FRANKFORT – The General Assembly finalized a two-year-budget and road plan over the course of Friday and Saturday mights that will see Floyd County-receive $66 million in funding for various projects over the course of the time.

Most of the money, 562.6 million, will be used for road projects such as the continued efforts on the Minnie-Harokl connector, which will alone make up S40 million of that atheunt, said House Speaker Greg Stumbo who has been part of that project since its beginning several yeers ago. "Although we wish we could have done much more for education and the economy, 1 am preud that we're able to keep basic services infact and that, here at bome, we were able to do a lot of positive things," Stumbo suid. Some S.21 million of the funding will be used for a variety of coal-sev-erance tax projects and yet remaining amounts will be used on projects in the southerm end of the county, . Stumbo added. "We included more than S40 mil-tion for the Minnie-Harold connector, for example, and beloed Wheelwright with its gym and swim-ming pool." Stambo added, saying also be was pleased to see funding go to scholarships to the Highlands Center for Autism to help families cover tuittion cests. More charity golf touraments are also in the works for the center, Stumbo said, in order to bring the total of school or personal donations to $100,000 a year.

State needs action on pension reform

1. е ۱۸/-

It's been nearly two years since lawmakers met in special ses-sion to pass a first stage of reforms to the state's public employ-ee pension system. At the time, the system was underfunded by $27 billion due to the generous package of benefits Kentucky has offered state workers and teachers that for years hasn't been fully paid for by lawmakers. That 2008 special session was supposed to be the start of the work to bring pension costs under control. House Bill 1 passed during the session was supposed to just be a first step to avoid the long-term bankrupting of the state that would come by ful-filling the promises made but not paid for by the General Assembly.

Assembly: Instead, that's been the last serious attempt at pension reform, and there's been little indication from legislative leaders that they plan to finish the job. The consequences of continuing to ignore pension reform, and the challenges of finally addressing it, become more prevalent each day. Look to Europe, where the government of Greece faced collapse due to the heavy burden of public employee pen-sions there. Efforts in Greece to raise the retirement age and freeze benefits prompted riots even while the Greek govern-ment's debt threatened to bring down the economy of the coun-try and Europe.

ment's debt threatened to bring down the economy of the coun-try and Europe. Kentucky isn't the only state facing the prospect of owing far more than it can pay to its employees as its public work force ages and state revenues dry up. States are raising retirement ages for new hires, like Kentucky did in 2008, and considering mov-ing away from defined benefit plans toward defined contribution plans like 401(k) plans offered in the private sector. No state has found the right long-term solution, and reforms have faced oppo-sition each step of the way despite the growing threat to state treasuries. treasuries.

treasuries. In February, the Pew Center on the States released a report that said states are $1 trillion short of the money they need to pay for public pension and retiree health care benefits. The situa-tion is even more dour than what lawmakers faced in 2008 when they met in special session to enact initial reforms.

they met in special session to enact initial reforms. But at least in Kentucky, the response to the impending finan-cial crisis brought on by its pension promises is more hand-wringing rather than problem-solving. Because of the "inviolable contract" that Kentucky has with its employees to provide pension benefits, there's no clear path how to avert, the financial disaster that the cost of these benefits could cause on the state treasury. Lawmakers should be held accountable for putting the state on the book for billions of dol-lars in benefits while putting off paying the bill that grows larger each year. each year

The need for pension reform won't diminish even as the economy improves, and for now Kentucky has no way to meet its obligations. The balanced budget just passed that brought across-the-board cuts to most state agencies includes only a portion of what's required to make the pension system whole in the future, and stepping up payments into the system in future years will bring even more tough choices.

The public, including public employees, can't continue to let the legislature push pension reform off into the future or state workers will be left with no retirement security and taxpayers will faced with a bankrupt Kentucky state treasury.

by REP. HUBERT COLLINS

by REP. HUBERT COLLINS Talk of a budget impasse turned to talk of budget passage in Frankfort on Eriday as law-makers heared the end of a six-day special session by passing a $17 billion two-year spending plan that slashes spending by at least $1 billion from 2009 levels and doesn't raise a single tax. The bare-bones 2010-2012 Executive Branch budget pack-age, which includes the state spending plan and a revenue plan, includes virtually all the recommendations in the gover-nor's latest compromise budget, along with specific House and Senate provisions required to help the state weather a budget shortfall of at least $1 billion over the next budget cycle. Both the governor and the General Assembly agreed early in the 2010 Regular Session — which ended last month — that there would be no new taxes in any budget that was passed. The plan, instead, was to reach a deal that would avoid a government shudown while plugging the expected two-year shortfall. The budget, passed and sent to the governor for his signature on Friday, accomplishes these goals through cuts of 3.5 percent in fiscal year 2011 and 4.5 per-cent in 2012 for most state agen-cies-with leiser cuts for postsec-ondary education and Corrections-increased govern-ment efficiencies, limited new

Exempt from across-the-board cuts that most agencies will face are Medicaid, merit-based KEES scholarships carned by thousands of Kentucky high school students each year, and per-pupil funding that public schools receive through the state's SEEK formula designed to equalize edumula designed to equalize mula designed to equalize edu-cation funding among school districts. The two-year spending plan maintains all 177 instructional days currently on the public school calendar (with one day paid for by school districts and herest paid for by the state, holds down additional General Fund-supported debt, limits agency-fund debt for universi-ties and other entities to around $515 million, adds around $20 million to the state's "miny day" budget reserve trust fund, and allows the governor to order fur-loughs without disproportion-ately targeting lower-paid work-ers. Changes to employee and teacher health insurance also ordered by the budget are expected to save the state around $94 million over the two years. Added to the budget in the final hours of the special session was a mechanism for school dis-tricts to fund aging schools most in need of replacement. Under that plan, the state will match funding for districts that levy what is called an "equalizing nicket", or 5 cents per $100 in property value, to fund facilities construction. The money would only go to so-called "Category 5" schools— those facilities consudered to be in the worst shape.

Tax incentives to benefit rural and low-income communities through business investment are also part of the revenue legisla-ton. The Executive Branch budget was the top priority this special sostion, although other state pri-orities was a bill to shore up the state's ailing Unemployment Insurance Trust Fund. That measure-which is similar to a bill that passed the Sonate. The bill now goes to the governor for his signature. Agreement on a two-year state road plan and a bill that will fund operations of the Transportation Cabinet was reached on Saturday. The bills, passed late Saturday night, will provide funding in several key transportation areas through 2012, and lawmakers were determined to see the measures passed. Important work on roads, bridges, aviation and other areas can continue because of action taken on these bills in special session.

Witamin D isn't hard to find in the foods we eat; it's in cheese, butter, cream and especially milk, which in this country it ypically fortified with vitamin D. It's also in fish, cysters, fortified creates and margarine. And if you're a "lady of a certain age" (as I ann), you might even find your doctor prescribing a super-dose of vitamin D — as much as 50,000 International Units (U) — to be taken once a week or perhaps once a month. Why all the emphasis on vitamin D? It's because this particular vitamin helps your body absorb calcium — and the older we get, the more impor-ant that is.

action your boay absorb calcium — and the older we get, the more impor-tant that is. In fact, among older adults, the popular thinking often runs that boost-ing calcium intake is a good way to reduce the likelihood of a bone frac-ture in case of a fall. But a study fund-ed in part by the Agricultural Research Service (ARS) has shown just how important vitamin D is in the equation, versus just loading up on more calcium. Our current calcium intake recom-mendations are not tied to vitamin D. Here in the United States, that recom-mended amount is 1,200 milligrams (mg) daily for, adults aged 50 and older. The study funded by ARS involved

The study funded by ARS involved about 10,000 men and women aged 20 and older. The study leaders looked at the participants' blood levels of 25-hydroxyvitamin D as the primary indi-cator vitamin D adequacy. Among the participants, a large fraction of the younger as well as the older adults

Pikeville signs another NCAA D-I transfer TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE – Another player with vast NCAA Division I experience has joined the Pikeville College men's basketball program. Coach Kelly Wells and the Pikeville College men's bas-ketball program have signed Youngstown State transfer Vaungstown State transfer Vance Cooksey for the 2010-11 season.

Vance Cooksey for the 2010-11 season. Cooksey is an accom-plished 6-0 point guard from Marian Catholic High School (Chicago, Illinois). As a junior during the 2009-10 season, Cooksey averaged 5.3 points, 2.3 rebounds and 2.0 assists per game at Youngstown State while competing in the Horizon League (NCAA Division I). A key contributor for Youngstown State, Cooksey logged minutes in all 30 of the team's games last season.

all 30 of the team's games last season. "We are very excited to add a player of Vance's cre-dentials and experiences," Wells said. "Vance is a true point guard with the ability to score and distribute the bas-ketball. He is a floor leader who is all about the TEAM and winning. He brings great academic credentials along with great basketball IQ. We anticipate Vance being an immediate impact on our team!"

After playing three sea-sons at Youngstown State, Cooksey will compete for the Bears during his senior season

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. -Sometimes practice really does make perfect. Just ask boats Troub for 2010 Mil-marks with the 2010 Mil-ramerican title with more than 8 nounds to spare by sticking to the successful patterns he found before the BFL championship began on DeGray Lake. Local angler Tee Watkins (Enar Point) placed second behind Morrow in the event. Morrow left his home, in Toccoa, Ga., in time to allow himself seven practice days on central Arkansas' DeGray Lake leading up to May 17, the start of the off-limits period ahead of the All-Americain. After just four and a half days, he had 92 waypoints plugged into his Lowrance GPS unit and enough confidence in both the shallow and deep pat-terns he had developed that he decided to go home. "This lake fit me to a T," he sid. 'Early in my prac-tice, I could go down the shorelines and get 20 pounds easy – almost for the find ng its, but figured by
