Board members travel to congratulate schools

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

To celebrate the recent test scores of 12 district schools, members of the Floyd County Board of Education, along with Supt. Henry Webb, recently boarded a bus and traveled from location to location to present celebration balloons and congratulations to staff members at the schools.

"It was a great day," Webb said. "The schedule was tight so we couldn't stay too long at each school, but you could see that our schools were pleased about the efforts to recognize their hard work. What was a big surprise was that riding the bus all across the district in one day was one of the best team building activities we've had."

The schools visited as part of the trip were Allen Elementary, Allen Central Middle School, Betsy Layne Elementary, Betsy Layne High School, Duff Elementary, May Valley, McDowell Elementary, Prestonsburg Elementary, Osborne Elementary, South Floyd High School, South Floyd Middle School and Stumbo Elementary.

"We're proud of these accomplishments and members of the board and our district staff were glad to have the opportunity to demonstrate our appreciation to these schools," said Angela Duncan, lead instructional director.

Board Chairman Jeff Stumbo said that riding the bus brought back a lot of memories.

"There was a lot of good to see today," Stumbo said. "It was good that so many of our schools demonstrated how well our students are doing. It was good to see how pleased our school staff members were that others appreciated their hard work. It was even good that some adults, many like me who hadn't ridden a school bus in years, got a chance to remember what that was like. It was just a terrific day and our board members would like to thank everyone who played a part in this success celebration."

East Kentucky loses a defender

Eastern Kentucky lost a great champion when Hazard Mayor Bill Gorman passed away Saturday at the age of 86.

Bill Gorman had served as mayor of Hazard for more than 30 years and some may ask "what did he do?" a more appropriate question would be "what didn't he do."

He helped organize the Buckhorn Watershed Association which resulted in the Buckhorn Dam and the Buckhorn Lake State Resort Park. That project has been responsible for over $50 million in flood reduction, and the lake has brought thousands of visitors to Perry County. He started the first broadcast television station in Hazard, which now operates as WYMT-TV.

His behind-the-scenes efforts were critical in the formation of the four-lane Route 80 and he would readily explain that mountaintop removal was the key to the city of Hazard's growth.

Obviously, one measure of political success is staying power. You can't be doing that much wrong if you continue to get elected. Conversely, one can fall into a trap of trying to be "safe." Never let it be said that Mayor Gorman "played it safe."

Gorman was a longtime civic leader before being elected Mayor in 1977, when it was rumored that he was inspired by a parking ticket he received.

One of his first orders of business was to extend city water lines throughout Perry County to help those whose wells had been plagued by strip mining. He also extended sewer lines, in an effort to combat "straight pipes."

Gorman also started saving for a swimming pool, a vision that was realized in 1988 with the opening of the $1.2 million Hazard Pavilion.

In a letter he wrote in 1991 to the editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, Gorman staunchly defended Eastern Kentucky.

"Could it be to the surprise of a lot of people that Eastern Kentucky's mountain people are normal? Our people are people of pride and ambition. They want and deserve a quality of life that every other American desires. They are intelligent and hard working."

Gorman devoted much of his time to politics but those who knew him wouldn't consider him a politician. He was more a friend, a mentor. Just ask Sen. Mitch McConnell who first met Gorman in 1968 when he was told to travel to Kentucky to drum up support for a campaign he was working on.

He said he learned then that Gorman was "the man" — a fact that was still true just a week before his death, when while on his hospital bed, Gorman told McConnell "Take care of my city."

There are so many words that could be used to describe Gorman: leader, pioneer, visionary.

But none come close to the one we think suits him best: Legend.

Confronting the reality of climate change

by DONALD KAUL
TIMES COLUMNIST

It got so hot in downtown Los Angeles the other day that the thermometer broke. The National Weather Service's device hit 113 degrees at about noon (the highest temp ever recorded in L.A.), then just quit.

Climate change hawks were quick to seize on this as evidence that global warming is revving up and we ought to do something about it before it's too late.

Climate change doves were just as quick to point out that Los Angeles had recorded near-record seasonal lows just the week before and that the 113-degree day was an aberration in an otherwise cool summer. Global warming is a myth, they say.

They're both wrong. The fact that it's extremely hot on a given summer day in Los Angeles or unusually cold on a winter day in New York is irrelevant to the question of climate change. You have to look at the big picture: If the earth isn't getting warmer, it's certainly doing a marvelous imitation.

For example:
■ 2010 is on track to be the warmest year, worldwide, in recorded history.

■ Polar ice continues to disappear at a rate that is alarming to scientists who track that kind of thing.

■ Russia is suffering its most severe drought in 130 years, with the attendant wildfires that come with dry weather. The same is true for Australia and the American southwest. Southern California isn't faring much better.

■ Extreme weather events, like floods, wind storms, etc., which can be expected to increase with climate change, are indeed increasing both in number and intensity. The floods in Pakistan are only the most dramatic example of weather-driven disasters. New England, Nashville, Arkansas, and Oklahoma have also suffered through floods this year.

The list goes on. While none of that is proof of climate change, the evidence is certainly piling up, high enough to convince all but a very few climate scientists that warming is occurring and at an alarming rate.

And yet there remain skeptics on the issue, not all of them crazy or in the pocket of oil, gas or coal-related industries.

Perhaps the most eminent of these is Freeman Dyson, a world-renowned physicist and liberal intellectual, who just isn't buying what Al Gore, among others, is selling.

"All this fuss about global warming is grossly exaggerated," the 86-year-old says. "Most of the evolution of life occurred on a planet substantially warmer than it is now."

More carbon dioxide in our atmosphere might actually be a good thing, he contends, because it feeds plants' growth. And as far as warming goes, it could very well be forestalling a coming Ice Age.

He thinks that scientists who predict that climate change will produce the Apocalypse rely too heavily on fully computer models that rely on "lousy science."

Well, maybe. I side with the people who study the problem full-time. They have reached consensus on the existence and dangers of climate change.

What makes sense to me, however, (and a sad sense it is) is the calculation of engineer-inventor Saul Griffith. In an interview with David Owen of The New Yorker magazine, he calculated that if we wanted to limit climate change to a manageable two degrees Celsius we would have to replace our current energy sources by building the following:

■ A hundred square meters of new solar cells, 50 square meters of solar-thermal reflectors and one Olympic pool's volume of genetically engineered algae every second for the next 25 years.

■ One 300-foot diameter wind turbine every five minutes, a 100-megawatt steam turbine every eight hours and a large nuclear power plant every week.

In other words, it ain't gonna happen.

I happen to agree with that. I think anything we do is going to be too little, too late.

It's time to get the band on stage and have them strike up "Nearer My God to Thee." It's comforting.

OCEAN CITY, Md. — A group of students from the Carl D. Perkins Job Corps in Prestonsburg took first-place for the second year in a row at the 20th annual multi-regional Academic and Career Olympics championship held in Ocean City, Md. on Oct. 6.

Nina Stone, Matthew Jacobson, Quisto Ortiz, Jacob Gardner, David Guest and Dustin Meadows, under the direction of their coaches Brandon Conley, Susie Grossl and Shirley Bryant defeated teams from Job Corps Centers in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

"We're proud of them. It shows what type of training we do here at the Perkins Job Corps Center," said Director Thomas Rainey. "They did an excellent job. It's something that the staff takes great pride in. They do an outstanding job. The students worked very hard and studied long hours in preparation for the competition. Each member of the team won laptop computers and a cash award."

Six teams from Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Massachusetts and the District of Columbia competed for top academic honors, cash prizes and trophies. Individual winners won laptops donated by Adams and Associates Inc., a Job Corps contractor that operates centers in Pennsylvania and Maryland.

Contest questions were based on the General Educational Development, and high school competency materials that Job Corps instructors use to train students to qualify for GED certificates and high school diplomas. The questions covered the subject areas of language arts, social studies, science, spelling and mathematics.

Sound House to host night for musicians

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

PIKEVILLE — Sound House Music will truly be a house of music on the night of Oct. 22, as the business will be open to local talent for the Open Mic Night and After Hours Jam.

"We noticed a need among our customers and education students that just was not being fulfilled, and that was the opportunity to perform," said Jared Arnett, finance manager at Sound House Music and a local musician. "After discussing local venues at length, we determined that, with our connections, we could provide the venue and setting for local musicians to perform and network by hosting an open mic night. In essence, that is our goal here, to nurture and encourage local talent. We have a passion for music and we want to share that passion."

According to Arnett, the event will include performances from customers, students and employees of the company. The performers will have the opportunity to be recorded by video and promoted on YouTube, Sound House Music's Facebook page and on the website www.soundhouse-music.com.

The Open Mic Night and After Hours Jam, scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. and last until 9 p.m., will be held in the store at Weddington Plaza. A small stage will be provided along with seating and coffee.

For more information, contact Sound House Music by calling (606) 437-4155.

Two face drug charges after traffic stop

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

WATERGAP — Two Martin County residents were arrested following a traffic stop in Watergap and are now facing various drug-related charges. Police say James G. McCoy, 27, of Inez, was driving a long Watergap Road when they pulled him over on suspicion of driving under the influence. McCoy was charged after the stop with two counts of possession of a controlled substance and a single charge of having a controlled substance not in its original container.

However, McCoy's passenger, Lorettia Smith, 46, of Debord, is now facing charges of first- and third-degree trafficking in a controlled substance.

Arresting officer Dennis Hutchinson said once he had identified the two, McCoy and Smith pulled over and made contact with Smith, she said she "had been to Tennessee to get some pills."

Hutchinson said he then read Smith her rights and asked if the two could have a look at the pills, to which he said Smith replied, "Go ahead."

During the search, police reported numerous pill bottles found inside the vehicle that were missing several pills.

"One of the pill bottles was a blue bottle marked oxycodone," the police report said, adding that the prescription was for 58 pills and had been filled just a day before. "When I counted the pills at the stop, only 35 pills were in the bottle."

Two other bottles of pills, one marked Oxycontin and another for clonazepam, were also allegedly found during a search of the vehicle and had also been filled the day before for the same amount. Hutchinson said that the two bottles contained 48 and 37 pills, respectively.

When further questioned about the number of pills missing from the several prescriptions, Smith said she had given McCoy "some of the pills because she had borrowed some from him a few days ago."

of his home and found 773 prescription tablets ranging from OxyContin and Xanax to Soma's and Naproxen in a brown paper bag in the closet of a camper sitting within 100 yards of Allen Central High School.

Later that same day, Hicks was arrested and charged with first-, second- and third-degree trafficking in a controlled substance, trafficking in marijuana and prescription in improper container.

The beginnings of what ended in the two men's arrests last year came when Commercial Vehicle Enforcement Officer Tommy Gearheart said he was advised of a vehicle possibly carrying controlled substances to be transported to Hicks.

Gearheart said he was on patrol when told this, adding that specifically, Hicks was to meet with two people from Indiana to purchase the drugs and bring them back to Eastern.

The vehicle was described to Gearheart, who later stopped James Doug Patrick, both Indiana residents, at a checkpoint in Magoffin County.

The couple was arrested and then officers continued to the next step of the upstart investigation by performing a "knock-and-talk" at the camper located near Allen Central High School when the 773 prescription tablets were discovered.

On the heels of this, officers then visited Charles Hicks and his brother, John Hicks, along Prater Fork.

During this search, an additional 550 tablets were found, leading John Hicks to deny any knowledge of the evidence. Charles Hicks confessed to police that the pills were his and not his brothers and that he had chased them from "Doug and Sharon" in the parking lot of Prestonsburg's Wal-Mart. He added that he did not know their last names.

The Patricks were later questioned and verified that they had meet with Charles Hicks as the Prater Fork resident had said, according to police records at that time.

If you look at what I've done as attorney general and then compare it to Rand Paul, there's no comparison.

"Rand Paul wants to do away with all federal assistance. He has also been mischaracterizing my positions. Look at what I've done, not what people say about me. It's about putting Kentucky first. We're surging."

Conway told the crowd that Rand Paul isn't familiar with the area and the issues that are most important to Eastern Kentucky.

"Rand Paul doesn't get Eastern Kentucky," Conway said. "I do. He said that drugs were not an important issue in Eastern Kentucky. He's not seeing the same Kentucky I'm seeing."

Local and state officials stopped by Conway's Prestonsburg election office to listen to the speech, and State Sen. Johnny Ray Turner introduced Conway as the state's next U.S. Senator. As he spoke, Conway made sure to say the names of some of the people in the crowd, including County Clerk Chris Waugh and Circuit Clerk Doug Hall.

"The people are coming our way and we're really excited," Conway said.

that the county and the city have scheduled different dates for the holiday.

"I called each one of the city council members and the majority said they wanted to have it on Oct. 28, and that's a Thursday," Fannin said. "I called and told the county because they usually pick the same date as the city, but somebody told me they decided to do it on a Saturday."

While the different dates may cause a little confusion for parents, Fannin believes that the children could be happy with the chance to hit the streets for sweets on two occasions.

"The kids might like it," Fannin said.

Also in Prestonsburg, some businesses on Court Street will be handing out candy from noon until 2 p.m. on Oct. 28. Participating stores will have signs at the designated locations.

Trick-or-treat is scheduled to begin on both dates at 6 p.m. and last until 8 p.m.

Graden said he expects the mood to be "festive" and added that organizers "will wind up the night" with the old-time drive in movie.

and claim he was "staggering" and "blurring" speech. Reynolds, of Abbott Creek Road, then later failed field sobriety tests and then reportedly admitted that he had taken roxycodone and suboxin, police said.

The police report included that Reynolds "stated he had a drug problem and knew he was under the influence."

He allegedly told police that he had picked up his son and daughter from Prestonsburg Elementary and drove from the school to Cooley Medical.

After this initial questioning and investigation, police said they asked Reynolds if he had anything in the vehicle and that the 31-year-old said he did not and gave them permission to conduct a search.

It took little time once police started their search of Reynolds' vehicle to find a concealed and "fully loaded" Colt .38 pistol within reach of both the boy and girl, they said.

After this discovery, Reynolds was searched and police said they found in his left front pocket a prescription bottle with the label torn off. The bottle, police said, contained "several Xanax and oxycodone."

Reynolds is charged with public intoxication, two counts of possession of a controlled substance, carrying a concealed deadly weapon, severe weapon endangerment and a charge of endangering the welfare of a minor.

HI HAT — Following a hard-fought 2-1 (25-12, 23-25, 25-20) win over the Piarist School Monday evening in the opening round of the 58th District Tournament at South Floyd's Raider Arena, Prestonsburg went about its business on Tuesday, knocking off reigning 15th Region champion Allen Central 2-0. The Lady Blackcats defeated Allen Central 25-11, 25-23.

In the other district tournament opening round match, Betsy Layne blanketed South Floyd 2-0. Betsy Layne, which finished runner-up to Allen Central in Prestonsburg was matched up against Betsy Layne on Thursday evening in the 58th District Tournament championship match. Results from the 58th District Tournament title match were unavailable at press time.

Looking back at early-August

TIMES COLUMNIST

So where were you on Aug. 5? Any ideas? Were you aware there were mines in the country of Chile? Or were you just of the understanding the country existed, and that you liked a good, hot bowl of chili on cold, winter evenings?

Like many of you I spent part of this week watching the 33 Chilean miners come one-by-one from their own personal hell that began that hot, summer day the first week of August. For my family and I, we were anticipating the weekend's events, another edition of our annual family reunion.

It got me thinking, what has happened since that fateful day? Consider...

It was a couple of weeks before the Pike County Bowl. Local high school football, soccer, volleyball, golf and Cross Country teams were practicing but hadn't come close to playing yet. School hadn't even started.

Now we're well into the second half of football season. Golf has already crowned a state champion. Volleyball and soccer began their postseasons this week.

They played an entire season while those miners were trapped.

Isn't that amazing?

On Aug. 5, the Minnesota Twins were in second place in the American League Central. They trailed the White Sox that day by 6 1/2 games. The Twins won the Central by six games. Imagine that while those guys were trapped, a baseball team gained 12 1/2 games on a divisional opponent.

And have already been eliminated from the playoffs.

The Reds led the NL Central by 1-1/2 on Aug. 5. They won the division by five games. But consider this: Remember when the Cards came into Cincinnati and Brandon Phillips shot off his mouth about how he hated St. Louis and the team proceeded to get swept?

That happened on Aug. 9. Four days after the entrapment began.

It's been a long, long time since Aug. 5.

Remember when the Cats went to Canada to play

ALLEN CENTRAL will visit longtime rival South Floyd tonight in another key district game. The Rebels defeated district foe Phelps last week in a shootout. Blackcats gearing up for postseason

Crisp closing in on 2,000 yards passing

SPORTS EDITOR

PRESTONSBURG — The Prestonsburg Blackcats were off this week after reeling off wins in seven of eight games. Prestonsburg, a State Semifinalist last season, will face neighboring Shelby Valley and Pike County Central during the last two weeks of the regular season. The Blackcats will venture to Shelby Valley next week for a regular-season district finale. Prestonsburg is 2-0 in Class 2A, District 7 after posting convincing wins over Bath County and Morgan County.

In eight games, Prestonsburg has outscored opponents 291-128. Like the 2010 campaign, Prestonsburg has favored the pass over the run. Thriving during his first season as a start, junior quarterback Adam Crisp has completed 106-of-178 passes for 1,736 yards and 19 touchdowns. Bryson Williams (26 catches for 527 yards, 9 TDs), Nathan Slone (25 catches for 485 yards, 5 TDs) and Joseph Jamerson (30 catches for 425 yards, 2 TDs) rank as Prestonsburg's top-three pass-catchers. Alex Griffith, Kain Collins, Grant Anderson and Zack Kendrick have also hauled in passes for the Blackcats.

Jamerson leads Prestonsburg in rushing. He has rushed 42 times for 413 yards and six touchdowns. Williams has taken a team-high 62 carries for 319 yards and four touchdowns. Collins has rushed 51 times for 256 yards and three touchdowns.

Defensively, Jamerson leads Prestonsburg with five interceptions. Jamerson (25 solo tackles, 54 assists), Trevor Stovall (23.5 solo tackles, 67 assists), Kendrick (22.5 solo tackles, 56 assists), Griffith (17 solo tackles, 59 assists) and Alex Garner (14 solo tackles, 55 assists) rank as Prestonsburg's top-five tacklers.

After visiting Shelby Valley next week, Prestonsburg will host Pike County Central on Oct. 29 in a regular-season finale.

Hall of Fame: NASCAR tips hat to sport's pioneers

Waltrip was needed. And found.

impact other voters.

Voters debated how much weight to give a nominee's full body of work in the sport as compared to what they did on the track.

"When I walked into the room, I didn't feel I had a real big chance," said Jarrett, who was listed on 58 percent of the ballots. "I felt it was probably less than 50-50 of being able to get in this time, and then after the discussion started and so many good things were said by a number of different people, then I began to feel a little bit better about it."

Yarborough, who cut many ties with the sport after retiring as a car owner, appeared to suffer the most in this discussion.

During a break, Jarrett called his wife and told her, "I might have an outside chance."

"Cale don't go anywhere he don't have to go or he wants to get paid everywhere he does go, which nothing wrong with that, but you just can't do it," Pearson said.

As for Moore, who was mentioned often in discussions, perhaps the most persuasive argument was about how the 85-year-old former champion car owner came from what is considered the greatest generation and how he earned a Bronze Star and five Purple Hearts during World War II.

And Yarborough was not at the NASCAR Hall of Fame for the announcement.

"I sort of went up on the totem pole, as you would call it," said Moore, also a voter, about the discussion on his behalf among the voters.

The argument for Petty was that without him there would have been no Petty Enterprises and no Richard Petty. Thus, selecting Lee Petty was a way to honor the sport's early days. He was listed on 62 percent of the ballots.

For all he's accomplished, Moore - selected by 45 percent of the voters - called his selection as "one of the greatest moments of my life."

Allison also received 62 percent of the vote. His inclusion provided a glorious moment in a star-crossed career. He endured the deaths of his two sons in the sport, saw his career end after a devastating crash but also won 84 times and a Cup title.

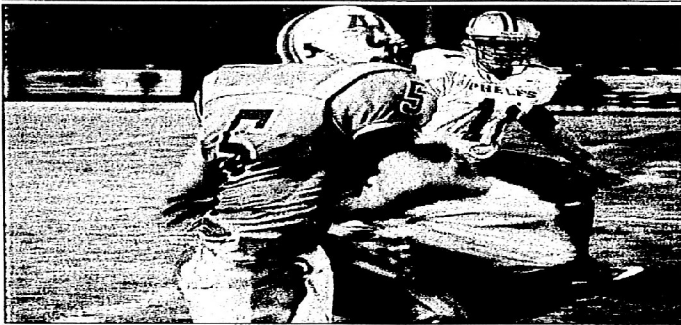

For Waltrip, though, Wednesday was a day of disappointment.

"To have the heartache and the agony that we've had along the way ... it's really been a mixed thing," Allison said. "[Being selected] is so special because it is a really important part of our lives."

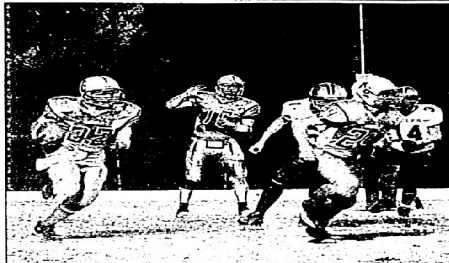

"In this sport, I've done everything they've ever asked me to do. I've won races, championships, I've done everything that I could do. It just wasn't my time."

As for Jarrett, his 50 wins and two championships make him worthy but it was his work as a broadcaster and with helping bring Anheuser-Busch to the sport that also mattered. A number of voters told enduring stories about Jarrett that seemed to three exhibition games that were carried on a cable system available throughout the southern United States (but no longer at my house?) Those games were played Aug. 15-17, some two weeks after the miners were trapped.

And the ugly, nasty Rick Pitino summer? The coach was the one who seemed on trial as Karen Syphers was accused of attempting to extort money from Da Coach.

That trail ended the day before the miners were trapped. Wonder if it ever came up in the conversation over those 69 days?

Training camp for the current edition of Kentucky Wildcat football began the day of the entrapment. And in the interim, the Cats still haven't beaten a worthy opponent.

This week's sporting Cinderella is the Texas Rangers, who became the last big-league team to win a postseason series. Tonight, they begin play in the ALCS against Satan's Yankees.

On the day the miners became trapped, in the early morning hours, the Rangers were officially sold at auction to a group led by hall-of-fame pitcher Nolan Ryan, who somehow outdistanced a team headed by billionaire Mark Cuban of the Dallas Mavericks.

On August 5, Colorado pitcher Ubaldo Jimenez looked like a shoe-in to win the NL Cy Young Award. He was a robust 17-2 on the season and it seemed like he may win upwards of 25 games.

As it turned out, he finished the season 19-8 - that's 2-6 since that August day - and it now seems a lock the Cy will go to Mr. October. No-No himself, Roy Halladay, who led the league in wins with 21.

When Pike County was flooded in July, hundreds if not thousands sprang into action to help their neighbors. Folks fixed meals, shoveled mud, cleared debris and generally did what was necessary to help.

My friend Misty Prater helped too. In her first season as head coach of the junior high basketball team at Pikeville, she spearheaded a drive to buy school supplies for those who were hit by this awful event.

On Aug. 5, the supplies began being distributed to those in need.

All of this happened - or has happened - since those miners got trapped in Chile. What have you been doing since? Think of all that's happened in your life since the first Thursday in August. What have you done?

For these men, the world stopped turning that day. This week, it began, slowly, to spin again.

Thank God, they have more life to live.

'A Perfect Getaway'

There is trouble in paradise when three couples on a Hawaiian vacation include a pair of serial killers in this lush thriller from the same guy who brought you "Pitch Black."

This one is hard to describe without giving away a shocking and extremely well conceived third act twist, but here goes.

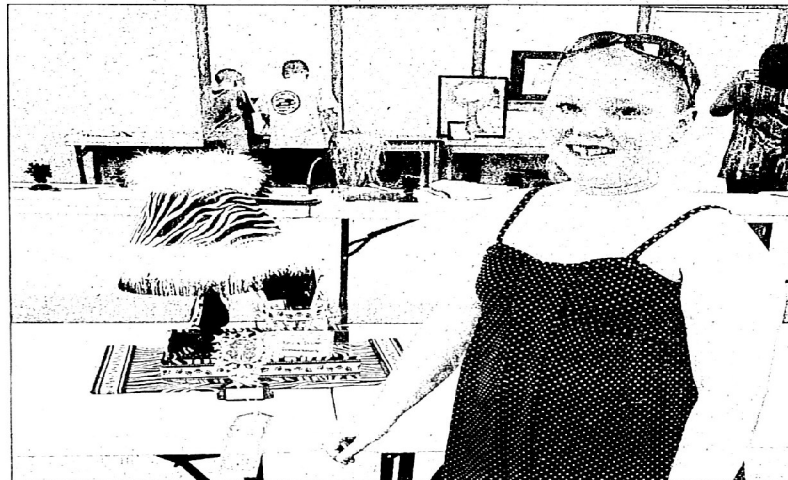

It starts like a comedy with our main couple, Cliff and Cydney, arriving at the island of Kauai. This is a perfect location that features rugged cliffs, lush fauna and sea caves. They hook up with another couple, Nick and Gina, and travel together.

Along the way we find out some key things. The nerdy Cliff is a screenwriter whose first produced work has been handed over to a script doctor. His wife, Cydney, is his biggest fan and only wants to have his children (five, and she knows what sex they will all be).

Nick is one of those shadowy army guys who served in a unit so secret that he'd have to kill you if he told you about it. Gina is pretty quiet so her background remains a mystery (usually that's a red light in one of these movies).

Pretty soon the atmosphere changes as Cliff learns (via his Floyd County Youth had the opportunity to let their talent shine by participating in 4-H Project work. Four-H projects are a perfect example of putting to work the "learn by doing" concept that is at the foundation of our Kentucky 4-H Youth Development Program. Project work helps members to develop inquiring minds and an eagerness to learn, as well as build on practical living skills. Youth are eager to participate and learn because project work is both educational and fun.

Project work experiences enable youth to develop and improve such life skills as time management, teamwork, and communication. These experiences help 4-Hers develop life skills including mastering technology, leadership and career exploration that are helpful throughout their lives.

Floyd County youth had the opportunity to choose from over 100 projects this school year. Projects ranged from woodworking, cooking, sewing, electricity, geology, speech and many, many more. Once the projects were completed the members had the opportunity to enter their project at the school 4-H Project Day.

This year over 500 4-H projects were turned in during the school 4-H Project Days. As you can see, we had an outstanding turn out of projects this year. If the members won a blue ribbon they had the opportunity to participate in the County 4-H Project Day which was held June 5 at the Floyd County Extension Office, where the winners received a purple champion ribbon, a trophy and a $20 scholarship toward 4-H camp.

If they were a county champion in most cases they will have the opportunity to send their project to the Kentucky State Fair. Here is a list of our Kentucky State Fair Participants:

This Town, That World

Editor's Note: For years, Floyd County Times founder and former publisher Norman Allen wrote a weekly column that looked at Floyd County through his eyes. His columns are being reprinted due to request.

In the playoffs, I pulled mightily for Philadelphia in the National League and Kansas City in the American. Now in the World Series I've thrown my full support to Los Angeles. At this juncture (almost said, "at this point in time") it would appear that my druthers don't amount to much.

SURCREASE

Tired of city streets and brick walls? There's a sight for tired eyes waiting here in these hills, if you hurry. Crimson, gold, yellow, green and, all the shades between—millions of leaves dressed in all their autumn glory, prepared for the grandest exit in all nature.

FISHING REPORT?

Did that girl at the check-out counter give me a sort of accusing look, the other afternoon when I bought some fish? Haven't had time to check with some of the other poor souls who fared forth, full of hope, last week for the bigger lakes. Been too busy dodging those pests who wanted to know how many I caught.

Chicken and dumplings

As the telltale chill in the air signals the onset of fall, it's time to get out those comfort food recipes. Nothing beats a hearty meal at the end of a crisp fall day. Menu planning when the weather changes can be a lot of fun, but the work involved in a lot of cold-weather dishes can be staggering. Chicken and dumplings is a fall classic but it's loaded with calories from the chicken skin and doughy dumplings. Just because it is comfort food does not mean it has to be unhealthy though.

The key to making this recipe healthier is using skinless chicken breasts so you can bypass the oily skin and dark meat. Extra seasonings enhance the flavor so you don't notice anything is missing and low fat biscuit mix saves some time. Here is a simpler and healthier way to make chicken and dumplings in a snap.

Chicken Dumplings the Saving Dinner Way

Serves 6

 4 cans low-sodium chicken broth
 1 tablespoon extra virgin olive oil

PSA test useful in diagnosing cancer

Q My doctor says I need to have PSA test done to check for prostate cancer. Will I need to have this every year? I'm only 50. Isn't that kind of young to start this test? If the results are abnormal, does it mean that I have cancer?

A Prostate specific antigen (PSA) is a protein produced by your prostate gland. The PSA test measures in how much of this protein is in your blood. A high PSA is considered a "tumor marker" for the prostate — that means that it can be used to detect disease. However, there are other reasons that a man might have a higher than normal PSA without having a tumor.

Generally men have low levels of PSA in their blood. As a man ages, there are conditions — and prostate cancer is one of them — that can cause the PSA level to rise. But there are also non-cancerous conditions that can an-elevated PSA. So, the PSA is a screening test. It does not diagnose any condition, it just tells the doctor that "something" is going on in the prostate that should be further investigated.

If you have an elevated PSA, the doctor will likely perform a rectal exam. This digital exam lets the doctor feel the prostate gland to see if it is enlarged or has lumps. This exam is very important as there are usually no other noticeable symptoms of prostate cancer.

The PSA blood test is also used to monitor a patient who has been treated for prostate cancer in the past. Sometimes a rising PSA means the cancer has recurred.

Currently most physicians recommend a PSA screening for all men 50 and older, and even at a younger age for men who are at risk for developing prostate cancer. Some of the risk factors for prostate cancer are a family history of prostate cancer in a father or brother, eating a high fat diet and being African American. Prostate cancer is most commonly seen in men over 65 years of age.

An elevated PSA can be a "false positive" result, meaning that it is falsely elevated. The doctor might repeat the test once or twice to get a more accurate reading. Also, conditions like a urinary tract infection or prostatitis can cause the PSA to be elevated. In patients who are diagnosed with these conditions, they would receive treatment, then the PSA would be repeated.

If the PSA is truly elevated and the rectal exam has found a lump on the prostate, the doctor will want to take a biopsy of the prostate. This involves a very thin needle being inserted into the lump to take out some tissue for evaluation under the microscope.

The good news is that most men with an elevated PSA do not have cancer. Recommendations as to whether men should be tested annually after the age of 50 vary among physicians and organizations. You should talk to your doctor about risks and benefits of annual screening based on your risk factors so that you can make an informed decision about annual PSA testing.

Salome's Stars Weekly Horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be growing impatient with a situation that seems to resist efforts to resolve, staying with it raises the odds that you'll find a way to a successful resolution.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Travel and kinship are strong in the Bovine's aspect this week. This would be a good time to combine the two and take a trip to see family members for a pre-holiday get-together.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A colleague could make a request you're not comfortable with. If so, say so. Better to disappoint someone by sticking with your principles than disappoint yourself if you don't.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The Moon Child's ability to adapt to life's ebbs and flows helps you deal with the changes that you might confront at work or at home, or both. Things settle down by the week's end.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's a good week for Leos and Leonas to get some long-outstanding business matters resolved. Then go ahead and plan a fun-filled family getaway weekend with the mate and the cubs.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A possible workplace change seems promising. If you decide to look into it, try not to form an opinion on just a small part of the picture: Wait for the full image to develop.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A newcomer helps keep things moving. There might be some lumpy moments along the way, but at least you're heading in the right direction. You win praise for your choices.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You could be pleasantly surprised by how a decision about one thing opens up an unexpected new option. Also, assistance on a project could come from a surprising source.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) With more information to work with, you might now be able to start the process that could lead to a major change. Reserve the weekend for family and friends.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This could be a good time to begin gathering information that will help you turn that long-held idea into something substantive. A personal matter might need extra attention.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) That new challenge might carry some surprises. But you should be able to handle them using what you already know. That new supporter should be there to lend assistance.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Someone might be trying to disguise his or her true motives. But the perceptive and perspicacious Pisces should have little or no problem finding the truth in all that foggy rhetoric.

- 3 teaspoons dried thyme leaves
 - 1 teaspoon dried sage
 - Salt and Pepper
 - 2 cups whole grain baking mix
 - 2/3 cup skim milk
- In a large stock pot, put 1 tablespoon olive oil, add onion, garlic, carrot, and celery, cook until onion is clear, then place chicken breasts in pot, and cover with water and peach (slow simmer) until chicken is cooked through—about 15 to 20 minutes. Remove the chicken and cut into bite sized pieces, then return chicken to the pot. Add chicken broth, thyme and

- sage — salt and pepper to taste. Bring back to a gentle simmer. If needed you can thicken broth with a little cornstarch by putting a teaspoon of cornstarch into 1/2 cup water or broth and mixing with fork until there are no lumps. Add to simmering pot and stir. Meanwhile prepare the dumplings by mixing the low fat biscuit mix and skim milk until it forms a soft dough. Drop by tablespoonfuls into the simmering broth. Cook uncovered for about twenty minutes or until dumplings appear cooked in the middle.
- Variations: Try using Noodle Dumplings

- 2 1/2 cups whole wheat pastry flour
 - 2 teaspoons salt
 - 2 eggs
 - 1/3 cup water
 - 1 teaspoon of extra virgin olive oil
- In a large mixing bowl combine all ingredients with a fork until combined. Roll into a ball. If too wet add more flour, if too dry add a bit more water. Roll out dough on a floured surface. Use a pizza cutter to cut dumplings into desired shape. You can cut them into long fat noodles, or you can use a cookie cutter and make round dumplings, it's up to you!

Anyway, the boss called at the home of an employee-friend, one afternoon, to find his host out in the backyard, engaged in a tussle with a full-grown bear. Horrified at the spectacle, he suggested, with some authority that his friend take that critter immediately to the zoo.

A day or so later, as he drove around the neighborhood, the foreman almost wrecked his car when he beheld his friend bowling along down the street with the bear seated alongside him.

"Thought I told you to take that bear to the zoo," he yelled as he screeched to a halt.

"Did," the other replied. "And we had such a good time, thought I'd take him to King's Island, too."

THE DEFLATED PENNY
George D. Brown writes to this effect about "the lowdown penny":

The question is, what will it buy today? To test the value of a penny, we placed one on our warehouse floor, and hundreds of footsteps passed over it all day long, and none would stoop so low as to pick it up—or, we might say, to rescue Honest Abe from the dust. Times, alas, have indeed changed. I can remember when a bare-foot boy would sprint all the way across the street and snatch one lone penny from the gutter. It might be so today if it were made of bronze or silver like its original English counterpart. (Only a cheapskate would offer a body a penny for his thoughts.)

The camouflage Christian

by KIM LITTLE FRASURE

Some of you may know an avid hunter, one that loves the sport so much that he's been known to skip church occasionally during duck hunting season. He's well known in the church, so the pastor notices when he's not there. With a twinkle in his eye, this one hunter explained recently how he's prepared to handle pastoral questions like, "Where were you on Sunday?" He said he's named the duck blinds where he hides to hunt those birds. One is named "The Word."

The other is named "Prayer." So when he's asked where he was on Sunday, he can simply answer, "I was in 'The Word,'" or, "I was in 'Prayer.'"

I want to have a Word with You today about "Christian Camouflage." Obviously, this is a hunter who understands the value of camouflage, as in the value of hiding behind some wonderful spiritual words. While his words are meant to be more whimsical than deceptive, they illustrate a deeper and more dangerous issue that's rampant among us church folks. We know how to use all the right Christian words and have just the right Christian look.

We put it on every time we walk in the church door, but often it's camouflage that's covering up some issues in our life that aren't Christian at all. Jesus put it this way in Mark 7:6, our word for today from the "Word of God": "These people honor me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me."

You can say all the good, God-honoring things and underneath you can have a heart that is far from Him. A life that has, beneath that spiritual camouflage, some attitudes or actions that have no place in a child of God, someone who's been rescued at the price of the blood of His Son.

Could it be that God does not look at the "outward appearance" but "at the heart" (1 Samuel 16:7) the Bible says. In other words, the only One who really matters is not fooled by our Christian words, our Christian rationalizations or our Christian activity. Your whole relationship with Him, His blessing on your life, is all about the condition of your heart.

Could it be that you've been hiding some serious unrepented sin under the camouflage of spiritual words? You can be talking about prayer and Bible study in the morning and swimming in the cesspool of Internet pornography at night.

Your mouth can be talking about glorifying God, but your heart can be full of pride and selfish ambition. You know where your responsibility is, where you should be, what you should be doing. Yet, you justify not being there because you camouflage it and make it about God or Godly actions when in reality it's really about YOU and what you want to be doing, and where YOU want to be instead of what and where God wants you to be.

Your Christian words can mask all kinds of hidden bitterness, lust and deception or a life with all kinds of different little compartments that's all about Jesus in the God-compartment, but all about you at work, or at home, or at school. You can even try to put Christian words on things that are anything but Christian.

You may call it conviction. God calls it stubbornness; you may call it compassion. God calls it compromise.

You may call it love. God calls it immorality or adultery. What are you hiding inside? What are you convincingly camouflaging tonight, is it well hidden? What are putting first in your life before God? Or Who are you putting first in your life before God?

Isn't it time you looked in the mirror and saw the hypocrite behind the beautiful words? There's freedom, there's forgiveness and there's integrity waiting for you at the cross of Jesus Christ, where you need to bring all the sin that's been hiding behind that spirituality.

One of the greatest dangers of being in a Christian environment is that you can know the words and never know the Lord.

Jesus said there will be people like that on Judgment Day to whom He will say, "I never knew you." Could it be you've got Christianity but you don't have Christ?

You've mistaken agreement with Jesus for commitment to Jesus, and that mistake will cost you heaven. But today you can experience what it is to know Jesus for real if you'll make this the day you say, "Lord, all this time I've missed You. But I want You in my heart, not just in my head, I am Yours." It isn't the rhetoric of Jesus that matters; it's the reality of Jesus. So come to Him today as you really are. There's so much you've been missing. You can have it.

Won't you give Him all of you today.
"Til next week, God bless!

It's best to get some power behind your flush

by TOM and RAY MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:
Hi, guys! I have a 2006 Toyota RAV4 that was due recently for the 60,000-mile maintenance. Toyota recommends that the transmission fluid be checked, but I told the independent shop that since it had never been changed (I bought it with about 20,000 miles), they should go ahead and change it. They called me later that day and stated that although they had flushed it with 12 quarts of Toyota fluid, it was still coming out brown, and recommended flushing it with another 12 quarts at just over another $100. I said OK, as I hope to keep the vehicle for many more years. I have used this vehicle only as a commuter car, no off-roading. Does it seem reasonable that it would require this second flush? — Rick

TOM: It shouldn't. It sounds like they did an old-fashioned "drain and refill," Rick.

RAY: Basically, transmissions have two separate reservoirs: One houses the torque converter, and the other houses the guts of the transmission — the valves, gears, clutches, etc.
TOM: When the engine is running, the fluid from these reservoirs mixes together. But when the engine stops, some fluid comes to rest in each place.
RAY: So if you drain only one of the reservoirs — which is all you can do when you open the drain plug or drop the pan from under the car — you end up changing only a little more than half of the fluid. The other half of the fluid, which was unreachable in the torque converter, remains untouched.
TOM: So when you run the engine again, the new fluid you just added will mix with the old fluid that was in the torque converter, and the mix will look dirty again. That's when your mechanic called you and asked you to authorize another fluid change.

RAY: We avoid that problem by using a system that changes 100 percent of the fluid under pressure. We have a machine that taps into the transmission's own circulation system to force out every bit of the old fluid, including what's in the torque converter, and replaces it all with new stuff.
TOM: Without seeing the state of your fluid right now, we can't tell you whether you just had a normal mixture of new and old fluid, or if the fluid is really dark brown, indicating that something is wrong with your tranny.
RAY: Now that you've done two flushes, my advice would be to drive it as is for a few weeks, and then take it back and ask them to take a look at your transmission fluid. If they come away gagging and holding their shop rags to their noses, there may be something wrong.
TOM: But if they say it looks fine, just normally dirty, then just keep driving. And next time, at 120,000 miles, find a shop that can do the powered flush for you.
Traffic court argument doesn't hold much water
Dear Tom and Ray:
It occurred to me the other day that as a car is driven and the tires wear down, each tire's circumference decreases. Since the speedometer measures speed through the revolutions of the drive shaft or something, and then converts that to miles per hour, isn't it based on an assumption that your tires have a certain circumference? And as the tire wears and the circumference decreases, won't the actual speed and the speed displayed on the speedometer eventually be different? My question is, How much does tread wear affect the speedometer reading? Is it significant? And can I use this argument to get out of a speeding ticket? Thanks. — Todd TOM: I was wondering where you were going with that question, Todd. Now I've got it.

RAY: We'll do the math for you. Let's say a typical new tire is 25 inches in diameter. And let's say there's half an inch of tread all the way around the outside. Therefore, when the tire goes from new to old, you'd lose an inch of diameter (half an inch on either side). So, in our scenario, a typical bald tire is 24 inches in diameter.
TOM: We know that the circumference of a circle is directly proportional to its diameter. So we can conclude that when you go from 25 to 24 inches in diameter, the change in the speedometer reading is 4 percent.

RAY: So the difference between a brand-new tire and a bald changes your speedometer reading by less than 3 mph when you're going 65.
TOM: That's probably not enough to change a speeding ticket, Todd. Besides, it goes in the WRONG direction. As your tires shrink in size, the car is actually going slower than the speedometer reads, not faster. So while your speedometer read 80, your ticket only cited you for going 77. But you already knew that.
RAY: But you can try using the argument in traffic court anyway, Todd. Maybe you can flummox them with the math. Just be careful they don't throw out your speeding ticket only to give you a citation for bald tires!

Lagoon

phone's internet connection) that authorities are searching the area for a pair of serial killers. Rains starts to fall just as Nick reveals that they are being followed. Nick shames Cliff into searching the jungle by heckling him with catcalls but it's Nick who gets lost (though he does return via a slaughtered goat for dinner), while Cliff spies a creepy couple (who gave him the "heebie-jeebies" in an earlier scene) on their trail.
Eventually the storm breaks and authorities land on the island to find the killers. They arrest the couple that Cliff saw in the woods, but you have to know that they aren't the culprits by now. Anybody who has seen one of these flicks will be hip to that just as Nick reveals that for the final 20 minutes, as the true killers are revealed and a desperate fight for survival ensues.

In short, you have to see this movie if you're a thriller fan. Gambling fans should check it out, too, as viewings of this film could lead to some heavy losses for people who think they have a sure thing with any of these suspects. The art of this film is that it shows you the killers at all times but cleverly shades their behavior so it seems rational up until the moment they go "psycho-killer" on the rest of the cast. Director (and writer) David Twohy pulls this off by casting some wonderful actors. Timothy Olyphant brings the right amount of menace and buffoonery to Nick. A running joke about his being impossible to kill works very well and is sure to entice most viewers into positioning him as the psycho.

Milla Jovovich also has a great moment here as Cydney. The scene where she reveals the tragedy that led to her having simple ambitions will chill you to the bone.
The showiest role goes to Steve Zahn, as Cliff. Zahn has always been adept at playing wisecracking beta-males, but here he steps up his game and shows that his days of being menaced by truck-driving serial killers (like he was in "Joy Ride") are over.

This one is a keeper and provides plenty of eye-candy before settling down into a finale that is brutal enough to appease "Saw" fans, but clever enough to appeal to Alfred Hitchcock lovers as well.

Best line: "I know, in some bent way, that your need for detachment fits my need for attachment." 2009, rated R.

by TOM DOTY
TIMES COLUMNIST

A ho-hum week for renters included one family hit and a mega-budgeted comic book adaptation that bit the dust.
■ "Jonah Hex" — Josh Brolin's amazing run of hit movies comes to a dead stop with this dull take on the iconic western hero from DC Comics. This would've made for a great low-budget flick with plenty of grit, gore and adult situations. What you get is about 80 minutes of toothless PG-13 fare. Hex is one of those hard-edged heroes but the film never allows him to get all that tough. He is out for revenge against the thug who killed his family and the government is willing to allow him to go off his leash and kill the guy in exchange for dropping all warrants against him. This may sound edgy but it never gets there. John Malkovich eats most of the expensive scenery as Hex's nemesis.

■ "How to Train Your Dragon" — "DreamWorks" delivers a fun family flick with this effort. A young Viking just isn't manly enough to impress his dad so he winds up as an apprentice to a blacksmith. He befriends a baby dragon and nurses it back to health and they form a friendship that is tested by both of their species. Fun and in 3-D, if that means anything.
■ "Johnny Staccato" — 1950's New York is the setting for this noirish series about jazz musician who makes his living as a private eye. The location shooting is good and there is a nice turn by John Cassavetes as Staccato. This only lasted one year and all 27 episodes are here. Guests like Martin Landau, Gena Rowlands, Elizabeth Montgomery and Michael Landon appear.

■ "Mega Piranha" — A ginormous fish heads to our shores from South Africa in this monster movie from the studio that brought you "Mega Shark vs. Giant Octopus." This is hilarious and sports bad special effects and even worse thesping. Barry Williams (Greg Brady) and Tiffany (former pop star) phone it in as they try to rid the planet of a giant man-(and helicopter)-eating fish.
Next week you can expect more with the release of "Predators" and "Psycho Legacy."
