Flooding highlights lack of progress in Martin

by SHELDON COMPTON STAFF WRITER

MARTIN — The city in Floyd County that often takes the brunt of the blow during times of flooding is now talking about the future with more immediacy than ever before.

Martin residents have been watching the slow wheels of progress turn for the past nine years on a flood relocation project that would see much of the downtown area taken out of the floodplain and onto a hilltop area above the city's main street.

During those nine years, there have been talk of disruptions from workers and the amount of time the project, detailed in various stages, has taken.

But whatever patience city residents and officials might have been hanging onto has now nearly depleted following the weekend storm that capped off a week-long series of rains and left the MARTIN – U.S. Rep. Hal Rogers, Gov. Steve Beshear and House Speaker Greg Stumbo touched down by helicopter in Martin Tuesday afternoon and were met with officials from all areas of Floyd County as they assessed damages following the weekend flooding.

Within minutes of landing at the leveled off site along a hilltop above Martin's Main Street that will serve as the location for the city's flood relocation, the three men were holding photographs taken of flooded areas.

"Mother Nature has been tough on us." Beshear said, sharing photographs with Rogers. "Ice and snow in January and now flooding and tornadoes."

Rogers told the crowd of officials who met them in School out until at least Thursday

by JARRID DEATON FEATURES WRITER

The flood waters that washed across Floyd County over the weekend have caused school in the county to be canceled until at least Thursday, according to Supt. Henry Webb.

"According to the best and most recent information I have, we can return to a regular schedule at all sites across the county on May 14," Webb said. "This quick return is only because of the work of many outstanding individuals including school employees, workers for local and state government and civil minded community volunteers. Our prayers are with the victims of this disaster and we urge each Floyd County resident of o something positive to help those in need."

Three of the schools in the county were flooded, with Opportunities Unlimited in Martin getting hit the hardest by the high water.
McDowell Elementary and John M. Stumbo Elementary were also flooded. Webb visited the sites on Monday as crews worked to repair the damage to the schools.

Card of Thanks

The Stone and Salyer families extend a heartfelt thankyou to all who visited, sent flowers and food, gave hugs and donations to better causes, upon the passing of our loved one, Harold L. Stone. Your participation or time spent with the family touched our hearts during this time of sorrow.
Again, thank-you to: the Allen Christ United Methodist Church; the Allen Community; the Disabled American Veterans, Auxier Chapter No. 18; the Hall Funeral Home;
Davidson Memorial Gardens; and friends and neighbors.

Card of Thanks

The family of Ernest Eugene DeCoursey would like to express our appreciation to all who sent flowers, or perhaps said a kind word, and for the prayers that were spoken on our behalf. We especially want to thank Clergyman Jack Howard for his comforting words: the Wayland Methodist Church for all the love and support that was shown to our family; the Sheriff's Department for their assistance in traffic control; and the Hall Funeral Home for their kind and professional care. All the acts of kindness with never be forgotten. Thank you, and God bless.

New direction for Adult Education Program The Floyd County — Big Sandy — Community & Technical College (BSCTC) Adult Education Program has provided many individuals with GED preparation. Now, a new emphasis for the program is providing individuals with GED preparation is college. "GED preparation is college." GED preparation is college. "GED preparation for the most jobs now required more than a high school diploma or GED," said Kay Ross, Program Director. College Prep will provide assessment of current skills in Reading. Writing, and Mathematics, and provide "brush — up" classes in these academic areas for individuals needing more review time before taking the college placement exam. Thanks to a grant, these workshops are free of charge.

The College Prep Program is offered on the Prestonsburg Campus of BSCTC.

Floyd County Emergency Food and Shelter Board has been awarded federal funds through the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (ARRA) for the Emergency Food and Shelter National Board

Floyd County Emergency Food and Shelter Board has been chosen to receive $10,965.00 to supplement emergency food and shelter programs in the county. These funds have been made available through the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (ARRA).

The selection was made by a National Board that is chaired by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security's Federal Emergency Management Agency and consists of representatives from American Red Cross; Catholic Charities, USA; National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.; The Salvation Army; United Jewish Communities, and United Way of America. The Local Board was charged to distribute funds appropriated by Congress to help expand the capacity of food shelter programs in high-need areas around the country.

A Local Board made up of the County Judge/Executive or his designee, local representatives of national social service agencies, and interested citizens, will determine how the funds awarded to Floyd County Emergency Food and Shelter Board are to be distributed among the emergency food and shelter programs run by local service agencies in the area. The Local Board is responsible for recommending agencies to receive these funds made available through ARRA.

Under the terms of the grant from the National Board, local agencies chosen to receive funds must: 1) be private voluntary non-profits or units of government. 2) be eligible to receive federal funds, 3) have an accounting system, 4) practice nondiscrimination, 5) have demonstrated the capability to deliver emergency food and/or shelter programs, and 6) if they are a private voluntary organization, they must have a voluntary board. Qualifying agencies are urged to apply.

Floyd County Emergency Food and Shelter Board has distributed Emergency Food and Shelter previously with Floyd County/Prestonsburg Ministerial Assoc., St. James Fishes & Loaves, Middle Creek Com. Dev. Club, Mud Creek Com. Health Corp., Town Branch Church Feed My Sheep, Christian Service Ministry, Bread of Life, Jacobs Ladder, Auxier Food Pantry, Martin Church of Christ Food Pantry, Heaven's Harvest Food Pantry, Garrett Church of God, and St. Vincent Mission. These agencies were responsible for providing meals and nights of lodging.

Public or private voluntary agencies interested in applying for Emergency Food and Shelter Program funds must contact Local Board Chair, Renee Thornsberry for an application. 285-9335, or email at reneedthornsberry@homail.com. Application packets may be picked up at Martin City Hall, 9 a.m., 3 p.m. up to May 20th, The deadline for applications to be received is May 20th, at 10 a.m., at the LRO meeting.

Flood reveals true character ...

This past weekend's flooding is among the most widespread and destructive seen in quite some time, and that's saying a lot for a county that has seen quite few floods over the past decade.

In the aftermath of such terrible and costly destruction, it is perfectly natural to bemoan our fate, and it can be difficult to look through a house filled with putrid mud and see the bright spots.

But they are there.

Sometimes it takes a disaster for us to see the frue face of a community, and what we've seen the past few days gives us much hope.

We've seen neighbors helping neighbors, businesses choosing service over profits, churches exhibiting the meaning of love, public servants going beyond heir pay grades and job duties to offer whatever help they could.

Floyd County truly is a community, in every sense of the word. Yes, we may have our internal squabbles from time to time, but when the chips are down and the skies are at their darkest, our character truly shines.

and a pressing need

On the other hand, this weekend's flood also underscored the need for new life to be injected into the Martin Redevelopment Project.

Under the original timetable, the project should be finished by next year. But even a cursory glance shows that goal nowhere near being fulfilled.

We understand that projects of this magnitude often take longer than expected. And we understand that budget troubles and national politics have gotten in the way of progress over the past nine years.

But the project has seemingly been stuck, limping foward the conclusion of the first stage and showing fittle evidence of further progress since.

Meanwhile, Martin residents are once again shovelng mud out of their homes and businesse

If any good comes out of this weekend's flooding, we hope that it will be a jump-start for a project that is of vital importance to Floyd County.

Law should be changed

I'm writing this ad to complain about a law (16 KAR 2:12 Sect. 1), qualified teacher, hoping the legislature will see a need for change.

This law applies toward actions taken on a teacher's certificate. It should only apply toward revoked and suspended certificates If a certificate is revoked or suspended for six months, then a teacher should not be certified to teach during this period. A teacher doesn't have a certificate to teach with, anyway. This law should not apply toward an admonished certificate, because you still have a certificate, are still certified and qualified.

Admonishment is being used to say you are not certified or qualified to teach.

The Education Professional Standards Board is allowing some school districts to feed off a file at the EPSB office to say a teacher is unsuitable for appointment and to not hire them. The admonished file at the EPSB office gives a school district documentation to show you're unfit.

This statute gives the definition of a qualified teacher as:

1. If a school district has documented evidence to show you're unsuitable for appointment, then they don't have to hire you.

2. It can also be used to stain your reputation in other districts.

3. Courts are allowed to let school districts use it to say you're not qualitated or certified, even though you are certified.

I was admonished for an alleged

I was admonished for an alleged CATS test violation. But this statute, qualified teacher, says if a superintendent of an employing school district has documentation on file to show you are unsuitable for appointment, then they can use it against you to say you are not certified/qualified to teach. I feel I've been amerced for a warning on the CATS test.

There were eight other teachers who admonished (warned) but did you was fired. I feel discriminated against.

School districts are allowed to hire emergency teachers who are not certified over a certified teacher because of an admonished document on file at the Education Professional Standards Board. School districts are not allowed to hire an admonished teacher over an emergency teacher.

The statute 161.10Q regarding emergency teacher hires says that a school district has to find it impossible to find a certified teacher before the statute of the statu

Mayor Thomasine Robinson, adding that homes that have again and again over the years weathered flooding could not withstand much more. "These people have been through too many floods and this project isn't even on its feet yet, let along being finished by 2010."

The city has endured massive flooding since the first flood of record occurred in January 1957. In 2003, flash flooding soaked the city and gave its residents the worst flood since 1984. During the 1977 flood, water levels in the downtown area of Martin exceeded nine feet.

"There are elderly people in this town who have lost everything five and six times," Robinson said. "There's a woman right now sleeping in her car because her house is destroyed. There are people sleeping on the floors of their homes with damp quilts."

Robinson said there is a fix to the problem, at least to some extent.

The plan to relocate the city was kick-started during a 1998 Martin City Council meeting when a task force was formed to start work on plans for redevelopment.

came, and we lost a lot of stuff," said Hattie Elliott. "This time around hasn't been nearly as bad."

Though the flooding is comparatively less severe, there were still residents of some 30 homes along the Left Fork of Little Paint who saw waters take out portions of a culvert the county had been fixing as recently as this week. The residents were unable to leave due to the rising water until locals came up with some creative solutions.

"The county had temporarily put in this three-foot wide culvert until they could fix a bridge and the water just washed all that out," said Little Paint resident Rick Setser. "So we took four-wheeler ramps and made a little bridge for people to get across."

The makeshift bridge was necessary, said. Setser, as several of the residents needed to get to work Monday morning.

"The principal at Wesley Christian Academy had to get to work and so my son helped her across to get out," Setser said. "I guess you could say he gave her a helping hand." County workers had fixed the culvert by Monday after-noon, Setser said.

Coordinator Jim Caldwell said there have been no reports of water inside homes in the coun-ty, adding that water had passed over some area roads in the northern part of the county. "It got over some roads," Caldwell said. "As far as we have information for right now there are no homes that have been flooded. What we got last night might have put the lid on it. It looks like we might have got by." got by."

County officials spent most of Monday traveling the area and assessing the water levels. Following this inspection. Floyd Judge-Executive R.D. "Doc" Marshall said the most significant concern were a variety of slips that had occurred due to the week-long rains.

Despite an optimistic stance from officials, there may still be the potential for further and worse flooding, according to the National Weather Service in Jackson.

A weather outlook update as of Tuesday afternoon forecasted heavy rainfall for today continuing throughout tonight. Runoff from these rains will likely result in several downstream points to rise near or above flood levels and make for high water concerns for Eastern Kentucky later in the week.

Flood affects mail service

by JARRID DEATON FEATURES WRITER

Rain, sleet, snow and hail are some of the obstacles that postal workers have pledged to overcome, but the recent excess of rain has caused some local post offices in Floyd County to close the doors for several days.

"We have delivery issues in several areas," said Bill Thompson. U.S. Postal Service manager of post office operations. "But the mail is still being delivered."

Thompson also said that some mail deliveries were missed due to impassable streets or because roads and mailboxes were washed out.

In all, 14 post offices in Eastern Kentucky suffered water damage during the flood.

Nearly 300 graduate at BSCTC spring commencement

PRESTONSBURG — The spring commencement for Big Sandy Community and Technical College was Held at the Mountain Arts Center in Prestonsburg on May 9.

Two ceremonies were held to accommodate the large group of 298 graduates who were awarded a total of 583 credentials. A total of 62 associate of arts degrees were awarded, 36 associate of science degrees were awarded, 36 associate of science degrees were awarded.

ciate of arts degrees were awarded, 36 associate of science degrees were awarded, 117 associate of science degrees were awarded, as well as 86 diplomas and 282 certificates.

Allied health graduates, including nursing and dentalhygiene programs, graduated at 10 a.m. Their ceremony was a combination pinning and graduation event. Seventy-one allied health students graduated with AAS degrees or diplomas. Each student was awarded the credentials he or 8he had earned and a pin signifying their official status as a health care professional program to outstanding dental hygiene graduates. Nightingale Awards were presented by Dr. Eric Dixons coordinator of the dental hygiene graduates. Nightingale Awards were presented by Dr. Patsy Jackson to outstanding Nursing graduates. Dr. Rakesh Sachdeva presented Nursing Excellence Awards to deserving nursing students. The 10 a.m. commencement address was delivered by Dr. Shirley Thomas, Professor of Biology at Bx. Thomas highlighted the accomplishments of the graduates, such as excellence in general education and program studies. She reminded them, by the words of Beverly Sills: "There are no shortcuts to any-place worth going." Her closing remarks encouraged them to embrace life outside their career by Jaughing, loving, and enjoying each day.

County handled Allen Central 15-0. Hancock County blanked the Lady Rebels 11-0.

Despite the short stay, Allen Central can build from its state tournament experience.

"It was a honor to represent the 15th Region," said Allen Central Coach Don Burke. "It was an eye cpener to the way the state as a whole plays softball. Big venue and big games. We got to meet and cheer for the other teams from the Mountains. — Jenkins and Somerset. I'm not really happy with our performance but it was our first year there and if we can be learn maybe we can be blessed to go back again."

Both of the teams Allen Central faced advanced deep in the tournament.

"Both teams we played were in the games the final afternoon," Burke confided. "Another good thing about this past weekend is you can see really well what your strengths and weaknesses are at that level of competition. We look forward to the district tourney coming up next week."

High school softball teams have entered the final week of the regular-season.

At the same time, racetracks are putting pressure on trainers to remain at their home track, resulting in fewer horses shipping between jurisdictions. As a result, Kentucky is experiencing a decline in both the quality of its racing and the number of horses available to fill race fields. FRANKFORT — The Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commission Monday proposed some modifications to Telk Hunt Unit 6 (EHU) at a special called meeting in Frankfort.

The Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commission recommends all hunting, fishing and boating regulations for approval by the General Assembly and approves all expenditures by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. All recommendations must be approved by legislators before they become law.

The Commission recommended splitting Elk Hunt Unit 6 is home to the 16,704-acre Graham Wildlife Management Area (WMA), the 30,038-acre Corrigan

WMA. Subdividing Elk Hunt Unit 6, which is located in all or parts of Clay, Leslie, Harlan, Bell, Knox, Whitey and, McCreary counties, will help more evenly distribute hunting pressure during the quota elk hunts. The subdivi-sion would take effect this year.

Commission members also recommended changes to the 2010 late season quota elk hunt. The hunts began last year to help control elk-related property damage. Hunters drawn for this hunt will come from the pool of regular hunt applicants who are also residents of the 16-county elk restoration zone. Hunters may also harvest a few spike bulls. The number of hunters to be drawn for this late season hunt has not yet been determined.

drawn for this late season hunt has not yet been determined. The Commission also stan-dardized the definition of a youth for elk hunting as "a person who has not reached their sixteenth birthday by the day of the hunt." This regula-tion would not take effect until 2010. It would not affect youths drawn for the 2009 hunt.

2010. It would not attect youths drawn for the 2009 hunt.

The next Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commission meeting will be held at 8 a.m., Friday. June 12, 2009 at No. 1 Sportsman's Lane off U.S. 60 in Frankfort. Persons interested in addressing the Commission must notify Kentucky Fish and Wildlife's Commissioner's office in writing at least 30 days in advance to the meeting and the state of the property of the meeting and plan to attend the meeting should contact Kentucky Fish and Wildlife at least 10 days in advance and the agency will provide a translator. To request to address the commission, write to KDFWR. Commissioner Jon Gassett, No. 1 Sportsman's Lane, Frankfort, Kentucky, 40601.

JobSight helps Hope in the Mountains bring recovering women back to work

The of the major obstacles for both employees and employers in Eastern Kentucky is the region's high rate of drug and alcohol addiction.

That is one of the reasons why partnering with a successful regional drug and alcohol treatment facility to teach its residents job-readiness skills seemed like a good fit to Joyce Wilcox, business services coordinator for Big Sandy Area Community Action Program's (BSACAP) JobSight Business Services.

employability and some the workforce.

Penee McCoy, director of Hope in The Mountains, agreed that both agencies want to make life in Eastern Kentucky that both agencies want to mike life in Eastern Kentucky better.

"We're all working toward a common goal," she said.

One thing BSACAP has done to help Hope in the Mountains is set up one-day workshops to teach residents who are exiting the program sone of the skills they will need when entering the work-force. The workshop teaches interviewing skills, resume writing and job search skills.

McCoy said these skills are something that many of the women who end up in the Hope in the Mountains program are desperately lacking.

"We're really starting at the bottom," she said, with women who lack a lot of formal education and don't know how to get a job or how to dress for or talk during a job interview, among other things.

Many also come from backgrounds that include domestic-violence, so they have self-esteem issues that make their job search even more difficult. Participating in the workshop and learning that they do have skills to put on a resume improves their self-esteem quite a bit, McCoy and Wilcox said. By the end of it they have created a professional looking resume highlighting skills they were not aware of prior to the workshop.

"They don't realize that they have skills that employers want," Wilcox said.

want," Wilcox said.

A number of them have used the resumes they created and the skills they learned in the workshop to find a job after the program, McCoy and Wilcox program, McCoy and Wilcox said.

Helping the women find a job after leaving the program is essential to keep them from sliding back into drug and alcohol addiction, McCoy said. To escape addiction the women must change their entire environments. If they cannot work and find housing and childcare they tend to slip back into the same habits and lifestyle.

"Our goal is to get them to work and get them in a new environment," she said.

McCoy said the problem in Eastern Kentucky is an increasingly serious one. She said she used to work as a nurse, and one of the things that got her interested in being involved with the founding of the same than the same property of the same pr adoff addites, site sand, and it is a difficult cycle to break. It is especially hard to break the cycle because residential treatment programs for women are rare, McCoy said. The center gets referrals from all over the state and takes in women from all income levels. Some come voluntarily and some are brought to the center from jails in shackles.

"This disease doesn't have any boundaries," she said.

As part of the partnership. BSACAP has also helped provide work experience employees, trial employees who are paid for six weeks by Workforce Investment Act (WIA) funds that BSACAP has access to, while Hope in the Mountains was getting started. Some of those Work Experience employees have since been hired as permanent employees.

The women at Hope in the Mountains are women who are "trying to take control of their lives," Wilcox said. "I want to help them any way I can."

Maybe you've reached the age when your doctor peers at you over the top of his or her glasses and says, "Time to lay off the caffeine!" Or perhaps you've already come to that conclusion on your own, for various reasons.

In fact, cutting back on caffeine isn't necessarily an age-related issue. I was only in my 20s when I began to have rather mysterious symptoms which turned out to be my body's way of letting me know that I was overloading on caffeine. Of course, those were my "newsroom days," when I ran almost entirely on high-sugar, high-caffeine soft drinks, so it's probably not surprising that my body staged its own minirevolution to get my attention.

Still if you're trying to watch your chere's somake for whatever reason, here's somake for whatever reason, chere's somake for whatever reason, chere's somake for whatever reason. Chances are that you know what I mean by "dietary supplement may be sabotaging your efforts.

Chances are that you know what I mean by "dietary supplement," because an estimated 50 percent of adults in the United States report that they take dietary supplements on a regular basis. That's why a group of scientists with the Agricultural Research Service (ARS) undertook to analyze a number of caffeine-containing products as a way to explore caffeine levels in segments of the U.S. dietary supplement market.

You might be wondering how caffeine could turn up in your supplement market.

So your next question naturally will be, how would caffeine get in there if they didn't add it? This is where Mother Nature slips one past us. You see, caffeine is a natural alkaloid that's present not only in the usual suspects—coffee and tea—but also in more than 60 other plants and in plant derivatives, which are known as "botanicals."

Ever hear of guarana? Or perhaps yerba mate? If you take a close look at the labels of products that claim to help totanicals that slip in the caffeine include kola nut and green tea extract. All of these are common dietary supplement ingredients, and their names will show up on the product label's list of ingredients.

Now for the results, which may give you a bit of a shock. First, you need to know that according to ARS's National Nutrient Database, an 8-ounce cup of coffee (240 milliliters) contains about 55 milligrams of caffeine.

Of the 53 dietary supplements analyzed by the ARS scientists, 27 of those products provided—in a daily serving as defined by the product label—the caffeine equivalent of one to two cups of coffee. PRESTONSBURG — Marty Hicks loves to work in her yard, and her passion for planting flowers and creating landscapes recently caught the attention of the Prestonsburg Women's Club, which named Hicks' residence as the Yard of the Month for May.

"I love yard work and I love being outside." Hicks said. "I increase it all a little bit each year. I even gathered all the rocks that I use on my own. Ity to plant flowers that will come back every year."

For Hicks, a retired social services worker, landscaping and tending to her flowers serves as an important hobby to keep her active and creative, using items from her past and things handed down from her father as centerpieces of the intricately constructed gardens that surround the yard. Some of the items include Hicks' bicycle from her youth, colored glass worn down by the weather, a stone washbasin provided by her

Tips for preventing falls among older adults

LEXINGTON — Ealls in the home are a sig-nificant yet underappreciated health concern for older Kentuckians. Every year, about one in three adults over age 65 experiences an injury from a fall nationwide. And falls cause thousands of life-threatening injuries each year among Kentucky's aging population. The Kentucky Injury Prevention and Research Center (KIPRC) has developed the Safe Aging Coalition to form a more comprehensive and col-laborative approach to keep older adults healthy and independent by identifying and reducing risk factors for falling.

The coalition was developed in collaboration with the University of Kentucky College of Public Health, the Kentucky Department for Public Health, the Kentucky Department for Community Based Services, the Kentucky Department for Aging and Independent Living, American Association for Retired Persons, Cardinal Hill Rehabilitation Hospital, Hospice of the Bluegrass and other organizations around the state.

The coalition urges citizens of the Commonwealth to be mindful of potential injuries and take steps to prevent them.

"Injury prevention is extremely important at all stages of life," said Dr. William Hacker, Kentucky public health commissioner. For many older Kentuckians, certain types of injuries can be life-threatening. Often, these injuries could have been prevented by taking simple, precautionary measures to avoid falls."

Not everybody has the same risk of injury, says Deborah Anderson, commissioner of the Department for Aging and Independent Living.

"We know elderly people who have osteo-

There were smiles, cheers and lots of photographs taken as the newest alumni took the ceremonial walk across the stage, signifying the completion of their college degrees. They were greeted by MSU President Wayne D. Andrews who offered a congratulatory handshake to each of those completing graduate and undergraduate degrees.

A candidate for a Bachelor of Business Administration degree in the College of Business, Butt also was the captain of the women's tennis team.
