Pain clinic reform needed, not a full ban

It's little wonder that officials in Eastern Kentucky counties want pain clinics banned within their county

With the drug problem seemingly exacerbating despite the best efforts of some, our troubles with addiction have indeed reached epidemic proportions.

Perry County's judge-executive said last week that he sees no reason to approve a local ordinance in regard to pain clinics unless it is significant in its scope and effect.

We agree, and on the surface this is one step that could play an important role in taking some prescription pills off the street as it begins to tackle the issue of supply and demand.

But in truth, a ban on over-prescribing pain clinics will not do enough to tackle our regional drug addiction problem.when only a handful local governments are willing to do anything. What we need is meaningful statewide legislation that puts a regulatory leash on all pain clinics, while banning outright those that essentially serve as pill mills for addicts.

A Knott County ordinance which bans pain clinics that only accept payment in cash is an excellent starting point. Additionally, pain clinics should never serve walk-ins off the street without a physician referral.

We see the whole issue of instituting bans on pain clinics not as one to rid our communities of an abusive system of medical care, but to improve the system that already éxists so that abuse either no longer exists or becomes negligible.

A full ban on every pain clinic simply isn't needed, but we hope our local officials, and eventually our state legislators, can work to find a happy medium that leaves in place a responsible method of treating chronic pain, but weeds out the inordinate prescription of pain meds that is helping saturate our region with addicts its a non-profit community enterprise owned and managed by local fansas a project, according to its bylaws, "intended to promote community welfare." Green Bay's citizens elect the team's board of directors, and this hands-on and community-minded board then hires and fires the team administrators and coaches.

Public ownership means that no impulsive greedhead can sell the beloved Packers and move them in the dead of night to a cash-rich big city. It also produces unmatched fan support, even in years when the Packers do poorly on the field. In fact, if things aren't going well, fans don't have to whine helplessly about it on the shock-jock call-in shows. As citizens of this small city, they can talk directly to the team management. Or as shareholders, they can vote to change managers.

Interestingly, at a time when politicos and pundits across the country are demonizing the very idea of public ownership, the good folks of Green Bay are showing that it works beautiful-ly and adds immeasurable, strength to the community. Not strength to the community. Not only are these Green Bayers Super Bowl champs again this year, but they've produced more NFL championships in their city than any other set of owners has

Hearings shouldn't demonize the Muslim-American community

Of coarse, we must confront and punish violent extremists. But our eccted officials must be the first to acknowledge our security is threatened not by the millions of Americans who practice Blam, but by a handful violent extremists, Muslim and non-Muslim.

Un-Cristian ActivitiesRep. King, in its highly public hear, ings, intends to explore the "radicalization" of American Muslims and what he sees as a lack of cooperation between Muslim communities and law enforcement. Before he starts.

Local law enforcement officials agree. This month, Los Angeles County Sheriff Lee Baca, who oversees one of the largest law enforcement operations in the country, in one of the nation's largest American Muslim population centers, said he hadn't seen any evidence of the lack of cooperation that King claims exists: "Muslim Americans in the county of Los Angeles have been overwhelmingly astounded by terrorist attacks—like everyone else—and overwhelmingly concerned about a non-repeat performance of that kind, and are willing to get involved and help."

We've seen hearings like Rep-King's before. In the 1950's, Sen Joseph McCarthy exploited widespread fears provoked by the Cold War to launch a ruth-less hunt for what he saw as a wide web of communist subver-sion in the United States. McCarthy targeted individuals not by their actions, but by their identities and affiliations. In not by their actions, but by their identities—and affiliations. In doing so, he destroyed the careers of many innocent people and succeeded in further spreading a culture of fear and suspicion that did nothing to make the United States safer. Rep. Lady Cats Central scratch

by STEVE LeMASTER SPORTS EDITOR

HI HAT – Familiar 58th District frontrunner Betsy Layne flexed 'its collective muscle Tuesday night in the opening round of the 58th District Girls' Basketball District defeating Allen Central 60-34 a Raider Avena.

Recent Alice Lloyd College signee Taylor Hott, a senior guard, led the way for Betsy Layne with a game-high 25 points. Sophomore guard/forward TJ. Tackett accompanied Hott in double figures, adding 11 points for the Lady Cats.

Betsy Layne (17-8), avoiding a first round upset, battled back from a 14-9 deficit at the end of the opening quarter. The Lady Cats excelled following a dismal first quarter effort. Betsy Layne controlled the second quarter, outscoring Allen Central 27-10 to led 36-24 at halftime. Betsy Layne' held Allen. Central to 10 points in the sec-ond half. The Lidy Cats bd 47-28 when the third quarer

Timera Thacker tossed in eight points while Keleigh Wagner and Paige Watkins scored six apiece for the Laly

District hoops observations

by RICK BENTLEY TIMES COLUMNIST

Thanks to many friends and colleagues from around the area, we were able to catch a lot of action this week during the district tournaments. With the district fournaments. With a tip of the cap to them for all their help, here's a little of what we noticed:

— If there was a question as, to why Pike Central's Hobo McCoy is the 15th Region Player of the Year, it was answered on Wednesday night. The Pikeville College signee scored 17 points in the last 2:15 to lead his team to an improbable 63-62 comeback over Belfy in the 60th District er Belfry in the 60th District finals.

Think about that,
Seventeen points. Two minutes, 15 seconds.

He finished with 41 points in the game and said afterward

I never like to see something like this happen, and later found out the two had apparently had issues over a boy. But in the postseason, I don't think it's altogether surpissing to see fisticuffs.

Think about it. Because of seeding, the teams are playing for at least the third time this season. They know each other. And there's a lot at stake here. The winner of the game was going to the regional tournament, while the other was not. In this particular instance, the game was getting one-sided when it happened. There's a lot to be said about this, and you never like to see PIPPA PASSES - Seniors hitney Frazier and Nicole Lutes PIPPA PASSES – Seniors Whitney Frazier and Nicole Lutes combined for $4 points to spark the Alice Lloyd College Lady Engles to a convincing 94-77 victory over Asbury University in the quinterfinals of the Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (KIAC) Tournament. The contest was held, at the Grady Nutt Athletic Center.

In the first half, fueled by 18 points from leading scorer Laura Carroll, Asbury led early. Defensively, Asbury looked to force Alice Lloyd's leading scorer Ariel Nickell to give the ball up by double-tearning her. This defense would prove costly.

by double-teaming new would prove costly. Victorious Alice Lloyd Coach John. Mills was pleased with his young seekman's composure against her opponent's defense. "Asbury is a fine club and their defensive scheme was what we expected." Mills said. "When a player is used to being your main option like Ariel is for us, and that is taken away by the defense, many players panic or will not buy into team play. Ariel did a great job of finding, her teammates. beciuse she knows how good they are, and they all came through with fine performances."

ALC eventually took a 19-17 lead (which they would never relinquish) at the 9-40 mark, when Lutes drained a long 3-point shot. She would finish the half with 14 points.

The hosts maintained a small cushion for the remainder of the stanza. When Frazier sank a driving lay-up just before the bazzer sounded at intermission as Alice Lloyd went into the locker room with a 42-34 advantage.

Asbury refused to fold in the sec-ond half at center Lakin Griffith sparked her slub. Her bucket at 16:00 cut the defid to just four (48-44). At this point, the game looked to be up for grabs.

However, over the next six minutes, Alice Lloyd made its move. Powered by eight consecutive Frazier points, Alice Lloyd went on a 21-10 run. When the smoke had cleared, ALC's lead had ballooned to 15 (69-54). Asbury would get no closer than 8 the rest ofthe way, as the girls from Caney Creek would sink a blistering 18-of-19 (947, percent) attempts from the foul line in the second half to ice the win.

A STATE OF THE STA

EARLY FISHING FORECAST: Smallmouth season starts now

by LEE McCLELLAN KENTUCKY AFIELD

FRANKFORT - My wife gives me funny looks when I am rounding tup my waders, vest, hair jigs and respooling, the reel on my favorite stream, smallmouth rod when the first warm front hits in late February. She believes it is a case of cabin fever and missine my fishbelieves it is a case of cabin-fever and missing my fish-ing buddies, but in reality, a late February warm front is, one of the best times in which to catch trophy stream smallmouth bass. This week's sudden warm up after the harsh win-ter, we've witnessed in

ter. we've witnessed in Kentucky puts this situation into play. Good smallmouth streams course through most of Kentucky, except for the mud-bottomed streams of the Jackson Purchase. If a stream near you has a rock-bottom, pools' and riffles, and some holes at least 5 feet deep, it will hold small-mouth streams are so narrow mouth streams are so narrow in spots that you can jump across them. Their deepest holes would barely moisten your belly button. Yet, you can catch smallmouths as

First find the winter habitat of a stream smallmouth. Smallmouth bass, may migrate long distances in fall to find the deepest holes in the stream that possess boulders, stumps, fallen trees or rock shelves that break current. A deep hole with no current breaks isn't nearly as attractive a place for a stream-dwelling smallmouth to wait out the winter months. They need places to escape the current in a nearly dormant state during the coldest weeks of the year.

With the warm winds and abundant sunshine of late, stream smallmouth will move to the flowing areas at the head and tails of these winter holes to feed. Big females need to eat to provide nutrients for the developing eggs that they will deposit later this spring.

watermelon with gold flake finesse worm will also work for late winter stream smallmouth. Finesse worms don't work as well as hair jigs, but they can be Texas-rigged weedless, so they rarely get hung on the bottom. Fishing a hair jig requires a high frustration tolerance because their exposed hook seeming-ly snags any piece of wood or crevice it comes near. You'll spend a lot of time retrieving or attempting to retrieve hung hair jigs in a stream.

Fish the finesse worm like you would a hair jig, letting the worm tumble in the current and touch bottom every so offer the dispersion of the bottom and quiver once it hits slack water. A 1/16- or 1/18-oince Shatey style head works extremely well for this presentation.

Stream smallmouth bass take your lure lightly in late winter. The strike may only be a weird mushy feeling. Set the hook if, anything feels unusual: The water in late winter usually flows crystal clear. Don't use line heavier than 4-pound test monofilament or 6-pound test monofilament or 6-pound test fluorocarbon.

However, if a warm rain muddies up the water, all subtlety goes out the window. Fish a small, light spinnerbait with a gold blade and chartreuse skirt behind current breaks such as a boulder, log or pocket along the bank. As soon as the spinnerbait clears the break and the current grabs it, reel in and make another cast. The small Beetle Spin style spinnerbaits work great in this situation.

Law to level playing field for Kentucky businesses goes into effect

TIMES STAFF REPORT

FRANKFORT — A law signed by Gov. Steve Beshear last year to provide Kentucky-based businesses a level playing field when competing with out-of-state vendors for Kentucky state government contracts is now fully implemented and being applied in the state procurement process.

"My goal is to help strengthen existing Kentucky businesses and protect our valuable jobs," said Gov. Beshear. "Il want Kentucky businesses to have every tool available to create more jobs and help dig ou way out of the current economic crisis."

The regulation outlining how the reciprotal procurement law will be applied in the awarding of state contracts went into effect on Feb. 4, 2011.

Originally proposed by Sen. Gary Tapp during the 2010 Regular Legislative Session, the law requires Kentucky's public contracting agencies, in determining procurement awards, to give ing procurement awards, to give preference to in-state bidders against out-of-state bidders, equal to the preference given to those out-of-state bidders when they bid on contracts in their home

If the low bidder for a government contract is from a state th grants a 10 percent preference its own in-state bidders, the Kentucky-based businesses w Rentucky-based businesses will receive a 10 percent preference against that out-of-state bidder. With the enactment of this legis-lation, Kentucky joins 35 other states that have similar legisla-

DINNER DIVA

Easy delicious healthy breakfasts

Breakfast is sad to be the most important meal of the day but it is something many of us skip. If at all possible breakfast is another meal opportunity that can be enjoyed at the table if you plan ahead. Meal planning goes far beyond just dinner, it should include breakfast, lunch, snacks and dinner. Being well prepared will save you money in many ways, first on groceries, then years later or doctor bills.

One thing- to consider when making healthy breakfasts is how long will it be until you get to eat your lunch? Do you have time to have a midmorning snack? If you have to wait a long time make sureyou get plenty of lean proteins and healthy fats in your breakfast. This will help your breakfast stick to you longer, keeping you full and satisfied and less likely to grab a vending machine candy bar. A healthy breakfast does not have to be boring.

If you are having trouble finding time consider breakfast smoothies, breakfast casseroles and even slow cooker breakfasts. You can put the ingredients of both the smoothies and the casseroles together, the night before, ready to blend immediately or pop in the oven while you shower. The trick is, of course, meal planning.

You can add literally an hour to your day with simple meal planning. Imagine, instead of looking in your fridge each morning with a blank expression you actually know exactly what you will feed yourself and your family before

Blepharitis is annoying. but not dangerous to vision

Question: I have had pinkeye several times in the last couple of months. I go to the doctor, he gives me eye drops to use, it gets better, but then it comes back after I stop using the medicine. Do you have any idea as to why I keep getting this? I've always thought of pinkeye as a kids' disease. Also, it is in both of my eyes.

nswer: Sometimes chronic bouts of pinkeye are a symptom of blepharitis. This condition can occur in children or adults Blepharitis is an inflammation of the eyelids, usually on the edge where the eyelashes grow, caused when oil glands near the base of the lashes malfunction, setting up the conditions for a bacterial overgrowth in the surrounding skin tissues. Blepharitis tends to be chronic, and unfortunately, it can sometimes take a long time to clear up.

Sometimes, the oil glands that cause blepharitis will malfunction for no apparent reason, but there are several health conditions can lead to blepharitis. Seborrheic dermatitis, that is, dandruff, can occur in the eyebrows as well as the scalp. When dandruff flakes fall into the eyes, they can lead to blepharitis. Rosacea, bacterial infections, allergies—especially to makeup or contact ies—especially to makeup or contact solutions, lice and eyelash mites can also cause blepharitis.

While blepharitis causes itchy, irritated eyelids, the good news is that it does not While blepharits causes itchy, irritated eyelids, the good news is that it does not damage the vision.

Symptoms of the condition include watery eyes, red. eyes, if gritty sensation in the eye, itchy eyelids, red, swolleh eyelics, flaking or crusting of the eyelids, and even loss of eyelashes. You have the these or saken are and the eyes is through, making sure to wash your face and eyelids daily with mild soap and water. This will clear up a temporary problem. If your eye symptoms persist, however, you should see an eye doctor.

Many times people present to the doctor with a complication of blepharitis like a sty, but grovs on the inside of the lid instead of the outside, chronic pinkeye or constantly irritated eyes. These and other eyelid problems, can be complications of the condition.

The first line of defense against blepharitis is to amp up your facial hygiene pratices. Put a warm, moist cloth over your eyelids a few times every day with diluted, 'no tears' baby shampoo. Also, avoid ee makeup. Chances are that if you've used it since the condition began, it may be contaminated with bacteria, so throw it away. Also, avoid wearing contact lenses when you're experience symptoms of blepharitis.

Beyond good facial hygiene, your physician also will treat any underlying conditions that may have caused you's blepharit.
