. Simon started laughing at me and said "Kermit, you are a lying dog!"

We both continued laughing while we reeled our lines in. We put some fresh bait on our hooks. We threw our poles back out into the clear blue water.

It got boring again because nothing was happening. The sun was very hot as it shone down on us. I bet Simon was thinking the same thing I was — what big fish we both are.

As we began to talk again, Simon noticed his float jerk quietly under the surface of the clear blue water. He reached very quickly to get his rod and reel into his hands. As he jerked the pole very hard, I could tell by the way it was jerking that it was a big one.

Simon hollered and said, "Kermit, I got it! I got it!"

I watched Simon fighting with the fish. The big fish was giving Simon the fight of his life as Simon's pole was bent into the shape of a C.

Simon said, "I feel like I have a whale on my line."

I watched Simon fighting with the fish. He would let the line go far out to tire the fish out. As the fish would go side to side, Simon was very careful not to let the fish pull the line too tight. As the fight went on, I could tell the fish was getting tired because it came in easy. The fish came to the surface and flipped out of the water. As it came back into the clear blue water, Simon began to reel in the fish. Simon hollered, "Get the fishing net!"

I went over to the side of the boat and got the net. As Simon was bringing the fish to the side of the boat, he pulled the fish up to the top of the water so I could get the net under the big mouth bass.

Simon was hollering, "Hurry up, Kermit, before it gets away."

I was saying to myself, "That was the biggest fish Simon has ever caught because he was yelling, 'Get it! Get it!'"

After Simon got his big mouth bass in, we talked about how much it would weigh.

I turned around and my float was gone. I knew right away it had to be a big one because I could see my flexible pole giving. The fish was putting up a fight. It would come in for a minute, then it would run back out.

I told Simon to get the fishing net because I was going to bring it in. I reeled a little and even scabbled a little. I finally reeled it to the top of the clear blue water. Simon dipped it up in the net. It was a monster compared to normal sized catfish I have ever caught. We figured it weighed about 7 lbs. We put the fish in a holding container on the boat and headed back to the boat dock. After we got to the boat dock, we got out of the boat and got in the truck. Simon got in the truck and backed the trailer into the water and loaded the boat. I got into the truck and we were on our way home. After we pulled out from the boat dock, I realized how hungry I was getting. I asked Simon if he wanted to stop and get something to eat.

He said, "Yes."

We stopped at McDonald's. We both went in and ordered Big Macs. We went to the truck and ate.

We left McDonald's and started talking about the fish we had caught. I was tired and my head was hurting but I felt warm inside because I had caught a big fish. I was proud of my fish and all the work it had taken to get the fish. I learned if you go after something, you can get it. I look forward to catching a bigger fish next time I go fishing.

CASEY AT THE BAY
Finest Lawrence, Thayer was paid five dollars for his first Estium in the San Francisco Examiner. Casey appeared under the pen name "Duke" in the Sunday edition, June 3, 1855 and no one, least of all Thayer, ever doubted that it would be remembered and recited more than a hundred years later. The ballad did not create a stir until after the summer when comedian William D. Wood, Hopper, appeared at the Waldorf Theatre in New York. The New York Times reported that "the ballad... was most impressively recited." Newspapers and magazines reprinted it and students learned to sing it down the home only man has dignity, only man therefore, can be funny. —Lester Kins

For easier ironing, insert a rolled up magazine in the sleeve then let the magazine unroll and it's ready to press.

EARTHWISE
Now that picnic season is here, look for recycled paper products for your picnic needs. Recycled paper napkins are now available in most grocery stores, and some specialty stores and catalogs even carry soft brown napkins made from 100% post-consumption waste. These brown paper products are a demand for low grade waste such as newspapers, cardboard, and phone books, that others see often go to the recycling center to be landfilled simply because paper companies won't buy them.

Warm weather increases chance of tick exposure

Kentucky public health officials are cautioning children and adults to take measures to prevent tick bites, which can cause Rocky Mountain spotted fever and Lyme disease.

Clarkson Palmer M.D., communicable disease branch manager in the Department for Health Services, says precautions are especially important in warm weather when people—and ticks—are most active and risk of exposure to tick bites is greatest.

In 1992, Kentucky had eight confirmed cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever, a potentially fatal disease, and 28 confirmed cases of Lyme disease, which can leave recurring symptoms or permanent damage. So far in 1993, two cases of each disease have been reported.

"People should remember to take measures to prevent tick bites when they are walking, working or playing in tick-infested areas," he said. "Precautions are most important now through July when ticks are most active."

Palmer recommends the following precautions:

- NEAR EAST: Rainy then clearing then hot and cook then sun and warm, rain west
 - SOUTHEAST: Clear and hot, showers then rain, then rain, heavy south Florida seasonable
 - MIDWEST: Cold wave, heavy rain then clearing and warming, sunny and occasionally rain and cooler
 - NORTHWEST: Clear and very warm coast, sunny mountains, intermittent showers, clear and pleasant
 - SOUTHWEST: Scattered rain, clear and cool clear and hot California, some sprinkles south
- Wash hands and the area of the bite immediately with soap and water, and keep the bite area clean.
 - Do not try to crush the tick. Instead, flush it down the toilet.
 - If bitten by a tick, the person should watch closely for symptoms of either Rocky Mountain spotted fever or Lyme disease," Palmer said. "If there's even a suspicion that some of the symptoms are present, a physician should be consulted. The key to complete recovery from tick-borne diseases is early treatment."
 - Symptoms of Rocky Mountain spotted fever are a fever and possibly chills, headache and muscle aches occurring three to 10 days after a tick bite. One to three days after the fever, a rash usually appears first on the wrist and ankles and then spreads to the rest of the body, thus the term "spotted fever."
 - The severity of Rocky Mountain spotted fever ranges from mild to fatal. The disease can be treated effectively with antibiotics, but early diagnosis and treatment are critical.
 - With Lyme disease, the first stage begins three to 32 days after a tick bite. Again, flu-like symptoms are present—fatigue, chills and fever, headache, muscle and joint pain or swollen lymph nodes.
 - Another sign of Lyme disease is a peculiar circular skin rash that appears where the tick bite occurred and then expands. The patch can vary in shape and appears most often on the thigh, groin, trunk, armpits and, in children, on the face. The center may clear as the patch enlarges, giving a ring-like appearance. It may be warm but usually not painful.
 - If not treated, Lyme disease can cause arthritis and have effects on the nervous system that may include numbness, pain, stiff neck and severe headache or muscle weakness of the face or limbs. Heart irregularities may occur.
 - Lyme disease also is treated with antibiotics; again, early treatment can bring about full recovery.
 - People who notice any of these symptoms after having a tick bite should see their physician immediately and mention the tick exposure," Palmer said.

Beware of lawn mowers, they can be dangerous

A false sense of security can be a dangerous thing when working around a lawn mower.

People don't think about it as a dangerous tool, but it's probably the most dangerous machine most people touch other than an automobile, said Larry Piercy, Extension safety specialist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"Nationally, some 37,000 people are treated in hospital emergency rooms for lawn mower accidents," Piercy said. "Last year in Kentucky there were 1,200 cases of lawn mower accidents that ended up in the emergency room."

"That doesn't consider the many lesser injuries that might occur which do not require emergency care.

Most lawn mower accidents may be the obvious ones, carelessly putting a foot or hand too close to the blade, being hit by a rock or metal object thrown out from under the mower, pulling the mower backwards over one's own foot.

Some homeowners may not consider some potential hazards very dangerous though.

"How many times do we see a dad let his little toddler 'help' him with the lawn mower by standing in front of the father and pretend to help push the mower?" Piercy asked.

"If the machine should throw a rock or sharp metal object back toward the father, it probably would hit him in the lower leg or knee," he said. "But if the toddler is standing there in front of dad, that sharp object might well strike him a vital spot."

Better that the father-son bonding be developed somewhere other than around the lawn mower, he said.

Even adults should be careful during maintenance not to reach under a

PET CARE

A Louisiana veterinarian and father of a 3- and a 6-year-old has some advice on safer interaction between pets and the youngest members of the family.

"New parents are very concerned about the possibility of their pets scratching a newborn or young child," says Dr. Toby Wexler, owner of Durel's Animal Hospital in Lafayette, La. "With some basic preventative measures, the fear is often much greater than the actual incidence."

"A lot of dogs and cats are given away needlessly because of fears of scratches," he says.

For families where there is a dog or cat in place at the time of the birth of a baby, Dr. Wexler advises bringing clothing articles worn by the newborn in advance of the baby's arrival home so that the pet can become familiar with the scent. On baby's first days home, lavish lots of extra attention on the pet and allow its curiosity by some closely supervised sniffing. Include the pet in the first few weeks, hectic as it will be.

Dr. Wexler also suggests having the pet's nails well trimmed before the big day and every two weeks thereafter.

HEALTH & NUTRITION

MAGNESIUM THE MAGNIFICENT: No, that's not the name of a magician, but rather reflects the way researchers increasingly feel about this mineral as they learn more about the various roles it plays in maintaining good health. The cover story in the May 1993 issue of the University of Texas Lifetime Health Letter deals with some of the known, as well as potential benefits of this mineral. For example:

Heart Attacks: Magnesium treatment at the time of a heart attack has been shown to reduce deaths by one fourth. Continued magnesium treatment for one month following a heart attack continued to show decreased incidences of heart failure.

High Blood Pressure: Studies show that a deficiency of magnesium may contribute to high blood pressure. Magnesium supplements or intravenous magnesium therapy can lower blood pressure. This may be due to magnesium's ability to relax constricted blood vessels.

Diabetes: Daily magnesium supplements given to adult-onset diabetics with high blood pressure resulted in a significant drop in blood pressure levels to normal range.

Osteoporosis: One study shows that taking magnesium along with a calcium supplementation increased bone mineral density for postmenopausal women on estrogen therapy.

Chronic Fatigue Syndrome: After being given magnesium sulfate injections for six weeks, CFS patients reported more energy, less pain, and a generally improved emotional state.

Food sources include whole wheat breads and pastas, brown rice, dry beans, seeds, nuts, leafy green vegetables (spinach, kale, chard) and oatmeal. To reduce loss of magnesium in cooking, use minimal water, and shortest cooking time possible.

VOTRE SANTE! To your health. That's what the French say when they offer a toast. Scientists who have puzzled over the ability of the French to withstand high incidences of heart disease despite a cuisine that relies heavily on high fat dairy products, now think the French fondness for red wine may be the reason. Pourquoi? Because of its phenols. These chemicals, which give the wine its color, are also antioxidants like vitamins C, E, and beta-carotene. They clean up free radicals, and inhibit the oxidation of LDL—the "bad" cholesterol—which reduces the risk of coronary artery damage.

HOUSEHOLD HELP

Q: I own a split-level home with a large fence-enclosed backyard. I am planning to construct a brick walkway which begins at my back entrance and leads to an opening at my fence. The entire measurement is approximately 28 feet long by three feet wide. My choice of walkway is a "herringbone" pattern which is to be laid on a concrete base and mortar. Do you have any tips or pointers I may need to pursue?

A: There are several other design considerations to take into account, but you have chosen a pattern that merits time and patience. Nonetheless, when your job is complete, it will be very attractive and decorative.

To begin your project, you will need to excavate sufficient depth for your concrete base (about three inches thick) and the thickness of the brick itself (2 1/4" thick). With this in mind, it is important to install some sort of edging. This is merely constructing a permanent border along both sides of your walkway. Some suggestions on what to use are either cedar, cypress or redwood, pressure-treated lumber. If you desire a design that curves around a tree or some patio furniture, then your walkway brick will have to be used for the edging.

After your concrete base is poured and fully dried, your next step is to plan your approach with installing the mortar and brick. This project can be completed in stages unlike concrete, which must be employed immediately. After laying several courses of brick, you will adjust to the pattern you are creating. The mortar should cure out above the brick and then be wiped clean. Also, a very important technique is to slightly crown or pitch the design for proper drainage.

With perseverance, you will complete the entire pattern and end up with a beautiful walkway. As you progress through the job, be sure to keep your mortar moist and only spray the joints with a mist of water from your garden hose. Be careful not to flush away the fresh mortar with a force of water pressure. Gradually, lightly spray the surface over a period of several days and repeat the process until the mortared joints become very solid. Occasionally, and in the distant future, some mortar joints may crack or separate slightly, but they can easily be repaired with more mortar.

HOME TIPS

STORING BULBS—I have another good use for old pantyhose. We have to dig up gladiolus bulbs in the fall, and I cut the tops off and push the bulbs down in the hose. Then I hang them in the cellar for the winter. The pantyhose let the air get through and the bulbs dry so they are good for the next spring. Rita N., Nevis, Minn.

TRAVELING—When going on a trip and packing two suitcases, try packing each one with the identical mix of clothes and accessories. If one suitcase is lost, you are not completely without extra clothes. Also on your trip, when stopping at a motel car trips, when stopping at a motel car, you can take either suitcase out instead of both of Jerry W., Princeton, Ky.

PLASTIC FOOD STORAGE BAGS—I find plastic food storage bags a great help in organizing sewing supplies. The large size holds many spools of thread, making it easy to locate the right color at a glance. The sandwich bags hold various kinds of elastic or collections of snaps and hem rulers which might otherwise drop out of sight in your box of basket. Carla P., Crown Point, Ind.

SMALL MINI BOXES—I use a recycled mini box for a pill box. The top will stay on after the label is removed. You can see inside easily by using a toothpick. Carolyn N.,

If you think you have to go to a big city hospital for the right care, just come to King's Daughters' and tape this to your window.

There's a common misconception that when it comes to health care, bigger is better. The bigger the city, the better the care.

Not so. In fact, there's a hospital right here in Ashland that soundly disproves that theory. King's Daughters Medical Center.

We've gone all over the country to find and recruit top doctors and nurses. And to help them do their jobs better, we've made quite an investment in the latest diagnostic tools.

During her visit, she shared with students information about some of the programs offered at the college.

Wink Miller

Miller retires

After nearly 40 years with Kentucky Power Company, Wink Miller will retire as Transmission and Distribution (T&D) director for the company's General Office on June 1. Stephen E. Early, engineering manager since 1989, has been named as his replacement.

Miller helped create the original three-person department in 1979 and guided its development as the one office responsible for all of the T&D operations in the company's 20-county service territory in eastern Kentucky. The department now consists of 69 employees.

Miller first attended Caney Junior College, now named Alice Lloyd College, in Pippa Passes, and graduated with a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from the University of Kentucky in 1954. He shortly thereafter joined Kentucky Power in what was then called the Pikeville District as a distribution engineer.

Miller held the positions of supervising engineer for the Hazard and Pikeville divisions as well as engineering superintendent in Ashland prior to heading up the General Office T&D department. He completed the AEP Management Development Program in 1971 and is a registered professional engineer in Kentucky.

Miller and his wife, Neucedia, are members of the First Baptist Church of Ashland. They will be moving near Red Fox, where they have already purchased a home, plan to participate in community activities and take care of family members in the area. They also plan to travel to Texas occasionally to see their son, Greg, his wife, Cheryl, and their 12 and 8-year-old grand children Brandon and Kristin.

NAR president says Clinton tax package is good for America

The tax package now before Congress is good for America, good for economic growth, and it should be enacted quickly, William S. Chee, president of the National Association of Realtors, said recently.

"The package recognizes housing and real estate as the primary engine for economic growth, and its enactment would be good news for business owners, investors, home owners and all who would like to have a home or business of their own," Chee said.

President Clinton's tax bill, which was improved upon by the House Ways and Means Committee, is a balanced package that includes constructive provisions for both residential and commercial real estate and recognizes the needs of small business operators and self-employed persons, Chee said. He was one of several business leaders who joined Vice President Al Gore at a news conference on Capitol Hill recently. Gore's news conference was held to show the business community's support for Clinton's tax package as the U.S. House prepares to consider it next week.

"The package would correct some imbalances that exist in the present tax system, but would not undermine justifiable reforms that were enacted in the 1980s. President Clinton and the Ways and Means Committee have fashioned a tax bill that makes sense for all of us," Chee said.

Among the NAR-supported real estate provisions in the tax bill are:

- Renewal and permanent extension of the Mortgage Revenue Bond, Mortgage Credit Certificate and Low-Income Housing Credit programs, which have proven successful in advancing home ownership opportunities for lower- and moderate-income Americans.

• Passive loss modifications, which would allow real estate professionals to use their rental losses to offset real estate and other income. Thus, they would be treated in the same manner as all other business persons who incur business losses.

• Modification of debt restructuring rules similar to those governing farmers. This would help keep troubled properties in private hands and ease pressure on financial institutions.

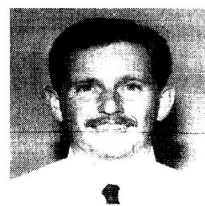

• Removal of barriers that currently discourage pension fund investments in real estate.

• Increased expensing of depreciable property for businesses. From the current $10,000 cap to $25,000. This provision is of great importance to small business and self-employed persons.

• Restoration and extension of the 25 percent deduction for health insurance premiums paid by self-employed persons to December 31, 1993.

"The bill recognizes that it is time to get our national economic house in order and to provide the foundation for long-term economic growth," Chee said.

Build Your Dream House

LINWOOD 10-039

Associated Designs-Eugene, Oregon

The V-shaped Linwood looks complicated to build, but it isn't. Most of the rooms are basically rectangular in shape despite the fact that the central portion of the home is set at a 45 degree angle to the two front-facing sections.

Bold wooden columns support the extended roof in front of the garage, creating a portico effect. The walkway wraps around a recessed courtyard before arriving at the double door entry. A small powder room is just inside the doors.

The kitchen is bright and spacious, with windows on two sides. A central work island, with built-in cooktop adds to the already ample counter space. Other features include: built-in microwave, appliance center, step-in pantry, direct access to the garage and a wide pass-through counter to the dining room.

French doors in the family room, dining room and living room open onto a large deck. Both the living room and family room have fireplaces. Pocket doors provide separation between the dining room and family room when needed.

Bedrooms and utilities are accessed by an octagonal hallway. The bedroom that has a second door near the entry could serve as a home office, den or library.

The master suite is huge — equal in size to the living room — and packed with luxury amenities. Three skylights brighten the spa area, which opens onto a small private deck. The suite also has a generous walk-in closet and twin vanities, located outside of the steamy tub and shower section.

If the Linwood is built over a basement, stairs take the place of the pass-through wall between the kitchen and family room. Pantry size is also reduced.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $7.50 to Associated Designs, 1260 Chamelton St., Suite 2, Eugene, Ore. 97401. Please specify the Linwood 10-039 and include a return address when ordering.

Carpet Needs Vary From Room To Room

Knowing what you want or need before entering the carpet showroom can simplify your purchase process. A careful analysis of the type of conditions to which the carpet will be subjected is fundamental.

Do you want a luxurious carpet that you can sink your toes into? Or do you need a carpet that can survive an active family and withstand lots of wear and tear? Knowing the traffic patterns in various areas of the home will help complete your analysis.

Halls and Stairs. These high traffic areas should be covered with a densely tufted carpet with low pile. Color should be neutral and the carpet should possess good soil-hiding properties.

Dining Room. Stain and soil resistance are high priorities here.

Living Room. If the living room is used a great deal by the family, look for a carpet with the same characteristics as the dining room. Otherwise go for low pile and low tuft.

Master Bedroom. This is a low traffic area where your imagination can run free. Look for color and comfort.

Children's Rooms. Look for a durable easy-to-clean carpet with good soil-hiding capabilities.

Family Room. A party-proof carpet is called for in this area. Dense pile, excellent soil resistance and for easy maintenance a multi-tonal carpet usually performs best in these conditions.

Kitchen. Low, dense looped pile is a moisture resistant fiber, will be capable of withstanding the heavy traffic of the kitchen. Look for stain and soil resistance, and perhaps a patterned effect to help hide accidental spills.

Bathrooms. Here moisture is your carpet's worst enemy. Look for specially constructed carpet to withstand bacteria, fungus, and mildew growth.

Arrival with these requirements, you can begin to examine the different types of carpets which offer various benefits to you. Desiring to meet your needs.

Good Hygiene® Makes Good Sense

NAPS Most physicians believe that a healthy body cleanses itself, but in many cases a physician will recommend a specific product such as a douche, for achieving a normal chemical balance and a feeling of freshness. Reusable douche products may be the answer to the feminine hygiene needs of millions of women whose physicians recommend douching.

Best Products Division, Abbott Laboratories offers two reusable douche kits under the Feminine brand name. Tri-Kit and Sonata douches kits offer many advantages over disposable douche products. The features of these reusable douche products focus on economical savings, size and portability and the advantage of using your choice of douche solution.

Tri-Kit, holding up to 10% of douche solution, has more capacity than a disposable douche. With its reusable design, it is less expensive to use than a disposable product. Because of its size, Tri-Kit is perfect to use at home or when traveling and can be stored in its attractively and compact storage case.

Sonata is the only feminine syringe with the unique Easy-Use Feature that lets women insert the nozzle into the filled bag without releasing the solution prematurely. Sonata is also perfect to use at home or when traveling and can be stored in its carrying case.

Tri-Kit and Sonata are comfortable and easy to use, competitive priced and can be found in attractive, secured packaging for assurance of freshness and sanitary product. Both products are available in most drug, pharmacy and food stores.

Knowledge Is Power In War Against Allergies

(NAPS) Sneezing, runny nose, nasal and sinus congestion and itchy, watery eyes. If you suffer from these allergy symptoms, you're not alone. There are more than 40 million Americans to keep you company in your misery. Like you, they suffer from upper respiratory allergies, often known as "hay fever" and usually caused by pollen, molds, the environment, pet dander, dust and other irritants.

The good news is, these allergies can be controlled. Do you know how? Take the "Allergy IQ" quiz to find out.

1. Pollen counts are highest in the morning, making it the worst time to go outside if you suffer from allergies.

2. Allergy sufferers should keep home, car and office windows open to avoid circulation.

3. Keep windows closed and try to use air conditioning whenever possible. Air filters can cut pollen counts by greater than 100 percent. Have all air conditioners serviced regularly to assure good filtration.

4. One of the most common causes of allergies within the home is a microscopic insect that lives in carpets, bedding and upholstery.

5. The typical home contains millions of dust mites, which feed off flakes of dead skin and food debris. To keep dust mites off mattresses, use springs and pillows, zip them in allergen-proof fabric and wash them in hot water frequently.

TRUE: Also, to minimize allergens within the home, dust with a damp rather than a dry cloth. Wash bedding and blankets regularly on the "hot" cycle and rent a high efficiency portable HEPA filter available from medical suppliers.

6. There is no difference between an antihistamine and a decongestant.

FALSE: Antihistamines help fight your body's reaction to allergens. They prevent the actions of histamines released in certain sites, such as the blood vessels in your nose. Therefore, antihistamines provide relief for a runny nose and itchy, watery eyes.

The newest antihistamine available over the counter is Tavist 1. Tablets, containing a unique 12-hour ingredient formerly available only by prescription.

Decongestants help you breathe more freely by opening up the nasal airways to lessen nasal congestion. In doing so, they clear the openings to the sinus passages, allowing the sinuses to drain, thus relieving painful congestion. Some people find relief with an antihistamine-decongestant combination. Tavist-D Tablets, also now available without a prescription, combine the antihistamine of Tavist 1 with a potent decongestant.

It's impossible to tell the true difference between allergy symptoms and colds.

FALSE: Although allergies and colds share some traits, allergies are not accompanied by a fever. Colds, seldom accompanied by sneezing, mark symptom of allergies. Allergy symptoms usually last longer and are steady in intensity. Colds are generally short-lived and often vary in intensity from hours to days. Also, mucus secretions from a cold tend to get thick and cloudy as they progress, whereas a white allergy secretion remains clear and thin.

TRUE: To kill molds, around sinks and bath tubs, wash them with bleach and repair plumbing leaks.

FALSE: The most common is pet dander, which clings to fur, hair and feathers. If you can't part with your pet, make it once a week and keep it out of the bedroom at all times.

TRUE: Allergies often run in families.

TRUE: But onset of symptoms can develop at any age.

Washing your face before bedtime can help you minimize allergy symptoms while you sleep.

TRUE: Pollen clinging to hair after a day outdoors can rub off on your face, triggering allergy symptoms as you sleep.

For more information on managing your allergies, call 1-800-828-4782 for a free Allergy Management Kit provided by the makers of Tavist 1 and Tavist-D.

The kit contains a guide to controlling symptoms, educational information and a list of allergy directors, valuable coupons and more.

Banking On Quality A Must For Homebuyers

By Bernard E. Heston, M.A. SRA
Approved Broker, President NAPS

Home is where the heart is, as the saying goes, but it is also where the money is. The purchase of a home typically is the biggest investment most Americans make in a lifetime. To ensure the soundness of their investment, homebuyers often rely on the services of numerous consultants. One of the most important of these is the appraiser. Although no investment guarantee can return homebuyers an amount that is risk-free, a competent appraiser can help them make a sound investment decision.

Appraisers play a vital role in the real estate industry by developing accurate valuations. Their services are critical to the success of the appraisal process. The appraiser's role is to provide an unbiased, objective valuation of a property. This is done by comparing the property to similar properties in the market.

Homebuyers should be sure to choose their appraiser wisely. A competent appraiser will have a good track record and will be a member of a professional organization. Homebuyers should also check the appraiser's credentials and experience. A competent appraiser will be able to provide a detailed report on the property's value and will be able to answer any questions you may have.

mainly, on the honesty or "peace of mind" value of the property. Although homebuyers generally do not hire appraisers directly, they should be aware that the best possible appraisal is assigned to homebuyers.

Until as recently as 1989, in most states virtually anyone could become an appraiser, regardless of their ability or knowledge. This is no longer the case. The American Appraisal Institute (AAI) has set a high standard for appraisers. The AAI is a national organization that has been recognized by the International Board of Standards and Practices for Certified Appraisers (IBCA).

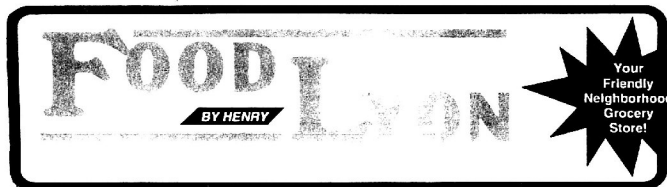

Homebuyers should be sure to choose their appraiser wisely. A competent appraiser will have a good track record and will be a member of a professional organization. Homebuyers should also check the appraiser's credentials and experience. A competent appraiser will be able to provide a detailed report on the property's value and will be able to answer any questions you may have.

Employment of appraisal services can vary from state to state, and many states do not even evaluate the work product of appraisers subject to their experience credits.

To know that an appraiser is a member of the American Appraisal Institute, homebuyers should look for the AAI logo on the appraiser's business card. The AAI logo is a circular emblem that contains the letters "AAI" and the words "American Appraisal Institute".
