Smoke ban moves closer to passage

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — From early draft to first reading, the city of Prestonsburg is one step closer to a new law that would ban smoking in public buildings.

The Prestonsburg City Council gave the first reading during its regular meeting Monday evening before both supporters and those opposing such an ordinance.

At issue Monday was the call for an exemption for bingo parlors in city limits, namely Court Street Bingo in downtown. Since the council first approved the drafting of an ordinance to ban smoking in public buildings, this has been the hot button issue.

"If you pass this, not only does the bingo hall lose, but the city of Prestonsburg loses," said Mary Stephens, a resident who runs two games at Court Street Bingo. "In the last five years, we've raised $550,000

Members of the Floyd County Breathe Easy Coalition were on hand for a first reading of an ordinance that would see smoking banned in public places within city limits. The group's main opposition are those seeking an exemption for bingo halls.

After Prestonsburg's Fourth of July fireworks were postponed due to rain and fog on Independence Day, the city finally lit up the skies with its annual pyrotechnic display on Friday night. The half-hour show featured $32,000 worth of fireworks and drew crowds all along the city's main thoroughfares.

Ivel store robbed again

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

IVEL — The Ivel Double Kwik has again been the target of a robbery, one of several such incidents that have occurred across the region since the first of the year.

According to Kentucky State

Police, a white man wearing black shorts, a black shirt and a paintball mask entered the store with a small handgun and demanded cash from the clerk.

The store employees later contacted the state police and told investigators that the man took a total of $201.15 in cash before leaving the scene in a red Ford Ranger pickup truck. The truck left traveling south on U.S. 23, police said.

According to the clerks, another person was driving the truck, but police offered no description of this individual as of Tuesday.

The case remains under investigation by the Kentucky State Police.

Brother gets five years for shooting death

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — Terry Tuttle, the McDowell man charged last year for murder in connection to the shooting death of his brother, David Tuttle, will now serve five years in prison.

Tuttle pleaded guilty to one count of reckless homicide, an amended charge. He was originally charged with murder, but had claimed a gun he used to kill his brother during an argument at their mother's apartment at Minnie accidentally went off.

David Tuttle later died from a gunshot wound to the head.

Tuttle's claim that the gun fired accidentally was something prosecutors said could have been the case once they examined ballistic reports in the case. This figured in the

Murder trial reset for November

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — The jury trial originally scheduled on Monday for a Harold man charged with murder for the 2008 death of 63-year-old Loretta Elswick in an automobile accident has been rescheduled for November.

Jonathan Pente, 37, was arrested after allegedly fleeing the scene of the accident on foot and charged with murder and three counts of first-degree assault.

According to the police report, which was released on Oct. 4, 2008, Pente was traveling north in the southbound lane of U.S. 23 at Harold, when the truck he was driving struck a van in which Elswick was a passenger. Three

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — A stockpile of computers stored outside the old Prestonsburg grade school were recently declared as surplus and will soon be discarded, according to officials with the Floyd County Board of Education.

The computers were set outside several days ago and have been subjected to weather, rendering them unusable. However, according to Matt Wireman, the school board's director of finance, treasurer and interim chief information officer, the computers were never a feasible option for use in any case.

"These were nonfunctioning or couldn't handle running the software we had," said Wireman. "We had a company coming to pick them up, but they couldn't, so we are working with another to take care of it."

Computers that fall under surplus criteria are advertised in the newspaper for anyone who would like to bid on them, said Wireman. In the case of the most recent computers at the old grade school, no bids were received.

Though there is no way to calculate what value the dozens of computers might have had for the school system had bids been received, Wireman did say that the cost of disposing of them would have been too significant to have been beneficial

This stockpile of computers outside the old Prestonsburg grade school is due to be picked up and recycled in the near future. School board officials say the computers, which have sat outside the school for the past several days, have been declared surplus and that no bids were received from the public or private sectors for them.

Police find 116 pot plants at Pike home

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

BRUSHY — State police followed an anonymous tip to a large marijuana find late last week in Pike County.

State police officers discovered more than 100 marijuana plants in the Brushy area this past Thursday. Officers said the plants, which numbered at 116 in total, were found in and around a residence in the area.

There was no word offered on who the lived at the residence or if they might be suspects in the investigation, and police had not named a suspect in connection to the plants as of Tuesday.

Pikeville Post 9 Troopers Jimmy Nolte, Hoyt Smith and Jacob Sinner located the plants, which were all confiscated after the find.

Anyone with information they feel could help lead to an arrest in the case should contact the Kentucky State Police at (606) 433-7711.

Appalachian writers to gather at annual workshop

Silas House

HINDMAN — With its upcoming 32nd annual Appalachian Writers Workshop (July 26-31), Hindman Settlement School continues an extraordinary literary tradition that began more than a century ago. The Knott County institution has attracted writers since its earliest days. In 1905, Ann Cobb arrived to teach and published a number of sketches and dialect poems. Lucy Furman, an accomplished writer before coming to Hindman, published five novels about her years as housemother to the small Settlement boys and her association with the school and the surrounding area. The late James Still, poet, novelist and short story writer, was associated with Hindman for nearly 70 years and is buried on the Settlement's campus. Hindman alumnus Albert Stewart, a poet and founding editor of Appalachian Heritage magazine, organized the Settlement's first Appalachian Writers Workshop. This year, the workshop includes tracks on writing nonfiction, poetry, short stories, children's stories, memoirs and novels. The workshops are taught by a talented group of published writers who mentor workshop participants, both in groups and individually. Each evening workshop staff will read from their works. All evening programs start at 7:30 pm and are free and open to the public. All readings will be in the May Stone Building at the Settlement School. The evening schedule includes: ■ Sunday, July 26 — Anne Shelby,

"The Adventures of Molly Whuppie and Other Appalachian Folktales" ■ Monday, July 27 — Kevin Stewart, Jeff Daniel Marion and George Ella Lyon ■ Tuesday, July 28 — Silas House, Laura Benedict and Karen McElmurray ■ Wednesday, July 29 — Ron Rash, "Jim Wayne Miller/James Still Lecture" ■ Thursday, July 30 — Pinkney Benedict, Ann Pancake and Maurice Manning Following the Jim Wayne Miller/James Still Lecture there will be a book signing, reception and music. For more information, visit www.HindmanSettlement.org.

$5.6 million Johnson County bridge opens Friday with ceremony

RIVER — The new bridge across the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River from the community of River to Offutt in Johnson County will be officially open and dedicated on Friday, July 17, at 11 a.m. during a ceremony open to the public. State and local officials will join the family of the late Irvin Clay to name the bridge in his memory and cut the ribbon to mark the opening of the $5.6 million span. The event will take place on the lot next to the River end of the bridge. The bridge will be closed to traffic during the ceremony, so people from the Offutt side of the river should plan to arrive at the site before 11 a.m.

Irvin Clay

Paintsville F&AM Masonic Lodge. Clay had two daughters, Herma Clay Preston and the late Vonda Clay McKenzie. Herma and her son, Mike Preston, will represent the family on Friday along with Vonda's daughters, Phyllis Jean Sneed and Frances Daniel, both of Columbus, Ohio. "We appreciate Sen. Ray Jones and Rep. Hubert Collins," Mike Preston said, "for passing the resolution in the Kentucky General Assembly to name the bridge after my grandfather. Not only does the bridge pass over what used to be his home place, Irvin Clay was a good neighbor and friend, a generous and caring person who loved his community."

Collins, chairman of the House Transportation Committee in the Kentucky General Assembly, will be among the speakers. He will be joined by Mike Preston, grandson of Irvin Clay; and John P. Sammons, who served as Highway District 12's project inspector.

A caravan of fire engines, rescue vehicles, law enforcement cars, and anyone from the general public who wants to join will make the first official crossing after the ribbon-cutting. "We know that the bridge is being used already," said Sara George, Highway District 12 Information Officer. "Technically, however, it is not open to the public. So we are going to have a parade of vehicles to make the first official crossing of the bridge." Highway District 12 Chief Engineer Kevin Danner said that the new bridge is a transportation improvement that will affect the lives of everyone in Offutt, River, and the surrounding area. "There has never been a bridge along this stretch of the Levisa Fork that accommodates motorized vehicles. People have used a walk bridge to get to the post office and back to the Offutt side of the river. "Anytime communities and neighborhoods are connected with a good road or bridge, amazing things start to happen. Good things that benefit everyone. We are just happy that we can join the celebration of this major community improvement project," he said. The bridge was built by Bush & Burchett of Allied Floyd County. Excavation and grade work was done by Bizzack, guardrail by Big Sandy Guardrail, and traffic control was provided by KYVW. Members of the River Homemakers and the River Volunteer Fire Department are providing refreshments afterward. Pepsi-Cola of Staffordsville has donated soft drinks and bottled water.

In case of rain, the event will be held inside at the River Volunteer Fire Department, the site of the Dec. 6, 2005 groundbreaking. Everyone in the Offutt and River communities and surrounding areas is invited to attend.

Our View

The middle path

On Friday, we published a story representing two divergent viewpoints on the future of Eastern Kentucky, particularly in relation to coal mining.

On one side was Ron Eller, a University of Kentucky history professor who ruffled a few feathers earlier this year when he called for an end to surface mining during a speech before the East Kentucky Leadership Conference. Appalachia would be better off, he argues, if it focused on diversifying its economy through tourism and other industries.

On the other side was former Gov. Paul Patton, who made no bones about a future without coal mining. Patton painted a bleak picture of an Eastern Kentucky without mining, comparing it to a ghost town. Without coal, he said, there is no future for the region.

So who was right? That, of course, is a matter of opinion, but we have ours.

Both men are right, to a degree. And similarly, both men are also wrong.

Eller is correct in saying that Eastern Kentucky needs to diversify its economy. That is not necessarily an argument against coal mining, although we are certain he intends it to be. It's just good economic practice.

Eastern Kentuckians know well the dangers of depending too heavily on a single industry. They've seen it firsthand in the rise and fall of the coal markets, as the fortunes of families have risen and fallen with each boom and bust. Diversification would only help the region weather the ebb and flow of circumstances beyond our control.

But we are highly skeptical of Eller's view that tourism could play a large role in weaning Appalachia from coal. After decades of spending millions of dollars on attractions to draw tourists to the region, with only modest success, it should be quite obvious that tourism will only play a secondary role in developing Eastern Kentucky beyond a single-industry society.

The big payday promised by tourism is quite literally a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. You can chase it all you want, but you will only end up running around in circles.

And that is why Patton is correct in saying that there is no economy in Eastern Kentucky without coal — at least for the foreseeable future. Quite simply, no other industry in Eastern Kentucky, current or proposed, can produce as many jobs or as much wealth for local residents as coal.

But the coal industry also needs to recognize that the world is changing and coal must adapt with it. Concerns about global warming and other environmental issues are pushing the world slowly but inexorably away from fossil fuels and toward renewable sources of energy. In the grand scheme, it is irrelevant whether such efforts as the cap-and-trade bill currently before the Senate succeed or not. The bigger picture is that the world has already expressed a desire to begin moving away from coal. That is not a statement for or against the industry; it's a simple, uncomfortable fact, and fighting against it makes it no less true.

Perhaps the only reason coal continues to enjoy prominence among the nation's energy infrastructure is that alternative, renewable sources of energy — wind, solar, hydrogen — are thus far too expensive and too inefficient to adapt to widespread use. Once technology catches up, however, Eastern Kentucky had best be prepared.

Coal could also lengthen its lifespan by embracing change. Research and technology work both ways, and the industry would be better served by working to improve clean coal technology and develop more environmentally friendly ways to extract the mineral from the earth. And the coal companies could protect their futures by diversifying into alternative energy, making the construction of wind farms or solar arrays part of reclamation efforts.

There is no question: For now and for at least the next generation, our region needs coal. At the same time, state and local leaders need to be proactive in preparing for a day when coal is no longer king. Standing steadfastly against the tide of history will only result in Eastern Kentucky being left behind.

Guest Column

A legislative perspective

by HOUSE SPEAKER GREG STUMBO

The author Jesse Stuart once said that "if these United States could be called a body, Kentucky can be called its heart."

That has always been true, for Kentucky is as much an ideal as a place. It represented the future when it was a frontier, and now it points to the future once again as it becomes a growing focal point for the next generation of domestic energy production.

If Kentucky is truly the nation's heart, then it could be said that our coal has been its lifeblood. For more than two centuries now it has kept our homes, schools, and businesses comfortable and well-lit. Along the way it powered both an industrial and now a technological revolution. Take away coal, and you might as well take away every other appliance, every other computer, and every other skyscraper along our city skylines, because it generates half of our country's electricity.

A vocal minority, often led by those who have never called the coal fields home, has sought to keep this critical resource underfoot, however, always with the magical assumption that another ready and reliable replacement would take its place.

Thomas Jefferson said that "a little rebellion now and then is a good thing," and as usual, he was right, but not in the way that those who oppose coal might think. The "Appalachian Revolution" was started 30 years ago by those who returned home after graduating from colleges. They became businessmen and community leaders, and many attained high public office.

During this time, the area produced a two-term Governor, a Lieutenant Governor, a Speaker of the House who had been Majority Floor Leader; other legislative leaders that include the current House Majority Floor Leader and House Majority Whip; and a host of local, forward-thinking officials — like Pike County Judge/Executive Wayne Rutherford and Hazard Mayor Bill Gorman.

They came of age when the modern era of coal mining began in 1977 with the enactment of the federal Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act, which drove away renegade coal operators and established more responsible ways to mine the land and then reclaim it.

That federal law and the "Broadform deed" amendment added to our constitution in the 1980s to give landowners more say in how coal is mined on their property — drove the modern era of coal mining in Kentucky, and they have been greatly helped by the General Assembly's decision in 1972 to establish the coal-severance tax. The hundreds of millions of dollars this has generated for coal-producing counties over the last three-plus decades has spurred a tremendous amount of economic development and greatly enhanced both the safety and quality of life in the eastern and western coalfields.

It would not be an understatement to say that coal built the airports in Pike and Martin counties and in Hazard. It paved the way for developments like Stonecrest and the Mountain Arts Center here in Floyd County and the East Kentucky Exposition Center in Pike County, and it has significantly improved our infrastructure.

It would be difficult to imagine the challenges our region would face without the benefit of coal. The industry's high-paying jobs have made a profound difference, especially when measuring their percentage of employment in many counties.

Coal stands ready to be the same fuel for the 21st Century that it was for the 19th and 20th. To help us make that possible, however, we need to bring coal mining and land reclamation even closer together. With approval from the federal government, Kentucky can better ensure that post-mined land use truly lives up to the promise of the federal reclamation act, which envisioned far more than acres of pasture.

If coal-mining companies and our communities worked more closely together, we could see even greater opportunities for long-term success. Land could be reclaimed for new roads, development, subdivisions, or hardwood forests. There have been tantalizing examples of success, but they need to be maximized so that every mined acre is reclaimed to its fullest potential.

Our "Appalachian Revolution" continues because our area still lags behind in the critical areas of education and healthcare. But the dedicated spirit of our people and their elected officials and business leaders will ensure that the victory will be won, a victory that will provide a bright future for the mountains and for the children who call them home.

House week in review

by REP. HUBERT COLLINS

We know that the typical middle class family in this country needs two incomes to make ends meet and the current recession is making hard times even harder. What I, and maybe you, didn't realize is that the burden on the middle class is so heavy nationally that middle class Americans now have less access to a college education than the lowest economic classes, which usually have more access to financial aid than those with higher incomes.

That is the message in a May 2009 Kentucky Long-Term Policy Research Center study I mentioned to you last week that covers trends in college attendance in Kentucky and the U.S. from 1993-97 and 2003-2007. And it is a frustrating message because Kentucky set a very serious goal 12 years ago doubling its number of college graduates in the state to around 791,000 bachelor's degree holders by 2020, meaning our state needs another 211,000 degree holders within the next 11 years. If middle class access to higher education in Kentucky is as limited as it appears to be nationally we might not meet that goal.

Lucky for us, based on the study, Kentucky seems to be faring better than we might imagine. The study reveals that since the mid 1990s, our state has seen an increase in the probability rate for college attendance among 18 to 24 year olds compared to the national rate across all income levels, including the middle income level. From 2003-07, the probability of 18-24 year olds attending college in Kentucky (the typically college age range) indicated that Kentucky had gained on the national average. Kentucky's probability rate was 39 percent over that four-year period compared to a U.S. rate of 44 percent, but don't let the higher U.S. rate fool you. The study states that the difference in the rates is not statistically significant — "indicating Kentucky's gain on the nation relative to its standing 10 years earlier."

We can also assume from the study that the probability of the 18 to 24 year old group attending college using the highest income students as the only determinant was greater from 2003-07 in Kentucky than the U.S. as a whole, although only in the highest income group. The rate was 51 percent in Kentucky, versus 50 percent nationally for the higher income group. Kentucky was only three percentage points behind the 36 percent national probability rate for attendance by those in the middle income bracket—much higher than Kentucky's 26 percent rate 10 years before but only three percent higher than the national rate 10 years before.

One thing we should not assume from all this data is that Kentucky's college attendance rate have been unaffected by annual tuition increases at Kentucky colleges and universities. "It is possible that the gains would have been even higher without the large increases in the cost of college over the last several years," the study states. We need to do something about our high tuition rates, for the sake of our families, our educational system and our state's future.

We should also not assume that family income is always a "sure thing" when it comes to determining access to college whether nationally or in Kentucky. From the study, and I quote: "The lowest and middle income students have a lower likelihood of attending college than the highest income students." It says, "with middle income students actually having a lower probability of attending college than those from the lowest income group." One of the three key findings of the study was that family income often determines whether one

Kentucky's wine industry maturing nicely, lawmakers told

FRANKFORT — Kentucky's grape and wine industry continues to grow — not just in the quantity of wine produced, but in quality as well, lawmakers were told during Friday's meeting of the Licensing and Occupations Committee.

Still, some small farm winemakers are looking to Frankfort for help with the next step they say will help their industry: Sunday wine sales.

Chuck Smith, an owner of Smith-Berry Vineyards and Winery in New Castle, told lawmakers that although his business partially depends on tourists visiting his tasting room, he has to turn away people on Sundays since he's not allowed to sell wine then. "They get a little mad about it," he said.

Losing Sunday customers in that manner is "a double negative" in some winemakers' eyes, said Mac Stone, executive director of the Kentucky Department of Agriculture's marketing office. "They don't just not get that sale. They feel that person won't be coming back," he said.

Currently, it's up to local governments to determine whether Sunday alcohol sales are allowed, and that's an issue some local leaders don't want to ease votes on, Smith said. He'd rather see state leaders step in to allow Sunday sales at wineries like his.

Rep. Darryl Owens, D-Louisville, questioned whether lawmakers would want to take away the decision-making on Sunday wine sales from local governments. "If the community speaks, then the community speaks," he said.

Richmond winemaker Lowell Land responded that he sees the issue as one of personal rights. If Sunday wine sales were allowed, then "if you want to come to my place on Sunday, you can. If you don't want to, you don't have to," he said.

The grape-growing and winemaking business is still a relatively young industry in Kentucky. Although Kentucky was known as a grape-producing state early in the nation's history, Prohibition erased the industry. But it appears to be making a comeback. There were only four small farm wineries in Kentucky in 2003. Today there are more than 50.

Lawmakers got to see one of those small farm wineries today during their meeting at Smith-Berry Vineyard and Winery. They met in a converted dairy barn that now contains some of the oak barrels used to age wine at Smith-Berry.

Rep. Rick Rand, D-Bedford, said he believes the success of Kentucky's vineyards and wineries will continue to grow. "I believe these wineries will be a signature industry in Kentucky," he said. "I think we're seeing the birth of an industry here."

Prestonsburg awarded LEPP funds to purchase body armor

FRANKFORT — The city of Prestonsburg has been awarded $4,536 from the state Law Enforcement Protection Program to purchase body armor for peace officers, Gov. Steve Beshear announced Monday.

Under the LEPP administered by the Kentucky Office of Homeland Security (KOHS), appropriate agencies can seek financial help for certain defensive items essential in the course of their duties.

In conjunction with the Kentucky State

Police (KSP), KOHS derives income from sales of confiscated weapons. KSP conducts periodic auctions — only to federally licensed firearms dealers — which generate dollars for the LEPP initiative. The KOHS then assesses needs, and after prioritization, provides whatever funds are available in the acquisition of body armor, weapons, ammunition and electronic or muscular disruption technical devices, often referred to as "tasers."

"Statewide appeals for financial support always exceed resources," Thomas L. Preston, KOHS executive director, explained, "but we make every effort to respond with a priority focus on law enforcement safety."

LEPP support goes to police agencies of cities, counties, charter counties, unified counties, urban-counties and consolidated local governments, sheriff's departments and public university police departments.

Smoke ban

for the VFW (Veterans of Foreign Wars) and $500,000 for the football team."

Stephens also tossed in a bargaining chip, saying that Court Street Bingo would consider enacting a policy that would not allow visitors ages 18 or younger to enter the premises were an exemption included in the ordinance.

Stephens made her comments prior to the first reading Monday, something Prestonsburg Mayor Jerry Fannin said was an uncommon thing for the city to allow. Typically, public discussion is offered prior to second readings, he said.

In turn, some of the two dozen or so members of the Floyd County Breath Easy Coalition attending the meeting posed questions to Stephens and the few others there to state their case for an exemption. The coalition approached the city council earlier this year asking for the smoking ban.

"You all made a blanket statement that everyone smokes at the bingo hall, but what about students or parents who come to help with the games?" Ken Carriere asked.

And so the debate among visitors continued Monday until Councilmember Gorman Collins Jr. interrupted, addressing both the crowd and his fellow councilmembers.

"I'm not looking for an argument here," Collins said. "I don't think this is the place for this. I'd rather remain focused and we could stay here all night long doing this."

However, others on the council, such as Freddie Goble, felt the city meeting was both the time and the place for such debate.

"I think we ought to give people the right to speak no matter if we're here until four o'clock in the morning," Goble said, a comment that was followed with some applause from those in attendance.

Before city attorney Jim Webb suggested moving along from the open discussion and resuming the talks prior to the second reading at the council's next regular meeting July 27, Collins toyed with the idea of an unofficial show of hands on the issue among he and other councilmembers.

"I'd like to know where we stand on this," he said, but the council declined to make a preliminary show of hands, opting instead to save their opinions for the second reading when the ordinance would receive a final vote.

Councilmember B.D. Nunneley mentioned some possible amendments he would like to see discussed before passage of the law, but did not elaborate. However, according to the existing draft of the ordinance read Monday, there is no language included that would cover an exemption for bingo halls.

Fannin said the two weeks between now and the next regular meeting would allow both the council time to learn more from those in favor of the exemption and also additional opportunities for both sides to learn more from each other.

Plea

decision to allow Tuttle to plead.

Now Tuttle will serve five years in prison on the reckless homicide charge.

The two brothers were, according to police reports at the time, involved in an argument in late September at their mother's apartment in Minnie when David Tuttle was shot. Tuttle was first charged with first-degree assault, but after his brother died from the gunshot wound the charge was then amended to murder.

After the incident, David Tuttle was taken to nearby McDowell ARH and then transported to Cabell-Huntington Hospital, where he later died.

Police on the scene just minutes after David Tuttle was shot said Terry Tuttle told them his mother had seen what had happened, adding that he and his brother had been arguing because David Tuttle had borrowed a truck without his permission. Police also said Terry Tuttle sat crying in the back of a police cruiser until state police arrived and continually insisted that he didn't intend to shoot his brother.

Until the time of his guilty plea, Tuttle had been held on a $100,000 cash bond.

Pente allegedly told police that he was trying to get to his children for a visit when he left the scene, and later admitted to have been drinking with a friend prior to getting behind the wheel.

World Footbrake Challenge set for Thunder Valley

Kentucky racers, others set to vie for championships

TIMES STAFF REPORT

BRISTOL, Tenn. — The World Footbrake Challenge will return to Thunder Valley Friday-Sunday for the third time with a new date, a new format, and a large contingent of racers ready to share in a $100,000 purse.

The World Footbrake Challenge is a 1/8-mile event that will see racers depend on their driving skills to take home the top prizes. In footbrake competition, drivers are not allowed to use electronic equipment to help them achieve a better start. Originally held in May, event organizers Jared Pennington and Steve Stites opted to contest the event in July to help attract more racers. According to Pennington, the response has been overwhelming.

"It has been unbelievable," Pennington said. "We have 182 pre-entries and that just exceeds our wildest expectations. In the worst economy our country has ever faced, our supporters have stepped up and it is unbelievable. I'm surprised, but at the same time I'm not surprised. I know these people and I know their passion for the sport, so it really shouldn't come as a surprise." "The later class has helped our response. Bristol is a beautiful area that time of year. It is a desirable place to be, so I think that has helped. It has allowed people to plan vacations around it. It shows tremendous commitment and dedication to the sport with all the people that are coming from all over the country."

In addition, the format has been changed to entice more racers to the sport. Prize money is not as large as it was last season, the entry fee is much lower. The move already appears to have been a good decision.

"The race is $10,000-to-win on Friday, Saturday and Sunday," explained Pennington. "We felt the need to do that because of the changes in the economy. We wanted to lower the entry fee to appeal to the average person. It appears as though that was a successful move. For those that still want the large prize, we have a $30,000 to win 64-car shootout. Our total purse is well over $100,000. It will be pretty cool."

Not only will the event be cool for racers, spectators will have a lot to watch, including several of the best racers in the country.

"You can expect over 200 cars from more than 20 states," Pennington said. "You'll see NHRA World Champions, IHRA World Champions, hundreds of track championships will be going up and down the track. Guys will be racing for $60,000 in winner's purse money throughout the weekend. For people that enjoy our sport, it will be a spectacle for sure."

The event has shown growth during its first two seasons and Pennington admits the support he receives from Bristol Dragway will ensure that growth for some time. "The area has been wonderful to us," he said. "The facility is second to none. The staff at Bristol is one of the most knowledgeable and experienced we have ever worked with. It makes it real easy to come up there and race. Even though I live more than six hours away, it is starting to feel like home because everyone in the area treats us so well. It seems to get better every year."

Gates open at 8 a.m. each morning.

Time Trials begin at 9:30 a.m. on Friday, with a Run for the Money at noon and eliminations at 2:30 p.m. Saturday's on track action begins with Time Trials for the $30,000 Shootout at 9 a.m., Eliminations follow. Time trials for the $10,000-to-win race start at 11:30 a.m. Eliminations will take place at 4:30 p.m.

A church service will take place on Sunday at 9 a.m. Time Trials and a Run for the Money are scheduled for 9:30 a.m. Eliminations begin at noon.

Racers will begin parking on Thursday at 4 p.m. Spectator tickets are $10 each day. Entry fees for competitors are $150 for each $10,000 race. The 64-car $30,000 Shootout entry fee is $1,000.

Practice shooting range safety during each visit

TIMES STAFF REPORT

FRANKFORT — When the weather is warm and most hunting seasons are still a month or more away, it's a good time to visit the shooting range to sharpen your skills for the fall season. Besides honing your shooting skills, it's also a good time to practice safe and responsible gun handling. This is even more important because you'll be around other shooters instead of being in the woods by yourself.

When you visit a range, always remember these safety rules:

- Always point your gun in a safe direction.
- Keep the action open and the gun unloaded until you are ready to shoot.
- Keep your finger off the trigger until you are ready to shoot.
- Know your target and what is beyond it.
- Do not hunt or shoot after drinking alcohol or taking drugs. Some prescription medications may cause drowsiness or other side effects; they should not be used prior to handling a gun.
- Major David Casey, assistant director of law enforcement for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and an avid shooter for nearly 40 years, stresses safety.

"Probably the safest thing that I can think of is to keep the action open on the weapon at all times until you're in the shooting box," he advised. "No matter what kind of action it is — whether it's a bolt action, lever action, pump, hinge or automatic — if the action is open, the gun is safe."

Over the years, Casey developed a habit that he says twice kept him from a dangerous situation. "If someone hands me a gun, or if I pick up a gun that's been put up for a while, I always open the action and check the barrel to make sure it's clear," he explained.

Once, the barrel contained a plastic piece that had come off a choke tube wrench. Another time, there was mud in the barrel. In both instances, Casey could have been injured if the obstructions had been in the barrel when he shot.

Casey also advises shooters to make sure that they load their gun with the correct ammunition, especially if they are shooting several different calibers or gauges of guns at the range. A mistake can be dangerous.

These basic gun safety rules apply to all types of shooting ranges. But shooters should also learn and heed the rules of their particular range type.

"If you're shooting sporting clays, stay on the path," Casey said. "The range is designed so that the shot-fall area is in a safe place. If you're some place you're not supposed to be, you could get hit by pellets."

"At static-type rifle ranges, never go forward toward the target until everyone has their weapons safely secured," Casey added.

It's a good idea to designate one person as the range officer. This person is responsible for calling to the other shooters when it's time to cease firing. Also, the range officer checks each shooter and points out any safety violations.

"A range is not a place for horseplay or alcohol," Casey said. "Don't be afraid to point out unsafe things to other people at the range. You might save their life — or yours."

Public shooting ranges are available at six Wildlife Management Areas (WMAs) in Kentucky: Curtis Gates Lloyd WMA in Grant County, Higginson-Henry WMA in Union County, John A. Kleber WMA in Owen County, Miller Welch-Central Kentucky WMA in Madison County, Peabody WMA in Ohio County and Taylorsville Lake WMA in Spencer County.

These are tube-style ranges, in which shooters fire through a large metal pipe at the target. These tubes help direct gunfire to the safest location. These ranges are suitable rifles or slug shotguns. Exact locations of the shooting ranges can be found on WMA maps at fw.ky.gov. Click on "Maps & Online Services," then "Public Hunting Area Maps."

Morehead State University in Button Auditorium Drill Floor on Aug. 3, 4 and 6. The course will start at 6 p.m. on Monday, Aug. 3 and on Tuesday, Aug. 4 and will run until 9 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 6. The class will start at 6 p.m. and run until completed.

The 10-hour course, sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and the Morehead State Varsity Rifle Team will include classroom instruction on hunter ethics, wildlife identification, outdoor survival, first aid, firearms, bow hunting, and ammunition. The last session will include actual range firing and an examination. The minimum age to take the course is 10 years old.

Upon successful completion of the course, a graduate card will be issued which is valid in any state where such certification is required. The card is required at many management areas, as well. Attendance at all sessions is required for certification.

Effective March 1, 1991, all hunters born on or after January 1, 1975, shall, while hunting, carry a valid hunter education course graduate card in addition to the appropriate Kentucky hunting license requirements. A bow hunter not in possession of a firearm may carry a "National Bowhunter Education Program" course completion card in lieu of the hunter education card.

Children under the age of ten and persons exempt from purchasing a hunting license are not required to possess the card while hunting. Children under age 10 must be accompanied by an adult at least 18 years of age while hunting.

Free hunter ed classes scheduled for Morehead State

TIMES STAFF REPORT

MOREHEAD — A free Kentucky Hunter Education course will be held at Governor Steve Beshear (middle) is working hard to land a NASCAR Sprint Cup race at Kentucky Speedway.

Gov. Beshear signs economic bill in Victory Lane

TIMES STAFF REPORT

SPARTA — Against the backdrop of the Kentucky Speedway, Gov. Steve Beshear Thursday ceremoniously signed House Bill 8, which increases the state's chances of attracting a NASCAR Sprint Cup Series race.

The legislation — proposed by the Governor during the recently completed special legislative session — includes a provision to amend the Kentucky Tourism Development Act to add a new eligible category of so-called "legacy expansion" projects. Legacy expansion projects must conduct events that are in the top league, series or sanctioned level of their type of event, provide permanent seating for 65,000 spectators and be broadcast nationally. The venue must have previously been approved for incentives and the expansion project must exceed $30 million and present one or more "premier events" not previously held in Kentucky.

"Attracting a NASCAR Sprint Series Cup race to Kentucky would be a huge economic win," Gov. Beshear said. "NASCAR is not only the number one spectator sport in the United States, it also attracts an international audience through its broadcast in more than 150 countries and 30 languages."

O. Bruton Smith, chairman and CEO of Speedway Motorsports, Inc., (SMI) which owns Kentucky Speedway, previously stated that passage of the legislation would put Kentucky in position to host the NASCAR Sprint Cup Series, that sanctioning body's top racing series.

SMI owns seven tracks across the country that host Sprint Cup races, Smith said he believes Kentucky Speedway with the extensive upgrades he is planning, could be home to a Sprint Cup race in the near future.

"I appreciate the confidence Gov. Beshear and the legislature have shown in SMI and Kentucky Speedway. I promise you it is not misplaced. Thank you many times over for getting this bill passed, it means a lot to what we're doing here in Kentucky. Sprint Cup racing will be our next move here."

"We've had a great year so far and we'll continue to have a great year. I think Speedway Motorsports works harder than anyone else in the business. We'll certainly work harder here because racing in Kentucky is probably the second religion."

"I believe this because I've met so many people here. If anyone was here for the last (NASCAR Nationwide Series) race, you saw what we did and we're proud of it. It's onward and upward, we're going to do great things here," Smith said.

Legislators associated with the bill shared Smith's enthusiasm.

"I am very excited about the possibility of a Sprint Cup race at Kentucky Speedway and the economic impact it will bring not just to Gallatin County but to the entire region," said Rep. Royce Adams, of Dry Ridge. "That is why I was happy to do my part in passing this important legislation."

"This is a great day for the entire region," said Sen. John Schickel, of Union. "Owner Bruton Smith has a history of making things happen and I am confident he will bring a Sprint Cup Race to this facility. Having a world class sporting event right here in Northern Kentucky is very exciting."

We appreciate your business! Owners Rick Cum & Brian Nelson

EVERYBODY'S SCIENCE

Coming to a produce section near you

by SANDY MILLER HAYS
 AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH SERVICE

It doesn't do to have too much money in my pockets on the day the farmers' market sets up shop outside our office building, because that's the day that money flows out of my hands like beach sand. I just can't resist those fresh fruits and veggies!

That's probably why I get such a kick out hearing about the latest treatments coming out of the plant breeding programs at the Agricultural Research Service (ARS). The ARS scientists are always coming up with a new berry, plum, potato or apple.

On the potato side of the aisle, the latest from the ARS breeders is Yukon Gem, a new smooth-skinned, medium-sized spud with appealing yellow flesh. If this sounds like the more familiar Yukon Gold, there's a good reason for that: Yukon Gold is one of Yukon Gem's parents.

Yukon Gem got its start in North Dakota as one of a whole flock of offspring from crosses between Yukon Gold and Brodie, which is a disease-resistant potato from Scotland. In 1995, the ARS scientists selected it from among thousands of other potatoes they were evaluating in research fields in Idaho, and selected with the unwieldy moniker ANDA5507-3V.

But they weren't done with it yet. The potato that grew up to be Yukon Gem still had to undergo 11 years of field trials in five states, with participation by colleagues at state universities in Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

Before a new potato shows up in our local grocery store's produce section, it has to prove itself in a variety of ways. Take yields, for example: In tests, Yukon Gem's yields averaged 12 percent higher than those of its parent, Yukon Gold, in eastern Idaho; 22 percent higher at test sites in Washington; and 41 percent higher in parts of Oregon.

And then there's disease resistance. Yukon Gem shone there, too, displaying notable resistance to many of the microbes that cause costly diseases such as dry rot and late blight.

Ready to run out and get some Yukon Gems for dinner tonight? Unfortunately, you'll have to wait a bit longer. Last year, it was planted on 32 acres in five western states. That may not sound like much space, but 32 acres is enough to produce seed for plants that could yield a total of at least 41 million Yukon Gem potatoes. Then you should be able to find it in your local produce section!

We've polished off our veggies, so now let's talk about dessert—to be specific, two new dessert peaches.

The newcomers are SummerFest and FlavrBurst, and they were created by an ARS horticulturalist in West Virginia. They're the latest peach varieties released through cooperative research between ARS and Adams County Nursery, Inc., in Aspers, Pa.

SummerFest is a high-quality freestone peach with a wonderful balance of sweetness and acidity. It's ready for harvest mid-season and has good firmness, which is important in making sure it travels well from the orchard to your local grocery store.

SummerFest is the second upright-growing peach tree released by ARS and Adams County Nursery, Inc. Upright trees work well in high-density peach production systems, and are a more efficient use of land and resources. Why does that matter to you? Because that efficiency could lower production costs, which could translate to a lower cost to you at the produce section.

FlavrBurst, the other newcomer, is also a high-quality freestone peach with a good amount of sweetness, but less acidity than typical peach varieties—great for folks who like their peaches a little less tart, but still peachy. @ FlavrBurst is a standard-type tree, harvested mid-season with good firmness at maturity, so its fruit

APPALACHIAN WOMEN

Bernice Hamilton Prater

by DR. SANDRA PRATER

Recently I visited my family in Eastern Kentucky, and I was privileged to talk in-depth with three women who have lived all or most of their lives near Middle Creek in Floyd County. I was struck by the humility of these women who have all lived through hard times, but do not complain. Their ages range from 79 to 90.

Although there are common threads running through each of their lives, each woman's story has unique aspects. It is my wish to capture the goodness and gentility of all three women.

Bernice Hamilton Prater

Bernice was one of four children born to Emmit and Maudie Hamilton in 1929. Her father was called "Black Emmit" due to his dark hair. This was necessary because there was also "Short Emmit" and "Red Emmit." To further confuse the picture, the baby of the family was named Emmit Hamilton, Jr. He was simply called Junior. Bernice has one sister, Verbal Meeks, a long-time teacher at Betsy Layne School, and had one other brother, Bud.

Bernice lived on a farm on Mud Creek with her family when she was growing up. They raised their own food and only had to buy salt, sugar, flour, baking powder, soda, coffee, and lye from the store. They rendered lard from hog intestines to make soap.

The children had to hoe in the garden and in the corn fields. Her dad raised several bottoms of corn. The corn was used for food for the family and to feed the livestock. On Friday evenings they would shell corn from the cob, then take it to the mill, located about a quarter of a mile from the farm, on Saturday so that it could be ground into meal.

The family used coal and wood for heat, and her brothers had to keep enough fuel stocked for use in the house. She and her sister washed dishes and helped cook. My personal observation is that Bernice learned her lessons well in the kitchen, as she is an excellent cook.

Whenever there is a family get-together, I always find out what dish Bernice brought. I believe a big pot of shuck beans was her contribution to the last dinner I enjoyed with her family. Delicious. I just can't find cooking like that in Wisconsin.

Bernice's dad owned a store, but it burned down. He took over another store after help was needed there. The other members of the family also contributed to the income of the household. Education was important to the Hamiltons, and several of them earned money working for the school district. Maudie Hamilton took in a boarder, a male teacher, who paid $7 a month for room and board. Bud and Bernice each made $1.50 a month. Bud built a fire in the coal stove each week day morning, and Bernice swept the school house daily. During the war, emergency certificates were issued for teachers, and Bernice's sister, Verbal, taught 89 students for $87/month.

When the kids in the family were ready for high school, Bernice's father bought a house in Betsy Layne so that they would not have to walk three miles to where the school bus would pick them up. Their mom stayed with them there while their dad stayed on the farm to care for the livestock and other animals. Her family's commitment to education paid off as both Bernice and her sister became school teachers.

I commented to her that it seemed like her family might have been better off than some others at the time, and she said that they were "land rich." Her father was able to buy tracts of land, and it was at his disposal when he needed cash for something.

After Bernice graduated from high school, she had to walk two miles to work every day on Mud Creek. My mother's brother, Arnold, would drive by in a coal truck or in his brother-in-law's (Cecil Hall) car, and Arnold would ask her if she needed a ride. She always said no, then one day she accepted. I asked her what caused her to change her mind, and she laughed and said she found out he was not married.

Bernice married Arnold Prater in 1950. She and Arnold lived at "Toobery" in a house given to them by her parents until his job brought them to Middle Creek. They lived with Arnold's parents until eventually they built a house on land adjacent to his parents. They raised their three children in that house, and Bernice still lives there today.

Bernice was hired as a school teacher at Ground Hog, but a pregnancy kept her from fulfilling her contract. After she raised her children to school age, she took a job in the gift shop at Jenny Wiley State Park and kept that for two years. A medical condition caused her to stay out of the work force for a while, then in 1970 she began working at the Prestonsburg Bargain Store. She worked there for 12 years, then another health condition came up. She returned to work a year later, taking a position at the Prestonsburg Shoe Factory. She held this job for 33 years until a couple of years ago when the store was closed. She was 77 when she lost her job, and she was definitely not ready to stop working.

Bernice has always been known among our family as a kind and caring woman who will help out when family members or neighbors need something. She unexpectedly lost her oldest son, Don, when he was in his early 30's. She and Arnold helped Don's widow in every way they could in rearing his two young children. Don's widow still lives on property adjacent to Bernice's house. In a strange and tragic twist of fate, Don's son, Brian, was struck down in a similar incident two years ago when he was almost the same age as his father. Bernice has been very concerned about Brian's daughter losing her father, and she has been active in attempts to keep the little girl in her life.

When my grandparents were ill in their later years, Bernice would visit them and help in whatever way she could even though she held a full-time job. When her husband lost most of his physical skills, she cared for him in their home for several years even though she continued to be employed. During this time, she sometimes received my mother, Ruth Prater, into her home for a visit of two or three nights. The significance of this is that my mother had been diagnosed with Alzheimer's and needed special care. Bernice took this all in stride as she looked after both her husband and his sister after a day's work in Prestonsburg.

The best example I can give of Bernice's kind heart and generosity is related to my mother's situation. My sister, Kathy Prater, took care of my mother for several years. When my mother could no longer be cared for at home, she became a resident at the nursing home on Highland Avenue in Prestonsburg. The store where Bernice worked was a block away, and Bernice would visit my mother several times a week. She would take some of my mother's favorite food to her, like Snicker bars and bananas, and she would spend her own money for clothing for her.

I remember asking her once why she did this, why she was so faithful in visiting my mother and why she spent her own money on her. She first replied that it wasn't any trouble and when I pressed her for a more specific response, she said with some feeling in her voice, "It's my job."

And there it is. Nothing more needs to be said. She considered it her personal responsibility to do what she could for her sister-in-law. I will never forget her reply to my question that day, and I will never forget her kindness to my mother.

She is a true Eastern Kentucky woman, one who has worked hard all her life and never complained. She helps wherever she can, and she makes the best chicken and dumplings you will ever eat. Even though age and its accompanying aches and pains have come along, she does not let that get her down. She remains cheerful and upbeat and continues to plug along each day. I tell her often that I am so glad my Uncle Arnold married her as she has been, and still is, such a blessing to our family.

Highlands Regional makes upgrades to Birth Place

PRESTONSBURG — Highlands Regional Medical Center recently unveiled its renovated Birth Place, which is designed to make moms, newborn babies and families much more comfortable during their stay in the hospital.

The expansion was designed to modernize the newborn nursery, waiting area and post-partum patient rooms.

"At Highlands Birth Place, we believe the birth of your child is a special time for families and HRMC is proud to play a part in that important life event," said Terri Hall, director of The Birth Place. "We strive to provide the very best in care for you, your family, and of course, your baby."

Patients and their families can expect an up-to-date facility that includes six private labor, delivery, and recovery suites, two operating rooms dedicated specifically for cesarean sections and tubal ligation, 11 new private rooms with flat screen TVs, a central monitoring system for labor and delivery, a 24-hour level one nursery, and childbirth education classes for new-parents.

The Birth Place at Highlands Regional also offers an advanced staff including 24 RNs, three LPNs, six OB clerk techs, five OB/GYNs, two full-time Certified Lactation Consultants and seven Pediatricians.

also should travel well.

The breeders say these peaches are best when eaten fresh, but they'll still make a mean peach cobbler. The peaches can get up to three inches in diameter, which is respectable but not eye-popping, and can be grown in most areas where peaches now grow.

The new peaches are currently in the hands of commercial growers and university test sites for further evaluation, so you won't see them at the produce stands for another year or so. But it sounds like they'll be worth the wait!
