The city's annual spring cleanup was given boost this week, and the money ill pay for tipping fees sociated with the collecfion of trash.

"Every spring and fall, we take it upon ourselves to make our community a better place to live by cleaning up illegal dumps and roadside trash and by offering hard trash pickups," Graden said. "One of the biggest obstacles we face is finding the funding necessary to pay for the tipping fees to place the trash in proper landfills. This grant, lust made that a lot easier."

PRESTONSBURG – Administrators with the Floyd County Board of Education are preparing to present a recommendation to the school board later this month that would better organize the district's goal of making students more health. more healthy.

Physical Activity Plan for the upcoming 200910 school year.

The school system's committee on health, nutrition and physical activity met several times during the last school year and came away with the establishment of a physical fitness assessment took for grades K-12, according to Pete Grigsby Jr., assistant superintendent.

The committee was first formed some seven years ago under the guidance of then-superintendent Dr. Paul Fanning, something that enabled the school district to "get ahead of the game," Grigsby said.

"We started looking at this years before Senate Bill 172 requires that schools develop plans by which students receive education instruction in regard to nutrition, are provided adequate physical activity opportunities and by which vending machine programs are restructured.

Local hospitals, health departments and extension offices have worked closely with school personnel and administrators, since passage of Senate Bill 172 in 2006, Grigsby said.

Part of the process for Floyd County schools, and other districts around the state, its to gather data from individual schools to be assessed for upcoming activities.

For the upcoming year, one model plan that was used by a few county schools this past year, could now be required for all schools.

The physical education and classroom teachers developed and established baselines for all students to measure growth in physical fitness and health. Also, the Presidential Physical Fitness Test, the model by which a few schools used last year, will be recommended to the school board as the guideline for all schools in the county. Grigsby said, Teachers who had used this model in past years will train those in schools which could soon be using the same guideline.

In a recent wellness report, statistics showed that some 167 students at Prestonsburg High School participated in the 2008-60 school year under the wellness plan were that vending machine snacks that did not meet federal and state guidelines were removed and that healthy snacks are now offered to students will be sufficient and stored for study.

The Kentucky Division of Water has specific information on how to disinfect water. In the absence of safe bottled water, tap water should be boiled to kill most types of diseaseasing organisms that may be present. A sport's Faustian bargain

The American pastime has taken another devastating blow with the revelation of steroid use by New York Yankees slugger Alex Rodriguez, the supposedly clean hitting machine who was counted on to reclaim the sport's revered career home run record from surly alleged cheater Barry Bonds.

Rodriguez at least admits to post survey.

Rodriguez at least admits to past transgressions, skipping the evasions of such highly suspected fellow superstars as Bonds, Roger Clemens, Mark McGwire, Sammy Sosa and Rafael Palmeiro. But this may not reflect strength of character so much as the awareness that he probably would be forced by Congress to repeat his denials under oath and risk facing perjury inquiries like Bonds and Clemens.

However, it's time that someone besides players faced tough questions under oath. Our list starts with Baseball Commissioner Bud Selig. The fact is, the cheaters are only a symptom of baseball's core problem: the refusal of Selig, team owners and the players union to do anything to stop the steroid invasion, which began in the mid-1990s.

Instead, they all welcomed the fan-pleasing, money-generating home run barrage by players mysteriously fortified with 25 pounds of new muscle. After the 1994 season was canceled at its midpoint due to labor strife, the sport was reeling. Then it was steroids to the rescue. Baseball only Rodriguez at least admits to past transgressions, skipping canceled at its midpoint due to labor strife, the sport was reeeling. Then it was steroids to the rescue. Baseball only fully recovered in 1998, during McGwire's and Sosa's epic battle to set a new single-season home run record.

Selig led the cheering. Three years later, when Bonds broke McGwire's mark, the commissioner was nowhere to be found. Bonds' feats were simply too extraordinary—and his physical transformation too extreme — for the commissioner to pretend everything was on the up and up.

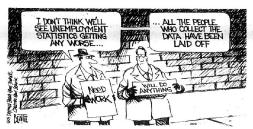

Still, Selig did nothing. It was not until Congress shamed baseball into action in 2005 that the sport finally took steroids seriously.

They came the very first night and have come every day since, working through ice, wind and 12-degree weather. Never would we have imagined being assisted in our time of need with such consistency.

The bicentennial of the other anti-slavery hero

by JOHN G. SHIBER, PhD

Feb. 12 marks the bicentennial anniversary of the birth of two great men who were instrumental in eradicating slavery. One, of course, is Abraham Lincoln. The other: Charles Darwin.

Charles Darwin' Yes. Through his studies on evolution, Darwin made a Darwin.

Charles Darwin? Yes, Through his studies on evolution, Darwin made a great scientific contribution toward equalizing the playing field between blacks and whites. He abhorred slavery, and while slave owners of his day contended that blacks and whites were completely different races, with whites being superion, he believed they belonged to the same human family. Slavery was a 'sin' in his mind, and abolishing it became his sacred cause', as science historians Desmond & Moore point out in a recent Darwin bography.

So, Darwin's desire to prove the wrong-headedness of slavery proponents moved him toward the study of evolutionism. He was certain that with meticulous, lengthy research and by extending the idea throughout the ammal kingdom, he could find the evidence for his theory that all races share a common ancestry.

Charles Darwin was one of six children born to wealthy English physician. Robert Darwin, and his wife. Susannah Wedgwood, At sixten, he was sent to study medicine at the University of Edmburgh, but after the first year his interest wandered from medicine to natural history. He started learning about marme invertebrates and how to classify plants when his disapproving father sent him to Christ's College, hopping he would become an Anglican parson. Again.

Darwin gravitated toward natural history and developed an ardent interest in entomology (insect study) and botany (plant study) but he also got his degree in Divinity.

In the summer of his 22nd year, Darwin was invited, at the recommendation of his botanist mentor John Henslow, to travel as "gentleman naturalist on the HMS Beagle, a British ship commissioned to map coastal South America. He accepted the invitant of the HMS Beagle, a British ship commissioned to map coastal South America. He accepted the invitant of the Galapagos Islands, off Ecuador's Pacific coast, and the standard of the Galapagos Islands, off Ecuador's Pacific coast, and the standard of the Galapagos Islands, off Ecuador's Pacific coast, and his observations of the diverse plants and animals he'd seen there, comprehensively studied and documented the behavior of earthworms and their importance to soil, and completed a 4-volume treatise on the behavior of barnacles, a work of some 20 years. The treatise alone gained limit minense respect within the scientific community and an honorary membership in London's prestigious Royal Academy of Sciences ...all without formal scientific training. The chemical services were also and extended the plant of the share of these hed eveloped into his theory of evolution by natural selection.

Darwin's seminal publication, On the Origin of Species by Means of theory of evolution by natural selection.

Darwin's seminal publication, On the Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection and the Preservation of Favoured Races in the Struggle for Life, published 150 years ago, revealed his entire theory. Although met with scorn and outrage from the Clergs, scientists welcomed it, for many had already been working along similar lines for decades, Indeed, the ideas of Malthus ("Struggle for Existence"), Herbert Spencer ("Survival of the Fittest"), Alfred Wallace (coined "Natural Selection"), and, especially, Charles Lyell, whose "Principles of Geology" proved, through fossil and geologic records, through fossil and geologic records, that Earth was much older than previously thought, all gave Darwin the needed courage to publish his theoretical conclusions.

In his 73 years, through intense scientific observation and documentation, Charles Darwin brought together concepts about Nature that had been hitherto elusive. Following On the Origin of Species, he crammed into his remaining 23 years no less than eleven major natural history studies on an amazingly wide range of topics: insect fertilization of orchids, variation of plants & animals under domestication, emotional expression of man & animals, movement & habit of climbing plants, eross- and self-fertilization in plants, and the formation of vegetable mold through the action of worms. In all, he left the world with over 27 published works of mammoth proportion and two autobiographies.

The work that will ever be best associated with this great naturalist, however, is his extensive research into the control of the state of the control of the technical fastidiousness and the wealth of evidence it presents in favor of his theory.

Charles Darwin died on April 19, 1882 and was buried in London's Westminster Abbey. (See http://www.uc.edu/darwin/ for Darwin2009

Now misaligned politicians want to put at least an

Every time the state needs funds they attack an industry and it's consumers that are paying above and beyond a reasonable amount.

Another Howard takes Pikeville reigns

by RICK BENTLEY TIMES COLUMNIST

The first time I remember seeing Ben Howard was during the 1989 state football playoffs. He was eight years old and served as water boy for his dad's Pikeville Panthers, wearing an oversized maroon jersey while lugging maroon jersey while lugging maround an (for him) oversized carrier of water bottles. This tells you two things: First, I'm getting really, really old. Ben Howard has been around Pikeville High School football a long, long time. The first time I remember see

If you're expecting Ben to pick up right where Dad eff. off in 1989, you're in for a rude awakening. I'm going to be as honest as I can when I say this, but first, let me say something else: I mean absolutely no dispressed to any of the current. else: I mean absolutely no dis-respect to any of the current Panthers when I make the fol-lowing state ment. Now, let me be clear when I type the following sentence: This isn't Ben's father's Pikeville Panthers. There will be no Hackney or Deramus or even Brother Jason on the field when the Pike County Bowl rolls around. I was there for that runand I know of which I speak.

This isn't to say there isn't talent at Pikeville. There is.
There are some talented young men, and Ben will get the focus back on football at Pikeville High.
But the runs – the long, deep runs – into the postseason may be a little ways off.
Then again, he could surprise me and have them in Bowling Green next December. After all, with six classes and not four, half the competition is trying to make the Double-A finals.
Ben knows football. He was Ben knows football. He was Ben knows football. He was great when he played it at Pikeville High School, then was part of a national champion at (gulp) Georgetown College.

But perhaps his most famous – certainly his most infamous — day of football came in a rare appearance as a Pikeville College Bear.

Ben came to Pikeville College har.

Ben came to Pikeville College to coach, not play. He wanted to play baseball, and did, and did very well. But by the midpoint of the football season, the Bears were down to one quarterback, so the staff convinced him to become a player-coach, activating him in case of emergency.

player-coach, activating him in case of emergency.
During the next week, at Lambuth, the Bears fell behind 35-7 midway through the fourth quarter. The staff decided it wouldn't be a bad idea to put Ben in for a few plays to shake the rust off in case he would be needed down the road.

road.

And on the last play of that game – with no time on the clock – Ben Howard took a snap on a two-point conversion that would have tied the game at 35 and sent it to overtime.

Let me say this: Much of that was because of some questionable coaching on the other sideline. All they had to do was run the ball and eat up some clock, but they didn't and Ben made them pay for it. He was nothing shy of brilliant, turning in the most impressive six-anda-half-minutes of quarterbacking I've ever seen.

Hillard Howard began coaching at Pikeville in 1972, if memory serves. His first state title came 15 years later.

I hope Ben Howard is still coaching his alma mater 15 years from now.

Pull the chicken and veggies from the pan and place on a warm plate and keep warm (I turn my oven on to the lowest temp and then put a very loose foil tent 'that' on top of what I just sattéed, I don't tuck the sides of the foil in; just let it rest on op to preserve the heat. If you tuck it all in, it wall steam and lose times as satteed appeal). rowned goode bobs. Inis is concentrated flavor that will make for an exquisite sauce.

To make sauce, you will need liquid. I like to add chicken broth dadds more flavor and body than just plain water). I also might add a little wine, depending on what I've just cooked. The deal is you're going to use the liquid to provide the stuff up off the bottom and provide the stuff up off the bottom and your trusty wire whise fluid using your trusty wire whise fluid about whiseks way back when nothapter. Two when we were discussing kitchen tools.

Anyway, you're going to crank the heat up somewhat (not too high or the liquid will all evaporate too fast) and whisk the bottom of the pan like your life depended on it. Your liquid will start to turn a little brown (from incorporating the goodie bobs) and next thing you know, you'll have something that starts to look like a sauce emerging. Now we're cooking! Isn't this the coolest?? When I made my first sauce like this, I felt like I could do anything in the kitchen. It's really that empowering, really!

At this point, you may have like I could do anything in the kitchen. It's really that empowering, really:

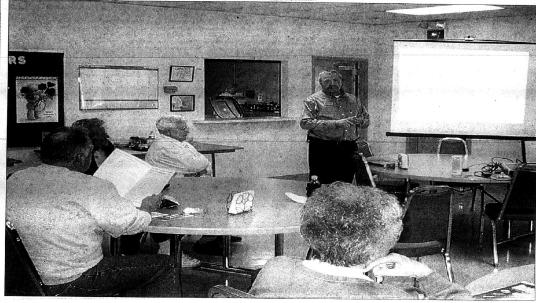

At this point, you may have enough liquid, too much liquid or not enough. The remedies are simple—If it's just right, pull it from the liquid arrange your chicken and the liquid arrange your chicken and the liquid arrange your chicken and the liquid, then you will bring plate and the top. If you have too much liquid, then you will bring your sauce down to a simmer (see below for a detailed explanation of a what simmer should look like) and let the sauce reduce via evaporation. Now if you let it reduce a lot, you'll make your sauce instead into a reduction (see below for more of a detailed explanation), which is just really a concentrated sauce and for our purposes right now, you don't need to go there. If you don't have enough liquid, then add just a little more chicken broth (or your liquid of choice) and whisk away till you get the desired consistency.

Whew! There you have it, Saute 101, complete with a lovely sauce. How's that for an explanation? Are you feeling good about your skillet now? I hope so! Have FUN!

MCDOWELL - "The roads aren't the same as they were 15 years ago." Jeff Sizemore, highway safety planer with the Big Sandy Area Development District, told a crowd of seniors gathered at the McDowell Senior Citizens Center on Thursday. Sizemore spoke to the seniors as part of a mature driver presentation aimed at educating drivers 55 and older. The event was organized by the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet Office of Highway Safety and the Big Sandy ADD.

Sandy ADD. "We want to help the drivers brush up on their driving skills and make them aware of all the distractions, like cell phones, that other drivers have now," Sizemore said. "We hope to make them better defensive drivers and encourage them not to take chances or put themselves in dangerous situations." Sandy ADD

According to a release from the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet, the purpose of the presentation was to, reducate maturing drivers about safety issues affecting them. Older drivers have fewer collisions because they drive less and at less dangerous times, however, when they're in a crash it can be very serious. According to the Loretta Bolin, 70, enjoys the freedom that driving provides to her. Bolin attended the mature driver presentation at the McDowell Senior Citizens Center on Thursday.

"I love the freedom of being able to drive where I want to," Bohn said. "I'm 70-years-old and proud of it." As part of the presentation. Sizemore showed a video and handed out brochures to the seniors in attendance, with some of the handouts asking them to evaluate their own driving skills.

"The United States has a growing population of older drivers," Sizemore said. "Eventually, they're going to outnumber the other drivers, going to duniumeer the other drivers, and we want them to be as safe as possible out on the road." Along with doing presentations on driving for senior citizens, other simi-lar programs deal with drivers in var-

"We have a range of programs aimed at inexperienced teenage drivers all the way up to the mature drivers." Sizemore said. "We try to hit as many different age groups as we can." Sizemore will head to Magoffin County took the same presentation to

I am 82 years young and have begin having some weakness in my legs, I am blessed with robust health, no diabetes, high blood 'pressure, etc. I did have poilto as a child, and a frend was telling me that poilt could cause problems when people get older. Is that true? If so, what types of problems are we talking about? I am 82 years young and have

About?
Your friend is talking about post-polio syndrome (PPS). Some people who had polio at a young age develop effects from the disease many years later. No one the disease many years later. No one knows why this happens, but it is believed that up to 50 percent of polio survivors are affected by PPS. Research is ongoing.

The number of people who are at risk for PPS has been estimated to be more than 440,000 by the National Center for Health Statistics. This isn't surprising since during the height of the polio epidemic in the 1940s and 1950s, nearly 20-thousand Americans contracted the disease each year. The introduction of the Salk vaccine in 1955 stopped this deadly killer in its tracks. Fortunately PPS, while aggravating, is rarely life-threatening like polio itself.

Post-polio syndrome can strike years after original infection

Your original polio infection caused problems with motor neurons, a type of nerve cell that carries electrical impulses between your brain and your muscles. Some of these motor neurons were damaged by the polio. During recovery, surviving motor neurons in the affected area are often able to sprout new nerve terminals to "orphaned" muscle fibers. Over time, this can result in various degrees of recovery of whatever movement was lost.

According to some experts, PPS involves degeneration of individual nerve terminals in the motor neurons that survived the original polio attack. Since these surviving motor neurons have to do more work to eventually figure to the produce new weakness in the affect of area. This weakness may be temporary or permanent. This is one of several hypotheses around the cause of PPS, but to be frank, no one is completely sure why PPS develops.

The symptoms of PPS include the symptoms of PPS include the properties of the symptoms of the properties of the properties dictable.

Some risk factors for developing PPS, relate to the severity of your original polio infection and your age at the time you were infected. Unfortunately, people who had a strong recovery from the most severe cases of polio are likely to have the greatest loss of function and more fatigue with PPS. However, in cases where the original polio produced lairly minimal symptoms, PPS usually produces only minor symptoms. To determine if you are suffering from PPS, your doctor may do nerve conduction and muscle conduction studies, CT scanning and MRI imaging. He or she may need to rule out other conditions like Lou Gehrig's disease. The treatment is aimed at relieving symptoms and includes physical and occupational therapy as well as energy conservation measures.
